Bound Over.

The preliminary trial of Frank Jones, who was recently arrested on the charge of an assault with a deadly weapon on the person of Henry Waechter, with intent to commit murder, was heard before Judge Brewster last Wednesday afternoon. The assault was made on the 19th of April last, near the Elwha river, being the logical result of a bitter feud existing between these men. Upon the evidence produced Judge Brewster held defendant over in the sum of $500 to await trial at the June term of the Superior court. Bail was raised and defendant released Messrs. Lamoreux & Gay appeared for the defense and D. W Bryan for the state.

Will Grade School Sites.

C. L. Babcock, clerk of this school district, has advertised for proposals to cut wood, and to clear and grade block 257 and lots 3 to 7 and 10 to 18 inclusive in block 381.

The proposals will be opened tomorrow (Saturday), and contract awarded, no doubt, to the lowest responsible bidder. The clerk will also advertise for proposals for the construction of two ward school houses.

Card Party.

A card party was given by Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Smith, at their home on Front street last Saturday evening, a few particular friends having been invited.

The evening was delightfully spent with cards. Tempting refreshments were served. The following were guests: Mr. and Mrs. F. Beckendyke, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. David Rushworth, Misses Emily Rushworth and Gracie Grant.

Pointer for Travelers.

While Mr. T. J. Richey, of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas, he was taken violently ill with cholera morbus. He called at a drug store to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief, and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel complaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by J. C. Hansen, The Fisher Pharmacy.

A revivifying of nature's latent forces occurs every spring. At this time, better than at any other, the blood may be cleansed from the humors which infest it. The best and most popular remedy to use for this purpose is Ayer's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla.

THE INDUSTRIAL ARMY.

Resolutions of Sympathy and Encouragement Adopted at

A PUBLIC MEETING OF CITIZENS

Held in the Opera House in This City Last Tuesday, Which Will be Forwarded to the Industrial Army Assembling at Washington—The Cause Which Actuated the Movement Depreciated by a Number of Speakers.

In Port Angeles there are many warm sympathizers with the Industrial Army, and its mission to Washington, some who regret exceedingly the industrial condition throughout the county is so demoralized, unsettled and unsatisfactory as to cause a movement of this nature, others condemn, in the strongest terms dilatoriness of Congress, while a few gave vent to incendious and unpatriotic sentiment, the great majority, however, disavowing positively and emphatically any sympathy whatever with an element of society that would violate the constitution, or break the laws of the country The movement is peaceable, purely moral and the constitutional exercise simply to assemble at the national capitol and force upon the aggregation of do-nothings there assembled, for what purpose it would be difficult to imagine, the absoluteness of action.

The country is in a chaotic condition, the people demoralized, the greatest uprising in its history impending, all because the administration has fritted away valuable time and accomplished nothing for the relief of the people. The policy of the administration should have been adopted months ago, and the country now entered upon an era of industrial and commercial prosperity.

But no. The ineffectual, sluggish policy which has characterized the action of the senate, is simply criminal. And the party in power is by no means wholly responsible for the delay. That relentless, uncompromising foe to labor —the Republican party—deserves to be severely rebuked and chastened for its policy of delay and opposition to the adoption of any legislation affording the workingmen of the country relief.

That an expression of sympathy might be formulated and forwarded the Industrial army gathering at Washington, a public meeting was called last Tuesday evening in the opera house.

Judge Clark was called to the chair and Geo. W. Meagher chosen secretary.

Donald McInnes expressed sympathy with the movement, and believed much good would result if the army confined its action within peaceable and lawful bounds. Thus guided by a holy and certainly justifiable uprising, 10,000,000 citizens should join the army and march to Washington in such overwhelming numbers that the powers that be would realize that they no longer could tamper with the rights of the people.

W. R. Hoole attested his sympathy with the movement, although he got the object of the meeting most inexplicably mixed with county affairs, a pardonable offense, of course, as political capital unlike silver, is always a medium of exchange.

Rev. Jonas Bushell favored the movement and sympathized with the army in its peaceable struggle for simple justice. That it had grievances no thoughtful man would gainsay, and the removal of these wrongs should be the purpose of every right-minded citizen.

Remarks were also made by N. R. Smith, J. M. Grant, G. V. Smith, E. E. Seevers, A. A. Richardson, Frank McGill and others.

A committee on resolutions was appointed and the following resolutions were prepared and unanimously adopted:

We, the people of the city of Port Angeles and vicinity, irrespective of party, in mass meeting assembled for the purpose of discussing the present movement of an army or body of unemployed men, known as the Industrial Army, now proceeding to Washington, D. C., for the purpose of presenting to the Congress of the United States, now in session, a living petition, asking that some provision be made or law enacted obviating the possibility of future enforced idleness. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we are in sympathy with the movement but regret the urgent necessity that generated it and believe that after over 30 years of financial legislation the government should have provided some system whereby a just standard of labor and capital be established.

Resolved, That we believe that so long as those now proceeding to Washington for the purpose of demanding of Congress their constitutional rights as citizens, act constitutionally by exercis- their right of free and peaceable assemblage, that they are entitled to and should receive from every citizen of the United States his or her endorsement.

Be it Further Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting that had the genius and spirit of a government of the people, by the people and for the people, actuated over legislators for the past 30 years, no necessity could have arisen calling for honest and willing laborers to seek employment in this manner.

Be it Still Further Resolved, That we emphatically condemn the act of any person or persons in authority who shall illegally obstruct said Industrial Army in their peaceable and lawful progress to the national capitol.

Signed,
E. E. SEEVERS,
A. A. RICHARDSON,
W. R. HOOLE,
JOHN DYKE,
DONALD MCINNES.

PORT ANGELES.

Big Sale of Its Lots at the Masonic To-Morrow Night.

The visit of Col. Coolican, president of the Port Angeles board of trade and M. J. Carrigan, its secretary, from present indications means a great deal for Chil licotheans. They came east with Washington, D. C., as the intended destination where they expected to offer for sale a large number of Port Angeles building lots. At the earnest solicition of numerous Chillicothe residents and investors they have determined to make the offer in this city first. This will be done tomorrow night at the Masonic opera house. Only those will be admitted who have cards of admittance. These can be obtained at all the drug stores and at Chapman and Horney's book store free of charge. The cream of the lots will be disposed of and the prices to suit the buyers. There will be an orchestra on hand to furnish music during the auctioneering. The ladies are invited as well as the gentlemen. All should be present and witness this western custom which comes here in the way of an innovation. That there will be a big margin of profit to those fortunate enough to purchase and invest goes without saying.

A good deal of Chillicothe money is now invested there and it is proving exceedingly profitable. * * * * Suffice it to say that to invest in the lots offered by Coolican and Carrigan at the Masonic tomorrow night means big money in return bp way of marginal profit.—Chillicothe, Ohio, Daily News April 24th, 1894.

A SHINGLE MILL

Will Be Established on Frazier Creek With a Daily Capacity of 125,000.

The shingle movement in Clallam appears to be decidedly healthful and vigorous.

Negotiations which have been pending for sometime past between Wm. Klaunig who owns a quarter section of superior cedar timber on Frazier creek, two miles south of the city, and the Port Angeles Red Cedar Shingle & Lumber Company have finally been closed, and the latter will immediately begin the construction of a shingle mill with a capacity of 125,000 daily, on the banks of Frazier creek.

The Port Angeles Red Cedar Shingle & Lumber Company was recently incorporated, the principal incorporators being Messrs. W. H. Lambert, D. S. Allen and H. H. Rhodes. The principal place of business will be Port Angeles, and the aim and purpose of the incorporation, the manufacture of shingles and cedar lumber.

Situated in the s ½ se ¼, section 17, n ½ ne ¼, section 20, township 30 north range 6 west, the seat of the plant is eligible, and accessible to the city over a first-class thoroughfare. Mr. Lambert left last Sunday to perfect arrangements for the plant.

A few more shingle plants in Clallam and the solution of the industrial movement will have been accomplished inasfar as Clallam and her people are themselves concerned, and even more. The utilization of its resources would provide employment at remunerative wages for a great number of the country's unemployed, now blindly marching to the seat of government, to hasten a speedy solution of the labor problem.

It is the purpose of the management to have the mill ready for operation within thirty days.

Another Journalistic Venture.

Port Townsend has another journalistic venture—The Daily Democrat, which gives that city of 2,000 inhabitants three daily publications, in a field that will not extend adequate support to more than one creditable daily issuance.

It is not local patriotism, either, that actuates a multiplicity of struggling publications. The getting together of party factions would be the solution of this exceedingly disgusting "fad." And whoever knew of a journalistic venture which was the creation of a disgruntled political faction that either proved a success, or filled a sphere of usefulness? The publication of a newspaper is a legitimate business or it is nothing.

Missionary Tea.

The Womans' Home Missionary Society will give a Missionary Tea at the home of Mrs. C. E. Mallette on Friday, May 11th, from 2 till 5 p. m. It is hoped that, not only will all of the members be present, but many of their friends will take this opportunity to show their sympathy and interest in their work by bringing an offering of 5 cents. Refreshments will be served and a pleasant social time is anticipated.

Destructive Fire.

Last Monday night an alarm of fire revealed the fact that the dwelling of Mr. M. Roderick on Fifth street, Tumwater Heights, was enveloped in flames. Before assistance could be commanded the dwelling was a total loss. The origin of the fire is unknown. There was an insurance of $600 on the property.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilson take this opportunity of expressing their heartfelt sympathy for the kindness and consideration extended by friends and neighbors in their hour of breavement.

MM. AND MRS. ALBERT WILSON.

Smith-Maddock.

In this city last Wednesday, May 2, 1894. Mr. Victor Smith and Mrs. Clara L. Maddock were united in marriage by the Rev. Jonas Bushell.

Both have many friends who wish them many years of happiness and prosperity.

FOREIGN LEGAL TALENT

Has Been Employed to Aid in the Solving

OF KNOTTY LEGAL QUESTIONS,

Determining the Right of the City to Invalidate the Williams Contract—Two Hundred Dollars Will be Expended for Additional Legal Service in Preparing Ordinances Creating Local Improvement District—Other City Matters.

At the regular meeting of the council last Wednesday evening the Mayor and all the councilmen, excepting Crockett were present.

The council authorized the city treasurer to refund to W. E. Burnside $7.50, being double assessment on certain city property.

Councilman M. McGill, member of the finance committee, reported verbally as follows in the matter of the request of W. C. Williams, manager, to have the council instruct the city treasurer to forward $13,000 of the city's electric lighting bonds, series 1, to some bank in Seattle, subject to his (Williams) disposition, that the committee desired an extention of time of one week in which to report. The request was granted.

An error having occurred in the publication of Ordinance No. 211, it was brought up for reconsideration, amended and unanimously passed.

Ordinance No. 225, providing for the regulation of wholesale liquor dealers was laid on the table.

The city attorney was instructed to prepare an ordinance providing for the licensing of dealers in liquors, retail and wholesale.

The claim of City Engineer FitzHenry for assistants in preparing estimates of work to be done on the upper pipe line of the electric lighting works, amounting to $178 was allowed.

The city attorney informed the council that he had taken the proper legal steps to secure the right and control of Lincoln street for the city.

A committee was appointed to wait on the county assessor and confer with him in the manner of assessing city property for 1894, namely, Councilmen Krueger, McGill and Beam.

Councilman Graybill resigned from the finance committee, and Mayor McGill appointed Councilman Krueger to fill such vacancy.

The following resolution was adopted:

WHEREAS, The city is meeting with great opposition in the construction of its electric lighting plant, under a contract heretofore entered into by and between the City of Port Angeles and the Port Angeles Constructing Company, therefore,

Be it Resolved, That the city attorney be authorized to examine the said contract and determine if the cause is not void and cannot be violated, and in the event he finds that such contract is void and can be validated, he is hereby authorized to expend an amount, not to exceed the sum of $——, for legal assistance in such examination of such contract aforesaid.

T. M. GRAYBILL.

The council authorized the expenditure of $200 for legal services, in the employment of a Seattle attorney, to assist in the preparation of ordinances and give such other advise as may be necessary to properly and legally secure the passage of any and all such ordinances, as may be necessary and essential to create certain streets into local improvement district, to be improved under the installment bonding system.

The council then adjourned.

Andreson-Ball Nuptials.

Last Sunday evening Mr. A. J. Andresen and Mrs. Maggie Ball were married in this city at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Christensen by the Rev. J. M. Baxter.

The wedding day of this happy couple was also the fourth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Christensen, and a few particular friends had been invited to commemorate the event, quite a number of whom were not aware of the approaching marriage of Mr. Andresen and Mrs. Ball. Those who were let into the secret keenly enjoyed a little quiet fun at their expense, first twitting Mr. Andreson for having so long deferred getting married. Finally it was suggested by some one that it might not prove an ill-tamed idea for these good folks to join hands and hearts, the latter heartily acquiescing in the plan, greatly to the chargin and surprise of those who were not aware of the admirably arranged joke.

WILEY-M'DONALD.

Marriage of a Prominent Young Couple of this City.

In this city, last Wednesday evening, at nine o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. McDonald, the marriage of their eldest daughter, Miss Edna, to Mr. Perry Wiley, was solemnized, the Rev. Jonas Bushell officiating.

The wedding was a quiet one, only a few of the particular friends of the bride and groom witnessing the ceremony.

Miss Leila, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Frank P. Fisher, as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony the bridal party partook of a sumptuous and delectable repast.

The bride is a worthy young woman, whose many graces of character have endeared her to those with whom she has come in contact in social circles and in her home.

The groom is a prominent young business man who has resided in Port Angeles for several years, and by strict integrity and positive business principles has gained the confidence and the esteem of the general public in the affairs of life and his affable, genial manner has won him many true friends.

The DEMOCRAT-LEADER with the many friends of the happy young couple wish them unallayed happines, long life and continued prosperity.

Meeting in Fourth Ward.

A meeting was held in the Fourth ward last Monday evening, the purpose of which was to formulate an expression upon public questions, vital to the interest of the general public.

The sense of the meeting was that the council invalidate the contract with W. C. Williams, manager, the latter now having under process of construction the new piping line and water power for the city's electric lighting plant.

Also that the council not grant Chas. E. Mallette an extension of his water franchise, the consideration of which is now before the council for final action.

The opposition to these questions was formulated into a resolution, which was presented to the council at its last regular meeting by the councilman from that ward.

Democrats Attention!

You are urgently requested to meet at the council chamber, tomorrow (Saturday) evening, May 5th inst.

Important business will come before the meeting for consideration. By order of the Democrat club.

Child Drowned at Blynn.

The sad intelligence was brought to town early this week of the sudden death from drowning of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fernie, at Blyn last Monday.

The particulars of the accident were not learned, but it is supposed the child fell in the spring near the house. The child, a little boy, was only a few months past a year of age, and his sudden demise was a severe shock to the bereaved parents.

Garlick's Red Rose Potatoes.

Almost two years ago Mr. Garlick of Lost Mountain precinct, planted a few hills of the potato known as the California Red Rose, with the view of introducing it into this county if it proved to be a prolific bearer. His success was astonishing. He did not know but the "year" had something to do with it, so he tried it again last year. The result was even better than the first year. From his start of a few hills the year before he harvested about two tons last year, and had no trouble in disposing of nearly all he had to his neighbors at five cents per pound. He has placed a few sacks for sale with the Farmers' Mercantile Co., of Dungeness.

Herman Culver, Defendant.

Under and by virtue of a writ of execution issued out of the Superior court of Clallam County, State of Washington, dated the 15th day of March, 1894, upon a judgment rendered and entered in said court on the 17th day of February, 1894, wherein the said plaintiffs recovered of and from the said defendant the sum of $151.34, with interest thereon from the date of said judgment, at the rate of one and one-half per cent per month, and the further sum of $12.50 as attorney's fees, and costs of suit taxed at $18.30, I have duly levied upon all of the following described real estate situate in said Clallam County, as the community property of the said defendant, Herman Culver, and Clara Culver, his wife, to-wit:

Lot numbered 12 in block 22, lot numbered 3, in block 27, and lots numbered 14 and 15 in block 31, all of Norman R. Smith's Subdivision of the townsite of Port Angeles; also lot numbered 14 in block 2 of the Puget Sound Co-operative Colony's first addition to Port Angeles, in said Clallam County.

Therefore, public notice is hereby given that on Saturday, the 28th day of April, 1894, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, and at the north front door of the court house of said County, situate in the city of Port Angeles therein, I will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, all of the above described real estate, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said execution and judgment and all accruing costs.

Review of Seattle Market for the Past Week.

GRAIN AND FEED GOING HIGHER.

Barley, Oats and Wheat Higher—Onions Out of Market — Sugar Has Advanced—Clearing House Balances.

SEATTLE, May 4, 1894.

Exchanges at Seattle, Tacoma and Portland clearing houses to-day were:

	Clearances.	Balances.
Seattle	$101,935.49	$22,108.60
Tacoma	87,005.00	25,065.00
Portland	264,000.00	68,000.00

The principal changes in the price of farm products during the past week have been a slight advance in oats, wheat used for feed and variations in a few vegetables. While oats are very firm and have advanced materially in California, this market is slow to follow. Chicken feed wheat has been marked up $1 per ton. Barley is firmer, as is also bran.

In dairy products butter has remained unchanged. Eastern cheese is somewhat firmer, while California cheese is lower.

Eggs are now quoted at a little higher figure than last week. Chicken broilers are very scarce and consequently bring good prices. Ducks have advanced about $1 per dozen.

Old onions are practically out of the market, but new ones are expected to come in soon. Green onions, radishes, lettuce, etc., are plentiful.

All sugars have advanced one-eighth of a cent, but the market is unsteady. Roasted coffees have declined ½ a cent per pound.

Some brands of oranges have advanced and apples are going up, although good ones are hard to get. Pineapples, cocoanuts and strawberries are in the market.

HAVE YOU TRIED DRUGS AND FAILED TO FIND A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,
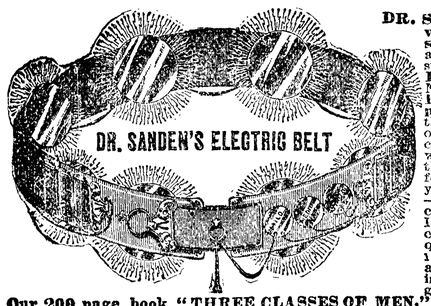
KIDNEY, LIVER and BLADDER
COMPLAINTS, DYSPEPSIA, LAME-BACK, &c.



DR. SANDEN'S ELECTRIC BELT with Electro Magnetic Suspensory will cure without medicine all of the above troubles. Those who suffer from Nervous Debility, Losses, Drains, Lost Manhood, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Poor Memory, all Female Complaints, and general Ill health, the effects of abuses, excesses, worry or exposure, will find relief and prompt cure in our marvelous invention, which requires but a trial to convince the most skeptical. In ignorance of effects you may have unduly drained your system of nerve force and vitality—which is electricity—and thus caused your weakness or lack of force. If you replace into your system the elements thus drained, which are required for vigorous strength, you will remove the cause and health, strength and vigor will follow at once. This is our plan and treatment, and we guarantee a cure or refund money.

Our 200 page book "THREE CLASSES OF MEN," should be read by every young, middle-aged and old man, sent sealed, free. Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is no experiment as we have restored thousands to robust health and vigor, after all other treatments failed, as can be shown by hundreds of cases throughout this and other States, who would gladly testify, and from many of whom we have strong letters bearing testimony to their recovery after using our Belt.

WE HAVE CURED THESE—WE CAN CURE YOU!

CENERAL DEBILITY CURED.

San Francisco, Cal., August 14, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Before I used your belt I was troubled with lost vigor, vital weakness, and almost a complete loss of power. I would get up with a very tired feeling, bones aching, etc.; since using your belt I have had a new lease of life. I now enjoy life better than I have for ten years past. I have the utmost confidence in your treatment. You can publish this statement, also have others write or call on me. Truly yours, H. A. BOWEN, 26 and 28 Turk St.

RHEUMATISM AND LAMENESS CURED.

Portland, Oregon, April 18 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I got one of your belts two weeks ago for rheumatism, from which I suffered for several years. For the past six months I had not been able to work. Your belt has placed me in almost perfect health in the two weeks I have used it. I can walk comfortably, and feel like a new man generally. M. E. HUGHES, Proprietor International Hotel.

NERVOUS DEBILITY—LOSS OF VIGOR.

Tacoma, Wash., October 24, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I have been using your Electric belt for general nervous debility, and to-day feel better than I have for five years. I have gained in vigor daily, and am strong in every part.
Yours gratefully, CHAS. LUETKA.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Portland Oregon, September 26, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Years of exposure and hard work, combined with the strain coming from the jar of an engine, gave me a severe case of lame back, from which I suffered for seven years. I was so bad that I could not bend my back. Was all doubled up with it. I bought one of your belts. It helped me in side of two days, and I continued to wear it for four months, being perfectly cured. That was two years ago, and I am as well to-day as I ever was in my life. I know your belt well, and I know lots of people who have been cured by it. Many others need it, and if they would try it they would find it the same as I did—the best remedy in the world. I am located here permanently, and will be glad to talk with any one who wants to inquire about it.
ROBERT BURRIL, Engineer Hotel Portland.

LOST VITALITY AND STRENGTH.

Everett, Wash, June 18, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Since wearing your belt I have been greatly benefited. I feel my old energy fast returning, and after a month's use of the belt I find myself twice as vigorous as before. My memory is now nearly perfect, and each day shows for the better. I feel much stronger than before using the belt. Yours truly, HENRY SCHULTZ.

THE DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT

is a complete galvanic battery, made into a belt so as to be easily worn during work or street, and it gives soothing, prolonged currents which are instantly felt throughout all weak parts, or we forfeit $5,000. It has an Improved Electric Suspensory, the greatest boon ever given a weak man, and we warrant it to cure any of the above weaknesses, and to enlarge shrunken limbs, or parts, or Money Refunded. They are graded in strength to meet all stages of weakness in young, middle-aged or old men, and will cure the worst cases in two or three months. Address for full information.

OUR RAILROAD ENVOYS.

In the hour of dire distress and impending doom, is waft the exceedingly refreshing morsel from far-off Chillicothe, (Ohio) that the people of that fair city are now "witnessing a western custom" that unfolds "in the way of an innovation." What means these strange revelations! As the light dawns upon our vision, a picture of surpassing lovliness is presented to view.

The forebodings of evil having befallen our railroad envoys, aroused, of course, by weeks of uninterrupted silence on their part, is last happily dispelled. In softest whispers let the news be broken. They are alive. These angels of mercy; twentieth century saviors of their home—the city of their adoption are still railroad envoys with that unfathomable depth of purpose that inspired in their manly breasts that unselfish sentiment—patriotism of home. And let no man breathe a word of doubt, a sigh of suspicion because this picture has presented in the background not our envoys favored guests of the Union Club of New York, mingling and vying with great railroad magnates, holding daily conferences with European and American railroad bond buyers, but simply Colonel J. S. Coolican, auctioneer, and plain, everyday Michael J. Carrigan, Esq., manager, of a "great western innovation," that has just litterly captured Chillicothe, and completely turned the heads of Chillcotheans. What! A circus? O! No. A five-legged calf? Guess again. Why, how stupid! Didn't you know, that would be beneath the dignity of our railroad envoys. Such inference is unpardonable. Infinitely greater than all these, as the "innovation" diffuses a double-blessing to Chillicothe and Angeles alike, cementing indissoluable ties of interest. And the logical conclusion, the Chillicothean becomes an investor in the second governmental townsite in America, as who could resist the magnetic presence of our charming colonel and the calm, serene, child-like smile of approval of Michael J. Add to this the sweet strains of music and even the Coxeyites would become subdued.

But what of our railroad? What impeneratable stupidity. Will not the profits from the Chillicothe and Washington sales build it? Away with Wall street! We have too long been servile slaves of its dictatorial supremacy.

SOME CHARACTERISTIC LYING.

The Tribune-Times in commenting upon an article recently published in the Beavar Leader criticising the county commissioners quite severely upon their action in allowing a bill for typewriters for the county officers, says:

"The Leader should not be quite so hard upon the commissioners; they are a well-meaning lot and intend to do what they believe to be right, but they were put in a hole by the auditor; who, as purchasing agent of the county, contracted for those pretty bronze typewriters and the commissioners were almost by necessity obliged to accept the bill. As soon as the officials can settle their preferences we expect the purchasing agent will contract for a full set of concertinas or jewsharps for the officials. Lawn tennis will come later in the season. A 'purchasing agent' for the county was a great conception. He should have a 'rake off (?)'."

If there is one characteristic about the Tribune-Times more contemptible than all the rest, it is habitual lying. It takes especial delight, apparently in writing what is not true, especially when in so doing the object is to gratify its spiteful malice.

There is not a scintilla of truth in the statement here quoted. It is a lie pure and simple made out of whole cloth, and it is more than probable that Mr. Ulmer knew it was.

Anyone of the board of county commissioners, or the agents of the Barlock typewriters, will tell Mr. Ulmer that his statement is unjust, unfair and untrue.

But then then the editor of the Tribune does not seek the truth; he has no use for it.

OUT of the the depths of darkness flashes the glimmer of hope that the Democrats will soon bring the tariff question to an issue in the senate. It is to be regretted that the vital importance of such action had not dawned upon them months ago. The almost criminal dilatoriness of the party's representatives in the senate is condemned by the Democracy of the country with equal vehemence the treachery of Senator Hill receives.

AND those Republican obstructionists in the senate! The people of the country are beginning to realize they are even more reprehensible than inactive Democrats, for the deplorable condition into which the country has been plunged by the long deferred action of the senate on the tariff bill. A day of reckoning is coming. And the Lord have mercy on the misguided Republican party!

IT is indeed a chilling frost, a positive check to that mighty Republican tidal wave. Think of it! That great Republican strong hold, Spokane, the home of John L. Wilson, Congressman and prince of aspirants for the United States senatorship, swells the anti-Republican column.

THE Tribune-Times says, 'the purchasing agent for the county was a great conception. He should have a 'rake off.'" The wheezy old granny of the Tribune must have had a vision of former Republican administrations.

AND Ohio, too! One of the congressional district went Democratic Tuesday. Another crushing evidence of the efficacy of protection to the few.

ST. PAUL repudiates a vicious, unwholesome and profligate Republican administration with electing the Democratic ticket.

Money Spent Economically.

Money economically spent is not always judiciously spent. Why? Simply because a cheap article often requires more money spent on it to keep it in repair than it would cost to purchase the best. We manufacture nothing but the best gas and gasoline engines in the market, and results prove it. Send for catalogue. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, Front and Alder streets, Portland, Ore.

AN INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

An Adventurous Miner Runs Onto a Strange Prehistoric City.

Manville W. Cresworth, an English mining man well known throughout southwest Mexico, arrived at Mapimi, Mexico, recently from a long overland journey through the Sierra Madre mountains, his starting point being Culican, near the Pacific coast, in the state of Sinaloa. He claims to have visited a section of country never before visited by a white man of the present generation, and that he discovered a large and beautiful deserted city.

He told the correspondent that the wonderful city is situated about 80 miles west of Lake Colorado, in the recesses of the Sierra Madres. It occupies a basin about 10 miles long by eight miles wide. Perpendicular cliffs surround the basin on all sides, rising to a height of hundreds of feet. The only entrance to the city is through a deep canyon, which has a width of about 30 feet. Mr. Cresworth states that he stumbled onto the secret entrance quite by accident. He gives a vivid description of the deserted city.

The buildings, he says, are constructed of redstone blocks resembling granite. The business blocks are two and three stories in height and are entirely different in architectural design from the structures built by the Aztecs and Spaniards. The streets are very narrow, but are laid out in regular order. In the city is a small park which is overgrown with rare flowers and tropical vegetation. He entered the business houses and decaying residences, but found very little of value except some remarkable and strange ornaments made of stone.

He believes that the city was looted at the time that it was deserted, whenever that may have been. No records or writings of any kind were found, nor did he discover any skeleton that would give an idea as to the race of people who at one time inhabited the city. None of the natives of that section of country had ever heard of the deserted city. Mr. Cresworth is making diligent inquiry of them. Mr. Cresworth's story is very startling and remarkable, but it is believed by those to whom he has related his experiences. He will organize an expedition to make a thorough exploration of the city.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A NERVY COASTER.

He Slides Down Historic Lookout Mountain at Lightning Speed.

A short, compactly built man, with a heavy blond mustache, took a toboggan slide down Lookout mountain the other afternoon. He went via the incline and made the trip from the Point hotel to the engine house, a distance of 4,500 feet, in 3½ minutes, which is just one-third the time that it takes a car to descend. Fully 100 people saw him make the lightning-like descent, and all were greatly excited.

About 4 o'clock the coaster appeared at the Point hotel with what appeared to be a block of wood about eight inches square under his arm. On one side of the block was a steel horseshoe, in the curve of which was a small flanged wheel. The other side of the block was slightly concave. The block was put on the outside rail of the incline, the wheel fitting close, and the horns of the horseshoe were on either side. Then the man put a heavy glove on his right hand, and sitting down on the block started down the mountain without more ado. He held his feet crossed straight and before him and rested them on the iron rail. For a few feet the little one wheel car moved slowly, and then the speed increased until it and its human freight were going down the mountain at a rate that made the spectators hold their breath.

When a curve was reached, the coaster slowed up slightly by pressing his heels against the rail and steadied himself by touching the cable with his gloved hand. Finally, when he reached the very heavy grade just above the engine house, he took off all brakes and came down like a shot out of a gun. Arriving at the bottom, he put on the "heel" brakes and gently came to a stop just in the depot. Coolly rising from his queer vehicle, he placed it under his arm and walked quietly away before any of the astonished spectators had a chance to recover their breath or ask any questions.—Chattanooga Times.

Novel Railroad Ticket.

The railway marks invented by the Hungarian minister Lukais will shortly be adopted on all Hungarian railways. For the future no traveler on Hungarian railways will be troubled to stand waiting at the ticket office for his ticket. He will be in a position to make out his ticket for himself. On a blank card he will write the name of the station from which he takes his departure and that of the station he means to go to, and he will stick on the remaining empty space on the card as many "railway marks" as his journey will cost. The blank cards will be obtainable at all tobacco shops. —London News.

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Dr. Price's Baking Powder Receives It.

(CHICAGO TRIBUNE.)

For leavening power, keeping qualities purity and general excellence the World's Fair jury decided that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder had no equal. On each of its claims it was awarded a first prize or a diploma. All the baking powders entered for prizes were subjected to a most exhaustive examination, and the jury was the best equipped to make the decision, of any ever got together. Their verdict was supported by the testimony of Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington. Dr. Wiley is an expert on food products and the highest authority on such matters in America. This verdict settles a long debated question as which among the many baking powders is the best.

ENGLISH PRIDE SHOCKED.

Corruption In Army Circles Unearthed and Pet Officers Under Arrest.

It used to be a cardinal article of an Englishman's faith that his army, if small, was of the very best quality, and that its administrators, from the commander in chief down to the humblest subaltern officer, were incorruptible. The latter belief received a rude shock recently when the Woolwich arsenal was proved to be a hotbed of corruption, and a clean sweep had to be made of some of its leading officers. The faith which survived that blow has now again been sorely tried. Officers Loch and Murray, in charge of the war department armory at the tower, Birmingham, have been placed under arrest and will be tried by court martial next week.

The charges are systematic blackmailing extending over a number of years and frauds of the shabbiest and most unmilitary character. The tower is virtually a training school for regimental armorers, and no noncommissioned officer could hope to obtain the rank of armorer without a certificate of competency signed by Loch and Murray. It is alleged that these trusted officers extorted money as the price of every certificate and also had a secret system whereby every workman applying for work and every soldier desiring promotion had to pay sums ranging from shillings to pounds.

The incriminated officers have long been living far beyond their visible means, but the malpractices were not suspected until a few months ago, when the war department in London began to receive anonymous letters purporting to be written by fleeced victims. The secretary of war was unwilling to take cognizance of anonymous accusations against the honor of reputable officers, but the charges became so persistent and categorical that he decided to investigate them, and Colonel King Harman was sent to Birmingham. With the assistance of the local police he soon obtained sufficient evidence to justify the arrests. The curious feature of the case is that Colonel Nuttall, commander in chief of the tower, was not arrested also for shameful neglect of his duties.—London Cor. New York Sun.

DOWN NIAGARA RAPIDS.

The Body of a Woman on a Cake of Ice Whirled Over American Falls.

A sensational story is told here by Master Edwin Whitney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Solon Whitney of this city. It is in effect that he saw at the house of his grandfather, Major Whitney, on Buffalo avenue, the body of a woman float past the rear of the house down through the rapids and over the falls.

The hour was about 8:30 in the morning. Master Whitney says that he saw the object on a cake of ice, and that there could be no mistake about it being a woman. She had on dark clothes, he thought, and part of her face was visible as she lay on the ice. He called the attention of the two painters at work on the veranda on the river side of the Whitney mansion, and they also thought it was a body.

The painters alluded to are John O'Brien and Harry Collyer. Both substantiated the boy's story. Mr. O'Brien said:

"Our attention was called to the river by a flock of ducks flying over. Young Whitney and myself saw the object on the ice coming down the river and at first thought it was a log. As it came nearer we saw that it was a human being, and when still closer that it was a woman. Mr. Collyer's attention was called to it, and he also thought it was a woman. The cake of ice with the body passed probably but 50 feet from the shore down into the rapids. The body was of good size and appeared to be enveloped in a long steel gray cloak which reached nearly to the feet. The woman was lying extended, and there could be no mistake as to it being a woman."

The three watchers followed the object as far as the rapids, where the ice and its burden were tossed about and went over the American falls. It doubtless passed under the ice bridge and may never be found.—Niagara Special to New York World.

An Unexpected Marriage Boom.

Owing to the great demand for public work in the parks at $1 a day the city employment committee issued an order some time ago to employ only married men. This had the effect of causing a big boom in business at the marriage license clerk's office. Every unmarried Italian and Pole in Pittsburg seems to be hunting a wife. All the marriageable young women who are willing to begin the married state at $1 a day have been taken, and unless the order be rescinded trouble will occur in the Italian and Polish colonies. Chief Clerk McKenzie of the employment committee said:

"Many men who had been refused work went away and in a few days returned with their marriage certificate, thinking it would entitle them to get a job. When refused a chance to earn $1 a day, they thought they had been trifled with and cursed the committee."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Washington Logs to Go to France.

A schooner laden with the huge logs and tree trunks of which the Washington state building at the World's fair was constructed will sail out of the harbor of Chicago some time during May. Its destination will be either Havre or Cherbourg, France. The Washington state building was one of the most interesting at the fair. Many of the timbers in the building are 3 feet square and 140 feet long. It is the intention of those who purchased the building to set it up in France exactly as it stood upon the World's fair grounds.—Chicago Herald.

Hard on the Doctors.

The smallpox scare is about over and the harvest for physicians, at $1 per point, about ended for the year. If we had a law to compel physicians to vaccinate all the members of the families in which they practice, free of charge, the days of smallpox scares would be forever ended.—Iowa State Register.

Rich When In His Cups.

A citizen of Atlanta recently visited the tax collector's office for the purpose of paying his taxes. He was asked to make returns for this year. He did so. According to his statement, he owned $5,000 worth of stocks and bonds. He was notified that he owed the city $26.13. A few days later he sent a petition to the mayor and city council in which he says: "I gave in my taxes in 1893 when I was intoxicated. I returned stocks, bonds and such like to the assessor when, as a matter of fact, I never did own anything of the kind. Had I not been intoxicated I would never have made such return." The petition was granted, and the man was released from his excessive valuation.—Baltimore Sun.

Green at the Drawing Room.

The queen's first drawing room was interesting chiefly as a guide to the coming season's fashions. The number present was about half that of some of last year's receptions. Spring tints prevailed, and the feminine world will receive with various emotions the news that green still holds strange sway as a fashionable color. It is a matter of congratulation, however, that the favorite tones are more moderate than two or three seasons ago. The shockingly intense greens are disappearing. Brides almost all wore the purest white.—London Cor. New York Sun.

A complete new departure from old time journalism.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS

BY MRS. C. B. MANFIELD.

The regular meetings of this Union will be held on the first and third Fridays of each month at 2 p. m., and on the second and fourth Friday evenings at 8 o'clock. The gentlemen members are requested to attend the evening meetings. All are cordially invited to all meetings of the union.

The W. C. T. U. pledge: "I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic of the same."

The man or woman who has temperance principles should not keep them in the dark.

The liquor traffic is the cause of ninety per cent of the business of the criminal courts and ninety per cent. of the pauperism, for which the taxpayers have to pay. It is this business which puts out the fire on the hearth and condemns wives and children to hunger, cold and rags. It is a business which no one dare assert that it does no harm. The only dispute about it is, as to the amount of harm it does.

Lord Chesterfield once said:

"The drink which the distillers make is but palatable poison. If their liquors are so delicious that the people are tempted to their own destruction, let us, at least, be secure from their fatal draught by bursting the vials which contains them. Let us crush out at once the artist in human slaughter who have reconciled their countrymen to sickness, ruin and death.

Our only hope for the future is in the protection of the boys and girls. Most of the old drunkards will keep on, but the children can be saved and educated to hate the cup, thus we may in the future have a temperate generation.

"A little seven-year-old girl in an Eastern city, seeing a dirty, blear-eyed, drunken man real past her on the street, looking up to her mother, asked: "Mamma is that man a papa." "Yes," replied the mother sadly, "he is the papa of the poor, little, half frozen children who pick up coal from the gutter." "Mama," said the child, "that man is not fit to be a papa." The words of this child are of more importance to the future generation than all the questions that are now before our great law makers at Washington.

We read a few years ago of a mining town in Pennsylvania that began to drop suddenly away out of sight through apparently solid ground. Here a little cottage vanished, almost silently; there a large house went down with a crash. As a man stood looking out from his doorway he saw his neighbor's house topple and fall. And so, when he went back into his own house, he went softly about fearfull lest it go down under his feet. Why was this? Because day after day, night after night, for years, the miners had been at work down below, pick, pick, chip, chip till the very foundation of those homes were destroyed, and they sank down into the horrible depths below. It is just so in the matter of the rum traffic. Day after day, night after night, the miners have been at work below us, until we can feel the ground shake under our feet. We have seen our neighbor's houses topple and fall, and some of us have felt our own going down Something must be done to stop the undermining of the homes of this land. May the mothers, wives and sisters of Western Washington be guided by that higher power which will enable them to go forth in the strength of "Israel's God," and never rest till the saloon is banished from our midst.

IMPORTANT NOTIFICATION.

American Heiresses Are Warned to Look Out For a Prince With a Record.

A young Belgian prince of undoubtedly high birth and unquestioned impecuniosity has just abandoned Paris and a swarm of mourning creditors, and, it is said, we do not know how truly, is to set sail for the United States. His proper title is his serene highness the Prince de Looz Cos Warren, and it may be of interest to American heiresses to learn that this new importation is at present unmarried.

About three years ago he was engaged to a young South American girl. The wedding was to be sumptuous and to take place in one of the swell churches of Paris. As is usual for stylish gatherings, the crowds of lookers on nearly excluded the personal friends of the contracting couple. The bride floated up the aisle, and the priest prepared to begin the ceremony, when it was observed that one important adjunct was missing—namely, the bridegroom. He had quietly gone off on a honeymoon tour all by himself after a stormy discussion respecting finances with the father of the bride. The young lady fainted, the guests were greatly amused, and the wedding party went sadly home.

The odd part of the whole affair was the fact that the couple having been married by the mayor, and the absence of religious ceremonial having no legal significance, the forsaken bride had to get a divorce in due form from her recalcitrant spouse, who continued to travel.

However, the French courts dissolved the marriage some time ago, so the volatile gentleman is at liberty to try matrimony all over again. Whether that be his design in seeking your hospitable shores time alone will reveal.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

WILL STUFF THE CARCASS.

A Man at Far Rockaway Wins In a Struggle With a Fighting Sea Dog.

Charles Silas of the Belmore House at Far Rockaway, L. I., killed a sea dog on Wednesday while walking along the beach. Mr. Silas, taking advantage of the fine weather, started to walk along the water's edge on the inlet of the peninsula. When near what is known as Hog island, he saw an animal somewhat resembling a seal lying asleep on the sands. The animal was of a yellowish white, with black rings on his back.

The animal was sunning itself and was disturbed by the approach of Mr. Silas. It started toward him, showing its tusks. The only weapon Mr. Silas had was a small stick. This was snapped in two by the sharp fangs of the animal, and the sea dog, or whatever it was, attempted to bite Mr. Silas. Mr. Silas struck the animal on the head with his fist and stunned it. Before it recovered he obtained a heavy club, and when it rushed at him again he struck it on the head and killed it.

The animal had a long, snoutlike nose, with whiskers about the nostrils. The ears were short and rounded. The fore legs were short, with long, sharp claws. The hind legs were flipperlike. The tail was short, and the entire body was covered with short, coarse hair. Mr. Silas secured the carcass and will have it stuffed. Several other people report having seen similar animals along the south shore.—New York Tribune.

OCEAN TELEGRAPH.

The Heaviest Cable In the World Is to Be Laid During This Year.

This will be a great year for ocean telegraphy. The Anglo-American Cable company will lay a new Atlantic cable this spring, which is now making in England. The copper conducting wire of this cable will weigh 650 pounds per knot, while hitherto no cable has had a conductor weighing so much as 500 pounds per knot.

The Atlantic cables have conductors weighing 400 pounds or less per knot. Many short cables have cores weighing as little as 107 pounds. Cables 1,900 miles long on the east coast of Africa have cores weighing 250 pounds to the knot.

The heaviest core is that of the French cable from St. Pierre, Miquelon, to Brest. It is 2,242 miles long and weighs 485 pounds per knot. The estimated cost for making and laying long cables is about $1,200 per knot. The cost of the proposed Pacific cable will be somewhat greater because it cannot be manufactured in the vicinity.

The total length, exclusive of 740 knots already laid in Australasian waters, will be about 2,900 knots, making the total cost about $6,200,000 for cable and laying alone.—Philadelphia Press.

A Steamship on Lake Titicaca.

A triumph in engineering is reported from the mountains of Peru, where a twin screw steamer of 540 tons, 170 feet long and 30 feet wide has been successfully launched on Lake Titicaca, the highest navigable waters in the world, more than 13,000 feet above the sea. This steamer, which belongs to the Peruvian government and is to be used for freight and passenger traffic, was built on the Clyde, then taken apart in more than 1,000 pieces and shipped to Mollendo by sea. It was then carried to Puna by railway and transported over the mountains on the backs of llamas and mules and put together by a Mr. John Wilson, a Scotch engineer, with great skill and success.—Chicago Record.

Effect of Lord Dufferin's Speech.

Lord Dufferin's speech on the peace of Europe, in Paris, has had a remarkably good effect throughout Europe. In France itself the words have been received in excellent spirit, and public sentiment has quite taken the sting from the vulgar insults to the British embassador which, by a few days, preceded the address. The French government's bold declaration of a policy of religious toleration also has been received as a distinct mark of progress. Even some of the French Radicals show signs of having made the discovery that denunciation of all religion is not an evidence of true democracy.—Paris Letter.

A NEW MESSIAH.

He Stirs Up Things In the State of Washington and Is Jailed.

News has reached here that Loon Lake, 60 miles from Spokane, on the Spokane and Northern railway, is in a fever of excitement. Six weeks ago William Lewis and wife came to the Lake and instituted a series of revival meetings. Lewis proved to be a fluent speaker and captured his audience. He was energetic and enthusiastic and inspired in his hearers a wonderful degree of confidence.

When he had his audience thoroughly aroused, among other things he stated one evening that he possessed supernatural power. He claimed to be a specially ordained apostle of God and had come into the community to work miracles and save souls. The meetings were conducted in the schoolhouse, and while he succeeded in securing many followers an element in the community, believing him an impostor, succeeded in getting the permission granted him of preaching in the schoolhouse revoked.

He was loud in denunciation of his persecutors and finally disturbed a religious meeting, which resulted in his arrest, trial and conviction. Being unable to pay the fine, he was committed to jail at Colville. He now lies ill at Loon Lake, and the authorities are unable to remove him.

He declared that he was empowered by God to heal the sick, cast out devils and raise the dead. He secured 15 or 20 converts, who went through a singular gymnastic performance in his soul cleansing process. They were required to die a spiritual death, lying upon their backs on the floor, closing their eyes and passing into a trance.

Before they entered the spirit land Lewis reminded the converts that it was easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven, whereupon he required them to surrender to him their pocketbooks, rings, watches, pins, jewelry and valuables of every description. At this juncture all who refused to accept the faith were excluded from the room.

The community is still considerably wrought up over the affair, and feeling is divided.—Spokane Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

Went Mad on the Bench.

A case was being heard in a Berlin law court the other day, and the evidence of a lady was being taken, when suddenly, apropos of nothing in particular, the judge said sternly, "Do you like potatoes, madam?" Naturally the people in court were much surprised, and their surprise was intensified when the judge proceeded to make grimaces at the witness and to talk at random on incongruous subjects. The unfortunate gentleman had to be led from the bench and placed under the care of a keeper.—London Tit-Bits.

Earth From Lafayette's Tomb.

In accordance with the request of a society called the "Daughters of the American Revolution," some pinches of earth have been taken from Lafayette's grave, in the Picpus cemetery, by order of the minister of the interior. A tree of liberty in commemoration of the American revolution is to be planted in San Francisco, and the earth is to be placed at its base.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

"HE WEARS RUBBERS."

A New Slang Phrase Which Has Caught on In the Metropolis.

During a recent discussion between a newspaper man and State Senator Owens of Brooklyn on the merits of a third person the senator said: "Why, that man is no good. He's not even decent. The fellow wears rubbers."

The newspaper man was at a loss to understand the senator's meaning, but not wishing to appear behind in the slang of the day said nothing. The next day he approached a well known politician and asked him about it.

"What does it mean when you speak of a man as wearing rubbers?" he said.

"My boy," said the politician, "that is the very latest slang expression. It simply means that a man is a sneak; that, figuratively speaking, he approaches you with muffled feet. If you go into any police museum in the country, one of the things they'll show you is the rubber shoe that the sneak thief or the assassin uses. It is an ordinary tennis shoe, with a rubber sole and a canvas upper, and the only reason it is worn by crooks is because it gives them an opportunity to creep up behind their victim without being heard."

Another new bit of slang is, "He doesn't cut any ice." It simply means that he or she, whichever sex is referred to, plays no part. Both of these expressions are almost brand new, and the first, at least, is likely to become much in vogue with people who like to piece out their vocabulary with slang.—Brooklyn Letter.

M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg, from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

WOOD PULP SILK.

Chardomet's Discovery Perfected and a Mill Started In France.

An experiment is being made at Besancon, in France, with a substitute for silk, which will be watched with interest. The invention, that of Count de Chardomet, is to convert wood pulp into soft silken thread, durable, luminous and elastic. The "silk" threads produced from the wood pulp were first shown at the last Paris exhibition, when they enjoyed a good deal of attention among those interested in the silk industry. But the process was at that time far from complete, and many improvements had to be made before the invention could be regarded as a commercial success.

That point, in the opinion of Count de Chardomet, has now been reached, and a mill has been built for the manufacture of goods from the new material. There are still some details in the process which must be improved before capitalists are likely to embark in the venture. One of the great difficulties, it appears, that has to be overcome is the snapping of the threads while they are being spun, owing to the unequal pressure which is exercised in forcing the wood pulp through an exceedingly small aperture, so as to convert it into thread. This is a defect, however, which the inventor is confident he will soon overcome. After the wood has been reduced to the consistency of pulp it is dried in an oven and then plunged into a mixture of sulphuric and nitric acids, washed in several baths of water and dried by alcohol. The product is afterward dissolved in ether and pure alcohol, and the result is collodion similar to that used in photography.

This collodion, which is a sticky, viscous substance, is inclosed in a solid receptacle furnished with a filter at the lower end. An air pump sends compressed air into the receptacle, and by this pressure the collodion is forced through horizontally in the form of fine threads. As the thread is forced out it passes through a vessel filled with ether and alcohol, which solidifies the collodion and makes it elastic and as brilliant as silk. If the invention turns out as successfully as its inventor anticipates, it will be the beginning of a very important industry.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

MISS HATCH'S CURE.

She Thinks It Was Due to Supernatural Influence, but the Doctor Says Not.

Miss Mary Hatch, a young woman of excellent family, who lives with her mother at 1912 Hickory street, is rejoicing in her recent relief from a tumor which had made her miserable for seven years. She attributes her cure to the virtues of a relic of Mme. Barat, a French religieuse of the Order of the Sacred Heart. Miss Hatch had taken medical treatment without benefit and had finally come to despair of cure by other than surgical means.

Some one advised her to apply to the Sisters of the Sacred Heart for a relic that might, with faith and prayer, help to sustain her through such an operation. She did so and was told that her cure by supernatural means was not impossible. She received from the mother superior a relic of Mme. Barat and a form of prayer and was directed to sew the relic into her dress and repeat the prayer at frequent intervals for a term of nine days.

On the sixth day of the novena Miss Hatch was relieved of the tumor without other than natural assistance and since then has been rapidly recovering strength. She was seen by a representative of The Post-Dispatch and talked enthusiastically of her cure, ascribing it entirely to the virtues of faith and prayer and the relic. Her mother and the Sisters of the Sacred Heart hold the same opinion as to the cause of the cure.

Dr. Robert J. O'Reilly, who gave Miss Hatch some attention at different times, said: "I believe I saw Miss Hatch four times and prescribed for her. But I had not seen her since June up to the time of her delivery of the tumor. I considered the tumor a simple fleshy growth that might pass off of itself if let alone, and I did not at any time consider the young woman's condition critical. I hesitated, however, to make a thorough examination for reasons that medical men will appreciate. You may put me down as saying that I do not think there was anything supernatural about this cure."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Spring Medicine.

This is the time for spring medicine, and there is nothing better than green foods. Celery salad, celery soup, celery sandwiches and celery and salt for nerves, rheumatism and relish; lettuce, chicory, escarol, oranges and grape fruit for the blood; water cresses for the voice, breath and lungs; radishes, onions, shallot and chives for the stomach, and butter, smoked meats, eggs, fish and oysters for good digestion. Pickles, olives, spices, pastry and fresh meats are too heavy when a change of diet is in order. Green soups are as real aperients, and young beets, spinach and stewed cucumbers and tomatoes are remedial for a long list of digestive ailments. At least so the doctors say.—New York World.

Opals For Bird Ballast.

E. E. Van Dyke informs us that he has killed a number of blue grouse from time to time in the region of Crandle creek and that in the crop of the birds he has found opals. It is thought by Mr. Van Dyke that the birds pick up these opals in the Bad Lands in the vicinity of Red Lodge and use the precious stones for ballast. The opals found in the crop of the mountain grouse are of fine character and of variegated colors.—Red Lodge (N. D.) New Idea.

Crowding the Hard Times.

Mrs. David Rosenberger, the wife of a farmer near Kittanning, Pa., has just given birth to five babies, three boys and two girls, all of whom are alive and well. "I thought," says the surprised father, "that we were coming to a time of astonishing pluralities when they began to count up the vote for Grow a few weeks ago. But, oh, my! I didn't look for anything like this—hard times and five babies at once!"—New York Tribune.

A NEW GAS DISCOVERY.

A Kansas Reporter Visits Doniphan Lake and Backs Up a Good Story.

The confidence of The Globe in the veracity of Clark Drummond, Tip Young and L. H. Chamberlain having been badly shaken by their statement that you could punch a hole in the ice at Doniphan lake and light the natural gas which escaped through it, a reporter visited the lake last week for the purpose of an investigation and was convinced of the truthfulness of their statement.

Upon arriving there a bonfire was found, which Frank Brenner had started by piling some brush over a white spot in the ice, puncturing the ice and touching a match to the fume. The entire lake was covered with spots, and they were opened, and the gas burned out of them until it became work instead of play. The illumination was kept up until after dark, when the effect was better. It takes about a minute to burn the gas out of a spot as big around as a washtub. The smaller the hole in the ice, the longer it takes the gas to escape. The flame shoots up fully a foot and looks exactly like gas coming out of a pipe with the burner removed. The gas has no smell—at least the investigating committee detected none.

It is claimed that it is a vegetable gas that is always found in newly formed lakes and is caused by the decomposition of vegetable matter. It escapes without attracting attention as a usual thing, but is imprisoned when the water freezes. The gas at Doniphan lake was discovered by a boy who fell and broke the ice. He had a box of parlor matches in one of his pockets. They became ignited and lit the gas. The boy's trousers were considerably disfigured.—Atchison Globe.

SHOWMEN COME TO GRIEF.

They Are Arrested For Packing 800 Children Into a Hall Built to Hold 250.

Two itinerant showmen—Professor Albert Nickel, an alleged magician of Philadelphia, and his manager, Clarence Veerlander of Pittsburg—have come to grief in New Castle, Pa., and are under arrest, charged with fraud and with cruelty to children.

They went to New Castle and advertised to give a Punch and Judy show and a sleight of hand performance, the admission to be 5 cents each for school children. They hired a hall which had 250 seats, and into this over 800 children were packed. So dense was the crowd that windows could not be opened for fear the children would fall out, and the room soon became like an odoriferous oven.

Several children fainted, and 50 or more were crying and screaming at the top of their voices through fear and discomfort. A panic seeming inevitable, Mayor Richardson was notified, and after a score or more of angry parents had invaded the hall and made open threats of violence to the showmen the mayor commanded the latter to close the show and disperse the crowd.

By this time the children were in a terrible state, dripping with perspiration and sickened by the breath poisoned air of the packed room. When an attempt was made to get them out, several fainted, and it was fully an hour before the crowd was out of the hall.—Philadelphia Times.

BOMBS IN BIRMINGHAM.

The Spirit of Destruction Makes Itself Felt Even In the Scrap Pile.

Anybody desiring an exciting occupation could not do better than to obtain a job at one of the numerous metal refineries in Birmingham. In addition to the usual risks in such business the workmen daily encounter the danger of being blown up by bombs. A good deal of scrap metal bought for the melting pots comes from the continent, where, it seems, carelessness has almost reached the rank of a virtue. It is a common thing to find loaded military bombs among the refuse. The workmen must always be on the lookout for them.

For the second time within a week one firm has providentially escaped being blown sky high. First it was an old gunpowder shell, probably found on some battlefield. Then variety was given to the entertainment by the arrival of a more scientific and up to date bomb which came in a cargo of scrap iron, and the workman just missed shoveling it into the furnace. It only weighed two pounds, but it would have done damage altogether disproportionate to its size, for on being tenderly dissected in the firm's laboratory the little stranger was found to contain a quarter of a pint of nitroglycerin.—London Letter.

Our Literary Conquest In England.

A little book is to be published here on "First Editions of American Authors." From this one may fairly assume that the popularity of transatlantic writers in England is now considerable. Not very many years ago Longfellow, Poe, Emerson, Hawthorne, Lowell, Mark Twain, Artemus Ward and Josh Billings were almost all the American authors in whom the British public took any interest. How different is the situation now! American books swarm in our literary markets, and their authors, like so many Englishmen and women, have a reputation on both sides of the Atlantic. Every day the rapprochement between the two great literatures and the two great reading publics grows closer and closer.—London Figaro.

Good Find of the Excavators.

Another valuable discovery has rewarded the excavators in Egypt. Recently they opened a pyramid of bricks at Dashour which contained the tomb of a relative of a king of the twelfth dynasty. One of the finest collections of Egytian jewelry was within and included brooches, bracelets, plaques, charms and caskets, all of solid gold, ornamented with emeralds, amethysts, coral and turquoise and scarabee. To the bracelets were attached two hawks with crowns on their heads. There were also lions, shells and other ornaments, all of exquisite workmanship. The royal chamber remains to be explored, and greater treasures are expected to appear.

HIS FIRST PLUG HAT.

Despite a Former Experience the New Minister to Bolivia Will Try It Again.

Colonel Tom Moonlight—nobody ever called him Thomas except the state department clerk who made out his commission as minister to Bolivia—was at the capitol the other day saying goodby to his friends. Colonel Tom tells this story:

"When I received my instructions at the state department, I was told that I must be very careful and punctilious when I reached La Paz, the capital of Bolivia, about my attire. I was particularly informed that I must not appear in the streets unless I wore a silk hat.

"'Good God!' I exclaimed, fondly stroking my soft sombrero, 'I never wore a high silk hat except once. It was when I was governor of Wyoming, and we were celebrating Fourth of July or some other holiday. I was told that the governor ought to wear a tile, and so I put one on. I had not gone 50 yards before a cowboy, just in from the plains, sent a bullet through it. He said that a man ought to have better sense than to wear a silk hat in Cheyenne, and, to tell the truth, my sympathies were with the cowboy.'

"When I get to Bolivia, however, I am going to wear one again. The state department tells me that if any one shoots at me I can call upon the entire United States for protection."—Washington Post.

IMPORTANT NOTIFICATION.

American Heiresses Are Warned to Look Out For a Prince With a Record.

A young Belgian prince of undoubtedly high birth and unquestioned impecuniosity has just abandoned Paris and a swarm of mourning creditors, and, it is said, we do not know how truly, is to set sail for the United States. His proper title is his serene highness the Prince de Looz Cos Warren, and it may be of interest to American heiresses to learn that this new importation is at present unmarried.

About three years ago he was engaged to a young South American girl. The wedding was to be sumptuous and to take place in one of the swell churches of Paris. As is usual for stylish gatherings, the crowds of lookers on nearly excluded the personal friends of the contracting couple. The bride floated up the aisle, and the priest prepared to begin the ceremony, when it was observed that one important adjunct was missing—namely, the bridegroom. He had quietly gone off on a honeymoon tour all by himself after a stormy discussion respecting finances with the father of the bride. The young lady fainted, the guests were greatly amused, and the wedding party went sadly home.

The odd part of the whole affair was the fact that the couple having been married by the mayor, and the absence of religious ceremonial having no legal significance, the forsaken bride had to get a divorce in due form from her recalcitrant spouse, who continued to travel.

However, the French courts dissolved the marriage some time ago, so the volatile gentleman is at liberty to try matrimony all over again. Whether that be his design in seeking your hospitable shores time alone will reveal.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

WILL STUFF THE CARCASS.

A Man at Far Rockaway Wins In a Struggle With a Fighting Sea Dog.

Charles Silas of the Belmore House at Far Rockaway, L. I., killed a sea dog on Wednesday while walking along the beach. Mr. Silas, taking advantage of the fine weather, started to walk along the water's edge on the inlet of the peninsula. When near what is known as Hog island, he saw an animal somewhat resembling a seal lying asleep on the sands. The animal was of a yellowish white, with black rings on his back.

The animal was sunning itself and was disturbed by the approach of Mr. Silas. It started toward him, showing its tusks. The only weapon Mr. Silas had was a small stick. This was snapped in two by the sharp fangs of the animal, and the sea dog, or whatever it was, attempted to bite Mr. Silas. Mr. Silas struck the animal on the head with his fist and stunned it. Before it recovered he obtained a heavy club, and when it rushed at him again he struck it on the head and killed it.

The animal had a long, snoutlike nose, with whiskers about the nostrils. The ears were short and rounded. The fore legs were short, with long, sharp claws. The hind legs were flipperlike. The tail was short, and the entire body was covered with short, coarse hair. Mr. Silas secured the carcass and will have it stuffed. Several other people report having seen similar animals along the south shore.—New York Tribune.

OCEAN TELEGRAPH.

The Heaviest Cable In the World Is to Be Laid During This Year.

This will be a great year for ocean telegraphy. The Anglo-American Cable company will lay a new Atlantic cable this spring, which is now making in England. The copper conducting wire of this cable will weigh 650 pounds per knot, while hitherto no cable has had a conductor weighing so much as 500 pounds per knot.

The Atlantic cables have conductors weighing 400 pounds or less per knot. Many short cables have cores weighing as little as 107 pounds. Cables 1,900 miles long on the east coast of Africa have cores weighing 250 pounds to the knot.

The heaviest core is that of the French cable from St. Pierre, Miquelon, to Brest. It is 2,242 miles long and weighs 485 pounds per knot. The estimated cost for making and laying long cables is about $1,200 per knot. The cost of the proposed Pacific cable will be somewhat greater because it cannot be manufactured in the vicinity.

The total length, exclusive of 740 knots already laid in Australasian waters, will be about 2,900 knots, making the total cost about $6,200,000 for cable and laying

CHAPTER V.

EDWARD FREEMAN'S NARRATIVE — THE ARREST OF MELODY.

In the month of October, long after the public excitement caused by the disappearance of my brother John had subsided, and even after the local interest caused by Charley's curious behavior and conversation had died away, the suspicion, indeed the conviction, that John had met with foul play, while it renewed the general excitement, made our own grief only the deeper and bitterer. Every one believed now that my brother had been murdered. Dhu-Corrig, where Jack was last seen, was not within sight of any house in the neighborhood, but there were a house and farm close by occupied by a returned Irish-American called Melody, a very big man, noisy, quarrelsome and given to drink. He was poor now, though when he came home he had money. His wife was dead. He lived here with his mother, who was bedridden, and three children, the eldest of them called Dannie, who was a pupil in my father's parochial school. No one liked Melody, nor am I surprised, his ways were so different from those of the rest of the people. One day I overheard a laborer in the glebe say to another, "Melody is drinking again, wherever he got the money." I noticed the remark, for on the previous evening I had seen him staggering home from the adjoining village. He endeavored to enter into conversation with me, but I stepped out and could hear him bawling some impertinence after me. Melody had money and was drinking. The fact caused a good deal of interest and curiosity in the neighborhood.

A few evenings later the schoolmaster called at the glebe and inquired for me. I went into the kitchen and noticed that his face was fixed and pale. I brought him into the dining room and asked whether he was ill. He said "No," and was silent. I, too, was silent and only looked at him. He had a piece of paper in his hand which he kept twirling between his fingers in a nervous manner.

"I came about Master John," at last he suddenly said. "I fear, sir, there has been foul play. You know I taught him mathematics for his Michaelmas examination last year and was a good deal with him in the evenings. He then showed me his ring. It had a Latin inscription on the inside. Not knowing Latin, I do not rightly recollect the words, though I read them at the time, and he translated them for me.

"Master Edward, Master Edward," he cried in great agitation and laying the paper on the table, "are those they?"

"They are," said I. We stood trembling and looked at each other. Written on the paper in a large schoolboy hand were the words, "Nec sperne duritiam."

"This is terrible, Mr. Gloster," I said at last. "Tell me all." He did so and to the following effect:

Dannie Melody, it seems, came to school one day looking very big and important and behaved so badly that he had to be punished. The boy's singular behavior arose from the fact that he was the possessor of a sixpenny bit which he said his father had given to him. As Dannie was never known to have even a ha'penny his bright sixpence excited a great deal of curiosity, and all the boys were very eager to find out the cause of his father's unexpected munificence. Dannie, however, refused to tell, but, it seems, after having pledged him to fidelity, communicated the secret to a little pal of his. One day Mr. Gloster surprised these two friends idling at their desk, or rather examining together a piece of strange paper. Before Dannie could conceal it Mr. Gloster snatched it up and demanded the meaning of the characters with which it was inscribed. They recalled to him the legend in the ring. The boy began to cry and said that he could not tell; that his father would beat him if he did. When the school was dismissed, Mr. Gloster kept Dannie back and at length got the secret from him.

Dannie, it seems, coming home one day found his father sitting by the fire and examining a gold ring. The moment the boy appeared he put it hastily into his pocket. He came back drunk from the village that night and slept long the next morning. Dannie, with a child's inquisitiveness, searched his father's pockets till he found the ring, and after examining it curiously for a long time finally the whim seized him of copying out the strange words which he found on the inside. He kept the copy and put the ring back in the pocket from which he had taken it. When his father awoke and got up, he called the boy outside of the house and said to him: "Dannie, you saw a ring with me last night. Well, you're to tell no one about it. If you do, I'll break every bone in your body." Then he gave Dannie the sixpence as a bribe and made him give a solemn promise of secrecy. That was all Dannie had to tell except that his father the same day went to our nearest market town, Ballymohur, and sold the ring there, as Dannie believed, for he came back with money, but without the ring.

Mr. Gloster wished to know from me whether he should tell all this to my parents. Terrible as was the news and great as would be the shock to them, especially to my poor mother, I thought so. Of the effect upon them I shall say nothing. Later on in the evening Mr. Gloster and I set out for the house of Mr. Watkins, the subinspector of police. When Mr. Watkins heard this strange story, he resolved to arrest at once Melody and his son. A warrant was procured from the nearest magistrate, and about nightfall we came to Melody's cabin. It was absurdly small to be the abode of such a big man. The thatch was secured by hay ropes held in their places by stones attached to their ends, a row of which hung all round the cabin under the eaves like a necklace. The tenant's huge cumner rod reposed against the roof and stretched away into the sky. Everything about the place was as untidy and unkempt as possible. Melody had learned nothing good, but much bad, during his sojourn in the great republic. The cabin stood a little distance in from the boreen, which led from the high road down the steep valley and ended near Dhu-Corrig. As we approached the big Irish-American issued in a stooping attitude from the little dark doorway and came along the causeway which crossed the bawn—that is to say, the small yard lying in front of the cabin. When he saw us, a visible change of expression passed over his face.

"I arrest you in the name of the queen."

One of the constables, showing him the warrant, laid his hand on his shoulder, saying at the same time, "I arrest you in the name of the queen."

"What for?" said he, looking very angry.

"For the murder of John Freeman."

Melody turned pale and staggered. "Gentlemen," he said, "I never did it."

"Melody," said the subinspector, "Mr. Freeman's ring was seen in your possession. You may make any statement or explanation that you please, but I warn you that what you say will be used against you hereafter at your trial."

"Gentlemen," said Melody, "I'll tell you all I know about that ring. One morning I seen a flock of pigeons in the black field beyant there that has the heap of white stones in the middle of it. I crept under the fence, and when I got near threw a stone or two at them. They fled away, but wan of them flew so bad and sat down again so soon that I followed after and killed her. The ring was fastened to her leg with a bit of cord. I was afeared that some one would claim it on me, so I tould Dannie not to tell."

"And the ring, where is it?" said Mr. Watkins sternly.

Melody hesitated for a moment or two; then he said boldly:

"Sir, I losht it."

I perceived at once and every one there perceived, too, that he lied. The pigeon story, too, though told so circumstantially, we of course disbelieved. Dannie was arrested, too, and led away crying bitterly. Melody was lodged in the county jail, and the boy taken in charge by the police lest his evidence should be in any way tampered with pending the trial.

Melody's cabin was searched by the police, but without discovering there any further evidences of his guilt. It was, however, now recalled that something like a fracas had occurred between my brother and the Irish-American on the evening before the disappearance. That was the evening of my brother's return from Dublin. He arrived unexpectedly by the post car from Ballymohur and walked home from the village of Dun-Beacon, which was only three-quarters of a mile from the rectory. As he was leaving the village Melody was seen to join him, he being then in a tipsy condition. What occurred between them in the way of conversation was not heard, but after awhile my brother was seen to give him a strong push, not a blow, which sent him staggering across the road, after which he fell into the grip. Jack walked on then, taking no further notice of him. Jack said nothing about this affair to any of us.

Of the subsequent investigations and inquiries of the police I shall say little. Their theory of course was that Melody on the evening of the disappearance had joined my brother in the dusk of the evening, had struck and stunned him then on Dhu-Corrig, rifled the body and flung it into the water. Melody's arrest took place on the 15th of October, and of course created a great deal of excitement over the whole country. A detective came down from Dublin, but no further evidence was discovered against him save indeed the ring itself. This was found with a jeweler in Ballymohur and at once surrendered to the police. The jeweler, Mr. Campion, admitted that he had bought it from Melody, who had previously sold him a watch and other trinkets which he said he had brought home with him from America. I drove into town with Mr. Watkins and at once identified the ring.

The constabulary were still searching for further evidences of Melody's guilt when something happened which in all probability was the means of saving an innocent man's life—viz, complete corroboration of Melody's incredible story about the pigeon and the ring.

CHAPTER VI.

JACK'S CARRIER PIGEON.

One morning in the middle of October as I looked from my bedroom window while dressing I saw a flock of pigeons of the slate colored variety, common on this coast, fly over the lawn and swoop a little as if they would alight in an adjoining field which had been tilled that summer. I felt a strong desire to have a shot at them, though I had not once taken out a gun since Jack's disappearance. Our only gun, by the way, was Jack's, a long single barreled muzzle loader. I charged quickly, passed through the wood, and surveying the field from a distance saw the flock moving about in the dark colored tillage and crept round the fence of the field till I came within shot of them, as I judged. Waiting till I had three in a line, I fired and killed all three. As I was bringing them home in triumph I noticed a piece of linen wrapped round the leg of one of the birds and fastened by cord. I cut the cord and unwinding the linen rag found it was the corner of a handkerchief and bore certain initials —they were Jack's—viz, J. F. For a moment I stood rooted to the spot, then in a frenzy of joy ran to the house and rushed into the breakfast room where the whole family was already assembled at prayers, crying, and I dare say screaming, "Jack is alive!" Again I pass over the agitation of our family circle, for such things are not easy to write about. We now saw that Melody's story of the ring was true. It was evident that Jack, imprisoned somewhere and without other means of communicating with us, had hit upon this plan. That Jack was alive when he sent out these carriers was plain, but was he alive now? Perhaps these messengers had been dispatched by him shortly after his disappearance and before hunger had made an end of him. My little brother Charley's vision then was true. My parents bitterly reproached themselves for not having given heed to that strange vision, which they now regarded as a special and miraculous interposition of Providence. I advised that Charley should be sent for at once in order that we might examine him more carefully about what he had seen. The coachman, saddling one of the horses, galloped off straight, taking with him to my uncle a hastily scribbled note, and just caught the mail car which was on point of starting from the village of Dun-Beacon. He returned the next day, bringing Charley with him. Meantime the police and coast guards were communicated with, and the whole countryside was in motion. I and my next brother Sam, attended by some workmen, went off at once to the hill in which was the "Devil's Parlor." We had with us a candle and matches and a very long rope. When we arrived there, we shouted down the mouth of the chasm. We did this repeatedly without hearing any reply. This I expected, for I had shouted down there before. I then knotted the end of the rope round my chest and had them lower me into the cleft. Soon I was in dense darkness. The flue, if I may call it so, was at first crooked and ragged, then descended sheer, so that I was in midair and could touch nothing with my hands. At another time I might have been afraid, but the hope of rescuing Jack drove out fear. At length I felt my feet touch ground, gravel as I knew by the feel and the noise. I shouted, but there was no response. I struck a match and lit my candle. Almost the first thing I saw was Charley's cakes lying about. I did not count them. Had I done so the discovery and rescue of Jack might have come sooner and by a different way. The fact was that the avenue by which I had descended was a blind alley, not the true way into the "Devil's Parlor." The place in which I now found myself was not at all what I had expected. It was like a small room walled with rock and paved with gravel. There were only bones of animals here and the cakes which poor Charley fancied had been eaten by Jack. I gave the prearranged signal—a jerk at the rope—and was slowly drawn up out of this dark den. Till now all believed that the "Devil's Parlor" was a huge subterranean cavern. Five miles farther on there was a similar cleft leading into another cavern toward the west of unknown depth. We went thither, and I descended that too. Here I came near to being drowned. It communicated with the sea and was filled at the bottom with salt water, into which, without seeing it, I was lowered, and in fact fell with a souse. By the slackness of the rope those above concluded that I had reached the bottom. Though I tugged vigorously at the rope they were not aware of it. I could not tug strongly while I was swimming, and then the great length of rope rendered it, I suppose, less sensitive. Here, too, all the way down and up again I shouted at intervals and heard no response. It was night when we returned home. No sign of Jack had been discovered by any one that day. The coast guards had been out since morning visiting the rocks and islands, of which there were several in the neighborhood, and had been as unsuccessful as myself. When I awoke next day, it seemed to me that I had caught a very bad cold. I got up nevertheless, but the moment my mother saw me she ordered me to my room.

I refused to go, and my father had to exert his parental authority in a very stern manner before I could be got to obey. In the afternoon Charley arrived. I was aware of the fact, but of little more, for by this time the fever had so grown upon me that I was beginning to be unconscious. After this I remember no more till I began to be convalescent after a severe attack of brain fever. The searching for Jack had gone on without me during the remainder of October and the beginning of November while I lay at death's door. But the searchers had found no sign or trace of my brother. The police were utterly nonplused. I heard that a very clever detective had been sent down from Dublin, but after wasting a fortnight had returned, saying that we were all mad. I heard, too, that during all these weeks little Charley regularly every second day, wet or fine, used to go to the "Devil's Parlor" and roll down his brown cake. My mother made no objection. He still continued to do it even after I began to move about and after I had declared to him that there was nothing at the bottom of the cavern but gravel, bones and the bread which he was wasting. I began to think of forcibly restraining him from this practice, for it was killing my mother, who used to weep for a long time after she had given him his cake and seen him off. The neighbors watched him with the utmost compassion, and indeed I have never seen anything so pathetic.

"Was it said in your dream that Jack was in the 'Devil's Parlor,'" I asked him.

"No," he said, "but I believe that he is there without being told. I told myself."
