BEATEN PRESIDENT TAKES TO HILLS WITH 1,000 MEN

(By Associated Press)

VERA CRUZ, May 15.—President Carranza, who with loyal followers has been fighting a grim battle against revolutionary forces near San Marcos for the past five days, has escaped capture, at least temporarily, according to dispatches from the battle zone.

Accompanied by one thousand of his men the president has broken through the insurgent lines and fled to the mountains. He left behind him government soldiers who still are fighting to delay pursuit of the fugitive forces.

Carranza's troops are well supplied with artillery and machine guns.

The American transport Portland and the British cruiser Cambrian arrived here today.

Advices from the battlefield are silent as to the safety of W. A. Body, British consul in this city, and two American citizens who are believed to have been with President Carranza when the fighting started early this week.

ESCAPE CONFIRMED.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15. — Carranza's escape from the revolutionary forces which attacked his troops near Esperanza was reported today by General Obregon.

NO NEWS OF CAPTURE.

NOGALES, May 15.—Alfonso Almada, commercial agent for the revolutionists at Nogales, Sonora, today denied any knowledge of the reported capture of President Carranza or of any message reporting such capture purporting to have been sent by him to the commercial representatives of the revolutionary government at New York.

It had not been put under control, however, before serious damage occurred, according to later reports.

The other fire is in the Olympic national forest, four miles west of Lake Crescent. Although small, the conflagration is near a recently replanted district and threatens to ruin the young trees if not soon subdued.

TEN THOUSAND INVOLVED IN BOOZE DEALS

(By Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, May 15.—Evidence which the authorities say involves more than ten thousand persons in New Orleans and Gulf Coast states in violation of the national prohibition law was gathered in a raid yesterday on the Tropical Food Products Company.

Hundreds of cases of malt, several barrels of hops and thousands of prescriptions said to give instructions in how to make home brew with a high alcoholic percentage, were confiscated by prohibition enforcement officers. Books of the company in which are said to be recorded the names of thousands of persons who have purchased home brew outfits also were taken.

HOOVER ADVISES ON SUGAR DEAL

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15. — Herbert Hoover, former food administrator and candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency, gave his views to congress today on the sugar and industrial situations. Appearing before a house committee investigating the sugar situation, Mr. Hoover declared that the world shortage in that product was likely to continue two or three years. The pressing need was rationing, he said, with immediate government action to control the supply through commercial, not legalistic methods. Although the hearing related primarily to the action of Attorney General Palmer in approving a maximum price for the Louisiana crop, it reached out into a broader field after Mr. Hoover said he would give only an "offhand" opinion as to that proceeding. Mr. Hoover, said, however, that the government should have bought the Louisiana crop last year, pocketing the loss or else selling to the luxury trade at an advance.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Hoover, who was a member of President Wilson's second industrial conference, told the senate labor committee he did not believe that the relationship between employers and employes could be settled by any form or legal repression, whether it be by injunction compulsory arbitration or industrial courts. He said labor had unquestionably been affected by reports of the exorbitant profits of some employers, although he was emphatic in asserting that unlike Europe, the United States had not been threatened by any attempt by labor leaders to use the strike as a political weapon.

TURKS POUR OVER TERMS OF TREATY

(By Associated Press)

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 15.—A digest of the peace treaty handed by the allies to the Turkish peace delegation in Paris, has been received in Constantinople. A translation has been prepared for the sultan, who is now considering it.

The Turkish newspapers have not yet published the terms of the treaty, but many gloomy editorials are being printed declaring that Turkey can not live without Thrace and Smyrna.

The Mustapha Kemal nationalist government at Angora has sent the Paris peace conference a communication, saying that Turkey will not be bound by any agreement the government of Damad Ferid Pasha, the grand vizier, makes.

An extraordinary court martial in Constantinople has condemned to death Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the nationalist leader, Alfred Rechid Bey, former Turkish Ambassador at Washington, Edib Hanoun and her husband, Dr. Adman Bey, and many other prominent nationalist leaders. It declared that the nationalist agitators were responsible for the hard terms imposed by the treaty.

This action caused amusement among the foreigners in Constantinople, owing to the fact that the Damad Ferid government has no authority in Anatolia.

IMPORTANCE OF THE PRIMARIES.

All the chances of the political game favor the Republican party so far this year and the danger is that this confidence will be abused and the gates opened for a victorious reentry into power of the great financial interests of the country.

The road to the gates already seems to have been plentifully strewn with welcoming wreaths. Much of the current propaganda against organized labor may be traced to the source of the old-time invisible government. Some of what heretofore were regarded as privileges of every man under the Stars and Stripes have been curtailed by mob influences, governmental action and court decisions. Liberty of speech and of the press have been menaced and excuses made therefore which draw a line of mighty close distinction which is not encouraging to those who regard freedom of conscience as the cornerstone of the republic.

The effort to carry on the drillmaster's control of public thought long after the war is over and the need for the drill has ceased is apparent enough in certain quarters.

It is up to the republican electors to go into the primary determined to nominate only candidates who are real Americans—not disguised Prussianists.

HIGH COST OF FLIVVING.

The Federal Bureau of Mines warns the country that before another summer rolls around there may be an actual shortage of gasoline—not higher gasoline prices, for that is expected as a matter of course, but an actual deficit. The bureau deduces this from the fact that while the estimated increase in gasoline production last February over that of February, 1919, was 11 per cent the estimated increase in the number of automobiles and trucks in use this year is 25 per cent. Improved manufacturing processes, the bureau believes, will increase the gasoline yield, but will be unable to keep pace with the increased demand. It is bad news for the motor car owners, but it might be worse. Italy's gasoline plight is so critical that the government is considering an edict forbidding the use of petrol for any but commercial purposes. Under this edict there would be a sudden end to all pleasure riding, and the touring car would disappear from the roads. The United States may never face such a calamity, but it is headed for gasoline prices that will restrict consumption to those who can afford to indulge in luxuries. The cheap flivver that put the automobile within the reach of the humblest is no small factor in the exaggerated gasoline consumption that is working to make automobiling once more a prerogative of the wealthy.

HANDS ACROSS THE BORDER.

If the new Canadian envoy, when he is duly appointed, approved and accredited, receives as warm a welcome in Washington as he has already received in the American press, he may be assured of a favored place among the foreign representatives at the capital. While most of our own papers look upon the beginning of direct intercourse between the United States and Canada as a recognition of a new sovereignty for the Dominion, the Vancouved (B. C.) Province feels that ample precedent already exists for the step which necessitates no departure from Britain's traditional attitude on such matters.

The Province points out that "it is a common thing for special agents of the Canadian government to visit Washington to discuss matters directly with the United States authorities" and places the new envoy in the same class as the members of military mission which functioned here during the war and which the British government "recognized and assisted." The new British Ambassador, it is understood, "would welcome the appointment of a permanent Canadian representative to act in association with the imperial Embassy." Such an appointment, the Province believes:

"Would have no more constitutional significance than the appointment of a Canadian agent in Paris, but it would be a great commercial and diplomatic convenience at certain times. It is not likely that those Senators who objected to Canadian representation on the League of Nations will worry about this departure."

Close to the Niagara frontier and in constant contact with Canadian cities across the border, the Buffalo News (Rep.) holds out a warm welcome to the new envoy, backing it up with practical as well as sentimental reasons for the closer union that it would establish."

"Questions between the two countries can be handled with dispatch under this arrangement; for instance such questions as those bearing on the wood pulp industry and the diversion of Niagara river waters for power purposes. Affairs such as these can best be handled directly between the two countries."

The News believes that Canada, in taking the initiative in this matter, is expressing a new "national consciousness born of the war, while yielding nothing of her loyalty to Great Britain," and proving that "Americans and Canadians have come to recognize that their aims are much the same."

From the same vantage point the Buffalo Express (Ind. Rep.) looks with approval upon a step that previously would have been considered a "departure from ordinary diplomatic procedure . . . Thought to be an insurmountable barrier," but now that it has been taken will free the Canadians from the embarrassment often caused when "native Britons in the diplomatic service or even the colonial office sometimes made decisions for the Dominion without knowledge of the facts and contrary to the wishes of the Ottawa government." Boundary and fishery disputes are mentioned as specific instances of questions that might have been settled more satisfactorily without British intervention.

The New York Mail (Ind.) considers that the new relations follow the precedent laid down by the recognition of the military mission and believes that direct dealings are necessary now that there are so many problems of "mutual interest developing between the two English speaking countries on this continent" including the grave issue "of the Canadian embargo on the export of pulp wood."

But not all of the writers consider that the sending of an envoy is precedented by previous Canadian-American diplomatic history. To the Lansing State Journal (Ind.) "it is a turning point in the history of the British Empire," and would, in fact, be a recognition that "Canada and several other British colonies are no longer colonial dependencies, but really self-governing dominions, practically independent of the mother-country." The Syracuse Post Standard (Rep.) also reads in the act "a declaration of independence almost as complete as in dominion self-government." Both papers look upon the prospects of direct relations with pleasure, the Journal emphasizing the advantage of handling things "directly with men who know all about them," and the Post Standard, pointing to the commercial side;

"Canada has spent $500,000,000 in the last six months. She has sent us 80 per cent of her exports. She is so much nearer to us than any other that we find difficulty in thinking or speaking of her as 'foreign.' Her minister will be welcome at Washington."

SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

Advice to Amateur Scenario Writers—Showing Style and Methods

By John Emerson and Anita Loos

(Deans of the Photoplay Writing Profession, Who are Now Collaborating on the Constance Talmadge pictures).

CHAPTER XII

"Another Phase of the Model Continuity Form"

Since we cannot print all of the continuity form for "In Search of a Sinner," which we recently completed for Constance Talmadge, because of its great length, we are going to reproduce perhaps the most important section—that is "The Big Scene."

It may also help you in planning your own stories to know that "In Search of a Sinner," which is a five-reel photoplay, contained 101 scenes, 230 sub-titles and took up 76 double-spaced typewritten pages in the form in which it appears here. Your own story, if meant for a five-reel picture, should be built about on this scale.

S.—"I Haven't Any Husband. My Husband's Dead."
And Jack, startled almost sober at this, looks at her in horror and says:

S.—"My God, You've Killed Jeff?"
Then he hurries over to the other side of the room, Georgianna following him. She puts her arms around him and says "No, no, you don't understand. Let me explain."

99.—Hallway. The Jap has opened the door and Jeffry runs through the hall into the studio.

100.—Studio. Jeffry runs in and stands startled as he sees Jack standing with Georgianna's arms around him. Jack sees him, turns, scowl blue, looks at Georgianna, then

Getting Story Action

The story deals with Georgianna Chadbourne, who became a widow at the age of 20. The death of her saintly husband marked her release from two years of bondage, during which time she had been treated like a child. As a result of his extreme goodness, she decided she never wanted to see a good man again. Determined to be real bad, Georgianna went to New York to visit her dead husband's brother. The second day of her visit she flirted with a man in Central Park and he made violent love to her. She took him for a "wild" man and was delighted. As a matter of fact he was the very moral Mr. Jack Garrison from the West and a friend of Jeffry, her brother-in-law. When Jeffry and his wife are called away by his mother's illness, Georgianna takes the opportunity to entertain Mr. Garrison in her brother-in-law's apartment. She tries to make Garrison take advantage of her, giving him the impression that she is Jeffry's wife. "A man who will flirt with his best friend's wife is wild," she reasons. Under Georgianna's wiles Garrison expresses his emotions in true cave man fashion, but his conscience interferes. "I'm going to hell," he announces dramatically, rushing from the apartment. He meets the wildest woman on Sixth Avenue and Jeffry breaks away from the quarantine at his mother's residence to see how his "home" is getting along. His ideals shattered, Garrison is found by Georgianna and her brother-in-law with several empty bottles of champagne and a woman. The continuity of the big scene starts as follows:

Scene 96.—Studio. Valeska is sitting at the table with a glass in her hand, singing.

Cut In.—Part of song.
Sitting over on a couch is Jack. He leans over to her and then—

Close Up—of Valeska looking like five or six women.

Close Up.—Jack waving his arm and saying:

S.—"Come On Over Here Girls—All Of You."
Valeska gets up, goes over and sits beside him, leaning against him with her arm around him.

97.—Hallway. The Jap valet opens the door and admits Georgianna.

98.—Studio. Georgianna rushes in, sees Valeska with her arms about Jack and lets out a shriek. Jack gets up on his feet and looks at her, startled, a bit sobered up. Georgianna runs up to him, throws her arms about him and says:

S.—"I Don't Want You To Go Away With That Horrid Woman!"
Jack pushes her off at arm's length, draws back as if afraid of her, and then says:

S.—"Back To Your Husband! Back To Your Husband!"
Georgianna runs to him as if to tell him she hasn't any husband, but as she gets to him Valeska grabs her, turns her away from Jack and says to her:

S.—"I Told You If You Got Fresh With My Gentleman Friends Again I'd Start Something!"
Then she starts for Georgianna. Georgianna runs away from her, the woman following. As they pass Jack he grabs Valeska and says "Stop it, stop it," and she struggles to get at Georgianna. He gradually pushes her over to a door, gets her in the other room, closes the door and locks it. He then turns to Georgianna and says:

S.—"Go Back To Your Husband."
Georgianna rushes to him, throws her arms about him and says:

S.—"I Haven't Any Husband. My Husband's Dead."
And Jack, startled almost sober at this, looks at her in horror and says:

S.—"My God, You've Killed Jeff?"
Then he hurries over to the other side of the room, Georgianna following him. She puts her arms around him and says "No, no, you don't understand. Let me explain."

99.—Hallway. The Jap has opened the door and Jeffry runs through the hall into the studio.

100.—Studio. Jeffry runs in and stands startled as he sees Jack standing with Georgianna's arms around him. Jack sees him, turns, scowl blue, looks at Georgianna, then draws back and hides behind a big chair. Jeff rushes over to him, pulls him up from back of the chair, shakes him by the hand and says:

S.—"Congratulations, Old Boy."
Then he leads him over to Georgianna, takes her hand, puts the two hands together, shakes them as if giving his blessing. Jack looks at him stupefied and says:

S.—"You Mean You Don't Care?"
Jeff looks at him, then looks at Georgianna and says:

S.—"I'm Delighted. I've Been Worried To Death Wondering What I Was Going To Do With Her."
Jack is almost knocked cold by this statement, doesn't know what the devil the man is talking about. Georgianna smiles sweetly at him while Jeff turns to Jack and says:

S.—"I Must Telephone The Wife And Tell Her The Good News."
Georgianna says yes he must and Jeff goes out into the hall. Georgianna sidles up to Jack, who is flabbergasted, turns to her and says: "Aren't you his wife?" Georgianna is a little embarrassed, not knowing just how to get out of it, shakes her head no, she she isn't, but—

S.—"I Pretended I Was His Wife Because I Wanted You To Be A Wild Man."
Jack is puzzled at this, asks what she is talking about, that she wanted him to be a wild man. She, embarrassed and coy, says:

S.—"I've Changed My Mind."
He looks at her again, not understanding a word of what she is talking about, saying "Oh, you don't want me to be wild." She shakes her head and at length says:

S.—"I Guess When You Love A Man You Want Him To Be Good."
Jack perks up, he understands that now, and says "You mean you love me?" She says "Sit down and I'll tell you all about it." She puts him down on the sofa and begins to tell him the tale. Fade Out

Observe that every action in this big scene is worked out in detail. The photoplay writer should leave nothing to be framed up at the last minute by director or actors. Make every action and every word tell.

You will also note that these scenes are rather long. This is because they are emotional scenes in which fine acting must be brought out and allowed to grip the audience. To make these scenes mere flashes would ruin the story. Another feature of these scenes are the words put into the mouths of the actors even though they are not flashed on the screen. Try to give your actors lines whenever possible—it helps them to act.

Observe how each scene is planned to lead the audience on to the next. At any point, the spectator is wondering how things will come out in the next scene—when she has forced him to kiss her or when Jeffry shows delight when he finds Jack Garrison with Georgianna's arms around him, to the amazement of Jack. "In Search of a Sinner" is a comedy, so we were particularly careful never to get too emotional or poignant. Jeffry, entering at the crucial moment, breaks the tension and holds the comedy element. You can always get a better laugh from your audience if comedy relief comes at a tense moment. And always keep working up the tension with more and more action until your audience, like Garrison and Georgianna, are emotionally exhausted at the end of the scene.

Don't wait for rheumatism to indicate diseased kidneys. When you suffer pains and aches by day and sleep disturbing bladder weakness by night, feel tired, nervous and run down, the kidneys and bladder should be restored to healthy, strong and regular action. It is a mistake to postpone treatment Foley Kidney Pills put the kidneys in sound, healthy condition and keep them active and strong. Begin taking today. Good results follow the first dose.—W. J. Mathewson, Agent.

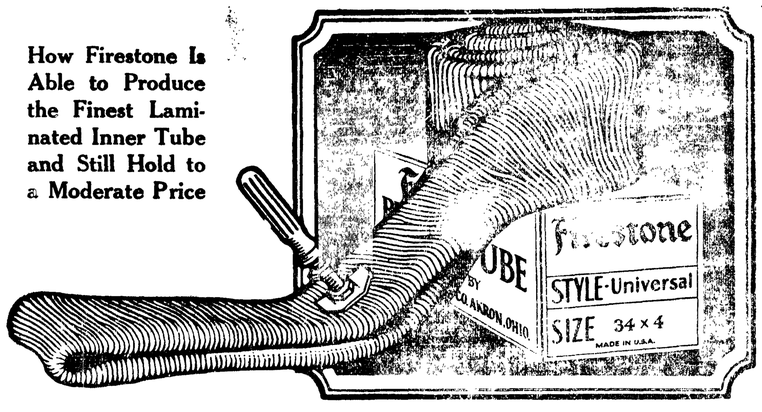
How Firestone Is Able to Produce the Finest Laminated Inner Tube and Still Hold to a Moderate Price



Firestone Man Power: Firestone has gathered together a remarkable body of workers, 17,000 strong—many of them stockholders in the Company. Men financially interested in the success of their product do better work.

Firestone Buying Power: Firestone has established purchasing headquarters at Singapore in the Straits Settlement where 85% of the world's rubber is produced. Thus Firestone gets first choice of the raw product at quantity prices. And this saving is turned back to car owners.

Firestone Selling Power — Firestone's immense production requires a widespread distribution system. Sixty-five branches and 46,000 dealers throughout the United States selling Firestone Tubes assure a fast-moving product, which means fresh stock at all times—most miles per dollar in tubes as well as tires.
