ANOTHER DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

The Superior Court and the Criminal Docket—Port Angeles and the Railroad—Frightful Destruction Wrought by the Floods—Other Matters of Local and General Interest.

A public meeting was held in the opera house last Tuesday evening for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not citizens favored a celebration on the Fourth.

Norman R. Smith was called to the chair and J. A. Wilson was chosen secretary. The prevailing sentiment was to celebrate.

A motion prevailed that a committee comprised of ten persons be appointed and authorized to raise funds and provide a program for an appropriate celebration of the National holiday.

The following is the committee:

Messrs. J. A. Wilson, W. H. Smythe, R. A. Grimes, T. T. Aldwell, J. C. Caie, Lewis Williams, L. R. Cole, Walter J. Dyke, G. L. Gale and Frank Merritt.

The committee was instucted to meet Wednesday evening for the purpose of arranging a program and devising ways and means for prosecution of the same.

The executive committee met Thursday evening and appointed the following sub-committees:

ROMERO GUILTY.

The Criminal Docket Occupies the Attention of the Superior Court.

The summer term of the Superior court, Judge McClinton, convened last Tuesday.

The criminal docket has occupied the attention of the court during the week.

The first case on trial was the State of Washington vs. Jose Romero, charged with forcibly entering the dwelling of one Jose Frazier, and therefrom appropriating to his own use certain articles of clothing. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

The attorneys for the defense, Messrs. Lamoreux & Gay, have filed an application arresting judgment and to set aside the verdict, alleging that the information was insufficient to warrant the passing of judgment on defendant, together with a motion for a new trial was filed.

For the reason of irregularities in the information filed against Jose Sopia, an Italian, held for trial to answer to the charge of an assault with a deadly weapon on the person of Samuel Fernie, defendant, was discharged. A warrant for his rearrest was immediately sworn out, Sopia having in the meantime concealed himself from public view. Search was instituted by the officer of the law, which resulted in his capture in the suburban districts of the city. The case was on trial yesterday. Messrs. Trumbull and Louis Williams appear for defendant.

The case of State of Washington vs. Frank Jones was continued until Friday.

INEXPLICABLE FIRES.

An Occupied Building Destroyed by Fire This Morning.

The fire alarm this morning summoned the fireman to Albert street, between Front and First streets, where a frame two-story building owned by Mr. Genck, was wrapt in flames. The fire broke out presumably in the second story, the cause being unknown.

Whether or not the kitchen furniture, the electrician's tools and the chairs got into a three-cornered argument over the political problems of the day, from the friction of which the fire was ignited; or some inflammable substance became disturbed and anxious to join the Coxey movement, will ever remain a deep mystery.

It is understood there was an insurance of $250 on the building and its contents, and an insurance of $400 on Electrician Klaffert's tools.

TO BUILD THE ANGELES ROAD.

After Seeing Property, Ohio Capitalists Will Raise the Money.

Charles A. Smith and T. J. Morgan, of Chillicothe, O., who have been examining the route of the proposed Everett & Port Angeles railroad and the coal property along the straits which would be tributary to the road, came to the city on Friday night and immediately left for the East, prepared to finance the scheme among their associates in Ohio. They were accompanied by Miss Ruth M. Smith, the daughter of the former gentleman, and by M. J. Carrigan, of Port Angeles.

Messrs. Smith and Morgan, who are wealthy coal operators at Chillicothe have spent a month with Mr. Carrigan in looking thoroughly over the country along the straits with a view to ascertaining the resources of the country tributary to the road. They went first to Vancouver island and visited the coal mines at Nanaimo and Wellington. Then they crossed the straits and went over the whole route from Neah bay to Port Hadlock, examining the coal and timber, and then went to Everett to see about connections there. Mr. Smith said of the proposition to a Post-Intelligencer reporter:

The timber in that section is magnificent and could not be conceived by any man from Ohio without being seen, for in our section all the land has been cleared and brought under cultivation. We made tests of the coal veins with a diamond drill and found a good bed of high grade lignite equal to any coal in this section and in a regular coal formation. We shall make a favorable report on the scheme, which involves both the construction of the railroad and the development of the coal property, and do not expect any difficulty in raising the money to carry it out.—Sunday Post-Intelligencer.

THE TERRIBLE FLOODS.

Millions of Dollars in Property Destroyed in the Northwest.

Throughout the Northwest millions of dollars worth of property has been destroyed by floods during the past week.

Not since 1861 has Washington, Oregon and British Columbia been visited with such a frightful flood.

The cause is plainly manifest. The spell of unusually warm weather rapidly melted the snow on the mountains, the water pouring down the mountain streams in torrents. This caused the larger streams to rise rapidly and soon overflow their banks. The greatest extent of damage was done in the country through which flows the Columbia, Willamette, Fraser and Skagit rivers.

It is impossible to estimate with any degree of accuracy the extent of the damage. In Portland alone over $1,000,000 of property has already been destroyed.

The transcontinental railway systems have suffered enormous loss. Through traffic on the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Canadian Pacific railways, has been suspended, and the expenditure of thousands of dollars will be required to repair the damages done. And the end is not yet, as the waters of the Willamette and the Columbia still continue to rise. The Fraser and the Skagit are slowly falling.

A novel feature of the school election will be the presentation of a bouquet of roses, by a committee of ladies, as a committee from the Gate City Floral Company, of which Mr. W. H. Smythe, is proprietor.

Should Give Angeles Better Service.

Now that the Monticello has been withdrawn from this route, the Hastings Steamboat Company should give Port Angeles better and more satisfactory service.

There seems no reason why the schedule should not be changed so as to bring the Seattle newspapers here the day of publication. This would be a great accommodation to a large number of citizens, while it would only change the time of sailing from Seattle a few hours later.

The volume of business extended this company from the business men of this city is sufficient, to say the least, to justify the demand.

A Generous Offer.

The Port Angeles Dramatic Club has very generously agreed to contribute its services in producing one of its plays on the evening of the 22nd inst, the net proceeds of which will be donated to the Fourth of July fund.

THE ELECTRIC FIASCO.

The Council Petitioned to Defeat the Will of the People

EXPRESSED AT A SPECIAL ELECTION

Held July 8th, 1893, at Which Time Plans and Specifications for an Electric Lighting Water Power Plant Were Ratified—Contract Awarded to Supply 100 Cords of Wood for the Electric Lighting Works—Other Matters.

At the council meeting last Wednesday evening the mayor and all the council except Malcolm McGill and Kreuger were present.

The petition to change the electric lighting plans, submitted by taxpayers, was laid over until the next regular meeting.

The contract to cut and deliver at the electric lighting power house 100 cords of wood, was awarded to Mr. P. B. Chambers for $2.40 per cord.

The estimate of City Engineer Fitz-Henry of the amount of work performed during the month of May on the city's proposed electric lighting pipe line, amounting to $560, was submitted.

Exceptions were taken to the estimate by W. C. Williams, manager, the latter maintaining that a greater amount of work had been performed than the engineer gave credit for.

A motion prevailed providing for the appointment of a committee of three, comprising the finance committee and Councilman Crockett, authorized to inspect the work performed by W. C. Williams, manager, during the month of May and report the result of such examination at the next regular meeting.

COULD THE COUNCIL DO IT?

Petitioners Ask the Council to Change Plans of the Electric System.

On the 8th day of July, 1893, the electric lighting pipe line and water power proposition was submitted to the voters of this city for their ratification or rejection. By a large majority the voters ratified the proposition.

In accordance therewith the city council advertised for proposals to construct the pipe line, and the bid of Mr. W. C. Williams, manager, of the Port Angeles' Constructing Company being the lowest and responsible, the contract was awarded him.

At the special election the plans and specifications of the proposed electric lighting system were embodied in notice, and in the adoption of the same, by the voters, at that election, they expressly stated that either round or square pipe flume should be used in the construction of the pipe line, and also, that, "the power house shall be located at the water front, and in the power house shall be installed Pelton or other water wheels of not less than five hundred horse power."

That is what the voters clearly signified that they wanted, and this is what Mr. Williams, manager, agrees in accordance with the conditions of his contract to perform.

This considered, it seems very remarkable, indeed, that any number of taxpayers should petition the council to modify or change these plans, when such action could only result in annulling the contract, as there certainly is no written or unwritten law delegating to them the exercise of such power.

As the plans and specifications were included in the proposition submitted to the voters for the electric lighting system, at a special election, the council cannot legally change or modify them. This was the express will of the people. It must be obeyed.

No doubt the modification of these plans would be a clear gain of $10,000 or $15,000 to the contractor, but the people did not delegate to the council the right so to do, and the plans and specifications must be followed to the letter.

The petition:

To the Honorable Mayor and City Council of the city of Port Angeles, Wash.

GENTLEMEN: We, the undersigned, a portion of the taxpayers of the city of Port Angeles would respectfully ask your honorable board to made the following change in the pipe between Little river and Fraser creek and instead of the present pipe system substitute a flume as per cut attached, four by eight feet, which will carry three times the amount of water than the present intended pipe line will, thereby protecting the city by the saving of all the water for the city. Then set the power house at or near the head of Frazer creek and transmit from there by wire the power generated.

We ask your honorable body to adopt the above plan from a business stand point and would also ask Mr. Williams to at least agree to the above change for the best interest of the city, the round pipe will certainly be a more expensive system for the city to keep in repair, while one man can take care of six (6) miles of the above flume and repair it alone in case of necessity.

We honestly think the above changes will make for the city the best and most profitable system.

Election of Officers.

Last Monday evening the Minerva Literary Society held its semi-annual election.

Members were elected to serve respectively as follows: President, R. A. Grimes; vice-president, Mrs. H. B. Willson; secretary, A. N. Taylor; treasurer, Mrs. H. B. Willson; marshal, Miss Rose Pitts.

Dr. M. J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 26th of May while in Desmoines, en route to Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of diarrhoea. Having sold Chamberlain's Colio, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability he procured a 25 cent bottle two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhoea. Everyone should procure a bottle of this Remedy before leaving home. For sale by J. C. Hansen.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS

BY MRS. C. B. MANFIELD.

The regular meetings of this Union will be held on the first and third Fridays of each month at 2 p. m., and on the second and fourth Friday evenings at 8 o'clock. The gentlemen members are requested to attend the evening meetings. All are cordially invited to all meetings of the union.

The W. C. T. U. pledge: "I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic of the same."

The Union will hold the next afternoon meeting at the home of Mrs. R. Shield, Friday, June 8, at 2 o'clock, p. m.

The Rev. J. M. Baxter will preach a temperance sermon in the M. E. church Sunday evening, June 17, at 8 o'clock. All are welcome.

A man who claims to be a strong temperance man, in speaking of the terrible havoc which the drink traffic is making all over the civilized world, says: "I do not blame the man who makes the liquor or the man who sells it; but the man who makes a beast of himself by drinking more than is good for him." If a man never drank more than was good for him, the saloon would become a thing of the past.

We know that it is argued by some that alcohol gives new strength and energy after fatigue has set in. The sensation of fatigue is one of the safety valves of the human machine. To stifle the feeling of fatigue in order to do more work, is like closing the safety valve so that the boiler may be overheated and explosion is the result.

That those who consume the liquor, "the man who makes a beast of himself with it," are the only ones to blame, and that "the man who makes it and the man who sells it," are blameless, is a sentiment dangerous to society and demoralizing to the human race. We deny the moral right of any one to make, sell or use as a beverage any ardent spirits.

The saloon keeper is in no small degree responsible for the crimes and misery entailed upon the human race by the sale and use of intoxicants, and no man can engage in the business whose moral nature is not in a great degree perverted. It is so degrading that many engaged in it sink to the vile depths to which so many of their customers are brought by the accursed traffic. How pitiful and weak are the arguments by which men endeavor to justify themselves in this iniquitous business. Truly "the love of money is the root of all evil."

When the temperance people have so conducted their campaign of education that the masses shall view this traffic and those engaged in it in their trice moral character, when they have stripped from the saloon keeper and his nefarious business, the last vestage of respectability, then may they look forward and see the glorious fruit of their labor.

We do not attempt to lift from the shoulders of the man who makes a beast of himself one iota of his responsibility to God and humanity; but we would impress upon all that those who make and those who sell the liquor are accountable to God, and should be to humanity, far more than "the man who makes a beast of himself" with it.

The poor wretch whose folly and indulgence has so weakened his will and perverted his nature that he is utterly powerless to contrate his appetite for strong drink, certainly should have our pity as well as our censure, but that the saloon keeper who deals out the poison to him, which robs him of reason and and makes a demon of him, is not deserving of censure; but is blameless, is a doctrine too far reaching in its consequences to be passed over in silence or indorsed by any right thing person.

How many homes are made wretched, wife and children destitute of comforts, that the saloon keeper may fare sumptuously, and we need not go out of our own city to find such cases, but they are scattered all over our land.

The first record we have of this monster strong drink, it was called wine, and in this same record the use of wine resulted in bringing the curse of bondage of slavery upon a whole nation. Typical of the present time Shakespeare wrote these words of wine, "Oh, thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no other name to be be known by, let us call thee devil," and yet people will tell us that it is necessary to drink wine to preserve health. The devil with his usual shrewdness, has deceived mankind for thousands of years and is deceiving still. His spirit lurks in every drop of wine, and yet his deception was so complete that even the whole church of Christ celebrated her most solemn feast with intoxicating wine, but thank God she is fast putting the devil out of our Holy Communion.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

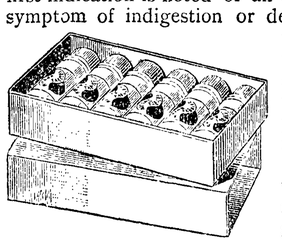
act gently but promptly upon the kidneys, liver, stomach and intestines; cleanse the system effectually; dispel colds, headaches and fevers; cure habitual constipation, making enemas unnecessary. Are acceptable to the stomach and truly beneficial in effects. A single TABULE taken after the evening meal, or just before retiring, or, better still, at the moment when the first indication is noted of an approaching cold, headache, any symptom of indigestion or depression of spirits, will remove the whole difficulty in an hour without the patient being conscious of any other than a slightly warming effect, and that the expected illness failed to materialize or has disappeared.



Disease commonly comes on with slight symptoms, which when neglected increase in extent and gradually grow dangerous.

If you suffer from Headache, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, ... TAKE RIPANS TABULES

POLITICAL RUSE.

The antiquated pilot of the Tribune-Times is exceedingly clever at political ruse. Without disparagement to any gentleman mentioned as an available candidate for school director, the efficient public service of Dr. McGeorge speaks for itself. Citizens and taxpayers of the district are well satisfied with the record of this gentlemen. What possible objection can be urged to the re-election of Dr. McGeorge? None what ever. Until the Tribune-Times presumed itself a nominating convention, only the names or Dr. McGeorge and Mr. D. O'Brien were mentioned for this position. The purpose of the artful schemer is worthy a mind familiar with political ruse. How cute! The Tribune-Times nominates Mr. Stakemiller.

There are three candidates in the field. One from Pine Hill, two from the east end. Will not, according to political mathematics Dr. McGeorge be defeated and the honor be empty to Mr. Stakemiller? And is not this as the Tribune-Times intends it should be? To heartlessly and purposely sacrifice Mr. Stakemiller on the political altar that the entire school board will after Monday next, the 11th inst., hail from the western domain, is worthy the steel of this artful schemer. A. cold-blooded proposition. But then the "gang" is getting hungry again. And you know what that means.

YES, the Pacific Coast wants the Nicaragua canal. Few persons have an adequate conception, however, of the undertaking. The opinion is quite general that the government should either build outright or guarantee bonds for the construction of the canal. The proposition should and doubtless is receiving serious governmental consideration. Whenever the international obstacles lying in the path will have been removed, the United States will see its way clear to build the canal. It would be exceedingly unwise, however, to proceed until the government receives from Nicaragua absolute right to protect, preserve and control the canal for all time to come. Until such time as these concessions are secured by an international agreement with Nicaragua, the people might as well rest contentedly as impatience will accomplish nothing.

DR. MC GEORGE has made a capable, efficient school director. The Tribune-Times does not mention the fact, nor does it announce that the gentleman is a candicate for re-election. The reason certainly cannot be ignorance and stupidity. Far from it. It, however, artfully nominates another candidate from the east end, fervently hoping the unwary voters will fall into the political trap it has so cunningly set, and divide their strength between two candidates. THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER rises supreme to the situation and nominates Mr. Chas. D. Ulmer as an available candidate for director from Tumwater Heights. Now we have a four-cornered fight; a fair and square contest; two victims for sacrifice on the political altar, and let the best man win.

THE public service of Dr McGeorge, as director, and C. L. Babcock, as clerk of this school district, for the past year, is generally commended by citizens irrespective of political affiliations. These gentlemen are candidates for re-election, and if the voter is to judge from the record made, he might commit a graver mistake in not re-electing them.

HONEST, efficient and economical county government, is what the people want, and for the accomplishment of that purpose the members of the taxpayers' union, one of the most powerful organizations in the state, have come together.

LET it be Dr. McGeorge. Mr. Stakemiller has not as yet returned from Spokane. And, no doubt, should he do so before next Monday, he will publicly announce that he is not a canditate for school director. He then will endorse efficient public service by casting his ballot for Dr. McGeorge.

ALTHOUGH the returns from Oregon are meagre, consequently vague and indefinite, it is quite safe to conclude the result is a Republican victory, in the election not only of the state but legislative ticket as well. Poor Oregon! There are even greater afflictions than floods.

FROM the result of recent elections Democrats should gather wisdom and experience. They should get together and keep together. What purpose loftier than preserving intact the principles of Democracy?

HAVE the derelict Democrats in the Senate heard from Oregon?

District Lodge I. O. G. T.

Quite a number of the delegates to the District lodge at Port Townsend this week, had never seen the Grand Chief Templar of the state of Washington, Arn S. Allen, of Tacoma, and his presence with us was very highly appreciated. His talks on various subjects gave universal satisfaction.

The District lodge elected its officers this week, and we append the list of them herewith:

C T, F P Zent, of Jefferson Lodge No. 12, Port Townsend; D V T, Mrs Baxter, Gate City Lodge, No. 27, Port Angeles; D Coun'r, Mrs Phillips, Jefferson lodge; D Sec, Dr Gleason, Jefferson lodge; D Treas, Miss Stockand, Jefferson lodge; D S J T, Miss Ostrander, Jefferson lodge; D Chaplain, Mrs Bowman, Gate City lodge; D Guard, W H Van Lehn, Gate City lodge, D Marshal, J. E. Banks, Gate City lodge; D Sentinel, Ira A Mills, Jefferson lodge; delegate to Grand Lodge, J. M. Baxter, alternate, Mrs Phillips.

The next meeting of the District lodge is to be held in Port Angeles, but the date is not yet fixed.

The delegates had a very pleasant trip, both to and from Port Townsend, and enjoyed the hospitality of the Townsend people immensely. One of the passengers on the Garland jumped overboard just after the steamer left Dungsness. But the swiftly lowered life boat reached him before he had lost much vitality, and he was soon on board with nothing worse than a wet hide. A. HOMOS.

Entertain Their Friends.

The Misses Nailer entertained a number of their young friends last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Gould.

The evening was most delightfully spent with dancing, games and cards.

A tempting luncheon was served at 12:30. Following were the guests:

Mr. and Mrs. Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Bickerdike, Misses Emily Rushworth, Hattie Fend, Birdie Maloney, Joe Lusk, Bella Shearer, Fronie Raymond, Minnie Shearer, Mabel Crosby, Alice and Susie Nailor. Messrs. Wm. Ware, Edgar Graham, A. S. McCormick, Chas. Lusk, Joe Egler, Ben Raymond, Dr. Strother, J. C. Hansen, Will Fend, Chas. Morse, Thos. Gasman, C. E. Nailor, A. J. Cosser and Wm. Gould, of Gettysburg.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie Commemorate Tenth Anniversary.

The tenth anniversary of the married life of Mr. and Mrs. William Ritchie was commemorated at their home last Wednesday evening.

A few friends were invited and a very pleasant evening was spent with music, recitations and conversation. A delicious lunch was served at 12 o'clock.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Williams, Major and Mrs. Hooker, Mr. and Mrs. Dick, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. P. Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour, Mrs. Voldo, Messrs. E. E. Seevers, L. P. Crawford and Dr. Vail.

The Truth of the Matter.

In the last issue of THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER a mistake unintentionally appeared in the article on "The Ward School Buildings."

The monster petition presented to the school board by citizens and taxpayers in the vicinity of Pine street, prayed that the ceilings of the proposed school building not be reduced in height, but that the plans and specifications of the architects Messrs. Adams and Dick, govern the contractor in every detail.

In the former reference this statement was reversed.

Mr. Arthur Sinclair an old-time resident of Clallam, who formerly resided at Sequim, has returned after eight years residence in Australia. Mr. Sinclair states that Australia is in a deplorable condition, business is thoroughly demoralized, thousands of people are out of employment, and the end is not yet. Mr. Sinclair left to-day on the Willapa for the Quillayute where he will doubtless locate.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hooker of Rena, died yesterday.

Notice of Taxpayers' Union.

thoroughly tired. As I sat reflecting it occurred to me that the cloth would have a better chance of catching fire if I presented its edges to the sparks and also if I were to fray those edges into fluff. "Better still," I thought, "fray a good deal of those edges into fluff. It will then be sheer tow, which, saturated as it is in solution of gunpowder, must catch fire." I did this. Then I struck the rock again with my knife, and at the first spark which went rightly into the tow the latter caught fire, spluttering and fizzing up gloriously. I had my little heap of crumbled touchwood ready at hand all this time. In short, after a very few minutes I stood beside a large and brightly burning fire. There was plenty of timber at hand for the feeding of it. The whole cave was brilliantly lighted up—roof, sides and the level floor of dark but gleaming water. So much of the cave as was just above the water was nearly quite round and presented the appearance of an inverted bowl. After a short observation of the blowhole, I turned my attention to the pocket. The entrance was not wide, but the cave within expanded into great dimensions. As I knew, however, that this pocket, huge pouch or whatever it might be termed, was no better for me than a blind alley, leading I knew not whither, I postponed its exploration. I was not here to make discoveries, but to make my way out if by God's grace and my own swimming and diving it might in any way be effected. It was now low water, as I judged by the appearance of the ledge. Then, unfastening my clew and commending myself to the protection of the Almighty, I swam across the pool to the place where I knew was the entrance of the tunnel, and dived. As I had knots all along the line marking the yards, I knew exactly the rate of my progress. I had not gone 10 yards when, feeling nothing above me with my right hand, I slowly rose and presently found my head above water. This was an unexpected good fortune. I had found my second blowhole. I was certainly 10 yards nearer to the sea, and how many more besides would depend on the size of this second cavern. I swam round its edge and found that it was of exceedingly small dimensions, only about three yards in diameter—in fact, quite literally a blowhole and nothing else. It had this advantage, however—that the entrance of the continuation of the tunnel was apparent, or, more correctly, palpable. I felt the edge of the tunnel quite distinctly with my feet and the movement of the water there, for the tide had turned. Again I dived and continued groping forward to a distance of 14 yards, but still felt the rock above me. Most reluctantly I turned back at this point, for I knew that a good half of my power of retaining breath was exhausted. My return journey, however, was the easier, for I assisted myself by drawing on the line, which was excellent, strong whipcord. Yet even so, I was almost at the farthest limit of my powers when I reached the small blowhole. There I remained for a few minutes, blowing and panting. My return thence to the cup shaped cave where my fire burned was easy. Moreover, I could see before me the reflection of the light in the water, which had upon my mind the effect of a friendly beckoning and welcoming hand. Clambering up to my fire, I sat down beside it, brooding and pondering. It was now plain to me that escape by the seals' tunnel was only possible on one condition—viz, that I should stake my life on the chances, they being enormously against success. I knew that in my dive from the second blowhole toward the sea I had done my very best—gone forward to the last yard, exhausting the full half of my power of holding my breath. True, there might have been a breathing place one yard beyond the point at which I had turned back, but then again there might not be any such blowhole at all between the second of my breathing places and the sea, and from that point to the sea on the assumption that the tunnel ran quite straight there was a distance of more than 100 yards according to the most favorable computation. Were I to dive again from the second blowhole with no intention of returning, only with the intention of pushing forward till I should be drowned or find another breathing spot, I might make 24 yards, or even by desperate determination and such power as God might graciously give me make even 30 yards. Then, should I meet with no breathing place, I would be miserably smothered and drowned. I knew that if I were to make this desperate stroke for freedom the sooner I delivered it the better, for my physical strength, owing to a diet of fish repeated day after day, was failing. In mind I was still vigorous, but physically I was decidedly weaker than when I entered the cavern. A few days before this I endeavored to move a pebble which the day after my imprisonment I had been able to raise a little, though not so far as to turn it right over. On this second occasion I could only just stir it in its place. After awhile I got up and explored the cavern, lighting new fires at convenient intervals. It was indeed a great and august chamber of rock, fit to be the temple of some gloomy superstition, but I discovered there nothing of any importance, not even sound timber. This pocket, like the great cavern, had not been visited by the sea for many years. The drift timber there, though abundant enough, crumbled as I handled it. I covered up the embers of the fire near the blowhole with ashes to keep it alive and returned through the tunnel to my own cave. That evening I brooded long and earnestly over the dreadful problem. The making of steps along the slope up to Curry's Window would be the work of years. If I adopted that other desperate alternative—a despairing, headlong and rushing dive through the tunnel—I would either escape at once or at once die, and so be released from all my troubles. Then it seemed to me that to take such a step with all the chances so great against success was like suicide—a crime which I had been brought up to regard as perhaps the most heinous and awful of all crimes. When I awoke in the morning, it seemed to me as if I had somehow made up my mind and come to a determination while I slept. At the time I regarded this as a divine illumination vouchsafed to my prayers for guidance and light. Possibly enough, for the human mind is very deceitful, I finally decided against the bolder and more daring course sheerly from want of courage to put it into execution, and truly the thought of being smothered with salt water in the submarine darkness of the tunnel would have been enough to appall and unman a bolder spirit than mine. Yet indeed I do not believe that I was turned aside by fear from the adoption of the more daring and perilous course. I have to observe, however, that from this day forward a certain lassitude, inertness and lack of spirit grew upon me, mainly caused by my low diet, but noticeably beginning to appear on this particular day, owing to the complete and final frustration of all the high and joyful hopes which I had so long entertained in connection with the seals' tunnel. There, within a few yards of me, lay the gate and entrance of a road leading to light, liberty, home and happiness, yet I could not traverse it, so charged was it all with salt water. My poor seals went there freely out and in half a dozen times a day, but I could not, though indeed I tried and did my best. While Charley's brown bread came down to me I was strong. When that failed and I had nothing but fish to eat, I slowly, day by day, grew weak. I did not feel despondency so much as a certain lassitude and a tendency to do nothing but ruminate and half sleep, so that sometimes even the task of feeding my fire seemed to require a great effort of will before it could be effected.

CHAPTER XXIII.

MY LAST ATTEMPT AT ESCALADE.

This lassitude, however, came over me slowly and at first imperceptibly. When I made up my mind not to attempt to rush the tunnel, I was vigorous enough. Accordingly I at once commenced a labor which I had always intended, but had put off till it became certain that I had no other way of escape. As the reader may remember, I made no very serious effort in any direction until I had first established such relations with my dumb companions as would insure me a supply of food, for I perceived that no mode of possible escape offered itself which did not involve time and labor and that the food problem was the first to which I should devote myself. At 9:30 o'clock on this morning I began to cut steps in the incline leading up to Curry's Window. Not long after my imprisonment I had scored the rock here with my knife. It was limestone of the hardest and closest grain imaginable. For cutting steps I used the brass reel of my fishing rod, which fortunately had been caught in the interstice between two great bowlders. I broke it into pieces and used piece after piece till the bit used as chisel was worn too small. The little wornout fragments I put carefully to keep, intending to melt them if I could and fuse them into one piece afterward when the usable pieces should be exhausted. My precious knife I resolved not to use up till the last extremity, for I could not tell in what way it might yet be necessary to me. I worked steadily at these steps, using first the right hand and then the left. With plenty of time and plenty of brass I could certainly make my way out of the den, but I perceived after I had finished the first step, which was in fact only a little crevice into which I could insert my bare toes, that my supply of metal would be worn out long before the necessary niches or footholds could be made. I worked standing on the top of the rude bone and timber ladder, whose construction I have already described, and this ladder rested upon the heap of stones, gravel, bones and seaweed. The seaweed was in fact my bed and bedclothes. Every morning I brought it hither and at night brought it back to the seal pond, which was my headquarters. It will be seen that by utilizing the seaweed in this manner I saved the making of a step or two, which, of course, meant a great deal to me. Though my supply of brass wore out fast, my strength seemed to wear out faster. I became very weak, so much so that the cutting of the second step took five days longer than that of the first, and that of the third took three full weeks, and I was conscious that my strength was still fading away. That this arose from an exclusively fish diet, helped a little, I confess, with edible seaweeds gathered in the seal pool, I had a rather curious proof. My marine retainers brought me so much food that it was an embarrassment to me. What I did not want I used to fling into that fissure I spoke of at the ebb of the tide. The tunnel was thus a sort of refuse pipe. One day I took a large haddock, to which I fastened a stone, and flung it into the pool, where of course it sank to the bottom. I went to my graving work as usual, and when I returned and held my torch over the spot where I had thrown down the fish saw a fine lobster half covering the white haddock, evidently feasting upon it. I thrust the butt end of my rod to him, which he at once seized upon viciously with one of his claws, so that I drew him safely to land. I made my supper upon him, relishing well the change of diet. I did not leave a small claw unbroken or its contents not eaten. Next day I worked decidedly better. I did afterward occasionally catch a lobster in this manner and noticed the same result. Still I was very weak, and more than once spent a whole day in perfect idleness beside my fire, such was my lassitude and extreme exhaustion. Also I grew very drowsy. I was never more than half asleep and not often wide awake. My seals sporting in the pool or gathering round me barking and whimpering as I lay, the vast surrounding darkness, the noises and echoes, the craggy, illuminated corners of rock above, began to look very dreamlike. I was often asleep or more asleep than awake, while I kept feebly scoring the incline at the window. Finally this apathy or weakness, or both, grew so upon me that I almost ceased to have even the desire of escaping and longed inexpressibly to fall fast asleep and forget everything, which nevertheless I was unable to do. When I first became seriously conscious of my failing strength and knew or guessed the cause, I thought of killing a seal, not one of my pets and friends, but the next strange seal which might show itself. But when the next appeared I was too inert to set about the undertaking, nor indeed did I know how to set about it, for the creature was very shy. Curiously enough, though, I now ate very little. I did not feel hunger. In fact, I was dying by inches. All my vital powers, bodily and mental, seemed as if slowly and painlessly fading away. This lethargic habit began to oppress me seriously in the beginning of October and continued into the month of November.

I drew him safely to land.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE GHOST.

Once while I was in this lax and spiritless condition, highly nervous, too, as I have no doubt, I became suddenly aware that something was passing me by, not in front, but behind me and very close. Of course I saw nothing. The sensation was something like that of a person who in a dark room becomes aware, he does not know how, of the presence and proximity of another person. My fire was on a smooth, inclined rock, or rather on the smooth, inclined floor of the cavern, which, from where I lay, sloped rather sharply down to the seals' pool. My hearth, so to speak, and the floor immediately around it were level. I pitched upon this spot as my resting place because from it the light of the fire not only illuminated the pool and allowed me to see my seals at their gambols there, but threw certain pleasant reflections on the rugged projections of the opposite wall of the cave—that on the same side with the pool. Between the fire and the other wall of the cavern at this point there was only the distance of four or five feet. I usually lay or sat facing the pool, therefore, with my back to this wall. It was between me and it and close behind me that the thing, whatever it was, seemed to pass. I had never seen a ghost. I never believed in them. More than once when I wanted timber for any work I might have had on hand I have sallied forth at night to get what I required in an adjoining graveyard. There was one separated from the rectory by a single field, and in a corner of this were all manner of boards, generally decayed, but some sound enough for my purpose. I had never even taken an imaginative delight in ghost stories, which seemed to give others such singular and unaccountable pleasure. I fancy I was of too active a habit of mind and body for that form of pleasure. At the moment I was thinking of home and even of a home scene more calculated than others to dispel evil imagination. I was thinking, in fact, of our household, the family, the domestics and two outdoor servants assembled in the breakfast room at family prayers and of my father's appearance and manner when, as was his custom, he prayed extempore, including in his petitions many things of local and family interest. Like nearly all the rural clergy of that time, his principles and practices were of the low church or evangelical school.

While so brooding, reflecting and imagining as I sat over my fire, sleepy, too, as I usually was in those days, suddenly I felt a curious sensation of cold and then became aware of this thing, person or whatever it was passing me by. I dare say my hair stood on end. I certainly felt the most extraordinary sensation, as of a thousand needles driven into my head and such a sense of horror and fear as I never experienced before and hope I never shall again. I am ashamed to say, too, that I screamed, and with what a noise that scream rang through the long and lofty cavern, with its various galleries, can be imagined. I heard a great splashing in the seals' pool. It was my seals plunging into the water when they heard the scream. I ran down to the water, quaking in every limb, or rather I tumbled forward in that direction, for I remember falling more than once and afterward found my knees badly cut as well as the lower part of the palms of my hands near the wrists. In fact, I fled to my seals for protection against this thing. They were alive, real and natural, and I hastened to them quite instinctively, as one might to any human companionship from the dread of that which was uncanny and supernatural or what seemed such. But I had effectually frightened the seals. They had plunged through the water into their tunnel and disappeared. Presently, however, I saw them again in the opening of the tunnel, four or five black heads close together, with their round eyes, filled with wonder, glittering in the light shed upon them from my fire, which was blazing brightly at the time. A little before my alarm in that manner I had heaped up some fresh timber, which was now sending out a good blaze. I spoke to my seals, called them to me, and in a few seconds they came to me. The moment I laid my hands on their heads I felt calmed, and although I still quaked I felt my courage and self control returning. I knew I had need of them, for I was certain that I would see this thing again.

A Cheap Power.

And at the same time a reliable power are the points to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a constant watch on the engine is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense for engineer is a serious item against economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run all day without attention or fear of accident, and the cost is about two cents per hour for fuel per horse-power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade, and cannot take any more until they are realized on. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, Front and Alder streets, Portland, Oregon.

Garlick's Red Rose Potatoes.

Almost two years ago Mr. Garlick of Lost Mountain precinct, planted a few hills of the potato known as the California Red Rose, with the view of introducing it into this county if it proved to be a prolific bearer. His success was astonishing. He did not know but the "year" had something to do with it, so he tried it again last year. The result was even better than the first year. From his start of a few hills the year before he harvested about two tons last year, and had no trouble in disposing of nearly all he had to his neighbors at five cents per pound. He has placed a few sacks for sale with the Farmers' Mercantile Co., of Dungeness.

Notice for Publication.

United States Land Office,
Seattle, Wash., Feb. 9th, 1894.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the Act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled, "An Act for the sale of timber lands in the states of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington territory."

GEORGE E. MICHELL,

of Fairholm, county of Clallam, state of Washington has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 6425, for the purchase of the Lots 18, 23, 24, 25 and 26, of section No. 30, in township No. 30 n, range No. 9 west, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at Seattle, washington, on Tuesday, the first day of May, 1894.

He names as witnesses: M. J. Carrigan, Iver Estensen and Horace White of Fairholm, wash., and William Dedman of Gettysburg, wash.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office or or before said first day of May, 1894.

AN INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

An Adventurous Miner Runs Onto a Strange Prehistoric City.

Manville W. Cresworth, an English mining man well known throughout southwest Mexico, arrived at Mapimi, Mexico, recently from a long overland journey through the Sierra Madre mountains, his starting point being Culican, near the Pacific coast, in the state of Sinaloa. He claims to have visited a section of country never before visited by a white man of the present generation, and that he discovered a large and beautiful deserted city.

He told the correspondent that the wonderful city is situated about 80 miles west of Lake Colorado, in the recesses of the Sierra Madres. It occupies a basin about 10 miles long by eight miles wide. Perpendicular cliffs surround the basin on all sides, rising to a height of hundreds of feet. The only entrance to the city is through a deep canyon, which has a width of about 30 feet. Mr. Cresworth states that he stumbled onto the secret entrance quite by accident. He gives a vivid description of the deserted city.

The buildings, he says, are constructed of redstone blocks resembling granite. The business blocks are two and three stories in height and are entirely different in architectural design from the structures built by the Aztecs and Spaniards. The streets are very narrow, but are laid out in regular order. In the city is a small park which is overgrown with rare flowers and tropical vegetation. He entered the business houses and decaying residences, but found very little of value except some remarkable and strange ornaments made of stone.

He believes that the city was looted at the time that it was deserted, whenever that may have been. No records or writings of any kind were found, nor did he discover any skeleton that would give an idea as to the race of people who at one time inhabited the city. None of the natives of that section of country had ever heard of the deserted city. Mr. Cresworth is making diligent inquiry of them. Mr. Cresworth's story is very startling and remarkable, but it is believed by those to whom he has related his experiences. He will organize an expedition to make a thorough exploration of the city.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Trade and Shipping

Review of Seattle Market for the Past Week.

SEATTLE, June 7, 1894.

Exchanges at Seattle, Tacoma and Portland clearing houses to-day were:

	Clearances.	Balances.
Seattle	$ 75,943.28	$17,776.23
Tacoma	82,207.00	14,295.00
Portland	231,403.00	33,455.00

The past week has been a quiet one in trade matters, although somewhat better than the week previous. No goods outside of hay and grain are coming in, on account of high waters, which have blocked shipments from the East, and as telegraphic communication is also cut off, Eastern prices are not known, which accounts for the very small changes made this week.

There are no bananas in the markets, although a shipment is expected Thursday.

Cherries are in fairly good good demand, but the quality of the stock on hand is poor.

Home grown strawberries are coming in, although the price is high yet, being quoted at $6 per case.

Lemons are in good condition, and selling at $3.25@4.00.

The Most Successful Gas Engine

In the market is run without an electric spark battery. Theory is all very well, but the every day experience of constant practical use is the best test of merit. The man who runs a launch and finds himself drifting with the tide and wind because the "spark" fails to ignite the charge of gas in his engine; the man who prints a daily paper and fails to get it off on time because the "spark" again fails; the man who has fruit that is injured for lack of irrigation because "spark" fails in his engine that runs the pump not only such parties but others who have trouble from like causes should bear in mind that the Hercules gas and Gasoline engine is free from such difficulties. The ignition is simple and sure. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until these are realized on. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, Front and Alder streets, Portland, Oregon.

HAVE YOU TRIED DRUGS AND FAILED TO FIND A CURE FOR

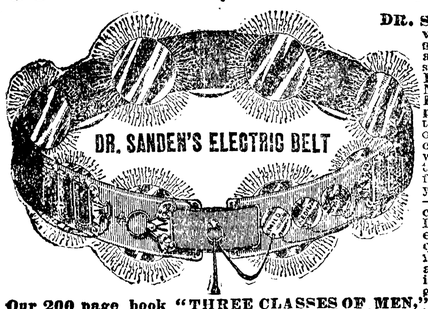
RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, KIDNEY, LIVER and BLADDER COMPLAINTS, DYSPEPSIA, LAME-BACK, &c.



DR. SANDEN'S ELECTRIC BELT with Electro Magnetic Suspensory will cure without medicine all of the above troubles. Those who suffer from Nervous Debility, Losses, Drains, Lost Manhood, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Poor Memory, all Female Complaints, and general Ill health, the effects of abuses, excesses, worry or exposure, will find relief and prompt cure in our marvelous invention, which requires but a trial to convince the most skeptical. In ignorance of effects you may have unduly drained your system of nerve force and vitality—which is electricity—and thus caused your weakness or lack of force. If you replace into your system the elements thus drained, which are required for vigorous strength, you will remove the cause and health, strength and vigor will follow at once. This is our plan and treatment, and we guarantee a cure or refund money. Our 200 page book "THREE CLASSES OF MEN," sent sealed, free. Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is no experiment as we have restored thousands to robust health and vigor, after all other treatments failed, as can be shown by hundreds of cases throughout this and other States, who would gladly testify, and from many of whom we have strong letters bearing testimony to their recovery after using our Belt.

WE HAVE CURED THESE—WE CAN CURE YOU!

CENERAL DEBILITY CURED.

San Francisco, Cal., August 14, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Before I used your belt I was troubled with lost vigor, vital weakness, and almost a complete loss of power. I would get up with a very tired feeling, bones aching, etc.; since using your belt I have had a new lease of life. I now enjoy life better than I have for ten years past. I have the utmost confidence in your treatment. You can publish this statement, also have others write or call on me. Truly yours, H. A. BOWEN, 26 and 28 Turk St.

RHEUMATISM AND LAMENESS CURED.

Portland, Oregon, April 15 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I got one of your belts two weeks ago for rheumatism, from which I suffered for several years. For the past six months I had not been able to work. Your belt has placed me in almost perfect health in the two weeks I have used it. I can walk comfortably, and feel like a new man generally.
M. E. HUGHES, Proprietor International Hotel.

NERVOUS DEBILITY—LOSS OF VIGOR.

Tacoma, Wash., October 21, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I have been using your Electric belt for general nervous debility, and to-day feel better than I have for five years. I have gained in vigor daily, and am strong in every part.
Yours gratefully, CHAS. LUETKA.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Portland Oregon, September 26, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Years of exposure and hard work, combined with the strain coming from the jar of an engine, gave me a severe case of lame back, from which I suffered for seven years. I was so bad that I could not bend my back. Was all doubled up with it. I bought one of your belts. It helped me inside of two days, and I continued to wear it for four months, being perfectly cured. That was two years ago, and I am as well to-day as I ever was in my life. I know your belt well, and I know lots of people who have been cured by it. Many others need it, and if they would try it they would find it the same as I did—the best remedy in the world. I am located here permanently, and will be glad to talk with any one who wants to know about it.
ROBERT BURRELL, Engineer Hotel Portland.

LOST VITALITY AND STRENGTH.

Everett, Wash, June 28, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Since wearing your belt I have been greatly benefited. I feel my old energy fast returning, and after a month's use of the belt I find myself twice as vigorous as before. My memory is now nearly perfect, and each day shows for the better. I feel much stronger than before using the belt. Yours truly, HENRY SCHULTZ.

THE DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT is a complete galvanic battery, made into a belt so as to be easily worn during work or street, and it gives soothing, prolonged currents which are instantly felt throughout all weak parts, or we forfeit $5,000. It has an Improved Electric Suspensory, the greatest boon ever given weak men, and we warrant it to cure any of the above weaknesses, and to enlarge shrunken limbs, or parts, or Money Refunded. They are graded in strength to meet all stages of weakness in young, middle-aged or old men, and will cure the worst cases in two or three months. Address for full information.

The apparition, as I was aware, had passed me from the right hand to the left as I sat—that is to say, coming from the interior of the cave and going toward the entrance, or, in other words, from the gallery in which was the tomb and going toward Curry's Window. "It will pass this way again, returning." I said to myself. I am not sure that I am speaking correctly when I say that I determined to watch for its reappearance. It would be perhaps more correct to say that my gaze was drawn in the direction of the fire by a horrible fascination. After a time, which seemed an age, but which was exactly 5 minutes and 27 seconds—how I am so exact as to the length of the interval I shall afterward explain—the thing reappeared, passing as before between the fire and the wall of the cavern. As on the first occasion I felt first a curious and uncanny sensation of cold; then a quite formless, dark shape, if a thing formless may be described as a shape, and surrounded by a mistlike, pale smoke, passed between the fire and the rock, moving now from the right to the left—that is, from my right hand to my left as I sat among the seals, and disappearing in the obscurity that filled the interior parts of the cavern. Its movement was perfectly even and regular. This time I did not scream, though I shook and trembled violently. Now at least I was thoroughly awake and alert, with all my faculties quite preternaturally active. The listless, semicomatose condition in which I had now been sunk for so many days disappeared. It came on again later, however, as I shall presently describe. Between six and seven minutes afterward the thing passed again and so continued to pass for some hours, always seeming to take a longer time to do the distance from the fire into the interior and back again than that which lay between the fire and the entrance of the cavern. The apparition continued to present generally the same appearance, save that the darkness which was in the midst of the luminous haze seemed to be more distinct. Sometimes I thought it presented the outlines of a man, and once I imagined that I made out clearly the head and shoulders. I noticed, too, toward the end of this period of time that the central darkness was not quite dark and distinguished some faint indications of color.

I was now so far recovered and had grown so accustomed to the apparition that I determined to snatch a burning fagot from the fire and kindle for myself a new fire in the neighborhood of my seals. I saw that if I did not do so, and that soon, my fire would presently be burned out and that I would not be able to kindle another, for I was aware that I had used up for my first attempt to kindle a flame all the loose gunpowder in my pockets. Inspired with a desperate courage by this horrible thought—the thought that I might henceforward be compelled to live not only in cold, but in darkness—I determined, come what might of it, to save my fire. Accordingly, waiting till the apparition had passed on its way into the interior of the cavern, I hastened forward and returned with a burning ember—I had previously brought some timber from that pocket filled with driftwood. So I endeavored to kindle a fire with the aid of the ember. This attempt failed, and seeing the fire now very low, regardless of all consequences, I rushed forward again, returned with three or four small embers, holding the still unignited ends of these in my hand, and keeping their red points together. This time I succeeded, and in spite of the presence of the apparition I felt a singular sense of joy and satisfaction as my driftwood caught fire and sent up a bright blaze.

I was still desperately frightened. While manipulating my firewood the sticks frequently fell from my hands, which shook as if I were suffering from ague. Yet, frightened as I was, I was determined to do battle with even it for my fire. To be alone in the darkness—alone save for the apparition—seemed more frightful than anything that might befall me in keeping my fire alive. Truly I was at death's door; but, like that old Greek hero of whom we used to read at school, I was determined to die at least "in the light" and see this thing, rather than in the darkness and altogether at its mercy. I now looked steadily at the place where it had been moving to and fro, but though I looked a long time I saw nothing of it. Then I began to think, not that the whole scene had been an evil dream, but that it was an ocular delusion, an affection of the optic nerve and an imagination resulting from the low fever that preyed upon me, accompanied by that unusual lethargy and sense of physical and mental depression.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE GHOST TAKES AN UNEXPECTED SHAPE.

I did not see the apparition for some days after that and began to entertain the hope that it would not again come to plague me, but at midnight on the fourth day it appeared again, and this time not as an unshaped blot of darkness surrounded by mist, but exhibiting a very distinct shape—the shape of a man. As on the first occasion a sudden premonitory chill, like the passing of an ice cold wind, struck cold and terror alike into the very marrow of my bones. I knew now what was coming. Will it this time, I thought, pass by me or interfere with me in my new place or keep to its old beat? I kept my eyes fixed upon the wall of rock where my old fireplace had been and which was faintly lit by the illumination of my new fire. Then presently I saw the figure of a tall man striding noiselessly along, proceeding just as that shapeless blot had done from the interior of the cavern and moving toward the entrance. The outline of his form was perfectly distinct, the colors and the lines within the form were blurred and dim. So far as I could judge, in the nervous condition which I was thrown into by the reappearance of the phantom, the figure wore a mantle and a kilt reaching to the knees, the legs being otherwise bare. In a horrible condition of alarm, but still exercising over myself a certain self control, I awaited its return. After what seemed to be the usual lapse of time it repassed along the illuminated wall of rock and as silently as before. On this occasion either the outlines and colors were more clear and visual or the fact that I was not now taken by surprise enabled me to observe the phenomenon with less agitation and alarm. This man, if man it was, wore his hair long; wore also a beard. His mantle was red, and on his breast I saw something glittering.

In this manner it continued to pass and repass, while I remained as if glued to the spot on which I sat. Though the fire was burning now very low, I either forgot to feed it or did not offer to stir through my apprehensions and fear of attracting the phantom in my direction, I forget now which. So low did the fire fall that at length I with difficulty could distinguish the moving shape as it passed and repassed. One of my seals crept up to me and uttered one of its cheerfulest and friendliest cries.

The noise made by this poor animal, utterly unconscious apparently of any dread presence in the cavern, recalled me to myself. I laid a little fresh driftwood on the fire, and when the blaze shot up saw clearly once more the apparition moving from the entrance toward the interior—from my right hand to my left. I waited for its return, but it did not return. I looked at my watch. It was a little after a quarter to 3 a. m. When the ghost had commenced to walk, I did not know, save that it was somewhere about midnight. I remained awake for hours after this and at last fell into a broken slumber, haunted by disagreeable images, so that I was pleased to be again awake. Next night when the hands of my watch approached the midnight hour I sat up observant, though alarmed and trembling. Of course I apprehended that this dread elder tenant of the cavern, in spite of his past innocuous behavior, would at some time challenge my right to be there or in one way or another attack me. Now, though I don't wish to boast of my courage, and indeed I believe it is no proof of a chicken heart to be afraid of a ghost, yet, having had many hours to reflect over this singular phenomenon, I was determined, come what might, to resist it, at least not to permit this man, for indeed a man he seemed, to frighten me out of my senses and then destroy me at his leisure. I knew that ghosts, if any such existed, were insubstantial, not to be injured by weapons and presenting no purchase even to the bravest hands, yet it never occurred to me that this ghost could have been of that insubstantial nature. Though he made no sound whatsoever beyond what I presently recognized to be the mere figment of my imagination, creating for the phantom a footfall whenever its foot seemed to touch the hard ground, yet otherwise it seemed perfectly substantial, a solid mass of apparently human flesh. It quite concealed the face of the rock as it passed by, obliterating in its passage the illuminated points and projections there, which instantly shone out again after it had gone by. More than that, I remembered having distinctly seen its shadow. I don't say that these reasonings passed through my mind then, and I only refer to them now to justify the conviction which I entertained that this being was not a ghost in the ordinary sense of the word, but a substantial thing that might lay hold on me and drag me by the hair through the cavern, perhaps to its den. I never doubted that it was a thing which could hold me, and also upon which I might lay hold, and with which I might struggle, and possibly, God helping me, overcome. Indeed I did not forget my prayers while firmly resolving in my own mind not to be destroyed without a struggle. I prayed incessantly, and, though I felt greater calm, self control and even strength as the result of my prayers, did not observe that the use of the sacred names exercised the least influence on the apparition. It is true indeed that my murmuring of those holy names was quite inaudible. I felt that to stand up and in the name of Jesus Christ bid the specter go would be an act of war, so to speak, and that as long as it should leave me alone and not come nearer it would be more prudent not to proceed to such extremities. This was no doubt weak, but allowances must be made for my very helpless condition, immured here, far from men, in this tomb, with a fellow tenant of that horrible character. So far the ghost had not interfered with me. On this the third appearance of the specter its shape, outline and the interior lines and colors were completely and distinctly visible. I saw now pass before me, with a long, steady and even stride, not indeed the tallest man I have ever seen, but among the tallest. I have never seen nor ever cared to see one of those unfortunate human beings who are hawked about the world as a spectacle and a show on account of their prodigious size. The man who now almost exactly at 12 o'clock began to pass and repass, a few yards away from me, was as tall as one of the taller of the Dublin policemen, of proportions corresponding with his height and indeed very finely formed. The something which I had formerly noticed as glittering upon his breast I now saw to be a round wheel, seemingly of gold, but why the man wore a wheel on his breast I could not at first understand. After he had passed and repassed a few times I discovered that it was a brooch. I could see the two ends of the pin of this brooch, one knobbed on the man's right shoulder and the other pointed on his left. They went straight across his chest, of course piercing the mantle and keeping it close to his figure at this point. His head was quite bare. His hair, yellowish or rather sandy, neither lustrous nor curling, fell on his shoulders. His beard and mustache, the beard especially, were not exactly red, but more inclined to red than the hair of his head. His mantle was a dark crimson, with loose threads, apparently of gold thread or thread stained to that resemblance, flattening on the edges. What I had at first imagined to be a kilt I now saw was only the lower part of a shirt or loose tunic gathered at the waist by a dark red belt and falling thence in loose folds to his knees. It was striped vertically, white and red. He wore shoes of some brown or dun color, but with clasps of some description of metal which I could just perceive shining. The light seldom fell on his feet. I could not perceive that he wore any stockings. When he went toward the interior from the entrance of the cave, I could see distinctly a short sword, which hung down quite vertically on his left thigh. The scabbard seemed to be made of some reddish kind of wood. It was fastened with bright headed rivets and was shod at either end with a substance which looked like gold, but was brighter. The handle of the sword looked like ivory, but was rather duller in hue than ivory should be. Otherwise he was unarmed. In fact, altogether he presented the appearance of a warrior of ancient times. His right arm always hung down by his side. The left hand was passed under the mantle and lay on his breast, having hold upon something there, I fancy upon the strap of his sword—what antiquarians, I think, call a baldrick. His head was bent a little forward, and his shoulders were slightly rounded. At all events his gait was not quite erect. His attitude was that of a man pondering profoundly upon some intricate problem and pacing to and fro quite immersed in calculations and ruminations concerning its solution. Though I watched him pass and repass at least a hundred times, his carriage and mode of holding his hands never varied in the least from what I have described. His bearing, I say, was that of a man deeply reflecting, but then there was no sign or token of reflection whatsoever in his face. There was truly no speculation in those eyes. Otherwise his face suggested life rather than death, for it was of a good color, somewhat ruddy in the cheeks and well bronzed otherwise. The eyes alone, so wide open, staring and lusterless, suggested death. As to his age, he seemed to be about 40. I may add, at the risk of being too minute, that on his brooch were five good sized eyes of glass or some substance duller than glass, and that on his left temple there was a scar running from the roots of his hair to the outer extremity of the corresponding eyebrow. I had plenty of time and opportunity to make these observations, for after his second appearance the ghost continued to walk every night exactly at 12 o'clock and ceased to walk at half past 2. Invariably also his walking terminated in the interior portion of the cave and in that gallery at the end of which was the strange tomb which I have described.

Although the reader will of course attribute this apparition wholly to the diseased state of my nerves and imagination, and although such is my own belief, too, in a sense, yet it is singular that the apparition, supposing such to be its origin, should have assumed exactly this form and garb. I never saw a man dressed in that style. I had never even seen a picture of a man so dressed, for although the flowing mantle, long hair, straight hanging sword and kilt form the usual get up of antique warriors on the stage or in pictures, the big brooch was quite strange and novel even to my imagination. Such antique warriors, too, in pictures or on the stage, appear gartered to the knee and always carry a shield on their arms or strapped to their backs. This figure had no shield, apparently no stockings and certainly no garters. Consequently, if the apparition sprang from my imagination, and from the imagination projected itself into visuality in this remarkable manner, my imagination was able to produce something that my eyes had never seen either in the world of reality or in the world of art and something that the imagination had never at any time consciously conceived at all. Another singular circumstance is this: I knew that this cave was the cave of Curry, the smuggler. I had already associated the idea of the tomb which I had discovered with him. Now, my notion of a smuggler was that which is commonly entertained by all boys and young men—viz, a stout, strong, burly man of a seafaring type, wearing top boots and pistols stuck in his belt. Having had plenty of time for reflection, the thought of Curry, the smuggler, in this highly conventional form—that is, the melodramatic smuggler—had been frequent in my mind, and since I discovered the tomb the notion that Curry's ghost might haunt the cavern had very frequently arisen in my numerous broodings and cogitations. I did not indeed seriously entertain the thought of Curry's ghost inhabiting the cave, but the fancy or idea, as ideas will, had oftentimes passed idly through my mind. Yet the apparition, when it did come, was as unlike a smuggler as it was unlike a nineteenth century man of fashion. I, too, am now convinced—indeed I did not leave that cave without the conviction—that this specter was the creature of my imagination, wrought up by low diet and solitude to a preternatural degree of potency and activity. But of this, too, I am convinced—that the imagination in some persons and under abnormal circumstances has a power which few people suspect, and unconsciously to ourselves is fed and sustained by a kind of knowledge and by forms of experience which never came within the range of the imagining person. Before concluding this tale I shall relate something which seems to provide some faint clew to my very remarkable preternatural experiences in Curry's cave.

After the specter's second appearance he continued to walk for five nights, beginning and ending his mysterious beat or promenade at exactly the same time each night, and taking exactly the same course on each occasion. By degrees I began to be so accustomed to his presence that I sometimes even broiled and ate my fish while the ghost went to and fro, and once I lessened by nearly half the distance which separated us in order to observe him and his habiliments more closely and accurately. On this occasion his eyes seemed on a nearer view to present so terrible an expression that the moment he passed I withdrew swiftly to the proximity of my fire and my seals and did not again venture one yard away from the opposite wall of the cave.

The excitement caused by the apparition had roused me to a considerable degree from the lethargy into which I had been before fast sinking and indeed almost past recall. Indeed but for the ghost I think I should have died in that cave, so stupid, sleepy and indifferent to all things was I fast growing. The ghost at least had the merit of keeping me rather broad awake for some days and all my faculties on the alert. Otherwise I might have succumbed before the arrival of the relief which was now about to make such a difference both in my condition of mind and body and in my prospects. The excitement had this almost immediate good effect — that when the first intensity of it had passed away I ate rather more broiled fish than I had done for many days before the coming of the apparition. So when the relief did arrive I was in a condition to utilize it.

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day.
