THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER.

VOL. 5. NO. 2. PORT ANGELES, CLALLAM COUNTY, WASHINGTON, JUNE 1, 1894. 8 PAGES.---PRICE FIVE CENTS

"FROM SUMTER TO APPOMATOX."

Produced at the Opera House Last Wednesday Evening to a Large Audience.

A large audience greeted the Port Angeles Dramatic Club at the opera house last Wednesday evening, in the production of the military drama, "From Sumter to Appomatox."

Before the play began, little Earnest Bryant was introduced, and recited a memorial essay and poem. The recitation was excellent, to say the least. The little fellow uttered each word clearly and was distinctly heard over all the opera house.

One of the chief points of weakness subject to criticism in the production, appearing more apparent as the play progressed, was the fact that the characters had not been properly cast.

The character of Julian Farnsworth, Mr. Smythe assumed very creditably interpreted it intelligently, but would have represented with greater force and realism the role of George Roberts. Had Mr. Graham been cast as Julian Farnsworth, while he acted his respective part cleverly, he would have succeeded in a more admirable degree.

Mr. Smythe assumed four different characters. In that of Biddy McGee he appeared to the best advantage, almost entirely losing his identity. The individuality of a person, should never appear in ths proper representation of a character if you would give it every essential element of strength and naturalness. In manner, in speech, in gesture, in peculiarity of action, you should feel, act and be as nearly as possible the character you endeavor to assume. It is not the attire, neither is it the facial disfigurement that makes the actor, it is an adequate, clear conception of a part, then play it, forgetting entirely your individual being.

In the character of Wash, a runaway contraband, Lou Smith as nearly reached the point of perfection and naturalness, doubtless, as any character in the play. So well was the part sustained that at no time did you discover the individual person of Lou Smith. If any point was open to criticism, it rested in over-acting. The character was, however, admirably portrayed.

"The Sauer Kraut Brigade," under command of Will Vail, although having no place in the drama, was cleverly sandwiched in one of the acts and provoked laughter.

As "Judge Thorn," Mr. Bork had a fine presence. He spoke too indistinctly, at times his words being unintelligible. He possesses, however, a good voice, confidence and naturalness of manner.

The characters of Lieutenant Forbes, by Wm. Crockett, and Lieutenant Elsworth, by Roy McClinton, were very well portrayed.

Clara Thorn, daughter of Judge Thorn, was represented by Miss Nellie Hoare, and Kate Spencer, her companion, by Miss Grace Bowman. Little Gracie Sherwood very cleverly portrayed the Southern girl.

Taken as a whole the play was very creditably produced, when you take into consideration the fact that some of the characters appeared for the first time before the footlights.

THE NATION'S DEAD.

Touching Tribute to the Heroes Who Sacrificed

THEIR LIVES THAT THE NATION

Might Live—An Able Memorial Sermon Delivered in the Opera House Last Sunday by Rev. Jonas Bushell—Decoration Day—The Procession—Exercises in the Opera House—The Orations.

Decoration Day was appropriately observed in Port Angeles last Wednesday, all public offices and many business concerns having been closed, the citizens generally participating in the exercises of the day.

Sunday afternoon every available seat was occupied long before the hour publicly announced for the Memorial sermon by the Rev. Jonas Bushell.

The sermon was able, thoughtful, earnest and comprehensive. Throughout the discourse the speaker held the wrapt attention of the audience. A most eloquent testimonial of appreciation.

The weather was, indeed, delightfully cool and refreshing on Decoration Day—in fact, the most exacting could not have wished for a more favorable day. At 1:30 p. m., formed on Front street with right resting on Laurel street in the following order: Drum and Fife Corps, Old Veterans, Women's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans, 44 school girls, representing the states, I. O. G. T., I. O. O. F., K. of P., and Port Angeles Band.

THE PROCESSION

When formed the procession moved, under command of J. G. Banks, officer of the day, west to Oak street, then countermarching to Laurel,, up Laurel to First, east on First to Lincoln, south on Lincoln to Second, west on Second to Oak, south on Oak to the cemetery and return to the opera house, where the program arranged for the afternoon was produced.

It is almost needless to add that when the opera house doors were thrown open that only a few minutes elapsed until every seat and all available standing area was entirely occupied. The exercises were opened with that patriotic song, "Hail Columbia, Gem of the Ocean," after which Judge McClinton was introduced and delivered from manuscript an able address, deplored the fact that a large element of society, of foreign birth, were not in sympathy with American institutions. They had taken advantage of liberal immigration laws, and came here not to become loyal citizens to the country of their adoption, but on the contrary publicly condemned its institution and advocated the violation of its constitution.

This vicious, ignorant, un-American element were a menace to the country, to its laws, and to good government, that portends grave future evil.

The guarantee of personal liberty, of individual rights, in fact, national existence depends upon the preservation of the constitution.

Mr. W. R. Hoole followed in an address from the point of view of an old veteran of the late civil war. The speaker was deeply grieved over the fact of having heard a thoughtless individual refer lightly to the observance of Decoration Day. The most valuable lesson, in his judgment, the observance of the day taught was true patriotism to the young. The speaker closed his remarks with a touching incident which occurred during the war.

"The Star Spangled Banner," was sang by the choir, assisted by the audience. The floral offering by 44 little girls, was one of the delightful features of the program. The exercises closed with "America."

THE VICTORIA CELEBRATION.

Three Days Occupied With Games and Sports- Angeles at the Celebration.

Victoria really outdid any former effort in the observance of the Queen's birthday this year. Beginning Saturday the program was completed Thursday night. The program, comprising games on land and sea, was conscientiously carried out, and for the greater part proved very interesting, the aquatic sports being varied, novel and exciting.

The regatta was one of the features of the celebration. Some irregularity in the course—the removal of a buoy, caused the postponement of the yacht races from Friday forenoon to Saturday forenoon. The morrow brought a stiff breeze, which developed into a gale, which was too severe for many of the yachts to weather. The Paloma, of this city, was entered in the C class, which, with the Garland, were the only two yachts able to successfully battle with the gale.

The Paloma followed the course from beginning to end, winning the second prize. In referring to the C class, the correspondent in Sunday's Post Intelligencer, inadvertently, no doubt, states that none of the yachts were able to complete the race. Quite true, only two were able to follow the course and make the home buoy. They were the Garland and Paloma, while others in this, as well as in other classes, were compelled to withdraw, the storm proving too severe for them.

In the firemen's races the local team distinguished themselves in making the swiftest run and laying the hose, but lost time and the prize in attempting to make the coupling. With practice they would prove, no doubt, formidable competitors.

A very successful celebration, from any point of view, is the opinion generally expressed by the army of visitors from the Sound.

A large number of visitors from this city participated in the festivities, some of whom did not return until Sunday evening.

The Garland-Paloma Yacht Race.

The Victoria Colonist in its issuance of the 29th ult., refers to the exciting race between the yachts Garland, of Whatcom, and the Paloma of this city, as follows:

The confusion in connection with the races Saturday—the judge's boat coming home before the conclusion of the contest under the belief that a number of the smaller craft had retired—has resulted in proper credit being unintentionally denied several at least of the competing flyers. Particularly is this true in the class C, where the Garland and Paloma made a very close and exciting race. The Victoria skimming-dish Daisy Bell was the first to get away at the sound of the starting gun, being followed by the Garland, Hornet and Paloma in the order named. Rounding the first bouy the Bell still led the Garland, the Paloma being third and the Hornet fourth. Here the Hornet reefed, but being unable to hold up, fell out and ran for the harbor. The Daisy Bell rounded the second buoy more than a mile ahead of the Garland and the Paloma, but as the seas ran clear over her kept straight on and disappeared from the race in Esquimalt harbor. The Garland finished the first round 1½ minutes in advance of the Paloma, her time being 1 hour, 36 minutes. The second round was a hard fought battle to the end, the Garland finishing in 4 hours, and 3 minutes from the start, and beating out the Paloma by 32 seconds.

Bound Over.

Jose Sopia, an Italian who lives near Sequim, recently had Samuel Fernie, also a resident of Sequim, arrested on a charge of assault upon his (Sopia's) person with a deadly weapon, with intent to kill. A change of venue was taken from the justice court of that place to this city, the case being heard before Judge Carusi last Monday, for the reason that Justice Ware, of the former court appears as a witness in the case.

Upon weighing the evidence in the case Judge Carusi regarded it sufficient to bind the defendant over to appear before the Superior court at the regular term, which convenes next week, for trial.

The court fixed the bail at $500, which was given and defendant was released.

Fires of a Day and Night.

Late Wednesday evening the cottage of Mr. Rhodes was totally destroyed with fire. The occupant returned from the play at the opera house, having been taken, however, before leaving with a chill. A fire was started in the kitchen stove. Later on, the roof of the building was discovered on fire, the flames spreading that rapidly, the occupant barely had time to make his escape. Of the contents only a trunk, some clothes and bedding were saved. The loss is probably $500, insurance $300.

The fire alarm was sounded at about 11 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a fire having broken out in the dwelling of Mr. David Rushworth on Georgiana street.

The firemen lost no time in reaching the scene of the fire, and soon had the hose laid and a stream pouring on the angry flames which were just bursting through the structure, The fire was gotten under control and soon extinguished. It originated from the overturning of a lamp, which was in use while making repairs in a dark closet. The damage to the building and its contents will amount to about $800. The house was insured.

The Cemetery Reserve.

The fact of the interior department not offering much encouragement to the dedication of a site in the government reservation for a public cemetery, has by no means disconcerted the prime movers of the enterprise.

Mrs. Cooper, one of the leading spirits of the undertaking continues undaunted, with the determination to ultimately acheive success. The general public is heartily in sympathy with the movement, as the advantages a public cemetery would afford are many indeed.

School Election.

The annual school election for this district will be held in the Central school building in this city, on Monday, June 11th, 1894, for the purpose of electing one director and a clerk to serve for the ensuing year.

The polls will open at 1 o'clock p. m. and close at 8 o'clock p. m.

Meeting of Democratic Club.

The regular meeting of the Democratic Club will be held tomorrow (Saturday) evening at the council chamber.

A program has been arranged and an interesting time is anticipated.

A Popular Remedy.

The promptness and certainty of its cure have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy famous. It is intended especially for coughs, colds croup and whooping cough, and is the most effectual remedy known for these diseases. Mr. C. B. Main, of Union City, Pa., says, "I have a great sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I warrant every bottle and have never heard of one failing to give entire satisfaction."

Vouchers for money paid since April 1st, for claims when due
Int. on road bonds	$ 2,706.75
Warrants (salary)	384.35
Warrants, other	370.80	3,461.90
Total		$44,136.53
Balance in Treasurer's favor.		23.04
Amount should be		$44,113.49

Report of Lyman Stevens, supervisor of Road District No. 3, was examined and approved.

The Board adjourned to meet this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. All present except A. O'Brien.

The Board, after examination approved the above statement.

It was ordered that all work on county road to be paid for out of the county fund, that is all work except that provided for by the laws of the state, be discontinued after the 2nd day of June.

Th Board ordered that the contract submitted by The Democrat Printing & Publishing Company, to do the county printing for the year commencing July 1st, 1894, be approved and that the chairman of the Board is hereby authorized and directed to sign the said contract upon the said company filing a satisfactory bond with the county auditor.

The petition of the taxpayers' union from Sequim, heretofore referred to, coming on to be heard and after a full and fair investigation, it was found that the offices are now being run as cheaply as the good of the service will permit—the volume of business being far greater than ever before, while the total salary list for clerks and deputies is much less since the present salary system has been adopted, Therefore, the Board decided to take no further action at the present time.

The Board took a recess subject to the call of the chairman.

THEY DEMAND THE BUSINESS.

Supt. Johnson of the P. C. S. S. Co., Writes a Pertinent Letter.

The following letter was received from Supt. Johnson, Puget Sound agent of the Pacific Coast Steamship Co., by President Coolican, of the Board o Trade and explains itself:

SEATTLE, May 25, 1894.

Jas. S. Coolican, Esq., President Port Angeles Board of Trade.

DEAR SIR:—I regret the necessity of submitting to you some correspondence in reference to Port Angeles business and the lack of support which our company is receiving in the matter of patronage. You will remember that, owing to the very urgent solicitation of the good people of your town, our ships were induced to call at Port Angeles, with the assurance that we were to receive the entire support of your merchants.

Letter next attached is self-explanatory, and will indicate how matters now stand, and the intention of our company unless original agreement is lived up to and have induced Messrs. Goodall, Perkins & Co., to await your arrival back from the East, before taking any definite action. As the subject of steamship service is one which vitally concerns the people of your town, I would suggest and ask, that you kindly take up this matter and endeavor, if possible, to give our line the entire business.

You can readily perceive that anything less than this would not justify our making Port Angeles a port of call. I need not dwell upon the advantages which redound to your town through the calling of our ships. I am satisfied that you are thoroughly conversant with this. We are most anxious to do all in our power to favor you and to foster the interests of your rising city. We do not complain at the very small amount of business we are having and have had in the past, to and from Port Angeles, but we do complain of not receiving all of it, under the particular conditions which exist. We await, with you, for better times; co-operating with you during the season of depression. Feeling assured that you will have no difficuliy in straightening out this matter with your pursuasive eloquence, I beg to remain,

Yours truly,
J. H. JOHNSON,
Puget Sound Supt.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS

BY MRS. C. B. MANFIELD.

The regular meetings of this Union will be held on the first and third Fridays of each month at 2 p. m., and on the second and fourth Friday evenings at 8 o'clock. The gentlemen members are requested to attend the evening meetings. All are cordially invited to all meetings of the union.

The W. C. T. U. pledge: "I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic of the same."

For God and home and native land. This union will hold its regular evening meeting at the home of Mrs. Enos Raymond, on Friday, June 8th, at 8 o'clock, p. m.

Ohio women will have school sufferage privileges in the future, the bill to that effect having become a law.

There is one business that never fluctuates be the times hard or good, and that is the all powerful saloon, the murder and crime factories. In Chicago there were seven thousand, two hundred licensed saloons, during the World's Fair season, but it was said, "Oh, a large part of them will fail and go out of business when the fair is over." On the first day of May the new licenses for the current year were granted at the city hall, and the number issued was six thousand, seven hundred—but five hundred less than during the height of the fair. Hard times have not effected the saloon; but the saloon has effected the times.

One reason why men swear is because it does not require any courage or manliness to do it.

—Bane's Horn.

A saloon license was applied for recently, in a new place in Lancaster County, Pa., where it was not "needed to accomodate the traveling public," but urged as a necessity, under circumstances appealing to the sympathies of neighbors and friends of the applicant. An old and crippled soldier, a member of the W. C. T. U. did not, however, approve of assisting one person to the detriment of many, and to prevent it, diligently circulated a remonstrance, to which she secured the signatures of men and women. This was presented to the license court by the union's attorney, who plead with success the cause he represented. The license was refused, and the item is given that others, seeing what may be done by earnest women may be encouraged to do likewise.

The President asks that all members be present at the next meeting, June 8th, at the home of Mrs. Enos Raymond.

It is announced through the Signal that the twenty-first National Convention of the W. C. T. U. will be opened November 16, at Cleveland, Ohio.

The eleventh annual convention of the West Washington W. C. T. U. will be held in the M. E. church at Chehalis. June 5, 6, 7 and 8.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

DECORATION DAY.

Decoration day was appropriately commemorated all over the United States, and elsewhere where Americans live throughout the world, Wednesday. This has become a pleasing national custom. It seems but meet that one day of each year should be given to the memory of the dead who more than a century ago established the American republic, and to those who have since, by their unswerving loyalty to the union government, extended its dominion and maintained its unity.

The occurrences of Wednesday demonstráte that the spirit of patriotism is abroad in the land; and probably the most conclusive and best evidence of that fact is that the graves of the soldiers of neither the North nor the South were forgotten. All were alike again entombed in bright wreaths of flowers. The best, the truest patriot today is the citizen who throws the mantle of charity over all those who participated in the great American fraternal conflict, and remembers only that whether from Massachusetts or South Carolina, Virginia or Illinois, whether they were confederates or federalists. they are all Americans. And that the citizens of each of these and the other states of the American union, have contributed to make American citizenship what it is today.

It is to be deplored that occasionally we find men ready to abuse the occasion furnished by Decoration day to endeavor to rekindle the old fire of prejudice which has long since expired in the breast of our best citizens. Such an effort was the appeal sent up in Richmond by a Rev. R. C. Cave, who said it was another case of "truth on the scaffold and wrong on the throne." The best citizens of the South do not feel that way. Whatever may have been their opinions, and no matter what be their opinions now as to the justness of their cause, they have learned to look upon the war, as does the good citizen of the North, with charity for all. They realize today that the institution that really caused the war was their own greatest curse; they understand now as they did not in the heat of passion, the real significance of citizenship in the old Union, for which both they and their Northern brethren had given up so much. The South does not agree with Rev. R. C. Cave.

Not less deplorable, was the utterances of Mr. A. W. Hastie, Seattle's partisan orator, who took occasion to recommend that the political campaigns of the country be fought out on the issues of the late civil war. He regretted that issues of finance had taken the place of the "bloody shirt." From this he went on to charge up against the changed condition, which was after all meant to be the Democratic administration, the hard times, and then again he claimed, that such would have been the condition of affairs if Lee had been the victor at Appomatox. Mr. Hastie did twice injustice to the Democratic party and thrice to the intelligence of his audience. First his audience must know that the Democratic party was never a secession party, and had it not been for Democratic patriotism. Lee would have been the victor long before Appomatox. And Mr. Hastie's audience certainly understood that the present hard times, as far as they can be charged to legislation. are directly chargeable to the Republican party.

And further still, the Americans of the North have no desire to conduct the political campaign on the issues of the war. They regard the war as history, and while they are rightly satisfied with the part they and their fathers took in that epoch of American history, they are now ready to look upon a citizen of the South as also a citizen of the Union.

They now remember Cow-Pens, Entow Springs, Yorktown, New Orleans and the battles of Mexico, as well as Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Atlanta and Appomatox.

Their satisfaction is taken in the reunited nation. They are willing to "Let the dead past bury its dead," while they turn their back on the old, and confront the issues of today, accepting them as they are.

In this spirit only can Decoration day be appropriately celebrated; and we congratulate the old soldiers that they themselves, more than all else, have promoted this spirit.

TROUBLE IN THEIR RANKS.

Washington despatches inform us that all is not harmony in the Republican ranks. There is a wide diversity of opinion as to what the minority policy should be. This situation is especially aggravated by the fact that many seem to see that the political reaction in favor of the Republicans has not only subsided but that the pendulum is rebounding to the Democratic side. Many leading Republican papers have called the attention of their party leaders to the result in the recent Ohio congressional election where the Democrats gained nearly 3000 votes in little more than six months. Many Republicans already concede Illinois to the Democracy, and they also have commenced to believe that something must be done by them to keep the Democracy from controlling both branches of the next congress, which now seems assured.

Dubois, Teller, Quay, Sherman and Aldrich are all quarreling over what should be the policy of the senate minority. Some want to pass the tariff bill at once, while others want it carried along until just before the election; but one thing is noticeable, they all seem to think times are going to improve as soon as it is passed. The indecision seems to be about when the improvement will help Democracy the least. That is what they propose to determine their action on.

As usual this party is putting partisanship ahead of patriotism. The Republican senators would prefer dull times during a Democratic administration to good times. Therein is a great for the present depression.

Looking at the situation from any standpoint true Democrats have no cause for discouragement though they have been severely disappointed.

DEMOCRATS who seem to know claim that Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller of the United States Supreme Court, will be entered for the next Democratic presidential nomination. He would carry Illinois and the presidency if nominated.

WHILE it is true, that the Gorman-Brice-Murphy substitute for the Wilson bill is a protective measure rather than a free trade one it is a splendid measure, when compared with the McKinley abomination. This the only excuse, in fact, for its being.

THE Democrats are taking the right position. They will pass the mutilated Wilson bill, not as a Democratic measure, but because it is better than the McKinley bill, and the best they can get.

THE Missouri State convention launched the presidential boom for "Silver Dick" Bland.

TREATED WITH INDIFFERENCE.

The Taxpayer's Union Indignantly Resents Discourteous Treatment.

By special request THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER publishes the following resolutions for the Taxpayer's Union of Port Angeles, which were adopted by it at a regular meeting. THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER assumes no responsibility whatever in the accusations or charges, if any there may be in the aforesaid resolutions against any individual whosoever.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT-LEADER:

The following preamble and resolution was passed by the Taxpayer's Union and presented to the mayor and city council for their consideration. This article was treated with contempt by the Mayor and Councilman Beam, who moved to return the resolution to the Union. Thus denying to the citizen the oldest right to man, viz., "The right to petition."

This, Mr. Editor, was done with the consent and approval of the great Reform Mayor—God loves a shining mark.

The indications are that the citizens and taxpayers have no rights the city council are bound to respect," and are therefore barred from the right to petition:

PORT ANGELES, May 15, 1894.

To the Hon. the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Port Angeles:

GENTLEMEN—At a regular meeting of the Taxpayer's Union, a body organized for the purpose of reform and retrenchment in the official administration of city and county affairs, the following preamble and resolution was passed:

WHEREAS—A contract bond, so-called, was made and entered into between W. C. Williams and the City of Port Angeles by reason of the vote, the support and assistance given the said W. C. Williams by Council McLaughlin in the council chambers at a regular meeting of all the council of the city of Port Angeles. And whereas,

The accepting of said contract bond of the said W. C. Williams has been a means of revenue, a gain, a profit to the said Councilman McLaughlin, inasmuch as he has directed, supervised and superintended by his presence the men employed on said contract by the said W. C. Williams.

The said act of partnership in said contract by said Councilman McLaughlin is in conflict with the law, the statutes made and provided for the government of municipal corporations for the State of Washington. Therefore be it

Resolved, That it is imperative on the council of this city, a common duty to all the people to take immediate action in the premises, either to discontinue the services to the said W. C. Williams of Councilman McLaughlin, or to vacate the office of Councilman from the Third ward of this city. An be it further

Resolved, That if the necessary action is not taken by the common council of the City of Port Angeles, so to maintain the dignity of the law, the honor, the reputation of the City of Port Angeles. In that emergency the Taxpayer's Union will be forced to resort to the only remedy left for the protection of the city and its citizens by instituting proceedings at law so as to enjoin the payment of any and all sums allowed the said W. C. Williams in satisfaction of said contract by the vote or the auditing of same by said Councilman McLaughlin.

And we further wish to setforth to your honorable body in language that cannot be misunderstood or misconstrued that it is no justification, a moral or a legal reason for Councilman McLaughlin or his friends to say that he is needy and requires to be engaged, to be assisted by the said contractor, W. C. Williams, to a livelihood, which is a dangerous precedent, fraught with pernicious influences in a city government, and particularly demonstrated in the reckless management of affairs in the city of Port Angeles.

And, furthermore, a citizen in needy or straightened circumstances should not aspire or seek an office with no legal emoluments or salary attached, as his time could not be applied or attention given to the requirements of the office without recompense as the law directs.

The foregoing is respectfully submitted for your honorable consideration and attention.

W. S. MORRISEY,

CHAPTER XVIII.

FURTHER EXPLORATIONS.

Like Robinson Crusoe, of whom I often thought, I kept an almanac. One of the largest and smoothest bowlders was used by me for this purpose. Like him, I made a stroke for each day—a long stroke for Sunday—and at the beginning of each month wrote its name, all, of course, with the point of my knife. After I had accustomed the seals to my presence, though before I had taught them to bring me fish, I began to explore the remainder of the cavern and in the same way as I had explored it from the window to the seal pool—by lighting a series of fires. A little beyond the pool I found that the cavern forked, one gallery, which was the smaller, terminating in another pool of unknown depth—I tried, but could not sound it—in which the tide rose and fell—a terrible and mournful place, which, after that sounding, or trying to sound, I never afterward visited. The other gallery was of huge extent and ran far inland. When I first penetrated this gallery, I noticed at one point that the air seemed to be fresher than elsewhere and could perceive a slight motion in the flame of my torch. This, of course, was evidence that somewhere here there was communication with the outer world. Though I scanned eagerly the roof of the cavern, I could perceive there no welcome slit of sky. Nevertheless I felt sure that a way to the outer world existed at this point, though probably so winding as not to permit the access of light. Then, as I recalled the physical character of that outer world under which I was entombed, I remembered a cleft opening into a deep and horrible abyss which had always possessed a fascination for myself and my younger brothers. It was called the "Devil's Parlor," and many times we rolled down stones here and listened with awestruck delight to their clashing and rattling as they went down into subterranean depths. I used to maintain that it was bottomless and penetrated into the center of the earth, because I never could hear the final clash which told that the stone was at rest below. Then I searched around, and here, sure enough, did find a variety of stones, cast down no doubt by the hands of many boys at many times. Also I found many bones of animals, goats and sheep, which from time to time during past centuries had fallen thither while they grazed carelessly on the edges of the abyss or had been driven into it by dogs or wolves. "If only one such would fall in here now," I thought to myself ruefully as my imagination drew pleasing pictures of roast meat. In truth, I was becoming heartily tired of my fish diet, which was beginning to affect my health and still more noticeably my strength. I blazed my way to the end of this gallery, the extreme limit of my gloomy kingdom. Here I made a singular discovery. Against the black wall of the cave there stood on end a great white bowlder, lozenge shaped—that is to say, somewhat flat and oblong. Examining this, I discovered upon it not only a variety of circles, but a curious engraving, something like a bent bow with straight strokes upon it on the concave side. I noticed, too, upon the edges a variety of scorings which traveled around to the side of the slab, which was hidden from view. Feeling all around with my hand, I came to one point where I could pass it between the slab and the rock. There was a hollow space behind, how large I could not tell, but apparently considerable. As it was evident that this slab had been set up here by men's hands and in order to block access to the cavity behind, I at once concluded that this well protected pocket was a treasure chamber or perhaps a tomb. I threw in some lighted timber, and flinging more upon the top of it and making a blaze I applied my eye to the cavity. I saw an earthen crock about the size of a large flowerpot, filled with something which I could not distinguish, but did notice, both there and elsewhere, what looked like metal of some kind. Owing to the smoke, which rapidly gathered there, I saw nothing distinctly and after a moment or two, owing to the same cause, saw nothing at all. "This," I said, "is surely old Curry the smuggler's treasure chamber. If I ever get alive out of this den, I will come back with my brother Ned. Together we will blast away this bowlder or contrive in some other way to rifle the old villain's treasures."

CHAPTER XIX.

ANOTHER ATTEMPTED ESCALADE.

After I had thoroughly explored the whole cavern and perceived that no other outlet of an available character existed, I commenced to draw every movable article which I could discover to Curry's Window—stones, gravel, debris of all kinds, bones, etc. I knew that the supply was utterly inadequate to enable me to mount to the aperture, but would make the attempt nevertheless. Of course it failed, but a certain portion of the incline was thus made ascendable, and this was something. The storms of the approaching winter might fling in sufficient driftwood, boards and even beams big enough to enable me to construct a ladder. This idea of a ladder was present in my mind almost from the moment that I entered my prison. The extreme brittleness of the timber, among which there was hardly a solid bit, had prevented me from making the attempt before. I now determined to utilize the skeletons of the sheep and goats for the purpose and unwind the tether of the young seal to supply fastening material, keeping only the wire for tether. On the day after I discovered those bones I set to work. Many of them were too brittle to be of any use; some were sound; others, though too brittle or too small to be separately of sufficient strength to bear my weight, I bound together. Some of the fresher driftwood I treated in the same manner. Though I knew that I had neither material enough nor twine enough, I labored on. With every round made I was coming nearer to my deliverance. Yet I believe my fishing rod could supply more material for the latter than all the rest put together. Seeing that even by cutting up the latter my ladder would not be near long enough, I forbore to destroy the rod, knowing that I could do it at any time. It was well that I refrained, though I have not had occasion to mention the fact yet. Shortly after my imprisonment I was aware that pigeons of the slate colored variety, common along this coast, were in the habit of roosting somewhere in this cave. In the dusk of the evening I had often seen them as they whirred through the window and disappeared into the interior darkness. While I was engaged in taming the seals I had made a close exploration of the cavern, with the hope of finding their roost, and at last discovered it. Standing perfectly still in different parts of the cave and listening intently, I could at one point hear them making little sleepy noises, but at such a height above me that, though I kindled a considerable fire here, I could not see them. Now, however, shortly after that exploration of the long gallery, I heard similar noises at a different point and seemingly proceeding from a spot much nearer to the floor of the cavern. Here, with the aid of a torch, I could see some half dozen of them upon a ledge, all very close together. Next day I fastened a large cunner hook to the extremity of my fishing rod and leaned the rod against the ledge upon which they roosted. I then lit a fire, such as would throw a faint light upon the ledge, and lay down close to the rod. Duly the pigeons arrived and took up their night quarters. They looked at first a little surprised, and kept peering about with their little, bright round eyes, but presently clustered close together, as their custom was, and seemed to fall asleep. Indeed they were by this time pretty well used to the fires and lights of the cavern. Cautiously grasping the rod with one end and bringing the point of the hook over the back of one of the sleepers, I drew the rod down quickly, yet gently. I had the satisfaction of knowing that my prey was secured. My fear, of course, was that he might be mortally injured; but, as it turned out, he was not. I had not the least intention of turning him into food. My intention was to utilize him as a messenger. I now cut off the corner of my pocket handkerchief, the corner which bore my initials, fastened it tightly round his leg and let him go, nor did I ever see him afterward. I was afraid that the remainder would not again use this roost, but a few nights afterward two of them settled down here, while I, as usual, lay in wait below. I struck down and secured one of them in the manner that I have already described. To the leg of this pigeon I tied my ring. It was one which if the bird were shot or taken would be at once identified as mine by any member of our family, for on the inside it was engraved with a Latin inscription. It had been given to me by a greataunt a few years before. I afterward captured a third and to him fastened a gold shirt stud of a peculiar pattern, which I felt sure my brother Ned at least, who often examined it curiously, would at once identify as mine. After this third capture I could effect no more for a long time. The birds were quite frightened away from that perch. Finally, not long before my brother Edward made his way to me, I caught a fourth. Round the leg of this messenger I wrapped tightly a piece of my handkerchief, on which I had inscribed with blood characters a statement of my whereabouts.

Fastened it tightly around his leg and let him go

CHAPTER XX.

A PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT.

One night about three weeks after my entombment, as I sat beside the fire thinking mournfully of home and what they were all doing there now, I thought, after looking at my watch, that this was Charley's bed hour, and the child's singular countenance and large eyes—indeed he seemed all eyes, like a young crow—rose before my mind. Then I remembered having read somewhere, I think it was in one of Bulwer-Lytton's novels, that there were some persons so firmly and sensitively organized that a person with whom they were en rapport might, though at a distance, by sustained exercise of the will and concentration of thought, impress images or thoughts upon their minds, the patient being at the time in a receptive or passive mental state. Charley, I said, is now in bed and not yet asleep. I will at least try. I did so and remained for half an hour or so endeavoring with the utmost concentration of thought to convey to Charley the knowledge that I was here. For about a week I continued to do this and then gave over. I believed all the time that it was absurd and probably only went through these mental gymnastics for want of something else to do. Once as I awoke I heard a slight thud somewhere in the long gallery as of something falling. I did not attach any importance to it. I thought it was a stalactite falling from the roof. However, after I had breakfasted and played with my seals, I thought I would explore that gallery once more. Something might have fallen or been thrown in from the outer world. Coming to the spot where I had discovered the bones of animals, and searching around in all directions, I found something at which I cried out in a passion of delight and joy. It was one of the great brown soda cakes which were such a familiar spectacle morning and evening on the family board at home. It was grievously bruised, cracked and gapped, but nevertheless a real bona fide homemade cake. I felt at once that it was the result of my absurd experiment. Perhaps Charley had thrown in another whose fall I had not heard. I searched again and was about to leave off when the light of my torch fell upon a large fragment of a second. The remainder no doubt was lodged above in some cleft of the winding, rocky descent. The delight with which I consumed these dainties may be imagined, but infinitely greater was the joy caused by the consciousness that some one on the outside, no doubt Charley, was aware of my presence here.

In cutting that fragment of a cake to which I have already referred my knife seemed to be resisted by something unusual. Looking for the cause, I found a bit of paper, which, having unfolded, I found to be a letter to me from Charley. It ran as follows:

> MY DEAR JACK—I know that you are alive and think that you are in the "Devil's Parlor." I send you a loaf and hope it will do you good. I saw you quite clearly, but they said I was dreaming. I will send you a cake once every second day. Your affectionate brother,
> CHARLES FREEMAN.

All doubt was now at an end. Charley knew where I was, and though they called his vision dreaming I saw at once how I could communicate with the upper world and convince folks there of my presence here. The cake had been flung down at 7:30 in the morning. On the second morning, long before this hour, I was at the place and continued to shout at intervals. Half past 7 passed, 8, 9 passed, but no sign came from above and no cake. As I afterward learned, Charley had been sent away for change of air under the supposition that his mind was deranged. I seemed now as badly off as ever, and for some time was in a frame of mind in which, but for the seals, I might have killed myself. The gayety, pranks and affection of these poor dumb creatures prevented me from utterly losing heart, and gradually my spirits returned, or rather my fortitude and determination to endure all that it might please God that I should endure rather than do a deed so cowardly and wicked. Like Robinson Crusoe, of whom I often thought, I remembered that, though I had suffered and might suffer a great deal, I had also a great deal to be thankful for. I might have starved miserably, whereas I was in an almost miraculous manner supplied with daily food, and instead of utter and maddening solitude I was blessed with the society of these innocent, intelligent and affectionate animals. They would now wriggle and flap themselves up the rock to my fire, and I noticed that whenever my mood was unusually low they then particularly sought to attract my attention and provoke my caresses. I called the big male Mr. Jones, his mate, of course, Mrs. Jones, and the infant Scamp. They knew their names quite well. The little one, which was the most teachable, even learned from me many tricks, which gave me, in spite of my trouble, many a hearty laugh.

About this time I had an increase in my family. One day I noticed at the entrance of the fissure which communicated with the sea a fourth pair of round wondering eyes. It represented a strange seal, which Mr. and Mrs. Jones, by various motions and frolics, seemed to be enticing into our society. Confidence is a plant of slow growth in the breast of a seal, and this seal was not drawn inward by parental affection like Mr. and Mrs. Jones. However, not to be too tedious, I succeeded in provoking the confidence and affection of this animal also and subsequently of others, so that before my liberation I had in all nine friends, while there were three more shy ones, to which I was making advances. I was often surrounded by the whole nine together and likened myself to old Proteus, the old man of the sea, upon whom Ulysses pounced while taking his siesta in the midst of his seals. I did not, however, at all remark the very disagreeable odor which Homer describes as arising from them. When too many of them came about me, I used to drive some back into the water, for their smell, though by no means intolerable, was not quite pleasant.

CHAPTER XXI.

ATTEMPTED ESCAPE VIA THE SEALS' TUNNEL.

Of course from the moment that I became aware of the seals' presence the thought naturally suggested itself to me that I might be able to get out through the same tunnel or boring by which the seals came in. Immediately after securing the young seal in the manner which I have described, I took off my clothes and swam to the opening of the tunnel, which was like a small cave at the other side of the pool. Here I could only penetrate a yard or two. Dropping my feet down and feeling for the opening, I discovered it. I returned, and waiting till the water of the pool was at its lowest swam back again, hoping that the ebb of the tide would have bared this tunnel sufficiently to enable a swimmer to get through. I was disappointed in this. The water, even at low tide, filled the tunnel and stood above the ragged portal to the distance of between two and three feet. By diving I might get through, but not otherwise. This was a very sore disappointment, for I had at first felt joyously certain that I could swim straight out into the open sea and so to Dhu-Corrig, or better, to the shady coos where Mr. Watkins kept his boat and where there was a nice strand and easy landing place. Among my many disappointments, I think there was none which affected me like that. At one moment I saw a door of escape lying open before me, black indeed, but the entrance of a tunnel plainly in communication with the sea. The next, in a manner quite unexpected, I found that door barred—barred with water. And yet I by no means gave up all hope of eventually making my escape by this avenue, for I was a good swimmer and diver, though I knew well that a man who would make his way under water from the point where I now was to the open sea would perhaps require three or four breaths in the course of his submarine journey. The source of this my second spring of hope in connection with the seals' tunnel will presently appear. The venture, however, upon which I had my resolution fixed I postponed executing till I should have quite tamed my seals.

Garlick's Red Rose Potatoes.

Almost two years ago Mr. Garlick of Lost Mountain precinct, planted a few hills of the potato known as the California Red Rose, with the view of introducing it into this county if it proved to be a prolific bearer. His success was astonishing. He did not know but the "year" had something to do with it, so he tried it again last year. The result was even better than the first year. From his start of a few hills the year before he harvested about two tons last year, and had no trouble in disposing of nearly all he had to his neighbors at five cents per pound. He has placed a few sacks for sale with the Farmers' Mercantile Co., of Dungeness.

United States Land Office,
Seattle, Wash., Feb. 9th, 1894.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the Act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled, "An Act for the sale of timber lands in the states of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington territory."

GEORGE E. MICHELL,

of Fairholm, county of Clallam, state of Washington has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 6425, for the purchase of the Lots 18, 23, 24, 25 and 26, of section No. 30, in township No. 30 n, range No. 9 west, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at Seattle, washington, on Tuesday, the first day of May, 1894.

He names as witnesses: M. J. Carrigan, Iver Estensen and Horace White of Fairholm, wash., and William Dedman of Gettysburg, wash.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office or or before said first day of May, 1894.

A NEW SUN MOTION.

Professor Stevenson Has Completed a Wonderful Invention After Years of Labor.

Professor E. E. Stevenson, a well known educator and writer of Quincy, Mass., announces the completion of an invention on which he has been laboring for years, which, he says, will revolutionize the present methods of obtaining motive power. Professor Stevenson has pursued his investigations and experiments in Quincy all winter and has at last brought his idea to a head. Professor Stevenson said: "The forces which have thus far been utilized by the genius of man are the laws of gravitation and chemical reaction. In the broad field of research and investigation we find the possibilities of the future in molecular attraction, musical vibration and the refraction of light.

"To understand the theory on which I have been laboring you must understand the corelation of forces or the transmutation of energies. We use force to produce light. It is upon the reverse of this theory that I have labored, and my experiments are at last proving satisfactory. I have found that the heat of an ordinary kitchen stove generates energy sufficient, if controlled, to drive the machinery of the Pillsbury mills, and the flames of a Bunson electric burner would furnish power to light by electricity 1,000 lights."

In Professor Stevenson's experimental machine, however, the heat of the sun alone has been used. This machine consists of three brass cylinders connected by means of tubes and valves with a glass reflector behind the central cylinder. A piston moving laterally connecting with a balance wheel gives the motion. The shaft on which the balance wheel hangs passes through the end of the machine and contains a drive pulley, which makes the force available. This machine is operated by the sun, working with great rapidity.—Boston Journal.

Hard on the Doctors.

The smallpox scare is about over and the harvest for physicians, at $1 per point, about ended for the year. If we had a law to compel physicians to vaccinate all the members of the families in which they practice, free of charge, the days of smallpox scares would be forever ended.—Iowa State Register.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Filion a fine 9 pound boy on May 31, 1894. Dr. Strother reports mother and babe doing well.

Victorians are anxious to visit Port Angeles on the Fourth, if any effort is made to entertain them on that occasion.

Dr. Strother reports that Mr. Fred Robinson, who has been extremely ill for last two or three months, is getting better.

Mr. Geo. Lamb joined the excursionists Thursday, remaining in Victoria until Sunday. He left for Clallam on the Willapa Monday.

The services at the First Congregational church next Sunday will be, morning, "Communion;" evening, "Brotherhood of Man."

C. L. Babcock, C. S. Stakemiller and J. W. Stewart leave tomorrow for Spokane as delegates to the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows of the state of Washington.

Referring to the races of last Saturday the Victoria Times says: "In class C the Garland finished 30 seconds ahead of the Paloma. The two had a royal race of it."

Invitations have been issued announcing the marriage of Mr. Thos. Delaney, chief inspector of customs, and Miss Toba Gooch, both of Townsend, next Wednesday.

Two hundred trout were caught at Lake Southerland last Wednesday, by Frank Harris who brought them to town yesterday, a portion of which was shipped to Seattle.

Mr. T. T. Aldwell, the wholesale and retail cigar dealer, has made a marked improvement in remodeling his business stand with a new modern glass front, of a decided metropolitan design.

The Garland made three excursion trips to Victoria, leaving Thursday, Friday and Saturday mornings at eight o'clock, returning the same evening excepting Saturday when she laid over until Sunday evening.

Roy Mason, 14 year old, son of Orin Mason, while trying to break to the saddle a young colt met with an accident resulting in the breaking of his left thigh bone. Dr. Strother was sent for to attend the young man who was at his father's ranch on the Elwha river, and set the bone and otherwise rendered aid. The young man is doing well.

Two candidates have already developed for school director of this district at the annual election the 11th inst. Dr. McGeorge, the present incumbent, and D. O'Brien.

The Paloma won second prize in the regatta at Victoria last Saturday. At the time of the races a gale prevailed, making it somewhat hazardous for the racers, a large number of the smaller craft being compelled to withdraw from the course.

Mr. Chas. De France, of Tacoma, secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee, was in the city several days during the week. Mr. De France advises thorough organization and a vigorous, determined campaign. There is no reason why, in his judgment, the Democrats should not hold the balance of power in the next state legislature.

The Angeles team participated in the firemen's tournament at Victoria last Saturday, and would doubtless have won the water test contest, had the coupling been made without unnecessary delay. Notwithstanding this the home team made the swiftest run, reaching the hydrant at least two seconds before the other teams.

The Ward School Buildings.

Port Angeles will soon have three new ward school buildings, the total cost of which will only be $4,635. These structures are each two stories high, hard finish inside, and of modern design, facts which abundantly testify that the district is very fortunate, indeed, in getting these edifices erected for such a remarkably low figure.

The bidding was quite spirited, even the highest permitting of a very questionable margin of profit. The directors awarded the contracts as follows: Tumwater Hill, Eben Merrill, $1,345; Lincoln street, H. W. Brown, $1,553; Pine Hill, S Cramer, $1,615.

A monster petition was presented to the board by citizens and taxpayers, in the vicinity of Pine street urging that the ceilings of the first and second floors be reduced in height eight feet in the aggregate. The plans and specifications provided by Messrs. Adams & Dick, the architects, provided that the lower ceiling be 15 feet and the upper 16 feet in height, which would make the rooms light and airy. The board refused the request of the petitioners. In the meantime Mr. Cramer had withdrawn his proposal, and the board awarded the contract to H. W. Brown for $1,732.

A Pleasant Party.

Mr. Julius I. Kirschberg entertained a number of his friends at his delightfully situated home on the plateau, last Saturday evening. The host proved himself a prince of entertainers, having provided games and a brief musical program for the pastime of his guests. Among those contributing to the musical program were: Miss Hall, Mrs. Lutz, and Mrs. C. P. Brown.

Delicious refreshments were served during the evening.

The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Mallette, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Lutz, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lambert, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. S. Stakemiller. Misses Lambert, Cook, Hoole, Hall and Fend; and Messrs. Strong, Embree, Grimes and Hall.

Prayer meeting on Pine Hill every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Regular preaching service every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Sermon by Rev. Jonas Bushell. Everyone cordially invited to attend.

Boy's knee pants 25 cents a pair at Kirschberg's.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that the is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitution treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation by building of the disease, and giving the patient strength up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that the offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

The Most Successful Gas Engine

In the market is run without an electric spark battery. Theory is all very well, but the every day experience of constant practical use is the best test of merit. The man who runs a launch and finds himself drifting with the tide and wind because the "spark" fails to ignite the charge of gas in his engine; the man who prints a daily paper and fails to get it off on time because the "spark" again fails; the man who has fruit that is injured for lack of irrigation because "spark" fails in his engine that runs the pump not only such parties but others who have trouble from like causes should bear in mind that the Hercules gas and Gasoline engine is free from such difficulties. The ignition is simple and sure. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. A Cheap Power.

And at the same time a reliable power are the points to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a constant watch on the engine is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense for engineer is a serious item against economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run all day without attention or fear of accident, and the cost is about two cents per hour for fuel per horse-power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. CONTINUED FROM PAGE THREE.

First, then, I measured very carefully the distance from Curry's Window to the seals' pool. The cavern, it may be remembered, first trended straight inward and then described a curve to the left, sloping downward steadily and at times even sharply the whole way. This curve, continuing, became a recurve in the neighborhood of the pool; so that this part of the cavern was nearer to the outer sea by some 30 yards than that portion of the curve which was farthest inland and away from the sea. The calculation was not easy, but here for the first and last time in my life I found my college trigonometry of some practical value to me. My object, of course, was to discover the distance from the mouth of the tunnel at the seals' pool to the other mouth, by which it communicated with the sea. As the face of the sea cliff was nearly if not quite vertical, my problem was not complicated by the introduction of an external element. I merely added a few yards at a guess to represent the very slight departure from perpendicularity of the face of the cliff below Curry's Window. Eventually I concluded that the tunnel on the assumption that it would run straight was about 170 yards long, and I still believe that this approximation was tolerably correct. For these calculations a smooth rock was my slate and a bit of hard stone my pencil. At this time I often thought of

A smooth rock was my slate and a bit of hard stone my pencil.

Sindbad the Sailor and the manner in which he escaped from his tomb by following the course taken by an animal along a winding passage into the open air, and of the similar adventure of Aristomenes, the Messenian, who escaped in a similar manner, save for the fact that Aristomenes held his guiding animal—a fox—hard by the tail.

But for the water I would have made my escape, too, as well as they, and Sindbad and the brave Messenian would under my circumstances have been just as much at a stand as I was.

Now, I knew from experience that I could dive 60 yards with ease in clear water. Consequently, diving at my full rate of speed, I would have to take breath at least twice before reaching the sea. But then diving through a submarine tunnel, with the expectation of striking against rock with every forward drive, was obviously a very different thing from under water swimming in the unobstructed sea. Moreover, in my transit through this tunnel, I could not expect to see anything, owing to the absence of light, and therefore should be obliged, as it were, to grope my way painfully along. It might be imagined that all these considerations would at once and altogether remove from my mind the thought that I might make my escape through the seals' tunnel. But they did not. I argued that the fact that the tunnel was quite flooded at its entrance did not prove that it would be flooded all the way through. Possibly, I said, the tunnel is only submarine at the two ends, and that throughout its whole intervening extent I may be able to swim joyfully forward with an arched roof of rock above my head. I knew that the outer entrance of the tunnel was submarine. I was very well acquainted with the face of the cliff outside along the sea's edge and knew that there was no cave or fissure resembling a cave anywhere visible even at low water along this wall of cliff. Even if the tunnel through most of its extent were flooded, it might well be that at certain points here and there it was not flooded, and that I might be able here and there to come to the surface and breathe and find myself swimming in a cave. With a few airholes of this description I might succeed in getting through, provided they occurred at convenient intervals.

It was the 4th day of August when I first attempted the tunnel. I took my fishing line, and fastening one end of it securely to a pointed projection of rock wound up the rest upon a piece of timber. This, of course, was to serve as a clew. In the event of failure I desired to have some surer method than that of mere feeling and groping to guide me back into the place which was my home and away from which I could not even contrive to exist for 48 hours. I may add that before I seriously attempted the tunnel I had gradually accustomed my seals to see me without my clothes. Naturally I feared to frighten away these creatures, upon whose industry I lived. Approaching the entrance of the tunnel, I dived, holding in my left hand the timber upon which the fishing line was wound, and entered the tunnel, letting the cord wind off as I went like thread from a reel. I groped along—it could hardly be called diving—with my back close to the roof of the tunnel, until, as I calculated, half my power of retaining breath was exhausted. At this point I put a knot on the cord, and half swimming, half drawing myself forward by the cord which I held now in my right hand, returned as I had come. When I rose to the surface of the pool, I was aware that I could have gone some distance farther without any distress. Coming to land, I drew in the line and found by the knot that I had made only 12 yards. That represented 24 yards to and fro, which was a considerable falling off from the 60 yards which in unobstructed water I knew to be the length of my average submarine performances. The seals splashed about and made joyful cries on my reappearance. They were now quite accustomed to me, both on land and in the water. I dressed, and thinking I had done enough for the first attempt desisted from a renewal of the enterprise till next day. The next day, however, was stormy. Indeed wild weather now supervened for more than a fortnight. During this wild weather I made no attempt upon the tunnel. I knew that even if I were lucky enough to get through the whole way into the ocean I would be banged about in the surf and breakers at the foot of the cliffs and would never be able to get home. Every day I made an observation of the weather at Curry's Window. After a fortnight and two days the weather grew mild again, and having waited three days more to allow the agitation of the sea to subside I renewed my efforts to penetrate the tunnel. This time I determined to proceed at least three yards beyond the knot. I did so, and still finding the rock above me was about to return when, as I was turning round and kicking, I discovered that my foot made a noise. This, of course, was a sign that I had agitated the surface of the water. Turning again and making a stroke forward and upward, I suddenly found my head in the air. My delight may be imagined. The first of the blowholes or airholes for which I had hoped was discovered. It might be the beginning of that arched gallery reaching nearly to the sea for which I had hoped. Resting for awhile, I began to examine this vacant space and discover its nature and capabilities as well as I could in the dark. I feared it might be so small that at full tide the water might fill it, but that was not so.

I raised my voice, and the echoes clearly proved that it was of great extent. As for my hope that it might be the beginning of a long reach of tunnel, half air and half water, I was greatly disappointed to find that such was not the case. I could swim all round it. At one point the edges were so inclined that I could get clear out of the water and stand upright. As far as I could reach with my hand I could feel free space above me. This blowhole at all events would be at my disposal, whether the tide was at flood or at ebb. Before starting from the seals' pool I had made a series of knots upon my line behind the knot which I made on the occasion of my first attempt, each knot representing a yard. The distance from the entrance of the tunnel to the farthest point of this cave I found now by means of these knots to be 28 yards. In the event of my discovering the tunnel at this point on its way to the sea, and adding 16 yards to the distance—the space that I could traverse without being obliged to turn back—I might now consider myself as being within 136 yards of the open sea and as having virtually achieved 44 yards. No doubt I had a huge extent of water to get through still, but I was not daunted. On the contrary, I was filled with hope. I had found my first blowhole, and I might find others. "Who knows," I said, "but after passing through another submarine tunnel of half a dozen yards I might find myself in an airy gallery running almost to the edge of the cliff?" I again entered the water and swam slowly all around the edge of my cave, holding on by the rock and feeling with my feet. Eventually I thought that I had found the continuation of the tunnel, and though I could not be sure, yet quite satisfied, and more than satisfied, with the result of this exploration, I resolved to get home now. So I dived again, and following my clew reappeared in the seals' pool and that day dined in better spirits than I had been at any time since my descent into this terrible cavern.

CHAPTER XXII.

FAILED FOR THE PRESENT.

Next day, for, as I think I have remarked, I observed the seasons of day and night, I made another and more determined exploration of the seals' tunnel. I got into my first blowhole without difficulty, though at the cost of a bad cut on my right ankle, which pained me a good deal and which no doubt bled profusely. Arrived here, I felt about for the ledge on which I had stood the day before. The tide was higher now and the ledge covered with water, so I clambered to it with greater ease. I first made fast my clew and the stick on which it was wound to a projection of the rock, and afterward moving along the ledge felt about in the dark with my hands. The tide was not yet at its lowest, nor would it be for some time, and of course my efforts to thread the continuation of the tunnel would be best undertaken with the water at its lowest ebb for the reasons that I have already mentioned. In the meantime I desired to explore the cave as well as I could. It was just possible that the continuation of the tunnel might be at this point overland or rather overrock. At all events I determined to utilize the time at my disposal by groping about the cave. Presently I found my right hand going round a corner of rock, and stretching it out and away from my body, but still in a forward direction, found nothing there but empty space. Scrambling into this empty space, I was soon satisfied that I was either in the continuation of the seals' tunnel or that the cave was provided in this place with a pocket of unknown dimensions. Though keenly bent upon exploration, I determined not to travel beyond the sound of the water lest I should lose my way in the darkness. The day after I slid down from Curry's Window I had had in the great cavern a horrible experience of that kind which was a lesson to me. The sound of the water, however, reached a great way here, owing to the reverberation of the hollow roof. To any one else, no doubt, the huge, sucking noises, as of some great monster drinking, and the sullen dismal echoes of the flux and reflux of the water, would have been very horrible and impressive. But I was now too steeled to suffering and horrors to take more than a utilitarian view of those noises. I kept to that side of the pocket by which I had first entered it and penetrated some 20 yards without coming to the end or meeting with anything more noteworthy than dry seaweed and a good deal of rotten drift timber. "I know where to get fuel," I said to myself, "should my storehouse in the big cavern ever give out." All this time I kept listening for the flopping sound which my seals would make if this were their avenue to the sea. Hearing nothing of the kind, my hope that this might be the tunnel subsided. Nevertheless I determined on some future occasion to explore this pocket or whatever it might be more thoroughly. Returning to its entrance, I slid into the water, taking my clew with me, swam to the point where, on the occasion of my last visit, I seemed to have found the continuation of the tunnel, and dived. I went straight down, but in front of me and on my left hand found nothing but rock; then, turning to the right, discovered what seemed to be the tunnel, certainly some opening of considerable dimensions. At this moment something soft, yet solid and seemingly alive, pushed against my breast and throat. I was so frightened that in my terror I dropped the clew and sucked in a quantity of water. Recovering my self control, I got to the surface as quickly as I could. Fortunately I was only at the mouth of the tunnel. Had I been in the interior when this happened, I would almost certainty have been drowned, so frightened was I by this mysterious collision. Hardly had I gained the surface when I guessed the cause of my alarm. It was certainly one of my seals. Presently I heard the well known cry, and the poor beast pressed up against me in the dark. It was a female seal who was very much attached to me. I used to call her the Plaintiff. Though my terror was allayed, I felt myself unequal to the task of any further exploration of the tunnel just then. Accordingly, feeling my way round the cave till I came to the ledge, which was near the entrance of the first portion of the tunnel, I dived and got home without further accident and succeeded in drawing back my clew, which I feared might have stuck fast somewhere. Here I may add that, owing, I suppose, to the original heat of my temperament or perhaps to the possession of a fair share of fat, for I might be described as stout rather than thin, I could remain in water longer than any other swimmer of my acquaintance. On the present occasion I was dispirited and out of sorts, but not cold. Yet, having dined, I felt brisk and vigorous again. This day I dined on steaks of turbot. I mention it because it was the only flat fish that my seals brought me during the whole term of my imprisonment. It now occurred to me that if I could make a fire in the cave off the first blowhole it would be of great service to me in my next attempt to traverse the continuation of the tunnel there. But how to bring fire thither was certainly a difficulty. I could not bring a burning brand with me swimming under water a distance of 16 yards. That was plain. I now re-examined that pocket of my coat in which I had found the loose powder originally, though I knew that there could be little or none there. After making that piece of tinder or touchcloth by which I kindled my first fire I had turned the pocket inside out that the loose grains might fall upon it and so help toward the ignition. On examining this pocket now by the light of my fire I noticed that the bottom of it was quite black. I guessed the cause at once. Some time last winter my jacket had got thoroughly soaked with rain and the bottom of the pocket was steeped in solution of gunpowder. I touched the black lining with the tip of my tongue and recognized the acrid taste. I now saw my way clearly toward the making of a second fire. I cut out the black part of the lining and bestowed it in my purse. It was the first leathern purse I ever owned, bought since I went to college, for my schoolboy purse was a netted one with steel rings and little bunch of steel pendants at each end. My father, I remember, never gave in to the leathern clasp purse—he used a netted one, with rings, as long as he lived. Then I took a piece of my line, and having doubled the purse bound it round strongly with the cord and made it perfectly water tight. Next day, some two hours before low water, I stripped, took my knife and the rolled up purse in my teeth, the clew also, as usual, in my hand, and dived through the tunnel, came up in the blowhole and clambered into the dry part of that cavern. I placed the purse and knife in a spot where I could easily find them again, and having first dried my hands in the crisp seaweed, which was abundant here, proceeded to select the brittlest and most crumbling timber. Such was imbedded everywhere in the seaweed. Then I kept moving about, striking sparks from the rocks with my knife till I found a projection which seemed to emit them in a more brilliant manner than the rest. Now I soon learned what an assistance to me in my former attempt of this kind was the loose powder which I was then in a position to sprinkle upon the touchcloth. Though the sparks were sometimes so bright as to reveal clearly not only the touchcloth, but my whole hand, and though they seemed to fly right into the cloth, they produced no other result than these fleeting illuminations. I believe I was nearly an hour at this exercise and at last gave over, my wrist being

Saved Her Life.

MRS. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not believe in saying that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Dr. Price's Baking Powder Receives It.
(CHICAGO TRIBUNE.)

For leavening power, keeping qualities purity and general excellence the World's Fair jury decided that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder had no equal. On each of its claims it was awarded a first prize or a diploma. All the baking powders entered for prizes were subjected to a most exhaustive examination, and the jury was the best equipped to make the decision, of any ever got together. Their verdict was supported by the testimony of Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington. Dr. Wiley is an expert on food products and the highest authority on such matters in America. This verdict settles a long debated question as which among the many baking powders is the best.

Timber Land Act, June 3, 1878.

Notice for Publication.

United States Land Office,
Seattle, Wash, May 21, 1894.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the states of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory," as extended to all the public land states by act of August 4, 1892, Martin O. Gilpin, of Port Angeles, Clallam County, State of Washington, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 6446, for the purchase of the lots 1, 2, 3 and 4, Section 33, in township No. 30 North, Range No. 9 West, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber and stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at Seattle, Wash., on Friday, the 10th day of August, 1894. He names as witnesses:

W W Dedman, L R Cole, H C Strong and Horace White, all of Port Angeles, wash.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 10th day of August, 1894.

Review of Seattle Market for the Past Week.

OATS, BARLEY AND CORN HIGHER

Dairy Products are Lower—Dried Fruits Higher—New Vegetables in Market—Clearing House Balances.

SEATTLE, May 18, 1894.

Exchanges at Seattle, Tacoma and Portland clearing houses to-day were:

	Clearances.	Balances.
Seattle	$ 87,723.63	$22,898.49
Tacoma	97,448.00	18.581.00
Portland	164,000.00	45,000.00

During the past week another advance has taken place in oats, barley and corn; butter and cheese have declined; vegetables have fluctuated somewhat and several new ones have been added to the list, while strawberries and cherries have declined.

Corn has been advanced $2 per ton and feed meal $3 per ton. Oats are $2 per ton higher, the demand being strong from San Francisco, and chicken feed wheat has been marked up $1 per ton. There is no change in the export wheat market, but good milling wheat sells at from 56 to 57 cents per bushel.

All grades of butter have declined 2 cents per pound, while California cheese is 1 cent lower.

In fruits and vegetables the changes are very slight. New onions have taken the place of old ones and are cheaper. New potatoes are more plentiful, while green peas and string beans are unchanged. No important changes have been made in the wholesale grocery market. Dried fruits have advanced slightly and all sugars are steady at the prices quoted last week.

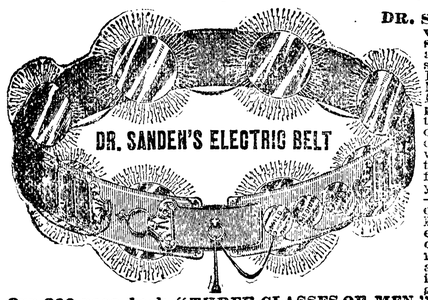
HAVE YOU TRIED DRUGS AND FAILED

TO FIND A CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, KIDNEY, LIVER and BLADDER COMPLAINTS, DYSPEPSIA, LAME-BACK, &c.



DR. SANDEN'S ELECTRIC BELT with Electro Magnetic Suspensory will cure without medicine all of the above troubles. Those who suffer from Nervous Debility, Losses, Drains, Lost Manhood, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Poor Memory, all Female Complaints, and general ill health, the effects of abuse, excesses, worry or exposure, will find relief and prompt cure in our marvelous invention, which requires but a trial to convince the most skeptical. In ignorance of effects you may have unduly drained your system of nerve force and vitality—which is electricity—and thus caused your weakness or lack of force. If you replace into your system the elements thus drained, which are required for vigorous strength, you will remove the cause and health, strength and vigor will follow at once. This is our plan and treatment, and we guarantee a cure or refund money.

Our 200 page book "THREE CLASSES OF MEN," sent sealed, free. Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is no experiment as we have restored thousands to robust health and vigor, after all other treatments failed, as can be shown by hundreds of cases throughout this and other States, who would gladly testify, and from many of whom we have strong letters bearing testimony to their recovery after using our Belt. middle-aged and old man, should be read by every young,

WE HAVE CURED THESE—WE CAN CURE YOU!

GENERAL DEBILITY CURED.

San Francisco, Cal., August 14, 1892.

Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Before I used your belt I was troubled with lost vigor, vital weakness, and almost a complete loss of power. I would get up with a very tired feeling, bones aching, etc.; since using your belt I have had a new lease of life. I now enjoy life better than I have for ten years past. I have the utmost confidence in your treatment. You can publish this statement, also have others write or call on me. Truly yours, H. A. BOWEN, 26 and 28 Turk St.

RHEUMATISM AND LAMENESS CURED.

Portland, Oregon, April 18 1892.

Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I got one of your belts two weeks ago for rheumatism, from which I suffered for several years. For the past six months I had not been able to work. Your belt has placed me in almost perfect health in the two weeks I have used it. I can walk comfortably, and feel like a new man generally.
M. E. HUGHES, Proprietor International Hotel.

NERVOUS DEBILITY—LOSS OF VIGOR.

Tacoma, Wash., October 21, 1892.

Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I have been using your Electric belt for general nervous debility, and to-day feel better than I have for five years. I have gained in vigor daily, and am strong in every part.
Yours gratefully, CHAS. LUETKA.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Portland Oregon, September 26, 1892.

Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Years of exposure and hard work, combined with the strain coming from the jar of an engine, gave me a severe case of lame back, from which I suffered for seven years. I was so bad that I could not bend my back. Was all doubled up with it. I bought one of your belts. It helped me in ide of two days, and I continued to wear it for four months, being perfectly cured. That was two years ago, and I am as well to-day as I ever was in my life. I know your belt well, and I know lots of people who have been cured by it. Many others need it, and if they would try it they would find it the same as I did—the best remedy in the world. I am located here permanently, and will be glad to talk with anyone who wants to inquire about it.
ROBERT BURREL, Engineer Hotel Portland.

LOST VITALITY AND STRENGTH.

Everett, Wash, June 18, 1892.

Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Since wearing your belt I have been greatly benefited. I feel my old energy fast returning; and after a month's use of the belt I find myself twice as vigorous as before. My memory is now nearly perfect, and each day shows for the better. I feel much stronger than before using the belt. Yours truly, HENRY SCHULTZ, is a complete galvanic battery, made into a belt so as to be easily worn during work or street, and it gives soothing, prolonged currents which are instantly felt throughout all weak parts, or we forfeit $5,000. It has an Improved Electric Suspensory, the greatest boon ever given weak men, and we warrant it to cure any of the above weaknesses, and to enlarge shrunken limbs, or parts, or Money Refunded. They are graded in strength to meet all stages of weakness in young, middle-aged or old men, and will cure the worst cases in two or three months. Address for full information.

THE DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT
