City Attorney Gives Opinion That Council is Powerless To Interfere

Council — Wednesday. Present all members except Gutenberg and Hoare.

An extended session was held and several important matters were discussed. The grade tax matter again laid over.

City Attorney Smith submitted a voluminous opinion on the grade tax matters holding that as parties refuse to accept indebtedness fund warrants in exchange for their grade warrants council's hands are tied, as city cannot issue current expense warrants in lieu thereof and there is no other fund for assumption of debt except the indebtedness fund. This is excluded because of over issue. Should city attempt to issue warrants officers would become personally liable, If property is allowed to escape it is very clear that city does not become liable as warrant holders have at all times been protected had they taken proper steps within the time limit. There is no conflict in the decisions of the supreme court in this matter. There is no question but that suits brought are within limits.

Regarding the proposal of city dismissing suits and confessing judgment in favor of warrant holders; and on the present status of the cases pending the attorney concludes as follows:

"But a judgment obtained as proposed in settlement would have no validity, as being founded in collusion between the officers and said claimants since it is clear that no judgment in such case if contested could be obtained, based upon the ground of the dismissal of said cases, if dismissed by the consent of said claimants; and the liabilities of officers would follow in their attempt to base a liability and issue warrants thereon. The officers dismissing said suits would also be liable in damages to those claimants not participating therein. * "As to the cases in suit the claimants will not allow them to be dismissed so long as they have no other security; having given actual notice to that effect any officer ordering dismissal of same without consent of said street assessment warrant holders would be liable on his bond in damages to the amount involved."

Petition asking that city take up work commenced last summer toward bridging gulch on Fifth st. between Lincoln and Chase was read. Petitioners offered to donate work and money to sum of about $150.

A petition was also read from a number of citizens asking for lumber for a walk on Oak street, South of Sixth. Petitioners would do all work. Petitions were referred to street committee.

A suggestion was read from Jas. Stewart citing that all citizens are compelled to use that part of the city on Front street between Oak and Lincoln; and further, that all the filth of the past 15 years has accumulated there to the disgust of all parties. He asked that said street be put in good repair either by macadamizing, planking or other improvement; that the same could be assessed to abutting property or assumed by city at large.

Mr. Grubb favored planking if it could be done by assessment district and the matter was referred to street committee and city attorney.

Mayor reported that case of Jas. Stewart vs. city to mandamus city to repair Front street extension came up February 1st. for hearing. He had asked gentleman that if city would put extension in fair repair and open same, he would drop suit, and Mr. Stewart had answered that the matter could probably be arranged. Referred to street committee for purpose of ascertaining what can be done.

Mayor announced reappointment for present of all committees. He named for street commissioner, Wm Graham; the nomination was not confirmed, and the mayor named Wm. Wood, who received the endorsement of council. Mr. Wood is a son-in-law of Councilman Mosher.

J. F, Franck was named for harbor master and council concurred.

Mr. Hallahan reported that Peabody stroet bridge is in bad condition for heavy traffic. Several uprights are rotton where they join the mud-sills and must be looked after at an early date. Front st.,

DeLAUNAY'S VERSION

Says Clallam Would be Afloat Today if Rudder Had Been Right

VICTORIA, Jan. 25—Special—Concluding that it is impossible for him to get a fair show at the inquiry now being held in Seattle into the loss of the Clallam, Chief Engineer Scott De Launay, of the lost steamer, is in the city to give his evidence at the coroner's inquest here. To a reporter he said it was very evident to him and many others that inspectors Turner and Whitney were suppressing the facts in the case. He noticed that when anyone attempted to tell of the condition of the rudder he was sidetracked at once.

"The rudder," he said, "was never all right, with the exception of possibly the first week after it was shipped. I have heard Capt. Harry Carter, her former captain, say that he would not leave Victoria if the wind were blowing at all fresh from the southwest with the rudder in that condition. He was always complaining about the rudder, and said that the company might be sorry that it let it go so long a time without repairing it.

"It is a well-known fact by all aboard that in order to turn the ship around it was necessary to run the engine dead slow, and if there was any wind blowing it was next to impossible to get her round at all. * * *

"If that rudder had been in good condition the steamship Clallam would be afloat today. It is rather amusing to hear the deck department say they never had any trouble with it. I have seen on more than one occasion the men working with might and main on that rudder. * * Now understand, I had notified the captain that he must turn the ship around or she would sink, for when I saw the deadlight stove in I believed that unless the ship could be brought around she would sink. This was when the ship was abreast of Dungeness spit. Knowing the condition of the rudder I was particular to notify the captain in plenty of time. This was before she took in much water.

"If he could have gotten her before the wind we would have had no trouble in stopping the inflow of water through the deadlight. But the condition of the rudder prevented this. Now, this is known not only to me alone, but by the officers and crew. Capt. Roberts had the jib set, hoping to get her around, but she wouldn't come, so we lay there wallowing in the trough of the sea, or nearly so.

"We were attempting to stop the wa-

Narrow Chests.

The old theory that consumption was inherited is utterly discredited by modern medical science. The germs of consumption must be received from without. These germs are every where. They are constantly being received and cast out by the healthy system. It is the narrow chested whose inheritance is weakness who fall a prey to consumption because they are too weak of lung to resist and throw off disease.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes weak lungs strong. It cures obstinate deep-seated coughs, bleeding lungs, weakness, emaciation and other conditions which if neglected or unskilfully treated find a fatal termination in consumption.

$3,000 FORFEIT will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. "In the spring of 1900 I was taken with hemorrhage of the lungs, and became very weak and short of breath, lost flesh and had no appetite," writes Mr. E. L. Robinett, of Kerens, Tex. "I was persuaded to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The first few bottles seemed to do me but little good. Thought I would soon be a victim of that dreaded disease, consumption. Had almost given up in despair when my friends persuaded me to give your 'Golden Medical Discovery' a fair trial. I commenced its use. I weigh 160 pounds now, and when I commenced I only weighed 140 pounds. If any one doubts this statement I will be pleased to answer any inquiry."

REDHORN'S TENDERFOOT

By Charles Lee Taylor

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson

Redhorn was a tough town. Half a dozen "terrors" among its highly picturesque population stood ready to shoot at the drop of the hat, and as many more professional blacklegs and gamblers were handy with their guns. It was a dull day when a killing was not reported and an off week that did not chronicle a lynching.

Redhorn accepted strangers on probation—that is, the new man was given twenty-four hours in which to show that he could drink, fight and lose his outfit at faro without taking it to heart. If he did not affiliate with "the gang," he received a notice somewhat to this effect:

"See yere, you pious souled, psalm singing, knockkneed jack rabbit of a critter, this ain't your town, and you'd better move on if you don't want to be planted up thar on the hill among the snakes. You've got two hours to kiss your mother goodby and git."

At long intervals a tenderfoot, a man so fresh from the states that he still used a toothbrush and a cake of soap and who had never knifed a fellow being, showed up at Redhorn and was struck dumb at its wickedness. If he was simply "going somewhere," he was permitted to remain long enough to refresh the inner man and then was sternly ordered on. Redhorn preferred to assimilate citizens of its own selection.

One morning the cry was passed along the line, "Tenderfoot in town," and the gang sauntered up street to size up the latest arrival from civilization.

He sat on the steps of the Oriental hotel, a womanish chap with a smooth face and honest blue eyes that scanned the crowd of toughs unflinchingly, almost humorously. He smoked placidly for a minute or two, then, removing his pipe, inquired quietly, "Anything I can do for you, gentlemen?"

The gang collectively and individually snorted and the fun commenced. They moved down on the newcomer and shot the pipe from his mouth, the hat off his head and the heels off his boots. They had expected to see him slide off the steps and break for the hillside when the first bullet whistled through his hair, but he didn't move. He sat there until the fusillade had ceased and the jokers were wondering if he was not an old hand in disguise and then quietly said, "Much obliged for your welcome; it's as good as bringing out a brass band."

The crowd held a brief consultation. It was agreed that he had nerve, but that he would never make a bad man—not bad enough to become an eminent citizen of Redhorn. Jim Kelso acted as spokesman, and his sincerity could not be doubted.

"I hear you," replied the tenderfoot when Jim paused; then he dropped his chin on his hands and stared at a distant mountain peak, apparently oblivious to his surrounding. It was not until the hour of grace had gone by and a crowd gathered again that he awoke and looked about him.

"You can't say that we didn't give you a fair deal," observed Joe Lobdell, the gambler, as he came forward with a noosed rope in his hands. "You had an hour in which to git, and as you didn't go we concluded that you want to be planted here. If you've any farewell words to shoot off, you might give 'em to us."

"I'm going to see how many real men there are in Redhorn," replied the stranger as he stood up. "You are three hundred to one, and every one of you has a gun, and you've turned out this morning to do a brave thing. As I was tramping over here from Hunt's valley I heard that the Apaches were loose again and headed this way. At Beaver Bend I come across a settler's family camped out in the wagon. The man has a broken leg, and his wife and four children are almost helpless. I'm giving you straight talk when I tell you that I walked all night to get here and head a crowd back to save that outfit. They'll be meat for the Apaches and wolves before this hour tomorrow unless some of you will go with me to bring 'em in. How many of you can I count on?"

Not a voice answered. The Apaches had raided down close to Redhorn three or four times, but the soldiers had always been sent for to drive them back.

"Mighty brave about turning out to a picnic," smiled the stranger, "but you don't seem to want to run into any danger. Are there ten men here who will follow me?"

No one replied.

"Well, I'll take five, then."

The crowd was silent.

"Isn't there one single man in Redhorn with grit enough to go back with me to that defenseless outfit?" continued the tenderfoot.

"Say, boys," said the gambler leader, a sickly smile on his face, "this looks as if we were short of sand in this town. I'm not hankering after Apaches, but I've got a Winchester and 300 cartridges, and if any galoot wants to become a hero I'll lend him the outfit."

Not a man took advantage of the offer. The crowd growled, muttered and dissolved, and only half a dozen were left when Joe Lobdell continued:

"Look here, tenderfoot, you've thrown Redhorn down and thrown it hard, but for one I don't bear no grudge. I see you're determined on going back to the settler, and durn me if I'll see you go with only a club in your hands. Take my outfit, and if you never bring it back I shan't have a word to say, but we prefer to die with our scalps on. We don't warm up on the Injun business worth a cent. Hold on a minute while I bring you the rifle."

The Winchester was no sooner in the tenderfoot's hands than he started back over the trail without a word to any man or a look around him, and Redhorn saw him no more for four days. Then the settler and his family were brought in by the soldiers, and in an ambulance was the body of the tenderfoot, riddled with bullets.

"You want to know how it was?" said the settler's wife as a crowd gathered. "Well, all I can tell you is that he reached us two hours before the Apaches did, and we had a bit of time to get ready in. For two days he stood off thirty warriors single handed and was wounded a dozen times. He had fired his last bullet when the soldiers came up. He was a man, he was."

"And Redhorn will give him a burial and turn out to the last man!" exclaimed Lobdell, the gambler, reverently touching his Winchester, which had seen such valiant service.

"Excuse me, gentlemen," replied the captain in command of the soldiers. "We shall take him down to the valley and give him a soldier's burial. He'd turn over in his grave here among so many cowards!"

Queer Japanese Beliefs.

The Japanese believe in more mythical creatures than any other people on the globe, civilized or savage. Among these are mythical animals without any remarkable peculiarities of conformation, but gifted with supernatural attributes, such as the tiger which is said to turn as white as a polar bear on the date of his one thousandth birthday. They also believe in a species of fox which if he lives to be fifty years old without having been chased by a dog transforms itself into a beautiful woman. This same fox, if he can manage to live for a century, gains additional powers, such as becoming a wonderful wizard, etc. When he lives to be 1,000 years old, he becomes a "celestial fox," with nine golden tails, and has the power of going to heaven and returning whenever he chooses.

These Japs also believe in a multitude of animals distinguished by their monstrous size or by the multiplication of their numbers. Among these are serpents 800 feet long and large enough to swallow an elephant, boxes with eight legs, monkeys with four ears and seven tails; fishes with ten heads attached to one body, the flesh of this last monster being a sure cure for boils, bites of poisonous serpents, hydrophobia, etc.

She Was Thankful.

Not long ago a clergyman in the course of ministrations among the poor of a large provincial town called on an old lady who had been bedridden for some years.

"Well, Mrs. Davies," he said, "and how are you today?"

"Oh, I'm pretty well, thank you, sir," was the cheerful answer.

"Ah, that's right," responded the clergyman sympathetically. "I hardly expected you to be in such good spirits, with all your afflictions. I was afraid I should find you downhearted."

"No, no, sir," she cried, interrupting him; "no, no, indeed, sir. I've much to be thankful for, I have. Why, only the other night when that house just opposite was on fire I couldn't help thinking of all the poor people crushing each other in the street and many of them not getting a sight of the fire at all, while here was I, all nice and comfortable in bed, and I could see it beautifully through my window without even turning over! No, no; I've a lot to be thankful for!"—Pearson's.

Ensilage.

Ensilage means a certain method of preserving green fodder and is also applied to the fodder itself when so preserved.

Any green crop may be treated, but it must be sown so as to be in blossom before frosts. A pit called a "silo" is prepared, with solid walls and floor of stone or cement. The fodder is gathered and cut up while green and then dumped into the silo. Salt is added in the proportion of a bushel to every ten or fifteen tons of the fodder. A heavy board is placed over the fodder when the pit is full and is weighted down with rocks, sand bags or grain bags until the pressure is about 150 pounds to the square foot.

The silo must be water tight and airtight, and thus the fodder is preserved in its green condition until it is wanted—say, in November or December, when it is taken out of a door at the end of the silo and fed to cattle, a hayknife being used to cut out such a quantity as may be needed each time.—New York Press.

It Hit Him.

FORCING RHUBARB.

Winter Service For the Hotbed and a Profitable Crop For Market.

Those who want to make the hotbed do service during the winter when snow covers the ground and farming is nearly at a standstill should try growing rhubarb, says a New York state correspondent in American Agriculturist. Pieplant, or rhubarb, is not considered of much importance by farmers, but in the city out of season it is highly prized for sauce and pies. Shovel the old manure and soil out of the hotbed until there is sufficient depth to allow the full growth of the plant. In the fall the roots are dug and set in the hotbeds. Trim off all the stalks. The safest plan is to allow the roots to freeze before being transferred. They can then be handled without fear of damage.

Put two layers of boards over the hotbeds, making it as tight as possible to keep out the wet. A piece of tarred or roofing paper between the boards will help do this. Now heap manure from one to two feet deep around the hotbed and place six or eight inches on top. With several hotbeds the date of picking may be varied by using different amounts of manure. The more manure the faster the roots will be forced. Pile the manure until it heats before applying.

Before the new year the beds may be uncovered and the stalks picked. They will have very little leaf. Three stalks are tied together, and twelve of these bunches are tied into one large bunch and so shipped to market. If sold in a small town or city near home they may be bunched most any way. Sometimes in midwinter a bundle of thirty-six stalks, called by the trade a dozen, will bring from 50 to 80 cents at wholesale. Any variety of rhubarb can be used.

It will pay a farmer to raise rhubarb for his own use in this manner if he does not care to bother with much of it. If he has no hotbed he can use an ordinary box, with the bottom and top knocked out, to raise enough for his own table.

AN INTERESTING THEORY.

Tile Drainage as a Means of Utilizing Potash In the Subsoil.

Dr. C. G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois calls attention to the effect of tile drainage in supplying potash to the soil. He says: "As a matter of fact, practically all of the soils of Illinois (swamp and sand soils excepted) contain large supplies of potassium in the subsoils, say between twenty and forty inches below the surface. Tile drains laid at a depth of forty inches permit the excessive soil water to pass off quickly, thus causing the soil to become more porous and allowing the air to enter to encourage nitrification and the liberation of plant food from the subsoil. The plant roots are encouraged to grow deep into the soil and thus obtain potassium which they could not obtain if the subsoil was waterlogged more or less of the time during the season.

"The results already obtained in support of such a theory are very meager and somewhat conflicting, and more data are needed and are being obtained as rapidly as possible. However, in view of the facts, first, that applications of potassium have markedly increased crop yields on this type of soil, and, second, that the subsoil is actually rich in potassium, it seems worth while to call attention, tentatively at least, to the indications that tile drainage may perhaps be just as effective and more economical as a means of supplying potassium to the growing crops, altogether aside from the other marked benefits which tile drainage produces."

Dry Alfalfa.

A new grass is being sent out from the experiment stations in Washington and Oregon known as dry alfalfa. It is said to be peculiarly adapted for lands where water is scarce. Its characteristic is that it does not send down a ten or twelve foot taproot to find water, but trusts to a weblike tangle of fine roots to absorb the moisture from the surrounding earth. This alfalfa has been tested at Pendleton and in the Grande Ronde valley and in Klickitat county, and the results are said to have been excellent.—Country Gentleman.

The Game Laws.

"Game laws for 1903, a summary of the provisions relating to seasons, shipment, sale and licenses," is the title of farmers' bulletin No. 180, lately issued. It contains interesting information designed to be useful not only to sportsmen and game wardens, but to shippers, dealers, farmers and others.

One Thing and Another.

The Iowa State college reports that over 500 farmers attended its two weeks' course in corn and stock judging last January, and present indications are that a much larger number will take the course to be given Jan. 4-16.

In small plantations of nut trees intended for windbreaks great assistance will be given to the grove after cultivation ceases by heavily mulching with straw.

Admit all the sunlight possible into your hog buildings and on to your feeding floors. One minute—yes, one second—of bright sunlight will kill the liveliest hog cholera germ in existence, says a Minnesota swine grower.

Professor Kennedy of Iowa, an expert in stock feeding, is quoted to the effect that steaming, cooking, soaking and fermenting feed stuffs does not increase their fattening qualities.

M. A. Carleton, cerealist expert, estimates the American crop of macaroni wheat this year at 8,000,000 bushels against 2,000,000 last year and 100,000 in 1901. Twenty-two mills are now grinding macaroni.

DEWEY

in command of the Asiatic squadron, consisting of the Olympia (flagship), first-class cruiser; Baltimore, Raleigh, Boston, second-class cruisers; Concord, third-class cruiser; Petrel, fourth-class cruiser; McCulloch, revenue cutter, used as a dispatch boat; Nanshan, collier; and Zafiro, supply vessel; with a total personnel of 1,694 officers and men.

On the breaking out of the war with Spain, April 22, 1898, Commodore Dewey was at Hong Kong with his squadron; and he received prompt instructions from Washington to find and destroy the Spanish fleet stationed somewhere in the Philippines. Accordingly, on Wednesday, April 27, he sailed with his squadron from Hong Kong in search of the enemy. The result may be given in his own first brief dispatch: "Manila, May 1.—Squadron arrived at Manila at daybreak this morning. Immediately engaged the enemy, and destroyed the following Spanish vessels: Reina Cristina, Castilla, Don Antonio de Ulloa, Isla de Luzon, Isla de Cuba, General Lezo, Marques del Duero, Cano, Velasco, Isla de Mindanao, a transport and water battery at Cavité. The squadron is uninjured, and only a few men are slightly wounded." Owing to the feeble defense of the Spaniards, Commodore Dewey's victory was an unexpectedly easy one; but that circumstance does not in the slightest degree detract from its workmanlike completeness, which, when contrasted with the trifling cost to the victor, made it one of the most remarkable victories in naval annals. Commodore Dewey's dispatch was received by President McKinley on May 7, and he at once telegraphed his thanks to Commodore Dewey, and notified him that, in recognition of his "splendid achievement," he had been appointed acting rear-admiral. Two days later the President sent a message to Congress recommending that the thanks of that body be given to "Acting Rear-Admiral George Dewey for highly distinguished conduct in conflict with the enemy, and to the officers and men under his command." On the same day (May 9) Congress passed a joint resolution of thanks, to the effect indicated, and voted to Admiral Dewey a sword of honor, and to his comrades medals commemorative of the victory. It also passed a bill increasing the number of rear-admirals from six to seven, to provide for Dewey's promotion. After the destruction of the Spanish fleet, Dewey subjected Manila to a strict blockade, and with his squadron took part in the capture of the city by General Merritt on Aug. 13, 1898. On March 2, 1899, he was created full admiral. (See also MANILA, in these Supplements.)

Admiral Dewey is a strict disciplinarian, and his action with the Spanish squadron showed that he is an admirable tactician, and a cool, clear-headed, skilful, and brave commander. He is an all-round athlete, a daring horseman and huntsman, and socially a good club man and a general favorite. At Portsmouth, N. H., in 1867, he married Miss Susy Goodwin, a daughter of Ichabod Goodwin, the "fighting governor" of New Hampshire. She died in 1872, leaving a son, George Goodwin Dewey, who, after graduating at Princeton, went into business in New York city.

THE Council's determination, if possible, to waste no more money in repairs on the old plant will be commended. If we are to pay for power at the figure city can produce it we don't want the figures fixed by the old costly hulk.

ENGINEER DeLaunay's st atement, published in another column, startling though it is, seems to be more in keeping with the facts as they have been understood. While we do not wish to be too severe with Capt. Roberts, we cannot escape the conclusion that had the ship been insured no lives would have been lost.

THE Democratic party believes still in its money plank of 1896 and 1900, and time will exonerate its position. The money question is as much alive as ever, and the only reason silver is not an issue is the fact that the same end sought has been temporarily reached through the recent heavy production of gold and the largely increased per capita circulation aided by the greatest coinage of silver in our history. More money was the issue and whoever figures that silver, free and untrammelled, is not safer than paper, controlled by banks, and "asset" currency, has little confidence in this government. Why not, then, re-affirm these planks? Even though "silver" is not now an issue can we afford to practically repudiate one of the strongest declarations of the past two national conventions, and a tenent of the Republican party in its less subservient days.

For the city's proposed improved lighting system arrived on yesterday's Gertrude. THE WEEK IN SOCIETY

THE Ladies Book Club, noted especially for its quarterly and annual receptions to the gentlemen did not in any manner dim the effulgence of its reputation at its annual held last Friday night at the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Clark. The event was well up to the high standard, which means that all present enjoyed the occasion immensely. The first two hours of the evening were taken up with miscellaneous card games, followed by one of the swell suppers which can always be depended upon on these occasions; each gentleman present was presented with a card with a request in verse that he speak, sing, tell a story, joke or propound a conundrum, and all responded with good grace. Beautiful score cards with excellently drawn and colored pictures, the handiwork of Miss Lulu Crooks and Master Donald Lutz, were furnished. Mr. "Sam." Johnson won the prize at cards and Dr. Appleton was voted the winner in the after-supper impromptu responses.

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

A FARM CART.

A Convenient Affair For Rough and Tumble Usage With Pony Power.

The cut shows our pony cart and almost tells the story of its many uses. It is about the handiest thing on the place, relieving many a hard lug and unpleasant chore every day, saving time and labor wherever it goes, says an Ohio Farmer correspondent. New wheels may be bought, of course, with stub axles, to which you weld the bar iron for the drop, and these will last longer and make a more substantial job. But nearly every farmer has in his scrap heap or can get at the blacksmith shop a set of old cultivator or buggy wheels. Take an old axle or other good bar of iron or steel and bend an axle with sufficient drop to place the bottom of your box from eight to nine inches from the ground—the higher the wheels the greater the required drop, with increased strain in consequence. The bottom of the box may be from two to four feet wide, according to the purposes for which it is intended, the size of the animal to be mostly used and the size of the axle iron, upon which depends its strength against the side pressure which comes almost wholly upon the bend, or elbow, in the axle.

The box of the bed is fitted to rest inside of and on the axle. It should be built of good, straight, sound lumber, the three crosspieces for the bottom of hard wood, the rear crosspiece long enough to project from eight to ten inches for heavy brace irons running the entire height of the box. The crossbars should be from 1 to 1½ inches thick by 3 inches wide. The box may be from three to four feet long on the bottom and a foot or more longer at the top, allowing a slant forward at the front. Narrow hardwood boards are best for the bottom and wide boards an inch thick for the sides and front. The wider the boards the better. Shafts of the proper shape you can buy, or they can be sawed from an oak plank to proper shape and curve. These should extend the full length of the box, with a 1 by 2 inch piece inside of the box to bolt solid, and the shafts should of course be long enough to place the animal far enough away from the box to prevent interfering.

It is best to put the whole cart together with bolts and screws to endure the rough and tumble usage it will probably receive. Use a hardwood corner piece inside at the corners of the front end to screw the sides and front securely. Allow the side boards to extend from two to two and a half inches over to permit a quarter inch rod, with a nut at one end, to pass through the boards outside the bed at the top, center and bottom to hold the bed by tension from giving way from the strain at the back. The shafts must be braced both laterally and horizontally to prevent breakage from strain in overbalance or in pulling heavy loads.

Rich & Harris' Screaming Farce
At the Opera House
February 1st

Are you a Mason? Will be given at the opera house, Monday, February 1st. Of this very funny performance the Boston Daily Globe says: "An honestly funny farce was presented in this city before a large and fashionable audience at the Boston Museum last evening. * The humorous situations, tumble on one another with astonishing rapidity, and the action commences before the curtain is well out of sight. The lines, too, are as bright as the situations.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

A WONDERFUL WORK.

To be a man who can excel one hundred thousand men in any one line is good; to be one in a million is better; but to be the only living man, (and the second one in the history of the world), who has drawn a perfect single line picture, is wonderful! This Mr. Fleming, author and illustrator of "Around the Pan," and "Around the Capital" ($2.00 books) has done in his drawing of McKinley. Price on best Japanese paper, $1.00. His "Around the Capital," containing one hundred and fifty full-page Washington life pen and ink sketches and five hundred prominent Americans, including the statesmen, ambassadors and commanders participating in the Spanish-American War—comprising by far the greatest collection of facts and faces ever produced in one volume in condensed form, will interest the entire civilized world. The drawings equal, if they do not surpass, those of John Tenniel's, for which work he was knighted by Queen Victoria. The humor is contagious.

ENTR' ACTE

[Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure.]

"Of course you knew all along."

He was tearing the edges of the programme into scallops and did not look at her.

"I did not, you silly boy. How could I? You never said a word."

"But I looked."

"Lots look."

"Harvey?"

"He looks lovely."

"How do I look?"

"Bertie! You big, silly, silly kid child!"

"Don't laugh at me, then. It isn't a joke."

She leaned over the plush rail of the box and let a rose leaf flutter, light as a baby butterfly, down to the tier below.

"You girls must have loads of proposals."

"Why?"

"Oh, you all take it so easy. You just laugh at a fellow and look pleasant and all that."

"Have you asked so many, Bertie?"

"Ten. Scored, didn't you? Honest, though, I haven't, Gwen; just you, dear."

"There was that Ferris girl."

"Who? Madge—little Madge Ferris? I wasn't in love with her. We just chummed. You know, Gwen. She was a great chum."

"Did you ever kiss her, Bertie?"

"Not since she was old enough to fight. That isn't anything. I've kissed you, Gwen."

Dead silence; orchestra plays "La Paloma."

"Gwen, the tip of your ear's awfully pink. Turn around, won't you? I don't care. I did. It was down at Faraway Beach, that summer. 'Member, Gwen? You were an awfully funny little gawky kid those days. Fuzzy hair and big eyes"—

"You used to call me a walleyed frizzletop," she said over her shoulder, and her eyes were full of dream light and her voice was low. "It was ages ago."

"And I chased you that day. You could run as fast as us boys. Way up the beach, past the cottages and the hill road, up to where the rocks began."

"There was a cave with shells in the sand, and seaweed tangled in the rocks"— She bent nearer with parted lips of expectancy.

"The Green Dragon's cave, you called it, 'member. And I caught you there and kissed you hard, didn't I, Gwen? And you said it wasn't fair, 'cause you turned into a mermaid as soon as you reached the cave."

"And you said you were a wave, then, and could follow. Wasn't it fun?"

"Great fun. Gwen, Gwen, darling, I wish I had you there this minute."

"I slapped you."

"And then I held your hands and kissed you again. I was good those days. Returned a kiss for a blow. And you didn't slap that time. You laughed and kissed back."

"It was ages ago."

She bent over the rail again away from him. His eyes were so full of something—something—it unnerved her, and the others were watching. She could almost feel Harvey's gaze.

"But, dear, I've been loving you all the time. I'm not a kid, Gwen. Listen to me. Turn your head again. You're afraid."

"Of what?"

"Your eyes. They tell."

After a pause:

"Dare you to, Gwen?"

She turned her head slowly and looked at him.

"You silly boy!"

"Sweetheart!"

"I'm not. Bertie, don't! Mamma's watching!"

"And Harvey? Is he so very rich, Gwen? Say, Gwen, don't he look like a frog in his evening suit? Gwen, look at that old fossil and then at me. Love me, Gwen?"

"The curtain will go up in a minute. Hush!"

"Gwen!"

"Hush—dear!"

"You darling! Say it again!"

"Dear, dear, dear! Now will you behave?"

"If I could tell him for sure, Gwen—dad, I mean—that I had you for sure you know, dear, he'd stand by us; I know he would. He isn't like the women. All they think of is landing a fellow like Harvey and his cash. Dad knows I love you. He'd give me a start, dear heart. It would be fun starting together, wouldn't it, Gwen? You're young, and I'm young. I would do anything in life with you to say 'Go ahead,' Gwen"—

"The curtain is rising."

"Never mind. The rest will look at the stage. Just give me your hand if you're afraid, sweetheart—just your hand for answer. When I bend forward put your hand down, and they won't see. Please, Gwen. Then I'll be good, dear. Just to be sure. Your eyes told anyway. Oh, you darling!"

Curtain rises. Her fan falls.

LIVER TROUBLES

"I find Thedford's Black-Draught a good medicine for liver disease. It cured my son after he had spent $100 with doctors. It is all the medicine I take."—MRS. CAROLINE MARTIN, Parkersburg, W. Va.

If your liver does not act regularly go to your druggist and secure a package of Thedford's Black-Draught and take a dose tonight. This great family medicine frees the constipated bowels, stirs up the torpid liver and causes a healthy secretion of bile.

Thedford's Black-Draught will cleanse the bowels of impurities and strengthen the kidneys. A torpid liver invites colds, biliousness, chills and fever and all manner of sickness and contagion. Weak kidneys result in Bright's disease which claims as many victims as consumption. A 25-cent package of Thedford's Black-Draught should always be kept in the house.

Culture and Politeness In Caracas.

Caracas has a public library which contains not less than 30,000 volumes. The better class of citizens are not only educated as we understand the word, but accomplished to a degree not common in North America. Both sexes are able to speak three or four languages besides their own and are well up in art and music. As for politeness, there are no such people under the sun. Whenever a Venezuelan, male or female, writes a letter, whether to a dear friend or stranger, he or she invariably concludes it with the words, Beso sus manos, "I kiss your hands," and whenever a Venezuelan gentleman meets a lady, whether it be his sweetheart or his grandmother, he hastens to assure her that he is "lying at her feet."

All He Asked.

"What kind of a cover do you prefer your book to have?" asked the accommodating publisher.

"Oh, anything, just so it's read," replied the new author nervously.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Saved His Life.

J. W. Davenport, Wingo, Ky., writes, June 14, 1002: "I want to tell you I believe Ballard's Snow Linimem saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump in my side. I don't think that I could have lived over two moths longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Liniment. The first application gave me great relief; two fifty cent bottles cured me sound and well. It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to suffering humanity." 25c, 50c $1.00. C. E. Nailor & Co.

ter from coming in through the disabled deadlight, but as the ship was taking a heavy list to starboard and as the deadlight was on that side we did not wholly succeed. We got it blocked several times only to have it broken in again. We had all the pumps working on the bilge that were connected until they became choked with coal and other debris from the bilge, such as shavings, chips, ashes, etc. The shavings and chips came from beneath the skin and have been there since she was constructed. Mr. John Hefferman said the feed pump was connected with the bilge. I am absolutely positive it was not. He also said that the pipe in the bilge suction from the circulator was perforated also. My two oilers and myself are positive there was nothing of the kind, but simply a pipe screwed into the flange on the suction valve. If there was a pipe, as he described, how does he account for the condenser becoming choked.

"All I want is a fair show. Why am I told to get out while Captain Roberts is giving his testimony, and why was he allowed to remain when everyone else gave theirs? Why are not the passengers subpoenaed? The inspectors have the power to do so. Capt. Hall of the Holyoke could give some very interesting evidence if he were called. Where is he? Why do they dwell so lightly upon the time and operation of lowering the small boats? Why were not officers of the ship not sent to command these boats? Why were the second and third boats lowered when the first had met such a fate?

"The captain in his testimony said he thought the Clallam was sinking. Is it not reasonable to assume that he must have known the ship was sinking six hours later when the Holyoke came to our assistance? Yet he was perfectly willing to risk the lives of his passengers and crew by being towed to Port Townsend. When Capt. Hall took me off the top of the pilot house, four hours later, he said to me, 'My God, why didn't Roberts say his ship was full of water?'

"Capt. Hall said he would have tried to take off some of the passengers or he could have towed the ship to the lee of Smiths island. Capt. Hall said he never thought we had any water in us.

"I do not, nor did I think for one moment that I am responsible for the death of one person. I was neither negligent nor careless or ignorant. If I had had such an opinion I would never have attempted to save myself."

Quillayute News

Road Supervisor Henrie is out on the road patching up the worst places until such time as he gets orders to put on a crew of men.

B. R. Van Dusen the veteran prospector and oil king of the Quillayute returned to Seattle a few days ago with a party of friends who have spent the past few weeks looking over the Lapush Oil Company's proposition at Lapush and the beach placer diggings thereabout. Van intimates that he still has unlimiled faith in the oil proposition and that he hopes to be able to start another hole in the immediate vicinity of the old one in the near future. It is his intention to start in with a twenty-inch casing next time in order to allow of several reductions while in the loose formation

Are You a Mason?

"Are You a Mason?" the farce that has kept Americans laughing for the last four years, is accounted one of the best pieces of dramatic property of the day. The situations are ingenious, and even ordinary dialogue resulting from the cleverly contrived intricacies is humorous. The original cast, with two exceptions, has been engaged and a smooth presentation has been the result from the first night. The piece has been given an elaborate scenic investure, and everything necessary for a complete production is carried by the company. The comedy is booked for presentation here on February 1st. at the opera house; tickets 75c and $1.

Married, at the residence of the bride's parents, in Seattle, at 1:00 p. m. Sunday, January 17, 1904, Miss Pansy Roberson to Mr. Percy Parks; they were attended by Miss Tot Dick and Mr. John Barwell. The bride was tastefully and daintily attired in cream silk, with all-over embroidered chiffon, carried a bouquet of white carnations and wore a veil clasped with a wreath of the same. Her only ornaments were pearl beads and a pin representing the beautiful order of Maccabees, of which she has the honor to be a member. Miss Dick wore a pale blue muslin de soie and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, by the Rev. Mr. Mills, of Edgewater Congregational church. A delicious dinner was served at the home of Mr. Parks, 3625 Aurora Avenue, which adjoins that of his father-in-law and where the young people have taken up their abode, and will be at home to their many friends after February 1st. The presents were numerous and beautiful, consisting mainly of silver and china. Those present besides the immediate family were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Roberson, Mr. Ross Roberson and Miss Maud Cole, of Tacoma; Mr. and Mrs. H. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. H. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. L. Reinig, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. COUNCIL ROUTINE.

near high bridge, is also in need of attention. Street committee was asked to report probable cost of repair and to close bridge to traffic if found necessary.

Mr. Grubb thought council should reconsider its plan to repair old light plant, instead of building on flat. There are several reasons why this should be done.

Mr. Aldwell addressed council stating that we was naturally interested in getting the plant away from his residence, and is willing to buy the lot for $400. He thought city would make a big mistake in putting $1,000 in repairs on plant in present location; that the expense would be considerably less relatively, and that the city could now easily be shut off if adjoining property owners should so wish.

An extended discussion followed in which it was apparent that council was very desirous of removing plant to flat and of installing new boilers, but did not feel able with present revenues. Mr. Hallahan said if parties would accept warrants at a low rate of interest covering a period of several years he would favor putting in a plant that would meet every requirement.

The matter was again referred to light committee and council adjourned.

An Explanation.

MR. EDITOR:—In view of the fact that reports reflecting upon my efficiency as an undertaker are being circulated, I wish in justice to myself to make the following statement:

My life from 14 years to 32 was spent in the business continuously. After Mr. Mock left the city without an undertaker, I saw an opportunity to resume the business. Mr. McKee and myself put in a fine stock of goods and a modern hearse. I have perfected myself in the present methods of preparing bodies; passed the examination before the state board of health, and hold an embalmer's certificate, and am fully qualified for the business of an undertaker, notwithstanding the reports to the contrary. We are here to stay. H. H. LA FLOWERS.
