COUNCIL HAS MUCH WORK.

UNUSUAL RAINFALL CAUSES CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE.

City Dads Will Have to Practice Economy to Repair Breaks Caused by the Swollen Streams Without Overdrawing Warrant Account.

The city council had much to occupy its attention at the Wednesday night session. Breaks from every part of the city were reported and the ever-overworked street committee has a big grist of work on hand.

The Lincoln street flume break was discussed at length and it was decided that the break was caused by the city water main passing though the tunnel and obstructing same. The first thing to catch was a many-pronged small cedar stump, which soon created a jam and the vast accumulation of water in the huge tunnel was bound to break somewhere,. The committee reported that a temporary bridge had been constructed over the break, and it was ordered that the committee report further extent of damage, nature and probable cost of repairs.

Mr. Hunt of the Second Ward called attention to breaks in his section. A big jam of logs, boards and drift was piled up against the Valley street extension at Second street, the small bridge at Tumwater creek put in for accommodation of Peterson mill people had swung off one of its banks. and foot bridge at Third and Tumwater had settled. All referred to the street committee with power to act.

Mr. Gould stated the road up the valley was washed out and immediate action was necessary to enable parties to get in supplies. Referred likewise. About 200 feet of Valley street walk, which extends over waterway was washed out and committee was directed to report.

In the First Mr. Miller stated the Gulch road bridge was out and high bridge over White creek reported unsafe. Referred to street committee, with power to act in first case.

Mr. Bowman of the Sixth Ward reported the footbridge across Tumwater creek at Eleventh street settling at one end, and the committee was given power to act in the matter.

Stephen Land appeared before council regarding repair of Peabody street He stated he was interested in having a good road there and was desirous of doing the work at the place named last week for the $25 allowed. He would donate some work to do a good job. The matter was referred to the street committee with power to act.

Question of watter supply was discussed at length and some very strong language was used against the methods of the water company. Some members were for cancelling the franchise first and settling with the company afterward, It was finally agreed, however, that the clerk should notify the company to make the connection at the break at Lincoln street and supply water to the residents in the eastern part of the city immediately. The street committee and city attorney were named to see that the work was done forthwith, by the city if found necessary.

The mayor recommended and Mr. Miller moved that the members of the street committee be allowed $5 each for services past week. The allowance was declined.

A vote of thanks was thereupon given the committee and special Marshal Woods for their efficient services.

The quarantine being over, Mr. Woods was relieved from further duty.

Besides the damage enumerated above minor breaks in various parts of the city are reported. Most of these are in the nature of flooded cellars and slight washouts. All the mountain streams running through the corporate limits and adjacent streams were about as high as they have ever been known to be. The Lincoln street waterway, the head of which is several miles south, and which drains a vast area, did little damage until a small cedar stump was carried down into the tunnel. Bringing up against the water main which passed through the tunnel at Front street about a foot and a half from the top a jam was soon formed with the natural result. The cast-iron pipe finally broke and the immense weight released against the walls of the flume burst the top out at the center of the street. It was then but the work of a few moments for the raging torrent to tear a big hole in the street

Valley street creek threatened several of the buildings along the valley and finally carried off the neat three-room house of ex Councilman Munro which stood on his lots at Sixth street. The lots were also damaged by washout.

In Tumwater valley a couple of shacks were demolished and considerable land cleared for gardens washed away.

The Elwha river rose to a most dangerous height but the new bridge stood the severe test well.

At the mouth of Ennis creek and along Morse creek considerable farming land was washed away. The east bank at Ennis creek bridge is also gone and the bridge swung down stream. A ford has been established below the site. Seibert's creek bridge is reported shaky but not impassable.

Do not forget to see the 15 and 20c dress goods at Kirschberg's now being closed out at 9c per yard.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

AS 'ITHERS SEE US!

A METROPOLIS IS BORN HERE BUT STUNTED IN GROWTH.

We Must Go Ahead, However, and Will Ultimately Distance Seattle—Personal Opinion of a Disinterested Student of the Future of the West.

Mr. Robert S. Doubleday, the talented editor of Finance, the great financial journal published at St. Louis, gives Port Angeles the following write-up as his conclusions after many years study and personal observation. Mr. Doubleday says:

There was once a man named Daniel Webster and he was accounted wonderous wise; but posterity has discovered that Daniel did not know all that was to be known, and this was particularly true so far as his general knowledge of his own country was concerned. Some sixty years ago, when a few venturesome spirits who had gone on investigating tours, amid dangers and hardships, to the now great, but then unknown, Pacific Coast, were the only ones who possessed the slightest conception of the possibilities of that section, a proposition was before Congress to establish a post route from Independence, Mo., to the mouth of the Columbia river. This raised the question as to whether or not the far west and the Pacific Coast were of any consequence anyway. It offered Daniel Webster the most noble opportunity in his career to show how little a wise man knows when he leaves the channel of his own immediate and special study. Daniel proceeded to deliver himself of this:

"What do we want with this vast worthless area? This region of savages and wild beasts, of deserts, shifting sands and whirlwinds, of dust, of cactus and prairie dogs? To what use could we ever hope to put these great deserts, or these endless mountain ranges, impregnable and covered to their very base with eternal snow? What can we ever hope to do with the western coast, a coast of 3,000 miles, rock-bound, cheerless, uninviting, with not a harbor on it? What use have we for such a country? Mr. President, I will never vote one cent from the public treasury to place the Pacific Coast one inch nearer to Boston than it now is."

And there we have the wisdom of Webster, delivered no doubt, with an assurance that made many of his hearers believe that he knew what he was talking about. It is an unfortunate fact that we find the counterpart of Webster's foolish premises in the minds of men even of today, when they should know better.

"To bring the Pacific Coast one inch nearer to Boston than it now is." Weigh this, "nearer to Boston." Had Mr. Webster hailed from Savannah, Albany or Bogg's Hollow, one of these would then have been the pivotal spot, the distance from which to any other point or place would have determined the merit even the habitability of the latter. Today there are men—a few—who, though born later, yet live in Webster's atmosphere. To them the Pacific Coast is still so far away—far away from Chicago, from St. Louis, from Louisville, from Philadelphia, even from Denver and Helena, if they happen to live in these places, and singularly, while these doubting Thomases, these dilatory, hesitating wights have been settling down farther and farther upon their little heaps of savings, the few courageous and enterprising from here and there and over the world have trekked to the teeming West and in the midst of it's wonders and of their own prosperity they now reply, "Oh, Chicago, or St. Louis, or New York, or Boston, as the case may be, "is so far away"—from the Pacific Coast.

I have no need to dwell upon the marvels and rich opportunities of the Great West, the Pacific Coast or other portions of it. These have all been spread upon page and pamphlet and poster a thousand times, though "custom does not stale" the entrancing narrative and today it remains fresh bright, alluring. Other prophets have succeeded Webster; more fortunate seers at least, if less illustrious. There is rich pleasure after all in the generally disapproved indulgence of saying I told you so, and since the reward of prophets is frequently wholly embraced in this privilege, and I am in this regard at least no exceptional prophet, I shall not deny myself. Time flies and I find it is almost a quarter of a century since I began to make a study of the West. Of the present San Diego, California, of Tacoma and Seattle, in Washington, of Kansas City, of Portland, Oregon, of Butte, Montana, of the city of Pocatello, Idaho, just now about to be delivered from its bondage in the heart of the Fort Hall Indian reservation, of Minneapolis, outstripping St. Paul, of Superior, Wisconsin, and other fortunate beings into the future I may truly say, "I told you so."

And now I come to the birth of another metropolis. The star of its fortune has shown over it brightly enough to the trained eye for long. It has even sent up its tiny infant voice for some little while and it will run and kick and become a great striding city now ere we know it. And this place, the most natural and proper location for a metropolis as, you will see when you have looked for yourself, is Port Angeles, in Washington, on Puget Sound, or more properly, on the Straits of San Juan de Fuca, which connect the Pacific Ocean with Puget Sound. No, I have not the slightest personal interest in the advancement that I see coming for Port Angeles. Neither had I in any of the other of these young western giants that it has been my pleasure to write about during years past. I have been fortunate enough to point the way, foretell the outcome in so many instances and my reward has been the privilege of saying, "I told you so." I anticipate nothing more in the case of Port Angeles, but Port Angeles will become a city. In the future and the not very remote future, either, it will become a great city Will it undo Seattle? Not at all in the sense that Seattle will lose in population, in wealth, in business that it has today, but in the same way that Seattle distanced Tacoma, and Chicago has outstripped St. Louis, and Minneapolis has outgrown St. Paul, so Port Angeles will surpass Seattle eventually.

And why? Why for so many reasons that one could not set them all down at once, but principally because nature ordained it. If that be true why is it not already what it should be? New York was once but a little village, while there were great cities elsewhere in the world, all of which, save one, it has now passed in the race for population, wealth, volume of business and general importance. It took the trade of the new world to do this. The trade of the Orient and the development of the great Pacific Coast will do the same for Port Angeles.

Why at least is it not the principal city of the great northwest? Let me tell you. When the Northern Pacific was building to the coast, twenty years ago—I was living in its territory and knew its purposes—it wanted to make Port Angeles its western terminus, but it could not and was forced to compromise, for the time being on Tacoma, which it built up to the present handsome, substantial city that it is. Some years later, when the Great Northern—then the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba, was building to the coast, it too wanted to make Port Angeles its western terminus, but it could not, and so it compromised on Seattle, and made of that the splendid, thrifty young giant that it is. But it is assumed that railroads can do pretty much as they choose; then why could not these roads build into Port Angeles at that time? They could not make use of the present townsite of Port Angeles because on the 19th of June, 1862, President Lincoln issued a proclamation setting apart,

"For military purposes—a reservation for five miles in front; on east and west and said harbor (Port Angeles) and the bay, including the tongue of land known as Ediz Hook, extending back from the water southward one mile."

The townsite of Port Angeles was locked up and the use of its harbor for commercial purposes was made impossible, though its superior location and its fine harbor secured for it its selection as a port of entry as early as April 22, 1862. In 1867 the population of Port Angeles was ten all told; in 1883 it was seventeen. But seventeen people on the most favored site for a town, beside the finest harbor, that government engineers and naval experts could find in that section of the world.

Meanwhile Victoria, across the strait on the British side, without a railroad, with no harbor to compare with that of Port Angeles, and also without the fatal handicap of being a government reserve, had grown to a beautiful city of 25,000 people.

And has time and experience proven hat the government engineers were honest and capable men? There is no question about it. To all who have looked for themselves, to all whose interests are in the great and growing shipping of Puget Sound the facts are patent enough. There is no other site which has topographic, geographic and climatic advantages to compare with those of Port Angeles, and there is no other harbor near the ocean.

Has Port Angeles so good a harbor as well as the only one near the Pacific? Admiral Beardsley, commander in chief of the Pacific squadron, said of it on October 12, 1895: "The port is most admirably situated and possess every essential natural advantage for an ideal naval practicing station. The harbor is, as a matter of fact, the finest I have ever seen; sufficient in area, with excellent anchorage depth, the water deep to shore; it possesses essentially every advantage to prosecute with safety and the greatest facility maneuvers with the largest war vessels in the navy—with far reaching range, extending, unobstructed for miles over the waters of the straits, sufficient distance is given to practice with absolute safety with our largest guns. These conditions possessed by your harbor in a degree not elsewhere to be found, influenced me, solely as a result of my personal observations gath-

THE CITY DEBT.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Courier, has been calling the attention of the Commercial Club to the public debt of the city, and is out with the statement that the debt can be refunded at a great saving to the taxpayer. Without wishing to interfere with the laudable enterprise of our friend we are compelled to assert that the paper is made without proper thought and consideration of existing conditions. We have given the subject much thought and find that we cannot at this time refund our bonded indebtedness were it found profitable to do so, for the reason we have no option to pay off the present bonds until the date of expiration, eleven and nine years hence, and it is altogether too late to dream of refunding the warrant indebtedness for the reason that while we could undoubtedly get a very much lower rate of interest, the additional principal that would have to be created to pay enormous interest now due would more than off set the saving and leave us farther in the hole.

We have a plan, however, whereby it might be possible to refund at a considerable saving, but it has its faults and would necessitate somewhat of a compromise. There are many warrant holders who, if they could get cash for their warrants now, would accept face value for them. This would be a saving of about 75 per cent. to the city, and if any considerable amount of these warrants could be rounded up with the understanding that the city would cash them at their face, bonds to cash them could be issued at a great saving. But if the city has to pay the accrued interest on these warrants, better that they be allowed to run on as they are that interest may not be compounded, so to speak.

It is truly a lamentable fact that although the city government machinery has been operated with a current expense levy of 8 mills, in old town a 21 mill levy is made to pay interest on bonds and a small payment on old warrant indebtedness, and that despite this enormous levy, according to the annual report published last week, though accumulated interest on warrants. We are something over $5,000 more in debt today than we were one year ago.

When will this end?

Is there any remedy? and if so, should it not be applied at once?

Verily, there is something right at home that the Commercial Club can get to work immediately, and if it can solve the problem, its efforts will certainly be appreciated.

EUROPEAN FLUNKYISM.

In the House of Representatives this week Representatives Wheeler of Kentucky, in an impassioned speech excoriated what he termed the modern disposition toward "European Flunkyism."

"Until 1896," he said, "all Americans had gloried in the splendid isolation of the republic and its determination to hold aloof from foreign entangling alliances. Less than five years ago, he declared a President "egged on by the pitiable flunky in the State Department," had stretched his arms across the seas in adulation to the people of Great Britain and today the government was hugging to its bosom a nation that since the battle of Yorktown had systematically and persistently plotted our downfall.

Mr. Wheeler is right. Why should the people of this great republic take heed to this flunkyism of the present administration? Why send representatives abroad to kiss the hand and bend the knee to any monarch? Is this sentiment to be fostered and are we to do likewise when the king of Spain and future Kings are crowded? Are we to spend the people's money in this silly manner? We should treat our visitors from abroad politely and respectfully, but why fall down and worship them simply because they have royal blood in their veins? It is no better than American blood. We believe the administration is establishing a dangerous precedent.

KITCHENER is conducting a picturesque warfare in Africa. In a recent effort to surround the Boers he formed his men into a column over fifty miles in length. And still his efforts failed.

THE Clallam Record is responsible for the silly statement that Chinese exclusion will be hard to secure this session, because the Hearst papers have conducted a terrific agitation in favor of exclusion.

"WHEN in Rome do as Romans do," is a popular expression, but those who excuse themselves thus are endeavoring to change American ways to royal ways that the German prince may feel at home. Why not let the Prince do as Americans do while here? It might prove more interesting to him.

THE Olympia Recorder is of the opinion that state patronage at the disposal of Senator Foster will be his ruin. It will be interesting, indeed, to know how this squabble will come out, and it would be still more interesting to know all that is transpiring in the efforts to retain and remove those now holding federal jobs. Foster is not a politician and it does look as though the machine has him in for it.

IF the editor of the Seattle Times put out the light of its Port Townsend correspondent it will greatly favor Clallamites. At least it can give him to understand that he is to "know" whereof he writes and not "guess" at it. His notes regarding the damage done at this place by the recent heavy rains and swollen streams are products of the correspondent's imagination and have not the semblance of truth in them. We wish to warn the Times that the correspondent is enlarging his string and obtaining money under false pretenses.

Just within her grasp is safety—but she does not see it; she is looking the wrong way. There's many a woman struggling in a sea of disease who is doing the same thing—looking the wrong way—snatching at medicinal straws when the life buoy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is within her reach. Many a woman has testified: "I know I should not be alive to-day but for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription." This famous medicine establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

Weak and sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I take pleasure in writing to let you know the great good I received from your 'Favorite Prescription' and your 'Pleasant Pellets.' says Mrs. Nora Gaddie, of Rio, Hart Co., Ky. "I took seven or eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one or two vials of the 'Pellets.' Think I would have been in my grave had it not been for your medicines. It has been about four months since I took the medicine. I was all run down, had loss of appetite, could not sleep at night, was nervous, had backache, black spots on my limbs, and sick headache all the time. I have not had sick headache since I took your medicine."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure dizziness and sick headache.

COMMONER SAYINGS.

"Kill or conquer" is the motto of the two greatest nations of the world.

Will the administration organs observe Lincoln's birthday by republishing what Lincoln said about the "argument of kings?"

The new cabinet office will be known as the "department of commerce and labor." The latter will pay for the upbuilding of the former.

As this is the season for the celebration of Lincoln' birthday, the the republicans might employ some of their time in searching the speeches of Lincoln for authority to support imperialism. They will find that he said many things in favor of the Declaration of Independence, but nothing in favor of a colonial policy.

It is reported that the president is going to send his daughter to London to attend the coronation of the king. Let us hope that this is false.

Mr. Oxnard is quite sure that the best sugar industry cannot live without a tariff, but the Detroit Evening News calls attention to a circular issued by Mr. Oxnard in 1899 in which he assured prospective stockholders that even free trade could not hurt the best industry, "as we can undersell Europe in the production of all other crops, and sugar is not an exception."

The people of Iowa can form a just comparison between their ex-governor and their present governor when they contrast the former's apologetic words spoken in defense of trusts with the latter's energetic condemnation of trusts, and they can wonder whether the president made Mr. Shaw secretary of the treasury in ignorance of that official's partiality toward corporations or because of that partiality.

IMPERIALISM IS EXPENSIVE

The effort of subjugate the Filinos has already cost the United States $300,000,000, and it is estimated that this un-American effort is now requiring the expenditure of $12,000,000 per month. The Philadelphia Times says: "It is estimated that Great Britain has spent more than a million dollars on the war with the Boers. An interesting fact is the increasing cost of war. The wars of Napolean for thirteen years cost France a billion dollars. The four years of civil war in the United States cost four billions, or a dozen times more per year than Napoleon's cost France. Now Great Britain has spent in three years on a small war as much as Napoleon spent in thirteen years in a series of great wars. This, too, without the use of her navy or contact with a great power."

ered from the successful maneuverings during our visits here, to make this the permanent practicing ground of the Pacific squadron." Was Admiral Beardsley mistaken? Sound the harbor for yourself, examine the government charts I have.

I have said that Port Angeles has remained to this time an unknown, unimportant dot on the map because when it might have been made a city it was locked up snug and tight by the government, and that is true. I predict that it will soon make its start, and that upon so marked a scale that the entire country will observe it, and this prediction will be found to be correct. A few years ago the government threw the townsite, except for a very small reserve, open to the public. General John W. Noble, then Secretary of the Interior, doing this with so keen and just an eye to the public rights as to keep it from being misappropriated in any way. When this was done the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern were heavily interested in Seattle and Tacoma and financial conditions then prevailing were not favorable to railway extensions. When the financial conditions showed signs of change the movement for a consolidation of interests in these two railroads had interiorly begun and no extensions to a new and better coast terminus would be begun until this coalition had taken place or was certain. Now let us see what the conditions are to day.

The interests in these two great railway properties will be actually or in affect united. Thus they are no longer keen rivals, but they have common interests, and in these find that they must extend to the better harbor nearer the sea, because the Canadian Pacific with its terminus at Vancouver, B. C., is gaining upon them in the transcontinental and Oriental business.

Nor is this all for the Union Pacific has planned to spend $2,000,000 during the present year, northwest of Ogden, Utah, and it can have but one purpose, in this, id est, to reach the best sea harbor possible, a new place preferrably, where other roads will not hamper it with previously acquired privileges, grants, water frontages and terminals There is but one such point. Port Angeles.

These railroads now have definite plans. There will be an extension of the Union Pacific to Port Angeles from the south; there will be an extension by railway ferry and rail from Seattle by the Great Northern; there will be an extension of the Northern Pacific from near Olympia; and also a line constructed west into the timber belt to another Northern Pacific connection. The virgin country back from Port Angeles for 100 miles will be developed. Gradually the trans-Pacific freighting will come to pass through Port Angeles. Port Angeles, which as a city is just born, will become a great city.

TO LOCATE PLANT.

Pacific Steel Company Named Directors to Select a Permanent Site for Mammoth Works.

Mr. M. J. Carrigan returned from New York last week where he was a prominent figure in the election of the Pacific Steel Company and he has consented to say a few things regarding the plans of the company that have been known for some time but which were not to be given to the public until an auspicious moment should arrive.

The time has arrived, the experiment stage having passed and Mr. Carrigan says it has been decided to proceed at once with the erection of a permanent steel plant at some point on Puget Sound, that the location will be definitely settled upon within three months and Port Angeles will present a strong argument in its favor. Mr. Carrigan is to be one of the choosers. The plant will cost $3,000,000, will employ 2,000 men, and will be in operation in one year.

At the outset we are confronted with the old story of wrong-side of the sound and no railroad, but Mr. Carrigan hopes to be able to present a written guarantee to the committee from the N. P. railroad to the effect that the road will be built in here by the time the plant is complete. If he can do this he is confident this point will be selected. Outside of this objection we have much the best of the argument from every standpoint, including everything necessary for the successful operation of a gigantic steel plant.

May the man of small statue prove a giant in the weilding of the argument at his command is the wish of all who have waited so long and patiently.

Olympic Forest Reserve.

The description, from field notes, by Messrs. Arthur Dodwell and T. F. Rixon, of the Olympic Forest Reserve, Washington, is a part of the report on forest reserves, by Mr. Henry Gannett, geographer, now in press, but not yet published, which constitutes part five of the Twenty-first Annual Report of the United States, geological survey. The reserve comprizes an area of 3,030 square miles, or 1,939,200 acres, and includes parts of Clallam, Jefferson, Chehalis, and Mason counties. The reserve consists of the Olympic mountains, which rise to summits exceeding 8,000 feet in altitude, and their slopes upon all sides. Upon the east it extends nearly to Pugot Sound, upon the north to the Straits of Juan de Fuca, and upon the west nearly to the Pacific ocean. Eleven rivers drain into its territory. It has only about 4,000 acres now ready for use as agriculture land. Large areas of unused grazing land, about 64,000 acres in all, are found upon the tops of the ridges, between an elevation of 4000 and 6000 feet. Mining operations are being pushed along the north watershed of the Elwha river, but, gold and copper have been found. Logging operationg have not been found practicable because the rivers are too swift and subject to too many freshets. The Indians have to pole their canoes up these streams when trapping and fishing, as rowing is impossible.

The lower country up to altitude of fully 3,000 feet is heavily timbered. The total stand of timber upon the area examined is 37,000 million feet, an average per acre for the entire area of 21,000 feet this is the most heavily timbered part of the state. This enormous body of timber consists of hemlock, 42 per cent; red fir, 26 per cent; silver fir, 15 per cent; cedar, 10 per cent; and spruce, 7 per cent. Fires have been extensive and severe, and, in spite of heavy rainfall, restocking of the burned areas has made little progress.

The report is illustrated by twenty plates.

Where She Was Vaccinated.

It was at a dinner party in this city the other day. The bright young man found himself privileged to sit next to the young woman with beautiful arms and neck. He thought himself the most favored personage in the room. Suddenly his fair companion exhibited signs of nervousness. Two of his very best jokes, saved for a special occasion, passed by unnoticed. Her face wore a look of alarm. Apprehensively the young man gazed at her, and meeting the look she said:

"I am in misery."

"In misery?" echoed the man.

"Yes," she replied. "I was vaccinated the other day, and it has taken beautifully. I could almost scream, it hurts so."

The young man looked at the beautiful arms, and seeing no mark there said:

"Why, where were you vaccinated?"

"In Seattle," she replied, the smile chasing away the look of pain.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up themucuous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE" and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION.—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE.

IN THE DAIRY

Professor T. L. Haecker of Minnesota, writing of calf feeding, says: My system of feeding is very uniform. When the calf is dropped, I let it suck once and then remove it from the dam. If it is removed in the morning, I give it no feed until the following morning. This is done so the calf will be hungry and will drink the milk without the finger. I give from three to four pints of its mother's milk twice a day, immediately after milking the dam. A small calf gets three pints and a large calf four pints. This I continue for about a week. Then for a week I give it whole milk half and skimmilk half twice a day, giving it only from three to four pints. The third week I feed all separator skimmilk, but put in the milk a teaspoonful of ground flax. I gradually increase the skimmilk and flax meal so that by the end of the fourth month it is receiving a heaping tablespoonful of flax meal and ten pints of milk twice a day. After the first month it has access to a little early cut hay and a little whole oats or a mixture of whole oats and bran or shorts.

Changing Strains.

It is the universal opinion of all breeders and dairymen who have given the subject any attention that it is not a desirable thing, as a rule, to change from one strain to another, says Hoard's Dairyman. If a man is breeding in Holstein lines, let him continue in that direction unless for reasons satisfactory to himself he wants to make a thorough and complete change. If he is breeding Jerseys or Guernseys or Ayrshires, the same rule applies. But too much dependence should not be placed upon names. If he is grading up with Jerseys, he should do a little something more than get a registered Jersey sire. He should make assurance positive that he is getting a thoroughly good animal—better than anything he has ever had in his herd previously. And the same rule applies with any other breed.

Improving the Dairy Herd.

By feeding up the herd until they are doing their best and then weeding out the unprofitable cows, breeding to the best dairy strains and properly controlling the sanitary conditions and using a good supply of kindness the dairyman may expect to have an ideal herd in the course of a few years.

Dairy Buildings

In order to note the effect of flies on milk cows, Professor W. L. Carlisle of Wisconsin experiment station divided 14 cows into two lots about equal in every respect. During the daytime one lot was kept in a small paddock, having an abundance of shade. The other lot was placed in a comfortable stable provided with screen doors and windows. The lot in the paddock were on the move constantly fighting flies, while the others in the stable were suffering no annoyance. Comparing the result from the standpoint of milk and butter, it was shown that the cows protected from flies produced 20 per cent more butter than those in the open lot.

In several tests made on an Iowa dairy farm it was found practicable to keep the cows in a dark stable and discard screens. The cows thus stabled were practically free from flies and gave more milk than those left out of doors. The cows were allowed to run in the pasture during the night and early morning and required but little supplementary feed.

If it is impracticable to use screens or to darken a stable, the next best thing to do is to apply some repellent to the skin. A number of these are on the market, and many of them will last two or three days after applying. As a rule two applications a week are sufficient. The compound, whatever it may be, should be rubbed on the flanks, legs, necks and about the base of the horns or any spots where flies are most annoying. This should not be neglected. Of course, with large herds of fattening cattle the application of a compound of this character is rather difficult, but most of them can be put on with a small spray pump. If the cattle are driven slowly through a narrow passage, the entire herd can be sprayed in a very short time. Dairy cows, work horses and any stock kept in the stable can be easily treated.

Making a Milkroom.

A milkroom can be built in one corner of the barn or a small building about 20 by 22 erected in some convenient and sanitary place near the barn, says Professor D. H. Otis in Kansas Farmer. The floor and sides should be made of cement so as to be easily cleaned. The floor should slant somewhat toward the drain. A large water tank can be set on one side of the room and the water kept running around the cans of milk, escaping near the top at the farther end of the tank. Where running water is not available or the windmill is uncertain a better arrangement would be to have several barrels or stock tanks about the size of barrels. One can of milk can be set in each tank, which necessitates pumping only enough water to surround each can, while if one large tank is used it will take just as much and even more water for one can of milk than it will for a dozen. A trough in front of these tanks can be made to conduct the water to the stock tank. This trough could be made of cement and constructed while the floor is being laid. If not convenient to do this, any ordinary wooden or tin spouting will answer.
