FOU OF GOLD.

Rich Placer Mine Discovered in the HEART OF THIS CITY.

A Ten Acre Placer Claim Located—An Assay in a Seattle Laboratory Shows the Samples to be Quite Rich—On the Eve of a Mining Excitement.

Port Angeles is on the eve of a mining excitement, which promises wonderful developments of this precious metal.

A mining claim was recently filed in the heart of this city, by Jerry Twohig, covering an area of ten acres. Samples were taken to the laboratory at Seattle, where an assay was made, which shows the gravel to be quite rich.

Other assays will be made from gravel taken from the claim and if the average shows up as well as from the first sample, it will, no doubt, prove a veritable bonanza.

The following from the Seattle Press-Times, furnishes an interesting review of the discovery:

A fact which has been dorment for several months was brought to light yesterday at the assaying laboratory of John C. Scharlin where were being reduced samples of gravel taken from a placer claim located in the immediate center of the business district of the city of Port Angeles, Clallam county.

TEN ACRES LOCATED.

Jerry Twohig, an Irishman, located ten acres in a quiet way and filed his claim among the other miscellaneous filings in the court house of Port Angeles, without exciting comment. Yet Mr. Twohig was evidently bent on business, and now has excellent proof to contest the filing for record on the expiration of ninety days allowed for protest.

HEAVY ASSAY.

The placer claim takes in the court house of Port Angeles and other business houses, the test pits which have been sunk being within the central city limits. Of the results of the assay T. D. McLeod, mining expert, in partnership with Scharlin, says:

"The placer district evidently contains very rich deposits of gold, the samples of the gravel brought to our office having shown up good in color. The first assay was made a few months ago and showed $1.30 to the square yard, being 70 cents gold and 60 cents silver. This is particularly good, but later we have assayed $1.50 to to the square yard, and in view of the fact that the earth is grit gravel it should pay well.

'There are placer claims worked at 3 cents with profit, and 20 cents is considered good, and as this location of Mr. Twohig's has a creek running through it the advantages are considerable."

TESTING MORE SAMPLES.

Twohig lately brought more average samples from Port Angeles, and yesterday they were being assayed. The result will give the best evidence as to whether the claim can be allowed as a mining property. Considerable litigation will be involved in any case, but the locator seems determined to carry the matter through.

JERRY GETTING EVEN.

Jerry Twohig has a twofold satisfaction in the discovery of what he believes will prove his fortune's bonanza. Beyond the filthy lucre to be acquired, he will indulge in the delight of outwitting the Angeles boomers. With a typical Irish smile he says:

"They played me for a sucker, and I paid $240 on a lot that won't fetch me a nickle. Now I'll have my money's worth if I can only work my claim to suit myself and make the townsite people laugh the other way."

The general legal opinion in regard to the matter is, however, that mineral claims cannot be located on government land.

Destroyed by Fire and Again at Work.

The Price Baking Powder Company of Chicago, which is known throughout the country for the superior excellence of its Baking Powder, met with a serious loss on the morning of May 18th, in the nearly total destruction by fire of its factories and offices. No sooner had the flames been subdued than the work of restoration was commenced, and the company by prudent foresight, having stored in outside warehouses duplicate machinery, labels and supplies of raw material in preparation for any emergency was enabled by energetic management to resume manufacturing within a very few days after the fire, thereby causing its customers a trifling delay in the filing of their orders. Had the company not been so prepared the delay would have been very serious since it would have required months of time to get new machinery.

It is now forty years since the goods manufactured by this company were first placed on the market, to Dr. Price being due the destinction of having prepared the first can of Cream of Tartar Baking Powder ever manufactured in any country. It was a great discovery superceding as it did the old method of using cream of tartar and soda separately, to say nothing of salaratus, with which the biscuit of early days was embittered.

The Price Company has no connections whatever with any other baking powder company or manufacturer, notwithstanding representations to the contrary made by other manufacturers whose sole aim is to deceive the public and borrow the good name and fame acquired by the Price Cream Baking Powder, which is known all over the world as the purest and "most perfect made."

THE STATE BUILDINGS.

The Most Interesting Group AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Washington's Splendid Exhibit the Admiration of the Visitors—It Displays its Resources to Advantage—The State Will Reap Lasting Benefits From its Stroke of Enterprise.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 20, 1893.

[Special Correspondence.]—One of the most interesting features of the World's Columbia Exposition is the group of state buildings at the north end of the grounds. Here can be found a resting place. where everyone is made welcome and the different states and territories of the nation vie with one another in extending hospitalities to their numerous visitors. On account of this group of state homes being so near the Fifty-seventh street entrance, that entrance has become the chief entrance to the grounds and located nearest to that entrance are the buildings of South Dakota, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, Missouri and others of the important states.

Immediately adjoining the site of South Dakota is the home of one of the new states, Washington, and as was remarked by one of the New York dailies recently, this building and its contents is one of the surprises of the Exposition. Many people have had difficulty heretofore in even locating the State of Washington on the maps but that difficulty will be forever overcome by the splendid showing made by the new state at the World's Fair. This is only one of a great many such compliments being bestowed on the state by the people and the press, who have become informed of the state's greatness and possibilities through the showing made at the World's Fair. The building is peculiarly unique, and characteristic of a great timber state. The first thing to attract attention is the huge fir logs forming the foundation and the first fifteen feet of the superstructure. Ten of these logs are 125 feet long and range from 47 to 30 inches in diameter, and these dimensions are by no means the full size of the logs, as they show marks of having been squared and worked up for use in the building. Then the large flag staff, 205 feet above the ground, made from a single fir log, shows the resources of Puget Sound timber for spars and bridge materials. The panels of the building show the heavy timbers polished, and with the stone arch and steps show that the new state of Washington is certainly well supplied with excellent building materials. In the interior can be seen the different varieties of native wood used in heavy arches and fine carvings. The building was designed after a complete study of the work of timber building races, in the old English, Swiss and mediæval French records. The contest to settle the selection of a design was participated in by twenty-two architects, all residents of Washington, and the materials, including the logs, heavy timbers, flooring, siding, lath, shingles, sash, doors, panels, and finishings, were all contributed by the lumbermen of the state, and the quarrymen contributed the stone work, so that all of the timbers were brought from the state of Washington. This matter of transportation was no small undertaking, inasmuch as the curves in the mountain divisions of the railroads precluded taking timbers longer than 125 feet, which made it necessary to cut the flag staff and splice it before raising it on the grounds. The walls of the interior are covered with paintings of Washington scenery and there is installed in the building a complete array of state's agricultural, horcicultural, fishing, mining, forestry and other resources.

The ground plan of the building is in the shape of a modified Greek cross and is arranged to give about 30,000 square feet of floor space. There are four towers, one of which is 100 feet high, and the other three are each sixty-five feet high. From the highest tower can be secured a view of the entire northern portion of the grounds.

Many of the older states have made expensive preparations for the entertainment of their guests and have fitted up their building, as reception or club houses. Some of them have many collections of interesting historical relics, and only a few like Illinois, California, Iowa and Washington have made exhibits of theor resources on an extensive scale in their state buildings.

The reception rooms in the Washington State Building consists of one reading room flanked in by two reception rooms, one for the ladies and another for the gentlenen. They are modestly furnished. The whole building and exhibit of Washington has the appearance of an effort to reap a practical and far-reaching benefit for the new State of Washington.

A CLUB HOUSE

Will Be Built at Lake Southerland By Members of the Rainier Club.

The visit of J. W. Dodge, secretary of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce and Walter Ely, secretary of the Rainier Club, also of that city, in company with Colonel Coolican and Mayor Smith, of this city to the lakes, will result, doubtless, in a club house being built there, which will be maintained by the Rainier club of Seattle.

These gentlemen express themselves enraptured with the natural beauties of the lakes, and the sublimity and grandeur of the mountain scenery stretching beyond. It was, indeed, a pleasurable surprise to them as they caught the first glimpse of the lakes, so delightfully, and so romantically nestled in the foothills of the Olympics, unfolding to their gaze a picture of unsurpassing loveliness.

It is understood that negotiations, which are pending, will soon be consummated in the purchase by these gentlemen of 300 acres of land, with a water frontage of a mile on lake Southerland. The property will be improved, and club, boating and bathing houses built, which will, doubtless, become the property of the Rainier club and the Rod and Gun club of Seattle.

During July twenty-five or thirty members of the Rainier Club will visit the lakes for a month's outing. The attrations of these lakes will certainly make them popular and famous far and near with tourists and outing parties, as they afford opportunities and advantages sought by these parties. The prospects are excellent for there being an unusually large number of visitors there this year from all over the northwest, which will make this delightful spot a scene of life and activity for many months to come.

TIDE LAND COMMISSIONERS

Petitioned to Hold a Session in Port Angeles.

The following significant petition which has been numerously signed, will be presented to the state land commissioners at Olympia:

To the honorable state land commissioners of the State of Washington:—

We, the undersigned applicants to purchase tide land in front of Port Angeles, respectfully represent that owing to the large number of contests in connection with said tide lands, to be heard and determined by your honorable board, hearing of same in Olympia would necessitate great expense and loss of time to litigants and claimants.

Wherefore we respectfully petition your board to hold a session in Port Angeles in the near future at a time convenient to yourselves, for the purpose of passing upon all matters connected with said tide lands. We guarantee a suitable building and conveniences for that purpose and all extra expense occasioned thereby. Signed by Lewis Levy and others.

Visit From Victoria Yacht Club.

The Victoria Colonist says:— The Port Angeles race project is fully alive now and promises well. J. G. Elliot, of the Victoria club, is in communication with the Port Angeles club in regard to the date, and he has recently received the following communication;

PORT ANGELES, June 9, 1893.

VICTORIA YACHT CLUB.

GENTLEMEN: I have been requested by the members of the Angeles Yacht Club to extend an invitation to your club to visit this city at any date when it will be most convenient for you, and a suitable cup has been ordered and will be presented to the fastest boat in your fleet. We will endeavor to make your visit a pleasant one; your presence with your yachts is especially desirable at this time as it will add impetus to the movement now on foot to regularly organize a club in this city. The Postmasters General.

The postmaster general's department was established on Sept. 22, 1789, and the first holder of the office was Samuel Osgood, of Massachusetts. It may be added that Massachusetts has participated actively in the filling of cabinet posts, and enjoyed a century ago the political distinction which now appears to belong to Ohio. The post of postmaster general has usually been filled from the "border" states. Pierce went to Tennessee for his first postmaster general. Buchanan chose one from Kentucky. Lincoln appointed a Maryland man. Grant went to Maryland and Hayes to Tennessee. Garfield had in Thomas L. James a New Yorker, but since then the claims of the west have generally been considered. Mr. Cleveland's first postmaster general, Vilas, was from Wisconsin; his second, Dickinson, was from Michigan. John Wanamaker is the first Pennsylvanian to hold that office since the establishment of the federal government.—New York Sun.

Vaccine by Carrier Pigeons.

At a sitting of the Academie de Medecine Surgeon Major Strœbel gave a description of the method he has devised for insuring the safe carriage of vaccine by carrier pigeons. The possibility of being able to send vaccine into an infested town or fortress where smallpox may have broken out is perhaps considered of little importance by ourselves, but on the continent the matter is not one to be entirely overlooked. Dr. Strœbel, by practical experiment, has shown that, with the plan he adopts, each pigeon can be made to carry six small tubes of vaccine, and to travel considerable distances without any fear of the tubes becoming damaged.—London Public Opinion.

Description of a Text.

How many people know that the monument that Laban and Jacob set up near the borders of Canaan and called "Mizpah," or a lookout, was erected in suspicion rather than love? The literal meaning was this: "The Lord watch between thee and me when we are absent one from the other, and see that you are not up to some new trick as soon as my back is turned."

So when it is inscribed in an engagement ring it might mean, "The Lord watch and see that you do not flirt when we are absent one from the other."

Those who use the text are sometimes wiser than they know.—Chicago Journal.

The Origin of the Concord Grape.

A recent account makes the Concord grape a chance seedling found by Mr. Bull, of Concord, Mass. But Mr. Bull once told the writer of this that he sowed seeds of what he thought a good kind, and it was from one of these seedlings that the Concord sprang.—Meehan's Monthly.

IS IT A CLASS TAX?

Many of those seeking where to attack the "income tax" are strenously urging that it would be class legislation, therefore undemocratic and something that should not be tolerated by a Democratic party. This self satisfying statement sounds alright, in a general way, but it will hardly hold water. By the same sort of reasoning any kind of tax except a head or universal poll tax must also be construed to be a "class" tax. In all of our large cities, the value of business property is so high that none but the rich can own it, therefore according to the reasoning of our Republican friends, it is unjust to assess it, as the tax falls on a small proportion of the people. By the same conclusion, it is not fair to levy a tax on the great palaces and monuments of brick and stone in Chicago's business marts—they are owned by the few. And thus, descending the scale, we arrive at the logical conclusion, that the only fair tax would be a head tax, at so much per head for man, woman and child, without any regard to the ability to pay. The position is so utterly absurd that it needs but to be stated that its defenders may be laughed at.

It is not the man that is taxed, it is the income, just as it is the building and not the man that is taxed under the present manner. The income tax is no nearer a class tax than any property tax, and it is much fairer than internal revenue taxes are in this, as in every other respect.

The ability to pay a tax has always been taken into consideration by the people in levying taxes. It remained for a Republican party in the United States in paying off its election obligations to the "protected" barons, to entirely disregard this principle with its exclusive tariff tax, which falls almost as hard upon the poor man as upon the rich. Under the nefarious McKinley tariff law the poor man, with the same sized family, bears almost as much of the burdens of government as the rich one.

There must be a change. The McKinley law must go, and the government, in consequence, will need more revenue. Let those who are able, bear their share, at least, of the burden.

WAR ON THE TARIFF.

The Louisville Courier-Journal is one of the very ablest and soundest papers in the United States, but it mistakes the temper of the American people if it thinks they will stand the re-imposition of the tariff on sugar, tea and coffee. It is true such a tariff was a revenue tariff which was removed by the Republicans solely to give excuse for the maintaining and raising of the tariff on the woolen and iron schedules, and it is also true that the people understanding this retired the Republican party from authority, but this does not alter the facts as they are. The tariff on these necessities, while it was certainly a less burden than the present arrangement, is, nevertheless, not an equal tax. The poor man, by it, paid much more relatively than the rich. This much of the Republican stump speeches was literally true, it relatively otherwise.

It is urged by the Courier-Journal, that of "the two evils, choose the least," and quite correctly claims the revenue tariff on sugar, coffee and tea to be an evil of less magnitude than the McKinley bill

But why choose either evil? What is the necessity for a tax that is admitedly unfair? There is no need for any such action. If congress will carry out the policy of the administration no step backward need be taken, and the McKinley tariff can be revolutionized. That is: Repeal the sugar bounty; raise the limit of "greenback" circulation to $400,000,000 by issuing $65,000,000 more treasury notes; enact a graduated income tax; repeal the Sherman act, and coin whatever amount of silver as can be agreed upon into money, and reform the pension list. This will leave the coast clear for a radical reduction of the tariff, and no new customs taxes need be levied.

The Democratic party has declared war on the tariff. There should be no hesitation nor a backward step. The war must go on to a successful finish.

ABOUT THE M'KINLEY BILL.

According to the latest bulletin issued by the government bureau of statistics, the commodity exports of the United States have fallen off 25 per cent during the last six months. This is also a continuation of a constant decline since the McKinley bill has commenced to operate.

It does not require a political economist to conclude at once that this means that Americrn interest is being paid in gold, instead of beef, corn, cotton ahd wheat. If England would buy the surplus agricultural products of this country, there would be a marked shrinkage in our gold exportations.

This goes to show that the McKinley law has had not a little to do with the hard times in this country in more ways than one. The tariff and financial matters are so closely related that any variation in the former is easily distinguishable in financial circles.

The McKinley law must go. We cannot have a sound basis for "sound" financial legislation until the tariff is shorn of its partisan "protection" features.

BANK EXAMINER FLYNN.

The president has recognized one of the best Democrats in the state of Washington, in the appointment of S. R. Flynn, of Spokane, bank examiner, with headquarters at Spokane. As an orator and editorial writer Mr. Flynn has few equals in the northwest. Mr. Flynn lead the fight for Grover Cleveland in the state convention which selected delegates to Chicago and was one of the the strongest supporters of Hon. James Hamilton Lewis for the nomination for governor in the late state convention at Olympia.

Mr. Flynn is a warm friend of Clallam county. His appointment is gratifying to many friends of the brilliant young journalist in these parts.

ST. LOUIS merchants have passed resolutions requesting th repeal of the Sherman act. St. Louis is a free coinage city, but is opposes to the "free ze out" policy of silver men who have determined to retain the Sherman act until free coinage is granted.

THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER gets in with another scoop on reservation news, which goes to show that if you want the news, you must read the leading paper. Whatever interests the people interests THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER.

OF course the Post-Intelligencer opposes an income tax. An income tax might make a greater reduction of the tariff possible.

THE CITY REDUCES

Expense of Operating the Electric Light Plant.

THE MANAGER REMOVED.

Want Saloons Closed Sunday—Favor Purchasing Lot and Building—Telephone Franchise Asked For—Investigating Committee Postpone Trial of City Clerk until July 12.

The city council held their regular meeting Wednesday evening. The mayor being absent councilman Rose was called to the chair. Councilmen Beam, Carver, Reed, Ristine and Krueger were present.

A petition was read by the clerk praying that saloons be closed on Sundays. The petition was signed by quite a number of women. It was referred to the ordinance committee.

A notice was served on the city council by Frank P. Fisher and Geo. Fend warning the city not to infringe on their tide land rights by extending streets across such property. Referred to the city attorney.

A petition was read which requested that the council build a side walk on Valley street from Second to Sixth streets. Referred the sidewalk committee.

A communication was read from councilmen Ristine and Metcalfe, of the electric light committee. The nature of the document was that the managment of the electric light plant be changed. Lineman Hall had agreed to do the work for $90, the cost of the present managment being $125. per month. The committee favored the acceptance of Hall's proposition.

Councilman Beam under a minority report favoring the retention of the manager, as the supervision of the plant had been under his direction, and as he was thoroughly acquainted with the details connected therewith, and as a change at the present time might involve complication and loss.

Councilman Kreuger favored laying the matter over for a week, to permit o a more thorough investigation so as the council could clearly familarize itse with the question at issue.

Councilman Ristine stated that the committe had had two weeks in which to inquire into the matter, which was, according to his judgment amply sufficient.

The majority report was submitted to a vote and approved, which, as stated in the foregoing provides for the removal of the electric light manager and material reduction of the operating expenses of the plant. The matter of providing for the operating of the plant was referred to the electric light committee.

The street committee submitted a report in favor of awarding a contract to B. F. Seely to slash 16 acres in the eastern portion of the city at $6.50 per acre.

The committee appointed on purchasa lot and building for city purposes, reported in favor of purchasing the lot and building on the corner of Oak and First streets for a consideration of $1,000.

A communication from H. A. Clark, Puget Sound superintendent of the Sunset Telephone Company, was read, in which said H. A. Clark requested that the council pass an ordinance providing for a franchise to maintain and operate a system of telephone in the city of Port Angeles. The matter was referred to the ordinance committee.

Ordinance No. 183 was referred to the ordinance committe, city engineer and city attorney for examination and to make any corrections necessary.

Ordinance No. 125 providing for the creation of a port warden and proscribing his duties and the compensation he shall receive thereof was passed.

The report of the committee appointed to investigate charges against Clerk Humphries was laid over until July 12th for further action.

Two hydrants will be established at the southwest corner of Valley and Front and southwest corner of Oak and Front streets.

A motion was made that the Silver League, a newly organized society, be given use of the council room free of charge. The motion prevailed. The council adjourned.

An Old Timer Here.

Samuel Brooks, of Sequim, was in the city Wednesday. Mr. Brooks is one of the pioneers of Clallam county having served several terms on the board of county commissioners in the days of yore. He is one of the old time democrats that may be classed as one of the "Old Guard," who have so long done battle for the principles of Jefferson.

Mr. Brooks reports that the outlook for good crops at Sequim was never better than this year.

Clallam Bay News.

Clallam Bay Record.

During the week about ten new settlers have passed through town, mostly to the Dicky country.

Mrs. C. Snyder is getting lumber sent down from here to Sale river for a new dwelling house on her claim at that place.

Miss Phrona Carpenter and Miss Nellie Hodgkin returned last Friday to their home at the Sekiou from Port Townsend.

Arthur McNally made final proof on his homstead, near Pysht, on Monday before George W. O'Brien, U. S. Commissioher.

Miss Libby Goodwin, of this place, has taken a claim on Dicky lake and returned on Saturday from a visit to that locality.

A social dance took place at Fairservice hall last Friday evening and a similar gay and festive event on Monday evening.

Road Supervisor Brown, of Beaver, was in town Monday, getting supplies for his road camp at Burnt mountain. He now has a large crew at work on the Clallam-Beaver road.

Three tons of powder arrived here on a schooner Monday which will be used in blasting on the Beaver road. It is stored in a little house on the sand spit near the mouth of the river.

At the school election held on Monday afternoon P. J. Peterson was elected director for the term of three years and P. Hedley re-elected clerk for one year. Sixty-four votes were polled.

County Commissioner Lamb has been stopping in town for several days. He is looking after the county road work between here and Beaver and his time will be occupied for some weeks between here and the road camp at Burnt mountain.

Schuyler Fox, a fairly educated, well informed and remarkably thrifty Neah Bay Indian, brought a cargo of 208 sealskins to Seattle in his own schooner last week. He killed the seals off the Flattery rocks within the last few months, and it is said that he has been offered $12 apiece for the skins.

Work was commenced last Monday on the building of a sash and door factory. The project is in charge of Thomas Benson who has secured a bonus of land for a site from the Kellogg land company on condition that the factory will be in operation next month. The location is on the river bank facing the bridge on Quillayute street. Mr. Benson expects to push the work along and says the factory will be in operation in July. Doors, sashes, mouldings, etc , will be manufactured and the new industry will be useful and valuable one for the town. The main building will be 40x60 feet, of one story. A dry house will be added to it, later on.

A state land cruiser who has been out through the west end of the county selecting vacant tracts of land came in from Quillayute Wednesday and departed for Seattle. He says that in the two new townships in Jefferson county which are open for filings this month there are thirty-five thousand acres of vacant land. He has also found considerable vacant land in one or two townships in the Quillayute country which were surveyed years ago. He says the state has no desire to disturb or bother actual settlers in the possession of their claims, and where land has inadvertently been filed upon, which belongs to a settler, the proper officers have released the land without cost to the settler.

THE SEAL HUNTER

And the Reward of His Exciting Pursuit.

INDIANS ADEPT HUNTERS

The Makah Indians and Their Sealing Fleet—The Result of Three Weeks Cruise—A Trim Sealing Schooner—Whale Hunting Another Considerable Source of Revenue.

"Klahowya, shiko!"

"Klahowya."

Thus did two tillicums salute each other.

The one was a well-known westender, the other Clohosth, a Makah Indian, on his way home at Neah Bay, from a trip to Seattle, whither he had been with his brothers and friends in the schooner Amateur, of which his son, Schuyler Colfax, is captain, to dispose of a catch of sealskins.

In reply to a question Clohosth stated that the number of skins dispose of was 208, the result of a three weeks' cruise.

The Amateur is eighteen tons register; she carries eight canoes. The "lay" on which sealers go off the cape is that the schooner receives one-third, the other two-thirds going to the Indians who catch the seals, two men go in a canoe, thus each receives one-third.

Their method for operating is for the "opootoh" man, or steers-man, to paddle quietly within spearing distance of a sleeping seal and then the spearman does the rest.

The best time for sealing in this way is just after a rough spell of weather, when the seals are tired and lay on the surface of the water sleeping; they are then easy prey.

Captain Schuyler stopped over near the spit to get wood; he complained regretfully that his crew had all come ashore and had proved susceptible to the Angeles tanglefoot, thus delaying him.

His schooner cost him $1400, quite a sum for an Indian to accumulate. There are about a dozen schooners and sloops belonging to the Makahs, and they earn a very considerable sum every sealing season.

These Indians are entirely self-supporting, the government maintaining a boarding school for their children at Bahada.

In addition to sealing they go whaling every summer, catching about a dozen whales annually. Of all exciting, thrilling sport, whale hunting is supreme. The average Indian derives more enjoyment from the pursuit of a whale even than from any other of his daring sports. And if captured the whale is a source of great profit, as its oil and bone always has a market value from which a snug little sum can be realized.

GENERAL BUSINESS DEPRESSION

In the Metropolis of California as Viewed by a Citizen of Angeles.

"San Francisco is unprecedently dull," said G. V. Smith, who had just returned from a months' visit to hat city, in answer to an inquiry as to how he found business there.

"The depression is not confined to real estate, but extends to nearly every branch of commerce and trade. Shipping is completely paralized, a greater number of vessels, in fact, lying in the harbor seeking cargoes, than for years past. This is doubtless the result of the utter prostration in the lumber market, there being very little activity in building throughout California, this, together with the crash in South America and the panic in Australia, have resulted in causing this deplorable condition.

"In San Francisco, as elsewhere, capital is very timid and cautious, and investments or loans are only made on gilt edge securities. While there are many inquiries about Angeles, it is very difficult, indeed, to consummate investments, they seriously question the solidity and permanence of this city as offering safe and profitable investments. California, as you know, has for the past ten years been passing through a period of liquidation, of adjustment, the result of unwise, intemperate and unwarranted real estate speculation, costly, but invaluable experience, which has taught Californians to regard with a degree of suspicion, any speculative movement in real property, no matter how meritorious or well-founded.

"San Francisco, is however, a very wealthy city. The banks have large deposits, and the city more than its share of millionaires. Once fully convince capitalists of that city that Angeles offers safe investments and you will succeed in diverting capital this way."

A LUNATIC.

he sat down and spoke as calmly and deliberately as possible.

"Thank you," he said. "I shall not forget this."

There was a sound about his "I shall not forget this" I did not relish. Alf said nothing. Tom and he set off rowing as coolly as though nothing had happened. I extemporized a seat in the bow, and tried to make things as comfortable as possible.

I noticed, although Alf and Tom were so cool, they hardly took their eyes off him for more than a second at a time. His behavior before their furtive glances was peculiar. He saw he was being watched. He couldn't sit still. He looked first at one bank, then at the other.

His eyes traveled everywhere, resting nowhere. His hands fidgeted and trembled; he seemed all of a quiver. I expected him to break into a paroxysm every second. If I hadn't called out he would have run us right into the shore. When I called he clutched the other string violently, jerking the boat almost round. I heartily wished him at Jericho before he had come near us.

No one spoke. We went slowly along, watching each other. At last he said something.

"I—I will get out," he said in an odd, nervous way.

"With pleasure," said Alf, "in a few minutes."

"Why not now? Why not now, sir?" he said, seeming to shake from head to foot.

"Where are you going to get—into the river?"

I admired Alf's coolness; I envied him. I only hoped he wouldn't let it carry him too far.

The man glowered at him; for a moment he looked him full in the face. I never saw a look in a man's eyes like that in his. Alf returned him look for look. Slightly, almost imperceptibly, he quickened his stroke. A little lower down was a little hamlet with a well known inn and a capital landing stage. When we came alongside the stranger said:

"This will do; I'll get out here."

He turned the boat ashore. No sooner were we near enough than he rose in his seat and sprang onto the shore. There were several people about—watermen and others. Alf was after him in an instant. He rose almost simultaneously and leaped on the shore. He touched him on the shoulder.

"Now, come," he said, "don't be foolish; we know all about it."

The other turned on him like a flash of lightning. "What do you mean?"

But Tom was too quick for him; he was on the other side and took his arm. "Come," he said, "don't let us have a row."

The stranger raised himself to his full height and shook Tom off with ease. He then hit out right and left in splendid style. Tom and Alf went down like ninepins. But my blood was up. I scrambled on shore and ran into him, dodged his blows and closed. I am pretty strong. He was old enough to be my father, but I found that I had met my match and more. I was like a baby in his arms. He lifted me clean off my feet and threw me straight into the river. It was a splendid exhibition of strength.

Tom and Alf, finding their feet, made for him together, and, scrambling out as best I could, I followed suit. You never saw such a set out. We clung to him like leeches. The language he used was awful—his strength magnificent. Though we were three to one, he was a match for all of us. Of course the bystanders, seeing a row, came up. They interfered and pulled us off.

"Here's a pretty go!" said one. "What's all this?"

"Stop him! lay hold of him!" said Alf. "He's a lunatic!"

"A what?" said the man.

"He's a lunatic escaped from Dr. Rawle's asylum!"

Instead of lending a hand the man went off into a roar of laughter, and the others joined. The stranger looked literally frantic with rage. A gentleman stepped out from the crowd.

"There's some mistake," he said; "this gentleman is Mr. Travers, of Tolhurst Hall."

You could have knocked us all three down with a feather, I believe. Could it be possible? Could we have been such consummate idiots as to have mistaken a sane man for a lunatic? And that was Lillian Travers' father? I could have shrunk into my boots. I could have run away and hid myself in bed.

To think that we should have dogged and watched and insulted and assaulted the man of all others in whose good books we wished to stand—Lillian Travers' father! Never did three men look such fools as we did then. We were so confoundedly in earnest about it; that was the worst of all. I don't care what you say; you may think it a first rate joke, but he must have been an eccentric sort of elderly gentleman. If he had behaved sensibly—if he had made one sensible remark he would have blown our delusion to the winds.

We tendered our apologies as best we could to the man whom we had insulted, but he treated us and them with the loftiest scorn, and we got one after another into the boat amid the gibes and jeers of an unsympathetic crowd, and as we rowed from the wretched place as fast as our oars would take us we each in our secret heart declared that we would never forget our adventure up the river with a lunatic. And we haven't. From that day to this I have never seen Lillian Travers, nor do I ever wish to.—Million.

VACATION INCIDENTS.

DRIVING IN THE COUNTRY HAS SOME SERIOUS DRAWBACKS.

A Young Man Who Spent a Summer in a Rural Part of the Country Gives an Account of His Experiences with Several Livery Stable Horses.

"There are drawbacks about this vacation business," remarked a highly tanned young man thoughtfully as he wiped his glasses and seemed to be meditating on some unpleasant episode.

"Such as what?" asked his friend.

"Well, you take country horses. There are times when the study of equine character is really painful. I've been up in the state spending my vacation near a certain girl I think a good deal of, and the day after I arrived on the scene I suggested a drive.

"She liked the idea, so I hunted up a horse. It was pretty hard to get one in the village that day, but finally I found a man who had a team he occasionally hired out, and arranged for one of the animals and a buggy for fifty cents an hour. He wasn't exactly a horse show beast—sort of a dull peppery color, high cheek bones and a wispy tail. Still the owner said he was 'safe.' When I drove up for my fair companion she didn't seem enthusiastic.

"'It isn't a livery horse, is it?' she inquired.

"'No, I couldn't get one at any price,' I said.

"'Where did you get it?'

"'Oh, up town.'

"'It's one of John P. Hopkins' horses, up at the end of the village, isn't it?'

"'I believe the gentleman's name was Hopkins,' I admitted.

"'Well, it's a horrid horse,' she said emphatically. 'He has two, and one runs away and the other sits down on every hill. I won't go.'

"I calmed her fears, told her the owner had assured me the horse was safe, and finally we started. I was outwardly joyous, but within I was in a fever of anxiety as to which horse this one was. We were not long in doubt, and, moreover, the phenomenon of the wispy tail was also explained. At the top of the first hill that pepper colored beast went down on his haunches, and it seemed as if he slid to the bottom. We did not have a pleasant drive. Whenever there was the slightest variation from the level my companion insisted on getting out and walking. We only went two miles, but it took about four hours.

"The next time I proposed a drive I made sure of a horse at the livery stable. He seemed like a kindly beast, and was rather good looking. His weakness seemed to be corners. I don't know yet how we got around the first corner. He took it on the qui vive, so to speak. It seemed as if that horse had been brought up on a merry-go-'round. We drove out in the country and came to a sawmill. Just as we reached it the wretched boiler inside of the place let off steam, and that horse gave a snort and started off like a cyclone. I hung on; I sawed and whoaed, but at the end of the first quarter the pace had increased and my hat hat flew off.

"'Shall we jump, Charley?' asked the voice beside me quietly.

"'Certainly not,' I said sternly; 'I have him under perfect control.' This turned out to be true, but I think a two mile hill and a sand bank had more to do with it than I did. Coming back, we plucked my hat from a raspberry bush, and passed the sawmill Indian file. I led, the horse followed and a certain young woman brought up the rear. We had a pleasant ride, but somehow we weren't in the mood for it.

"The next time I went to the other livery stable. The man had only four horses, but he recommended one of them as a safe traveler. He was a good enough looking horse, but he had sores on his neck and joints.

"'He isn't exactly pretty,' I said, not liking to hurt the man's feelings.

"'What's that got to do with his travelin?'

"'Well, nothing, I suppose,' I admitted, 'but to take a lady out for a drive, those—those—boils don't look well.'

"'Mean them three sores?'

"'Yes.'

"'Pshaw, don't bother 'bout them,' and with that the owner of the beast went over to his only buggy and scooped some of the axle grease out of a wheel and plastered the stuff on the animal's raw places. Sure enough it concealed them; so I took the horse. He traveled well and we had a beautiful time, till of a sudden, six miles from home, one of the wheels 'run dry.' I got out to examine, and blessed if it wasn't the one that feller had scraped the grease off. My companion climbed out. I boosted the end of the buggy on a stump and pried off the wheel. Then we scraped as much of the grease as we could off the horse, put it back where it belonged and managed to get home. I tell you I don't believe in horses."—New York Tribune.

Tiger Skins.

The length of the longest tiger skin after drying is said to be 13 feet 6 inches; but it must be noted that skins expand considerably in the curing. The greatest length of a skin undressed is given as 10 feet 2½ inches. That goes far toward confirming what we have said as to the finest of these latter day tigers falling far short of their predecessors. Mr. Inglis ("Maori"), whom we consider a most trustworthy authority, discusses the matter at length in his books on Indian wild sports. And he quotes examples, within the experiences of a hunting companion of his own, of various animals killed in upper Bengal which measured from 12 feet to 12 feet 7 inches.—London Saturday Review.

WRECKED.

(CNTINUED FROM LAST WEEK.)

spun round on her poor little feet and dropped back into those ready arms that were waiting to receive her, and as the eyelids closed for the last time over those young eyes and the last tremor shook those small limbs that were never to tremble again, she whispered, "Oh, I am so glad—bells, dearest mammy—bells—and people—you will have food tomorrow—and drink—so glad—so glad!" and as the mother stifled the sweet ravings of her dying babe with hot, tearless kisses neither she nor any one of us guessed that Elsie was right—Elsie had indeed heard bells, and food and succor were coming with the morning!

The long hours of the night passed somehow; the wind fell away until a heavy calm settled down in its place, and as we lay with the dead among us we were conscious presently that the stars were shining overhead and the sea fog was slowly drifting off for the first time since our sorrows began. But small difference it would make to us, we thought. We lay about at the tent door that dawning with famine in our hearts and our swollen tongues rattling in our mouths like dry nuts in their husks. Overhead, as the light brightened and the east broadened, the mist grew thinner until it was a faint opal shroud about us waiting but for a touch of a blessed, merciful hand to lift completely.

And behind that pale curtain I was presently aware the great sun was rising, and I staggered to my feet in my sea rotten rags and my agony to welcome the coming of my death day—tottered and leaned against the tent edge, and looked around at the blackened faces of the dead and the dying at my feet and then overhead and about. As I looked, all the east flushed red, and behind the thin screen of the curtain the sunrise began, and the color and the light went climbing up into the sky—green and golden and crimson and saffron—behind a delicate drapery of vapor that veiled without lessening their splendor! Higher and higher they climbed until the whole wide vault of the heaven was splendidly, softly prismatic from edge to edge.

Brighter and brighter came the blessed light, creeping through the strands of the mist until every blade of grass on the rocks about flashed like jeweled weapons in its golden sheen; lighter and lighter stretched the sea haze until under its lifting foot came the long flash and glitter of the sun on the water, spangling the rim of that lifting curtain with a glittering fringe of silver and yellow. It was so wonderful, so hopeful all about, so like a great rainbow anteroom to the courts of heaven, that I laughed a horrible dry rattle of pleasure down in my burning throat and hid my bloodshot eyes from the brightness for a moment.

And when I looked up the mist in the east was spun out so thin that it was but a fine something in the air, and through it was shining the outline of hills and trees, and—was I mad?—of gables and spires a few poor hundred yards away! I glared and rubbed my eyes, and tottered out upon a hillock. A soft southern breath rolled up the last of that thin screen, and out of the sea, not a quarter of a mile away, grew a pleasant green coast, with fields and homesteads, and yonder—homely, white and red and gray—lay a waterside town, so near that I could see the men at work upon the quays, and the color of the tavern sign down by the road, and the flap of the linen on the drying lines, and the glitter of a pail as a woman dipped water at the green tide steps.

With a dreadful cry of wonder and hope and fear I startled the souls back into those gray, contorted bundles down by the tent, the living came at my call, painfully crawling out from among the dead and saw what I saw, and tossed their arms and laughed and wept and grinned and staggered to their feet, and fell about upon each other, and muttered incoherent things down in the dry caverns of their hollow chests, and pointed thin, trembling fingers, and at last, as the full truth dawned upon them all, went mad together it seemed, and prayed and wept, and cried about me in the strangest, grimmest parody of joy ever a man looked upon.

What need to tell more! Soon some of those jolly plump loungers on the quay caught sight of us upon the islet at the entrance of their harbor mouth, and clustered in knots and pointed—when a boat was launched and men came off, hailed us and guessed what had happened even before they could understand a word of the incoherent sounds of our frantic delight, and so we were rescued!

We had been days and nights starving within the very smell of plenty. A scanty ell or two of southward drift when we had come out of the storm through the sea fog and had landed upon that accursed rock would have taken us straight down into the harbor and blessed food and shelter; one common shout when we found it was but an island we were upon would have traveled to those friendly ears; a dozen more strokes of those oars we had pulled despairingly day and night through the dreadful wastes of the storm, one effort of a strong swimmer, would have got us shelter and comfort, and we had not known it! We had landed and despaired and died on the very threshold of abundance, and it was this which made the wreck of the Golden Verity a story almost unique of its kind, even in the fertile annals of the sea.—Edwin Lester Arnold in Black and White.

Veneration for a Single Hair.

Look at the veneration paid in Asia to even a single hair of the beard of Mohammed. This precious relic is enshrined in a monument erected especially for it in 1135, 500 years after the prophet's death. Where it had reposed during the long interval is as great a mystery as that connected with the holy coat of Treves. But at any rate there it is now, a precious "heir"-loom kept in a box of gold and crystal, in which small holes have been bored for the purpose of admitting water to float the blessed hair, which is done at an annual festival when the faithful from all parts are gathered together.—English Illustrated Magazine.

Tears from a Descendant of Heroes.

It was midnight and cold. A few shivering newsboys close by Pie alley hung round a chestnut vender's stand like flies round the bung of a molasses barrel. The few passers hurried along with their coat collars turned up and eyes straight ahead. Trade wasn't good.

Suddenly a heartrending shriek broke the stillness, followed by piteous sobbing. The chestnut man, wringing his hands like a maniac, hung over his overturned stand. Sparks and glowing coals streamed across the sidewalk. A couple of boys shot out of sight around the nearest corner. The sobs grew louder and mingled with imprecations in an unknown tongue. Like magic a crowd gathered. A policeman sauntered over. A herdic dashed up. Still the sobs burst from the bearded face of the poor foreigner. Some of the crowd laughed.

The herdic man asked him why he didn't chase the gamins and give them a sound thrashing. He had never thought of that, but at the word started after his tormentors, still sobbing. It was too late. He came back, righted his capsized apparatus, scraped up the chestnuts and replaced them over the little fire that remained, crying all the while like a whipped schoolboy. The crowd scattered, the herdic driver drove on, the sobs of the chestnut man grew less and less until the frosty air turned them into a chatter.

"Them Dagoes ain't wuth nothin," said one young fellow to another as they hurried down the street. "They bawl like babies."

And yet Cæsar's legionaries and Garibaldi's riflemen were of that race.—Boston Journal.

A Troublesome Girl Saint.

The state and general governments are very much alarmed over the Indian troubles in the western part of this state, in the Sierra Madre mountains. According to the reports which have reached here during the last few days, the Yaqui Indians have been greatly aroused by the wholesale massacre of their neighbor and friendly tribe at Tomachie by government troops. The peaceable Yaquis in the valleys of Sonora and Chihuahua are leaving their farms and ranches, and with their wives and children are gathering at an appointed rendezvous in the mountains north of Trinidad, where they have discovered another patron saint in the person of a beautiful Mexican girl named Anita Roca, whose father is a shepherd.

St. Anita urges the Indian worshipers to make war upon the Mexicans, and to reclaim the rich Mexican lands in the Yaqui valley which the government has taken from them. There are several hundred Indian braves and about 200 Mexicans now preparing to begin their depredations and war of extermination. They are nearly all well armed, and are expected to begin their campaign as soon as winter sets in.—Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

More Canadians Here Than in Canada.

There is trouble in the Young Men's Conservative club of Toronto. President Armstrong recently made some remarks derogatory to the Conservative government as to its policy, which allowed wholesale immigration of Canadians to the United States, and said Canada was being annexed to the republic by job lots. This led to charges that he was not loyal to the Conservative party, and at a meeting today the club was asked to pass a resolution expressing its disapproval of Armstrong's views. In the discussion that followed it was asserted that there were now more native born Canadians in the United States than in Canada, and more in Chicago than in Toronto. The resolution was defeated.—Cor. Chicago News-Record.

A Prelate's Wicked Brother.

It is rumored that one of the brigands who have been making havoc in the Campagna is a brother of the vicar general. Not long ago he headed a party of desperadoes that attacked the vehicle of a church dignitary on the outskirts of Rome. The divine was horribly frightened, but was reassured by the highwayman, who declared he would not harm so well meaning a man as himself. In a short while monsignore and the masked man were in deep conversation, the former having been completely won over by the distinguished manners of the brigand. A few days later monsignore received a courteous note explaining that a fur lined cloak was needed, and stated that it might be left at a certain spot.—Baltimore American.

"Sweating" and English Dressmaking.

England is finding that there is as much "sweating" in dressmaking as in the tailor trade. It has been discovered that the most aristocratic west end dressmakers do little in their own shops beyond cutting and basting linings, giving out the rest to wretched women forced by the pittance they can earn—$2.50 to $3 per week—to live in miserable tenements and unsanitary, disease breeding rooms.—New York Times.

The Oldest Mason.

Hugh Boyd and Mrs. Fannie Johnson were burned to death in a dwelling house fire at St. John's on Nov. 25. Mr. Boyd is said to have been the oldest Mason in the United States. He had been cared for by the order for the past fifteen years.—Detroit Dispatch.

Novel Use for Jails.

Some of Kansas' empty jails are at present being used to store the surplus wheat. This indicates a healthy state of morals and finances.—Kansas City Journal.

The commissioners of the District of Columbia have issued an order to the effect that all the theaters in Washington must be fitted throughout with electric lights.

AN ARTIST'S HOME.

It Is Well Arranged and Looks Well from Every Point of View.

[Copyright, 1892, by American Press Association.]

This charming design of an eight room house was conceived by an artist friend of mine, who stated that he was going to be very particular about the arrangement of the rooms in the first story, as well as the outside appearance of the building. "It is my belief," said he, "that a house that is well arranged in plan should look well in every respect, and I shall leave it to your skill, Mr. Architect, to prove that this pet theory of mine is a true one. Give me a veranda which will extend across the entire front of the house. Then I must have a good sized hall, with a vestibule to shut off drafts, for my house will have a frontage to the north. If you can make the hall sufficiently large to use it as a reception room, I shall be pleased. Since the windows in the hall are on the easterly side of the house, I should like a stained glass window above the landing of the stairs, for the effect will be very pretty upon sunny mornings—this soft, tinted light.

"The dining room also should have a bay window facing the east, for the sunlight is always cheerful at the breakfast hour, and gives me inspiration for the entire day. Let the communication between the kitchen and dining room be made through the pantry, upon one side of which should be hung a door with springs or hinges, so that it will be self closing, and keep out the odors of cooking from the dining room. I am quite well aware that the latest improved ideas upon plumbing argue that a portable range in the kitchen is to be preferred over a brickset apparatus, but I am somewhat old fashioned in some things and shall insist upon having the latter, for I like the color of the brickwork in the room besides. I shall place a chair rail about 3 ft. 6 in. above the floor and paint the plastering a brick color instead of the usual wainscoting of wood. The range hearth is to be of slate, well bedded in cement.

"In the parlor I should like an octagon or semicircular front, which you may carry up two stories if you choose. The parlor and dining room must be separated from the hall by means of sliding doors, so that the whole may be thrown into one room on state occasions.

"I object to having a fireplace in the hall or dining room, as I shall heat them with a furnace, but should rather put a little more expense in the parlor mantel and let it be very neat and pretty, with beveled mirrors and little shelves ornamented with pretty spindle work and delicate and refined carving appropriate to the surroundings and rich tile hearth and facings. In this case one chimney will be all that is required. In the second story a bathroom, two good sized chambers and two small bedrooms will fill my demands for rooms. If you can, secure ample closet space and a storage room in the attic, leaving a large room for a studio somewhere with a north light."

The plans here shown illustrate the arrangement of the rooms in the first and second stories of the selected plans, which for economy and convenience cannot be excelled. Upon careful study it was found that the only available place for a studio was in the third story of the tower, which feature of the design, together with the long, sloping roof and pretty dormer window, broad veranda and neat octagon bay window on the side, leaves little to be desired as regards the exterior appearance. From every point of view it looks well and would make a home of which any one might be proud. The lowest cost of the building would not be less than $2,800 or $3,000, and could easily be made to cost much more by using elaborate and expensive finish inside. The main rooms are heated by a hot air furnace.

Ancient and Modern Decoration.

Swags and festoons have formed a very important and pleasing feature in every style of decoration for ages, except perhaps the gothic, and for certain purposes will probably survive through many yet to come.—Decorator and Furnisher.

Purifying Water.

Dr. Daremberg, writing concerning the means of rendering a cholera infected water innocuous, says that this end may be accomplished in one of three ways—viz., by filtering, by boiling or by the addition of some chemical substance which will destroy the germs of the disease. The first of these methods is as a rule ineffective, and can be relied on only when every detail is most scrupulously attended to. The second is effective, but troublesome, and cannot always be carried out, fire and a suitable vessel for boiling being indispensable. The third method is one which, he says, is equally effective as boiling, and which can be carried out anywhere and at any time.

The purification of water has been effected through the addition of alum, but the author prefers the acidulation of the water, especially in the case of possible cholera infection. Citric acid may be added to the water in the proportion of sixty to eighty centigrams to the liter. This method is inexpensive, does not impart any unpleasant taste or odor to the water, and can be done anywhere without the need of cumbersome or delicate apparatus. In place of citric acid, tartaric or hydrochloric acid may be used if desired.—New York Medical Record.

O Turn My Pi!

Our curate, who lived five miles away, rode over for our dreary service on the Sunday, dined, and we saw him no more during the week. He was much occupied in the pursuit of the fox, which, it is charitable to suppose, he mistook for a wolf, and, like a good shepherd, was anxious to destroy.

The service was literally a duet between the parson and the clerk, except when old John Manners, the bricklayer, gave the keynote for the hymn from his bassoon, a sound which might have been uttered by an elephant in distress, and we sang:

O turn my pi—O turn my pi—O turn my pious soul to Thee.

Or when the curate suddenly emerged from his surplice, which he placed on the side of his reading pew, and appearing in his academic gown went up the three decker to preach. The altar was represented by a small rickety deal table, with a scanty covering of faded and patched green baize, on which were placed the overcoat, hat and riding whip of the officisting minister, etc.—"Memoirs of Dean Hale."

John Plankinton's Ovation.

A noble type of the man who knows how to do good with his money was John Plankinton, of Milwaukee. Mr. Plankinton's charitable deeds began in early life, from the very generosity of his nature, and were continued uninterruptedly. What he has done is best attested by the fellow citizens of the great pork packer who had shared his public munificence and were thoroughly cognizant of his many private charities. In illustration of the esteem and love in which he was held it is related that when President Cleveland visited Milwaukee in 1887, the applause which greeted him as his carriage drove along the streets was as nothing to the ovation given John Plankinton, who rode in the procession.

When, a year or two later, Mr. Plankinton's body was borne to the cemetery, all the houses along the line of the funeral march were draped in mourning and expressions of personal sorrow were heard on every hand. It was a tribute to a rich man who spent his money wisely and who knew what was beautiful in a life that is worth living.—New York World.

Where Allspice Grows.

The Island of Jamaica produces about all the allspice that is used. It is known also as pimento, or Jamaica pepper. The tree on which the berries grow is evergreen, and the flowers grow in dense clusters. These develop into small green aromatic berries, the size of black pepper. If allowed to ripen they become pulpy and lose some of their pungency. For commercial purposes the berries are gathered when green, carefully dried in the sun, and afterward packed in bags holding 160 to 180 pounds and shipped. Pimento trees grow in many parts of tropical America, but nowhere do they thrive as in Jamaica. The trees are never planted by man and receive no cultivation worthy of the name. The seeds are dropped by the birds, and the rains and the tropical sun do the rest. Surplus trees are cut down and become walking sticks and umbrella handles. This spice is more mild and innocent than most other spices.—Baker's Helper.

In the Visitors' Book.

A gentleman who has just returned from England has scribbled in his notebook some of the things which he found in an inn album in Devonshire, at a country inn where he was detained over a stormy day.

His best extract is the comment upon a misspelled word.

"I can fully recomend this inn," one traveler wrote, with more kindliness than orthography. Under this a later comer had written:

How can you "fully recomend" it
Unless another "m" you lend it?
Shorn of this letter, you must see,
The word a thousand fold must be
Short of its full identity!

Washington's Philanthropist.

William W. Corcoran made millions of dollars in the banking business, and he gave away millions, as every schoolboy knows. What he has done for the city of Washington and its vicinity is shown in the beautiful art gallery, the Louise home and other substantial structures. What his private charities have been can be learned from thousands of people he has relieved and assisted.—New York World.

The Safest Place in a Storm.

The safest place in a thunderstorm is said to be under a small tree or building or the open space, the signal of danger being the loud, reverberating thunder claps, which indicate that the lightning is not far off, and that the next bolt is liable to strike somewhere in the neighborhood.—Baltimore Herald.

THE APPRAISEMENT

Will Receive Prompt Attention From Secretary

IT IS STILL WITH THE

Commissioner of the General Land Office; But About to be Submitted to the Secretary of the Interior, So Says the Frst Assistant Secretary Sims to the Democrat Leader.

The Port Angeles townsite reservation matter is still held in obeyance, but prompt action is promised by the Secretary of the Interior as soon as it reaches him.

The announcement of the acting commissioner of the general land office that the appraisement of the reservation would be submitted to the secretary of the interior about the 12th inst., led up to a doubt as to whether or not the secretary was giving the prompt attention to the matter that he promised Hon. James Hamilton Lewis he would.

THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER, yesterday finding out that Hon. James Hamilton Lewis had left Washinton city and was in Chicago, wired the secretary of the interior. requesting that immediate attention be given the matter and requesting that the exact status of the matter and cause of delay be made known. This morning the editor of this paper received the following answer from First Assistant Secretary of the Interior William H. Sims:

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23, 1893.

JOHN W. TROY, Port Angeles, Wash.

Appraisement with commissioner and about to be submitted to secretary, who will give prompt consideration and action. WILLIAM H. SIMS.
First Assistant Secretary.

Word will shortly be received from the commissioner of the general land office as to his action, which will most probably be favorable.

THE LAMOREUX RECEPTION.

Tendered by the Ladies of St. Andrews Episcopal Guild.

The social event of the season was the reception tendered Mr. F. O. Lamoreux and bride by the ladies of St. Andrew's Episcopal Guild, at the opera house last Thursday evening.

Quite two hundred invitations had been sent out, and the guests of the evening were representative of one of Angeles' most select and prominent social gatherings.

The guests were received in a most charming and gracious manner by Mrs. Blackwood and Mrs. Will R. Gay and presented to Mr. and Mrs. Lamoreux.

A short but appropriate program had been arranged, the production of which added not a little to the entertainment of the evening, and elicited warm applause. An instrumental solo by Mrs. L. A. Mason, a vocal duet by Mrs. Judge Carusi and Mrs. Beardsley were particularly meritorious.

In a few pointed and well-chosen remarks Mr. Will R. Gay, on behalf of the ladies of St. Andrew's guild, and the assembled company extended to Mr. and Mrs. Lamoreux cougratulations and well-wishes, sincerely hoping that their married life would be long, happy and prosperous, and that every essential absolute in rounding out their earthly career in that mould fashioned by the angel of love might be strewn in their pathway through life.

Mr. Lamoreux feelingly responded, thanking the ladies for the kindly interest and the friendship evidenced in the reception tendered Mrs. Lamoreux and himself. Words failed to express how deeply they appreciated the kindly consideration shown them.

Following the program a delicious luncheon was served, after which several hours were most delightfully spent with dancing.

DR. SANDEN'S ELECTRIC BELT with Electro Magnetic Suspensory will cure without medicine all of the above troubles. Those who suffer from Nervous Debility, Losses, Drains, Lost Manhood, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Poor Memory, all Female Complaints, and general ill health, the effects of abuses, excesses, worry or exposure, will find relief and prompt cure in our marvelous invention, which requires but a trial to convince the most skeptical. In ignorance of effects you may have unduly drained your system of nerve force and vitality—which is electricity—and thus caused your weakness or lack of force. If you replace into your system the elements thus drained, which are required for vigorous strength, you will remove the cause and health, strength and vigor will follow at once. This is our plan and treatment, and we guarantee a cure or refund money. Our 200 page book "THREE CLASSES OF MEN," should be read by every young, middle-aged and old man, sent sealed, free. Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is no experiment as we have restored thousands to robust health and vigor, after all other treatments failed, as can be shown by hundreds of cases throughout this and other States, who would gladly testify, and from many of whom we have strong letters bearing testimony to their recovery after using our Belt.

WE HAVE CURED THESE—WE CAN CURE YOU!

GENERAL DEBILITY CURED.
San Francisco, Cal., August 14, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Before I used your belt I was troubled with lost vigor, vital weakness, and almost a complete loss of power. I would get up with a very tired feeling, bones aching, etc.; since using your belt I have had a new lease of life. I now enjoy life better than I have for ten years past. I have the utmost confidence in your treatment. You can publish this statement, also have others write or call on me. Truly yours, H. A. BOWEN, 26 and 28 Turk St.

RHEUMATISM AND LAMENESS CURED.
Portland, Oregon, April 13 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I got one of your belts two weeks ago for rheumatism, from which I suffered for several years. For the past six months I had not been able to work. Your belt has placed me in almost perfect health in the two weeks I have used it. I can walk comfortably, and feel like a new man generally.
M. E. HUGHES, Proprietor International Hotel.

NERVOUS DEBILITY—LOSS OF VIGOR.
Tacoma, Wash., October 24, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—I have been using your Electric belt for general nervous debility, and to-day feel better than I have for five years. I have gained in vigor daily, and am strong in every part.
Yours gratefully, CHAS. LUETKA.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.
Portland, Oregon, September 26, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Years of exposure and hard work, combined with the strain coming from the jar of an engine, gave me a severe case of lame back, from which I suffered for seven years. I was so bad that I could not bend my back. Was all doubled up with it. I bought one of your belts. It helped me inside of two days, and I continued to wear it for four months, being perfectly cured. That was two years ago, and I am as well to-day as I ever was in my life. I know your belt well, and I know lots of people who have been cured by it. Many others need it, and if they would try it they would find it the same as I did—the best remedy in the world. I am located here permanently, and will be glad to talk with anyone who wants to inquire about it.
ROBERT BURRELL, Engineer Hotel Portland.

LOST VITALITY AND STRENGTH.
Everett, Wash, June 12, 1892.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Since wearing your belt I have been greatly benefited. I feel my old energy fast returning; and after a month's use of the belt I find myself twice as vigorous as before. My memory is now nearly perfect, and each day shows for the better. I feel much stronger than before using the belt. Yours truly, HENRY SCHULTZ.
