Old-Fashioned Tea Parties.

The "tea parties" of our grandmother's day are coming into favor, writes Mrs. Van Koert Schuyler in the January Ladies' Home Journal. The table is set with old-fashioned simplicity, and lighted by candles in silver "branches," as the candlesticks in those far away days were called. The china is white and gold, and the linen of the very finest. Plates of thin bread and butter, "spread on the loaf," cold ham and tongue, grated cheese, fruit cake, pound cake, crullers and jumbles, with "Damson preserves" and "short cake" (known to moderns as soda biscuit), concluding with hot waffles, furnishes a fac-simile tea-table of sixty or seventy years ago.

There is a certain old-fashioned fragrance about such informal meetings, like the perfume that exhales from a jar of roses, whose sweetness still lingers, though the day of their blooming is long since past.

Angeles in Washington.

The following paragraph, of local significance, appears in "Capitol Chat," a spicy column in the Washington Daily Post, of the 9th inst.:

It takes a western hustler to get up schemes. A bill has been introduced in the House by Mr. Wilson, of Washington, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to erect in the town of Port Angeles a custom house and post.office building to cost a sum equal to one-half the amount obtained from the sale of public lands in that city, which is to take place at auction January 1st, next. This is the scheme of Mayor Norman R. Smith, of that lively city of 6,000 inhabitants. It has the advantage of giving the sale and the town a boom, and the increased prices which the lots will bring in consequence will result in giving the government its public building for nothing, instead of having to pay from fifty to seventy-five thousand dollars out with no return. Port Angeles is now an important port and growing rapidly.

Out in a Blizzard.

Mr. J. P. Blaize, an extensive real estate dealer in Des Moines, Iowa, narrowly escaped one of the severest attacks of phenmonia while in the northern part of that state during a recent blizzard, says the Saturday Review. Mr. Blaize had occasion to drive several miles during the storm and was so thoroughly chilled that he was unable to get warm, and inside of an hour after his return ha was threatened with a severe case of pneumonia or lung fever. Mr. Blaize sent to the nearest drug store and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy of which he had often heard, and took a number of large doses.. He says the effect was wonderful and in a short time he was breathing quite easily. He kept on taking the mediciue and the next day he was able to came to Des Moines. DEPOSITORS' MEETING.

A Significant Gathering of the Creditors

OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Able and Pointed Addresses—Resolutions Offered and Unanimously Adopted—A Committee Appointed to Solicit Signatures to the 5 Per Cent. Agreement—The Results of the Meeting Will Doubtless be Productive of Good.

The meeting organized by electing W. C. Garfield as chairman. On assuming the chair Mr. Garfield said:

"This meeting in some respects differs from any yet held where the interests of the bank and its depositors have been involved. Heretofore the meetings have been composed of the stockholders and officers of the bank and the depositors. This meeting is composed entirely of the depositors and from it the officers and stockholders have been excluded. It matters not at this time how the affairs of the bank may have been conducted in the past, they must be treated as matters which cannot be avoided at this time, and the business of the present alone considered.

"Since the suspension of the bank, the mercantile institutions of this city have been going one by one into liquidation. Others are upon the eve of following and the hope of resumption alone acts as a bar to their immediate dissolution.

"A merchant of this city, having a deposit of many hundred of dollars, informed me to-day that he would be able with the certificates of the deposits of the bank, under the 5 per cent contract, to satisfy his creditors and remain in business. Another with a deposit of fifteen hundred dollars, makes the same statement. Both of these gentlemen declare that unless the bank opens they must surely fail.

"Liquidation of the bank means ruin and desolation to every business interest of this city. It strikes a blow at the very heart of our city and county commonwealths which it will require years to overcome. It means the gathering of a horde of lawyers to manipulate our financial affairs to their own private interests; it means the closing of our schools, the enforced idleness of our children and citizens and the loss of our property interests.

"Resumption on the other hand means the distributing of about five thousand dollars per month in cash; it means the settlement of thousands of dollars of indebtedness through the medium of the bank, without the expenditure of a single dollar in cash, and better than all, it means the restoration of our credit and general financial standing at home and abroad.

"Which will you have gentlemen, resumption or liquidation?"

Mr. C. W. Brewster then followed in an able address favoring the opening of the bank.

The meeting was then addressed by Prosecuting Attorney Bryan, Capt. Ayres, Major Harding, County Treasurer Clnmp and other prominent citizens, all earnestly advocating resumption.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Brewster:

Be it resolved, that it is for the best interests of the depositors and the city and county that the bank shall resume business and we pledge ourselves and our best endeavors to obtain that result.

It is further resolved, that we wire the U. S. Comptroller of Currency, assuring him that with C. W. Thompson as president and C. E. Mallette as cashier, the bank will receive the confidence and support of the depositors and the public generally.

The resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

All those who had not heretofore signed the 5 per cent contract, and were present at the meeting, came forward and added their names to the list.

On motion the chair appointed C. W. Brewster and Prosecuting Attorney Bryan to continue the work of obtaining signatures to the 5 per cent contract.

On motion the meeting adjourned subject to call by the chairman.

W. C. GARFIELD, Chairman.

Attest:—
T. WAGNER, Secretary.

Bank Inspector Cleary was present and addressed the meeting. Mr. Cleary paid Examiner Chas. E. Dyer a deserved compliment. As examiner of the suspended First National bank, of this city, he had discharged his duties ably and acceptably.

A Gymnasium at Home.

The advantages of gymnasium practice for young children, and its direct bearing on their future, can hardly be reckoned, writes Ellen Le Garde in the January Ladies' Home Journal. Strange to say, the most common defect in the physical status of children is a most grievous one, namely, lateral curvature of the spine. The majority of curvature cases occur between the ages of five and fourteen, and need not happen at all if the matter is properly understood and attended to. These tender little bodies will bend and permanently shape, like young plants, in whatever way their growth is directed. If your child is carelessly permitted to assume one position for any lengthened period, you may expect, as a result, a one-sided development. If, by more frequent use, either side is put to greater action than the other, it will become so much stronger that all muscular movements will be performed from it, and it will, in time, obtain complete mastery over the deficient development, the latter finally being rendered unable to perform its natural functions. From it hip disease, as well as curved spine, results. The proverbial ounce of prevention is always better than the pound of cure, particularly in this case.

OF INTEREST TO DEMOCRATS.

Contributions to the State Central Committee Should Be Paid to the Secretary.

The Seattle Telegraph is in receipt of of a letter written by Charles De France, secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee, with the request that it shall publish the following extract:

You ask me whether this letter was written by the authority of the State Central Committee or myself and whether Hazzard is authorized to collect money for it or me. In reply I have to emphatically say he represents only himself in soliciting subscriptions and is "directed and instructed" only by his own selfish schemes. Further he has no authority from the State Central Committee to solicit or collect money, and on this point Mr. Hazzard can have no misunderstanding, for in my presence the chairman and treasurer told him that by resolution the committee at their last session placed the matter of raising funds for the expenses of the committee entirely in the hands of the secretary, and that he, Hazzard, should not act in that capacity unless so instructed by the secretary, and I have never authorized him so to do, but on the contrary have forbidden it. Hazzard does not, in my opinion, represent any one but himself, and his persistent efforts to extort money from Democratic postmaster and attempts to cajole Republican postmaster into making contributions, are doing more to bring our party organization into disrepute than can be easily measured. Nor has he the power to influence any appointment, however small. Therefore, his alluring promises or covert threats are impotent.

So far as I know no one pays the slightest attention to Hazzard's multitude of words except the green and unsophisticated and the Republicans newspapers, with the last of which, for apparent reasons, he is in high favor.

Yours Truly,
CHARLES DE FRANCE,
Secretary of Democratic State Central Committee.

The letter referred to is a reply to one from George Hazzard to a prominent Democrat asking him to contribute $25 towards meeting certain expenses of the Democratic State Central Committee, the money to be sent to Hazzard.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD.

Angeles Given the Same Passenger Tariff by N. P. R. R. as Other Sound Cities.

For some time past the board of trade has been in correspondence with officials of the Northern Pacific Railway, urging that Port Angeles be given the same tariff schedule provided Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and other northwestern cities.

These efforts have at last been crowned with success, as the following letter will testify:

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Dec. 21, 1893.

Port Angeles Board of Trade, Port Angeles, Wash.

GENTLEMEN: I am this day in receipt of our new passenger tariff "A" No. 78 effective January 1st, 1894, and for your information will state that the name of your city appears in it, and the same rates from all points east, that apply to Portland and Tacoma or Seattle also apply to Port Angeles.

Trusting that the meetings of your "Board" are as well attended, and that the same enthusiasm prevails now, as in the past, I beg to remain,

Yours very resp.,
S. G. YERKES,
Agent N. P. R. R. Co.

The Neah Bay Mail Contract.

"Clark, the unknown steamboatman," says the Seattle Telegraph, "who is said to have captured the Neah Bay mail contract, is believed to be none other than Hatch Bros., owning the steamer Monticello. It is stated that this firm will now secure a boat from the Columbia river to operate from Townsend to the settlements down the straits. In the same service they will run the Monticello to make two daily trips between this city and Port Angeles."

A New Bazaar.

Mr. Jno. Brown, jr., has purchased a stock of goods and will open a bazaar in the McInnes' building, next the First National Bank. Mr. Brown is an energetic young man, who has the confidence of the business community and citizens generally, and will doubtless make a flattering success of his business venture.

"Sinfire," a very interesting story by Julian Hawthorne, will be commenced in THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER January 5th.

THE ROAD CONVENTION.

Some Important Resolutions Adopted At Its Session.

The road convention which met at Olympia last Monday with representatives from the various counties of the state to devise ways and means for the improvement of the public highways of the state. by its labors has evidenced a deep, abiding interest in this very important question, and an intelligent conception of its different phases,

Undoubtedly nothing contributes so largely to the advancement of a commonwealth as good public thoroghfares, and any movement that will result in the improvement of public roads should receive universal support.

Before adjourning the conventions passed the following resolutions:

By Mussetter of King—That this convention request our representatives in congress to join with other representatives from recently admitted state and states soon to be admitted, in an effort to secure to each of the new states a grant of 500,000 acres of government land, to be devoted to road purposes.

By Van Epps of Thurston—That this convention memorialize the legislature to enact a law creating an inheritance or succession tax on estates of persons dying possessed of estates valued at $1,000 or upwards, for a road fund.

By Godman of Columbia—That after county roads have been established and opened they shall not be changed or vacated except upon request of four-fifths of the qualified voters residing and owning property in the immediate vicinity.

By Pearcy of Cowlitz—That in the appropriation of private property for roads the same procedure be adopted, as far as practicable, as in the condemnation of private property by railroad corporations.

These together with the following, will be engrafted in the report of the general work of the conventions:

"That there should be a general law for the establishment and maintenance of state and county roads; that the legislature should memorialize congress to enact a law giving to the state 10 per cent. of all moneys realized from the sale of public lands in the state for road purposes; that all moneys arising from the sale of tide lands, not otherwise appropriated shall be devoted to building and maintaining roads; recommending the encouragement by proper legislation of wide tires; that the regents of the agricultural college be petitioned to establish a chair of road engineering; the enactment of a law compelling county surveyors and roadmasters to pass an examination on the subject of road engineering; the enactment of a law compelling state and county prisoners to be employed on road work; abolishing the present system of supervisors, and placing control of roads in the hands of competent persons."

A committee of seven, of which President Jones of Whatcom, and Secretary Massetter of King, were ex-officio members, was elected by the convention to draft bills embodying the work of the convention, and to collect data to assist the legislature in determining on an intelligent line of action. The convention elected Shelton, of Mason; Egbert, of Pacific; Megler, of Wahkiakum; Godman of Columbia, and Hallett, of Spokane, to complete the work of the convention. A vote of thanks was extended to Gov. McGraw, to the officers of the convention and to the citizens of Olympia. Adjourned sine die.

A Cure for Croup.

When on a visit to Iowa, Mr. K. Dalton, of Luray, Russell county, Kansas, called at the laboratory of Chamberlain & Co., Des Moines, to show them his six year old boy, whose life had been saved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, it having cured him of a severe attack of croup. Mr. Dalton is certain that it saved his boy's life and is enthusiastic in his paaise of the remedy. For sale by the Fisher Pharmacy.

MAYORALTY CONTEST

Will Be Heard By the Council the 26th Inst.

NUMEROUS SIDEWALK PETITIONS.

Various Communications—Ordinance Passed Fixing Rate of Tax Levy—City Attorney Instructed to Draw Resolution Authorizing Issuance of Warrants for Outstanding Certificates of Indebtedness.

At the regular meeting of the city council last Wednesday evening Councilmen Ristine, Carver, Beam, Rose, Reid and Krueger were present.

In the absence of the mayor, Councilman Krueger was called to the chair.

Attorney Embree appeared before the council in the interest of W. C. Garfield, for the purpose of requesting that the latter fix a time for hearing the mayoralty contest. After due consideration of the matter, Tuesday, the 26th inst., was set for hearing the case, and the time 2 o'clock p. m.

Numerous petitions for sidewalks were referred to the street committee.

The following communication was read by the city clerk:

PORT ANGELES, Wash., Dec. 6, '93.

To the Honorable Members of the City Council:

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to notify you that if steps are not taken immediately to abate the nuisance referred to in my communication of a recent date, to your honorable body, it is my intention to begin a civil suit against you as members of the council and individually for the recovery of damages.

Very respectfully,
W. BRUMFIELD.

The nuisance referred to in the foregoing communication is the accumulation of refuse water, supposed to be the overflow from a system of drains excavated by owners of adjoining property for the purpose of draining the same.

Referring to the communication Councilman Reid, from the third ward, stated that the damage resulted not from any work performed by the city, but on the contrary, from drains excavated by owners of abutting property and they, not the city, in his opinion, were responsible for the damages accruing therefrom.

The communication was laid on the table.

Ordinance No. 195 was adopted as read. It provides for fixing the rate of and levying property tax for the year 1893, within the city of Port Angeles. The levy is fixed at 1 7-8 per cent. The levy of last year was only 1 per cent., yet taxation was considerably higher as the city assessment has been reduced fully 50 per cent.

Councilman Ristine introduced the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That Geo. C. Hatch shall furnish the city clerk with a detail statement of all sums collected on the the taxes of 1890, 1891 and 1892, showing the number of lots and blocks, and that he is requested to have the delinquent tax roll of 1892 so corrected as to be readily understood.

The city attorney was instructed to draw a resolution in matter of issuing warrants in place of city certificates, and clerk shall notify public that he will cancel certificates on and after January 10th, 1893.

A motion that $100 be expended under the supervision of Mr. Ingram on Tumwater street valley passed.

The council adjourned.

A Hard Name.

A good story is told on a Washington woman who now makes her home in Colorado. With evidently no thought as to the curious sound of the combination if spoken quickly. she called her oldest child Helen Virginia. Not long ago upon a visit to this city she proudly brought her young daughter in to see an old friend. "What have you called your daughter?" quiered the friend. "Helen Virginia," was the complacent reply. "Ah, and what do you call her in Colorado?" was the unexpected but very natural response.—Kate Field's Washington.

Death of Capt. Quinn.

Capt. Edward D. Quinn died last Saturday morning in Providence hospital, Seattle, of consumption, having been in the hospital only three days. Capt. Quinn is well-known all over the sound having lived here fifteen years and been master of the schooner Teaser for the past ten years. He came here from San Francisco, where his father still lives While his home has been in Seattle he has been away much of the time, sealing and carrying freight to S. Baxter's store at Quillayute. During last spring, while at work salving pig iron near Destruction island, Capt. Quinn was upset from a small boat and remained several hours in the water, being thoroughly chilled. Since that time his health has been poor and growing worse. His friends desired him to go to the hospital last summer, but he refused and lived alone in the Teaser, which is laid up in the Duwamish river. He did not take proper care of himself and gradually got so weak that he could scarcely help himself. He was then taken to the hospital by his friends.

Capt. Quinn was well-known in Clallam county, having navigated these waters for the past ten years, and his demise will be mourned by an extended acquaintance.

The memory of the genial whole-souled captain will long be cherished as a kindly, generous nature, always ready to do a friend a favor and ever thoughtful of the welfare of others.

COUNTY NEWS.

Interesting Paragraphs Gathered From the County Press.

East Clallam Record.]

Chas. Brash, one of the Clallam Bay land owners has made a proposition to John H. Clarkson and James Davidson offering to start the extract works in operation if 500 cords of bark can be delivered at the factory for $5 a cord. Messrs. Clarkson and Davidson think favorably of the offer and if Mr. Brash means business they will undoubtedly undertake to supply the bark, principally because of the great benefit the operation of the factory would be to the city during the coming year.

The suit of D. E. Bigelow vs. The Clallam Wharf Co., which was commenced nearly a year ago came up for hearing in the Superior court at Port Angeles on Wednesday. It will be remembered that Bigelow sued the company for refusing to allow him to take away his machinery from the wharf, a fact which the company has always denied. Monday evening Al. Fairservice, J. H. Marlette and James Keltner went up to Angeles as witnesses in the case. The result of the suit was a compromise offered by Bigelow who will have to pay costs amounting to about $400.

Last Saturday one of the sailors on the ship Wachusetts, which has been lying at anchor in the bay, fell through one of the hatches and fractured a rib. A boat was sent ashore and Dr. Roberts called to attend the injured man.

Mr. D. Knable went out Wednesday to work on the bridges which are to be completed on the county road between Burnt mountain and Beaver.

It is expected that the sawmill will start up next month.

Beaver Leader.]

There never was a time when the resources of the Quillayute country attracted more general attention than they do just now. The Leader has taken great pleasure in bringing to public notice the claims of every part of the Quillayute country. We believe that the desire is general to improve the roads, forward the settlement of the land and to put the country in line for the great future that is before it. This is a work at which every settler can do his part. The present need is a complete settlement of the country. Hand in hand with this we want improvement of roads, a harbor at LaPush and railroad communication with the Straits.

Foster Sawyer, nine miles up the river has been re-modeling and enlarging his residence and adding other substantial improvements to his ranch. Mr. Sawyer is a type of the progressive set of ranchers that people that neighborhood.

Our old-time Quillayute friend, Mr. Chas. Harris, came down from Port Angeles to-day. He was accompanied by his nephew, Mr. C. E. Day. This is Mr. Day's first visit to the famous Quillayute country, and notwithstanding the mud he is delighted with the valley.

The slight snow of the past week has made deer hunting a pleasure and several of our ranchers have taken advantage of the opportunity to lay in a winter's supply of meat.

The People's party motto, "keep in the middle of the road," seems to be a huge bug-bear just now, to the Populist pedestrians who have occasion to travel over the Burlingame road.

DESCRIBE YOUR FRIEND.

And Then See How Well Your Picture Will Fit Scores of Others.

"He was a young man and fairly good looking; smooth face and without glasses; were a dark suit; was about 5 feet in height and looked like a married man. Anybody would know him." Such was the description turned in by a young woman who slipped quietly into the city editor's office and wanted to advertise for Chalmers. It appeared that Chalmers had left home, and nobody knew why, and this young woman had faith that her recital of his personal traits would bring him back. It was a good example of the average person's power of description of a fellow being.

It is totally inadequate! Though man be fearfully and wonderfully made, there seems to be an unaccountable inability in nine persons out of every ten to give a creditable word picture of any one whom they have seen. Because we understand the looks of a person when we meet them, it never occurs to the mind that other people do not grasp a thorough idea of his appearance with a few passing phrases of description.

Your friend comes in, and you expound to him that such and such a man has just called for him, but almost invariably your exposition is a jumbled lot of phrases which apply to the human race in general.

The other day when I rushed into my office room with a column story on the end of my tongue—or at the tip of my pen, to be more accurate—I was given this greeting:

"Hello! A man has just been in to see you."

"What did he look like?"

"Oh, he was a good looking fellow—not very tall, rather heavy, but not too much so."

"Was he old or young?"

"About 20 or 25, I should say."

"What color of hair?"

"I don't remember now. However, I don't think he had a mustache."

"How dressed?"

"Oh, just an ordinary business suit."

Have you ever heard such a description? If not, watch yourself next time you tell of some one's call. You will be surprised to find that your description would fit almost any member of the human race.

Why is it?

I don't know. We read in books that it's because we don't cultivate the habit of intelligent observation.

There was once a boy who learned how to describe what he saw. Every morning he was sent by his father to walk rapidly by an elegantly arranged window, and then afterward to repeat to him all the things he saw at this one glance at the panorama and to describe them. At first the lad could remember but few things that his eye may have caught in the passing glance, but in time he could remember almost everything in a show window by merely seeing it once.—Boston Herald.

At the Manicure's.

The manicure with the golden hair was bending over the hand of a new customer.

"Do you want your hands bleached?" she asked.

"Yes."

She applied the bleach, using more than the ordinary quantity upon the thumb and forefinger of the right hand. After working for about five minutes she stopped and said:

"It is always difficult to remove nicotine with the first application."

"Wh-a-a-t?" gasped the society girl, elevating her eyebrows. "Nicotine? What do you mean?"

"The cigarettes, you know," replied the manicure. "It's perfectly awful how they stain the fingers, ain't it?" And she smiled a smile that even the society girl couldn't resist. That made them friends, and they fell to discussing the different brands of cigarettes. And when the job was done the society girl whispered:

"What'll take the stain off?"

"Use lemon juice—I do—we all do."

"Thanks."—New York Herald.

About Opals.

The prejudice against opals appears to be disappearing. Anyhow they are popular. There are several varieties of opals and therefore several degrees of merit. The precious, or noble, or oriental opal is the supreme. This has all the colors, and when these colors are broken into spangles it is then called the harlequin opal. Then comes the fire opal, or girasole, with hyacinth red and yellow reflection. The former comes from Hungary, the latter from Mexico. The common, or semiopals, are nonopalescent. The hydrophane, or oculus mundi, is nontransparent, but becomes so by immersion in water or any transparent fluid. The cachalong is nearly opaque and of a bluish white color. The hyalite is colorless, pellucid and white. The opal jasper or wood opal is the petrifaction of wood, opalescent, but without the coloring which makes the "noble" gem so precious.—Chicago Tribune.

Working For a Holiday.

An Englishman stopping at one of the hotels was commenting upon the extreme restlessness and incessant go of Americans. He said, "You Americans have such a beastly idea of the compensation of work."

"What do you mean?" questioned a Pittsburger standing near by.

"Oh, you people work for money," was the explanation.

"I don't see anything beastly about that," was the retort. "May I ask for what you Englishmen work?"

"Why, we work for our holiday," was the reply.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Vienna.

Vienna is of nearly circular form, being 12 miles in circumference. The old city, or city proper, is, however, scarcely three miles round. It was formerly inclosed by fortifications. Immediately outside of these was a wide esplanade called the Glacis, which has been elegantly built up and is called Ringstrasse, one of the most splendid streets in the world.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE ROAD CONVENTION.

Washington is, indeed, a progressive commonwealth, its people intelligent, active and patriotic. As indubitable evidence of this, the labors of the road convention in session at Olympia during the week, abundantly testify.

The purpose of the meeting simply was to discuss the various road systems of the states and of other countries, then frame a bill to be introduced at the next session of the legislature, the provisions of which would most adequately supply the state with a road law best adapted to its needs and requirements.

The representatives of this significant gathering were men of mature judgment, practical ideas and thorough information upon the subject under discussion. That their deliberations will be productive of much good, there can be little doubt.

The building of public highways particularly in Western Washington, is necessarily very expensive, the country being mountainous and heavily timbered. To get the best results, therefore, with economic expenditure of public funds, demands intelligent and conscientious management from public officials.

Give the people good road laws and they will see to it that they are properly enforced.

EVERY lover of justice and fair play should carefully read and ponder President Cleveland's Hawaiian message. The president's position upon this important question is incontrovertable, his arguments unanswerable. He takes the high and tenable position that the United States, through its representatives, unlawfully overthrew the reigning to establish a new or provisional government in Hawaii with the purpose ultimately of prompting the annexation of these islands to this country.

If any sensible man, actuated by patriotic impulses, not knowing the president's true position upon this question, doubted the wisdom of his course, must now, after carefully weighing the logical and unassailable arguments advanced, commend him in the highest for having fearlessly performed his duty as only a patriot should. Mr. Cleveland had a nation's honor to protect. He has done this. No man could do more.

EX-MINISTER STEVENS, the Harrison dignitary, who gained unenviable notoriety in the Hawaiian controversy, wins additional fame in an undignified reply to President Cleveland's criticism of his official acts, while minister of these islands. Whenever a man has justice on his side, he defends his position with manly dignity and firmness, winning admiration and respect, if not conviction, otherwise he resorts to the subterfuge of cowardice and guilt — personal abuse. If the American people ever doubted the justice of the president's position upon this question, they have but to read the weak defense of Mr. Stevens, and such doubt will be speedily removed. The administration is certainly under obligations to this gentleman for the services he has unwittingly rendered.

PORT ANGELES is certainly a point of destiny. Advantageously situated from a commercial standpoint, with an excellent harbor, there is no reason why it should not become an industrial centre of importance, if its people are united and determined that it shall occupy that exalted position among the future cities of the northwest. The An apathetic, indifferent incongruous element will, however, eternally blast the brightest prospects of any town. There is in these lines food for sober reflection. Ponder well their meaning.

DUE credit should be given to the Northern Pacific Railroad company for making Port Angeles a terminal point for freight and passenger business. This is the first company to so recognize this city.

And the Verdict Was—

He failed for sixty thousand,
Took a last look at the wreck,
And when next they found him,
Was suspended by the neck.

His creditors said he drank;
His wife said he was robbed;
While his moneyed country partner
Simply sat around and sobbed.

But the wily coroner
(His brain was extra sized)
Said the man was plainly crazy,
For he'd never advertised.

THE LANGSHAN FOWLS.

A Tennesseean With Experience Expresses His Opinion Concerning This Variety.

A Southern Cultivator correspondent writes as follows in relation to the Langshans:

We like the Langshan. The more experience we have with them the better we like them. The Black Langshans, we mean. We never had any experience with the white variety. We believe that the hen that lays best is the hen that pays best. That is our motto, and we measure the value of our poultry by the egg test.

Now, the Langshan hen is a good layer, and that is why we like her. She pays her board and more too. We may be mistaken, but it is our belief, based on experience, that the Langshan is the best layer of all the feather legged breeds. The Cochins and the Brahmas do not lay for us like the Langshans do. Our friends say the same thing. Everybody who has them says the Langshan hens are good winter layers. Such is our experience. They are good spring, summer and fall layers too.

Kept side by side in small yards and treated and fed just alike, seven Langshan hens have laid for us twice as many eggs as seven Light Brahma hens during the last six months. On the farm, where they have plenty of range and foraging ground alike, we find the Langshans laying more eggs than the Brahmas or Cochins. Langshans are large, but active. Their black plumage is beautiful, but it goes against them as market fowls. It doesn't hurt their laying qualities any, however.

In the south the Langshan is popular and thrives. Likewise the Game fowl. To tone up a farm flock composed largely of Game hens a Langshan cock would work wonders. The Langshan, large, fierce and active; the spirited Game hen, tough and hardy, would produce a progeny hard to beat for practical purposes—good layers, good table fowls, of large size and weight. We advocate pure breeds straight, but times are hard, and money is scarce. A Langshan cross, as suggested, would improve the farm flock greatly.

Agricultural Colleges and Stations.

Statistics furnished by the department of agriculture at Washington make it appear that in 1892 there were 62 schools where agriculture was taught more or less. There were 1,159 instructors and 11,358 students, of whom only 3,460 were studying agriculture. Last year 3,311 students graduated from these schools. Since the Maryland college started in 1856, 3,333 students in all have graduated. The revenue for conducting these colleges in 1892 was $3,432,908.

As to experiment stations, there were 54, with a total revenue of $997,244. The station with the largest income was the New York state, at Geneva, which received $68,500. The Ohio station received the most for farm products sold—$6,019—with Missouri next—$4,057. The total number of persons employed at these stations was 491.

The Best Poultry Crosses.

Opinions differ as to what breeds and crosses are the best business fowls. A writer in The Fanciers' Journal has selected the Light Brahmas for roasting fowls, the Black Minorcas for eggs and the Black Langshans crossed by the Black Minorca for broilers. The Black Minorcas used are not strictly pure bred, they having an outcross with Langshan to give them extra hardiness and larger bodies. The Light Brahmas are used both in their purity and crossed by Indian Game. But there are other good breeds that can be selected, notably the Plymouth Rock, the Wyandotte, the Houdan and the Leghorn, and with probably as good results as this writer obtains with his selections.

Keeping Sweet Potatoes.

In the south sweet potatoes are preserved through the winter with much less care and loss than in the middle and eastern states. At the South Carolina station an experiment was made in keeping small quantities of sweet potatoes in barrels with various packing materials, such as sand, cotton seed, cottonseed hulls, damaged lint cotton, wheat bran, newspapers and hay. The best results were obtained with dry sand and cotton hulls. Wrapping each potato with paper induced rapid decay, but a double lining of paper next the barrel was fairly effective in keeping out cold and preventing rot. In this test there was no great difference in the keeping of large and small potatoes.

How to Repair Fenceposts.

An exchange tells us of a careful farmer who, when his grape trellis posts rotted off, dug down into the earth where the post was still solid, and then cut the post half in two a foot or 15 inches below the ground and then fastened to this half an upright post of the height desired. If the post below was mostly rotted off, he used to reverse the post, putting the top side in the ground and then mortise to it above the surface. In this way he made each post do double duty. The rotting off of posts is almost always just at the surface, and by putting bolts through each half and thus fastening them together the end will last as long as did the original posts at the surface.

The Color In Hogs.

The Rural New Yorker says that the matter of color in hogs seems to be largely determined by climate or individual preference. At the south there are few white hogs. Many farmers there argue that the blacks stand the sun better than the whites, just as the negroes are the best for field work in that hot climate. We think, too, that as we go north the proportion of white hogs will be found to increase.

DOGS FOR USE IN WAR

HOW THEY ARE TRAINED IN A LITTLE TOWN IN AUSTRIA.

The Intelligence They Display Is Simply Marvelous—How They Hunt Out and Succor the Wounded and Lost—Scenting an Enemy When Five Miles Away.

Some 80 miles west of Vienna the little market town of Wels nestles in the foothills of the Austrian Alps, which here rise in bold cliffs from the banks of the Traun.

The forests of the neighborhood are too open to harbor much game, but a stranger stopping at the summer hotel of the little town might easily be led to believe that the citizens must be the most indefatigable hunters of the Austro-Hungarian empire. From morning till night, and sometimes till long after dark, he may hear the echo of shots and the barking and howling of dogs approaching the town or dying away in the distant hills, and occasionally answered from far and near, as if all the sportsmen of the northern Alps had met in convention.

For this is one of the stations where Kriegshunde—war dogs—are trained.

The plan of training dogs for military purposes was first adopted by the French garrisons in Algiers, but has since been tried with great success in Prussia, Italy and especially in Austria, where four footed messengers have for many years been taught to carry letters to the snow bound villages of the Alpine highlands. The shaggy collies used for that purpose make the best war dogs and can be trained to race in a bee line to the next military post and announce their arrival by a peculiar bark that is at once recognized and answered by the shout of a sentry.

They will also range a long chain of hills in quest of wounded soldiers, and either dash back to report their discoveries or stand guard at the side of the cripple till an ambulance party comes near enough to be signaled by a long drawn howl.

Trainers send out three or four of their shaggy pupils at once and ascertain their proficiency by all sorts of ingenious tests. Soldiers instructed to act the part of helpless cripples will hide in thickets or caverns and keep still till the dog tugs at their sleeves, when they will sit up and reward his sagacity with a piece of sausage.

They then try to rise, but pretend to be too weak to walk or even to shoot, and ask the dog to call for assistance. If help is near, Collie will set up a loud howl, repeated at shorter and shorter intervals, till the signal is answered from the valley below. If his appeals should remain unheeded, he will mount the next rock and look about as if to impress the lay of the land on his mind, and then dash off to summon help from headquarters.

Should two cripples intimate their need of aid at the same time, Collie will guide the rescuing party to the hiding place of the one farthest away, and help them to pick up or somehow assist the the other man on their way home.

Messenger dogs carry letters in a small bag wrapped around their collar and will permit only the proper officials to touch that collar. A noncommissioned officer, displaying the insignia of his rank, may venture to remove the bag, but the dog will follow him and see to it that he gets him an answer.

Private soldiers are "stood off" with a menacing growl. Persons wearing the uniform of the enemy cannot stop the messenger with anything but an extremely well aimed shot. Dogs racing along the battle front will dodge bullets by running zigzag and develop a marvelous talent for taking advantage of every cover, running through the highest grass or along the safe side of rocks and fallen trees.

Picket post dogs are selected from a different breed. The half shepherd, half wolf dogs that carry letters and hunt up cripples are not entirely devoid of scent and can find their way back home in a manner not wholly explicable on the theory of keen eyesight. But for efficiency in the role of sentries they yield the palm to a species of deerhounds that do their best work after dark.

On picket duty a well trained sentinel of that breed will scent the approach of a troop of cavalry before a man, with his ear on the ground, can hear the trampling of the horses. The dog sentry will announce his discovery in a more discreet way than the Scotch widow who screamed through the citadel of Lucknow when her "inner ear" heard the approaching bagpipe of the McGregors. Phylax on scenting danger will step up close to his uniformed companion, and after a pause of silence and keen attention will announce his suspicion by low growls, getting more frequent rather than louder, as the cause for alarm becomes more unmistakable.

The best dogs of that breed have "challenged" cavalry from a distance of three to five miles, according to the direction of the wind, and infantry from nearly two miles. They can be trained to announce the approach of a known friend in a quite different way—viz, by leaping to and fro or crouching down and jumping up by turns, but without the warning growl of the danger signal.—F. L. Oswald in Youth's Companion.

A Massage Stone.

A "massage stone" is coming into use in England that is made of unglazed china and provided with a sort of dorsal lump for holding in the hand and has the rubbing surface slightly undulated, not to say ridged. The stone is white, and even when used on recently washed skin it soon becomes darkened, showing that it squeezes a good deal of material from the pores.—London Letter.

GENESIS OF THE STEAMBOAT.

Ancient Craft That Foreshadowed the Modern Greyhounds of the Sea.

The first steamboat was built by Dennis Papin, who navigated it safely down the Fulda as long ago as 1707. Unfortunately this pioneer craft was destroyed by jealous sailors, and even the very memory of it was lost for three-quarters of a century. In 1775 Perrier, another Frenchman, built an experimental steam vessel at Paris. Eight years later, in 1783, Jouffroy took up the idea that had been evolved by Papin and Perrier and built a steamer, which did good service for some time on the Saone.

The first American to attempt to apply steam to navigation was John Fitch, a Connecticut mechanic, who made his initial experiments in the year 1785. To what extent Fitch was indebted to the three illustrious French inventors named above we are not informed, but that his models were original there is not the least doubt. In the first he employed a large pipe kettle for generating the steam, the motive power being side paddles worked after the fashion of oars on a common rowboat. In the second Fitch craft the same mode of propulsion was adopted with the exception that the paddles were made to imitate a revolving wheel and were fixed to the stern—clearly foreshadowing the present sternwheeler.

This last mentioned boat was the first American steam vessel that can be pronounced a success. It made its first trip to Burlington in July, 1788. But, after all, it was not until after the opening of the present century that steam navigation started into actual life. In 1807 Robert Fulton (who every school child knows was an American), in conjunction with one Robert R. Livingston, built the Clermont, and established a regular packet service between New York and Albany.

The success of this undertaking was so satisfactory that four new boats were built before the end of 1811, at least two of them being designed for service in other rivers.—St. Louis Republic.

The Man In the Iron Mask.

A letter to Louvois by Louis XIV, written in cipher, has been long in the rchives of the ministry of war and has length been deciphered. In it the ıg orders Louvois to arrest General Burlonde for having raised the siege Conti without permission, to send to Pignerol and to conceal his ures under a loup, or black velvet k. The order was executed, and the sumption is therefore violent that the ian In the Iron Mask"—it was a black vet one with iron springs—was Genıl de Burlonde. The story tallies with e known fact that the prisoner made peated attempts to communicate his name to soldiers; that he was treated with respect by his military jailers, and that Louis XV, who knew the truth of the whole affair, declared it to be a matter of no importance. The difficulty is to discover the king's motive for such a precaution, but he may have feared discontent among his great officers or the soldiery. It must, however, be possible to discover from the lists in the war office whether General de Burlonde was recorded as "missing" or "dead" about the right time.—Saturday Review.

Tricks In All Trades.

The young doctor was sitting in his consultation room chatting with a friend when some one entered the outer office. He stepped out, and the friend heard him say:

"Pray take a seat. I'll be at liberty in a few minutes."

Then he came back into the consultation room and closed the door after him.

"I'll skip," said the friend.

"Not for the world. Sit down," said the doctor.

"But you have a patient waiting."

"Well, it's a woman. Let her wait about 15 minutes."

"You may lose her business."

"On the contrary, I'll get it regularly. I always make them wait."

"Why?"

"To give the impression of a rush of business. It is the only way to keep a woman. If she thought I wasn't rushed to death, she'd lose confidence in me and go somewhere else."—Chicago Record.

A Cabman's Revenge.

A good story is told of a stipendiary magistrate in a Yorkshire town, not given to err on the side of leniency, who heavily fined a cabman for fast driving. A few days after the magistrate, detained rather longer than usual in the court, was hurrying along to catch his train when, seeing an empty cab handy, he hailed the driver and directed him to proceed to the station, telling him that he was pressed for time. The driver, however, heedless of the hint, kept to a gentle trot. "I say, I say, my man," exclaimed the fare, with his head out of the window, "drive faster than this!" "It can't be done, sir," replied the driver. "Ye see, if we drives faster we're had up afore the 'beak,' and we gets fined, so we has to be careful." He did not alter his pace, and neither did the "beak" catch his train.—London Tit-Bits.

Women Usurers.

Women are, as we know, invading most trades and professions, but it is interesting, says the London Lady, and not a little startling to learn that they have even taken to the doubtful one of usury. "You would hardly credit," said a well known solicitor recently, "what a huge number of women money lenders there are about." Many of them have small private connections only, obliging feminine friends or acquaintances pressed for the amount of some dressmaker's or milliner's bill with temporary loans at interest. But there are others who go in for it extensively—advertise, and, in fact, make quite a handsome income out of it.

Port Angeles is situated upon the straits of San Juan De Fuca, Clallam county, in the north-western portion of the state of washington, and was reserved as a government townsite in 1863 by order of President Lincoln. The sale of the unsold portion of said townsite was provided for by act of Congress of March 3d, 1891, 26 stat, 879, and August 5, 1893, 27 stat. 360, and said portion comprises thirty-one hundred and forty seven and 31-100 acres surveyed into 7008 urban and suburban lots and parcels. The majority of the urban lots are fifty by one hundred-forty feet in size, while the suburban lots contain an average of eight and one half acres. The foregoing to be accompanied by proof of the publication required. Notice is futher given that the aforesaid proof must be made in time to be forwarded to, and passed upon by the local officers at Seattle prior to the day of public sale. THE POLISH FOWLS.

A Peculiarity of Their Crests—Mating These Birds—The Silver Polish.

The Silver Polish is the exact counterpart of the Golden variety in size, markings, crest, beard, etc., with the exception of the ground color. This should be, as the name indicates, a clear silvery white. A peculiarity of the crests in both the Golden and Silver varieties is that while in the pullets the feathers are black laced with the ground color, in hens, after the first moult, the feathers are of the ground color laced with black.

In mating this variety the same rules are to be followed as in mating the Golden Polish, because the same properties are to be obtained—large, well developed and finely formed crests, good heavy beards, exact and regular markings and a clear, pure, even ground color.

It is a curious fact that very beautiful clear colored Silver Polish may be bred from Silver hens mated to a Golden cock. Mr. I. K. Felch, authority in such matters, makes the following interesting statement: "Many are not aware of the fact that to place a pair of these birds on exhibition to match in a general observation of color and to appear alike the female will be spangled with full, and black spots, while the male will be d with black. A male with spangled ge looks very light in color as com- to a female of like plumage."

Poultry Yard, commenting on the g, says: "While this may be should hardly advocate such a or exhibition and certainly not ing. We are most thoroughly d that the even appearance in not of so much importance as rm character of the markings, e 'birds not matching in the n' is not a disqualification for ish, as it is for some other breeds, uld regard a pair of birds, one of was laced and the other spangled, no matter how well they matched, so far as respects a superficial view, as not matched at all. If we are to have spangled birds, let us have them spangled, and if laced, let us have them laced, and not only one, but both of a pair. In no other way can we secure a definite and permanent character of the markings."

The Silver Polish chick when first hatched is of a smudgy gray color, and as in the case of the Golden variety the darker chicks make usually the best laced fowls. The little chicks give from their birth, therefore, strong indications of what they will be when matured, and one who should select the dark ones with a large protuberance upon the skull, covering nearly the whole of the head, in nine cases out of ten would secure the finest exhibition birds.

How Water Gets Into Tile.

Professor J. M. Bloss of the Ontario State college gives, in a recent lecture on tile draining, some true and some false theories. He claims that water does not come through the tops of tile, but from the bottom, where the ends come together. In noting the foregoing American Cultivator says:

This is generally true, though in a severe rainstorm, when the soil is drenched with water, some of it is washed through the cracks overhead, and to guard against this coarse gravel ought to cover these joints so as to hold the fine silt that will otherwise spoil the drain. But some water may and does soak through the tile when the ground is saturated, and in denying this the professor is in the wrong. He says that porous tile ought not to be used, arguing that it will dissolve by action of water. It will do so if frost gets to it, otherwise not. If the ground is firm, it is better to lay horseshoe tile than sole tile. In that case nearly all the water will rise up into the channel from beneath.

The authority quoted has often laid horseshoe tile in soil where there were occasional springs in the bottom of the drain. It is best in such cases to lay long, flat stones on either side of the drain, wide enough for the tile to rest on, and long enough to reach past the spring to firm soil on either side. Drains thus laid 40 years ago are doing good service, only showing action of frost at the outlets, where the water in the porous tile sometimes froze in very cold weather. Glazed tile is needlessly expensive and does not drain so well as tile that is porous. Glazed pipe, with tight joints at the ends, is used for city sewers, but such pipes are no good for draining land of the surplus water that fills it.

The Grading of Honey.

Beekeepers evidently vary in their ideas of how many grades of honey are required. Judging from expressions made in The American Bee Journal on the subject, 7 out of 24 were in favor of three grades. Several wanted but two grades, and one wanted four grades.

G. W. Demaree expressed himself as follows: "I have but two grades—light colored and dark colored. This means honey gathered in the clover season, which gives us white honey; and honey gathered in the fall from the asters, etc., which gives us dark honey. I protest against any further classification. It is wonder to me that those restless individuals who clamor for classification of honey have failed to see that too much 'grading' has put the producers of agricultural products at the tender mercies of the sharpers."

ONWARD.

Sometimes when the growing darkness,
At the close of day,
To the stress of daily labor
Brings a moment's stay,

All at once the mind will wander
Back to other years,
See as in a panorama,
Youthful hopes and fears.

Once again upon the threshold
Of our life we stand
And discern the future glowing
Like the promised land,

And the hopes of early manhood
Putting forth their leaf,
Green as are the leaves in springtime,
And their life as brief.

With a pang do we remember
That we meant to be
In the battlefield a hero,
Crowned with victory;

But, discredited and beaten
Have been forced to yield,
Or at best are barely able
Still to keep the field.

On our brow no crown of laurel
Tells of victory won;
Not for us the song of triumph,
When the day is done.

Other men have reaped the harvest
That we thought to reap;
Other men have gained the summit
Of the mountain steep.

And our hearts are bowed with sorrow,
Gazing on that scene,
For a moment as we picture
All that might have been.

For a moment! Then our manhood
Puts the sorrow by,
Crushes down again the heart throb,
Quells the rising sigh.

And once more we set our faces
Sternly toward the front,
Brace again our nerves and sinews
For the battle's brunt.

Onward! With success or failure
We have naught to do.
Ours to do our duty nobly
All life's journey through.

And, although success would cheer us
As we onward plod,
We can bear the doom of failure,
By the help of God.

—Good Words.

IN SOBER ROBES.

There she was, untidy as usual, lounging on the steps of West House, with her plump hands folded in her lap, her cap strings undone, her cape rakishly awry, her gray hair shamelessly rumpled. It was 7 o'clock, and the lowering sun had tinged the western sky with an edge of faded brown. Frogs were calling, and a faint, intermittent tinkle of cowbells stole over the rolling pasture lands beyond the Shaker village.

Big and barren in the silvery half dusk the Shaker dwellings rose upon a background of pale skies and green fields. Everything looked stolid and blank. The meeting house, austerely plain, the sturdy houses, shops and barns, the very flower beds in the yard of West House, suggested an undeviating rigor of aim. And in the midst of it all, a very incarnation of cheerful laxity, sat Sister Huldah, with her pulpy, unascetic figure and broad, babyish old face.

Behind her a long vista of hallway ran straight and smooth through the center of West House. Now and then a woman in Shaker garb, plain and prim, went in staid steps across the painted floor to the sitting room at the farther end of the passage. It was the hour of the evening gathering, but old Huldah, squatting comfortably on the back door step, had forgotten about everything except the tranquil aspects of the twilight hours.

A man with longish silver hair under his flat hat came up the path.

"Good evening to you, sister," he said in a curiously soft, womanish voice. "You're not overlooking the hour of gathering, are you? Our new elderess is particular about having the family prompt." His accent was one of kindly warning, and Huldah started.

"Law, well!" she sighed. "I let it slip my mind, so I did! 'Tain't easy fer me to git into new ways of doin, Bro' Henry. We never heard of no gathering hour in Elderess Jane's time. I ain't passing a word agin Elderess Lucia. She aims to do right, but she's from up no'th, and she's young and upheaded, and—well, I reckon it's fer the best, but I ain't felt to home here since Jane died.

"She was a Kentucky woman, so she was, and she understood how 't a person might hev the love of Ann in 'em and yit disremember to tie their cap strings. No, Bro' Henry. I know 't the new elderess hes my good at heart. I know I'm keerless to my own ondoin, but I jest can't seem to git ahead of them cap strings! Look like I was born thrif'less. I was always a-breaking things and tearing my clo'es and gittin into mud holes as a child, and being a Shaker fer 40 years ain't took it out'n my blood." She sighed deeply, but the expression on her mild face was one of genial resignation rather than hopeless grief.

Brother Henry sighed too. The new elderess, though a holy woman engaged in laying great bases for eternity, had short shrift for human weaknesses.

"She has great gifts," mournfully conceded the old man. He went up the steps with the stiff accuracy of a pair of compasses and entered the house.

A tall, slight young woman was coming down the hall. Her very shadow on the yellow floor had a look of severity. She was young, with a pale, beautiful face. The thin lines of her lips held something that was in harmony with the cold glance of her dark eyes, and she walked with a certain determined gait, as if each step were set to an exact measurement. She advanced to the door and looked out on the quiet garden, the fading sky, the rising stars and the slouching old figure on the steps. "Sister Huldah," she said.

Huldah's shoulders twitched. She lumbered hastily to her feet.

"I was jest laying off to come in," she advanced in a conciliating tone as she stood, broad and awkward, fumbling at her cap strings. "Look like I kind of lost myse'f a-setting here listening at the frawgs holler. Down in Lincoln county, where I was raised, the frawgs they used to start in of a night"——

"Huldah," remarked the elderess coldly, "there are cherry stains on your hands, and your skirt has a zigzag rent in the side breadth. Your hair is in a sad state. It is painful to me to keep speaking to you about your careless habits. You are very remiss. The youth of this house do not find you a good example. Nothing that you do is well done." She paused and then added, "I fear that it will be my duty, unless you mend your ways, to reprimand you publicly before the assembled family."

Huldah looked amiably remorseful. "I know I ain't worthy of my high callin as a follower of Ann," she said.

"No, Huldah, you are not," agreed the other, a little nettled at this easy contrition. "Ordinary reproof does not reach you. But if it is necessary I shall resort to other means." She regarded with level eyes the figure before her. "I shall send you away," she said. "I shall send you permanently to a northern community." There was no particular menace in Lucia's voice. She stood with her hands folded, looking far away toward the darkening horizon. "I shall feel it my duty," she resumed, and then very suddenly she stopped.

A look of vague horror had flashed into old Huldah's eyes. She stared blankly at the slight, stern figure in the doorway. "You'd might as well kill me," she panted, stretching out a shaking hand. "I'd as lief die as go out'n Kentucky. I was born and raised here. I run barefoot through its grass and waded in its creeks and climbed around its hills. I—I couldn't dror breath no other place. My folks is moljering onder Kentucky sod, and my own bones'd never lay still with any other sile atop of 'em. Oh, elderess! You—you ain't no human nature in you! You're hard as the flints in them hills yonder."

Lucia drew herself up. She was a little amazed at Huldah's heat of utterence, for in the elderess' three months of ministration in West House the old sister had never before exhibited anything like so much feeling. Lucia, after her first sense of surprise, was conscious of being rather pleased to have struck thus by chance upon a means of holding her thriftless sister in check.

"I have the welfare of the family at heart," she said. "Unless I see some change in you, Huldah, I shall send you next week to Ohio with Deacon Henry when he returns to his village."

Huldah gave a strange little laugh.

"Change!" she cried out. "Kin them critters as hes hoofs larn to fly? I'd quit being lazy and triflin if I knowed how. But I came of easy goin stock. I got shif'less blood in me, I reckon. But I ruther die in Kentucky than live in Ohio." She lumbered heavily up the steps, and the young elderess watched her pass the house.

Lucia had a feeling of uncertainty. She had come to this village from a well ordered settlement in another region, and she cherished a praiseworthy design of lifting the Kentucky community to a level with more austerely conducted settlements. Her predecessor, Elderess Jane, had tempered justice with more mercy than Lucia believed well, and under her rule West House had worn a cheerful air of home and creature comforts.

There were red curtains in the sitting room windows and crochet tidies on the sitting room chairs. These worldly decorations Lucia at once removed as abominations conducive to low, fleshly ideals. She had a rigorous conception of the millennial idea, had Elderess Lucia, and the mild old Shakers of West House found themselves suddenly and violently elevated to a higher and sadder life.

"We will proceed with our doctrinal talk," said Lucia, entering the sitting room after her rebuke to Huldah. "Sister Huldah has gone to her room. We will excuse her tonight."

The next morning, however, she repented of this leniency, for when the family filed in to breakfast at 6 o'clock Huldah was not in line, and the elderess had a vision of her lying comfortably abed, forgetful of precepts and warnings. She prepared to be very stern with the irresponsible old soul, but when she went up stairs to pour incensed admonition upon Huldah's head, she discovered the surprising fact that Huldah was not in her little room. The place looked tidy with its high bed, scrap of a stove and dimity sash shade. But Huldah seemed to have gone, and when the elderess looked she found that Huldah's two print frocks and linsey petticoats and long Shaker bonnet were also gone.

Lucia had a sensation of unpleasantness. It did not sit well with her conscience to think that she had driven the old sister away. She sought to convey some assurance to Huldah, but no one seemed able to suggest, as to her whereabouts, anything more definite than that she had likely gone to "her kin down yender in Lincoln." Lucia accepted with a sense of self reproof the theory that Huldah had gone out into the world in a mood of resentment. Others had left the community in various moods of revolt against the new elderess' high handed methods. Commonly they came back properly subdued by the coldness of the world. No doubt Huldah would also return, and when she did so, Lucia determined upon treating her a little less sternly.

But though she fixed upon this considerate usage she found no chance for practicing it, for weeks passed on, and no word came of old Huldah. Summer doffed its green garments for coats of russet. In West House yard the cherry trees spread against the paling skies, and up the Shaker roads and around the stolid houses wintry winds swept cold and snow came early that year, folding in white the trim garden spaces. A cold winter set in. The preserving kitchens were shut and deserted, and the Shaker women, gathering of afternoons about their little heart shaped stoves, sewed carpet rags and wove mats and guilelessly stuffed emery bags with thistledown.

They sat at their tasks more quietly than had been their wont under the placid regime of Elderess Jane. Gossip was frowned on by the new elderess, who, by way of furnishing her household light entertainment, read to them while they worked from moldy records of the spiritual experiences of early followers of Ann Lee.

One day in Janu[illegible] they sat and listened, a knock sounded at the sitting room door. A lank fellow, bundled in a wool scarf, stood on the threshold.

"Howdy," he said, amiably nodding at Lucia, who looked up with calm, dark eyes and smooth, soft lips which silently questioned the intruder.

"You're the new elderess, I reckon," premised the man. "I used to know Sister Jane right well. I'm the tollgate man. I was jest goin on to Harrodsburg, and I laid off to stop in and tell you some one's livin in the old log house down on the river. I knowed it was Shaker property, and I jedged you'd want to know. M' wife she see smoke comin from the chimney, and she hed me climb up the bank to see who was living there. I couldn't raise no one. But m' wife she says she see a woman sneak thoo the bushes up there with a passel of fagots. I didn't know but you'd want to hear if any one was livin in one of your houses and a-stealin your timber. Me and m' wife we're always glad to do the Shakers a good turn."

One of the Shaker women uttered an exclamation: "Law me! who ever hes to lie in that old crib must be poorly off! It ain't fit for firewood and half a mile from a livin critter! I wonder who—Why, law me! it couldn't be old Huldah?"

Lucia started. "She went to her people," she said sharply. And then, suddenly enough, she said to the tollgate man: "Will you take me to the place? Some one there may need help. Sister Rose, tell Abram to hitch up."

The spring wagon, however, could go only the less part of the way. At the turn to the ferry the tollgate man tied and blanketed the horse. Then he proceeded up a rocky break in the cliff side, and Lucia toiled after him through murmuring pines and between jagged stones, which nibbled hungrily through their slight covering of snow.

In the midst of leafless trees an old house presently disclosed a black and tumbling roof. At one side of the bleached log walls a massive chimney rose in a broken, hoary heap. Faintly from its mouth came a dying breath of smoke, but there was no other sign of occupancy, not even so much as a footprint in the slight snow about the door.

Lucia laid her knuckles against the rude panels. There was no response. The single window was boarded up, but as Lucia peered through a crack in the planks she caught a glimpse of a garment hanging across the panes—a garment of brown print at the pattern of which her heart twitched.

"Try the door," she said breathlessly. "Push it in!" There was a crack and a sharp cry as the tollgate man set his shoulder against the rotting panels. He caught himself by the jamb and stood peering in. It was nearly dark in the bare, puncheon floored room, except that now and then a tongue of flame thrust itself from a smoldering handful of twigs on the hearth. Against the farthest wall a woman crouched, a woman who at sight of Lucia struck out two bony hands and moaned and gazed blankly.

"Don't touch me," she said hoarsely. "I won't go! I won't! I've hid away here and prayed you'd never find me"——

"Huldah!" broke in the elderess passionately, "don't look at me so! I've come to take you home, Huldah—home to West House. Listen, Huldah! I've been hard and cruel, but I'll never pain you again."

The old woman seemed not to hear. She gazed round at the cracked walls, the pallet of brush, the darkened window.

"I ain't no trouble to no one," she muttered. "I've starved and froze and all. I've heard the owls hoot at night and ben skeered, and I ben lonesome and sick, but I was home, and I could 'a' gone on if Ann would 'a' heard my prayers. But she ain't listened. She's turned agin me. She give me into your hand."

Lucia had cast herself on the rough floor and was clasping Huldah's knees.

"You are killing me, Huldah," she wept. "I have sinned against you and against all those whose lives I have made cold and hard. I meant to do right, but I was vain and wicked. Huldah! Huldah! do not forgive me. I do not ask it. I do not deserve it. Only come home with me and let me serve you as a daughter who has erred may serve the mother who pities her."

The tollgate man rubbed his nose with the end of his red scarf and wheeled away. Huldah stood gazing confusedly down on the kneeling slender figure, with its wringing hands and beautiful pale face and streaming eyes.

"Be you'ns a-cryin?" she stammered. "I 'lowed you was a flint. And kneeling to me! Elderess Lucia—don't ye, don't ye! Sit up, Elderess Lucia!"

But Lucia clasped her the closer.

"Not till you promise to come with me," she sobbed. "Not till you promise not to hate me as I deserve."

Huldah drew a quick breath. Her hand trembled down upon the young woman's black, soft hair.

"Hate you?" she breathed. "Why, I'll go—now—wherever you take me—or send me!"—Harper's Bazar.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Portland, Oregon, September 26, 1892.

Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Years of exposure and hard work, combined with the strain coming from the pair of an engine, gave me a severe case of lame back, from which I suffered for seven years. I was so bad that I could not bend my back. Was all doubled up with it. I bought one of your belts. It helped me in ide of two days, and I continued to wear it for four months, being perfectly cured. That was two years ago, and I am as well today as I ever was in my life. I know your belt well, and know lots of people who have been cured by it. Many others need it, and if they would try it they would find it the same as I did—the best remedy in the world. I am located here permanently, and will be glad to talk with any one who wants to inquire about it.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarrun, Bastrop, Tex.
