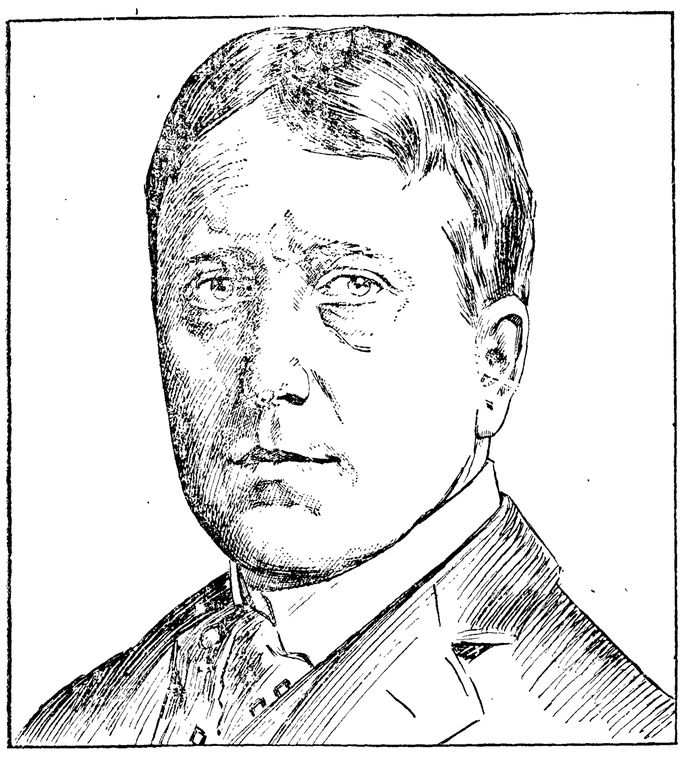
Hearst Restrains Payment of Graft



WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

New York, Dec. 10.—Counsel for W. R. Hearst today asked Justice Dickey in the Supreme court to continue the temporary injunction obtained a few days ago restricting Mayor McClellan and Comptroller Groute from paying the disputed bills for city lighting for 1903. The amount of the bills is about $4,500,000. of of which Mr. Hearst claims that $1.250,000 ought not to be paid. Counsel for Mr. Hearst declared that the public lighting situation in New York city today was worse than anything since the Tweed scandal. Counsel for Mr. Hearst contended that Comptroller Grout had agreed to pay the disputed bills in full, and that the bills were exorbitant and constituted illegal waste and that the payment should be restrained until the case should be received. Counsel for Mayor McClellan protested against the bringing of the mayor into the case, contending that neither fraud or bad faith on his part had been shown. Counsel for Comptroller Groute declares that Mr. Groute hed tried to prevent the accumulation of interest by paying the bills.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Its Good and Bad Recommendations Snow a Conflict Between His Better Impulses and His Hamiltonian Theories.

The President's message contains a number of encouraging recommendations. The most important in a political way is the recommendation of a law which will punish the giving and receiving of bribes and also provide "for the publication not only of the expenditures for nominations and elections of all candidates but also of all contributions received and expenditures made by political committees." In an editorial entitled "Reforms Within Reach" an argument was presented in favor of just such a law. After the article was in type the president's message arrived and the editor of The Commoner was gratified to know that the president had cast the great influence of the executive on the side of such legislation. This ought to make certain the passage of the law immediately, and it will be a long step toward the purifying of elections and toward the reducing of the power that aggregated wealth now exerts over our federal elections. The law should provide for the publication of the contributors before the election.

The student of sociology will cordially approve of the president's recommendations in regard to the improvement of the industrial and sanitary conditions which surround the laboring classes. He suggests that Washington, the nation's capitol, should be made an ideal city in this respect, an example to other cities

In speaking of the labor question he has made some good suggestions and has clearly recognized the right of the laboring men to organize for their own protection. He has also correctly stated the limitations that should be placed upon their organized activity. No one can justify the use of force either by employer or employe, but the president does not point out the remedy. He does not advocate arbitration as a means of preventing the increasing conflicts between labor and capital. He speaks of a "gradual growth of a feeling of responsibility and forbearance among capitalists and wage workers alike; a feeling of respect on the part of each man for the rights of others;" but this is not sufficient. Even if the growth were more pronounced than it is, the organization recently formed among employers for the express purpose of combatting the measures desired by the labor organizations is not an encouraging sign. Nothing will stimulate the growth of the feeling of forbearance more than the establishment of a board of arbitration, before which either side of the controversy can bring the other when agreement cannot be reached by personal conference. It is also to be regretted that the president does not recommend a restriction upon the employment of the writ of injunction—the writ upon which corporate employers now reply for the forcing of terms upon their employes.

He calls attention to the need of a stringent employer's liability law, and also suggests additional legislation for the protection of railroad men, both as to their hours of work and as to the appliances for the protection of their lives.

In dealing with the trust question he does not hold out any promise of relief. He cautions congress against dealing with the subject "in an intemperate, destructive or demagogic spirit," and asks that the subject be met with a "quiet determination to proceed step by step.

His recommendation in regard to bringing insurance companies under the supervision of the bureau of corporations is a wise one. While most of the states have enacted legislation for the protection of the policyholders within their borders, the work of investigating the methods and standing of these great moneyed institutions is certainly within the scope of interstate commerce.

The president's recommendations in regard to the amendment of the interstate commerce law indicate that he has become somewhat alarmed at the growth of the sentiment in favor of the government ownership of national highways. He says:

"The government must in increasing degree supervise and regulate the workings of the railways engaged in interstate commerce; and such increased supervision is the only alternative to an increase of the present evils on the one hand or a still more radical policy on the other."

The "still more radical policy" is, of course, the taking of the railroads out of the hands of private corporations. The president is right in his conclusion that a failure of the government to protect the public against the evils of private ownership of railroads will make the people look in increasing numbers to government ownership.

The president' request that additional authority be given the interstate commerce commission is in the right direction; we shall now see whether the railroads, so ably represented in the United States senate. will heed the president's warning or by standing out against it contribute to the movement that is now going on in favor of a policy that will put the people themselves in control of these arteries of trade.

Considerable attention is given to the preservation of the forests and a less amount to irrigation, but what he says on both subjects will meet with general acceptance.

The currency question is dealt with briefly, but the language employed shows that he permits the financiers to do his thinking and direct his course upon this question.

The president's caution against extravagance is a guarded one. He justifies large expenditures on the ground that the country is prosperous, and his recommendations are in the line of enlarged expenditures rather than retrenchment.

The president's imperial policy strikes at the foundation of our government, and the hopes which he expresses for the future of the Filipinos will not atone for his apostacy from American principle. The large navy and the colonial policy go hand in hand. If we are going to adopt the brute force principle which underlies the empire, we shall most assuredly need a large navy and we shall need a large army also, but it will result as it has resulted elsewhere in increasing the wealth of the exploiters and the burdens of the masses.

On the whole the president's message is a queer compound of good and bad. His recommendations are not consistently good; they are not consistently bad. They indicate a conflict between his better impulses and his Hamiltonian theories. Let us hope that in his future messages there may be more evidence of the triumph of his better impulses.—W. J. Bryan.

Much Work Is Done

Paul Jones Men Construct Breastworks. Mess and Ammunition Houses on Spit.

The torpedo boat destroyer Paul Jones left for up sound Saturday last to undergo minor repairs and to get lumber and other supplies for the completion of the work at the spit for the use of the Pacific squadron which will practice here next March.

To date there has been completed a couple of tier of breastworks, twelve feet in height, across the spit near the light, and about 200 yards distant, for sham battles, etc., three buildings for temporary rest of arms and ammunition, one large mess house, 16x18, and other work.

The Gate City Contracting Company has piling driven for a small wharf 120 feet long, at which water will be 30 feet deep at high and 20 feet deep at low tide. This is not yet completed for the reason that the capping and planking are not at hand.

The commander of the Paul Jones says he will return shortly to complete the work begun and that what has been done will not be a patch to what will be done.

It certainly looks this time as though we would really get a war boat or two next year.

DESPITE the absence of a ship subsidy, this year's commerce is the largest in the history of the United States.

IF the latest allegations in the Chadwick case be true, Carnegie can get poor to the tune of $20,000,000 very properly and honorably.

There are persistent and well founded rumors that actual work of building the Port Angeles Eastern will begin next month. It is said that a well known and competent local civil engineer has been engaged to assist in the final surveys which are to begin at that time.—P. T. Call.

THERE will be no extra session of congress in the spring for tariff revision. It is so given out by the president, so it goes. He may call the lawmakers together for the purpose in the early fall, but this is improbable and definite announcement must come later. Can it be Teddy is again going to give way?

IN another column a Dry Creek correspondent calls attention to the dangerous condition of the new Elwha bridge at the Burlingame road. The water he says is undermining the west side of the pier and unless something in the engineer's art is done the chances are that the county will have an expensive new bridge to put in during the coming year. The article is timely and should be given immediate attention. There is certainly some method by which the bridge can be saved, and that method should be applied quickly, not only for the sake of the residents on the west side of the river but the taxpayers of the whole county.

ACCORDING to the poll just completed by the New York Times the popular vote given President Roosevelt is 2,546,169 more than that given Parker. The total vote is given as 13,534,119, of which Roosevelt received 7,640,550; Parker, 5,094,391; Debs, 392,825; Swallow, (pro) 248,411; Watson (pop), 124,381; Corrigan (soc-lab), 33,519. This result does not show such a great landslide for Roosevelt as it shows a revolt against the Democratic re-organizers. While Roosevelt has the greatest plurality on record, over two and one-half million votes, as shown above, he has only about one-seventh of that number over the plurality of McKinley over Bryan in 1900, while Parker has over one and one-half million votes less than Bryan received in the last campaign. The total vote of 1900 was 13,959,345, of which McKinley received 7,207,923; Bryan, 6,359,133. This makes a total of 13,566,056 or 831,205 more than the combined vote this year of Roosevelt and Parker. The total vote cast this year is 425,226 less than that of 1900.

In conclusion of these figures one is forced to the opinion that a large percent of the Democrats stayed at home, 300,000 voted for Debs and a goodly numberfor Roosevelt.

Emergency Medicines.

It is a great convenience to have at hand reliable remedies for use in cases of accident and for slight injuries and ailments. A good liniment and one that is fast becoming a favorite if not a household necessity is Chamberlain's Pain Balm. By applying it promptly to a cut, braise or burn it allays the pain and causes the injury to heal in about one-third the time usually required, and as it is an antiseptic it prevents any danger of blood poisoning. When Pain Balm is kept at hand a sprain may be treated before inflammation sets in, insuring a quick recovery. For sale by W. J. Mathewson.

Chas. Forsberg and wife write cheerful letters from their new home at Hay Creek, Ore. Charlie is busy building himself a house on his claim. Walter Darrell, who has a claim adjoining, has his house finished, but intends to dig a well before moving into it. The roads there are as good as ours in the summer, he reports.

The elite of Freshwater and vicinity gave a leap year ball at the Goodwin hall last Saturday. "Our" girl did not invite us to the affair, so we can't exactly tell how much pleasure those attending had, but to judge by the early hour the dance was over and the sad steps and awkward countenances some participants displayed next day the gathering could not have been accompanied with the usual gaiety that is displayed at our social doings. Let us hope that the "bal masque" that comes off at the same hall on Xmas eve, Saturday, the 24th, will be of more success. The preparations that are being made for the same certainly indicate that an effort will be made at having a good time. The costumes will be something tremendous. The prizes have not yet been selected, but no doubt will come up to the occasion.

Our friends across the Elwha are accustoming themselves with the idea o having to ford the river again before long, as the opinion is general that the bridge on the Burlingame road will be a thing of the past after the next high water, the pier now being underwashed the full width on the side facing the river. It looks to a fellow up a tree like the last boards of county commissioners had given up this valuable bridge to the elements too easy. If there is no one in this county who knows how to save that bridge, why not get some outside expert's opinion? Any one that has been watching the different attempts at saving the structure will admit that most of it was monkey work, and seven thousand dollars will go out into the straits without any serious attempt of preventing the catastrophe.

Correspondent's Opinion of City

The Tacoma News recently Delegated a Man to write His View of Conditions in Port Angeles-- Here it is

The probable action of the Harriman interests as foreshadowed in the News. is of the deepest local import. and the people of Clallam county, and of Port Angeles especially, are eagerly scanning the field of probabilities, hoping to see the long-delayed road materialize. There is a general upward trend in real estate values. and several people are here now, looking over the ground with a view to investment, moved thereto the general feeling that the road is to be begun next spring. It is a well known fact that the great denominational missionary societies are placing strong men in this field, because of the expected incoming of people, and consequent rise in census and values. What has been "hope deferred" so long is now believed to be near to fruition.

Mrs. Sanborn Passes Away.

After an illness of about one month Mrs. Mary E. Sanborn, beloved wife of Robt. Sanborn, of 7th and Peabody streets, passed away at 5:30 Saturday morning last of stomach trouble. The lady had been feeble for several years past, though believed by most of her friends to be in robust health. The funeral was held Monday at 10:30 and was largely attended. Mr. Sanborn, the only relative left in this section, takes the demise of his beloved wife very hard. Mrs. Sanborn also leaves many relatives in her former home at Monroe, N. H., and a brother living in California.

Deceased was 60 years of age. Thirteen years ago she removed with her husband to this city from California, and has since been a resident of this place.

Mr. Sanborn is receiving such comfort as friends in such an hour can give, but is very, very lonesome.

State Teachers' Association.

The 18th annual session of the Washington State Teachers' Association will be held at Spokane, December 58, 29 and 30. The officers expect an attendance of not less than one thousand and probably fifteen hundred teachers.

The program is unusually interesting. Nearly every phase of school work will be discussed. Evening addresses will be given by President David Starr Jordan, of Stanford, and by State Superintendent J. H. Ackerman, of Oregon.

There will be discussion of proposed school legislation: Shall the state repeal or modity the Gunderson bill for the selecting of text books? Shall the term of the county superintendent be lengthened to four years? Shall the State Constitution be amended by repealing the clause limiting a county officer to two terms, by providing that it shall NOT apply to county superintendents?
