IDAHO'S PROGRESSIVE ROAD DISTRICT LAW

By Majority Vote People May Organize Highway Districts for Improvement of Roads.

The Idaho legislature, at its recent session, enacted a law which provides for the establishment of road districts in that state, for levying of taxes for road purposes, and for the construction and maintenance of roads.

Under the new law the people of any district, comprising not less than 20,000, acres of contiguous territory, may, by a majority vote, organize a highway district for the purpose of improving the roads within the limits; provision is also made for assisting in the improvement of main roads leading from such district to railroad stations or market centers.

The control of the roads of the district is in the hands of a board of three commissioners who are elected by the people, except the first board, the members of which are appointed by the governor of the state. The board is authorized to employ a superintendent who must be a practical road builder or engineer: the board is also empowered to purchase property for right of way, machinery and materials for road building, and exercise the powers of eminent domain. The board may levy taxes on the property district to an amount not exceeding 100 cents of the $100 of assessed valuation, for road purposes, and 25 cents for bridges. If the county commissioners levy separate taxes for roads and bridges, the levy made by the highway commissioner of the district must not bring the total of such taxes above the amount named. The board may also issue bonds for road construction, if authorized by voters of the district.

The importance of such a law in a state situated as is Idaho, is clearly apparent. Fertile and well improved and irrigated agricultural districts lie in close proximity to extensive cattle ranges, and heavily timbered sections, with here and there a mining camp. The creation of the road districts and the building highways will enable the farmers to get their products to market, and is expected to materially increase production for that reason.

The first locality to take advantage of the new law is a district in Ada county, having an area of 100,000 acres.

CAPITALISTS INSPECT PLANT

Manager T. T. Aldwell of the Olympic Power Company returned from the East first of the week accompanied by Alexander Smith of Chicago, representing the Peabody, Houghtaling Company, who placed the bonds of the power company, and James Ivory, representing a syndicate of capitalists of Scotland. Mr. Aldwell took these gentlemen for a tour of inspection out to the site of the power plant and over the right-of way granted the power company in this county. From here the party took the steamer Whatcom for Port Townsend for inspection of the right-of-way in Jefferson county, the steamer waiting for them for a time, through the courtesy of Manager Green, who has sent word to the different agents to extend every courtesy to the gentlemen named. The visitors were most favorably impressed with conditions here and at Port Townsend, and expressed great surprise at the evidences of prosperity which they saw on every hand during their trip over the section visited.

SCHOOL AND ART EXHIBIT NEXT WEEK

Only Those Who Are Dead in Their Shells Will Refuse to Help and Encourage Schools.

The School and Art Exhibit given under the auspices of the city schools next week promises to be one of the successful events of the year. The teachers and pupils of the schools are taking a lively interest in the local exhibit and will have a display that will be well worth seeing. The pupils are also taking such interest in the Art Exhibit as to insure a splendid sale of tickets and consequently a snug little sum of money with which to buy pictures for the school rooms. The superintendent and teachers are particularly pleased to know that the ladies' clubs of the city are taking a lively interest in the exhibit and several of them have accepted a invitation to assist the committees on the arrangement Accordingly we are pleased to announce that the Literary Club of the city will have charge of the Art Exhibit on Wednesday, May 1st, at which time members of the club will be present to point out the interesting features of the paintings, to render suitable programs consisting of art talks, music, etc.

On Thursday, June 1st, the Parliamentary Club will have charge of the Art Exhibit at which time special programs will be rendered. The ladies of the Saturday afternoon Reading Club will take charge on Friday afternoon and evening and will supply such special features as will undoubtedly make the closing day full of interest.

At a meeting of the teachers of the city schools last Friday, committees were appointed on advertising, entertainment, selecting and hanging pictures. The following are the chairmen of the committees who would be pleased to receive suggestions and assistance from individuals and organizations of the city, who are so disposed: Entertainment committee, Miss Hattie Watson, chairman; advertising, Mr. Boyd Edgar, chairman; hanging exhibit, Mr. Harold Singer, chairman; selecting pictures, Mr. Robert Gilmore, chairman

Thefollowing outline program will be followed during the three days:

Wednesday—Art Exhibit in charge of Literary Club and Local Exhibit in charge of Freshmen and Juniors of High School.

Thursday—Art Exhibit in charge of Parliamentary Club and Local Exhibit in charge of eighth grade at Central.

Friday—Art Exhibit in charge of Saturday Reading Club and Local Exhibit in charge of Sophomores and Seniors in High School.

The eighth grade has already made application for space for a candy booth for Thursday and it is understood that refreshments are to be served in the exhibit rooms. In order to further encourage the advance sale of tickets, The Elson Art Co. offers two prize pictures to the rooms selling the largest number of tickets. People who regard the children as over zealous in trying to sell tickets will please remember that they are prompted solely by their patriotism for their rooms and from no selfish motives.

We desire also individuals as well as organizations to know that the Elson Company offers to give free with every picture donated by an individual or organization a brass plate with the name of the donor suitably engraved in black.

The Art Exhibit consists in large part of carbons and photogravures made directly from the original masterpieces and is selected by experts.

One of the leading art critics, John C. VanDyke says: "You must look at a picture, studiously, earnestly, and honestly. It will take years before you come to a full appreciation of it, but when at last you have, you will be possessed of one of the purest, loftiest and most ennobling pleasures that the world can offer."

These pictures will be of interest to all, both young and old, and they are expected to attract and instruct a large number of people. The collection has a distinctly educational purpose in view, being arranged to show the development of art.

Mr. Duvall has been regularly employed by Pierce county, for a number of years past, as deputy assessor to go over the timber and mills and is considered to be one of the most capable and reliable men in the northwest.

Section 16 of an Act relating to forest fires, passed at the last legislature, provides that everyone clearing up a right-of-way, wagon roads, or other roads shall pile and burn all of the refuse timbers, slashings, choppings, etc., on the right-of-way and that all timber which is cut on the right-of-way shall be so fallen that it will not lodge on the land adjacent. This law becomes effective June 8th, 1911, and it is important therefore that in letting any contracts for opening up wagon roads and right-of-way, the provisions of this law be complied with

"PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY" DAY TO BE CELEBRATED

Seattle is to take on a holiday garb June 1. C. Smith forty-two-story building, the completion of the steel work on the new Hoge building, the further excavation for Lake Washington canal, thus breaking ground for Seattle's great harbor development, and the beginning of the work on the $1,000,000 belt line around Lake Union.

Appropriate observance of this history making day in the existence of Seattle was decided upon at a meeting of the progress and prosperity committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and the committee voted to request Mayor Dilling to issue his mayoral proclamation designating it as "Progress and Prosperity day."

CELEBRATE CENTENNIAL OF KETTLE FALLS DISCOVERY

Kettle Falls, May 22.—Arrangements are being made for the annual meeting of the Stevens County Pioneer Association at the Great Falls of the Columbia on June 23 to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the Kettle Falls by David Thompson on June 23, 1811.

Mr. Thompson was one of England's great geopraphers and explorers. He named the falls after the Indian name given by the Flatheads—Ilth-coy-ope—meaning Kettle, a name derived from the many "kettles" worn in the rocks by the revolving stones tossed about by the mighty rush of waters.

The point selected for the picnic and exercises could not be more picturesque or beautiful. A big tent has been secured for the occasion. This will be placed on a prominent point on the peninsula, below the upper falls and above the lower falls, overlooking this grandeur and amid the mighty roar of waters which plunge with irresistible force over the rocks.

The address of welcome will be made by G. H. Bevan, vice president of the association. A. W. Smith will be the toastmaster. It is expected the State Historical Society will hold its annual meeting at the same time and place. A general invitation is extended to all pioneers to be present.

Effective Rates to Stand.

Washington, May 22.—The interstate commerce commission held in the case of Arkansas Southern Manufacturers' Association against the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific railways that it was not empowered by the statute to suspend the operation of a freight rate after it had become effective. This principle, now laid down, will be adhered to by the commission in all subsequent actions of a similar character.

He is seeking help for the farmers of Saskatchewan. "The majority of the men who harvest the crops in that section of the Dominion come from Missouri and Kansas," said the inspector.

PEACE TREATY SIGNED IN MEXICO--MADERO BIDS FAREWELL TO TROOPS

Juarez, Mexico, May 21.—Officially designated representatives of the Mexican government and the revolutionists at 10 o'clock tonight signed a peace agreement at the customs house here, intended to end the hostilities which have been waged in Mexico for the last six months.

Though covering only the principal points which have been negotiated thus far, it practically records the concession by the government of those demands which initiated on November 20 last armed revolution in Mexico. Telegrams announcing the signing of the agreement were dispatched throughout Mexico to revolutionary and federal leaders alike.

Constitutional restrictions prevented the inclusion in the peace agreement of the fact that the rebels will be able to suggest to various state legislatures the names of provisional governors, and likewise the fact that six of the eight members of the new cabinet have been chosen by the revolutionists, but the agreement records that President Diaz and Vice President Corral will resign and that the government is to concentrate its attention on desired reforms.

A Notable Room.

In the same room where President Taft and President Diaz met in international handshaking two years ago, peace was formally declared.

Judge Carbajal represented the federal government and Dr. Vasquez Gomez, Francisco Madero, sr., and Senor Pino Suarez acted for the revolutionists.

The actual signing of the agreement took place under most extraordinary circumstances tonight on the steps of the customs house. When the peace commissioners arrived they found the door of the customs house locked and no one there to let them in.

Accordingly they gathered on the steps of the building, and while newspaper men held matches, fountain pens were produced and the document signed. Four automobiles turned their searchlights on the scene, and when the signatures were affixed the commissioners of both sides embraced joyfully, while a small crowd that had collected shouted "Viva la Paz."

Juarez, Mexico, May 22.—Standing on the pedestal of a monument near which arose the smoky ruins of the recent battle, Francisco I. Madero, jr., bade farewell to his soldiers and told them of his plans, when he goes to Mexico City, to modernize the government of the country and "build a new Mexico."

The occasion was the re-distribution of the insurrecto "army of the north" comprising the forces largely enlisted from Chihuahua state, which began the revolution and lived to enjoy the fruits of victory.

Fifteen hundred insurrectos left at daylight for Casas Grandes under command of General Pascual Orozco and Colonel Villa. More troops will leave for other parts of the interior, and, with the departure of the provisional governors in a few days, only 500 men under Colonel Jose Blanco will stand guard in Juarez.

Guiseppe Garibaldi, a grandson of the Italian liberator, also will soon leave after having been an active participant in the campaign which led to the fall of Juarez.

The movement of the insurrectos southward also is significant because it will remove from the United States border the main fighting strength of the revolutionists. Casas Grandes is 150 miles south of Juarez.

Liberty Is Fruit of War.

"Soldiers," said Madero, you see all about you the terrible consequences of war. Beautiful buildings have been destroyed and people have fled in terror from their homes. Many of you personally have felt the bitter sufferings of fighting. You have gone hungry, have marched hundreds of miles over the hot deserts, often without water or sleep. You have sniffed the smoke of battle and some of you have had occasion to contemplate death.

"But, my soldiers, it has been a just war. All of the suffering that has been caused is as nothing to the suffering which the result of this war will prevent. It was war against tyranny, its fruit is liberty.

Reforms Promised People.

"My soldiers, I bid you farewell. It is sad to see you go, but you may leave with lighter hearts than when you came. In a week or so I shall leave for Mexico to make permanent the peace which followed our triumph here. When peace is finally secure, you will have the privilege of leaving the army if you like. There will be no conscription. The army which in the future will uphold the liberty guaranteed by the constitution of Mexico will be composed of soldiers who join it from choice and who will receive good pay.

"Many things are yet to be done before the principles for which we fought are within our grasp. We are going to have free elections. We are going to have education along the lines which will give our people the democratic system of free thought and acts that was in the hands of the liberators of our country.

"Soldiers, good-bye. You have fought bravely. See that in your homes and in peaceful pursuits with your fellow-citizens you are as brave and loyal as you have been in war with me."

URGES FORESTRY ON VACANT LAND

GOVERNOR HAY STRONGLY DECLARES STATE SHOULD CULTIVATE TIMBER.

As Much the Duty of the State as the Maintenance of Schools—Conservation Association to Make Campaign for Establishment of Wood-working Industries.

Seattle, May 20.—That every foot of land in the state found not suitable for agricultural purposes should be forested and protected, and that work was as much the duty of the state as it was that it should maintain schools was the statement made by Gov. Hay in the course of a brief address made to the members of the Washington Conservation Association at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce.

Gov. Hay, who was present, with Mayor William W. Seymour, of Tacoma, as a guest of the association, said that while all desired was not provided by the forest protection law passed by the last legislature, and that while much remains to be done, still a good beginning has been made.

Indebted to Association.

He said that the state was indebted to the association for what it had accomplished for the lumber interests of the state, as well as for the fire instructions which it had prepared and was publishing broadcast for the protection of the state's forests.

Gov. Hay expressed his conviction that the state will yet have a proper water code, under which justice will be done all in the matter of granting water power sites.

Mayor Seymour brought forth a laugh from his audience when he said that the question of conservation just now in Tacoma concerned jobs more than all else. He said, however, that the question of water power sites had not yet received deserved consideration, and that it was time steps were taken to know what will be the state's stand upon that question.

Strong Forest Protection.

E. T. Allen, of Portland, Ore., reviewed the provisions of the new forest protection law, which, he said, gave to Washington one of the strongest forest protection laws in the United States.

Prof. H. K. Benson, of the University of Washington, and United States Engineer Oliver P. M. Goss, in charge of timber testing at the same institution, gave the result of recent tests in the matter of the utilization of wood waste by chemical processes, which, Prof. Benson said, would eventually lead to the cheapening of the cost of clearing logged-off land and a real "factory-getting" campaign in the Northwest.

To Publish Statistics.

President Oliver C. McGilvra appointed Secretary Richard W. Douglas, Prof. Francis G. Miller and Prof. H. K. Benson a committee to raise funds to obtain the publication of statistics and information now at the disposal of the association that will form the basis of a propaganda for the establishment of new wood-working and wood-chemical industries in the state of Washington.

MORE JAPANESE LEAVING U. S. THAN ARRIVING

Washington, May 20.—That more Japanese are leaving Hawaii and the United States than are entering the country was told the house by Representative Knowland, of California. Mr. Knowland submitted to the department of commerce and labor figures to show that from July 1, 1908, the Japanese entering the United States numbered 7,501, against 14,195 leaving the United States. In Hawaii there were 4,348 arrivals, and 6,266 departures. "This does not look like an invasion," Mr. Knowland said. "In view of the interest shown on the Pacific coast when the recent Japanese treaty was up these figures should be of interest."

AMERICAN PROPOSAL INTERESTS GERMANY

Berlin, May 22.—The American arbitration proposal, a draft of which, to serve as a basis of negotiations, Secretary Knox submitted to the British and French ambassadors at Washington, attracts general attention in the German press. The Tageblatt is the only paper that greets the proposition as a loyal attempt toward complete arbitration. The Chauvinist papers, as is usual when referring to America, have adopted an unfriendly attitude.

LUMBER MONOPOLY "UNREASONABLE"

GOVERNMENT SEEKS TO HAVE CERTAIN PRACTICES ENJOINED BY COURTS.

Most Serious Offense Is Blacklisting—Suit Said to Be the First of a Series Planned by Attorney General Looking to the Breaking Up of Agreements to Maintain Prices.

New York, May 20.—In the first federal anti-trust proceedings brought under the Sherman law as interpreted in the Standard Oil decision, the department of justice filed in the United States court here yesterday a suit against constituent organizations of what is popularly known as the "lumber trust," alleging the existence of a widespread conspiracy "unreasonably" to restrain the lumber trade in this country.

Ten trade organizations and more than 150 individuals are named as defendants. It alleges violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and seeks a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from continuing the conspiracy charged.

It is said the suit may be the first of a series planned by Attorney General Wickersham looking to the breaking up of alleged agreements between the retailers of commodities to maintain high prices; to force all ultimate consumers to buy from retailers and to blacklist wholesalers who sell to others than members of the retail organizations.

The elaborate system of blacklisting attributed to the alleged lumber conspiracies, copies of circulars sent out by the organization, classifying consumers as "proper" and "improper," extracts from reports threatening "short shrift" to dealers daring to violate the rules of the organization, and branding such officers as "poachers," "scalpers," "mavericks" and "illegitimates," are fully set forth in the government's petition.

Corporations Listed.

It is alleged that not only private consumers have been blacklisted, but that many great industrial concerns have been put under the ban by the lumber dealers.

The government bill, aggregating 20,000 words, is replete with sensational allegations and interesting exhibits.

The suit is drected specifically against retail organizations in the Eastern states, but the trial will embrace methods adopted by retailers and wholesalers throughout the United States. Although the lawyers in charge of the case believe the Standard Oil decision involving "reasonable" or "unreasonable" restraint will not affect the lumber case, as it is represented to be one of simple conspiracy, nevertheless the accusatory parts of the bill conform to that decision and charge "undue" and "unreasonable" restraint of the lumber trade.

Less stress is laid on the alleged conspiracy between the defendants themselves. In general the case is regarded as Attorney General Wickersham's long planned test suit to have the courts determine how far combinations of retailers may go to prevent the ultimate consumer from dealing directly with the wholesaler or producer.

Government's Position.

The government takes the position that any agreements or acts which prevent a consumer from buying where he chooses or to his best advantage are in "unreasonable" restraint of trade and violate the Sherman law. No attack on the middle man, as such, is intended, the department of justice holding that there is legitimate opportunity for him. It is known that while the department has been making a nation-wide investigation, its agents have reported that the case is nearly paralleled in the marketing of many other commodities. If the government's contentions are sustained, there is promise of a sweeping attack upon some alleged conspiracies.

Attorney General Wickersham personally directed the gathering of the evidence, which has occupied more than a year.

ROADS ACCEPT MIXED FIR AND CEDAR SHIPMENTS

Seattle, May 20.—Following the announcement of the Milwaukee that mixed car lot shipments of cedar and fir would be accepted after June 25, representatives of the traffic department of all lines, at a conference in the office of the Traffic Manager R M. Calkins assented to the arrangement, and the tariff will be published, to become effective July 1.

SENATE ADOPTS JONES BILL ON POWER SITES

Washington, May 20.—A bill introduced by Senator Jones, providing for an investigation and report upon the exact authority which congress possesses over state and interstate streams and the regulation of water power development, has passed the senate.

Senator Jones has also passed his bill providing for the reappraisement and sale of certain government lands in the townsite of Port Angeles.

KAISER REPORTED WON OVER TO PEACE PLANS

London, May 22.—Emperor William's brief visit to King George has resulted, in all probability, in a decision by the two monarchs of the utmost importance to the arbitration projects of the Washington government.

Although the interviews were ostentatiously devoid of any bearing on international politics, it is firmly believed in well-informed London circles that the two monarchs assured each other of their intention to do all in their power to remove diplomatic obstacles interfering with Mr. Taft's scheme for a practical solution of the problem of exaggerated armament. That the near future will bring definite news of a proposal by Washington to Berlin similar to the proposals made to London and Paris is confidently predicted.

Berlin, it is asserted, will be prompt to accept Mr. Taft's suggestion in principle, with details to be adjusted later, and the treaties between the United States and the three principal states of Europe, when finally completed, will prove the basis for an ultimate Anglo-German treaty of arbitration of a scope far wider than hitherto has been conceived as practicable.

Germany is the real objective, according to a high London authority, of Mr. Taft's magnificent fusion of theory and practice on behalf of modern democracy.

LIABILITY COMMISSION APPOINTMENTS MADE

Seattle, May 20.—Gov. Hay has announced the appointment of J. H. Wallace, of Seattle, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, and C. A. Pratt, secretary-treasurer of the Pacific Box Company, of Tacoma, to the employers' liability commission. George A. Lee, formerly assistant attorney general, the third member of the commission, was named several weeks since.

J. H. Wallace formerly lived at Black Diamond, where he was employed in the mines as an engineer.

C. A. Pratt, who represents the manufacturers on the commission, came to Washington twenty years ago and settled at Tacoma. Before engaging in manufacturing he was a mining engineer. He will turn over the management of his business to his partners and will take up his new duties at once.

Under the terms of the compensation act, the state pays all the administrative expenses, and for that purpose $150,000 was appropriated.

It is proposed by the commission to have the attorney general begin a friendly suit which will put the question of the constitutionality of the act before the supreme court.

It is the opinion of skillful constitutional lawyers that the constitution of Washington is broad enough to comprehend the present compensation act and that the police power of the state is sufficient to administer it. However, before a large organization of state employes is built up and the state is put to an extraordinary expense, the validity of the law will be tested in the supreme court.

POSTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITS WILL BUY U. S. BONDS

Washington, May 22.—Depositors in postal savings banks may convert their deposits into United States bonds, bearing two and a half per cent interest, on July 1. The bonds are being prepared in denominations of $20, $100 and $500, and Postmaster-General Hitchcock has advised postmasters to inform the public that these bonds will be issued to every depositor who applies on the proper form before June 15.

These bonds will be issued only to depositors, but they may be sold and assigned at any time by the holders. They are to be exempt from taxation by either Federal, state or local authority.

Depositors can procure either registered or coupon bonds as they desire. Registered bonds, which bear the name of the owner and are payable only to him, probably will be preferable as a permanent investment, because they are safe against loss or robbery. Coupon bonds are payable to bearer, hence can be more conveniently disposed of.

Interest on registered bonds is to be paid twice a year by checks drawn at the Treasury Department in favor of the registered holder. Interest on coupon bonds is collected by means of detachable coupons which can be cashed by anyone. Interest checks and coupons may be cashed by postmasters under the same conditions as other government paper.

Walla Walla, May 22.—Assistant Attorney General Lyle says in a formal opinion that it is hazardous for a county official to buy up certificates of delinquency in property upon which the taxes have not been paid, and advises against it. He says the courts might not bar other than treasurers, but that it is bad policy.

Cox Indictment Quashed.

Cincinnati, O., May 22.—Indictments charging perjury against George P. Cox in connection with his testimony regarding the payment of county treasury "gratuities" were quashed by Judge Dickson Saturday. The county prosecutor at once moved to take the case to the higher courts on an allegation of error.

Irrigation in Northwest

Many Government and Private Projects Completed and Many More Under Way

(Special Correspondence.)

Spokane, May 22.—Irrigation by government and private projects is no experiment in the Pacific Northwest, where the economic value of the science of supplying the land with moisture by artificial means has become so thoroughly established that the vast expanse, once called "The Great American Desert," is bound to become the home of the highest agricultural civilization in America.

It has been demonstrated in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and other parts of the country that under irrigation these lands produce paying crops of anything which grows in the temperate zone. The products are noted for their brilliant coloring, unusual size and excellent flavor. They command the markets of the world. Vegetables and root crops in almost endless variety and tree and vine fruits follow in rotation and fill out the season.

Where the pioneers of territorial days toiled in the sagebrush country, when not fighting off hostile Indians, there is today a crop-producing, home-supporting area of inexhaustible fertility, greater in extent than the cultivated lands in all the New England and several neighboring states and capable of supporting a larger rural population. That which is possible is actually coming to pass; the well-developed country districts are so thickly populated they resemble the suburbs of cities.

Several hundred private projects are in operation in the Spokane district. The most important of these is in Chelan county, Wash., which has the Wenatchee, Chelan and Entiat valleys. There are also important works in the Spokane valley, where 90,000 acres of land is adapted to irrigation. The Spokane river, nearby lakes and an underground stream, flowing through the valley, are used by these plants, one of which raises the water by means of electric pumps from wells, ranging from 97 to 140 feet. The capacity of this apparatus is sufficient to water 3,000 acres of land. There are also large plants along the Columbia river in Eastern Oregon and in the Kettle Falls, Bitter Root, Snake river and Clearwater valleys.

Scores of gravity, siphon and pumping plants are in successful operation throughout the district. The extent of operations on irrigated lands in the Northwest will be better understood when it is known that the value of the apple and other fruit crops in the Spokane country alone amounted to $20,000,000 last year. It should be treble that sum in four or five years, by which time several million trees set out in the last three years will come into bearing and others planted prior to 1905 will have reached maturity.

The largest of the government's works in the state of Washington is the Sunnyside project in the Yakima valley. This covers 90,000 acres. The cost is estimated at $1,600,000. There are 60 miles of main canals and 100 miles of laterals. The Tieton canal, 12 miles, in the same valley, is designed to water 30,000 acres of land. The cost is $1,800,000. The total length of the three main laterals is 25 miles. The first unit, 12,000 acres, is in operation.

The Wapato project, also in Central Washington, will eventually cover 120,000 acres at a cost of $1,500,000. The original works cover 40,000 acres, with 25 miles of main canal and 55 miles of laterals, built at a cost of $250,000. Its extension provides for 25 miles of laterals in three sections. This means that 240,000 acres of land will come under the government canals, the work to cost $4,800,000.

The foregoing figures relate to what has been done, is now being done and will be done in the immediate future. There is nothing problematic about it. The federal government is doing the work.

The Okanogan project, in the county of the same name, in north central Washington, will water 8,000 acres at a cost of $500,000. In addition to these, the government has authorized the Kittitas and Benton projects, covering several hundred thousand acres in Central Washington. The reclamation service estimates that $25 or less will cover the cost for water rights on the reservation. This is about one-half the cost of watering land under other projects in the valley. There are also numerous successfully operated private irrigation projects in the Yakima valley.

Government officials report that more than $50,000,000 will be expended eventually by the reclamation service in the state of Washington to reclaim 1,500,000 acres of land, now entirely or partly waste. Fifty thousand acres are in the Ellensburg district, 200,000 acres in the Rattlesnake and Coal Creek districts and 10,000 acres in the valley of the Okanogan.

The government projects in Idaho are the Minedoka, with an area of 160,000 acres, to be completed at an estimated cost of $4,000,000, and the Payette-Boise, 200,000 acres, costing $3,000,000. The last named project covers at present the largest single tract in the United States. Oregon has the Umatilla project, 18,000 acres, costing $1,100,000, and the Klamath, part of which extends into California, 120,000 acres, which cost $3,600,000.

Montana has the Milk River, Saint Mary, Lower Yellowstone, Huntley, Sun River, Blackfeet, Flathead and Fort Peck projects, which contemplate the watering of 949,000 acres. There are also several hundred thousand acres under irrigation by private projects.

CORDOVANS START OUT TO OPEN COAL MINES

Cordova, May 23.—Unwilling to sit idly by awaiting the action of the government in opening the Alaska coal lands, nearly 100 citizens of Cordova left late yesterday for the Bering river coal fields near Katalla, where they intend to begin mining coal for the markets of this city and other Alaska towns.

A subscription list was circulated during the day and liberal contributions were made toward financing the expedition.

To Work at Once.

It is the intention of the coal seekers to locate a mine and acquire coal claims which they will undertake to work at once without awaiting action by the government.

If the expedition is unable to get permission from claimants to work the claims the men in the party will locate property of their own and work it.

They assert that they have a right to do this and say that if the government objects it will be necessary to send a force of men to stop the operations.

Travel by Launches.

The expedition left Cordova in four launches and a barge. Several women joined the party and will cook for the miners.

An effort will be made to take the coal from the McDonald claim, which was staked five years ago. It is asserted that McDonald paid his entry fee four years ago, has made fourteen statements to interior department officers in connection with the pending patent and that no charges have been filed against the claim.

Katalla has been advised by telephone of the coming of the expedition and assurances have been received here that the people of Katalla will join the movement.

UNCLE SAM ENDS SEVEN YEARS' WORK ON CANAL

Washington, May 20.—Uncle Sam has taken stock of what has been accomplished at Panama during seven years of hard work. May 4 ended the seventh year of canal construction by Americans. Only one-fourth of the great task of excavation remains to be done, for the "ground hogs" have removed 138,000,000 cubic yards from the line of the canal. That leaves only 44,000,000 yards to be cut away.

The placing of concrete in the locks is more than 52 per cent completed, the installing of the lock gates has begun, and 70 per cent of the filling for the Gatun dam, which will feed the canal with water, has been completed.

One of the unexpected obstacles in the construction was the development of twenty-two slides in the Culebra cut within a distance of nine miles, but it is said that these will not dealy the completion of the canal, as the earth can easily be removed by dredges after the water is turned on.

TO BUILD ROAD TO THE GREATEST RUINS OF AMERICA

What are believed to be the ruins of the most extensive buildings erected in North America in the 17th century are at Guadaloupe, Baja California, about fifty miles south of San Diego, Cal. From the west to the east limit of these ruins is 4,600 feet. Remains of walls are to be seen and foundations of buildings are easily discernible. The outside limits of the buildings, grounds and gardens, at one time enclosed with stone and adobe walls, are nearly a mile wide. The Archaelogical section of the Panama-California Exposition will construct an auto road from the exposition along the ancient Camino Real, or "Royal Road," to these ruins, and if possible, will conduct some excavations if suitable arrangements can be made with the government of Mexico, in which territory the ruins are situated.

J. F. STEVENS GETS WALL STREET OFFER

Portland, May 23.—Friends of John F. Stevens, former president of the Hill lines in Oregon, have been advised that he is considering and probably will accept the position of fiscal representative of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., J. P. Morgan & Co. and other heavy investors.

His field will be devoted exclusively to passing upon railroad securities upon which loans are proposed.

His recommendation to the Wall street interests will determine what railroad projects, whether new work, renewals, extensions, feeders or branches, shall be financed by the money powers.

NEW ARBITRATION TREATY

UNITED STATES, BRITISH AND FRENCH NATIONS AS PRINCIPALS.

Joining of French Comes as Surprise—Senate of United States Will Retain the Right to Pass Upon the Question of Arbitrating Each Dispute.

Washington, May 20.—The principle of arbitration of practically all disputes between nations, including questions of vital interest and national honor, assumed vitality when during the week Secretary Knox submitted to the British and French ambassadors at Washington the draft of a convention to serve as a basis of negotiations.

France Is Included.

The fact that this movement would be inaugurated with France as well as with Great Britain came as a surprise, as it was generally understood that only the United States and England were concerned.

When President Taft last December enunciated the doctrine of arbitration he received a quick response from Ambassadors Bryce and Jusserand that Great Britain and France were willing to begin negotiations with this country for the peaceful settlement of practically all future differences.

Knox Document Approved.

As a result, Secretary Knox has evolved a document which has received the approval of the president and cabinet providing that all differences shall be submitted to arbitration. It expands the scope of the existing arbitration treaties by eliminating the exceptions referring to "questions of vital interest and national honor."

This elimination is the real accomplishment of the proposed treaty, for it is hard to conceive of an international problem which cannot be regarded as having a controlling bearing upon "national honor" or "vital interest."

Refer to a Commission.

Recognizing that there may be questions of policy and other matters likely to force nations to the brink of war, but which no people would be willing to arbitrate, the tentative draft of the treaty provides that such differences shall be referred to a commission on inquory empowered to make recommendations.

In this connection the treaty will take another advanced step by binding the disputants to arbitration, which will be a last resort. After the two countries have concluded that it is impossible to settle a dispute through diplomatic interchange, the question will be submitted to a commission of inquiry to suggest a way to avoid arbitration, if possible.

Senate Will Pass Upon.

The United States senate will not be asked to relinquish its right to pass upon the question of arbitrating each dispute. All agreements to arbitrate will be entered into with the "advice and consent of the senate," as under existing conventions.

Concerning the tentative draft of the proposed treaty, Secretary Knox said:

"It is proposed that all differences that are internationally justifiable shall be submitted to The Hague tribunal unless by special agreement some other tribunal is created or selected.

"It provides that differences that either country thinks are not internationally justifiable shall be referred to a commission of inquiry with power to make recommendations for their settlement, this commission to be made up of nationals of the two governments who are members of The Hague court.

Decision to Be Binding.

"Should the commission decide that the difference should be arbitrated, this decision is to be binding.

"Before arbitration is resorted to, even in cases where both countries agree that the difference is one susceptibile of arbitral decision, the commission of inquiry shall investigate the differences with a view of recommending a settlement that will preclude the necessity of arbitration.

"The action of this commission is not to have the effect of an arbitral award. The commission at the request of either government shall delay its findings one year to give opportunity for diplomatic settlement.

"The other features of the draft deal mainly with the machinery of the commission and other essential details."

Japan Anxious to Join.

The submission of the drafts to Great Britain and France marks the actual beginning of negotiations. The foreign offices of the two countries will make an exhaustive examination of the American proposition with a view to suggest modifications, or additions. It is the desire of the administration to complete the negotiations if possible in time for submission to the senate before the adjournment of the special session of congress.

It has been rumored that Japan is anxious to join in the negotiations, but no formal discussion of the subject between the two countries has taken place.

HIDES HIS MILLIONS

ROCKEFELLER CONCEALS FORTUNE IN UNDERGROUND SAFE.

Vault Constructed of Concrete, Railway Rails and Sheet Steel Guarded by Intricate System of Locks—Holds $200,000,000.

New York.—The long and closely guarded secret as to where John D. Rockefeller preserves his stacks of stocks and bonds has been disclosed at last. The bulk of his immense treasure of collateral estimated at $200,000,000, is in a specially constructed bomb, burglar and fireproof vault built under the northeast corner of the New York City Produce exchange.

Between the street outside and the repositories of the Rockefeller fortune are ten locks varied in character. In front of the iron vault, the largest of its kind in the world devoted to collecting the properties of a single person, there is on view a cage not at all unlike that in which Captain Dreyfus was confined at Devil's island.

Two of the locks are padlocks, one upon each of the two combination locks visible from the exterior from the closed door of the vault. These two padlocks are usually opened with a key in the hands of President William H. Person, of the Safe Deposit company, which turning, releases the dial of each of the common locks, and permits the latter to be set by two men from Mr. Rockefeller's private office.

The interior of the vault is 9 feet wide, 9 feet high and 15 feet deep. The wall of the vault has a thickness of 40 inches. In the center of 35 inches of concrete are 90-pound steel rails set 6 inches apart in double rows, interlocked so as to be practically 3 inches apart. The remaining 4 inches of the wall are 4 inches thickness of solid steel.

Looking towards the interior of the vault there are arranged upon either side numerous compartments of small safes. There are from 15 to 20 of these varying in sizes. Two combination locks guard each. Having swung back the steel door of one of the inner chests, there are revealed small sheet steel boxes of a thickness of one-sixteenth of an inch. There are four of these, as a rule, in each chest. They are equipped with a hinge and lid and key box. The last turn of the key opens one of the sheet steel boxes. In one of these inner side compartments is a card index which registers the bonds with their dates of maturity and the months when the coupons come off.

OLD "WATTS FARM" FOR SALE

Famous Tract of New York Land to Be Offered at Public Auction—Rather Unusual Occurrence.

New York.—Representatives of the Mary G. Pinkney estate have announced that they will offer the extensive realty holdings, known as the old "Watts Farm," at public auction in the Vessey street salesrooms, through Joseph F. Day, auctioneer. Counsel Abram I. Elkus in an interview with reference to this executive estate sale of one f the largest and most noted estates in the history of New York said:

"Of course, it is not a usual occurrence, even in New York, to have estates such as this put on the market through the public auction room, and it was after a great deal of thought, effort and deliberation that it was finally decided that this estate be offered at public sale. It is the largest estate ever offered at one time."

CANARY BIRD THAT CAN TALK

Philadelphia Woman Refuses $1,000 for Little Songster That Can Speak Five Words.

Philadelphia.—Mrs. Peter Carney of 178 North Broad street, this city, is the possessor of probably the greatest ornithological wonder in existence. She owns a talking canary, which has a vocabulary of five words. She was offered $1,000 for the yellow warbler the other day by an emissary of the Zoological gardens of New York city after he had determined the songstress could say "Pretty little Peter," "Pretty little baby," or "Pretty little birdie," and that he was a true canary, but Mrs. Carney refused it. The zoologist says the bird is the only one of its species known to have enunciated English.

Stop Aeroplane Joy Rides.

New York.—Profiting by the experience of the public with automobile joy riders, the Aero Club of America is considering the framing of a bill making it a misdemeanor for any person to use an aeroplane not owned by himself without the consent of the owner. The matter is in the hands of the law committee of the club, which will draft a bill similar to the automobile laws recently passed in several states covering similar conditions with the automobile.

Girl of Nine Would Wed Boy of Nine.

Philadelphia.—Declaring that she had induced nine-year-old Arthur Hurdle, 1829 Lombard street, to run away from home with her that the two might be married, Lillian Willimer, who is nine years of age, was held under $300 bail on the charge of being incorrigible.

CAN IRON GARMENT EVENLY

Board That Is Made to Fit Sleeves and Is Adjustable to Different Levels.

The average ironing board is much too large to slip into the sleeve of the average woman's shirtwaist, so an Ohio man has devised a sleeve ironing board. This device is made of two boards, one acting as a base and the other shaped like a sleeve, hinged upon it and collapsible so that the two can be folded together when necessary and form a flat object, taking up little room. A hook fastened to the baseboard holds the ironing section rigid in whatever position it is desired, either closed or elevated. This is achieved by thrusting the free end of the hook into one of various holes along the supports, and the ironing portion is thus maintained at different levels. Without a device of this kind the laundress can only iron sleeves out by going over them as they lie stretched out on the board, and this process often causes unsightly creases. Slipped over a small board the sleeves can be ironed smooth in every part.

Beef Heart Stuffed.

Choose a fine fresh one. Wash well, lay in salt and water an hour, then wipe dry. Stuff with a forcemeat of crumbs, minced salt pork, pepper, salt and chopped parsley, with a little onion. Pack this in tightly, sew the heart up in coarse net, fitted well to it, and stew one hour and a half in weak broth. A cupful can be taken or made from any soup stock or bits of meat. At the end of this time take it out and undo the cloth and return the heart to the saucepan with enough gravy to half cover. Add to this a tablespoon of butter, cut up in as much flour. Pepper and salt to taste. Cover closely and simmer half an hour, turning the heart as it browns. Dish it and add the juice of half a lemon to the gravy. Boil once and pour over the heart.

Fried Salt Pork.

Cut in rather thin slices and freshen by letting lie an hour or two in cold water or milk and water. If in a hurry pour boiling water on the slices, let stand a few moments, dry, roll in flour and fry until crisp; drain off most of the grease from the frying pan, stir in while hot one or two tablespoonfuls of flour, about half a pint of new milk, a little pepper, salt if not salt enough already from the meat; let boil and pour into gravy dish. This makes a nice white gravy if properly prepared.

Currant and Oatmeal Biscuits.

Half a pound of flour, a quarter of a pound of fine oatmeal, two heaping tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, one gill of milk, two ounces of cleaned currants, two tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix the flour, oatmeal and sugar, warm the butter in the milk, add the currants and then work the whole into a paste; roll out thinly, stamp out into rounds or other shape, place them on a greased baking tin and bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

Finnan Haddie a la King.

This is a most popular chafing dish dainty and is made as follows: Boil the fish until it is done, flake it with a silver fork. Put into the chafing dish a large tablespoon of butter, add six mushrooms, a red and green pepper and a few blades of chives chopped fine. Add these to the melted butter and saute for three minutes, then add the fish. When all is hot add a gill of cream in which the yolk of an egg has been beaten. Blend together quickly and serve on slices of toast.

Polishing Metal Utensils.

Utensils must be kept polished. For copper use soap applied with a damp cloth, then sprinkle thickly with borax, if you have no regular copper polish. Brass can be cleaned by being moistened with kerosene, then rubbed with a paste of powdered chalk and lemon juice, and polished with chamois. Boil tin utensils occasionally in strong soda water, and if rusted rub with lard and let stand before washing.

Uses of Vinegar.

Vinegar is very useful in souring milk or cream. Put about two tablespoonfuls in a quart of milk and set in a warm place and you will soon have a nice basin of sour milk. Cream may be served the same way. And if you have put too much soda in cake or biscuits it may be overcome.

Souffle Potato Roses.

Add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff to three hot riced potatoes, with salt; add two tablespoonfuls of butter. Beat until light and shape like roses.

FRIDAY, MAY 26, 1911

Next Tuesday, May 30, will be the 45th anniversary of the time honored Memorial Day. It is a day that should be devoted to perpetuating the memory of the men and boys who gave their lives that this nation might be saved. Rapidly those heroes of a mighty conflict who escaped death on the battle field and in hospitals are passing away. The public's duty toward the civil war soldiers will soon be no greater than the paying of tributes to their memories, and that is a duty we all owe to self sacrifice and bravery.

Business is picking up and predictions are that the year of 1911 will be one of the best known in years. Following the decision of the supreme court in the Standard Oil case, the stock market showed encouraging strength. And now, bankers say that money is becoming free. Merchants also report a revival of business that is very hopeful. The imports and exports of the Puget Sound district for April show a big gain over March. Recent rains insure big crops. So that, taken all in all, there is not a sinister omen in the whole review.

Twenty steel trains constitute the equipment of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway, which will inaugurate its through service between Chicago and Puget Sound Monday, May 29. Few people realize what the beginning of this service means, as it is another important link between the East and the Pacific Northwest. Two fast trains will leave each end of the line daily. They will be known as "The Columbian" and "The Olympian." Many new ideas will be introduced in train operation. "The New Steel Train to the East," as the Milwaukee chooses to be known, is doing effective exploitation work for the Northwest and promises to bring a large volume of newcomers from the East.

Seattle will celebrate "progress and prosperity day," on June 1st. The Queen City is growing some, and has several things to be thankful for. The Milwaukee's first through train will arrive in that city on the last day of May. The Fisher Company's big flour mill will be opened. Work will begin for a forty-two story building; further excavation for the Lake Washington canal will be started; as well as work on the belt line around Lake Union. Great is Seattle.

The Skagit Mill Co. at Lyman has an order for some timber of unusual dimension, viz: Two sticks 44x44-80 feet long, and the Pacific Northwest is probably the only place in the United States where such an order could be filled, suggests the Sedro-Woolley Courier. Clallam County could furnish many such "sticks" of timber.

People accustomed to a climate like that of the Olympic Empire, where no extremes of heat and cold are to be faced, find the climatic disadvantages of life in the East and parts of the Middle West difficult to realize. Less than month ago most of the northern states, stretching from the Atlantic coast to the Rockies, where in the throes of a blizzard, and only a few days ago, a record breaking hot wave was tormenting the inhabitants of those same states.

Even temperature makes even temper, for life is always easier where there are no great extremes of heat and cold. Man has to brace himself mentally and physically to meet sudden changes in the weather and undoubtedly the effort helps to deplete his nervous system.

Unfortunately it isn't permitted to everybody to choose the place where he would live but those people whose lines are pleasantly cast in a section where the wind is always tempered and where such weather changes as take place are never sharp should congratulate themselves. None of their nervous force has to be expended in combating climate changes with the result that they have plenty of strength for their work and opportunity to experience the actual joy of living.

Enthusiasm is the greatest business asset in the world. It beats money and power and influence. Single-handed the enthusiast convinces and dominates where the wealth accumulated by a small army of workers would scarcely raise a tremor of interest. Enthusiasm tramples over prejudice and opposition, spurns inaction, storms the citadel of its project, and like an avalanche overwhelms and engulfs all obstacles. It is nothing more nor less than faith in action. Faith and initiative rightly combined remove mountainous barriers and achieve the unheard of and miraculous. Set the germ of enthusiasm afloat in your farm; carry it in your attitude and manner; it spreads like contagion and influences every fiber of your industry before you realize it; it begets and inspires efforts you did not dream of; it means increase in production and decrease in cost; it means joy and pleasure and satisfaction to your workers; it means life real and virile; it means spontaneous bed rock results—the vital things that pay dividends.—Henry Chester in Caxton Magazine.

Alden J. Blethen, publisher and editor-in-chief of the Seattle Times, with his son Clarence B. Blethen, managing editor, and Chauncy B. Rathbun, city editor, with C. W. Wappenstein, Charles T. Berryman, Ludovic Dallagrovanna, and Police Captain Mike Powers have been indicted by the grand jury of King county for conspiracy. A. J. Blethen, Wappenstein, Berryman and Ludovic are also indicted for maintaining a public nuisance in the unlawful keeping and maintenance of the notorious Arcade dance hall. A joint indictment charging A. J. Blethen, C. B. Blethen and C. B. Rathbun of criminal libel was also returned by the grand jury. Bail was set at $30,000 for A. J. Blethen's appearance in court.

Those familiar with the facts will call to mind how ardently the Seattle Times defended Gill, Wappenstein, et als, in their corrupt management of city affairs, and now the chickens have come home to roost.

"Put your advertisement in newspapers that are fit to go into the home," was the advice of W. F. Lipman in talking to ad men and members of the Portland Ad Club recently. He said:

"Today 90 per cent of the advertising is accomplished through newspapers. It is the most successful ad, the only correct medium when results are to be obtained. Today, no matter what the business, the first question to be determined is the advertising. Second comes the medium and it is the medium about which I wish to talk. Marshall Field, I believe, was said to have laid down the first rule: 'First show me that the paper is the paper in the home and I will take up the question of the size of my advertising.'

"In other words, Mr. Field held to the theory that the newspaper must be a home paper and to be a home paper you must first print the news that is fit to print. He always said that he never cared to advertise in a paper whose circulation was on the street and in the byways."

It is useless for cities or for business men to say they do not believe in advertising. Every one is an advertiser whether he wants to be or not. Our manner, our clothes, our streets, our buildings, everything that we do or say advertises us and we cannot deny it.

Assistant Attorney General Lyle holds in an opinion to the state bureau of inspection that county commissioners cannot receive compensation for their services as ex-officio members of the board when carrying out the order of the board.

Heretofore board members have been in the habit of inspecting the various roads and charging their services to the county, but under the interpretation of the law this will be impossible. When a road is inspected it must be done by the board as a whole and not by individual members.

It is also held by the attorney general's office in a ruling made for the state tax commission that in cases where a person conducts a wholesale as well as a retail liquor business in the same building he must have a state liquor license for each branch of the business, or in other words that where the federal government requires two licenses the state also requires that two state licenses be secured:—Townsend Leader.

"The Science of Being Great," by Wallace D. Wattles, gives plans and methods for the self-development of an efficient life. The author, in an earnest, sincere way, points the reader to what he considers the sources of power. He tell show to eliminate those qualities which do not make for true greatness. He defines the whole. He would have us carry the principles of true greatness into the associations of daily lives. The central thought running through all the book is the power of thought, rightly directed by the will, to make one truly great. The book contains 150 pages, bound in silk cloth. Price $100. No. 2606.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for Clallam county.

Charles Tillman, Plaintiff, vs. H. M. Fisher as administrator of the estate of James Stuckey, Deceased, The Unknown Heirs of the deceased, and B. E. Woods, Defendants.

The State of Washington to the Unknown Heirs of the Deceased, Defendants:

You are hereby summoned to appear within sixty days after the date of the first publication of this summons, to-wit: within sixty days after the 5th day of May, 1911, and defend the above entitled action in the above entitled court, and answer the complaint of the plaintiff, and serve a copy of your answer upon the undersigned attorney for plaintiff, at his office below stated; and in case of your failure so to do judgment will be rendered against you according to the demand of the complaint, which has been filed with the clerk of said court.

The object of said action is to recover judgment against the defendant H. M. Fisher as administrator of the estate of James Stuckey, deceased, and The Unknown Heirs of said James Stuckey, deceased, upon one certain promissory note in the sum of $400, executed and delivered by said James Stuckey on the 7th day of December, 1908, to the plaintiff Charles Tillman; for interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum from the 7th day of December, 1910, until paid, and for attorney's fees and costs; and to foreclose a certain mortgage made by said James Stuckey to secure the payment of said note, which said mortgage is recorded in Volume 18 of Mortgages, on page 108 of the Records of said Clallam county, and which said mortgage conveys to the plaintiff the lands described as follows:

Lots 15, 16, 17 and 18 in Block 266 of the Government Townsite of Port Angeles, all in the City of Port Angeles, Clallam county, Washington.

And the further object of such action is to foreclose the interest of each and all of the defendants, if any interest they have in said premises, and for a decree declaring such interest junior, inferior and subordinate to plaintiff's mortgage, and that the equity of redemption of each of the defendants be forever barred and foreclosed. And the further object of said action is to obtain a decree for the foreclosure of said mortgage and the sale of the premises to satisfy said judgment.

Dated this 5th day of May, 1911, the day of the first publication hereof.

We Have Just Received a Shipment of DRIED BREWER'S GRAIN

Its food value is shown by the following analysis.

Pullman Wash., Nov. 16, 1909.

Gentlemen:

We have completed the analysis of the sample of dried brewers' grains you sent in under date of the 25th ult. We found the following percentages: moisture 7.28; ash 3.86; crude protein 21.21; either extract 5.92; crude fibre 17.72. nitrogen free extract 44.01. The percentage of crude fibre in this sample of brewers' grains and the ether extract and crude fat and crude protein are correspondingly slightly lower. This class of material is very generally regarded as being a very valuable food, particularly for dairy animals, on account of its high protein contents.

Yours very truly,
R. W. Thatcher, Chemist.

It is cheaper than bran and better, try it.

SOMEBODY'S GOAT

By LAURENCE ALFRED CLAY

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Somebody's goat stood in the open gate looking at a young lady pinning a wet lace collar on a clothes line.

She looked at him in return. He had the horns of an ibex. He had a venerable whisker. His attitude was truculent. Would he charge?

That goat had a mission. He did not know it, but the mission began to work out as he finally turned from the gate and trotted down the street. When he had departed, the young lady drew a breath of relief and advanced to the gate and fastened it and leaned over it for a moment.

Miss Susie Anderson was young and a teacher in one of the public schools at Medville. This day was Saturday. As for the goat—he was just somebody's goat, just such a goat as can be found wandering around every village.

And Tommy Dwight, the artist, had tired of painting pictures which the American people refused to buy in preference to the old masters, and had come down to Medville to fish and loaf around and get new inspiration. He was on his way to the inn from the depot, baggage in either hand and more on his shoulder, when the girl looked over the gate. She saw him a block away, but she had no interest in him. Tommy might have been the advance agent of a moving ten-cent picture show, for all she knew or cared at that moment.

Miss Susie was interested in the goat. Billy was standing in the middle of the street and his actions were menacing. He was striking the ground with his front feet. He was considering Tommy's case. Then, suddenly, he dashed forward. Tommy was unconscious of his peril. Miss Susie didn't think to scream, and guardian angels are not always around when wanted.

Crash, and Tommy went down. He had to. He lay there, sprawled out amid his baggage, and somebody's goat surveyed him for a moment and then walked placidly away. Tommy did not get up. No one came along to help him, and Miss Susie did the proper and humane thing. She ran down to him. She found him gasping for breath and clawing around as if he had lost something. When the light of intelligence returned to his eyes she gently informed him that a goat had mixed things up for him. Until then he had labored under the impression that it was a brick house.

It was not her goat, and she was very, very sorry, and should she bring out vinegar or a smelling bottle, and were any legs or arms or ribs or shoulders broken? Tommy Dwight had been thrown down, and thrown hard. If it had been a $5,000 automobile, he would have felt all right about it, but to be upset by an old goat in the face of a good-looking girl, hurt and humiliated him. He thanked her sulkily and gathered up his stray baggage and limped off. In the furtive look he cast at his sympathizer he thought he saw a smile on her face.

Saturday came again. Somebody's goat had lived a week longer—was a week nearer his grave. He brought his ibex horns and venerable whisker to the same gate, but found it shut. He peered between the pickets, but no girl was to be seen. He made sure of it and then went away on his mission. He wandered down by the river.

Mr. Tommy Dwight had wandered down by the river. He had gone down there with sturdy stride to fish for mallet and suckers and bass and bullheads. He had quite recovered from the shock of a week ago. He sat fishing, and he hummed as the fish came into his basket. Yes, the world was a good old place to live in, even if a goat was to be met now and then. He had thought of that good looking girl several times, but had avoided passing the house.

Miss Susie Anderson hadn't wandered down to the river. She had sauntered down there. She wanted to see the waters pour over the dam. She wanted to wonder, by herself, if the stranger had forgiven the goat, or was still bent on his assassination. And all of a sudden she saw Tommy Dwight as he fished. And all of a sudden she saw somebody's goat as the goat saw Tommy. Would it be proper to scream and scare all of Tommy's fish away? Could she approach him and warn him that the same goat was after him the same way? Should she throw herself between the goat and the man and receive the head-on collision?

Miss Susie was a little slow in making up her mind, and the goat settled the matter. The fishing, humming, happy Tommy was struck between the shoulders. He uttered a brief prayer for mercy and shot far out into the river and sank. Then the girl screamed. Somebody's goat looked at her and shook his head. Then, as she ran for the water, he went up town on new business.

It was good for Tommy Dwight to come to the surface at all, but particularly good that he came within reaching distance of a pole Miss Susie held out to him. He was drawn ashore. He sputtered and stuttered and coughed and gasped, but life came back to him. Miss Susie ran to the sawmill and got a man, and it was the man who told Tommy that it was the same old goat, and gave him an arm to his hotel. This time there were results. The victim was in bed for five days. The doctor didn't exactly say so in plain English, but he hinted around that both of Tommy's lungs had been parted from their foundation, and that his shoulder blades had been dislocated in seven different directions.

Miss Susie Anderson had a conscience. That conscience accused her of collusion with somebody's goat. She hadn't been a heroine. She hadn't given a warning. She hadn't put forth a hand. And to salve that conscience she sent flowers to Tommy when she heard from the innkeeper's wife that he was in bed and wrapped up in cotton batting. All of this was perfectly right and proper. Tommy held his nose to the bouquets 20 times a day and agreed that it was so. And further, that it was the proper and all right thing to lie there and vow vengeance upon that goat.

When Tommy Dwight's heart and lungs and shoulders had worked back to the proper place, the thing for him to do was to walk down and call on the young lady and tender a thousand thanks.

One evening, therefore, after having hired about 20 boys to scout around and bring back reports that somebody's goat was not to be seen, he started out on his call.

The house was reached. The gate was reached. Miss Susie was perched on the side fence, and the goat was shaking his horns and venerable whiskers at her. He turned from her to see the new arrival, and the light of joy danced in his eyes. He even bleated with happiness.

But it was not to be. As somebody's goat drew a long breath and dashed forward he met a determined painter of landscapes. There was a club handy, and it fell upon Billy's pate with a crash, and he rolled over to die game. He gave not one bleating appeal for pity. He died game.

Several months later Tommy had come down to Medvale on one of his weekly visits, and he and Miss Susie had been talking and talking, when he suddenly asked:

"Haven't you always thought that somebody's goat had a mission on earth?"

"To bunt folks, do you mean?"

"No; to bring them together."

"Why, it does look a little that way," she said as she blushed and began to play on the piano.

Tommy not only got somebody's goat, but he got somebody else.

GAME DRIVEN TO THE SWAMPS

Forest Fires Have Caused Caribou, Deer and Moose to Desert Their Usual Quarters.

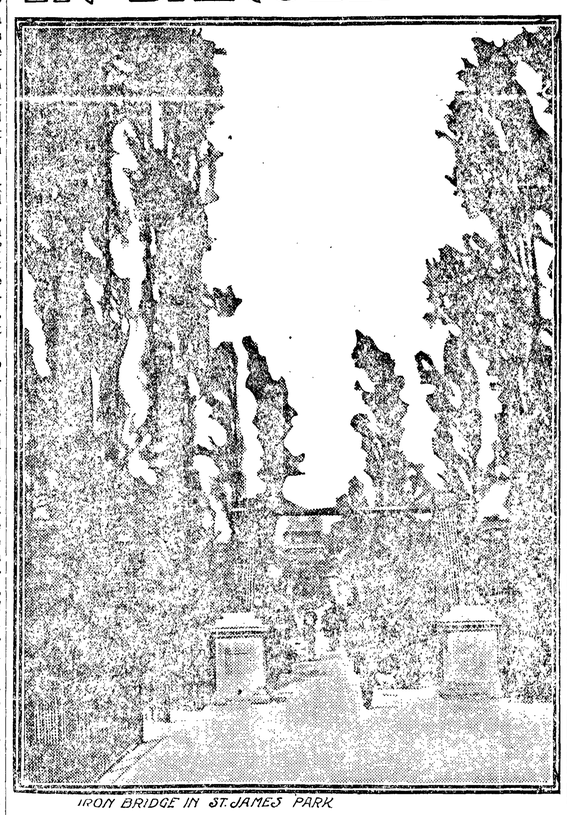
According to the opinion of an old resident of the country about Kelliher and the upper and lower Red lakes, the forest fires which have been burning with more or less regularity in the wooded sections of that community have had a tendency to force the moose and deer from their usual haunts into the more swampy parts and more particularly to the big swamp north of the upper Red lake, where there is a safe retreat from fires.

While these fires are not heavy or dangerous, yet they are sufficiently severe to disturb the big game animals and cause them to seek more congenial quarters.

The country about the Rapid river, which flows northward from a point northwest of Red lake to the Rainey river on the Canadian boundary, has always been the habitat of large droves of caribou, about the only stamping ground of these animals in the northern states.

Parties who have visited the Rapid river section state that there are more caribou this year than ever, and that deer and moose have been added in large numbers since the summer season began. As Agent Bishop, Red Lake agency, is co-operating with the officials of the state game and fish commission to prevent the slaughter of big game by the Indians the deer, moose and caribou in the Rapid country have been but little disturbed this summer.—Bemidji Correspondence St. Paul Pioneer Press.

ST. JAMES' PARK IN DANGER



IRON BRIDGE IN ST. JAMES' PARK

GREAT alarm has been caused by all lovers of the picturesque in London by proposals to make decided changes in St. James' Park, partly in connection with the placing of the King Edward memorial. A storm of protests has arisen and some of the "improvements" doubtless will be abandoned, but the committee in charge adheres to its determination to remove the famous iron suspension bridge and substitute one of stone. This is denounced as a "wickedly Philistine project."

In Norman times what is now St. James' Park was a lonely expanse of fields and woodlands surrounding a hospital for fourteen lepers. The institution was dedicated to St. James. Many generations of "leper maydens" shook their cups and platters to solicit alms from the wayfarers who passed their solitary abode, before Henry VIII cast covetous eyes upon their woodland domain. He desired to convert it into grounds for Wolsey's palace of Whitehall, which he had lately appropriated. The leper sisters received notice to quit and were granted a sum in compensation. The hospital was razed to the ground, and upon the site Henry erected the palace, or, as it was then termed, the "Manor House of St. James'." Thither he brought his new queen, Anne Boleyn, and in the bright spring mornings they rode forth a-Maying with a gay cavalcade over uninterrupted country to Hampstead.

St. James' Park attained its full glory under the Stuarts as a fashionable promenade and a beautiful pleasure ground. The Sieur de la Serre described the palace and park in glowing terms when he visited the court of Charles I and Henrietta Maria. He was lost in admiration of the "two great grand gardens" planted with fruit trees and bounded by "a great park" filled with deer. Across this same park Charles was taken to Whitehall for execution.

After the Restoration, Charles II, although he did not occupy St. James' palace, made a hobby of beautifying the park and gardens. Pepys was an enthusiastic chronicler of the "great and noble alterations," and was constantly "to the park" to see how they were progressing. He speaks of the engines at work drawing up the water to make the lake, of the "Physique Garden" which was planted, of the king's aviary and the wild fowl which he kept, and liked to feed.

Skating was first introduced into this country by the cavaliers of the merry monarch on the canal of St. James' Park during the severe winter of 1662, and at the St. James' promenades gentlemen were first seen "wearing muffs." Smoking was not tolerated in the park. Charles II and Catherine of Braganza rode there daily in "a most elegant manner." The grand promenade was at the east end of the Mall, in front of the Horse Guards. The Mall was then a smooth hollow walk, bordered by box and used for the game of Mell, which gave it its name. The duke of York made the game fashionable and was the leader in an animated scene of cavaliers chattering, laughing and saluting as they essayed to throw the ball through the iron ring hanging from a post.

The park of that period was a beautiful enclosure of grass and trees intersected by winding walks and traversed by a canal, at one end of which the king had constructed his duck island and decoy. He had also an aviary, which gave the name to Birdcage walk. At the southeast end of the canal was Rosamond's pond, a notorious place for assignations, and their corollary, suicides. It was wooded and secluded, and for a period was the scene of more suicides by drowning than any other place in town. The pond was filled up in 1770.

Throughout succeeding reigns St. James' Park, which became more beautiful year by year as the trees in the Mall grew and flourished, remained a fashionable lounge and promenade. There beauty, wit and fashion paraded in the days of the early Georges. When St. James' palace ceased, in the reign of George III, to be the residence of the monarch, the park began to lose prestige as a place of fashion. George IV made some improvements to the park, and finally threw it open as a public resort. The roads through it were first lighted with gas in 1822. This period marks the end of the exclusive tenure by the crown of a demesne which had been a private royal pleasure-ground since the time of Henry VIII.

The last vestige of its early rural associations disappeared with the milksellers and their cows when they were removed from their historic standing opposite Spring gardens to make way for the widening of the Mall some ten years ago. Gone, too, are the rows of fine old trees, under whose shade many generations of Londoners have watched historic royal processions and the company passing to drawing rooms and levees. A spacious avenue has now been made and new trees are growing apace, but there are some who regret the loss of the restful charm of the dear old Mall of St. James'.

First Century Find.

President Solomon Schetchter of the Jewish theological seminary of America has discovered a Hebrew manuscript in Cairo, Egypt, where it is said to have been cherished with great care for 1,000 years by the Jewish congregation.

It is claimed that the document was written in the first century of the Christian era.

It has been translated by Prof. Schetchter and published by the university press in England. It purports to be an address by a religious leader to his followers. The references are held by George Margoliouth, custodian of Hebrew manuscripts in the British museum, to apply to John the Baptist, and Jesus and Paul. John is called a Messiah who led the people to meditate on their sins, Jesus a preacher of righteousness, and Paul a scoffer—presumably because of his dissent from Judaism.

The writer and his followers appear to have belonged to a sect, half Jewish and half Christian, which fled to Damascus after the destruction of Jerusalem.

Sickness Insurance.

Lloyd George, British chancellor of the exchequer, has published the provisional draft of a scheme which he hopes will be passed by parliament, the fundamental provision of which is compulsory insurance against serious sickness and incapacity for work for the whole laboring population of the United Kingdom, whose wages are below the sum of about $800.

The age limits are 16 and 70 years, the latter being the age at which old-age pensions begin.

The minimum allowance will be $1.20 a week.

The cost will be divided, the insured paying one-half and the employer and the state one-fourth each.

It is proposed to establish a central administrative council, made up of representatives of the government, the friendly societies and employers of labor, to decide all controversies arising in the working out of the plan.

BRONZE DOG CAUSES TROUBLE

Is Removed From Statue in England After Riots Led by Vivisectionists.

London.—The famous figure of the brown dog has disappeared from the fountain at Battersea, England. It created a lively sensation while it was there and it was the cause of a great many encounters between the police and its friends and enemies. The brown dog was a bronze and stood on a granite fountain. On this fountain was the following inscription:

"In memory of the brown terrier dog done to death in the laboratories of the University college, Feb., 1903, after having endured vivisection extending over more than two months and having been handed over from one vivisectionist to another until

CHANGE STOCKINGS AND MIND

Discovery of Small Hole in the Former Causes Bride-Elect to Call Off Marriage.

Seattle, Wash.—Leonora Murphy, 19 and pretty, and Clyde Rowan of Astoria, Ore., after having been engaged for four years, were on their way to the minister's the other day to get married, when the bride-to-be discovered a whole in her right stocking just above the shoe top.

By the time the two reached the parsonage she had decided that the hole would show when she kneeled before the minister. In spite of Rowan's protest she bade the minister and Rowan wait until she could go home and change her stocking.

She hadn't been home more than five minutes before she telephoned Rowan he need not wait any longer. She said that while changing her stocking she had also changed her mind, and determined not to be married.

SHOULD HAVE FRUIT GARDEN

One Acre of Ground Is Sufficient to Supply the Average Farmer With Bountiful Supply.

If the farmers only knew the comparatively small cost that would enable them to supply their tables with an abundance of bush and tree fruits and the health and contentment which the use of these fruits would bring, many more would engage in their culture. One acre of ground near the dwelling, planted with some of the best varieties of small and large fruits, would be sufficient to give a moderate-sized family a bountiful supply from the 1st of June until midwinter.

A piece of ground should be selected which has a good dry soil facing the south or southwest and protected by the dwelling or a belt of trees on the north and west sides to ward off the cold north winds and rainstorms. The ground should be deeply plowed and finely pulverized. The standard apple, pear and plum trees should be planted in rows. Apple trees should be planted 30 feet apart each way, as they take six to eight years to come into full fruitery. Standard pears, plums and peaches may be planted in the same row with the apples, allowing the trees to stand 15 feet part in the row. Plant grapes in eight-foot rows and eight feet apart in the row. The small fruits, such as gooseberries, currants, raspberries and blackberries, may be planted in five-foot rows in between the larger trees and strawberries in the same rows as the apple and pear trees.

HOG FEEDING IS IMPORTANT

It is quite common to furnish hogs wood ashes, charcoal, salt and other things of a like nature, as it is thought such things keep the animals in good health. The experiment stations are making a study of this matter, and some interesting facts about the need of mineral elements in animal diet are given in bulletins 201 and 207 of the Ohio experiment station.

It was shown by one of the experiments cited that it was possible to kill animals quicker by removing the mineral matter from their food than to deprive them of all food. In experiments with hogs, the use of chalk, bone flour, calcium phosphates and other calcium salts gave good results. Wheat bran, clover and grasses supply much mineral matter in addition to the much-needed protein, so these foods are relatively more important than corn, except during the final finishing period, when mostly fat is wanted.

Hogs are bringing long prices these days, and they certainly deserve good care and the best we have in the way of feed.

HELPFUL DAIRY NOTES.

On the dairy farm a short system of crop rotation removes old fields, puts all crops nearer to the manure and fertilizer used, increases the variety of the feeds, adds to their value through an increase in their protein content and to their palatability and ease of digestion.

Food and food productions for the dairy lie at the foundation of successful dairying. Unless the foundation is well laid the business will be a failure.

Dairying today is the leading branch of farming, bringing to the farmer the most money and leaving the land in the best possible condition to continue its production.

Cows for market are as much a product of our dairy business as milk and butter, and many farmers are finding good profits in growing and selling good dairy cows to their brother dairymen who are not in a position to raise their own cows.

Poultry in the Orchard.

A well-drained orchard promotes the life of your trees; a well-drained poultry yard affords a long life to your flock. Why not plant both on the same plot of ground?

The droppings from the poultry as they roam over the orchard are valuable. In order to keep up the fertility of the soil in the orchard, one must use a good fertilizer, and there is nothing more valuable in this line than poultry manure.

We scatter all the cleanings from the colony and hen houses all over our orchard.

Too Conservative.

The traveler had become hopelessly mired in one of the country highways.

"Why don't you people here use a split log drag on this blamed road," he bellowed at the farmer sitting on a rail fence.

"You town folks have been preachin' that we ort to conserve our timber resources, and we're doin' it, mister," placidly answered the farmer.

Another Nature Fake.

Dottie and Daisy sat on the steps discussing the circus parade they had just enjoyed so highly.

"Oh, Daisy," said Dottie, "did you see the hippopotamus?"

"I should think so," answered Daisy, with a shudder. "I can feel them crawling all over me yet!"

Physician Said Appendicitis

Gall Stones Expelled by the Great Kidney Preparation

I thought I would do you a favor and let you know what Swamp-Root has done so far for me.

About one year ago I was taken sick with a terrible pain in my right side. My family physician pronounced it appendicitis. About two weeks ago I received your Almanac and read in it about weak kidneys, and my back hurting me so much, I thought I would try your Swamp-Root and to my great astonishment, after using one bottle, I expelled three gall stones, which weighed 135 grains—just think of it. My kidneys are not well yet, and so I have concluded to continue with Swamp-Root. Mr. Schwake, the druggist, thought that it never was appendicitis and that the doctor had made a mistake. It was no doubt, gall stones that caused the trouble, or they would not have come away so soon after commencing with Swamp-Root.

I shall always praise Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root to all those who suffer from kidney, liver and bladder troubles and am very thankful that I ever discovered such a worthy remedy. I feel confident that it will cure me entirely of all kidney and liver trouble.

COMPARE FODDER AND SILAGE

Frequently one hears the complaint that the hard work incident to filling a silo far outbalances the superiority of ensilage over dry fodder. They claim that dry fodder is good enough and that although the cattle do not eat all of it they eat that which contains the most nourishment. It is a readily conceded fact that there will be waste in connection with fodder even in its best form.

The Indiana experiment station has shown that this waste varies from twenty to thirty-five per cent. The same authority tells us that cattle will consume all of the silage if it is not fed in excessive quantities. Further than this, the silage goes to them in the shape that provides a succulent feed most nearly supplementing the condition of pasture. It is generally accepted that the dairy cow does best when upon fresh grass. Granted that this is the case, the more nearly your can produce fresh grass conditions the better will be your returns and the more profitable dairying will be.

After all, when you come to figure the work of shocking corn, drawing it to the shredder, putting the grain in the crib and shredded fodder in the mow, there is little difference between the work necessary for filling the silo and getting the dry feed ready for feeding.

There is another point to be taken into consideration and that is the fact that the grain in the silage is all ready for feeding without grinding. If the grain is to be fed in connection with the shredded fodder, it will be necessary to grind or chop it at least. This task is saved by the silo.

BETTER POULTRY BEING KEPT

People All Over Country Paying More Attention to Pure Bred Stock in Their Chicken Yards.

All over the country people are keeping better poultry than they did a few years ago. They have found that better hens and other poultry pay better with the same amount of feed and care than do mongrels. On some farms mongrel flocks may be found, but on most farms at least good male breeding birds are kept and mated with common stock, so that the ordinary flock now shows distinctive qualities in some direction.

It is rather common now for one farmer to ask another what kind of chickens he is raising just as he would ask about his special breed of hogs or sheep. The average man has come to consider himself not much of a poultry raiser if he cannot at least boast of pure bred roosters of some common strain.

One reason why more farmers do not have better breeds of poultry is because the hatching and brooding season comes in their busiest time of the year. Yet many farmers are beginning to realize that there is good profit in working with their poultry part of the time, as there is with other live stock and with field crops.

They now take some time to feed and care for poultry and to make crops and other things for the requirements of the growing stock. The time is fast coming when most farmers will grow as good quality of poultry as people in other lines of work.

IN THE SHEEPFOLD.

Keep the sheep pens clean. Dirt and foul odors affect sheep quickly.

Feed that will keep the bowels open is the best for this time of the year. Wheat bran helps to do it.

Sheep will make good use of about every weed that grows on the farm, except possibly, thistles and mullein, and turn them into first-class mutton.

Sheep will dig pretty close to the grass roots in the early spring if you give them a chance. They like a taste of something fresh. If you feed them plenty of turnips this will satisfy their appetites.

It is the farmer who keeps sheep for a number of years that finds them most profitable. Some years they will return a much better profit than others and it is hard to sell and buy at just the right time.

Glass Walls in Fruit Culture.

Fruit culturists abroad have recently essayed the use of fruit walls of glass instead of masonry, with interesting results. With a glass wall the same kinds of fruit can be grown on both the north and south sides. The results in the case of pear trees are said to be most excellent, the fruit grown on the north side of the wall being equal to that grown on the south side, and even smoother. Good results have also been obtained in the case of peaches and apples. The principal objection made to the glass wall, says the Scientific American, is that it does not store up heat like a masonry wall, to keep the plants warm at night; during the daytime the heat is nearly equal on both sides of the wall.

MIRACULOUS CURE BY PRINCE

The other day saw the death of an old friend of the kaiser—Prince Boris Czetwertynski. The prince had a passion for big game hunting, and a rather funny story is told in connection with one of his expeditions in central Africa.

The one thing he could not tolerate was anything in the way of shirking hard work. As he was going upcountry one of his companions—a rather lazy man, complained of being ill. After the prince had nursed him tenderly for several days he began to be suspicious, and finally he became convinced that the man was shamming.

One morning, as he entered the tent, his patient asked, plaintively:

"Boris, do you think I shall die?"

The prince smoothed his patient's pillow in the kindliest way, and whispered:

"I pray every morning that you will!"

The "patient" was up and about next day.

Useful Father.

Freddy is a physician's son, and, loving to go barefooted, frequently makes work for his father.

"One of these days, sonnie," this father not long since exhorted the young hopeful, 'you'll get your feet seriously wounded, running about car tracks and all as you do without shoes and stockings."

"Well," answered Freddy, his eyes twinkling, but his manner quite serious, "so long's you're a doctor I can get mended for nothin', can't I?"

THE TRUTH ABOUT BLUING.

Talk No. 2.

Avoid liquid bluing. Don't buy water for bluing. All the water contained is so much adulteration. Glass bottles make an expensive package; add nothing to value to consumer.

Always ask for RED CROSS BALL BLUE, the blue that's all blue. Makes the laundress smile out loud. Large package 5 cents AT ALL GOOD GROCERS.

Inexplicable.

"He is generally known as a hard-headed business man, isn't he?"

"Yes."

"There's something I wish you would explain, if you can. What is it that causes a hard-headed business man to pay money to a woman whose nails need manicuring—a woman whose general appearance is slovenly and who evidently finds it difficult to make ends meet—why, I say, should a hard-headed business man go to such a woman for the purpose of getting her to tell his fortune—to give him pointers concerning the management of his affairs—to tell him when to buy and when to sell?"

"Oh, thunder! You might as well ask me to tell you why a woman who knows perfectly well that you are lying when you tell her she is beautiful keeps tempting you to repeat it and finally gets to hating your wife."

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from roots without alcohol. Contain no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Australian Voting.

Our "Australian ballot" system was made in Massachusetts, but its old name still holds, though the Australians have never had anything like it, their ballots being a decided improvement on "the Australian ballot." The names of all candidates for an office are placed one under another in alphabetical order and without party designation. The voter must use some discernment in voting, and the bonds of a party organization are weakened. Two new ideas have been adopted. The man absent, or five miles removed from his voting place, casts his ballot by mail, or, under another law, he may declare his eligibility for voting in Australia and cast his ballot at the place where he happens to be. The first idea, though labeled "new" in the cable dispatches, is not entirely so, for the New Zealanders have had a somewhat similar provision for some years and it evidently has worked so satisfactorily as to commend it to their neighbors. The Australian feature of balloting transmitted to us was the secrecy and official character of the ballot rather than its arrangement.

Contrary to Rule.

"So many of the visitors at the seaside resort where I was staying were complaining yesterday of that unpleasant sinking feeling."

"Well, a sinking feeling ought not to make much headway with a floating population."

The Doings of Our Neighbors

ELWHA

Thirty-five new books were presented to the school, for their desired library, by the E. S. Club.

Knowing Miss Gilbert would pass the school house in the early evening, last Saturday, the neighbors, wishing to give her a surprise, gathered there and turned up the lights, trusting to Miss Gilbert's natural curiosity to investigate the meaning of the lights. Needless to say she investigated and a pleasant evening for all followed

A. T. Stevenson, manager of Elwha Lumber & Shingle Co., has gone to Everett on business.

Ralph Sisson and wife, also her father, Mr. Filion, spent Sunday at the Mountain Inn.

Francis Stevenson and Nat Broughton brought home a string of fish from Lake Sutherland on Sunday.

A good many Angelites spent a delightful day in picnicing and fishing on Elwha the first day of the week.

Mr. Brome and Skavdale of Crescent visited at Mr. Coventon's on Sunday.

The Litte River Shingle Mill is again running. Mr. Daniels has had many difficulties to contend with, but hope there will be no more.

Miss Gilbert, Miss and Mr. Coventon are taking a trip up the Elwha to Geyser Valley, and the mountains, and will be guests of the Humes Bros.

The Dungeness correspondent to the Sequim News says that County Commissioner Lotzgesell is erecting a fine new barn on his farm southwest of town. The structure will be 100x120 feet base by 33 feet 4 inches high, with concrete floors and equipped with all modern conveniences—strictly up to-date and one of the best in the county. This was made necessary in order to accomodate the heavy string of cows carried on the farm, and it is consistent with the farm itself, which is known as one of the best of that best of counties on the Pacific coast—the lower Dungeness valley.

A fire broke out at Merrill's shingle mill, Tuesday noon, and destroyed considerable of the building and machinery, but they expect to be running again the early part of next week.

If you are building, call on Baker & Co., they can furnish you with nails, hinges, locks, and all kinds of hardware. Also roofing and lineing paper.

SURE, WE'LL DEFER IT

The city council in regular session Tuesday evening upon recommendation of street committee, ordered new railing placed on foot bridge on Sixth street, between Lincoln and Chase; also railing on Peabody street, between Seventh and Eighth. Both needed improvements.

Light committee recommended that light line be extended to Eighth and C. street, at an estimated cost of $600. So ordered.

City Attorney was instructed to notify persons who are delinquent on sidewalk assessments to pay at once, and bring suit in default of payment.

The following communication from G. W Morrow to Mayor Mead was read before Council and placed on file:

N. K Mead, Mayor—Dear Sir:

I have been informed that your people are about to do some grading on the streets leading to the water front in the near future, and would suggest that you defer doing anything on either one of the streets where we are liable to build the railroad until I have had an opportunity to see you which will be between now and the first of the month. I expect to be in Angeles in the next ten days. One thing sure, it will be neccessary for us to establish a grade for the railway, and believe that our engineers could establish a grade that would be satisfactory to your city council, and this ought to be done before you start work.

Trusting the delay of ten or fifteen days will not inconvenience your people, I am

Yours truly,
G. W. Morrow.
