WE MAY AGAIN HOPE

For Recognition from Navy Department—Admiral Goodrich is Our Friend.

The cruiser New York, flagship of Admiral Goodrich of the Pacific Squadron, with the gunboats Bennington and Marblehead arrived Thursday afternoon from Victoria where they have been the past four days, anchored over night and left at 9 o'clock yesterday morning for SanFrancisco. Later the New York will proceed on to the Atlantic coast to go out of commission for extensive repair.

Admiral Goodrich has just assumed command of the Pacific squadron and this was his first visit here. To a LEADER representative he expressed much favor with the place and regretted that time now at his disposal would not permit of more extended stay here. He promises to and doubtless will keep Port Angeles in mind when he or his ships are again on the sound.

When the New York goes east the Admiral will transfer his flag to the Chicago which is expected soon in Frisco and later on the sound.

ANGELES BOY DROWNS

Harry Bradshaw Goes Down in Thompson River NE of Vancouver

The sad news of the drowning of Harry Bradshaw in the Thompson river, at Ashcroft, B. C., was received here Monday morning and was a great shock to the popular young man's many friends here and especially so to his aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Bradshaw, who idolized him, and to his sweetheart.

The telegram came to the chief of police from the young man's employers, Messrs. H. Bailey & Co., announcing that Mr. Bradshaw drowned while bathing Sunday evening, and that they were making every possible effort to recover the body. A dispatch received later in the day announced the finding of the body and the sending of same for interment here. The body arrived on Wednesday's boat. A letter was also received on Wednesday giving what little further detail was known of the sad affair. Harry, it stated, had been fishing with a friend and had become separated and out of sight of each other because of a bend in the river. Believing it

BUCK-PERKINS NUPTIALS.

One of the prettiest church weddings in the history of the city was that which took place at the M. E. church Wednesday night and witnessed by a large concourse of friends. Miss Odessa Buck and Mr. Scott B. Perkins, both of this city, were the contracting parties. Rev. Geo. W. Frame of Tacoma officiated.

Miss Lottie Buck of Tacoma, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Frank Babcock assisted as best man. The ushers were Misses Tottie Dick, Laura Chambers, Helen Hopkins and Annie Ritchie. Little Miss Banks, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Banks, and little Helen Phelps scattered flowers in the path of the bridal train, and carried the ring.

The decorations in the church were elaborate, evergreen and white being the prevailing colors. Hundreds of feet of twined evergreen with a touch of white was hung and draped in tasty and bewitching effects. The aisle was transformed into a long green covered avenue with white floors and the altar platform was likewise. From the ceiling hung the bell under which ceremony took place in same colors. The back ground was a curtain of evergreen against the white walls.

Promptly at the appointed hour Mrs. George Wiggins struck up the wedding march and the groom, preceded by the officiating clergyman and followed by the best man, entered and took his place at the altar, the bride-elect on the arm of her father entered at the front door and escorted by the ushers proceeded down the center aisle and met the groom under the suspended bell, where the short but pretty and solemn ceremony was performed.

The happy couple was then escorted to the waiting carriage at the church entrance and driven to the home of the bride's parents where a hurried change of dress was made, presumably for a trip on the boat, but the large concourse of friends that assembled on the wharf with rice and bells were doomed to disappointment, for though a stateroom had been engaged, it proved only a ruse to put friends off the track, and an early start was made Thursday for au outing at Lake Crescent. They will make their home upon their return in the McDougall residence on the hill at First and Laurel streets.

Both of the young people are well and favorably known here where they have hosts of friends who join in wishes for their continued happiness and prosperity.

MR. CRAIG RETURNS

And Arouses the Suspicions of the Ledger's Olympia Correspondent

David W. Craig has returned from a four-months' trip east and while in Olympia Wednesday hypnotizes the correspondent of the Tacoma Ledger to such an extent that that individual saw in his mysterious references to the P. A. E. bond deal, the key to the corraling of Tacoma's tidelands. While Mr. Craig asked not to be quoted, and said nothing to quote except that he was to "keep his mouth shut" the correspondent gathers that the money for the building of the P-A-E is coming from interests antagonistic to Hill—Harriman—and the Union Pacific ls surely coming to Olympia, Tacoma and Port Angeles. The Ledger gives this article a big two-column heading at top of its front page.

WE WILL HAVE MANY VISITORS

Port Townsend Civic Club Is Coming to See How We Do Things.

Next Thursday is Stump Day and probably will be the last of this season and the ladies have invited the members of the Club from Port Townsend to be present on the occasion to view the work on that day and the enthusiasm displayed by the people of Port Angeles in this patriotic task. Naturally the ladies trust they will in no wise be humiliated through the presence of these distinguished and possibly critical visitors. They asked that the male population watch their work, and suggest that the best way to watch is to work with them. There remains yet to be done this year considerable most important work, enough for the largest possible number of hands. It is therefore sincerely hoped that the ladies will not be disappointed and in this particular instance chagrined by the turnout on that occasion. They propose to do their part royally in entertaining the workers.

GOOD WORK DONE.

Messrs. A. G. Frye, Dr. Cooke, sr., E. Ovington, Walter Myers and Michael Gough are mentioned this week on the roll of honor for most excellent work done on Eighth street just west of the new bridge. They have put in two solid days clearing and leveling the street here and the result is not only most gratifying to them but to every resident of the district.

The Road Mia Chose

By SARAH COMSTOCK

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"How slow you are, Candida!"

"Yes." It was entirely good tempered. Therefore the other voice became crosser.

"What's the use primping two hours for that mere nobody of a Filiberto?"

"To be sure, what is the use?" Candida's good temper was maddening. Her mother was at the remote end of the house, but she could see mentally the smiling, tantalizing face that she knew so well.

Candida's mirror smiled back at her. It was a tiny mirror with a shabby frame, but it held the loveliest and most famous picture in all Alta California. The portrait was that of a sixteen-year-old girl, strongly built and exquisitely rounded, as those Castilian girls of old California were—the complexion a pure Castilian olive without a tinge of rose; the eyes a sparkling, vivid black; the hair as black as the eyes, a splendid mass coiled high and caught with a comb.

"Ah, but it is of use, even if Filiberto is a mere nobody. What do you think, lovely senorita?" she said to the face in the mirror. The face laughed back at her.

Candles were fastened to the wall on each side of the mirror, so that a strong light was thrown on the face therein. Candida could watch it to good advantage as it grew lovelier under her skillful touch.

A lock of hair did not suit her. She brushed it, pulled it, unfastened it, refastened it, finally pulled down the whole mass of hair in a heap and began coiling it all over from the beginning.

"You're the slowest of all my girls," fretted her mother in the dining room.

It made no difference to her whether Candida was slow or not on this occasion, but she was out of sorts with all the world. She had expected that the comandante would invite her daughter to accompany him to the fandango tonight. She had watched in vain for the message. She saw her matchmaking blighted after being brought to a critical point.

"Where's the girl?" growled a terrific voice. It was that of her husband.

"She's dressing."

"What for, when she's going with nobody but Yorba? She had as well wear her working gown."

"Ah, Dios—after all our hopes!" Senora Barrajas wrung her fat hands.

"It's of no avail to whimper about it. The girl's been a fool, you may count on that, no matter what she says. She's done something to annoy the comandante—it's like her. Stubborn as her mother. She will reap as she sows."

"My stubbornness made me marry you," put in the senora.

"And you got better than you ever deserved." He strode out of the room grumbling like a thunderstorm.

Candida, adjusting her comb, heard it all and smiled.

"Ah, madre mia, how blind you are in spite of your lynx eyes," she said and took a note from her bosom.

"Contrary to custom, I send this to you instead of to your mother," she reread with satisfaction. "For it is your answer I desire. Will you accompany me to the fandango? If not I shall go to Santa Barbara on business, for the fandango without you would hold no charms."

Below was what any girl in California would have given her black eyes for—the signature of the popular comandante.

No member of the family had seen the messenger ride up and deliver this note to Candida. Nor had any one seen her send back her answer which read:

"I must beg to be excused from this fandango, for my ankle is still weak since Pero threw me, and I dare not risk a dance."

Nor did any one know that she sent another message to a certain "nobody."

"The coast is clear. The comandante is going to Santa Barbara, so he will never know that I go to the dance. Father will let me go with you for the once, for he thinks I have no other invitation."

Candida's conscience shook off fibs as a duck shakes off water. There was not a cloud on her brow as she made herself lovely for the ball. Her father had given a grumbling "yes" to Filiberto's invitation. He had refused over and over to let the girl accompany this young man, whose fault was poverty, but now pique played its part, and as he realized that the comandante was not inviting Candida after all his promising attentions he resolved that she should not be left at home.

"I don't care; take her to the dance if you want to," he said to Filiberto Yorba. Then he went off muttering curses on the head of the comandante. They had gambled together many a time, and they had lain side by side in their cups when the aguardiente was plenty. "Now the man is jilting my daughter, is he?"

Candida tucked the note in her bosom again. It would be fun to show it to Filiberto when they had a little time alone.

"Tell Filiberto I'll be ready in a minute," she called as she heard the light hoofs of Mia.

She moved the comb to the other side, then back to its original position. Behind her ear she fastened a great crimson rose.

"You are lovelier than ever," Filiberto whispered as she gave him a glimpse of the picture she was. Then she threw a white mantilla over her head and shoulders, her face and the rose peeping out from the snowy lace.

"Good evening, Mia," she said, patting the little horse's nose. It gave a happy whinny, for it knew Candida.

Her father and mother came from the house and said a surly good evening to the handsome young Spaniard. To them he was entirely objectionable in that he had no property, no influential father, nothing but his own cleverness and courage to depend upon. Furthermore, they strongly suspected their daughter of preferring him to the shrewd old political fox to whom they were trying to marry her.

"Permit me to thank you both for intrusting your daughter to my care tonight," he said blithely in spite of the frowns that greeted him.

Candida patted the restless pony again. "Are you in a hurry, Mia?" she said. "Come, Filiberto, we must start. Mia says she will not wait."

The girl put her little red slippered foot into the stirrup, Filiberto helped her as she sprang, and she was perched aloft in the gala day saddle, all carved and besilvered. With a bow to the old people he sprang up behind her, as was the Californian custom.

He reached forward to adjust the reins. Mia fumed to be off. But the word had not been given when a clatter of hoofs sounded beyond the house.

All turned to see who the arrival was. The hoofs clattered more sharply as the gallop slowed. Up rode the comandante.

At the sight of Candida about to ride away he turned white with anger, as his way was.

"Ah, senorita, may I inquire who your physician may be that your ankle heals so quickly?"

The father and mother stood silent, looking from one to the other. Suspicion, fear, rage, were creeping upon them. It was no time to parry, the girl knew.

"There is but one physician who can heal every hurt," she replied. "He is love. I am in his charge. Off, Mia." And the pony was away with them.

"You mean it?" said Filiberto.

She only tossed him a teasing laugh now. "How Mia flies!" she said, dodging his question. "There are the lights of the fandango."

Far away glittered the brilliant lights in a great ranch house. Suddenly the road divided. At the end of one branch were the lights of the gay ball; at the end of the other, one lamp shone from the mission.

"Listen!" said Filiberto and stopped the horse. A strange blending of sounds came to their ears: guitar and violin sounded faintly from the left; from the right came the faraway chime of the mission bell.

"To the left lies the dance," he said slowly. "After it—home again, a storm of wrath, you and I separate forever."

"Yes," she said, the merriment gone out of her eyes.

"To the right," he went on, "Father Juan, our old priest and friend. He knows us and loves us. He will marry us tonight."

"Oh!" she cried with a little shudder.

"Shall it not be the right road?"

"Oh—I'm afraid—I can't"—

"Say the right."

She hesitated, perplexed. Then she cried: "I know, I'll let Mia decide. We shall see which way she chooses."

She pushed his hands from the reins, drew Mia to the middle of the fork and stopped her. "Now go, Mia," she said.

The horse flung up her head and galloped into the dark road on the right.

"Mia, you shall feed upon sugar lumps for the rest of your life," Filiberto said.

It was not for many years that Candida made a confession to her husband. "I tweaked the right rein," she owned then. "I was so afraid Mia might make a mistake."

Novel Advertisement.

That sentiment can be used with good effect in an advertisement the Germans evidently believe; otherwise it is difficult to account for the following letter, which appeared among the business notices in a German paper:

My Dearest Charlotte—My heart is almost broken because your father has forbidden me to call on you, and I know the only reason is because I am not wealthy. I cannot, however, live without you, and so we must meet somewhere.

Meet me tomorrow morning about 10 o'clock at —— in —— street. I mean that large store where they sell men's clothing. You know it's such a popular place that it's always crowded, and therefore no one will be able to spy on us. Besides, I intend to buy an overcoat, and I'd like to have your advice. In this store they have clothes of all colors and styles, so that I could never make up my mind if I were alone. Now, remember, my darling, I'll expect you at 10 o'clock, and I hope you won't disappoint me.

A Fourth of July Party.

Living in a country town, my inventive genius was called into play as my turn came to entertain the euchre club July 4. I carried out the color scheme of red, white and blue in decorations and refreshments. When my guests arrived the ladies received liberty caps made of red, white and blue tissue paper and the gentlemen tall white paper "Uncle Sam" stovepipes with broad bands of the red, white and blue, and as each game was won I scored it with tiny flags stuck in each one's cap. For the ladies' prize I gave a pretty white silk sofa pillow embroidered in flags. The gentlemen's prize was a set of poker chips, red, white and blue, on each of which was a miniature flag. The booby prize was a big "baby waker" firecracker. It took some time to get these things up, as they were homemade, but it made a gay scene and added fun, as the gentlemen looked patriotic and the girls piquant in their headgear.—Mrs. James C. Watson in Good Housekeeping.

Manufacture of Firecrackers.

Four-fifths of the crackers consumed in China are made by the families of those who sell them, these people, of course, receiving no wages. Of the paid work a very large proportion is done by women and children, who are paid by the piece. It is estimated that thirty women and ten men can make 100,000 crackers per day, for which work the women will receive 5 cents each and the men about 7 cents each. An apprentice is bound for four years and during that time receives only his board. At the end of that period he will receive, if he is a fairly good workman, 150 cash per day, or 7 cents in United States money. An expert at the trade receives 200 cash per day, or 10 cents gold.

Will Soon Learn.

The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

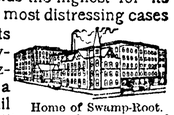
If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.



Home of Swamp-Root.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THE latest development in the Hill-Harriman controversy is that the latter will have to file a monster bond to continue his fight.

THERE is fighting ground in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Colorado, think the Democratic managers and they are arranging to have candidate Parker speak in those states.

CHIEF Pinchot, of the forestry division of the Agricultural Dept., who is now on the coast, and who promised to make recommendations for the elimination of more agricultural lands in the Olympic reserve, says his purpose is to determine where agricultural lands can be eliminated, believing that settlers in these valleys will aid in the purpose for which the reserves were established. If there are any more lands of this character tributary to Clallam county now is the time to let the gentleman know of them.

Messrs. J. Whiting, E. Michael, S. W. Snell and Ira and Budd Minnehan, together with a dozen or more others from Gettysburg spent the early part of the week here, the camp having shut down for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Farmer left Wednesday for Neah Bay, where Mr. Farmer was called in the interest of his canning business. Cannery agents from the other side of the sound are there endeavoring to secure the Neah Bay fish which have been supplying the cannery here.

Miss Lottie Buck came down from Tacoma Wednesday to assist in the ceremony at the wedding of her sister. Mr. Buck also came over from Mount Vernon to attend the wedding and to arrange for the removal of his family to their new home in Skagit county.

Mayor Lewis returned Saturday from his trip to Olympia in the interest of the sale of the electric light bonds. He reports that the state attorney-general asks more definite information regarding the bond issue and the condition of the city before passing on the issue, but the doctor is quite sanguine of getting the state board to handle the bonds.

Mrs. W. B. Webster, of Cresco, Iowa, mother of E. B. Webster of THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER, left Thursday morning for home after a pleasant visit of six weeks here with her son and family. Miss Anna Trumbull of Seattle who was also visiting here accompanies her to Seattle. They will visit a couple of days at Port Townsend en route.

Baby Costs Too Much

When the price paid is the mother's health and happiness. The father doesn't realize as he romps with the child what years of wifely suffering must be set against the baby's laughter.

Chronic invalidism is a high price to pay for the painful joy of maternity, yet it is at such a cost that many a woman becomes a mother. Such a price is too much because it is more than nature asks.

By the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription maternity is made practically painless, and a quick convalesence is assured in almost every case.

$500 Reward for Women Who Cannot be Cured.

The proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

"There are thousands of sick women dragging out a weary, miserable existence, who would be well and happy did they but have my experience with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. Annie Lenman, Lady Commander Star of Bethlehem, Lodge No. 27, of 106 Jackson Street, Atlanta, Ga. "Four years ago I was nearly dead with inflammation and ulceration. I endured daily untold agony, and life was a burden to me. I had used medicines internally and externally until I had made up my mind that there was no relief in sight for me. A friend of mine endorsed your 'Favorite Prescription,' and I determined then to give it a trial. It took patience and perseverance for I was in a bad condition, and had to use your medicine for nearly four months before I was cured, but what a change it brought; from despair to happiness, from misery to the delightful, exhilarating feeling that only health brings. I would not change back for a thousand dollars. Your 'Prescription' is a grand medicine. I wish every sick woman would only try it and be convinced."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contains no alcohol and is entirely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription" does so to gain the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. His profit is your loss; therefore, accept no substitute.
