Tremendous forest fires are raging in the heavily timbered country north of the town of Banner in the famous Boise Basin gold country in Idaho. Vast areas have been swept by flames, which show no signs of abatement.

The contract for restoring the walls of Sutter's Fort, the bastions and a number of buildings, including the old storerooms, blacksmith shop, mill and provision store, which were arranged about the walls, was let several weeks ago to George Murray & Son. Already work is progressing rapidly upon the walls, and one of the bastions, that on the southeast corner, is about completed.

The other day a hole was cut in the roof of the State capitol at Salem, and tall steel posts now protrude skyward. These will soon take on a shape becoming to a capitol dome. The main part of the girder is resting securely in its place, and posts are to rest on it all the way round. At the top they will be bolted to the steel circular brace that is now seen above the roof, and the brick wall is to be built up around them.

F., with all the military officers above those of Department or State Commanders, will be abolished, and each of the Patriarch Military branches of the order will be placed under the control of the State encampment within whose jurisdiction it is located. She was convicted of a similar offense once before, but when released from prison continued the annoyance until her neighbor could stand it no longer.

In British Columbia two gold-seekers, William Corlett of Galveston and Henry Gesford, formerly of St. Paul, have met a terrible fate. While out hunting they were suddenly attacked by a lion and badly wounded, one of them seriously. A companion sought to take the two to camp. At night he started for camp for aid, leaving the two wounded surrounded by fire as protection against wild beasts, which were heard all about them. When the party from camp reached the place they found that Gesford, who had gone for water, had been attacked by wild animals, killed and his body partly devoured. Corlett had evidently tried to rise and give aid to his companion, but was so weakened that he had fallen across the dying fire and had been literally roasted alive.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

The Situation of Affairs in the Hawaiian Islands Receives the Attention of the State Department.

The President has appointed Prof. Thomas C. Mendenhall, Superintendent of the geodetic survey, the United States Commissioner of the International Committee to settle differences between Great Britain and the United States in the matter of the boundary line between Alaska and British Columbia.

The Secretary of the Interior has approved the allotment of land to the Seneca and Eastern band of Shawnees in the Indian Territory. There are 275 of the former and 290 of the latter who will receive sixty acres of land apiece, and in some cases an additional eighty acres, where the land is used for grazing or is not fertile.

The attention of the Postoffice Department has been called to the fact that many letters from China and Japan specially addressed to go via Vancouver, B. C., are forwarded to San Francisco. In order to remedy this instructions have been sent to division superintendents to issue orders that will insure the dispatch of mails as addressed when intended for any country and marked to go by any particular route.

The two vessels, proposals for which were issued recently, will make an important addition to the navy. The armored cruiser will cost, exclusive of armament, about $3,000,000. She will be 400 feet long on the load line, 64 feet beam and 23 feet draft; will have 15,000 indicated horse power and make a speed of twenty knots. The armament is eight eight-inch rifles, twelve five-inch rifles and a strong auxiliary battery, gatling guns, six-pounders and torpedo tubes. The steaming endurance is specified at 15,000 miles at a ten-knot rate. The battle ship will be 360 feet long, 48 feet beam and 24 feet draft, with 11,000-horse power, and will make 16½ knots' speed. The armament will be four twelve-inch and six four-inch rifles, twenty six-pounders and five one-pounders.

The situation of affairs in the Hawaiian Islands continues to receive the best and constant attention of officials of the Department of State. To inquiries as to the political situation in the dominion of her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani the reply is made that it is regarded as unsettled. Further than this they say they do not care to express an opinion, and this despite the fact that on September 13 the new Ministry was inducted into office. The change of government was accomplished without demonstration of any kind, but the feeling prevails that there is no confidence in the Ministry, and any change would create no surprise. The department is under more or less influence to bring about even closer relations between the United States and Hawaii than have ever been obtained. Annexation is openly urged, the argument being made that the Islands need the support of a strong government, which would restore the commercial credit of the country, give assistance to the producers and consequent development to the Islands. Unless the United States does take these Islands under its care, it is urged that some other strong government is likely to do it, and that government is England. In addition to sugar rice is cultivated, tea can be raised in abundance, and the coffee of the Islands is of the finest quality. All that is needed is some money and an effort to improve the lands and cheap labor to work them. England could easily supply these from her surplus capital and coolie colonies.

THE FLUTES OF PLAQUEMINE.

I look through the mists of memory
 To a far off close of Spring,
Nor heed the wafts that come to me
 From Sorrow's somber wing;
For bright or dark the charm holds good,
 Whatever intervene,
When I can hear across the wood
 The flutes of Plaquemine.

The rustle of the fields of cane,
 Beside the calm bayou,
The lime trees by the winding lane,
 The dreamy heaven of blue,
Are leagues away and dimly float,
 Filmed in a drowsy sheen;
But oh, how clear each quavering note
 From flutes of Plaquemine!

The luggers lift their wings and bear
 Their loads of golden fruit
And brown pecans and vintage rare
 And stores of bulb and root;
The gardens, rimmed with roses gay,
 And dashed with dusky green,
Swim dim and far while phantoms play
 The flutes of Plaquemine.

So, lapped in memory, let me dream
 My boyhood's May time o'er;
Fair let the wide savanna gleam,
 Soft let the south wind pour
Through mosshung wood, o'er marsh and fen
 And orange orchards green,
While morn blows like a flower, and then
 The flutes of Plaquemine.

Oh, yellow globes of scuppernong
 That brace the air with wine!
Oh, cool ripe melons heaped along
 In shadows of the vine!
You haunt me with a subtile lure
 Of juice and perfume keen;
But more than all, blown soft and pure
 The flutes of Plaquemine!

The great wide world I've wandered o'er,
 On feet of change and chance,
Have sailed all seas and found each shore
 Of beauty and romance;
But give me now the calm bayou,
 Between the cane fields green,
Where lips of love at morning blew
 The flutes of Plaquemine!

—Maurice Thompson in Youth's Companion.

Soldiers Had to Eat Sheep.

The great Roman General Corbulo, we are informed by Tacitus, was in his Armenian campaign reduced to extremities, his army having suffered, not indeed from losses in battle, but from being driven to satisfy its hunger from the flesh of sheep. To the average Briton, into whose dietetic cult the mutton chop enters so largely, this announcement must seem inexplicable; so much so that he might be excused for thinking lightly of the stamina or pluck of his forefathers, who allowed themselves to be conquered by soldiery for whose stomachs the flesh of sheep was too strong.

The fact is, however, as Tacitus has stated it, and we know from other authorities that animal food, as a constant element in the Roman soldier's fare, was found hurtful to his health and efficiency. Cæsar, in his "Gallic War," tells the same story.—London Lancet.

He Was Fighting.

"'Squire Dick" Reese, just after the war, a red headed lawyer of Leavenworth, Kan., was almost a pygmy in stature, but as plucky as any other bantam. One day his dignity took affront at some speech of a Missouri legal light, of unusual tallness, and springing upon the big fellow like a cat Dick began to claw, kick and belabor him. The giant looked down at the assailant clinging to his arm and said with good humored affectation: "Why, Dick! What are you doing there?" "Doing!" cried Dick wrathfully; "Doing! Why, I'm fighting you, sir."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Papa's Sore Leg.

I had my leg severely hurt by a log rolling on it, and when it was getting better so that I could walk with a crutch I found that the muscles of my calf cramped so badly that it was extremely painful and I complained of it several times. Our little girl, Esther, 3½ years old, seemed to be pondering on the matter, for one day, after having kept still for as much as half an hour, she suddenly said, "Mamma, what is the matter with papa's little bossie?"—Cor. Babyhood.

Meerschaum Artists.

The artist who carves meerschaum is required to pass through as severe a school of apprenticeship lasting from three to ten years as though his work were in marble. Meerschaum carved and in the rough resembles the ordinary plaster cast. The outlines being complete, it is scraped with a knife, filed, soaked in a preparation, and then polished with a linen cloth.—New York Times.

Cannot Be Both.

A good body is necessary to a satisfactory expression of the mentality. But no man can be a Daniel Webster mentally and a John L. Sullivan physically. The possibilities of either the mind or body can be fully developed only at the expense of the other. The college boy who becomes a great athlete will not be a great scholar. Genius is almost always associated with soft spots.—Troy Press.

A Paying Business.

Money Lender—You want to borrow a hundred pounds? Well, here's the money. I charge 5 per cent. a month, and as you want it for a year, that leaves just forty pounds coming to you.

Innocent Borrower—Then if I wanted it for two years, there'd be something coming to you, I suppose, eh?

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1892.

COME, Johnny, pull off your coat and help elect your candidate for representative.

IT seems to be the general opinion of the people that D. W. Bryan will be elected to the office of county attorney by a large majority.

MR. HOOLE is counting upon a solid vote from the west end of the county because he succeeded in throwing most of the money expended on roads to that locality. Does that kind of an argument have equal force with the people of the east end?

BY Mississippi's new constitution disqualifying illiterate voters, 70 per cent, or nearly 100,000 colored voters of that state are prevented from voting. Who can say that this would not be the best policy for the nation as well as a single state? The uneducated natives as well as the uneducated foreigners, are a menance to the perpetuity of the government, and every effort should be made to counter-balance it.

THE people of the state generally recognize that our delinquent tax law is imperfect; that it subjects many of our citizens to great hardships, without material advantage to the state and that oftimes the county is made to bear heavy expenses, the only gainers being county printers. They demand that the law be repealed. A Republican legislature enacted it but do not mention it in their platform. The Democrats and People's Party demand its repeal.

THE People's Party of this county made a wise choice in selecting Mr. E. E. Seevers for the legislature. He is spoken of in the highest terms by his political opponents as well as by his supporters, and if elected we have no doubt would make his influence felt in the next house of representatives. But the fight having centered upon that of representative, and as the people have taken such an interest between the Republican and Democratic candidates, we are sorry to say that we do not believe Mr. Seevers can be elected to the office that he seems so well fitted for.

THE election of Mr. Mallette to the legislature will mean a step toward clean, honest politics; it will mean that Clallam county wants a clean and economical administration of affairs and that her people do not countenance the scandals and atrocious legislation that is laid at the door of the last legislature; it means that the people prefer to be represented by a square, honest, honorable business man than by one whose chief recommendation is that he is a slick politician; in other words, as we will be judged to a great extent by the men who represent us, we had rather be looked upon as good, steady, solid citizens than as sharpers who by hook or crook will get doubtful advantages.

THE Farmers' Alliance and Eastern Washington and Western Idaho Warehouse Association propose building an elevator with a 1,000,000 bushel capacity at Portland, Tacoma or Seattle. The association represents sixty warehouses in the great grain country of Washington and Idaho. The new elevator will cost $150,000. Whatever may be the effect of the Alliance movement in politics, as a financial, social and educational organization it has been a decided success. In the states where business agencies have been established the Alliance is held more closely together because of the financial feature. More than two million dollars were saved by the farmers of Kansas last year by the Exchange in buying agricultural supplies and selling grain.

MAKING A MISTAKE.

IN the treatment of the Peoples' Party the Republican papers and speakers of Washington are making the same mistake that was made in Kansas two years ago. Of the 107,000 votes cast for Willets at least 70,000 were Republicans, a large part of whom did not think of leaving the old party for good, but thought that a good time to rebuke official corruption and flagrant disregard of the wishes of the people, and to break the disreputable ring that dominated the politics of that state. Because of this defection the stalwart Republicans not only ridiculed and combatted the principles of the third party—which they had a perfect right to do if they saw fit—but a campaign of personal abuse was inaugurated against all who leaned that way, calling them sore-heads, socialists, communists, anarchists, and repudiators, forgetful of the fact that they were nearly all native born citizens in the new party; forgetful of the fact that it was composed almost entirely of farmers and freeholders, who since the foundation of our government have been recognized as the most stable and incorruptible of our population; forgetful of the fact that the leaders were the most honored men in state. The politicians even commenced a war on Senator Plumb—the idol of the people of the state who two years before had been elected to the United States Senate by a unanimous vote—because he sympathized with the new demands and treated the members of the new party as friends and not as enemies. As a consequence of all this abuse the men who left the Republican party in that state two years ago are out of it for good.

GRESHAM AND COOLEY.

THE announcement that Judge Walter Q. Gresham, Judge T. M. Cooley, late chief justice of the supreme court of Michigan and chairman of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and Wayne MacVeagh, Attorney General under Garfield, had deserted the ship "Republican" under the command of Capt. Harrison, shows the drift of public sentiment, shows that new voters are still joining the ranks of the 750,000 Republican voters that showed their disapproval of the McKinley bill, and other measures fathered by their party, by returning to congress only 87 Republicans to 245 for the opposition.

Next to James G. Blaine and Grover Cleveland, Judge Gresham doubtless has the largest personal following of any man in the United States to-day. Four years ago he received at Chicago upon the first ballot 43 more votes than Harrison, and this year, although still a Republican, would have received the unanimous nomination for the presidency at the hands of the Peoples' Party, had he only signified a willingness to accept it. He now holds a life position upon the circuit court of the United States.

The protest of these men, who have for years been recognized as among the ablest and most honored in the ranks of their party; against the tendency to centralization; against higher taxes, in the shape of tariffs, when the people demanded lower; against the continued exclusion of silver from the mints, and against special legislation tending to the enrichment of the few, will attract the attention of all thinking voters, and it will have a marked effect in November.

OUR COUNTY DEBT.

Two years ago our county's affairs were placed in the hands of our present county officers after a heated campaign had been fought on the issues of "extravagance versus economy" in the expenditure of the people's money. Several good men went down because of the general supposition that a loose financial habit had followed them through life and would naturally cling to them while they were handling the people's money. In this contest was our present clerk, William K. Clark, pitted against our present—in name the deputy, but in reality, now and all along, the auditor—W. R. Hoole. Our people had had a trial of this good officer, Clark, and knew that he could be trusted to carry out the people's demand for strict economy in the affairs of the clerk's office, and notwithstanding the promises of Mr. Hoole and his friend, and the strong plea for party fealty, Mr. Hoole was cast aside by the people. Little did they think that the apparent champion of economy, B. John Baker, would ring his charges against extravagance before election only to blindfold the good public who did not know him at the time, and after election appoint this rejected candidate to the chief position in the county, for the purpose of fortifying his position with the combined cunning of himself and the adroit Mr. Hoole. But he did. The salaries were plenty large enough before election but too small for such a brace of great minds after election, so to compensate them for their patriotic services, they "worked" the board of county commissioners for the extra eight cents per folio—just so much more than they are entitled to under the law—and got it, and have been getting it right along.

What next did they do? Some of the old records were becoming a little worn. It would be a nice "job" to induce the commissioners to permit them to be transcribed into new, nicely bound, extra high-priced, and as Mr. Hoole wishes them to be known, "Republican books." The commissioners were told that the extra cost would be but little, as the work of transcribing could be done at odd hours by the office force and the county's finances would not feel the expense. It was so ordered. The board never asked if the new records would be legal. This little piece of jobbery cost the county about $1,600 for records and extra clerk hire. And now Mr. Hoole announces the fact, in his cold-blooded manner, that if he is elected to the legislature of this state he will have an act passed legalizing this work.

Let us see what this den of extravagance, our auditor's office, has directly cost us during the incumbency of the present administration.

From Jan. 12, 1891, to Oct. 12, 1892:

|---|---|
| For auditor and deputy's salaries | $4,227.54 |
| Paid to auditor for recording at 8 cts per folio | 2,045.71 |
| Paid Hoole for making statement of settlement with State | 75.00 |
| Work on Tax Rolls, should have been done by auditor | 772.00 |
| Transcribing records, about | 1,100.00 |
| Making a total of | $8,210.25 |
| Receipts from all sources of auditor's office—turned over | 5,944.45 |
| Excess of cost over receipts turned over | $2,265.80 |

Where is there a business man in the state who would not have gladly taken the office and do all its work for its receipts alone as his compensation? The above is the direct income of the auditor's happy family. What of the indirect?

Bridge fund warrants issued to date, $5,506.03. Where did this sum go to? Was the major portion of it expended east of the Elwha river, where over two-thirds of all the taxable property lies? Not much. Most of it has gone into structures, called bridges, not many miles from Mr. Hoole's home.

Road fund warrants issued to date (we write Oct. 12) $13,997 55. We repeat the same query and an analysis of the items brings us the same answer as to where the great bulk of this money has gone. County fund warrants issued to date, $39,394.31. What an appalling sum for so small a county to expend in conducting its ordinary, every-day work for twenty months! Is there any wonder that the auditor himself is crowded out in order that the whole field may be occupied by his deputy?

Last, the salary fund. Total issue of warrants to date on this fund, $22,267.60, making a total issue of warrants on the above funds for the twenty months, of $81,165.45.

The chief issue now is, will the people again decide to trust power to any one who has been so closely connected with, and so largely responsible for the gross extravagance for the past twenty months as has Mr. Hoole. Every vote cast for him is a vote in favor of trickery and jobery. It is precisely work of this kind that has caused such a great burden of municipal and county indebtedness, and consequently so much poverty and distress all over our land. Economy must be the watchword and every one whose acts and deeds are diametrically opposed to it must be set aside. A party is never superior to the men who compose it. When so important an office as representative must be given as a reward to the manipulator of extravagant expenditures, it is high time that the party should be punished and the manipulator himself feel the effect of the wrath of the people. We cannot afford to elect Mr. Hoole to any office, much less that of the honorable position of representative. Draw a line across his name when you vote to express your sentiments as you feel them, and make a clear mark after the name of Chas. E. Mallette, as your choice for representative.

Hansen's Harbor Discussed.

Correspondence in Tribune-Times ]

Not long ago Mr. Hans Hansen, democratic candidate for commissioner for the west district, published a lengthy article in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer in which he said that all the Quillayute valley needed for its development was the harbor improvement at the mouth of the river. Now we have it from a reliable source that when the river emptied where Mr. Hansen wants money expended to make it empty, that only under favorable winds could a vessel lay there, and then a vessel of only thirty tons burden.

Old settlers tell us that if the river is changed that only very small boats can come in and that it will be impossible to build a wharf at which boats can land, except under the most favorable conditions of wind and tide. Now we want to ask Mr. Hansen what development he expects to make by his harbor improvement, when old settlers say it will amount to but little. And again if the harbor improvement is made who would be benefitted? We think the benefits would stop in the safe keeping of the stores at La Push. We, of Forks, and the people of Quillayute would have to have supplies boated from La Push as now and they would cost as much then as now.

Now, Mr. Editor, what we wish to criticise Mr. Hansen on, is his total depravity concerning the building of roads in the west end. We want roads to some place where a town can be built up and where we may expect a competition in trade. We don't want public money spent for the benefit of a few persons. We have talked with a number of people here and all agree in saying that a road over which a wagon can be taken is worth ten to twenty times as much to the country as the harbor improvement proposed by Mr. Hansen. Now we know Mr. Geo. Lamb and know his ideas concerning the development of the west and we know that he will do all in his power to have roads built from Clallam Bay to the south and southeast and from Neah Bay south. He would favor opening the rivers and clearing them of jams so that timber could be floated down them to mills, where it would be cut into lumber and the lumber turned into money, and thus improve and develop the west end of the county. Now, voters of Beaver and along the Beaver trail, don't let sectional strife cause you to vote for a man who will use his influence to hinder the building of roads to further his pet object, the harbor improvement, but vote for Mr. Lamb, a man who will do honest work and give the due proportion of money and work on all roads in his district. A vote for Geo. Lamb means the building of roads in the west district. A vote for Geo. Lamb means the improvement and development of the west district. A vote for Geo. Lamb means an honest administration.

Port Angeles now claims a larger population than Port Townsend.

A school of whales was seen in the Port Angeles harbor last week.

Hon. H. J. Snively, democratic nominee for governor, will address the people of Port Angeles October 24th.

Hon. Thomas Carroll, democratic candidate for congress, and a number of other prominent speakers will talk to the people of Angeles next Monday night.

The citizens of Beaver politely escorted a claim jumper out of that section and bade him farewell at Seattle. The people of that vicinity threaten to dispose of all such offenders in a like manner.

The Hastings Steamboat Company proposes to put the Willapa on the run from Seattle to the Cape three days a week, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and run the Garland daily between Townsend and Angeles.

Letters have been received at Port Angeles from Saginaw, Mich., stating that a train of colonists would leave there for Angeles on October 16th, and another on November 12th, under guidance of Mr. D. C. Ashmun.

Warriner E. Smith, county surveyor, who has charge of the government survey of the Quinault and Neah Bay Indian reservations, arrived in town Wednesday from Neah Bay. Mr. Smith says the work being prosecuted will be finished by the first of November. These reservations are being surveyed into ten-acre tracts, after which the government will deed in severality to the Indians, each his respective portion, and the remainder will doubtless be thrown open to settlement. For the most part the land of the Quinault reservation is unproductive, while a large area of the Neah Bay reservation is exceedingly fertile.—Port Angeles Democrat.

It would be a relief to the people of Dungeness if the writers on the Angeles papers would realize the fact that the name of this town is Dungeness and not "Groveland." As a general thing the town is given its right name, but occasionally some chump down there gets the wrong name into his head, and this has occurred so frequently during the past few weeks that we feel compelled to call the offenders to order.

The Social at Sequim.

The Children's Harvest Home entertainment and basket social held at Sequim last Friday evening was a decided success, both socially and financially. The affair was given for the benefit of Rev. Mr. Kindred, our pastor, and the amount realized from sale of baskets, coffee, etc., was nearly $55.

The hall was tastefully decorated with evergreen, and bunches of carrots, apples, cabbages and other products of the farm were arranged about the room in an artistic manner. The harvest home portion of the exercises was rendered by the school children in a very pleasing and excellent manner. It consisted of songs, recitations, responsive reading, etc. A notable feature of the program was a vocal solo excellently rendered by Mrs. Bell.

When the baskets were produced by that voluble auctioneer, Mr. J. B. Knapman, the fun began. The first basket sold very cheap, but when the second was produced the bidders woke up, probably on account of Jack's vivid description of the "trimmins," and it sold for $3.50. There were plenty of baskets, some of the bidders secured several, and nearly all brought a good figure. Tom Miller looked especially happy with his collection of four bewitching young damsels. Ham Lipsett and Bob Davis seemed to prefer the young Misses of kindergarten size. It is rumored that Inspector McBride and Herman Sindars were badly mistaken in their baskets.

Death of Mr. Reynolds.

Mr. R. K. Reynolds, who had his hip broken a few weeks since, and who was moved to Port Townsend last Thursday night, died at the Sisters' Hospital in that city on Sunday morning. No news was received here of his death until Tuesday, when his son-in-law, Mr. Chas. A. Stein, of Boise City, Idaho, arrived to settle up the affairs of the deceased. Mr. Stein, who had been telegraphed for, reached Mr. Reynolds' bedside just a few minutes before he died. He was buried in the Odd Fellows cemetery at Port Townsend on Monday, under the auspices of the Episcopal church, Rev. Dr. Baker officiating. A committee of Odd Fellows acted as pall bearers.

Mr. Reynolds' death was not unexpected here as the severe injury he had received could hardly fail to prove fatal to a man of his years. He had many friends here who endeavored to make him as comfortable as possible before his removal to Townsend, and who regret his death very much.

Deceased was born in New York state, near White Plains, and was seventy-four years of age at time of his death. He was at one time an extensive manufacturer of boots and shoes in Albany, N. Y., and had also a store in New York city, on Sixth avenue. This store was destroyed by fire some twenty years ago, and afterward he met with business reverses and came west. He settled in St. Louis, or rather at Webster, a suburb of that city, where a son-in-law resided, and lived there several years. While there he joined the Puget Sound Co-operative Colony and came to Port Angeles in 1886. He lived there about a year, then settled in Dungeness and resided here until he met with the accident which resulted in his death.

He leaves a wife, a son and two married daughters. His wife resides with one of the daughters, Mrs. Stein, at Boise City, Idaho. His son resides in New York and is a Wall street speculator. The other daughter is living in Texas. A granddaughter of the deceased married a cousin, Mr. E. R. Reynolds, who is secretary to Austin Corbin, the railroad magnate.

Mr. Stein spent a few days here and at Angeles this week straightening up the business affairs of the deceased, and has appointed Mr. R. Robertson as collector for the estate.

Notice.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to the late R. K. Reynolds will please call at once and settle their accounts to R. Robertson, at the Farmers' Mercantile Co., in Dungeness, who has been appointed collector for the estate, and save further costs.

A WONDERFUL PARROT.

Mlle. Jacquot, the Great Mimic, Prima Donna and Composer.

One of the best mimics in France, and a prima donna and composer of considerable ability, is Mlle. Jacquot. The great obstacle in Mlle. Jacquot's road to fame as a rival of Planquette, Strauss, Offenbach, Jakobowski, Meyerbeer, Czibulka and Balfe, is that unlike those celebrities she cannot put her improvisations on paper. Neither can she get the same air twice, exactly alike. The mademoiselle is forty-eight years old, but gives no indication of the fact that she is more than twenty. She was born in Africa, and is of a dusty gray color. She is equipped with a pair of very powerful wings and a fortissimo whistle. In fact Mlle. Jacquot is a parrot, the property of M. Nicaise, a member of the Anthropologic society, of Paris. He has owned her for nearly a quarter of a century.

The parrot can imitate any sound it hears, and when the day is bright and she is hung out in her cage at the front window for a sun bath, she is certain of a good audience in the street below, for her fame is known of all men (and street urchins) in the city. Mlle. Jacquot's star performance is her wonderfully realistic mimicry of a hog killing. This thrilling accomplishment she picked up while in the country, whither she had been sent for safe keeping when her master went off to the war to fight the Germans. This imitation Jacquot gives in such a truly artistic fashion that many strangers hearing it for the first time have been thoroughly startled by the piercing squeals and piteous grunts.

Whenever M. Nicaise goes toward the window for the purpose of raising or lowering it the parrot perfectly imitates the sound which will ensue before her master has touched the sash. When he comes home in the evening Jacquot scents his approach at a considerable distance and notifies her mistress by calling, "Do Do!" at the top of her voice. She is very familiar with her mistress, whom she calls Marie. On one occasion the bird was in the sitting room near the fire when a coal fell out of the grate and ignited the carpet. Polly in a loud tone cried for "Marie," and thus undoubtedly prevented what might have been a serious blaze.

Mlle. Jacquot is fond of dancing, and whenever she is seized with a saltatorial fit she composes her own music, and, more remarkable still, although she never repeats an air twice, she invariably ends on the same key on which she began. The most pleasant feature of her performances is that she never sulks when asked to "show off." She is as proud of her accomplishments as a boy is of his first pair of boots. Jacquot does not like men and persistently refuses to be sociable with them, but to women she is the most approachable of birds. When her mistress punishes her for some misdemeanor she assumes a penitent look and moans in a way that is ludicrous in the extreme. Altogether she is undoubtedly the most wonderful parrot in the world, and certainly the most valuable, for it would take a small fortune to buy her from her present owners, who really regard her as "one of the family."

An Ancient Female Office Holder.

It seems that the emancipation of woman is an old story and not one of the triumphs of modern civilization. The noted scholar Halevy has complied from the cuneiform tablets discovered at El-Amura an account of an Egyptian governor of Jerusalem under Amenophis IV, 1,500 years before the Christian era. At that time Palestine was in a very disturbed state, overrun by the Babylonian hordes and misgoverned by the local satraps. At this early period Jerusalem was a populous city and contained a temple consecrated to the god Adar. The bureau of the royal archives was under the direction of a woman, and as that was a highly important charge the incumbency of a female indicates that the fair sex probably had a reasonable share of offices.

A Prominent Pennsylvanian.

Hon. Galusha A. Grow's connection with the national Republican convention has served to renew interest in a man for whose political future, in 1860, no prediction would have been considered too roseate. Although elected, after ten years of continuous service, speaker of the lower house of what was probably the most important congress which has ever sat in the United States, Mr. Grow was not renominated.

At the age of twenty-seven, when he succeeded the great Wilmot, author of the celebrated proviso which bears his name, he was regarded with much curiosity. He speedily convinced congress that he was not a green youth, but a man who had devoted considerable time to the study of the important questions of the day. He soon became a commanding figure on the floor, and when the Missouri compromise was repealed and he severed his connection with the Democratic party he almost immediately became the Republican leader, and in 1861 was elected speaker.

Mr. Grow was born in Windham county, Conn., in 1824, but was raised in Pennsylvania, whither his mother, who had been left a widow while Galusha was still a small child, had removed. He is well off, having made considerable money in Texas railroad investments. It is said that in 1876 he was offered the Russian mission, but declined. He is unmarried and enjoys robust health.

A SAND THAT BARKS.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE MUSICAL EARTH OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

A Savant Describes a Curious Portion of the Globe's Makeup—Musical Sand Is Found in Several Countries—Some Hypotheses to Explain the Cause.

The so-called "barking sands" of Kauai are mentioned in the works of several travelers in the Hawaiian islands, and have a worldwide fame as a natural curiosity. As a rule, however, the printed accounts are meager in details, and show the authors to have been unacquainted with similar phenomena elsewhere.

Jointly with Dr. Alexis A. Julien, of Columbia college, New York, I have been studying the properties of sonorous sand for a long time, and have visited many localities in America, Europe and Asia; hence I was able during a recent visit to Kauai to make some notes and comparisons that may interest the residents of this kingdom.

Notwithstanding recent rains I found the sand on the dune at Mana dry to the depth of four or five inches, and when pushed down the steep incline it gave out a deep base note having a tremulous character. This hardly resembles the "barking" of a dog, but a sound somewhat like it is produced by plunging the hands into the sand and bringing them vigorously together. Another way is to fill a long bag three-quarters full of sand, and then dividing its contents into two parts, holding one in each hand, to clap the two portions together. This I had found to be a good method for testing the sonorousness of sand on sea beaches. A bag of the sand will preserve its acoustic qualities a long time if kept dry and not too frequently manipulated. The angle at which the sand lies where it falls over the dune is 31 degrees; the sonorousness extends several hundred feet along the dune, being interrupted by a creeping vine that thrives marvelously in such a soil.

A similar dune of sonorous sand occurs on Niihau, as has long been known to residents of the island, and it has been also reported to occur near Koloe.

These observations, simple as they are, have been of special interest to me, because they show that the sand of these localities forms a link between that of the sea beaches and that of a certain hill on the Gulf of Suez known as Jebel Nagous, and which I visited in April, 1889. Sonorous sand is of more common occurrence than generally supposed. It is found on the Atlantic coast of the United States from Maine to Florida, on the Pacific coast, in Europe, Japan, Africa, Tasmania, etc., as well as on the shores of many fresh water lakes. In these localities it forms areas generally between low tide and the base of adjoining dunes, and emits sounds only when subjected to friction by the feet and hands or in a bag as described. At Jebel Nagous, in Arabia, on the other hand, the sand rests in a ravine, and produces sound only when it rolls down the incline (which it often does spontaneously) and fails to respond to kicks and cuffs.

The sand at Mana, as shown, unites in itself both these acoustic properties. The angle at which the sand lies at Jebel Nagous is the same as at Mana, 31 degrees being the "angle of rest" for fine dry sand. The musical notes obtained at these far separated localities are also the same, but in Arabia the incline is 390 feet high, and consequently the sounds are far louder, especially as they are further magnified by being echoed from adjoining cliffs.

The sand at Kauai and Niihau is made up of fragments of shell and coral, while that of all other localities known to us (over 100 in number) is siliceous. This shows that the sonorousness is independent of material. Examination under the microscope further shows that the sonorous quality is not connected with the shape of the grain.

Sonorous sand is distinguished by being free from fine dust or silt; the individual grains are very uniform in size. It is very easy to deprive sand of its acoustic power by mixing a little earth with it or by wetting it. It is difficult, if not impossible, to restore to sand its sonorous quality when once "killed."

A number of hypotheses have been proposed to explain the cause of this curious property of certain sands. The prevalent idea in these islands that the sound is due to the cellular structure of the sand must be abandoned, since most sonorous sand is not so constituted, that of Kauai forming an exception. Some have attributed the sonorous quality to saline crusts, others to electricity, effervescence of air between the particles, reverberation within subterranean cavities and to solarization, and one author attempts to explain the phenomena by writing of "a reduplication of impulses setting air in vibration in a focus of echo."

These theories Dr. Julien and I reject for reasons I cannot here detail, and we believe the true cause of sonorousness to be connected with thin pellicles or films of air or of gases thence derived, deposited and condensed upon the surface of the sand grains during gradual evaporation after wetting by seas, lakes or rains. By virtue of these films the sand grains become separated by elastic cushions of condensed gases, capable of considerable vibration, whose thickness we have approximately determined. The extent of the vibration and the volume and pitch of the sound produced we also find to be largely dependent upon the forms, structures and surfaces of the sand grains, and especially upon their purity or freedom from fine silt or dust.

We have shown that the pitch of the musical notes obtained on sea beaches is proportional to the mass of sand moved—the greater the mass the lower the tones. On the dunes of Kauai and Niihau the same holds true.—H. Carrington Bolton, Ph. D., in Honolulu Commercial Advertiser.

Audible.

Customer—Is this woolen material new?

Tailor—Yes, sir. It's so new you can almost hear it bleat.—Clothier and Furnisher.

A Boy Congress.

After the house adjourned Congressman Belden, of New York, brought the gavel down with great dignity and called the pages to order, writes Amos J. Cummings. A page three feet high moved that the house go into committee of the whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of a bill increasing the salaries of the employes of the house. Belden put the question with the most profound gravity and it was carried. Thereupon the genial congressman called the smallest page on the floor to the chair, retired to his seat and enjoyed the fun for an hour or more.

Then a tow headed page moved that the committee rise and report the bill favorably to the house. The motion was carried, and Mr. Belden again resumed the chair. The three foot page descended the steps and appeared at the bar. He reported the proceedings of the committee with precision and dispatch. Then the previous question was ordered, the bill received its third reading and was put upon its final passage. It was carried. The little page gravely moved to reconsider it and lay that motion upon the table. "There being no objection," said Belden, "it is so ordered." Young Dean Halford, a nephew of Whistling Elijah, then moved that the house adjourn. This was carried, and Mr. Belden gave the desk a parting whack and received the congratulations of the pages.

Cleopatra at the Fair.

A citizen of Alexandria, Egypt, named Alexander Tagliaferro, has written to the World's fair management inclosing a photograph of a sarcophagus, which he believes and claims to be that of Cleopatra. He says it was recently discovered in Cæsar's camp, near Alexandria. After paying the Egyptian government its dues the writer says he sold it to a friend for speculation. When the sarcophagus was opened the contents fell in ashes with the exception of the skeleton, which is still preserved. Mr. Tagliaferro says he is prompted to negotiate with the exposition authorities from notices which he has seen in newspapers of the United States announcing that the khedive of Egypt has been asked by the directors of the exposition for the mummy of Rameses. He begs to offer for sale this sarcophagus and skeleton for the sum of £12,000 sterling on the spot, the inference being that the purchaser will be required to pay freight. In explaining the features of this tomb he states that the five faces on three sides are positively the images of Cleopatra.—Chicago Mail.

How to Keep Fish When Caught.

The angler should take care of his fish after he has caught them. It is discreditable to fetch back a lot of sun and wind dried fish, all curled up and stiff. Put a handful of grass or ferns in the bottom of the creel and kill the fish as soon as caught by hitting them a sharp blow on the back of the head. If the weather is hot clean the morning's catch at noon, and every few hours dip the creel in the stream. The best way to keep fish to take home is as follows: Clean them thoroughly, taking care to remove the gills and the blood under the backbone, wipe dry inside and out, but do not wash them; sprinkle them inside with black pepper; but on no account use salt. Pack in cool, fresh grass and keep them in the shade. If ice is used it should be put in a tin can, or at least at the bottom of the creel, for it spoils the flavor of fish to have them soaking in water.—Forest and Stream.

Fell a Hundred Feet.

We are now at the beginning of that season of the year when accidents to mountain tourists are unfortunately not of rare occurrence. Our Vienna correspondent telegraphs that a young Viennese ascended the Rex with two companions. After viewing the splendid sunrise the three young men, although without a guide, resolved to descend on the steep side of the mountain. At several places the descent is made by means of ladders, and at one of these spots the young man missed his footing and fell a distance of one hundred feet. He was killed on the spot.—London News.

A Walking Benefaction.

A gentleman whose name should be handed down to perspiring posterity as the greatest benefactor of the summer of 1890 walked down Broadway at the hottest hour of the hottest day last week. He was only a tramp, and an awful specimen of his kind at that, but he wore a heavy hooded ulster, buttoned from his chin to his toes, with such a delightful air of ease and comfort that he sent a grateful chill, worth at least twenty-five cents to each recipient, down the spines of fully 10,000 sweltering pedestrians.—New York Times.

Bruin Caught Napping.

P. O. Sullivan, who lives about six miles above the junction of the Middle and South Fork of Boise, on the former, killed a black bear with a knife. He had followed the bear for several miles. It lay down beside a rock, and Sullivan crept up to it and plunged a big knife into a vital part. George Alexander, who is a neighbor, and saw the bear where it was dead, was in the city and related the story. It was very large and would weigh 500 pounds.—Boise (Idaho) Statesman.

Here are a few amusing blunders that have just occurred in examinations in Boston public schools: One little girl said that "in 1620 the Pilgrims came to Massachusetts for the purpose of fighting the battle of Bunker Hill." Another said: "In 1682 William Penn explored Pennsylvania with a crew of Quakers." In another paper a small boy, who had evidently heard that the English people were fond of meats, said that of all the countries he had rather visit England, because he would like to see the Thames river and the beef eaters.

Among the passengers who have just arrived on the steamship Empress of India from China and Japan is the Japanese architect Fukushinia, who will superintend the construction of the Japanese buildings at the World's Fair. Seventeen Japanese carpenters also came who will go to Chicago.

IS CELEBRATED THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE NORTHWEST FOR ITS fertile soil, producing immense crops of wheat, oats, barley, hay, potatoes and vegetables of every description.

Dairying is a very prominent industry in this region, the soil producing the finest grass in the world for this purpose, rivaling the celebrated dairying districts of England.

Fruits of all kinds suited to this climate yield in abundance.

As a resort for the pleasure-seeker and sportsman it cannot be excelled. The drives are delightful, and beautiful groves along the Dungeness river provide fine spots for picnic and camping parties. This river also furnishes unrivaled sport for the angler, while the country abounds in game, from the quail, grouse and duck in the lowlands to the deer, elk and bear found in the mountains, a few miles distant.

The new town of DUNGENESS, only a few months old, is situated on Dungeness Bay, at the mouth of the Dungeness river, having a $12,000 wharf, at which several steamers land daily, directly to and from Seattle, Port Townsend and Port Angeles. A fine new hotel provides accommodations for guests. Educational advantages are of the best; a new schoolhouse, to cost $2,500, is now in process of erection. A neat church building provides a place of worship for a flourishing congregation. Daily mails and a telegraph station furnish speedy communication with all points.

The scenery at this point is superb. Charming views on water and on land meet the eye, and furnish a paradise for the artist.

The climate of DUNGENESS is one of the most pleasant and healthful in the world.
