The mayor reported that he understood there was $276 in improvement district No. 1, which the city attorney had advised could be transferred; further that the electric light fund contained a balance of $50. These two amounts would pay two months' demands of machinery company in former proposition. The resolution carried.

Claim of Dell Church, lineman, Dec., $28, allowed.

The party gathered at the home of Mrs. P. J. Williams and at 8:15 marched in a body to Mrs. Barr's home and completely surprised her. Whist and music were the principal features of entertainment, Mr. Barr playing a number of fine selections on his immense phonograph. Mr. John Gutenberg also rendered a few selections on the violin. A bounteous supper was spread and much enjoyed by all. Following are the names of those who were present:

Commissioner Christopher Challenged by a Shuwah Mossback.

D. A. Christopher, Esq.

Sir.—I am somewhat disappointed in not getting an answer to my letter of January 3.

I asked you then how you knew my son was worthless on the road. There is work my son and I performed by ourselves last summer—I can prove what time it took us—and I am not afraid to have it judged by any practical workingman.

Another instance he sawed nine cuts off a log four feet in diameter, which I think is more than you can do in an 8-hour day, even with Smith as assistant.

Now, Mr. Christopher, I challenge you to prove your statement in your "Christmas greeting" or stay as a liar.

N. H. TANGGARD.

Shuwah, Jan. 24.

Attorney Ritchie removed today to the offices over the former location of THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER on Laurel street.

To Start up Next Week

Stone Quarry Machinery in Place And Sawing Will Begin at Once

One of Port Angeles' substantial industries will begin active operations next week, and the event will in all probability work a new era of prosperity for the city. The new machinery, just put in place, will be started up on trial Monday and during the week Manager Barnett confidently expects to have the saws at work cutting stone. A large contract covering several months' operation is already in view.

Soundings were also taken this week for a definite knowledge of conditions on the water front, preparatory to constructing the big docks for the shipment of the products of the quarry and for yard purposes.

Long life and prosperity to this most legitimate and promising industry.

Horticultural Society Meeting

The Clallam County Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting in the opera house this Saturday at 1:30 p. m. for the election of officers. Other proceedings of interest to growers of fruits, flowers and vegetables will be had. All are invited.

Nettie the News Girl.

One of the most important engagements of the year, not from a standpoint of theatrical effect, but from popular interest, will be the coming of dainty Wanda Ludlow and her excellent company on next Monday night at the opera house.

She will produce "Nettie, the News Girl," a story of life in New York. The character is claimed to be a reproduction of what is to be seen on the east side of New York city every day in the year, the extreme being carefully avoided and only that which is best and noblest in the deliniation allowed to creep in within the lines of the situation. How I Entered the Detective Field

[Original.]

The way I got into the detective business was this: One morning I took up a paper and read that John Mulholland, a farmer living on the Arlington road, had been found dead with a bullet in his heart. There was no clew to the murderer. I was out of a job at the time and made up my mind that I would test my natural bent for detective work by trying to unravel what appeared to be an insoluble problem. I went to the house and found the doctors engaged in extracting the bullet from the dead man's heart. I asked to see it and was permitted to do so. My reason for wishing to examine it was that I had always heard that every minutia in detective cases was important. The truth is I was green and didn't know how else to begin.

The bullet was of the usual conical shape. I looked it all over and noticed places where it had been rubbed or scratched. There were three of these marks, two near together, a third on the opposite side. It struck me that there had been some projection in the barrel of the pistol that had caused these scratches. If I could find the pistol that would make similar scratches on other bullets fired from it I could identify it as the weapon with which Mulholland had been killed. But no weapon had been found near the body. Stories about murderers leaving knives sticking in their victims or dropping pistols in their haste to get away are inventions. Murderers do a lot of things to incriminate themselves, but they're not so stupid as that.

I secured an interview with the murdered man's wife and asked her to tell me about every one that had had any connection with her husband during a year or so past. He had had trouble with the owner of an adjoining farm about the boundary. A tramp had been turned out of the barn a few days before the murder and had gone off muttering curses. A farm hand had been discharged, but an interval of three months had elapsed since the discharge; besides, the man had made no demonstration at the time.

Of the three my suspicions were for the tramp. I hadn't the means of scouring the country for him, so I went to the police and recommended them to do so. The tramp was hunted down and arrested. He had no pistol on him, but he had a pawn ticket. The pawnbroker where it was issued produced a silver watch that it stood for of little value. After the police had dropped the scent I went to the pawnbroker, hoping to elicit some clew. While we were chatting I stood leaning on a glass case containing pawned articles. Among them I noticed a pistol. It was a cheap, old fashioned article worth a few dollars. Something moved me to ask the broker who had pawned it. He said that the man was a negro. I asked the broker to let me look at the weapon, and he handed it to me. Taking it to a window where the sun was shining in, I looked into the barrel. Near the muzzle I noticed some spots of rust. There were two near together and one opposite.

Noting the caliber, I went out and got some cartridges to fit the pistol and, going into the back yard with it, fired a bullet into a barrel of water. When I examined the lead I found scratches on it exactly like those on the bullet that killed Mulholland. I fired several more bullets, and every one was marked exactly like the first.

Without saying a word to any one, I went to Mrs. Mulholland and asked her if her husband had ever had any trouble with a negro. At first she answered "No," but presently remembered that three years before a negro had stolen some clothing and Mulholland had been instrumental in sending him to the penitentiary. The negro was an ugly fellow, with a bad record. I hunted up his case and found that his time had expired and he had been released a few days before the murder.

At this point I made a grave mistake. I was not willing to give the police the benefit of my discovery, so I traced the negro myself and found him in a low negro dive. I swore out a warrant, had him arrested and in his pocket found a pawn ticket for the pistol I had discovered.

I then made out the papers accusing the prisoner of the murder of John Mulholland. The police, who had in the first place resented my interference, treated me with withering contempt.

"Young feller," said the chief, "when you've been mixed up with criminals as long as I have you'll learn that it's one thing to suspect a man or even to know he's the one you want and another to prove it. It's just such men as you that cost the state money spent uselessly."

I made no reply, biding my time. When the trial came off the prosecuting attorney was well posted by me on the case and demonstrated before the jury what I had discovered in the pawnbroker's back yard. He showed them the bullet that had killed Mulholland, then took a cartridge and fired it into a barrel of water. The bullet coming out marked as the one he had shown them, he fired another and another till they were perfectly satisfied.

One would think that to be the end of my story, but it isn't. The chief of police, not willing that an amateur should accomplish what he couldn't do himself, connived with the lawyer appointed by the state to defend the prisoner to prove an alibi. Witnesses swore that on the night of the murder they were with the prisoner a hundred miles away from Mulholland's farm. The man was acquitted.

I went off to a distant city and became a detective, but that's the only case I ever worked without keeping in with the police.

THE President's term in his own right will begin at noon on the 4th of March next. He will be no longer under the sacred behest of carrying out the policy of McKinley, whatever that policy may have been. But if his edge has not been dulled by the routine and humdrum of office the country may expect the liveliest administration in its history.

Great Schools In Great Cities.

President Butler of Columbia university recently expressed in public the opinion that "there can be no university in the modern sense save in a great city." This is but an echo of the ideas of his predecessor, the Hon. Seth Low. Mr. Low contended that the university student should study human nature by close contact and that the great, busy, rushing city is the best point of vantage for the purpose. The truth is that the presidents of Columbia are on the defensive and must present some claims for their institution planted in a village 150 years ago and now in the heart of a modern Babylon. A city university will have its special atmosphere and character, but it is yet to be proved that only in a city can there exist a really great educational institution. In fact, the distractions of cities are held to be a detriment to student life. Some of the greatest universities of Europe are in towns or cities of moderate size, like our own Cornell, Yale and Princeton. These are all growing great in "the modern sense."

The coach of the Harvard eleven recently announced that only one of his men had come through the season without injury of some sort. A Chicago newspaper which has been keeping close watch upon the football field throughout the country reports a total of fourteen deaths from the game in the past season and injuries as follows:

Collar bone broken, 24; shoulder dislocated, 21; leg broken, 17; rib broken, 18; nose broken, 16; arm fractured, 11; hand broken, 4; skull fractured, 3; knee dislocated, 4; concussion of spine, 6; internal injuries, 5; concussion of brain, 4; hip dislocated, 2; foot broken, 3; shoulder broken, 2; ankle broken, 2; unclassified, 154. Total, 296.

A more open style of play than now prevails would undoubtedly decrease the casualty list as well as add to the interest of the game.

Clallam Record.

Work has been resumed on the Burnt Mountain bridge which had been stopped during the late snowfall.

Frank Warminski returned home a few days ago from Seattle. His sisters have also arrived home from Seattle.

Louis Parrott, the Meab Bay telegraph operator, returned a few days ago from Portland, where he had taken his family on a visit.

M. T. Jones, a late resident of the Quillayute country, is now domiciled at the town of Camp, West Virginia.

E. F. Donahoe, formerly of East Clallam, arrived here from Elma on a business trip. He has a dairy near Elma, Chehalis county, stocked with 45 cows.

Captain Duffy, the mate of the Alice Gertrude, was a victim of Seattle highwaymen one night this week. Going to the steamer at a late hour he was held up at the point of a gun by a desperate thief and robbed of two empty pocketbooks. The robber evidently took Mr. Duffy for a Clallam county capitalist.

One of the Warminski boys of Shuwah has lately discovered that the homestead he has been living on and improving for the past six years was fraudulently relinquished by some individual representing himself to be Warminski and then filed upon by another: The place is not yet proved up on, and no great harm has been done, but the land office is now on the track of the fraudulent claimant and will have him prosecuted as soon as they get him.

"Nettie, the News Girl."

There are so many plays on the road that style themselves dramas that it is really refreshing when one of exceptional merit presents itself. In "Nettie, the News Girl" is promised a play that stands in the latter class. It is full of pathos, comedy and sensation artistically interwoven. For heart throbs and smiles there has never been a play more cleverly written. The lines are bright, the comedy sparkling and the situations exciting and novel. Messrs. Gould and Freed have spared no expense in the presentotion of this play, and have surrounded themselves with a cast of exceptional strength and mounted the play with special scenery and accessions.

Happiness must be founded on health. Where there is ill-health there will surely be unhappiness. The happiness of many a home has received its downfall at the table, spread with rich and dainty foods. The first symptoms of disease of the stomach are ignored as being disagreeable but not dangerous. Presently dyspepsia or some other form of disease fastens on the stomach.

At any stage Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. But the cure is quicker if the "Discovery" is used in the earlier stages of disease. If you have any symptoms of diseased stomach use "Golden Medical Discovery" and be cured.

"I feel that I would be doing an injustice to you if I did not send you a statement of my case," writes Mrs. David W. Guice, of Hamburg, Franklin Co., Miss. "I had liver complaint and indigestion. Everything that I ate disagreed with me. I suffered all the time with swimming in my head; heart beat too fast; my feet and hands were cold all the time. Did not sleep well at all. Was able to get about but very little. I commenced to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' in May, 1897, and by December I could begin to get about very well. Have been doing my work ever since. Feel better than I have for several years."

another debt that is not absolutely necessary with economical administration. There is no justification for the attempt of some to discount current expense fund warrants.

ANOTHER new paper, eclipsing its recently appearing contemporary, all things considered, was launched on the sea of journalism last Saturday, facsimile of which may be reproduced later with the consent of the editor and manager. The new paper, which covers a field all its own, is bright, newsy and strikingly original, and is edited and managed by two bright young men of a successful journalistic family. We wish the young men success.

DIRECT PRIMARY LAW.

Probably one of the most important acts the state legislature now in session will be called upon to pass or reject is the direct primary law, giving the people of each party (presumably) the power to directly select the candidates that are to be placed on the official ballots. It is claimed for this law that it will do away with ring jobbery and convention combinations.

Minnesota, Wisconsin and Oregon have such a law applying to county and city officers, and Gov. Van Zant of Minnesota in his last message recommended passage of a bill applying the law to U. S. senators and state officers. Governors Yates and Deneen of Illinois and Gov. Toole of Montana recommend such a law.

As far as is known the law is proving very satisfactory in states where it is adopted, and good government seems to travel in its wake. It certainly can't be worse than the present system.

IN talking to Republicans generolly it is almost impossible to find any outside the Aldwell-Carrigan combination that express a preference for John L. Wilson for U. S. senator. And we challenge the Tribune-Times to name 50 representative citizens of this county that would prefer Wilson to Foster. It is a well known fact that Mr. Aldwell forced Mr. Palmer out of the race for the nomination of representative, because he would not tie himself up to vote for Wilson. In lieu Mr. Palmer was promised the commissionership, the nomination for state senator two years hence, and the chairmanship of the Republican central committee —Mr. Palmer got left on the commissionership and we predict the same fate for him for state senator, if he has any idea of waiting for this. Mr. Dyke was willing to be Mr. Aldwell's tool, and for three months before the nomination Mr. Aldwell spent his entire time writing letters to voters and electioneering on our streets, button-holing everybody in the interest of Mr. Dyke, and all the time drawing his salary from the U. S. government. Clallam county has been betrayed. All during the campaign Mr. Aldwell denied emphatically that Dyke was pledged to Wilson, and Dyke gave Senator Foster to understand that he was his man. (Perhaps this is one of the things the T.-T. does not know.) Mr. Dyke has been casting his vote so far for Wilson, which proves conclusively that he is voting as the ring wants him to. We don't think there is any show for the perennial candidate running the P.-I. of getting the coveted plum, and we predict that before many more votes are taken for senator that Dyke will jump the traces and scramble to get into the band-wagon. Mr. Dyke is looking for a snap of a position, and we don't think he is going to stick to a forlorn hope.

PORT TOWNSEND'S customs house is now in real danger.

GUESS we want a more highly flavored taste of the Seattle spirit We'll get it ! ! ! !

AFTER all it availeth the gang nothing. Piles owes Wilson no favor and will give none.

THE west side of the sound can and must sincerely regret the election of a Seattle man to succeed Senator Foster.

THE accounts of the revolt in St. Petersburg these days read like Hall Caine's narrative of Rossi's leadership on the plaza at Rome, given in the "Eternal City."

HARRIMAN has petitioned the supreme court for writ of review in the merger case. If the petition is granted, which seems improbable, the entire case will be gone over by the supreme court of the United States. Harriman alleges that complete restitution of stock should be made rather than pro rata distribution.

THE fact that THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER tells what it knows about Dyke's candidacy, while the Tribune-Times closely guards what it knows on the subject, seems to trouble the latter perceptibly. It says what the D.-L. don't know would make much more interesting reading than what has been told. We don't doubt it in the least, br'er, and since you are so well posted let us hear it.

PORT ANGELES' current finances are not in the best of shape, but careful, economical business management will do wonders during the year, even though relief is not obtained from bond sale. In fact, we are inclined to believe that it is and will be much better for the city not to be able to sell the electric light bonds, for their sale means

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventative of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale by W. J. Mathewson.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS

A WOMAN'S PREFERENCE

[Original.]

I've hunted and trapped and scouted, man and boy, for forty years and been observant o' the queer doin's of different kind o' animals, but I never see nothin' so unsarten as wimmin. There ain't no feller can tell jist what a woman's goin' to do. Any other machine's built up on certain principles and as long as kept in repair will grind things out the same way. Wimmen won't do it. They grind irregular.

One evenin' forty year ago when I was huntin' antelope in the Rockies I was camped in a pass along which wagon trains was comin' on their way to Californy. I see a single wagon lumberin' up the road, and when it come nigh I noticed a woman was drivin'. There was three men with her, and it turned out that they was all workin' fer her. They camped with us, and it wasn't long before we found that the woman was a widder who had got a lot o' money from her husband and was goin' on some sort of a business deal in San Francisco. She was a good lookin' pusson, some'ers about thirty, and it was easy to see that all the men was tryin' to git into her favor—that is, two on 'em was. T'other one, a feller named Sneath, was a measly sort o' chap that didn't seem to care much about her. But I put that down to the fac' that he hadn't got no chance. The feller that I reckoned she'd take, if she took any of 'em, was Nettleton. He was about thirty-five and a thorough man, handsome as a pictur' and brave as a lion. The third man, Jimmie Saunders, was too young for her, bein' only about twenty-two years old.

We all camped together that night and the next mornin' went over the divide together, journeyin' in the same crowd fer a matter of two weeks. There wasn't nothin' to take me with 'em except that the widder, who seemed to have a faculty fer ropin' men into her affections, lassoed me. That made three of us all, elbowin' one another fer the same woman, Nettleton, Saunders and me. Leastaways Saunders and me was elbowin', fer Nettleton was a proud sort of a man and wouldn't put in a claim. Howsomever, the man I was most afeard of was this same Nettleton. He was such a fine lookin', manly chap, and, though he wouldn't stoop to palaver over no woman, he was consid'able polite to the widder, and of all her hands was the most use. But sometimes I thought Saunders would light in ahead of the hull lot of us. He was a lively little chap, and the only rule I've ever been able to apply to wimmen is that when they git along in years they mostly reaches down fer men below 'em.

Well, one evenin' when we was at supper Nettleton, who kep' an eye out fer safety, saw somepin black on the horizon 'twixt him and the settin' sun and knew it was Injuns. You bet we wasn't long in makin' a corral, with the wagon fer one side, a log fer another and throwin' up dirt fer the rest of it. We was rushin' roun' fer things, not mindin' what each other was doin' and didn't notice till we'd got the stock into the corral and was all ready fer the redskins that Sneath was missin'. The mis'able coward, not relishin' a siege, had left us to hold the Injuns while he vamoosed. The worst of it was that he took one of the hosses.

You oughter heered that woman lash him with her tongue. She was so mad that she forgot the Injuns.

The fight ain't got nothin' to do with the story. Nettleton took command and handled us so well that we killed most o' the Injuns and drove off the rest. I see that Nettleton had got the better of me with the widder, and if I didn't do somepin to balance up I'd be left clean out. So as soon as we'd got rid o' the trouble I mounted the best hoss in the team and lit out fer Sneath. I caught him ten mile away and brought him back.

When I rode inter camp with him I was disapp'inted to obsarve that the widder's wrath was cooled. Instead of beratin' him, as I supposed she would, she didn't take no notice of him. I axed her what punishment she thought was best fer him, and she said that she didn't think he was worth punishin'. Consequence is he didn't git no punishment onless the fac' that none of us men would speak to him was sich.

Now, the onsartainty o' wimmen that 'm tryin' to show up by this story is this: As soon as we men showed the old shoulder to Sneath the widder begun to treat him respectable, and it wasn't long before it was plain that he was takin' his part agin us. We put it down to a natural perpensity o' wimmin to sympathize and excuse anybody in trouble, makin' 'em on that account entirely onfitted fer jurymen. So we didn't pertest or anything like that, jist showin' our own contemp' fer Sneath and lettin' her have her own way.

But the worse we sat down on Sneath the more the widder warmed to him, and at last we noticed that they was a good deal together, whisperin', and we begun to suspec' that the widder was goin' to try to help him out and persuade us to stop sittin' down on him.

About this time we went down inter Salt Lake City, and the widder put up at a tavern. The mornin' after we got there Jimmie Saunders come to me, and he says:

"What d'ye suppose has happened?"

"What?" I asked.

"Las' night the widder married Sneath."

And so she had. And that's the reason why I maintain that a woman isn't wound to go regular.
