Review of Seattle Market for the Past Week.

ALL CEREALS ARE ADVANCING

Wheat, Flour, Feed and Grain Higher—Provisions Marked Up — Changes in Hardware—Clearing House Balances.

SEATTLE, April 20, 1894.

Exchanges at Seattle, Tacoma and Portland clearing houses to-day were:

	Clearances.	Balances.
Seattle	$145,925.36	$47,190.06
Tacoma	80,756.00	17,389.00
Portland	243,000.00	90.000.00

THE SEATTLE MARKETS.

The general advance in the price of cereals and cereal products has taken place during the week. This was foreshadowed by the indications a week ago. Wheat for milling purposes now commands about 56 cents per bushel here, which is 9 or 10 cents higher than it was a month ago. The reason of this lies largely in the fact that so much damaged wheat has been forced upon the market and kept prices down. Comparatively little of the damaged wheat ramains, that millers handle, and it has been found expensive to bse.

The New Albany.

The Thompson-Morse building on the corner of Laurel and Front streets has been leased to Mr. H. B. Crockett, of the New Arlington, who will renovate the building throughout, designate it the "New Albany," and open to the general public a first-class hotel. It is needless to add that Mr. Crockett is thoroughly qualified and has had the experience to conduct an excellent house, as the record he has established since assuming management of the New Arlington, will abundantly testify as much.

Bound Over.

Jose Romero, the Chilean, who was arrested for stealing a boat from Pete Sliva and a gun from Jose Frasier both of Sequim bay, was given a preliminary hearing in Judge Carusi's court last Monday, and the evidence being sufficient was bound over to appear for trial at the next term of the superior court. In default of bail Romero was committed to jail.

Why Is It?

That Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines are held by the public in so much higher estimation than other engines? The parties using these engines, and their name is legion, are the ones who can best answer this question. They well know the ease and promptness with which the engines are started and the very little care they require to keep them running month after month with the most perfect satisfaction. They run without a spark battery, which is admitted to be unreliable. The simple ignition tubes of the Hercules Engines are far better. Send for catalogue. If you want second hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until these are realized on. The Pacific Coast Steamship Company

THREATENS TO WITHDRAW THE

Steamship Queen From Port Angeles If the Business Men Violate Their Pledge With It—Overtures Were Made by the Business Men of this City to Induce that Company to Include Angeles In Its Puget Sound Service—The Company Complied and Now Business Pledged It Goes to a Tramp Steamer.

Some months ago the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, through the instrumentality and representations made by the Board of Trade of this city, finally, with great reluctance, agreed to give this city semi-monthly steamer service with San Francisco, the condition being only that business men should do as they solemnly agreed—give their entire patronage to the company.

These solemn pledges were preserved inviolate by the business men of this city until an enchanting tempter appears on the scene and charms them with the seductive morsel of lower freight rates—then under the magic spell pledges once solemnly made are violated.

This is not all. Insult is added to injury. Not only has business been withdrawn that righteously this company was entitled to, but they are requested to reduce freight to the ruinously low rate established by the tramp steamer, the service of which is infinitely and incomparably inferior to that provided by the former.

The matter has finally assumed a decidedly unfavorable phase, the company positively declaring that it no longer will be trifled with, demanding that Port Angeles keep faith with it, or the service will be discontinued at once.

As a matter of fact Port Angeles is honorably bound to extend its business to the uttermost limit to the Pacific Coast Steamship Company. The business men of the city have promised as much, and they can ill-afford to compromise their integrity, violate their pledges and destroy the confidence, esteem and good-will of the company, that solely through the solicitations, concessions and overtures repeatedly made it by the board of trade of this city, finally, against its best business judgment, established the service that has as yet not only proved unprofitable, but barely met the additional expenses incurred in the run.

A meeting of representative business men should be held at once, at which a resolution should be adopted expressing the unanimous sentiment of the meeting to be unreservedly in favor of loyally standing by the Pacific Coast Steamship Company in the measure of extending it the entire business, inasfar as is possible to control that rightfully belongs to it.

The sentiment of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company upon this subject is adequately expressed in the following letter recently written its agent at Seattle:

Mr. J. H. Johnson, Supt.
Seattle, Wash.:

DEAR SIR—We hand you herewith a letter from G. M. Lauridson, Port Angeles, to Mr. R. H. Williams of the Del Monte Milling Co., inclosing the City of Puebla's freight bill, under date January 15, to show the rate evidently charged by this company to Port Angeles. You will note by Mr. Lauridson's letter that he wishes us to reduce the rates to Port Angeles on account of competition of the Farralone. You are quite familiar with the efforts that were made to get this company to stop at Port Angeles, very much against our wishes and judgment, because there was not sufficient business we thought to justify our calling there.

At the very urgent solicitation, however, of the merchants of Port Angeles, a delegation of which visited this city, who, in connection with a delegation from the San Francisco merchants, called at our office, we finally consented to try as an experiment the calling at Port Angeles with one of the steamers. We did so, and though the business has been exceedingly thin, we have continued do so up to the present time. The rates charged there are the same as charged to Fairhaven, Anacortes, New Whatcom and other comparatively small places.

Our recollection is that it was not so much a question of rates with the Port Angeles people, as a desire to have the steamers make regular trips there for the purpose of assisting them in a general way, and helping their town along, etc. The business of the place amounts to comparatively little, there certainly is not sufficient for two lines, anyway, and as for reducing our rates and competing with the Farralone, or any other tramp steamer, it is simply out of the question.

If Mr. Lauridson and the other merchants at Port Angeles want this company to call, they will have to give us all the business of the place, and at the rates now established, if not we will quit.

We had some correspondence a short time since with reference to this same matter, and understood that you were going over there and discuss the matter and urge some definite conclusion. If you find the merchants and people of Port Angeles do not want this company to call on the basis originally agreed upon, please advise us by telegraph and we will discontinue the service to that port. The people of Port Angeles urged us for years to call there before we finally did. If we quit now, it will be a long time before we will renew the service, so let it be understood that the people of Port Angeles will decide now whether they want this company's service or somebody else's, and if they decide they do not want ours on the terms agreed, let it be definitely understood, that we do not intend to be "used," and that when the Farralone quits, which she will after awhile, the same as the "Homer" did, and all the rest of the tramps, that they will not find this company ready to again call and serve them simply because or when they cannot get some body else to do so. We are not in that line of business.

Yours truly,
GOODALL, PERKINS & CO.

County Road Improvements.

The plan adopted by the board of county commissioners to provide work for the worthy needy is excellent to say the least as it is fruitful of good results to the county in the improvement of its public highways.

For several months past from twenty to forty mew have steadily been working on the county roads, widening, grading, planking, graveling and otherwise improving the roads wherever needed, and the result has been a decided and a very noticeable improvement. The road recently graded and graveled from a point beginning on Front street at corner of Race street east to the bridge, which places this piece of road in excellent condition.

The Geraghety road has been materially improved.

Arrangements are being perfected to place a force of men on the Quillayute-Angeles road, to open and grade the unfinished portion west from Fairholme.

A force of men are at work this week opening the Christophersen road. There is also considerable road work being done in the Quillayute and in the Dungeness country, which is significant of the fact that the people of the county are determined to have good, passable roads—a very sensible conclusion, and one that will be productive of lasting benefit to city and county.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS

Eighth and Cherry Streets Will Be Created

INTO ASSESSMENT DISTRICTS,

Opened, Graded, Planked, and an Eight-Foot Sidewalk Constructed on Either Side—The Gulch Road Will Be Improved—Claims for Damages Filed—Committee Appointed to Confer With C. E. Mallette Regarding Water Rights in Little River.

The regular meeting of the city council occurred last Wednesdag evening, Mayor McGill, and Councilmen M. McGill, Crockett, Beam, Krueger, Graybill and McLaughlin being present.

The council approved the action of the mayor, the finance committee and the city clerk in causing to be issued on January 25th, 1894, a general fund warrant in the sum of $100, the proceeds of which were used to defray the expenses of the special committee empowered at that time to proceed to Seattle to secure funds to meet the interest due February 1st, 1894, upon the city's municipal bond series No. 1.

The street commissioner was instructed to notify all parties owning land or lots in Tumwater valley in writing and by publication in the official paper of the city, that all trees standing in such valley, upon such property, from A street to the boulevard, upon which trees are now standing, dangerous to life, limb and property, have been condemned by the city council and that the same shall be at once cut down by the parties interested, or the same shall be done at the expense of the owner of such lots.

The street commissioner was also instructed to repair the road known as the gulch road, at cost not to execed $80.

The petition of Capt. Bradley to sell his book entitled "O'Toole's Mallet," without being subject to a license for so doing was granted.

Mr. C. E. Mallette notified the council that he withdrew any proposition heretofore made by him for right of way through his land and a site for a reservoir; also that he had legal rights and legal claim to all the water rights on Little river.

Lewis Levy also imformed the council that he would hold the city responsible for any trespass upon or damage done to his land, by W. C. Williams, manager, in constructing the pipe line for the electric lighting works. J. C. Coolidge also filed a claim for $500, for damages and trespass, claimed to have been sustained by him, through the action of W. C. Williams, manager, and his employes.

Ordinance No. 211, declaring the intention of the city to grade Cherry street from the water front to the boulevard, and Ordinance No. 212, declaring the intention of the city to grade, plank, gutter and bridge Eighth street, from M street to the eastern boundary of the city, passed their first reading and were referred to the proper committee.

The city engineer was instructed to prepare estimates of the cost of making such improvements and submit to the council at its next regular meeting.

A committee consisting of Councilmen Beam, Crockett and Krueger was appointed to confer with C. E. Mallette, in the matter of securing right of way and water rights on Little river. The same committee was also instructed to wait upon W. C. Williams, manager, and ascertain from him upon what terms he will discontinue work upon his contract. The council adjourned to meet this afternoon at one o'clock.

He will endeavor to make Pysht again one of the principal trading posts for the Quillayute.

The Neah Bay and Quillayute road is now opened up between Ozette Lake and the Quillayute prairie, a distance of seven miles. The credit for the work is due to the boys on Ozette Lake, twenty of whom reached the Dickey river yesterday evening, having finished the job. The road crosses the Dickey river near the mouth of Coal creek, where a bridge could be built for a small amount of money, the river at that place being only 75 feet wide. The new road will be of great convenience to both the Ozette and Quillayute people.

On Saturday evening, April 7, a large number of the citizens of Quillayute met at the schoolhouse for the purpose of organizing a new society. On temporary organization John D. Hagadorn was elected chairman, and H. Hansen secretary. It was unanimously agreed that the name should be "The Reform Club of Quillayute." After the constitution was adopted and the club organized, the following members were elected offices by acclamation: John D. Hagadorn, president: I. Van Horn first vice-president; J. PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

A GOOD TARIFF BILL.

The Post-Intelligencer presumes greatly on the ignorance of its readers, when it attacks the Democratic tariff reform bill of 1846 as a Southern sectional tariff bill. It is true that this bill had the support of the South, aided by Northern Democrats, but it is also true that its working was so admirable and its wisdom so well established that it met the hearty approval of all parties, and 11 years later in 1856, New England consented and voted for a further reduction of the tariff. And further, we find such Republicans as James A. Garfield and William B. Allison singing the praises of the low tariff from 1846 to 1860 as late as 1872.

Wm. B. Allison in advocating a reduction of the war tariff then said:

"The tariff of 1846, although confessedly and professedly a tariff for revenue, was, so far as regards all the great interests of the country, as perfect a tariff as any that we ever had. When we compare the growth of the country from 1840 to 1850 with the growth of the country from 1850 to 1860, the latter decade being entirely under the tariff of 1846, or the amended and greatly reduced tariff of 1857, we find that the increase in our wealth between 1850 and 1860 was equivalent to 126 per cent., while it was only 64 per cent. between 1840 and 1850, four years of which decade were under the tariff of 1842, known as a high protective tariff. Our industries were generally prosperous in 1860."

At the time James A. Garfield enunciated his position on the tariff while advocating the enlargement of the free list, of favoring "a tariff that would lead to ultimate free trade," he found many good things to say about the Walker tariff.

But then that was before the Republican party sold out to the tariff barons for the wherewith to pay campaign expenses.

SENATOR HILL, REPUBLICAN.

The manner in which the Democratic press of the United States has proceeded to read Senator Hill out of the party is, indeed, refreshing. There is no room in the Democratic party for protectionists. It is hard enough to put up with trimmers and a few self-styled tariff reformers who wish to reduce the tariff on every article except that produced in his district, but when a man accepts the Republican policy of protection for protection's sake, he should leave the Democratic party—yea, he has already left it.

Had Mr. Hill given voice to that silly, ridiculous McKinley chestnut about the foreigner paying the tariff tax before he was chosen a senator, he would not be where he now is. Tammany would have been unable to muster strength enough to give him the caucus nomination. Indeed, it is more than probable that Tammany hall itself would have repudiated him, had his recent tariff speech been delivered while he was yet governor.

Senator Hill should take his place on the other side of the aisle.

THE statement has been made in Port Angeles that Democrats were equally responsible with Republicans for the passage of the Sherman bullion purchase bill in 1890. This is a mistake. Every Democrat in both branches of congress voted against the Sherman bill. The Sherman bill and the McKinley bill were passed by the only Republican House of Representative since that elected in 1880.

THE Solduck correspondent of the Beaver Leader should not misstate facts. The notices to taxpayers to appear and show cause why his taxes should not be raised are given by the board of county missioners who fix all dates. The auditor, as clerk of the board, simply issues the notices.

FOR the sake of outraged consistency the Republicans should quit talking about a sectional tariff. The whole American people have been paying tribute to less than 10,000 for 24 years under Republican rule.

GOVERNOR WAITE says Corbett and Jackson cannot fight in Colorado. Waite and his militia evidently have a mortgage on that kind of pastime in Colorado.

MRS. PETERS IN CHICAGO.

Where She Goes to Promote the Elwha Heights Colony.

CHICAGO, April 11th, 1894.

A trip over the Canadian Pacific railroad, from Vancouver to St. Paul, is an interesting one, inasmuch as one realizes the vastness of the country by the trip as it cannot be realized by a person who has never gone over the road, and besides this, one gets a better conception of the powerful achievements man has accomplished in overcoming obstacles in nature. Vancouver is a very pretty city, situated on the Fraser river, but, unfortunately, rain was falling in such torrents that I could not go out as I should have liked while I was there. At 2 o'clock on Friday, April 6th, the train pulled out from the station. All the afternoon we were on the shore of the river, and forgot to notice the work of railroad building, as our attention was called to the old Cariboo pack trail, made some 40 years ago, along the banks of the river, climbing up the sides of the mountains, built upon trestle bridges across crevices, then down again to a level with the river, as the valley widens, but is soon driven back by the angry waters, which go tumbling and roaring over their rocky and narrow bed.

Two days and two nights we speed along in the midst of a mountain range, scenery which must be seen to be appreciated. On Saturday evening we had reached an altitude of 4,050 feet, the last mountain we saw before night closed her sable curtain around us was St. Stephen, a vast rocky peak upon whose rugged sides were many ice glaciers, the largest being hundreds of feet above, the green ice, with white, snowy sides and the brown of the rocks gave color to the scene which makes a picture of exceeding grandeur. We could not see the great glacier as it was snowing heavily as we passed that point. One regrets the coming of night while going through the mountains. I arose at 5 a. m. on Saturday, in order to get all benefit I could of the daylight, and was well repaid. On Sunday morning, however, when I opened my eyes on the plains of Canada, I again placed my head upon my pillow and was in no hurry to rise. A dreary desert all day long, earth brown and barren, with only here and there a station, a few houses clustered around it and generally a herd of cattle or horses feeding on the prairie from the yellow grass, all day and all night over the most monotonous country imaginable. Monday all day through North Dakota, more broken and with a little more sign of cultivation, yet it makes one sad to think there is so much of America that is almost barren, only because of the rigor of climate. There was snow drifts and ice on all sides in Dakota. There was some ploughing going on. We reached the Minnesota line about dusk, and snow had fallen and continued to fall all night. It was about 5 inches deep when we reached St. Paul on Tuesday morning. The roadbed through the southern part of North Dakota was in rather a dangerous condition, owing to thaws. At one place the train crept along for at least a mile at a mere snail's pace over a soft spot, a few miles further on we came to a washout the place was being repaired. The day before everything had to be transferred, but our train ventured onto the bridge, when the coach I was in crossed the bridge, we could feel it settle in rather a frightful manner, and by the time the last coach reached the bridge it had settled so much that the top of the hind most car struck the top of the dining car in front of it, but fortunately we came across safely.

We arrived at St. Paul at 8:40 a. m., and left again at 1:25 for Chicago. Wisconsin was covered with snow, people came to town in their sleds yesterday though the snow looked a good deal like Port Angeles, rather wet. There was no snow this morning in Illinois, it has rained here, we reached the city of Chicago this morning at 7 o'clock, and I find the streets very muddy, and can only see about two blocks ahead owing to clouds, smoke and fog.

LAURA E. PETERS.

COMPLETE THE ROAD.

An Appeal for the Completion of the Quillayute-Angeles That Should be Heeded.

The completion of the small unopened link of the county road from the Quillayute to Port Angeles via Lake Crescent is an improvement of the highest importance, which Hon. W. R. Hoole last week sought to have the county commissioners at once order. It is believed that an appropriation of five hundred dollars would complete the small distance yet remaining and now is the time when it should be done. Every one knows how slowly public business is done. One delay makes excuse for another and it does not take many delays to throw the road work too late for the fine weather.

The county commissioners are shutting down expenditures wherever possible and the citizens and taxpapers generally wil heartily sustain them in this course, but the completion of the Quillayute and Angeles road is a peculiar matter. Without its completion the large amount of money already expended on each side of the gap is practically of no public good It is like a costly bridge with one span missing. It might be handsome, but as a bridge it would be useless.

Hon. W. R. Hoole made a vigorous fight to have the commissioners order this work done at once, so that the road can be used this summer. Commissioner O'Brien was in favor of immediate action, but Messrs. Lamb and Knapman voted to lay it over 'till next meeting.

The settlers must now make an emphatic demand for this road at the next meeting or the summer will be past and no road. The ranchers would appreciate the economy of the commissioners but when they refuse $500 for the completion of the Quillayute road and in the next breath vote $300 for typewriters for our county officials to play with, it looks like queer economy. Buy them a deck of cards to play with. It would be cheaper. The ranchers must see that something is done about this road or the first thing they know, their economical commissioners will be buying the county officials pianos to play on, while the ranchers walk logs to pack their grub through the brush.—Beaver Leader.

Membership Roll Still Growing.

The local lodge of Good Templars adds weekly several new members to its already large list. Seven new members were initiated at their last meeting and five new names were proposed. Some few weeks ago, owing to a large addition being added, it was quite forcibly impressed upon the minds of the members present, that Masonic hall, in which they had previously met, was much to small and that larger quarters must at once be provided. Accordingly, a committee was appointed and at last meeting reported that they had secured Oddfellows' hall over the postoffice, where the next and all following meetings will be held.

MAY BROOKYN'S SUPERSTITIONS.

The Actress Kept In Her Room What Seems to Be a List of Omens.

In Miss Brookyn's room were writings which attested her superstition. The name of a "test medium and psychometrist" of this city was on a card which she kept. In her handwriting was what appeared to be a list of omens. It began with an incomplete account of what the months had in store for her. This was as follows:

Feb.—Avoid O. S.
June—P. I.
Aug.—Good.
Nov.—

Below this was a statement of what the letters meant. This was as follows:

H—Good; deal freely.
E—Not so good in woman as man.
O—Very bad.
S—Unpleasant news from a distance; surprise.
A—Good; male or female.
P—Good.
L—Very good; male or female.
K—Good; new friend.
V—New friend; good; fair man.
Don't marry in '94; '96 good.
58 or 61. 8 O. 5 S.
B—Is very good; deal freely.
W—Proposition; good for flirtation; never marry.
C—Good; male or female.
M—Better woman.
T—New friend; good.
G—Very good.
N—Not quite so good; be careful.

She had drawn a rude circle, and there were dots in it as if a pencil point came down in many places. The supposition is that the letters were placed inside a circle, like the numbers on the face of a clock, and she then let the pencil held in her fingers drop wherever chance brought it. The letter on which it hit signified the outcome of whatever she might have been thinking of. In this manner doubtless she found whether the months were to be good or bad for her.

She had marked February as a month to avoid and with the letters "O S." According to the mystic dictionary, "O" meant that February was very bad for her and "S" that she would receive unpleasant news from a distance. Curiously she did get some news from New York lately, which is presumed to have been unpleasant, and February proved to be the month of her grievous exit from the world.

A spiritualistic doctor lingered around the Baldwin theater yesterday until he could tell Mr. Presbrey, manager of the Palmer company, that he had received knowledge of the reunion of the souls of Lovecraft and Miss Brookyn. The spiritualistic theory is that when her efforts to establish communication with her lover's spirit failed she felt the necessity of taking exactly the same terrestrial route that he had journeyed on. To employ any other poison than carbolic acid might serve to keep them parted forever, and so she submitted herself to the scorching liquid. She bought the deadly draft in Columbus, O., on Nov. 10 and treasured it until she felt impelled to put the bottle to her lips.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A WEIGHTY YOUTH.

A Virginia Boy Who Is Only Fifteen Years Old, but Weighs 535 Pounds.

Wythe county numbers within its population the greatest man in the commonwealth, if one considers his dead weight—Melvin Grubb, whose wondrous girth and ponderous limbs make him the daily wonder of his neighbors. He was born something more than 15 years ago and has ever since that event kept his neighbors wondering at his growth. Each year since he was 10 has seen from 50 to 100 pounds added to his weight, until he is believed now to be the heaviest youth alive, and should his avoirdupois appreciate at the same rapid rate he will soon break all the heavyweight records since Adam. At 13 years of age he weighed 410 pounds; at 14, 450, and now at 15 the scales creak at 535 pounds, and the end is not yet.

Grubb is not merely a mountain of flesh, but an active and intelligent boy. He can follow a plow all day without unusual fatigue and is a bright and intelligent pupil of the public school near his father's farm at Walter's Bridge, 2½ miles west of Wytheville.—Richmond Times.

A Many Named Royalty.

The extra two characters "Ch'ung-hsi" containing the name which is to be given to that already greatly benamed personage, the empress dowager of China, in honor of H. I. M.'s sixtieth birthday anniversary next year, according to a Peking letter, have been ordered by edict to be presented to the imperial lady in the middle of the eighth moon of next Chinese year (September, 1894).

As it is, her majesty has already 7 names of 14 characters which ministers at court have to labor through whenever mentioning her majesty, but with next September one has to go painfully through the long list of Tze-hsi-Tuan-yu-K'ang-i-Chao-yu-Chuang-ch'eng-Shou-kung-Ch'ing-hsien-Ch'ung-hsi Huang T'ai-hou, or dowager empress, before a bystander could detect that her majesty is meant.—North China Herald.

An Angry Executioner.

Deibler, the French executioner, is said to be the angriest man in Paris. A prisoner in the Roquette jail, under sentence of death, committed suicide after M. de Paris had specially sharpened the knife for his No. 17 neck. Then the executioner is much disappointed because he has not received the ribbon of the Legion of Honor in common with all others who have distinguished themselves in the suppression of anarchists. He argues that he risks his life more than the man who drives the bomb wagon, who has been decorated.—Paris Letter.

A Late Fad of Royalty.

The latest fad among the ladies of the English royal family, including, it is said, the queen herself, is to beguile the winter hours by plaiting straw for the fabrication of hats to be presented to their sons and husbands at the approaching season. A well known hatter has just finished a handsome straw hat for Prince Henry of Battenberg, every inch of which was plaited by Princess Beatrice's own hands. It is said to be a remarkably delicate piece of workmanship.—London Letter.

Who Says Rheumatism Can Not Be Cured

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regular she was soon able to get up and attend her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J. For sale by J. C. Hansen, the Fisher Pharmacy.

The details of the singular disappearance of John Freeman have come to me from various sources. Some slight discrepancies in dates I have been enabled to correct from an old volume of the Saunders News Letter. By the kindness of the authorities of Dublin Castle I was permitted to inspect and take copies of the official reports sent in by the police subinspector of the district. Along with these reports I found tied up a number of letters of a more private character written by the same police officer and addressed to the same superior to whom were forwarded the official reports.

I had at first intended to tell the story myself. With that intention I wrote to each of the four brothers who separately and together figured in the singular events hereafter described, requesting of them more exact information than I already possessed. They replied not only at such length, but with such unexpectedly vivid realism that their various narratives, in spite of some literary shortcomings, seemed to me to need only a little editorial revision to fit them for publication. I perceived that I would more prudently play the part of editor than of original author. Accordingly I decided and let the brothers Freeman tell their own story. When their narratives overlapped, I simply used the scissors. When too minute or too wandering, I struck my pen through the redundancies, or what appeared to me to be such, endeavoring to secure a little more brevity and conciseness.

CHAPTER I.

CHARLES FREEMAN'S LETTER.

In the month of July, 1854, my eldest brother, John Freeman, suddenly and most unaccountably was taken from us. One fine afternoon, being in good health and spirits, he went fishing and never returned. At lunch he was very pleasant and even jocose, making us youngsters laugh so immoderately that my father was at last obliged to interfere, and one of my brothers was sent out of the room in disgrace. All the events of that terrible day are imprinted on my mind with the clearness of visuality. I can still see the funny faces with which, when my father was not looking, he threw us into uncontrollable laughing fits. He had but just returned from Trinity college for summer vacation and was full of all sorts of joyous plans and projects for spending a good time at home. Poor fellow, he little knew what this vacation had in store for him.

For a boy like my brother, and indeed for all of us, few rural neighborhoods could have been more delightful than ours. There were mountain streams abounding with trout, and streams which needed only a night's rain, sometimes merely a heavy shower, to supply good fishing. When the streams were not flooded, he often brought home a good basket of brown trout and white taken in the pools and holes with a mere shrimping net which he made himself and was something like a large and long handled landing net. There were good trout lakes, too, in the mountains. Of sea fishing, both from boats and from the rock, he was very fond; he was at the latter sport—viz, fishing for cunner from a rock—when he so mysteriously disappeared. The Atlantic, beating against a very wild and almost ironbound coast, lay less than a mile from our home. My father, a clergyman of the Church of Ireland before the world suspected it to be "a upas tree," was incumbent of a very large parish—in fact, three parishes rolled into one—which extended many miles along the seacoast and far into the interior. There were no resident gentry and no preservation of game. No one but my brother had a gun in all the countryside, so that the shooting was all ours, and there was shooting in summer as well as winter, for in summer we shot curlews, cave pigeons, rabbits and hares. Puss abounded in the region, and while there were no harriers and no greyhounds Jack was, in fact, not only a great sportsman, but the only sportsman in the country. Enemies he had none, so that his mysterious disappearance could not be ascribed to any personal malignity. All the country people were fond of him, and I think proud of him. They were always bringing him news of "the whereabouts" of otters, badgers, coveys of partridges, etc., and would run across the fields leaving their work to learn the contents of his bag, or would shout from afar when they saw him returning with rod or gun, "Well, Master John, what luck?" No, we never suspected for a moment, not until months after his disappearance, that he had been made away with by an enemy or had met with any foul play. And yet in broad daylight, less than a mile from the rectory, my brother suddenly disappeared, vanished as utterly as if he had been sucked down into the bowels of the earth or drawn up into the sky.

The day was the 10th of July, and a singularly fine day even for that time of the year. It was the day after his return from college, and he was quite running over with spirits. When I awoke early that morning, I heard him whistling outside the windows on the lawn. The air was "Vilikins and His Dinah," a song much in vogue at the time. He always came home with a new tune and never seemed to tire of it till he got another. When I looked out, he was walking to and fro on the lawn taking the twist out of a new fishing line. He had fastened one end of it to a little holly tree standing there and was diligently engaged in taking out the twist, which indeed is a tedious process. During the forenoon and on till dinner time he seemed keenly and happily absorbed in similar avocations—viz, getting his fishing gear in order. We youngsters were confined to the schoolroom all that time, which we considered unfair, inasmuch as it was Jack's first day at home, but we could hear him bustling about the place and everlastingly whistling "Vilikins and His Dinah." Once we heard an awful screaming of geese in the rear regions. We knew perfectly well the cause of it. Jack was pursuing them and plucking out their thin wing feathers in order to tie pollock flies. A little after noon he came into the schoolroom and asked the tutor, Mr. Humphreys, to let me go to the village to buy him some wire. He gave me a penny for the wire and a penny for myself. In those days I considered a penny a handsome tip. He wanted the wire to make line eyes for his big rod, that which he used for sea fishing. He also had me call at the shoemaker's and get a piece of wax. I mention all this because on his disappearance some foolish people said that he had run away, a supposition which no member of the family harbored for a single instant. He was, in fact, brimful of sporting intentions. At 3 we dined, when, as I have described, he made those funny faces and set us all on the roar. When dinner was over and we ran out, there was a boy at the hall door with a box of bait in his hand, consisting partly of cockles, partly of what we used to call lugworms. They are dug up in the mud of the seashore when the tide is out. This boy had been digging bait for Jack all the morning. He asked Jack to let him go with him to Dhu-Corrig, and Jack refused.

"Where are you going, Jack?" said my second brother, Ned.

"To Dhu-Corrig for cunner," he said, "and let none of you follow me if you value your lives."

Young as I was, by a certain sympathy, or I know not what, I saw why he wished to be alone. It was to indulge in his transports and talk, sing and do what he pleased and so let off his animal spirits and delight at being home again without witnesses. I generally knew or felt what was passing in his mind. Indeed I was very much attached to him, though he took hardly any notice of me.

"I shall slay the wily cunner, Ned," he went on, "till the sun is just that high above the western main.

"Sing tooral-al-ooral, al-coral-al-lee,

"and then, on with the white feather, and in with pollock and crohogues till Apollo is half way to the north in his silver boat and black night invests the sea.

"For a cup of cold p'ison it lay by her side.
And the billet doux it stated 'twas by p'ison she died.
Sing tooral-al-ooral, al-ooral-al-lee."

Off then he marched down the avenue with the little box of bait in his left hand and his rod on his right shoulder, crunching the gravel noisily, for he was a large and stout lad. The two dogs followed close at his heels with their tails down, for they feared that they would be turned back. So they were, at the gate, and when they still showed signs of following he stooped down and flung stones toward them. Shortly afterward I heard him shout, "Jer!" "Sir," answered a voice from a neighboring field. "Come to Dhu-

He flung stones toward them.

Corrig an hour after sunset to bring home the fish." "I will, sir," answered the voice. Then I heard more faintly in the distance the plaintive notes of "Vilikins and His Dinah," an odious song, by the way. So my brother Jack left home that 10th of July, 1854, and was not seen again. As will be quite evident, he could have had no intention whatever of running away, and yet that was the explanation of his disappearance which was favored by every one outside our own family.

CHAPTER II.

AND DOES NOT RETURN.

I know not why, but I had an uneasy feeling about Jack all that day, and it increased after he had left the rectory for Dhu-Corrig. For some time this uneasy feeling took no precise shape, but later on I began to picture to myself "a tidal wave" sweeping him off the rock, and having a lively imagination saw the imaginary scene clearly and Jack struggling for his life in the water. In the previous summer three tenants of ours in a different part of the country, all fathers of families, had been so swept off the rocks while fishing cunner and drowned. Though I reminded myself that Jack was a splendid swimmer and diver and could do anything in the water, I could not get rid of the vague sense of coming calamity of which I was conscious all day, and which became greater and greater as the sun set and darkness came on.

"Might not Jack be attacked by cramp," I thought, "when in the water?" True, he never had had a cramp, nor did I know of any one who was ever assailed in that way, but I had heard a great deal of talk about the cramp. I was sent to bed early, for I was only 8 years old, but I could not sleep. I kept listening for the barking of the dogs. In the previous summer that was to me the usual sign that Jack had returned safe from fishing. It was now long after dark. My two elder brothers, Ned and Sam, came into the room with a lamp. We then slept in the same room, Ned and Sam in one large bed; I in a little timber bedstead, with high sides, over which I had to climb in getting in and out. Ned put the lamp on the table opposite the looking glass and leaned over it. He took a pin and began to push up the wick. It was a primitive little lamp. I have not seen such since I was a boy. There was usually a fat red head on the top of the wick, which had to be snuffed just as we used to snuff the candles.

"Jack is out late tonight," he said. "I hope nothing has happened him."

"What could happen him?" said Sam, who was of a more stolid character. While saying this he undid the serpent fastened belt which confined his wagoner. In those days boys were loose white blouses gathered round the waist by a belt. We used to call them wagoners.

"I don't know," replied Ned, "but 'tis very late. There's papa opening the hall door and listening. How still the night is!"

"He's drowned," I cried from my truckle bed. "The tidal wave has caught him as it caught Cody, Phillips and Moroney last year."

"Hold your tongue, you little ass, and go to sleep," answered Ned angrily, but he threw down the window, leaned out and listened. There was a corncrake crying somewhere outside. The moon was shining. I could hear the distant roar of the sea when it rolled up the white strand that we called Tramore.

"This is getting bad, Sam," he said. "He's long after his time."

Sam was in bed, but sitting up and listening with bright eyes. I heard my father moving about below stairs ceaselessly from the hall door to the parlor and back again and talking with my mother.

"There's some one coming," said Ned. The dogs were indeed barking but not for Jack, that I knew well.

"Pooh! 'tis only old Jer."

"Well, Jer," he cried from the window, "where are the fish? Why isn't Master John with you?"

To these questions there was no audible reply.

Jer was one of my father's laborers, who worked, or rather elaborately idled, upon the extensive glebe farm which was attached to the rectory. It will be remembered that it was Jer whom my brother told to come to Dhu-Corrig after sunset. Jer made no reply to Ned's questions. I heard him scrunching the gravel as he walked slowly to the hall door.

"What is he saying?" I cried.

"Sh!" said Ned, with his head on one side, listening. The man was saying something to my father at the hall door. "He says he found the bait box on the rock, but no rod, and that Jack is not there, and that he shouted for him everywhere and got no answer. Get up, Sam; we must go search."

Sam sprang at once with a bound upon the floor and dressed in haste.

"Perhaps he left Dhu-Corrig," he said, "in one of the boats going out for night fishing."

"Then why did he leave the box of bait behind him?" retorted Ned.

"Forgot it," answered Sam, dressing furiously. The house was by this time in confusion, with servants rushing to and fro, exclamations, interrogations and my father's voice raised. Then I heard somewhere the sound of a horn. The countryside was being called out to search. I was alone now. Ned and Sam were far away in the night. From the window I could see many torches moving swiftly southwest in the direction of Dhu-Corrig. I heard the faintest words and most distant noises owing to the extreme stillness of the night. Fear, I suppose, too, made my hearing preternaturally acute. I remained at the open window a long time till I was discovered there by my mother, shivering and coughing, and compelled to return to bed. She was in tears, though, perhaps to comfort me, she said: "Go to sleep, darling. Jack will be here when you wake in the morning. Of course he has gone out in one of the deep sea fishing boats." It was discovered, however, ere long that none of the boats which used to go out far from land had gone out that night owing to stress of haymaking.

At last I fell asleep. When I woke in the morning and sat up, I found my two brothers lying on the bed outside the bedclothes fast asleep, but not undressed. I knew from this that Jack had not been found. I dressed and went into Jack's room. It was empty. I then went down stairs. There were voices in my father's study. The door was open. I saw my father standing and my mother sitting down, both very pale and my mother weeping.

It was still the gray dawn of the day. My parents not having noticed me, I set out for Dhu-Corrig and ran all the way. The place was crowded with fishermen and country people, among whom were several policemen and coast guards in blue jackets and white trousers. There were boats off the rock which were being slowly rowed along. The men in them were dragging the sea bottom here with grappling irons. Just then a police orderly rode up on a foaming horse. He received some fresh directions from Mr. Watkins, the constabulary officer of the district, and galloped off again. Every one indeed was at his wits' ends for it was quite impossible to frame any theory of the disappearance which would square with known facts. One boat had gone bream fishing the previous afternoon. The people in it said that they had seen my brother on the rock, and that he had hailed them as they rowed past in a cheerful and friendly manner. That was the last seen or heard of him. That he had been drowned no one in the neighborhood could believe, though the coast guards for want of anything else to do were dragging the sea bottom. There were other boats out, too, boats that went miles to the north and miles to the south searching and at intervals crying out, hoping against hope that there might be some response. Presently my elder brothers, Ned and Sam, came down to the rock and roughly had me go home. They joined Mr. Watkins, who questioned them for a long time. The last hope was that in obedience to a sudden impulse he had walked off to visit some of our distant friends, for a 20 or 30 mile walk was nothing to him. But no tidings of any kind reached us as day followed day. No one had heard of him or seen him anywhere since the bream fishers passed him on the rock when he hailed them as I have already described.

"THE GREAT UMBRELLA CASE."

An Evening at the Opera House With the Port Angeles Dramatic Club.

Last Tuesday evening a large, expectant, intelligent audience assembled at the opera house, agreeable to the public announcement of the Port Angeles Dramatic Club, that it would upon that evening produce "The Great Umbrella Case," a unique mock trial, one of the striking features of which was fashioning the play so that it appeared of local origin, the incident occurring at the east end years ago. The arrangement was very clever, admirably representing characters of local celebrity.

It was a trial in court, somewhat exaggerated, developing the peculiarities, the idiosyncrasies of individuals well-known in the community, who have become prominent in professional circles. In the representation of these characters rested the interest and humor of the play.

As Judge O'Hoolaban, Mr. L. H. Smith acquitted himself very creditably, indeed, frequently provoking laughter by broad Irish brogue and exceedingly ridiculous conception of the law.

The attorneys in the case were represented in the persons of W. H. Smythe and C. A. Bork, displayed not a little forensic eloquence, and skill. The defendant, "Harry Bumpies," was very cleverly represented by Gracie Sherwood.

The other attendants at and of the court, the jury and the witnesses sustained each his respective part in an intelligent and in a creditable manner.

Two specialties were introduced adding spice and flavor to the entertainment "Flynn & Moriarity" in the skirt dance and Gracie Sherwood in a song and dance act. The burlesque on the skirt dance was unique to say the least, the management of the skirts being of minor consideration.

"The Great Umbrella Case," was in itself a disappointment. It afforded no opportunity, whatever, for the display of histronic talent, being utterly devoid of a plot, the players remained from beginning to end in a condition of absolute disinterestedness, as the monotony of the routine of the court, supremely prevailed throughout, the climax the vital, essential point of interest in a play was a stranger to "The Great Umbrella Case."

Wherever opportunity presented the players evidenced talent of high order, which under more favorable conditions would have won the sympathy and admiration of the audience.

One of the Most Important Ports.

Port Angeles occupies a prominent position among the ports of entry of the Puget Sound Customs districts, eclipsing all other ports of the district in the number of entrances during the past month. According to the official report there were last month 94 entrances and 104 clearances, foreign and coastwise, in the district.

Of these 30 entered and 31 cleared from this port.

The record is exceedingly favorably demonstrating very clearly the importance of the port, as well as its admirable position as a shipping point. Finally shipping interests have acknowledged its superior situation over other ports of the Sound as a port of call, a fact that will be fruitful of good results.

Excursion to Victoria.

On Saturday, the 28th inst., the Odd Fellows of Victoria will appropriately observe the 75th anniversary of Oddfellowship. A pressing invitation has been extended the local fraternity to participate with them in the exercises of the day. The kind invitation has been accepted, the Garland chartered and about 75 persons, Oddfellows, their wives and a few particular friends, will leave at about 10 o'clock of that morning for the scene of festivity, returning the following day.

A delightful time is anticipated, as Victorians ever entertain royally, and have, no doubt made elaborate preparations for the proper observance of the event.

THREE-QUARTER CENTURY

Of Oddfellowship---The Local Fraternity Will Properly Observe the Event.

Three-quarter century ago Oddfellowship was established in this country, and its remarkable growth during that period evidences the grand principles by which it is governed and demonstrates as well that its objects, aims and purposes are lofty and exalted, otherwise it would not have survived these years and flourished as a "Green Bay tree."

The 75th anniversary occurs next Thursday, and will be appropriately observed in this city, the local fraternity having arranged the following program:

10:30—Parade with the band.
11:30—Address, Geo. C. Hatch.

SERVIA'S STOCK TROUBLE.

In a Muddle Over Who Shall Rule, While Milan Poses as a Patriot.

The frugal Servians just now are torn by conflicting emotions. King Alexander and his erratic, disreputable father have managed between them to alienate what little love had been left in Servia for the Obrenovitsch dynasty, and if the Karageorgevitch pretenders were reasonably respectable and fairly disinterested they could obtain the throne without much difficulty. But Prince Arsene and Prince Peter are, in their way, not much to be preferred to ex-King Milan and his son. They are ambitious, autocratic, extravagant and heavily in debt, and their morals will not bear severe scrutiny.

They are surrounded by impecunious Russian nobles and loose people of both sexes, all of whom will have to be liberally provided for in the event of the Karageorgevitch restoration out of the national treasury, and, to crown their disadvantages in the eyes of the Servian farmers, they claim the retrocession to them of the enormous estates which were formerly the private property of their house, and which were confiscated to the state when the head of the Karageorgevitch family was assassinated and all his relatives were kicked out of the country.

On the whole, therefore, Arsene and Peter would be more expensive than Milan and Alexander. As the question is mainly one of money, the latter will in all probability remain in Belgrade, the establishment of a republic being entirely out of the question. Meanwhile Milan poses as a patriot. He pines for Paris and its supreme delights, which it is impossible to enjoy in semibarbarous Belgrade, but a stern sense of duty keeps him at his son's side. Privately he is haggling with the ministers as to the sum which shall be paid him to clear out. He has hinted that if his price be not paid he will have himself appointed generalissimo and inspector of the army and settle permanently in the country. The appalling prospect thus opened is likely materially to hasten a settlement.

LOST IN ALASKAN WILDS.

An Explorer's Disregard of His Companions' Advice Costs Him His Life.

Death from either starvation or exposure in the biting winter weather of southwestern Alaska or perhaps suicide as the only means of avoiding the horrible fate in store for himself—such is the fate of M. Gross, a Canadian surveyor.

Gross, with four companions, left Fort Wrangle on the 29th of January, the party intending to hunt, fish and perhaps do some prospecting. When they got to Portage bay, they made permanent camp. It was early morning, and Gross told his companions that he intended to dive a little into the interior and would be back before night.

He was cautioned against going out alone, as it was known that he was not familiar with the surrounding country, and it was feared that he might get lost in the woods. He disregarded the advice of his companions, however, and at 6 o'clock the same evening the other members of the party heard a shot in the brush some few miles distant. They hailed and by other signs tried to guide Gross back to camp, but were not successful. The whole of the next day was spent in the search, which had to be finally given up.

Gross is said to have been from Victoria. He was last year a member of the Canadian survey party sent up to Alaska to officially determine the territory's boundary line.—Seattle Press-Times.

The Train Ran Five Miles Without Steam.

A marvelous race, up grade and down, in which momentum was the motive power, took place on the Consolidated road Saturday. Five miles below Stamford the cylinder head of the big engine, No. 247, blew out while the train was making express time. Instead of stopping and getting stalled, Engineer Scofield let the machine have its head and pulled into Stamford station on time, and not even the conductor knew that anything was the matter until the engineer called for another engine and No. 144 was put on and pulled the train to this city. The five miles were run without a pound of steam and solely on the momentum the train was under when the mishap took place.—New Haven Palladium.

Historic Brass Knocker.

Trifles light as air have interest sometimes, and apparently nothing is too trifling to feed American curiosity. A new brass knob has just been placed upon Mr. Gladstone's front door in Downing street. It replaced one which had done the state much service and had been grasped by the hands of a century of prime ministers, from Pitt upward. Hearing of this treasure trove, an enterprising and sympathetic antiquary purchased the discarded knocker for 5 shillings, and it is now upon its way to New York, accompanied by half a mile of attractive personal legend, for exhibition in the United States.—Huntly (England) Express.

Illuminated Lifebuoy.

Some trials have just been made at Kiel on board of the German war vessel Worth with an electrically lighted lifebuoy, the invention of Captain Melter. The buoy was thrown overboard when the vessel was proceeding at a speed of about 16 knots. For a space of about 12 seconds it was lost in the eddy currents caused by the twin screws of the vessel, but then reappeared. The new lifebuoy will be found useful at night, and the experiments resulted so successfully that it is probable that it will be adopted generally in the German navy.—Iron and Industries.

Blondin's Latter Day Feat.

M. Blondin's name goes on the list of athletic chaps of middle age. On his seventieth birthday he walked the tight rope, carrying one of his children, a 150 pounder. M. Blondin is enjoying his usual health and doesn't expect to reach the end of his rope for 30 years yet.—New York Sun.

HIS LAST JOKE.

The Danbury News Man Was a Philanthropist as Well as a Humorist.

The Danbury News man made fun almost everywhere and all the time to the end of his life. He was just as funny in his office and at home as he ever was in the funniest copy of his newspaper. It was quiet, unexpected, quaint, homelike funmaking on his part, with nothing strained or pedantic or pretentious—as natural and spontaneous as a sunbeam or the rippling of a hillside brook. Like sunshine, too, his jollity cheered, warmed, delighted every one and wounded none. Everybody was his friend, and he was everywhere beloved. He was the life and light of every gathering, but was never forward or obtrusive.

He was also a philanthropist. Every year he gave away a small fortune to the unfortunate and unhappy, to vagrants and the most notorious tramps and beats. Every tramp who drifted into Danbury wandered into Bailey's office eventually, and none ever failed to get a pecuniary lift there to help him on his thorny path in life.

One of the worst of professional bummers, accosting Bailey on the street not long ago, said, with the self assurance of a friend addressing another:

"Ten cents, Mr. Bailey, please. I want to get a drink with it."

"What do you say?" was the quick reply. "You mean to get a drink? Now, don't you try to deceive me. You intend to buy sandwiches with it."

The Danbury News man's last quip was unique and pungent. He had been ill of pneumonia, but rallied temporarily and visited his office one day about three weeks ago. An office employee greeted him as he came in, looking wan and feeble, with:

"Well, how are you today, Mr. Bailey?"

"Oh, I am very much better. I was able to get down town today in one hack."

Not many hours after he had passed away from the world which he had done so much to brighten and cheer.—Danbury Special.

She Considers It a Libel.

Kentucky editors cannot be too careful about what they print. The citizens of the blue grass commonwealth are touchy, and statements published with the most amiable intentions are likely to cause trouble. Here is the editor of the Mount Sterling Times, for example, who printed what he thought was a graceful obituary notice, winding up with the perfunctory statement that "the deceased had gone to a happier home." He is now the defendant in a libel suit brought by the widow, and when he goes home after seeing the paper to press he takes the middle of the street and carries his shotgun at full cock. The notice was gratis too.—Chicago Herald.

Garlick's Red Rose Potatoes.

Almost two years ago Mr. Garlick of Lost Mountain precinct, planted a few hills of the potato known as the California Red Rose, with the view of introducing it into this county if it proved to be a prolific bearer. His success was astonishing. He did not know but the "year" had something to do with it, so he tried it again last year. The result was even better than the first year. From his start of a few hills the year before he harvested about two tons last year, and had no trouble in disposing of nearly all he had to his neighbors at five cents per pound. He has placed a few sacks for sale with the Farmers' Mercantile Co., of Dungeness.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

It cured me in three days I am all right today; and would insist on everyone who is afflicted with terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once."

A BAY KNIGHT ON HOOFS.

He Saved His Master's Little Daughter From the Attacks of a Savage Cur.

The bay Jack is one of a dozen hunters which Mr. James B. Dill keeps in his stable at his home on Harrison street, Orange. His fad is breeding hunters. The other morning Mr. Dill was standing just inside the stable door talking to his groom and had Jack's bridle in his hand.

Suddenly he heard a scream and recognized the voice as that of his little daughter. Jack, the bay hunter, heard it, too, and he must have recognized it, for quicker than it takes to tell and before Mr. Dill realized what had happened, Jack had jerked the bridle from Mr. Dill's hand, backed out of the stable and was running across the stable yard. Mr. Dill followed, and what he saw was calculated to make him follow pretty rapidly. His little daughter was being attacked by a dog—a big, ugly, yellow cur that did not belong around the place. She had seen her father return from his ride and had started from the house to the stable to meet him, as was her custom. The strange dog had sprung at her. Its teeth were tearing her dress, and she was vainly struggling to release herself.

What Mr. Dill saw Jack, the bay hunter, saw, too, and he must have had the same appreciation of the little girl's danger that the father had. Running until he reached the little girl and the dog, he reared up on his hind legs and then brought his fore feet down with crushing force on the vicious cur. The dog released its hold on the girl's clothing and fell, but Jack had not finished his work. Turning just as the dog was about to rise again, he let fly his hind legs and gave the cur a kick that landed it in a heap against a stone fence full 10 feet away. Then Jack's work was done, and he waited for Mr. Dill to come up.

Mr. Dill found that his little daughter was not injured, though badly frightened. Then he went over and took a look at the dog. It was dead. Then he went over to his bay hunter, Jack, gave him an affectionate slap or two and placed his little daughter on Jack's back. The hunter seemed to appreciate the compliment and neighed with delight as he started for the stable, where Mr. Dill told the groom to give him "the best in the house and plenty of it."—New York World.

PAGES IN CONGRESS.

The Careers Before Them Are Not In All Cases Very Desirable.

There are lads now employed as pages in the house and senate who have undoubtedly embarked on careers which will revolve about the huge marble building on Capitol hill. Some one of them may live to step into the shoes of Captain Bassett, for instance, the aged and dignified assistant doorkeeper of the senate, who began his services in the upper chamber over 60 years ago and is apparently good for several years more. Some of them may become plain, ordinary, everyday doorkeepers of the house or senate.

There is one man watching a senate door these days who has occupied that one position for 14 years. For years before he began this work he was similarly employed in the house of representatives. The pay of a doorkeeper is not very large, and the distinction which attaches to the place is absolutely nil. The work is not arduous, however, and the man who fulfills it does not have to use either his hands or his brains to any extent—a fact which seems to have had weight with some of the doorkeepers.

If the parents of the lads who are now running about the capitol at the beck and nod of senators and representatives were to be guided by the experience of persons who have held these positions, they might display less anxiety to condemn their offspring to an undesirable future.—Cor. New York Times.

Setting Type by Wire.

Donald Murry, a newspaper man of Sydney, has invented and patented a device by means of which an operator in New York, with a keyboard before him like that of an ordinary typewriter, cannot only produce typewritten copy in New Orleans, but, it is claimed, can operate a typesetting machine here and deliver his matter thus in lead ready for the forms. Not only that, but the same operator, by using a number of telegraph lines, can set up the same copy simultaneously in a dozen different places. In this operation any ordinary currents are used, such as are capable of being relayed and are subject to all conditions of ordinary telegraphy. The work can be done with the same speed as an ordinary typewriter is operated and dispenses with all clockwork mechanism, synchronously moving type wheels and other cumbrous devices. It is said to be capable of manipulating some 80 different characters.—Press and Printer.

Cordite Versus Gunpowder.

The days of gunpowder as a charge for naval guns are numbered, as some experiments just concluded at the government proof butts, Woolwich, appear to prove a decided superiority for cordite. A 6 inch quick firing gun was loaded with 29 pounds 12 ounces of the ordinary black gunpowder and yielded a velocity of 1,890 feet per second, with a pressure strain on the gun of 15 tons per square inch. The same gun was charged with 14 pounds 3 ounces of cordite and gave a velocity of 2,274 feet per second and a pressure of 15.2 tons. More important still, after 250 rounds had been fired, there were no signs of erosion.—London Telegraph.

Buried In a Ghoul Proof Grave.

Mrs. G. F. Routon, wife of a West Newton pioneer, was buried at that place a few days ago. She was 58 years of age and was an exceedingly large woman, weighing 352 pounds. This necessitated a casket 6 feet long, 28 inches wide and 19 inches deep. A few weeks ago an attempt was made to rob a grave at West Newton, near the lot in which Mrs. Routon was buried, and this led the relatives of Mrs. Routon to have a ghoul proof grave vault of iron made.—Indianapolis Journal.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS.

BY MRS. C. B. MAXFIELD.

There is but a very small branch of the great army of White Ribbons stationed at this place. Still, with this small force and the co-operation of Christian men and women wholly concentrated to God's service, the cause will prosper; for with God on our side we are in the majority and we shall win the battle at last.

There comes a time when simply to remain passive and do nothing is a great sin, and we feel that such a time has come to the Christian men and women of Port Angeles.

A full attendance of the Union is desired at the next meeting, April 20, at the residence of sister L. T. Haynes. Important business to be transacted. These meetings are open to all.

All clergymen are requested to give temperance address once a month in their respective pulpits.

Saved Her Life.

MRS. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."
