THE COMING COMMISSIONER OF PENSIONS.

General John C. Black, slated for the commissionership of pensions to succeed Eugene F. Ware, resigned, held the same position under President Cleveland from 1885 to 1889. He has been commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, congressman at large from Illinois and a brigadier general of United States volunteers. He is an eminent lawyer of Chicago and is 65 years of age.

Dry Creek Jottings

George Bohall, who has been manager of the Griggs dairy for the biggest part of the last 12 months, has moved to town with his family with a view of going back to California at an early day. Mr. Griggs himself is running the ranch now.

The people of Indian creek and upper Elwha gave a necktie party a week ago last Saturday. It was not one of the gruesome kind called by that name that the cowboys are credited with indulging in when they caught a horse purloiner. Your correspondent did not have the pleasure of attending, but his right-hand man was there, and he has not tired yet of talking of the good time he had—first on his ride with the Eden Valley "select," then the hospitality of Mrs. Stringham, the fine dance music of Mr. Isabell, the singing of Mr. Bender, the fine lady dancers and last, but not least, the elaborate supper. They evidently know up there how to make their visitors welcome.

Messrs. Sturdevant and Will Pratt moved their donkey last week from east of town to Freshwater, they having the contract to furnish bolts to the Goodwin shingle mill for the next season's run.

The friends of Harley Goodwin got up a surprise party on his birthday last Saturday. They had concluded to celebrate the occasion at his brother Alden's house, as there was more room for dancing in the latter. From the east and the west, the south and the southwest the clans began to gather at an early hour, so that there were thirty-nine well-wishers present, not counting numerous children of half-fare age, when the celebrant arrived, his brother having invited him to come and spend the evening to play a game of cards, which was no josh, neither. By the sweet strains of the violin dancing was soon indulged in and kept up to an early hour, interrupted of course at midnight by a lunch, which all praised for being substantial as well as delicious. If it was not for the fact that Hartley's birthday parties occur each year his friends would not realize that he is nearing fifty, he keeping his young looks in a surprising manner in spite of the hard work that he is constantly occupied at, proving that a clean, honest life will stamp itself on one's features. If more of us were walking in Hartley's footsteps there would be less pain and trouble in this world of ours. This may sound obituary-like, but why should we wait with saying a deserved good thing of our neighbor till we have taken his body to the graveyard? We are always ready to speak of our neighbor's shortcomings, let us practice speaking of their virtues a little more, and thus encourage them to go on in leading a good life.

Mrs. Jennie Eacrett is fast improving in health since she has arrived at Phoenix, Arizona. She writes that she has gained ten pounds the last six weeks and contemplates returning here in the early summer. Her little daughter Marguerite, who had also shown signs of lung troubles, is showing equal signs of improvement.

February goes January one better according to reports. The weather bureau at Crescent gives the coldest day in January as 21 above on the 12th. Friday, Feb. 10th, Cliff Babcock says it registered 18 above at daybreak. Rev. Fulmer's thermometer said 28 above at 10 o'clock.

School Election

Three weeks from today is the annual election of the various school districts, the first Saturday in March.

Port Angeles, as usual will be called upon to choose a director, but the selection can be made without an effort, as we understand Mr. J. E. Beam has already consented to allow the use of his name. There will in all probability be no other candidate.

Mr. Beam has made a most excellent officer, being strictly business-like in every act, and courteous and painstaking in his official capacity. The other members of the board, too, we are advised, are very much desirous of Mr. Beam continuing as their colleague in the thankless position. Let us, therefore, make his election unanimous.

In Society's Realm

Finch-Ware.

Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock Miss Daisy Ware and Mr. Ira Finch, of this city, were united in marriage at the former's home by Rev. Chas. E. Fulmer. Miss Leona Finch, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid, and Milford Eacrett as best man. The bride was attired in blue with white trimmings, and the bridesmaid in tan with trimmings of same. The groom and best man wore the conventional black.

The ceremony took place under an immense bell of evergreens, with a bag of rice for a clapper. The home was also prettily decorated. A sumptuous wedding supper followed the ceremony.

The happy young couple had a home prepared at the corner of 7th and Francis streets, and intended to move in at the departure of the guests, but the guests departed and took possession of the home. The new couple then sought seclusion at the bride's brother's home, but they were hunted up and compelled at a very late hour to proceed to their own domicile, where they are now happily and pleasantly located.

AT last Washington's first governor and hero is to be honored. The legislature is considering a bill to appropriate some $20,000 for a monument in Statuary hall, Washington, to Isaac Ingalls Stevens.

The most important event in Washington during the past week has been the unanimous decision of the supreme court upholding the plea of the government against the beef trust. While the decision of the court was widely heralded, comparatively few persons understand precisely what it amounts to. About a year ago United States District Attorney Bethea, of Chicago, asked from Judge Grosscup an injunction restraining the packers from entering into a mutual agreement fixing the price to be paid for live cattle and that to be charged for the dressed products. The injunction was granted, but the trust fought it in the courts and its legality has now been confirmed by the supreme court. The advantage gained by the government is this: If it can be shown to Judge Grosscup that the packers have violated his injunction he can hale them into court, declare them guilty of contempt of court and sentence them to imprisonment, and there will be no appeal from his sentence.

CURES SCIATICA

Rev. W. L. Riley, L. L. D., Cuba, New York, writes: "After fifteen days of excrutiating pain from sciatic rheumatism, under various treatments, I was induced to try Ballard's Snow Liniment; the first application giving my first relief and the second entire relief. I can give it unqualified recommendation." 26c, 50c, $1. Sold by C. E. Nailor & Co.

DISTRICTING THE STATE.

There seems to be a difference of opinion as to the propriety of dividing the state into three congressional districts. The fact that there are expressions of opinion against the proposition merely shows the very slight respect which some people have for the laws under which they live.

The matter of districting the state is not one of expediency. It is a matter of law. The same act of congress which allowed to the state of Washington three representatives in congress provided that the several states should be divided into congressional districts fairly, so as to give as nearly as possible the same number of people in each district. Washington accepted the opportunity to secure the additional member in congress, but neglected to follow the plain letter of the statute and district the state, and continues to elect three members at large. Complaint has been heard at times of the gerrymandering of congressional districts, thus depriving the minority party of a chance to secure a fair share of the congressional delegation, in states which have a large population and a large representation in congress. No other state in the Union ever carried gerrymandering to the extent that Washington has done, without the shadow of even a political excuse for the action, and and in direct violation of the mandatory provisions of the act of congress.—P.-I.

ROADS.

Now that spring will soon be here, when road work will start in different localities, a system of road building is the crying need of the hour. Some good work has been accomplished, but as a rule it has been performed in a haphazard manner with no object in view. Prior to the last year but little money was available for road construction, but now that nearly every quarter section is paying taxes we should build with a view of a good permanent wagon road. If the m ney that will now pour into the county treasury is used economically with a system of road construction but a few years will elapse before we will have a good wagon road on all the principal thoroughfares. In starting work the bad places should be repaired first, a wagon road built, and be sure the work is done in the right location; sure the work is done on the shortest route and best grade, where it will be in ten years and where it will be a hundred years from now. By building in sections' length, to be determined by county commissioners, and money in hand, but a few years would be required to connect sections, when the road would be complete. The best road in my opinion to build is a gravel road if possible, road bed made in form of turnpike, with a good ditch on upper side of road to catch all surface water, and culverts across road in low places, as good drainage is one of the chief requisites. If turnpike is made in spring or early summer and permitted to settle before gravel is placed on the road, a smaller quantity of gravel would be required. Gravel could be had in nearly all rivers in August and September, and nearly all creeks crossing the road has a quantity of gravel; and if no gravel could be had and cedar handy, puncheon four or five inches thick and at least eight feet long, with good foundation, would last almost a lifetime. Where there is no cedar and but little gravel, green hemlock poles cut six inches in diameter and at least eight feet long, put down and fill all cracks etc. with dirt, but little gravel would be required to make a good wagon road, and one that would last. The kind of road to build should be determined by material available. In the neighborhood of $1.75 per rod would build this road by contract.

Now this is from the standpoint of a west-ender, and only one man's opinion; let us hear from others, whether adversely to this or otherwise, but roads are what we want, and they are now a possibility. The resources of this country are beyond comprehension with roads; without roads they amount to but little. Clallam County has lost many a good settler for the want of roads. They are the supreme issue with us; give us roads!

OUR SECRET

[Original.]

There is a grave upon the hill with a white marble headstone on which are cut the letters:

> SUSIE.
> In death she touched the dead and imparted life.

Many a one passing by the "God's acre" looks over the fence, sees this inscription and wonders what it means. There are but two who know, Susie in heaven and I on earth—I, who keep the grave green and train the flowers growing over it; I, the dead she touched and to whom she imparted life.

When I asked of the others of our family that I might place a headstone over Susie's grave they assented, knowing the influence she had had over me. When they saw the inscription I had placed on it they wondered. No one asked me what it meant, leaving it for me to tell. But I never told.

As a boy I was wild and untamable from the day when Susie, two years my senior, took me by the hand and led me to school. I had brothers and other sisters, but none of them would mother trust me with save Susie—Susie, all gentleness and amiability. When I was in a fit of passion and the others only goaded me by their disapproving words Susie would put her arms about me; I would burst into tears and promise her never to be bad again. Had I been left solely to her influence I might have passed the dangerous age in safety. But this could not be. My father was a stern man and believed that to humor me would ruin me. He little knew that to punish me would ruin me. His influence upon me was directly contrary to that of Susie. When I was fourteen he thrashed me unmercifully, and I ran away.

This was the last I saw of my family for years. They changed their residence several times from one town to another, while all towns were my residence. There was in me a certain restlessness that prevented my working at any one thing for long. I was made for adventure. If when I ran away from home I had been old enough I would have enlisted for a soldier, and in that field I might have found something congenial. But by the time I had come to the enlistment age I was not fitted for anything honest, and when I was twenty I was a burglar.

For a year I plied my vocation without being caught. I shall never be caught now, for I shall never commit another burglary.

The end of my hazardous and dishonest work came in this wise: One night I entered a house standing by itself, so that I was in no danger from neighbors. I noticed on the doorknob some white flowers. What they meant I did not know. I had never seen anything but crape used to mark the presence of the dead. It was summer, when flowers are abundant, and I supposed these had been thrown over the doorknob as the most convenient place to hang them. Having gained an entrance, I went through the hall to the kitchen, then into the dining room, where I looked into the sideboard, hoping to find the silver. Not finding any, I went into the parlor.

There was a light, turned low, in the hall on the ground floor, and I worked by this alone, carrying my dark lantern under my shirt. Turning out the hall light, I crept upstairs, to find another light in the hall above. This, after determining the position of the doors, I turned out also, then entered a rear bedroom. Finding nothing of value there, I passed through an open door to an adjoining room, in which there was not a ray of light. Walking very slowly, with my hands before me for protection, I came in the center of the room against what I thought to be a table. Feeling my way around it, I discovered that it was too narrow for a table, being only about two feet wide, though it was more than five feet long. Besides, it was much deeper than the body of any ordinary table even with a drawer in it, and underneath there were but two supports, one at each end. Puzzled to know what it was, I drew my dark lantern.

I started back in horror. The light fell on an oval space filled with glass, underneath which was the ashen face of a corpse. But my horror was turned to that which was ten thousand times more than horror at recognizing the features of my sister Susie.

How I got out of the house without waking the family I do not know. I only remember that I found myself in the street, or, rather, the road, on the verge of insanity. Nor do I remember how I passed the time between my exit and the next afternoon, when I suddenly awoke as from a trance and found myself in front of the house I had intended to rob. A hearse was standing before the door.

Entering the house, I met one of my brothers in the hall, and with him went to my mother. My coming was a ray of light in the darkness of death. Father, mother, brothers, sisters, gathered round me as if I had come back from the dead. From the day of my departure till my return not one word had they heard from or of me. I was to them simply the wayward boy who had now doubtless outgrown his waywardness and would henceforth be a good son and brother.

This last expectation has been realized. But, oh, the dreadful secret I carry! Could I but share it with my mother! But, no, it would kill her. Susie and I must bear it together—she in the land of the hereafter, I in the land of the present.

Christian Carstensen, formerly of this city, was killed on Monday in a wreck on the Monte Christo railroad.

Mrs. J. E. Ellis broke the bone in one of her ankles last week, in falling upon her foot near her home at Dungeness. The limb was quickly set by Dr. Hartt and the lady is now getting along nicely.

Dr. S. W. Hartt this week met with what might easily have proved a fatal accident. While driving home at a pretty good pace from one of his frequent trips to Dungeness, just thisside of Jim Dick's place a wheel of his buggy struck a log which the wind had fallen across the road and threw the doctor out among the heels of his horses. Fortunately the doctor struck his favorite mare who stood trembling and holding the other from getting away. The wheel and double-trees were broken and the doctor was compelled to borrow a rig from Mr. Dick to come home

Mahara' Minstrels.

It is always pleasant to look forward to a real up to date performance of minstrelsy, and the new Mahara Musicale Minstrels is among the recent ebony productions of the current season. Critics have been profuse in their praise of the unique company and together the superb scenic environment which Manager Mahara has supplied this attraction which has been called a work of art. From a musical standposnt the Mahara Company is superior in every particular, the musical melange being an immense treat in itself. The festive vaudevill an also furnishes a big part of the entertainment, and numerous other attractive features place Mahara's Operatic Minstrel Boom on a par with the best. A splendid street parade will be given on the day of the performance. At night the company appears at the opera house. Feb. 21. 25c, 50c and 75c.

Electrician W. S. Hoskins of Seattle was a business visitor Monday.

L. E. Ream of Hampshire, Illinois was a arrival here this week.

County Clerk E. A. Fitzllenry returned yesterday from a week's sojourn in Seattle, where he has been settling up some work which he had not completed at the time of taking office.

T. S. Brophy left Friday morning for Seattle where he will meet Mrs. Brophy who is now enroute home after a nine-months' visit throughout the east.

Mrs. T. J. Appleton returned Thursday from Tacoma bringing her daughter Montez, who will have to give up her studies for a while owing to her health

Mrs. John Trumbull is on the sick list.

Miss Annette Trumbull is attending the Normal at Ellensburg.

Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Hartt went to Seattle last Friday to hear Melba.

Among last evening's arrivals from Seattle were Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Short, Messrs. J. C. Hanson, D. B. Merrill, C. A. Christopher, J. H. Ristine, W. A. Hughes, Wm. Gross.

In the Surf.

The steam schooner Nellie Jenson was set down to Freshwater bay wharf to load shingles between tides Thursday night. The plan was to beach her at high tide at 7 p m, load her and pull her off at next tide. She is still on the beach and it is feared that the northeaster of Thursday night has disabled the vessel.

Residence Burns at Port Crescent.

Wednesday the residence of W. K. Stroup, of Port Crescent, well known in this city, burned to the ground with all its contents including everything belonging to the family except that which they wore. No details of the disaster are at hand, but the fire must be a serious blow to Mr. Stroup and family.

Man Overboard.

An unknown man in an intoxicated condition fell into the bay Wednesday night off the City dock. He was fished out of the icy water in an uncertain condition, but later rallied and was taken to bed by a companion.

The Garland.

"The poor we have with us always," even the poor old Garland stays right with us, having taken the place of the Bellingham on Thursday while the latter is undergoing repairs.

An Acceptable Raise.

The legislature on Tuesday raised the salary of Docket Clerk S. P. Carusi from $4 to $5 per day.

One of the most noticeable improvements of the season was the work done the past week or two by S. G. Morse and sons. The new growth of alders in the vicinity of 6th street bridge, east of Lincoln, which has threatened for some years to shut out the view of all parties beyond have been slashed for blocks around, and the district looks like some new locality with streets opened up.

Marshal Church, Sam Johnson, and Frank Dilling are confined to their homes with heavy grip symptoms, and numerous other citizens ard suffering with colds.

Mrs. Alwina Forsberg, at Dry Creek, is seeking a purchaser for her livestock and farm implements. She has three cows, two 2-year-old heifers and two 1-year-old heifer calves, all part Jersey; also 16 young sheep.

Council and Expert Confer.

The city council met with expert electrician W. S. Hoskins on Monday night with a view of learning the ways of electricity and how best to make the city plant pay. They were given a mint of information, but most of the knowledge resolves to the conclusion that to make any plant pay one must have use for somewhere near the capacity of same and must get reasonable rates for such use. Considering that citizens are getting lights at a lesser rate than any other city in the west and the city is paying less than $1000 a year for its street lights, we do not consider that the plant even now is going behind. With a growth in patrons and strict private business management the present plant would easily pay $200 net profit per month.

THE PASSING OF BUCK

[Original.]

Sitting in the Army and Navy club one evening with a retired cavalryman, I asked him if in a hand to hand contest he felt remorse at killing an enemy.

"No," he replied, "but I once fired a death shot on the field of battle that cost me a bitter pang."

"Tell me about it."

"I began my military career on what was then frontier ground, 'the plains,' which was covered with Indians, and, since I occasionally had to take to my heels to save my scalp, I made a special effort to secure a fast horse. I happened to find a thoroughbred among the horses in the quartermaster's hands, made a requisition for him and finally bought him. How he got in with the common herd I never knew. He was fleet as the wind and had more intelligence than many a man. I asked my fiancee—now my wife—to name him, and, being from the Buckeye State, she called him Buck.

"If ever man loved horse or horse loved man I loved Buck, and Buck loved me. I had owned him a year before I realized his speed and endurance as well as his intelligence. One morning a messenger rode from Fort C., his horse falling dead as soon as he reached us, to say that the Indians had surrounded the post and would undoubtedly take it before sunset. My fiancee, the daughter of the commandant of Fort C., was there, and you can imagine the condition of my feelings, knowing the barbarity of the Indians, who would murder every man, woman and child they captured. We had no force to send, but at Fort L., fifty miles to the north of us and some thirty miles from C., were four companies of the ——th cavalry.

"I begged the colonel to send me to L. with orders for the commandant to gallop to the relief of C. He assented and, mounting Buck, I made the run. I was beside myself with terror at the probable fate of my love, and I begged Buck to do his best for me. Do you know, that horse understood me as well as if he had learned English. He knew he had a long run, and in the beginning kept himself well together, as if husbanding his strength, but with every ten miles he lopped off the distance he increased his speed, making the last part of the journey in quicker time than the first. We reached L. in six hours, and in twenty minutes more 300 men were riding to the relief of C. When they arrived the garrison was about to surrender, but our men dashed in on the Indians and scattered them to the four winds.

"You may imagine that Buck, having saved a garrison, and especially the one nearest my heart, became very dear to me. After that I was caught out alone on several occasions, had to run for it, and Buck always left the Indians behind. Then the civil war came on, and Buck carried me down over Kentucky and Tennessee, taking me through Donelson and Shiloh. At Stone River I fell from his back shot through the shoulder and would have been left in hands of the enemy had he not seized me by the coat with his teeth and helped me back to our men.

"Poor Buck's end came at Perryville. In a retreat I had got separated from my command and had run into a rebel regiment. They called on me to surrender, but turning Buck I lay flat on his neck, and he carried me safely away, receiving several bullets that were intended for me. He might have recovered from these, but on jumping a gully he came down with his fore leg in a hole, and the leg snapped.

"I suppose if we had been in garrison I might have been foolish enough to strap him up and try to save him. But in any event you can't keep a horse still long enough to enable a broken bone to knit, and Buck must be put out of his misery. Everybody was busy at the time, but seeing a drummer boy pass me I stopped him, handed him my revolver and told him to put a ball into Buck's brain. I couldn't bear to see him do it, so I started away. I heard a whinney and, turning, saw Buck looking after me, saying with his eyes more plainly than a man could have said in words, 'You aren't going to desert me after all I've done for you, are you?'

"I went back, and, seeing that the boy's hand was trembling from the excitement of the fight that was on, I took the pistol from him and, sitting on the ground, laid Buck's head in my lap. I gave him a hug, saying to him at the same time:

"'Buck, it nearly kills me to do it. You've done me more real service than any living being. You've often saved my life, and once you saved a life dearer to me than my own. And now I've got to render you a last service. I've got to put you out of your misery.'

"I have always believed the horse understood me. He laid his head down on my lap and waited. I put the muzzle of the pistol against his forehead, and he never winced, though he knew as much about a pistol as I did. Anxious to have it over, both for his sake and mine, I pulled the trigger, and Buck passed away unconscious.

"I buried him where he fell, noted the place carefully and when the war was over I went down there and gave him a marble headstone.

"I may have killed men in battle, but if I have the deed made no more impression on me than shooting into a flock of pigeons. The release of Buck almost broke my heart."

County News.

Clallam Record.

The lighthouse and fog signal will soon be in operation.

S. G. Tuttle is at work on the west side getting Robinson's locomotive ready for werk.

James Keltner has a crew of men at work with a donkey engine clearing land on his ranch.

J. A. Kennedy has finished putting up a new foundation under the Donahue dwelling house.

Mr. and Mrs Richard Fulton have returned to Twin from the Atlin mining district for the winter.

Albert Napionteck has been engaged to cook in Robinson's camp. His wife will conduct the restaurant business in town.

The lighthouse tender Columbine was here during the week and landed some supplies for the lighthouse; also an engineer to set up the fog signal.

A large and Jolly crowd called at the residence of G. W. O'Brien last Saturday evening, armed with various kinds of refreshments and gave the household a surprise. The evening was pleasantly spent and enjoyed by all.

Forks:—Mr. Nesbitt, an experienced man in butter and cheese making, is here to start a creamery. On his way in he had the misfortune to get on the bottom side of his horse as it rolled over the bank. Owing to a slight bruise or two he took two days on the road, and on account of rains, water and bad luck he was disgusted before he reached Forks. After talking to the Forksites and Quillayuters he cheered up and said the creamery was sure to come and the farmers are sure to make a fortune.

Sick Headache.

This distressing ailment results from a disordered condition of the stomach. All that is needed to effect a cure is a dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. In fact the attack may be warded off, or greatly lessened in severity, by taking a dose of these Tablets as soon as the first symptom of an attack appears. Sold by W. J. Mathewson.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.
