THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER.

VOL. 5. NO. 1. PORT ANGELES, CLALLAM COUNTY, WASHINGTON, MAY 25, 1894. 8 PAGES.---PRICE FIVE CENTS

Resolutions of Respect.

HALL OF MINERVA LITERARY SOCIETY.
May 14th, 1894.

We meet tonight solely to join in sorrow the president of our circle, whose father was to-day laid to rest.

The death of Smith Troy touches each and all, His sweet and tender nature revealed a soul in touch with heavenly harmonies; his ever prevading sympathy was a balm to the despondent and weary; the touch of his hand was a benediction. No one came under the sway of his luminous soul, but felt it was heroic to live and sublime to suffer. His life was devoted to his loved ones, but the family circle circumscribed not the round of his subtle influence. Quiet and unostentatious, he greeted all with such charming and unfeigned warmth that his presence always seemed to lift the cloud and let in a ray of sunshine. Everywhere he was welcome; the very brutes seemed to feel him their friend and protector.

For over a decade he wrought among us and no one today can point to a harsh word or unworthy deed. His influence was enormous for all that makes for the highest and noblest manhood. His life was a model fit for all, and in after years as we describe the loving husband and father, the gentle and faithful friend, the wise and liberal citizen, we shall but name the many virtues of Smith Troy. The family of this good man today loses forever its best friend on earth and our hearts bleed with its members in deploring a common calamity; his work is done but it will live forever, not in bronze or marble, but in the sweet, loving memory of good deeds done while among us.

To our beloved president we extend our deepest sympathy and urge him, if he would perpetuate the honored name he bares, but to emulate the grand attributes of his noble father.

The great military drama from "Sumter to Appomatox," will be given under the auspices of the G. A. R. at the opera house on the evening of the 30th inst.

A Popular Remedy.

The promptness and certainty of its cure have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy famous. It is intended especially for coughs, colds croup and whooping cough, and is the most effectual remedy known for these diseases. Mr. C. B. Main, of Union Cify, Pa., says, "I have a great sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I warrant every bottle and have never heard of one failing to give entire satisfaction."

THE TAXPAYERS' VOICE.

Is Raised in the Interest of Honest Government,

LOWER TAXATION AND ECONOMY.

A Monster Petition is Presented to the County Commissioners by the Taxpayers of the East End, Urging That Retrenchment be Infused in all Departments of the County Government—A Pertinent Demand That There Be No Needless Expenditures.

Of all reform movements throughout the state the taxpayers' league promises to be the most far-reaching and productive of greater and more lasting good to all citizens with an abiding interest in the material welfare, and the healthful and permanent advancement of the county.

The petition, which is cheerfully published in full, in this issue of THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER, is, indeed, a weighty document, eminating as it does from one of the most progressive, thrifty and prosperous districts of the county.

During the former reign of Republican misrule, the patient farmer hasborne uncomplainingly the crushing burden of Republican extravagance and profligacy, until it finally reaches its logical limit —the border line of confiscation. At this point, the sturdy farmer is overwhelmed as the realization breaks upon him of the paramount duty of the hour.

The cautious mariner is ever apprehensive of danger.

He carefully and critically marks on the pathless ocean every rock and shoal. Hidden from the view of his startling gaze, the most dangerous of all, is the rock of inactivity. Without warning, as the vessel peacefully and noiselesslyglides upon her voyage, without warning, the unconsious mariner guides his vessel to certain destruction. It is upon this rock the trusting, unsuspicious taxpayer has been wrecked, not unconsciously by his trusted mariner, but through treachery and deception. Organize taxpayers, is the reveille that has aroused to duty and activity the triumphal army that will acheive a magnificent victory for honest government and fair and equitable taxation. The petition:

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of Clallam County, Wash.:

GENTLEMEN:—We, the undersigned taxpayers of the east end of the county, having endured the extravagant management of county affairs, until patience has ceased to be a virtue, and realizing the fact that our property is being rapidly confiscated for taxes, respectfully petition your honorable board that all deputy officers, the services of whom can possibly be dispensed with, be dismissed, and that the salaries of those retained be reduced 30 per cent. We also desire that all persons employed for charity be discharged at once, otherwise we all will be reduced to a condition of abject penury. Also cease expending a single dollar of county money, or the expansion of credit, only where it is found to be absolutely necessary. Signed:

"FROM SUMTER TO APPOMATOX."

Production of this Thrilling Military Play at the Opera House.

One of the features of Decoration exercise will be the production of the thrilling military play, "From Sumter to Appomatox," by the Port Angeles Dramatic Club at the opera house next Wednesday evening.

The members of the club have been industriously and conscientiously rehearsing during the past six weeks for its production, and will, no doubt, appear before the footlights next Wednesday evening with an intelligent conception each of his respective part.

The play promises a liberai sandwiching of thrilling and exciting scenes, laughable incidents and interesting developments from the beginning to the end.

Any play, the plot of which is laid during the late civil war, stimulates a keen, abiding interest in an American, as the incidents which have played such an important part in weaving its history are ever dear to the patriot who loves his country and reverences its institutions.

The following is the cast of characters:
Julian Farnsworth USA...W H Smythe
Geo Roberts, C S A.....W E Graham
Judge Thorn, Col. C S A.....C A Bork
Lieut. Forbes, U S A.....Wm Crockett
Lieut. Elsworth, C S A...Roy McClinton
Wash, a Contraband.....L H Smith
Clara Thorn.....Miss Nellie Hoare
Kate Spencer.....Miss Grace Bowman
Southern girl with song,Gracie Sherwood

The play comprises four acts, the curtain rising on Charleston, S. C.

Rev. E. Davis will hold the usual services in the school house on Lincoln Heights on Sunday next at 3 p. m. All are cordially invited.

A UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT.

Minervans Guests of the Bachelor Members of the Society.

Ever since it was decided that on Monday evening, the 21st inst., the bachelor members of the society would entertain Minervans with a unique entertainment members not let into the secret, which was profoundly concealed, as to the nature of a "unique" entertainment, have been on the tip-toe of expectancy.

When Vice-President Frank Semon called the society to order he was greeted by an intelligent, animated audience, expectant and eager for the production of the "unique" entertainment.

True to their promise the bachelor members provided a unique and what proved to be a spicy, varied, interesting and enjoyable program. A few selections were skillfully sandwiched in the production which were from the more sedate and subdued married men of the society. The following well-known gentlemen contributed to the miscellaneous literary program: Messrs. Louis R Cole, W. W. Dedman, Will Ware, A. A. Smith, Geo. Raymond, Horace White, Ed. Hatch, Harry E. Lutz, H. B. Willson, B. F. Keller, A. L. Johnson, Homer Ballou, F. S. Mackintosh, A. M. Johnston, Rev. Jonas Bushell and R. A. Grimes.

Mr. R. L. Sebastian, of Beaver, was a guest of the society and responded to a pressing invitation, with a few appropriate, well-chosen remarks.

The verses by the poet laureate, Mr. Ed. Hatch, were very cleverly constructed, each member being the subject of a ludicrous pun.

The entire program was meritorious, spicy and sparkling with witty passages, preserving throughout close attention and perennial good nature.

Following the program the acceptable announcement was made that the banquet at the New Albany awaited the pleasure of the company.

The viands tempting, well-seasoned, delicious, the service thorough, systematic, the appointments comprehensive, replete, the banquet was generally pronounced excellent in every particular.

By unanimous vote the unique entertainment was declared decidedly a flattering success, reflecting very creditably the unique traits of the bachelor members of the society.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS

Prominent Ohio Business Men Guests in the City.

THEY ARE HERE FOR THE PURPOSE

Of Investigating Opportunities For Investment and Are Much Pleased With the Results—The First Port Angeles High School Commencement Exercises Take Place—Oration by the Valedictorian.

Two prominent Ohio business men are guests in the city.

They arrived last Sunday evening via Victoria in company with Mr. M. J. Carrigan and Col. J. S. Coolican.

This is the first visit to Puget Sound of Messrs. T. J. Morgan of Wenston, and Chas. A. Smith of Chillicothe, Ohio, and they express themselves delighted with the climate, scenery and with the country generally, The object of their visit to Port Angeles is best expressed in their own words, the substance of which is to make a thorough personal investigation of the natural resources of the country, particularly that portion tributary to Port Angeles, that they may acquire accurate information as to the opportunity and inducements offered for the investment of capital.

They convey the impression that they are thorough business men, men of affairs, of action and of a few words. Quiet and unobtrusive, their visit to Port Angeles is doubtless for a purpose. They have no hesitency in acknowledging the fact that they came here to ascertain if the country hereabouts offered material inducement for the investment of capital. And if they can abundantly satisfy themselves, with the fact that it does, they can command capital for the utilization of the same.

They have made thus far during their sojourn here the best possible use of their time, having explored the surrounding country very thoroughly.

Like other eastern visitors who have come and gone before them, they are ardent admirers of Angeles' superb harbor.

Representative of the conservative and successful business element of America, the good opinion and the influence of these men will be of great advantage to the city and its people, as the resources of the country require brains, energy and capital for their development.

They left to-day in company with Messrs. Carrigan and Coolican for a trip through the Quillayute country via Lake Crescent.

THEY RECEIVE DIPLOMAS.

The Graduating Class Acquit Themselves Creditably.

Long before eight o'clock the opera house was filled to its utmost capacity with an audience comprising the old and the young, the parent and the child, the teacher and the pupil.

The large intelligent audience was indeed, a source of profound gratification to the principal and to his efficient corps of assistants; an eloquent, unanswerable tribute to the cause of education, and a delicate compliment to the young men who by industry, application and unremitting study during their career in the public schools had honorably and deservedly won the distinction of merit, the recognition of which was represented with the presentation of the diplomas by Prof. Tiffany.

The invocation by the Rev. Jonas Bushell was preceded with "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," the audience heartily joining in the singing.

The graduating class comprised five young men: Ray McLaughlin, Frank Cram, Roy McClinton, Edgar McCormick and Geo. A. Meagher.

The graduating productions were all admirably fashioned, evidencing careful and thoughtful preparation, and a wide range of information on each his respective subject.

A grave, serious and compromising fault, of which, however, most young men are adicted when they first attempt to address a public assemblage is poor articulation, ennuciating the words in a low, indistinct voice.

In addressing a public audience one of the most exacting demands is clear, distinct ennuciation. Failing of this a public speaker rarely ever commands the respectful attention of his audience.

A number of these young men were unconsciously subject to this grievious fault, which they can and should strive to overcome.

With this exception they did exceedingly well.

The salutatory by Ray McLaughlin, the subject of which was, "Literature," was an excellent production.

An essay, "Education as a Factor in the Promotion of Political Freedom," by Frank Cram, was a meritorious paper.

A poem, "Review," by Roy McClinton was excellent, the production of which was keenly appreciated.

Edgar McCormick gave an oration the subject of which was "Song." The speaker handled his subject in an able and exhaustive manner.

The valedictorian, Geo. A. Meagher, made an excellent and appropriate selection for the subject of his address, "The Professions of Life." The young man not only handled the subject intelligently, but he uttered every word clearly and distinctly, so that he could easily be heard in any part of the hall. From any point of view the effort was creditable.

Mr. Geo. C. Hatch addressed the class, elaborating on the advantage of a thorough education. The address was thoroughly appreciated.

The diplomas were presented by Prof. Tiffany, who complimented the young men for the excellent manner in which they had acquitted themselves during the past year. They had evidenced courage and determination in the pursuit of their studies, respect to the teachers and obedience to the rules of the school.

The pantomime by a class of young women from the public schools to the creditable recitation of one of the interesting passages in Longfellow's "Hiawatha," by Miss Rosa Burns, was one of the delightful literary features of the exercises.

The closing was followed by the benediction by the Rev. J. M. Baxter.

Mill Structure Nearly Completed.

The Port Angeles Red Cedar Shingle & Lumber Company is rapidly progressing with the erection of its new shingle mill on Frasier creek, the frame structure having been finished.

The machinery has arrived, the boilers were brought up this week from Port Crescent and it is expected that the machinery will be adjusted so as to set the mill in motion by the middle of June next.

Program for Decoration Day.

The line of march will form promptly at 1 o'clock p. m. on Front street with right resting on Laurel, passing west to Cherry street, then countermarching to Laurel, up Laurel to First street, east on First to Lincoln, south on Lincoln to Second, west on Second to Oak, south on Oak to cemetery and return to opera house for afternoon exercises, which will consist of first a chorus of school children, then speaking by Judge J. G. McClinton, next a chorus, speaking by Hon. W. R. Hoole, chorus, a song by forty-four little girls, to conclude with a chorus.

For evening performance see large bills.

By request of committee, all those who can furnish flowers for decoration purposes will please deliver at Mrs. Goldwater's vacant room on the corner of Lincoln and Front streets.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS

BY MRS. C. B. MAXFIELD.

The regular meetings of this Union will be held on the first and third Fridays of each month at 2 p. m., and on the second and fourth Friday evenings at 8 o'clock. The gentlemen members are requested to attend the evening meetings. All are cordially invited to all meetings of the union.

The W. C. T. U. pledge: "I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic of the same."

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Nottage May 25th, at 8 p. m. All members are expected to be present. Remember the enemy works twenty-four hours every day to ruin our boys and we ought to be willing to work one evening in each week.

For God and home and native land.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. L. T. Haynes on Friday, June 1st, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Through some mistake we were made to say in last week's issue that Rev Bushell preached on the previous Sunday evening on the subject of the "War Ship of Moloch," whereas the subject was the "Worship of Moloch."

While passing along Front street not long ago one of the White Ribbon ladies overheard one gentleman (?) say to another "there goes a temperance howler." We prefer being called a "temperance howler" to being called an "intemperate howler." We shall not attempt to defend ourselves for we need no defense. The cause which we advocate is all the defense necessary, and so surely as it is just and right so surely will it prevail at last, notwithstanding the efforts of its opponents against it, for

Truth crushed to earth will rise again,
The eternal years of God are hers,
While error wounded writhes in pain.
And dies amid her worshipers.

Ladies, remember the meeting of this Union at Mrs. L. T. Haynes June 1st, at 2 o'clock p. m.

A man of high social standing, on realizing that his health was failing, called in a physician, and after a few questions and answers said: "Now, doctor, I want you to strike at the root of my disease." "I will," replied the doctor, and arose, walked across the room and with his cane struck a wine bottle that stood on the table, shivering it to atoms, and said: "That is all the medicine you need." The man accepted the doctors advice and recovered.

It is announced through the Signal that the twenty-first National Convention of the W. C. T. U. will be opened November 16, at Cleveland, Ohio.

The eleventh annual convention of the West Washington W. C. T. U. will be held in the M. E. church at Chehalis, June 5, 6, 7 and 8.

There will be a regular meeting of this union at the home of Mrs. L. T. Haynes at 1:30 sharp, May 18. The members will please be punctual.

Only the Scars Remain.

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc.," writes HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

For the cure of all diseases originating in impure blood, the best remedy is

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

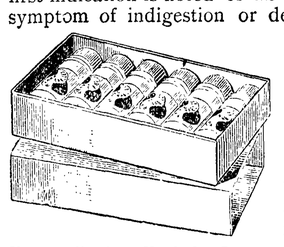
R·I·P·A·N·S TABULES

act gently but promptly upon the kidneys, liver, stomach and intestines; cleanse the system effectually; dispel colds, headaches and fevers; cure habitual constipation, making enemas unnecessary. Are acceptable to the stomach and truly beneficial in effects. A single TABULE taken after the evening meal, or just before retiring, or, better still, at the moment when the first indication is noted of an approaching cold, headache, any symptom of indigestion or depression of spirits, will remove the whole difficulty in an hour without the patient being conscious of any other than a slightly warming effect, and that the expected illness failed to materialize or has disappeared.



Disease commonly comes on with slight symptoms, which when neglected increase in extent and gradually grow dangerous.

If you suffer from Headache, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, ... TAKE RIPANS TABULES

If you are Bilious, Constipated, or have a Disordered Liver, ... TAKE RIPANS TABULES

If your Complexion is Sallow, or you suffer Distress after Eating, . . TAKE RIPANS TABULES

JOHN W. TROY.....Editor

PARTY RESPONSIBILITY.

Words as true as brave were those spoken by Senator Teller in the United States senate Tuesday when he scolded the Republican minority for their frequent taunting the Democrats for their inconsistent tariff bill. The Colorado Senator told his party associates that the Democrats had made a full and fair confession. They had explained, he said, that they were only consenting to the mutilation of the Wilson bill because, on account of the treachery of a few Democratic senators, they could do no better. It was their only escape from McKinleyism. This, Mr. Teller said, was an explanation fully sufficient and made in good faith.

Then Mr. Teller went on to say that, especially as the bill would pass, it was the duty of Republicans to be fair, and to assist the Democrats in every way possible to bring the senate to a vote.

This is all true. The Democratic party is not to be held responsible for the acts of traitors in its ranks. Traitors have disgraced and caused to suffer every reform since time began. There was one amongst Christ's chosen deciples, and our Revolutionary heroes were not free from their deadly work. The traitors to Democratic reform in the senate can be counted on the fingers of one hand, including the thumb, and for their action they alone are responsible, even if the whole country does suffer.

The party has repudiated their action. They have placed the blame where it belongs. They will now pass the tariff bill and depend upon their ability to get additional free traders enough in the senate to pass another tariff bill at the next session. And they will get them. There will be enough Democratic and Populist senatorial gains this fall to make the senate a really tariff reform body, and one of these gains will come from the state of Washington.

THE BEAVER LEADER.

The Beaver Leader of last week announced a change of ownership and a partial change of management. Will A. Sparks, who has been manager and associate editor of that organ since its establishment at Beaver, being now sole owner and manager, Harry E. Lutz having retired.

Mr. Sparks, the new editor in chief, is favorably known in this city. From a personal knowledge of his capabilities and his integrity as a man and a citizen, we do not hesitate to say that he will give the Quillayute valley community a good local paper.

The section in which his paper is located is one of the largest and greatest in natural resources in the state of Washington. All that is lacking in that community now is a means of connection with the commercial world.. This they will have at no distant day, and in the promotion of that desired result, we do not hesitate to prophesy that a prominent factor will be Clallam county's new editor and his newspaper. This accomplished, and a field second to none in the state will have opened up for the Beaver Leader.

The prayer of THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER is that its Beaver contemporary may weild the influence and reap the reward that persistent and honest effort deserve.

IN the retirement of Mr. Harry E. Lutz from journalism, the Clallam county newspaper fraternity loses the active services of one of its best members.

Always courteous and gentlemanly in his bearing, always fair and impartial in his position on all questions of public concern, Mr. Lutz has won the respect and admiration of a host of friends.

We are glad, however, that the people of this county are not to lose his services, as this retirement simply means the concentration of his labors into other channels of his business.

THE editor of the Tribune is hunting up a candidate for county treasurer who will give him the county delinquent tax list to publish for the rate he received this year, notwithstanding the fact that the Board of County Commissioners has contracted to give it to THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER at half that rate; but then the Tribune-Times doesn't own the courts, so it might have its trouble for nothing.

AFTER an honest attempt for a year and a half to establish "The People," on a business basis, Mr. E. M. Bohall was was forced this week to give up the ship. His last issue announced its suspension. The financial condition of the times was responsible for the failure, as under ordinary conditions Mr. Bohall's conscientious effort would have met with its reward.

The people of the country were startled and surprised the other day when Senator Hill voted with the Democrats. Thanks, Mr. Hill. We always like to get a Republican vote when we can. It is to be hoped that you will assist us again once in a while.

THE Democratic senators are no longer chargeable with delays on the tariff bill. The kick on that score is solely against the Republicans, who are delivering serial speeches, on a bill which they admit has a majority pledged for its support.

THERE should be no doubt about the outcome of the Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge's fight for re-nomination in the old Seventh Kentucky Congressional District, when his principal competitor is so good and so able a man as Hon. Will C. Owens.

DR. TALMAGE, it is said, asks that $280,000 be raised before he will again assume charge of his Brooklyn tabernacle. Most people wood deem this as an opportunity of a life time—a real good excuse for refusing to make a subscription.

THE Port Angeles post-office will pass into Democratic hands June 1st. On that date Major Wm. F. Hooker will assume charge. He will be assisted by his son, J. E. Hooker, and John Brown, jr., for the present.

THE administration appropriation bill carries with it $1,208,687 less than that passed to run the administration on Republican lines for one year.

THE New York Times calls the latest senate tariff bill a bill of sale. The consideration was not altogether "love and affection" either.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that the is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitution treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation by building of the disease, and giving the patient strength up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that the offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Still certain that I would in some way escape, I sought the point where the incline abutted on the wall of the cave, sure that I could get up in the angle so formed by the support of the craggy sides there. I tried first on the left. Here, however, the incline seemed to break off sharp. I found this out of course by my sense of touch. Then, creeping over huge smooth bowlders and the aforesaid heaps of seaweed, I reached the other wall and found it ragged indeed and abutting on the incline, but at this point the incline was almost sheer. In short, I could not ascend. The faroff emotion, scarcely perceptible when I quoted those hackneyed lines from Virgil, was now fast getting the upper hand in my mind. Nevertheless I made frantic efforts to ascend, but all in vain. Again I thought of the cockroach in the glass trap—the wretched insects clambering and sliding on the smooth walls of their prison. But I did not laugh this time. I was, too, like them. Yet I did not in the least despair of getting out—if not tonight, which was improbable, then tomorrow. I knew that there were many devices to be tried yet. For one thing I thanked God sincerely—the place where I fell was carpeted thick with seaweed. On each side there was none. Whatever the gales or the crests of great waves in winter had thrown in had been washed down through the interstices of the great bowlders and probably escaped at some lower point in the cliff's sides. I sat down on this providential seaweed to collect my thoughts. I filled my pipe and then searched all my pockets, hoping somewhere to discover a match, for I used to keep loose matches indifferently in all my pockets and often had found one hidden somewhere in the lining. My search was bootless. I had not a match left.

It was growing dark rapidly. I had no time to lose, for even if I were to effect my escape from this infernal cave I would require daylight for the return journey along that dangerous cliff road. I proceeded at once to gather together all the seaweed that I could lay my hands on and piled it up in a heap against the incline. As the heap rose my heart rose with it. There seemed an abundance of seaweed. I could feel it thick under my feet. Its crackling sounded pleasantly, for it was very dry. Still I had to go farther and farther into the cave for each armful, or barth, to use a local word, for it did not lie everywhere, but, as it were, in a line running inward from the middle of the incline. Here, then, lay a road of seaweed a few feet wide, but on either hand only bare stones. It was now getting so dark that I at last determined to give over this labor, for it would be sheer madness to attempt the return journey in the dark. A sinister suspicion, too, was growing in my mind that the supply of seaweed was giving out. My last armfuls represented a good deal of groping. The seaweed only seemed to be really abundant close under the window. I did not wish to make my suspicion a certainty by putting the facts to too close a test. The thought of the anxiety and alarm of my parents and family, as may be imagined, contributed a good deal to my unhappiness. When I ceased working, I began to grow cold, and soon very cold. The seaweed was quite dry and crisp. I piled a great deal of this over me by way of bed clothes, and, thanks to youth and health, ere long fell sound asleep in spite of my troubles. When I awoke, it was broad daylight, and the level rays of the sun streamed far into the interior of the cave, which seemed of vast extent. Indeed I guessed as much on the previous night as I listened to the reverberations of my voice in its abysmal hollows. Starting up, I at once renewed my task of collecting seaweed with the object of ascending the incline by its aid.

CHAPTER XIV.

NOT TO GET OUT.

Presently I found that I had already collected nearly all the seaweed that was procurable at this end of the cave. But after my first sense of disappointment I did not so much mind this, for I expected to meet with plenty of stones such as one usually or often finds in the interior of such caves. All such pebbles, however, as I could see seemed quite too large to lift. I did not doubt, though, that I could somewhere find removable pebbles in sufficient quantity to build up for myself a sort of scaling ladder against the mouth of my prison. Yet I went to the extreme limit of the daylight without finding such, and afterward penetrating the sheer darkness groped about in all directions without success. Everywhere I scrambled only over large bowlders. Still groping forward in the darkness, urged now by the fury of despair, I found myself suddenly cut off altogether from even a view of the window. I had gone round some angle of rock and was immersed in dense darkness. I gave myself up for lost, and having searched around in vain without perceiving anywhere a ray of light sat down and—well, not to be too proud, wept long and bitterly. Then, praying fervently and thinking with such feelings as may be imagined of the opening line of that little familiar collect, "Lighten our darkness, we beseech thee, O Lord!" which I had so often repeated with little or no thought of its meaning and which was now naturally brought to my remembrance, I searched again for the light, clambering recklessly over the bowlders, and at length to my extreme joy perceived a faint ray of light. Moving toward it, I suddenly caught sight of Curry's Window, and however I might have been inclined to curse that sinister aperture now sincerely blessed it and the level rays which shot through it into the inner gloom. I thought of Milton's line, "Hail, holy light, offspring of heaven's first born!" I may mention here that I was very fond of poetry and had stored away a great deal of it in my memory, so that I could repeat a vast number of the English lyrics and even long passages from Spenser, Shakespeare and Milton. This intellectual provision or accomplishment, or whatever it may be called, proved a great blessing to me in my miserable imprisonment and was probably the means, under God, of preserving my reason. With the rediscovery of heaven's blessed light, hope revived, hope and also hunger. Now for the first time I thought of food, for though nigh famished I had not been quite conscious of it hitherto, owing to the feverish excitement into which I had been thrown. I had with me half a slice of bread, which, knowing that I would not be home till late, I had thrust into one of my pockets before leaving the house. As to water I was safe. Searching round the walls of my prison the previous night, I found the rock upon the right side slippery from wetness, and at one point felt water running against my fingers. Also in the interior somewhere I heard, though far away, the splash of descending water. I ate my bread, and going to the spot where I had felt moving water on the previous night made a cup with my hand, and pressing the inside edge of it against the rock, and doing this again and again, got a good drink of very pure spring water.

I now resolved to search the cave more carefully than I had done before for pebbles such as I could remove, and to be particularly cautious about losing sight of the window. I searched around now for hours, but in vain. Hardly a stone of the kind could I discover. I returned to my bed of seaweed and lay down to rest. I was now painfully conscious of a growing weakness. My excitement was wearing away and the lack of food beginning to tell. It was now about midday. From time to time I shouted as loudly as I could, but only heard for response the mocking echoes and reverberations of my own voice. Knowing that boats were not likely to be passing in the middle of the day, I determined to husband my energies in this direction until the evening. It was now certain that I could not climb out of my prison or within the limits and vicinity of the light procure seaweed or stones in sufficient quantity to make for myself a scaling ladder. My last hope lay in my rod and line. I piled up all the seaweed procurable, took off my clothes and laid them on the top of the heap, and thrusting upward the butt end of the rod endeavored by means of the crook supplied by the reel to secure a purchase upon the sill of the window and so drag myself up out of this pit. If the rod and reel had only been strong enough, I might have succeeded. I was conscious that it was a forlorn hope, but nevertheless made the attempt. I did succeed in getting a grip somewhere at the sill with the reel, but as soon as I began to climb the top joint of the rod gave way. I tumbled down, rolled from the seaweed heap on the bowlders and was much bruised and shaken by the fall. With the portion of the rod which remained in my hands I succeeded in disengaging the rest, which fell back into the cave. I next unrolled the line, doubled it, doubled it again and made a pretty strong rope, which I fastened to the thicker part of the rod and renewed my attempt, this time flinging up the rod and letting it slide back from the sill, hoping that the reel, which was a large one, might catch. The rod and twisted line were indeed strong enough to bear my weight, but I had great difficulty on this occasion in securing a purchase with the reel, and when I did the moment my weight, which was considerable, fell upon the reel the shank went with a loud snap. Again I fell, and the reel tumbling after me rang on the bowlders. All was in vain. I had now tried every imaginable method of escape, and they had all failed. Evening was at hand and the cave nearly blackened at the entrance, and I had grown horribly hungry. I had, however, plenty of pure water, and that was some comfort. Besides some cut tobacco in my pouch, I had also a very large roll of what we used to call "Limerick twist" in my fishing bag. I had bought it at a huckster's on my way to the Dhu-Corrig, not for myself, but as a supply for the men who from time to time might be of service to me. It was the only form of reward that they would accept, ours being a primitive and unsophisticated neighborhood. I had heard of some sort of comfort which was derived from the chewing of tobacco. I cut off a bit of the twist, and after chewing it felt my hunger abated, but also a disagreeable sense of vertigo, accompanied with nausea. Nevertheless these sensations were a relief from the horrible feeling of utter prostration into which I was sinking. Eventually I fell asleep.

CHAPTER XV.

FIRE.

When I awoke, it was still night, but I felt the dawn approaching. I awoke extremely miserable, with a misery which my reflections in the nature of my dismal situation deepened almost into despair. I had now tried all conceivable devices of getting out of this horrible den, and I had eaten almost nothing for 36 hours. I did not dare to pass beyond the precincts of the light in search of stones. My experience of being lost, as I had been yesterday in the darkness, was too terrible. "If I am to perish," I said, "let me perish here in the light"—a sentiment which I know was expressed by some one else before me, I cannot now recall by whom, though I think I knew it then. Every device had failed. Nevertheless as the light grew around me I determined to make one more effort to escape by escalade. I successively attempted the two corners of the incline where it abutted on or approached the rock walls of my prison, but my efforts were still more futile than on the first occasion. I was weak now and strong only in weakness and misery. I drank a great deal of water this day. When night approached, I was too miserable to sleep. I chewed and even swallowed some tobacco, but the succeeding nausea prevented me from doing so again. About midnight, I fancy, I drank water once more and fell into a disturbed slumber, filled with abominable apparitions. When I awoke, it was twilight and most still, serene and beautiful about the faintly illuminated edges of the cave's mouth. I expected this day to be my last, composed my thoughts to death as well as I could and said my last prayers. Nevertheless the strong spirit of life seemed to flicker up within me again, and after I had taken a deep draft of water I sat up on my seaweed couch and searched all my pockets carefully for any stray crumb which might yet linger there, conveying anything that felt like such to my mouth. I was aware of a certain bitterish taste which I detected at once as that of gunpowder. The old canvas jacket which I wore on this occasion was that in which I used to shoot when at home last for the chums' holidays, and some powder had escaped from my powder horn, I fancy. However the powder got there, there it was, and immediately the thought of procuring for myself light and fire arose in my mind. Of timber I had plenty. While handling the seaweed I was conscious of perpetually finding my fingers in contact with bits of wood swept in thither on the same crests of storm billows which had brought the seaweed. Though it was still dark, I groped around industriously, and ere long had collected a considerable quantity of driftwood, large and small, all exceedingly dry and brittle, and some sheer touchwood, which crumbled in my fingers. Choosing a flat stone, I determined to make it my hearth and crumbled there a little heap of the touchwood, making it as fine as dust, and gathered to the same spot some of the timber which I had collected. Then I cut from my trousers a scrap of the woolen cloth and after wetting it rubbed the gunpowder well into its texture. As soon as I thought it was sufficiently saturated, I let it dry, but so eager was I for the experiment that to facilitate the drying process, fastened it to the point of my rod and held it up toward the opening of the cave that it might receive the sun's rays. When it seemed to be perfectly dry, I took it to my hearth, and unfolding my strong clasp knife held the rag in my left hand, and with the right using the knife I struck sparks from the edge of a rock, making them fly onto the powder steeped rag. Finding it did not catch fire, I put a little dry powder on the surface of the rag and renewed my efforts. I felt certain of success, because at one time I used to shoot with an old flint pistol which I had accidentally discovered in my father's bureau, and therefore knew how instantaneously such a flying spark will ignite powder. At the second or third stroke the powder blazed up with a puff and an ascending cloud of smoke, and the rag began to burn and crackle gayly. I laid it on the stone and sprinkled lightly over it pinches of the crumbled touchwood, and as this caught fire sprinlked more in larger quantities, but still gradually, knowing that too much fuel would quench the fire. Then I poured on touchwood less finely broken, and as soon as the glowing mass seemed large enough breathed upon it gently and soon had the satisfaction of seeing it burst into a bright flame. My delight can be imagined. I had now the means of exploring the whole cave and of utilizing all its resources, such as they might be, for the purposes of escape or for food, if haply anything in the nature of food might be procured there anywhere. Food indeed had now become an absolute necessity, if I was not to die. I removed a bundle of my collected driftwood to a distant point in the interior and made another fire there, and taking good care not to lose sight of this proceeded to search all around for stone such as I could remove, but found none anywhere save large bowlders, and in one place the hard, bare bed of the cave, which here began to slope downward, not sheer or at a dangerous angle, but very decidedly downward. I also found a sort of pocket in the side of the cave—a cave within a cave—which was filled with old timber all very dry and brittle. Here the cavern seemed to wind and curve leftward. I made another fire at the curve and passed onward. Henceforward there was nothing but the hard rock bed of the cave. Indeed it was too steep for any bowlders to rest here. Lighting one more fire, I discovered a thin rivulet of water falling from the roof or side of the cave—a slender, straight pencil of water. I returned easily along my line of fires to the entrance, feeding them as I went. The driftwood burned so rapidly that I now determined to partially wet the fresh timber which I laid on that it might burn more slowly. Again I went back along my line of fire, examining carefully the wall formation of the cavern, so that even if any of the fires went out I should be able to find my way back to the entrance and the daylight. And yet Curry's Window, as I could not ascend to it, was as cheerless as any other part of the cave. My last interior fire was at the point where the floor of the cavern sloped so rapidly downward. I hastened forward now, with no thought but that of food, no matter what. By this downward way I descended so low that I suspected I must be on a level with the sea. Finding that the light of my last fire seemed faint and dim, I lit another in a dry spot, which was not easy to find, for the ground here was very damp and slippery, owing to droppings from the roof. I then listened, hoping that I might hear the noise of the sea, for I thought that by some cleft the water might penetrate here. If that were so, I might get shellfish, mussels or limpits or edible seaweed, myvane or dilik or sloucan—all edible weeds, whose botanical names even now I do not know. My thoughts were now so low and humble that they were concentrated altogether upon seaweed, edible or not. Any live seaweed would be edible to me.

Garlick's Red Rose Potatoes.

Almost two years ago Mr. Garlick of Lost Mountain precinct, planted a few hills of the potato known as the California Red Rose, with the view of introducing it into this county if it proved to be a prolific bearer. His success was astonishing. He did not know but the "year" had something to do with it, so he tried it again last year. The result was even better than the first year. From his start of a few hills the year before he harvested about two tons last year, and had no trouble in disposing of nearly all he had to his neighbors at five cents per pound. He has placed a few sacks for sale with the Farmers' Mercantile Co., of Dungeness.

United States Land Office,
Seattle, Wash., Feb. 9th, 1894.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the Act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled, "An Act for the sale of timber lands in the states of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington territory."

GEORGE E. MICHELL,

of Fairholm, county of Clallam, state of Washington has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 6425, for the purchase of the Lots 18, 23, 24, 25 and 26, of section No. 30, in township No. 30 n, range No. 9 west, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at Seattle, washington, on Tuesday, the first day of May, 1894.

He names as witnesses: M. J. Carrigan, Iver Estensen and Horace White of Fairholm, wash., and William Dedman of Gettysburg, wash.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office or or before said first day of May, 1894.

DOWN NIAGARA RAPIDS.

The Body of a Woman on a Cake of Ice Whirled Over American Falls.

A sensational story is told here by Master Edwin Whitney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Solon Whitney of this city. It is in effect that he saw at the house of his grandfather, Major Whitney, on Buffalo avenue, the body of a woman float past the rear of the house down through the rapids and over the falls.

The hour was about 8:30 in the morning. Master Whitney says that he saw the object on a cake of ice, and that there could be no mistake about it being a woman. She had on dark clothes, he thought, and part of her face was visible as she lay on the ice. He called the attention of the two painters at work on the veranda on the river side of the Whitney mansion, and they also thought it was a body.

The painters alluded to are John O'Brien and Harry Collyer. Both substantiated the boy's story. Mr. O'Brien

"Our attention was called to the river by a flock of ducks flying over. Young Whitney and myself saw the object on the ice coming down the river and at first thought it was a log. As it came nearer we saw that it was a human being, and when still closer that it was a woman. Mr. Collyer's attention was called to it, and he also thought it was a woman. The cake of ice with the body passed probably but 50 feet from the shore down into the rapids. The body was of good size and appeared to be enveloped in a long steel gray cloak which reached nearly to the feet. The woman was lying extended, and there could be no mistake as to it being a woman."

The three watchers followed the object as far as the rapids, where the ice and its burden were tossed about and went over the American falls. It doubtless passed under the ice bridge and may never be found.—Niagara Special.

Hard on the Doctors.

The smallpox scare is about over and the harvest for physicians, at $1 per point, about ended for the year. If we had a law to compel physicians to vaccinate all the members of the families in which they practice, free of charge, the days of smallpox scares would be forever ended.—Iowa State Register.

Mr. W. L. Marquardt, recently connected with the U. S. Land Office, Seattle, arrived on the Monticello, Wednesday. Mr. Marquardt is an attorney and possibly may locate in this city and engage in the practice of his profession.

The Lyceum League of this city held its semi-annual election last Monday evening and elected the following officers: President, A. S. McCormick; Vice-President, W. H. Butt; Recording Secretary, C. W. Fields; Treasurer, Ray McLaughlin; Marshal, E. W. Merrill.

Messrs. M. J. Carrigan, J. S. Coolican, of this city, Chas. A. Smith, of Chillicothe, Ohio, and T. J. Morgan of Wenston, Ohio, arrived on the Garland last Sunday evening, having made a tour of the Sound, including Nanaimo and Victoria, B. C.

Many of the business men of the city favor a celebration on the Fourth. A public meeting should be called for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the sentiment is practically unanimous. Without unanimity and enthusiasm the celebration would result in a dismal failure.

Grand Chancellor Ronald, of the Knights of Pythias of Washington was in the city last Wednesday. A meeting was held by the members of the suspended lodge in this city, which was addressed by the Grand Chancellor. An effort is being made to re-organize the lodge, the suspension of which was caused by the depression and consequent removal of many of the members from the city.

Messrs. E. H. Foster, Jno. F. Church, and Capt. Guptill left Wednesday for Clallam Bay, from which place they will proceed into the mountains on a prospecting tour. They will be absent about three weeks, and will make a thorough examination of any coal indications which may be discovered during the trip. The tour is being made in the interest of Seattle parties.

Port Angeles Lodge A. O. U. W. will hold its semi-annual election on the night of June 1st. It is important that there should be a full attendance.

Mr. McClure, of the law firm of McClure & Bass, Seattle, is in the city on important legal business.

Mr. Hazzard a Visitor.

The irrepressible George Hazzard of Tacoma, prominent and active in the councils of the Democratic party of the state, was a visitor here this week.

Mr. Hazzard with emphasis declared to a representative of THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER that he was out of politics. His visit to Port Angeles, he stated, was purely of a business nature.

Mr. Hazzard was favorably impressed with the life, bustle and activity on the streets, remarking that there was more evidence of business here than is visible on Pacific Avenue, Tacoma's principal business thoroughfare.

City Council Meeting.

The city council met in regular session on Wednesday last. All members were present.

A petition was read from the directors of school district No. 7, for the vacating by the city of the alleys in blocks 259 and 381; such land being the property of said school district. The hearing of said petition was fixed for May 30, 1894.

Ordinance No. 214, providing for the acceptance and execution of a certain contract, whereby the city agrees to take all water for city purposes, from said company, exclusively, for a term of ten years, was passed to its first reading and referred under the rules to the ordinance committee.

Ordinance No. 213, entitled, "An ordinance regulating the sale of vinous liquors, and the juices manufactured from the grape," was then adopted and approved.

After allowing certain claims the council adjourned.

A Cheap Power.

And at the same time a reliable power are the points to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a constant watch on the engine is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense for engineer is a serious item against economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run all day without attention or fear of accident, and the cost is about two cents per hour for fuel per horse-power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade, and cannot take any more until they are realized on. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, Front and Alder streets, Portland, Oregon.

CHAPTER XVI.

NOT A DOG, SPITE ITS BARKING.

I now stood and listened with ears which famine had rendered preternaturally acute, hoping that I might somewhere hear the sullen gurgle of water or the lapping of waves upon stone. I stood so a long time; then, waving a torch, I stepped rapidly forward. I had only advanced a few yards when I heard something which caused me to start so violently that the torch fell from my hands. It was not the noise of regurgitating water or lapping waves, but a cry loud, clear and distinct, echoing far and wide in the convolutions of the huge cave, a cry repeated in quick succession again and again, a cry, rather a mew or a bark, resembling both sounds, but the latter more than the former. I was in that condition in which fear can at any moment burst out into frantic terror. But I recovered myself in a moment. The noise which I had heard was the barking of a seal. I had not spent my boyhood in this coast without having acquired that much of seaside knowledge. I knew that it was a seal and even a young seal. Yes, the tidal water had here somewhere an entrance into the cave. I went on in the direction of the noise and was about to extinguish the burning timber which I held in my hand when the increased energy and frequency of the barking convinced me that the seal, so far from being terrified by the light, seemed to like it, and as I believed was endeavoring to approach it. I stood again and listened and could hear its flappings and drufflings. Still going on, I came rather suddenly within view of the creature. The water, which I could now see, was a good many yards behind it and already, mad with hunger, I could see and smell chops and steaks of the little seal frizzling in one of my fires, for of course I had determined to lose no time about killing and eating this animal which Providence had so unexpectedly cast in my way. But when I saw the poor creature, my sole fellow occupant of the gloomy prison, still flapping and flopping toward me and the pathetic look in its eyes, for the seal can look very pathetic, an involuntary feeling of compassion rose within me. It was not in the least afraid of me even when I came close up to it, probably because it was so much pleased by the light. No doubt ere long famine would have driven out pity—a man "feeling all the vulture in his jaws" will eat anything. But at this moment the light of my torch fell on something shining on the edge of the water. It was a good sized salmon, just a little nibbled at about the neck and shoulders. As in a flash I perceived that this little moaning suppliant whom a few minutes before I had been on the point of killing might be the means of my preservation. This large fish was never killed by my small friend; it was killed by its parents and brought thither as food for their offspring. I would keep the child a close prisoner and compel the parents to feed both it and me. The fishing line of which I have spoken I had with me still fastened to the rod. I unwound its twisted cords and fastened one end round the seal's neck with a knot that would not slip and made the other end fast round the projecting corner of a bowlder. Then, rejoicing, I bore away the salmon, which, cut into thick steaks, was soon frizzling and spluttering gayly in the fire which was nearest. I knew now so well the lay of this end of the cave that I had no fear about finding my way to Curry's Window whenever I should feel inclined. Having duly said grace, and more earnestly than ever before in my life, I fell to and made a hearty meal. The seal was all this time crying piteously. When I had ended, I brought to it a piece of the broiled salmon, which it devoured greedily. I knew then that the little seal and I would become good friends, and I hoped ere long by similar means to become acquainted with its parents. So pleased was I by the sudden turn which things had taken in my favor that I became quite joyous and happy, whistled and sang gayly and awoke distant echoes, for the cave was far larger than I have indicated and was even of vast extent. Resolved for the present to make my home in the vicinity of my new friend, I returned to the entrance for the useful seaweed which had hitherto been my bed. I did not return at once. It was near sunset, so I continued to shout at intervals as loud as I could in hope of attracting the notice of some passing boat. This continued to be a practice with me for many days, but the distance was so great that none of the fishermen ever heard me.

CHAPTER XVII.

FRIENDS MULTIPLY.

When I returned with the seaweed which was to be my bed, I saw in the faint light cast from my fire two large objects beside the little seal. They were the parents. There was one on each side of the youngster, lowering and raising their heads toward him, while he was flapping vigorously and uttering little cries of joy. It was a pretty scene, and I feared to disturb it. I had often heard, though had not myself noticed it, that these animals are very susceptible to music and will for miles follow a ship in which a musical instrument is being played. Accordingly I began to whistle in a low tone a plaintive air. The moment I began, however, the elder animals took the alarm, flapped away down the sloping rock, tumbled into the water and disappeared, not, however, before one of them had attempted to carry off the youngster in its jaws, just as a bitch would a puppy. Seals, I may observe, give suck to their young just as animals do. My little friend had got beyond this stage and was beginning to eat on its own account.

Now that the parents were alarmed for the sake of their offspring, I knew that they would not go far. I brightened my fire so as to illuminate somewhat the whole pool, lay down beside it upon my weedy couch and continued to whistle. Presently, in a distant part of it, close beside a dark rift or aperture in the rock, I saw four round eyes apparently watching me and perfectly motionless. I continued whistling so at intervals for more than two hours, hardly making any perceptible motion, during which time the animals had so far dismissed their fear that I could see them swimming about the pool and sometimes coming to the edge and resting there. I was particularly anxious to make friends with these animals, for I feared that in their alarm they might desert the youngster, who was almost of an age and size to shift for himself, and who, I knew, might gnaw through his tether at any time and make away, or his parents might cut it for him. Accordingly I now resolved to make the tether as strong as I could. This, fortunately, I could do. The "nostle" of my line—viz, the part between the line proper and the hook—was of wire, and in my flybook, which contained many sundries, I had a good roll of the same article. As I feared, however, to approach the pool while the parents were there, I ceased whistling and waited till the parents should disappear. Though I was in an agony of drowsiness, I contrived to keep myself awake and at length had the satisfaction of seeing them, one after the other, dive through the cleft. Then I wound the wire strongly round the whole length of the tether, and also very close and firm round the loop which encircled his neck. My life, I felt, depended on the excellence of my workmanship, and I did not spare pains. Then I returned to my fire, and after having covered up the burning embers deep in ashes lay down and in an instant was fast asleep. I slept profoundly, without a dream even at the moment of waking. When I awoke, I thought I was in my own bed at home; but, alas, the touch of the dry seaweed quickly banished that thought. Very cautiously and gradually, and whistling low all the time, I revived the fire. When the light was sufficient, I could see the parents lying beside their offspring and perfectly motionless. Then, too, I gladly perceived fish. I contrived gradually to edge my way toward them, whistling all the time. Though they made slight motions of alarms, they did not flap off till I had come within half a dozen yards of them. I found near the little seal a white trout and a young pollock, injured only by the marks of teeth, and after petting and making much of my little friend, who testified his pleasure at seeing me with many cries and awkward little jumps, returned to my fire and cooked my breakfast. Of course I had determined to make an exploration of the whole cavern, but did not dare to do so until I had first established perfectly friendly relations with the creatures upon whose presence my life depended. I perceived, too, that, owing to the intelligence and I might almost say humanity of these amiable and interesting animals this, though difficult, was only a work of time. I may add that I now began to regulate my life according to the time of day and night and to keep myself related with the upper world by going to sleep at about 10 o'clock. No one who has not known such solitude as mine can be aware how much society there is in a watch and its friendly, scarce audible ticking. The whole of that day, with the exception of the time that I spent taking exercise in the vicinity of Curry's Window and in the genial light of day, I devoted myself to making friendly advances to the seals. It was slower work than I had expected, but at the end of the fifth day they allowed me to touch them and stroke down their smooth polls just as I would a dog. Next day, as I approached them still very cautiously, they uttered cries of joy and affection, and by the evening our relations were satisfactory in every respect. That day, having for some time perceived that the little seal was pining for the water, I let it flap thither, and holding the tether in my hand sat for more than an hour watching its delighted gambols as it dived and rose there, romping with its parents in a manner that would have delighted the hardest heart. Every day after this I allowed it to indulge in the same amusement even for several hours. I knew that this swimming exercise was necessary for its health. Yet only half my work with the seals was now accomplished. The little seal might die, or the parents, finding it big and strong, therefore uninteresting, might neglect to bring it food. I had to teach the parents to bring me food, and this I did. When one of them appeared on the edge of the pool with a fish in his mouth, I used to take it from him myself, make much of him and stroke him and whistle the air he seemed to like best for his special edification. Then I cut out a piece of the fish and gave it to the youngster, but always insisted upon the fish being first given to myself. Eventually they always did this of their own accord and would even pass by the youngster and come flopping up the rock toward me with the fish in their mouths. All this, as may be imagined, was a work of time. Yet the whole business of training the seals took only a little more than three weeks.

Come flopping up the rock toward me with the fish in their mouths.

"For Years,"

SAYS LARRIE E. STOCKWELL, of Chesterfield, N. H., "I was afflicted with an extremely severe pain in the lower part of my chest. The feeling was as if a ton weight was laid on a spot the size of my hand. During the attacks, the perspiration would stand in drops on my face, and it was agony for me to make sufficient effort even to whisper. They came suddenly, at any hour of the day or night, lasting from thirty minutes to half a day, leaving as suddenly; but, for several days after, I was quite prostrated and sore. Sometimes the attacks were almost daily, then less frequent. After about four years of this suffering, I was taken down with bilious typhoid fever, and when I began to recover, I had the worst attack of my old trouble I ever experienced. At the first of the fever, my mother gave me Ayer's Pills, my doctor recommending them as being better than anything he could prepare. I continued taking these Pills, and so great was the benefit derived that during nearly thirty years I have had but one attack of my former trouble, which yielded readily to the same remedy."

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Dr. Price's Baking Powder Receives It.
(CHICAGO TRIBUNE.)

For leavening power, keeping qualities purity and general excellence the World's Fair jury decided that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder had no equal. On each of its claims it was awarded a first prize or a diploma. All the baking powders entered for prizes were subjected to a most exhaustive examination, and the jury was the best equipped to make the decision, of any ever got together. Their verdict was supported by the testimony of Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington. Dr. Wiley is an expert on food products and the highest authority on such matters in America. This verdict settles a long debated question as which among the many baking powders is the best.

The Most Successful Gas Engine

In the market is run without an electric spark battery. Theory is all very well, but the every day experience of constant practical use is the best test of merit. The man who runs a launch and finds himself drifting with the tide and wind because the "spark" fails to ignite the charge of gas in his engine; the man who prints a daily paper and fails to get it off on time because the "spark" again fails; the man who has fruit that is injured for lack of irrigation because "spark" fails in his engine that runs the pump not only such parties but others who have trouble from like causes should bear in mind that the Hercules gas and Gasoline engine is free from such difficulties. The ignition is simple and sure. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until these are realized on. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, Front and Alder streets, Portland, Oregon.

Order Directing Notice to Creditors.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, County of Clallam.

W. E. Van Allen, Plaintiff.
George Myers, Defendant.

This cause coming on regularly for hearing on this day on motion of E. E. Seevers, Receiver of the property of the above named W. E. Van Allen and George Myers, partners as Van Allen & Myers, and the court being fully advised in the premises, it is hereby ordered and adjudged that all creditors of said Van Allen & Myers, partners as aforesaid, are hereby required to present their claims and demands against said Van Allen & Myers, partners as aforesaid, to E. Review of Seattle Market for the Past Week.

OATS, BARLEY AND CORN HIGHER

Dairy Products are Lower—Dried Fruits Higher—New Vegetables in Market—Clearing House Balances.

SEATTLE, May 18, 1894.

Exchanges at Seattle, Tacoma and Portland clearing houses to-day were:

	Clearances.	Balances.
Seattle	$ 87,723.63	$22,898.49
Tacoma	97,448.00	18.581.00
Portland	164,000.00	45,000.00

During the past week another advance has taken place in oats, barley and corn; butter and cheese have declined; vegetables have fluctuated somewhat and several new ones have been added to the list, while strawberries and cherries have declined.

Corn has been advanced $2 per ton and feed meal $3 per ton. Oats are $2 per ton higher, the demand being strong from San Francisco, and chicken feed wheat has been marked up $1 per ton. There is no change in the export wheat market, but good milling wheat sells at from 56 to 57 cents per bushel.

All grades of butter have declined 2 cents per pound, while California cheese is 1 cent lower.

In fruits and vegetables the changes are very slight. New onions have taken the place of old ones and are cheaper. New potatoes are more plentiful, while green peas and string beans are unchanged. No important changes have been made in the wholesale grocery market. Dried fruits have advanced slightly and all sugars are steady at the prices quoted last week.

Pointer for Travelers.

While Mr. T. J. Richey, of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas, he was taken violently ill with cholera morbus. He called at a drug store to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief, and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel complaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by J. C. Hansen, The Fisher Pharmacy.

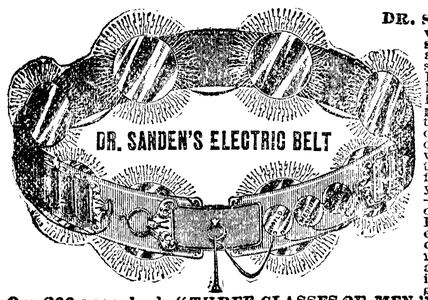
HAVE YOU TRIED DRUGS AND FAILED

TO FIND A CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, KIDNEY, LIVER and BLADDER COMPLAINTS, DYSPEPSIA, LAME-BACK, &c.



DR. SANDEN'S ELECTRIC BELT with Electro Magnetic Suspensory will cure without medicine all of the above troubles. Those who suffer from Nervous Debility, Losses, Drains, Lost Manhood, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Poor Memory, all Female Complaints, and general Ill health, the effects of abuses, excesses, worry or exposure, will find relief and prompt cure in our marvelous invention, which requires but a trial to convince the most skeptical. In ignorance of effects you may have unduly drained your system of nerve force and vitality—which is electricity—and thus caused your weakness or lack of force. If you replace into your system the elements thus drained, which are required for vigorous strength, you will remove the cause and health, strength and vigor will follow at once. This is our plan and treatment, and we guarantee a cure or refund money. Our 200 page book "THREE CLASSES OF MEN," should be read by every young, middle-aged and old man, sent sealed, free. Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is no experiment as we have restored thousands to robust health and vigor, after all other treatments failed, as can be shown by hundreds of cases throughout this and other States, who would gladly testify, and from many of whom we have strong letters bearing testimony to their recovery after using our Belt.

WE HAVE CURED THESE—WE CAN CURE YOU!

CENERAL DEBILITY CURED.

San Francisco, Cal., August 14, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Before I used your belt I was troubled with lost vigor, vital weakness, and almost a complete loss of power. I would get up with a very tired feeling, bones aching, etc.; since using your belt I have had a new lease of life. I now enjoy life better than I have for ten years past. I have the utmost confidence in your treatment. You can publish this statement, also have others write or call on me. Truly yours, H. A. BOWEN, 26 and 28 Turk St.

RHEUMATISM AND LAMENESS CURED.

Portland, Oregon, April 18 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I got one of your belts two weeks ago for rheumatism, from which I suffered for several years. For the past six months I had not been able to work. Your belt has placed me in almost perfect health in the two weeks I have used it. I can walk comfortably, and feel like a new man generally.
M. E. HUGHES, Proprietor International Hotel.

NERVOUS DEBILITY—LOSS OF VIGOR.

Tacoma, Wash., October 24, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I have been using your Electric belt for general nervous debility, and to-day feel better than I have for five years. I have gained in vigor daily, and am strong in every part.
Yours gratefully, CHAS. LUETKA.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Portland Oregon, September 26, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Years of exposure and hard work, combined with the strain coming from the jar of an engine, gave me a severe case of lame back, from which I suffered for seven years. I was so bad that I could not bend my back. Was all doubled up with it. I bought one of your belts. It helped me in ide of two days, and I continued to wear it for four months, being perfectly cured. That was two years ago, and I am as well to-day as I ever was in my life. I know your belt well, and I know lots of people who have been cured by it. Many others need it, and if they would try it they would find it the same as I did—the best remedy in the world. I am located here permanently, and will be glad to talk with any one who wants to inquire about it.
ROBERT BURREL, Engineer Hotel Portland.

LOST VITALITY AND STRENGTH.

Everett, Wash, June 18, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Since wearing your belt I have been greatly benefited. I feel my old energy fast returning; and after a month's use of the belt I find myself twice as vigorous as before. My memory is now nearly perfect, and each day shows for the better. I feel much stronger than before using the belt. Yours truly, HENRY SCHULTZ.

THE DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT is a complete galvanic battery, made into a belt so as to be easily worn during work or at rest, and it gives soothing, prolonged currents which are instantly felt throughout all weak parts, or we forfeit $5,000. It has an Improved Electric Suspensory, the greatest boon ever given weak men, and we warrant it to cure any of the above weaknesses, and to enlarge shrunken limbs, or parts, or Money Refunded. They are graded in strength to meet all stages of weakness in young, middle-aged or old men, and will cure the worst cases in two or three months. Address for full information.
