THE G. N. TO ENTER TACOMA.

The Road Will be Rushed and Traffic Opened by July 1.

TACOMA, March 3.—The Great Northern will be built to Tacoma by July 1st. This information came from an unquestionably authentic source today. The contract will be let in 30 days and construction commenced inside of 60 days. Trains will be running July 1. Arrangements have been made to purchase the Union Pacific survey between Tacoma and Seattle. It is not definitely known whether the road will follow the valley route or the shore line, both are being considered. Several secret agents have quietly been working here for some time past in the interests of the road. P. P. Shelby, the general manager of the Great Northern, was in the city today looking over the ground at the head of the bay. When seen said he had nothing to say.

At Dungeness

On Friday morning last, Freddie Anderson, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs John P. Anderson, met his death by scalding. It appears that his mother had just filled a tub with boiling water, an in some unaccountable way the little fellow fell into it.

With the poet we said:

Two little hands lay over his breast
Two little feet laid down to rest,
Two little eyes in slumber closed
How our hearts' bleeding none but God knows.
One little voice that prattled in love
Now is singing with angles above,
There he is watching and waiting for thee
When you shall cross the dark rolling sea.

Dear little hands oft reached out to thee
Dear little form that sat on thy knee,
Now it is still and silent for aye
Angels have your darling away.
Still in the mansions so high and fair
Up above the golden stair.
One little voice is singing to thee
Yes I am waiting and watching for thee.

A Forty Mile Ride.

E. R. Swetnam, of Fairfax Station Virginia, says: "A party came forty miles to my store for Chamberlin's Cough Remedy and bought a dozen bottles. The remedy is a great favorite in this vicinity and has performed some wonderful cures here." It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough and is a favorite where known.

HE COMMITTED SUICIDE.

A Clallam County Rancher Becomes Desperate

AND CUTS HIS THROAT IN SEATTLE.

From the Effects of Which He Died Last Wednesday—Minerva Literary Contest—The Shingle Industry in Clallam County—In the Superior Court—Other Items of General Interest.

James Hamblin, a well-known resident of Clallam county, says the Seattle P. I., made a desperate attempt at suicide Monday morning, by cutting his throat with a pocket knife at the Clifton house, on South Fifth street, and now lies at the Providence hospital in a serious condition. Delirium tremens, resulting from a spree and a love affair, are the supposed causes of the attempt.

Hamblin took a room at the Dereg hotel, at the corner of Jackson and South Third streets, last Saturday morning, saying he wanted to "straighten up." He said he did not want to stay alone, and when the clerk told him he could not stay with him he said he could "do" the clerk, but the latter soon forced him to the bed and laid him down. Then he remained quiet and took some medicine prescribed by Dr. Noble. He acted wildly on Saturday, but was so quiet next morning that his nurse left him and he was allowed to go out alone. On Sunday evening he went out and between 11 and 12 o'clock took a room at the Clifton house, not appearing under the influence of liquor.

But between 5 and 6 o'clock next morning Mrs. W. C. Thomas, the housekeeper, was awakened by moans coming from his room and, on going to learn the cause, found Hamblin stretched on his back on the bed, his mouth open, his face, hands and arms covered with blood. Blood also stained the bed clothes and lay in a pool on the floor, near which were a short-bladed knife and a pocket-book.

Mrs. Thomas was at first motionless with horror, but the wounded man's groans brought her to her senses, and she applied a few simple remedies, which revived him.

"Oh, God, have mercy," he gasped, and Mrs. Thomas rejoined:

"Amen. Grant that he will show mercy now."

"Will I die?" asked Hamblin.

He was assured that he could be pulled through, if he would keep quiet and not talk, and Health Officer Palmer was summoned from police headquarters. He found that Hamblin had driven the knife into the right side of his neck behind the wind-pipe and twisted it around, leaving a hole the size of a walnut, and had cut a deep gash on the left side below the chin. He had also drawn the knife across the left wrist. He was much weakened by loss of blood and there would have been no hope of saving him but for his strong constitution. He was taken to Providence hospital.

Mrs. Thomas afterwards found in his room a note which read:

"Give my money and warrants to Minnie Angeles." There was also found scribbled on the back of a note-book the following message:

"I am tired of trying to do right and always go wrong. Now I do quit, see? Send for Dr. Noble. He will do the best he can to square everything. So long, anyway."

These two notes fit in with a story told Monday by a Port Angeles man. He said Hamblin was engaged to a girl at that place and, though he was a bartender, quit drinking and conceived a disgust for liquor. But about two weeks ago he went to a gambling room, began playing, took a few drinks and thus started a spree. He took the next boat for Seattle and wound up his spree at the Dereg. Some think his attempt at suicide was simply the result of his spree, while others said he was afraid to return home and face his betrothed after it. When asked if he wanted to see Minnie Krune, he shook his head and burst into tears.

The money referred to in his note was $56 found on his person and the warrants are drawn on the Clallam county bridge fund, and are for a considerable sum. He is said to have a ranch in Clallam county.

During the day Hamblin had two hemorrhages and was greatly weakened thereby.

The subject in this drama in real life is not a resident of this city, but of Forks.

Hamblin died from his wounds at Providence hospital, Seattle, last Wednesday.

The Shingle Industry.

Mr. W. H. Lambert, of this city, who has been laboring industriously for some time past, for the establishment here of shingle mills, speaks encouragingly of the outlook.

While in Seattle recently he interested a number of prominent shingle manuf cturers, who promised to investigate the opportunities offered by Clallam for shingle mills, and, if favorable, establish a large mill here.

The large belt of cedar near this city is sufficient to supply several large mills for many years to come, while scattered throughout the county are belts of this timber, justifying a large number of mills.

If the Whatcom gentleman arrange business matters satisfactorily, he will, no doubt, build the pioneer shingle mill on Port Angeles harbor, which, it is hoped, will be the beginning of what will develop into an important industry.

TACOMA'S TREASURER REPORTS.

Boggs Made a Report to the City Council Meeting.

Tacoma's City Treasurer George W. Boggs, made his report to the city council, showing $704,585.29 in the city treasury. The report is in detail and shows where every dollar of the city's money is deposited or held. Fifteen of the banks of the city have deposits of various amounts. There is over $500,000 in cash and about $200,000 in unendorsed city warrants, which are held as cash.

The populists have tried a number of times to compel Mr. Boggs to make such a report, but he has laughed at them and told them that he would tell where the money was when it suited his purpose to do so. This brought forth the many accusations that all was not as it should be in the treasurer's office and some went so far as to openly assert their belief that Mr. Boggs' affairs were in such condition that he dared not report the condition of the city's finances. Mr. Boggs has turned a deaf ear upon all this talk until today, when he rendered such a report to the council that the most skeptical is forced to accept it as all right. Mr. Boggs in justifying his actions, gives as his reason for the course he has pursued, the statement that he believed the people were unnecessarily alarmed and that he did not consider it to the best interests of the whole city to name the banks in which the city's money was deposited during the panicky times.

"Now that people have quit howling at me," said he, "I thought it a good time to make my report and I believe the people will uphold me in the course I have taken."

The report was accepted by the council and filed.

They Want the Best.

"The people of this vicinity insist on having Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and do not want any other," says John V. Bishop, of Portland Mills Indiana. That is right. They know it to be superior to any other for colds, and as a preventative and cure for croup, and why should they not insist upon having it.

COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

Tone—New Departure in Shipping Circles—The Detrick Steamship Company Establishes its Line on the Sound—This City One of the Points of Destination—Other Commercial Notes.

The past week has marked an important epoch in the history of shipping at this port.

It marks the establishment of a new steamship line—the Detrick Steamship Company, placing the steamer Farrallon, in semi-monthly service between this city and San Francisco.

The new departure was brought about through the intercession of Mr. B. F. Van Lehn, who returned from a business trip to San Francisco on the new steamer, Farrallon, last Tuesday.

The Farrallon carries 800 tons, is schooner rigged, and very compactly built. While the accommodations for passengers are limited, it is the intention of the company to remodel the vessel so as she will accommodate at least fifty passengers.

The fare from San Francisco to this point will be $15 first-class and $7.50 steerage, while freight rates will be made as low as possible.

The Farrallon brought 500 tons of freight on her initial trip, twenty five tons of which were for this city, which is, indeed, a very favorable beginning.

The establishment by the Hastings' Steamboat company of tri-weekly steamer service between Victoria and this city is significant of advancement, and a proper recognition of the advantageous situation of this city from a commercial standpoint.

The Farrallon was, not, however, the only ocean steamer arriving during the week—the steamship Puebla came in from San Francisco, bringing twenty-two tons and the steamship Signal, from Portland, with eleven tons. The Signal had thirteen Chinamen for Vancouver en route to China.

Danta Horton, the bimetallist, has come to Berlin and set himself in communication with the German champions of silver. He watches closely the proceedings of the imperial currency commission.

Chicezburn Watanabe, of Tokio, Japan, is in Mexico studying the silver question. Later he will come to the United States on a similar mission.

The last act in the Honduran revolution has been played. Peace has been signed and the government will be turned over to Bonilla, head of the revolutionary party today.

The Italian deputies have adopted the recommendations of the convention of the Latin Union providing for redemption of Italian coinage, which was signed in Paris on November 15th last.

The intercontinental railway commission's report states that the practicability of a railway between the United States and South America has been fully demonstrated by recent surveys.

The Northern Pacific reorganization committee representing the consolidated mortgage bondholders, reports that the German holders of $7,948,000 of the bonds have signed the bondholders' agreement.

PACIFIC POST SURPRISED

By the Women's Relief Corps Who Entertain the Old Veterans Royally.

Twenty-seven veterans of Pacific Post No. 48, G. A. R., in regular meeting assembled on Friday evening last were surprised by a large force of ladies from the local camp of the Women's Relief Corps, who applied for admission without any explanation. After considerable delay, perchance occasioned by time taken to hide away wooden goats, greased pigs and poles, or whatever appertains to secret doing of old chaps out at night, the ladies filed into the hall and took possession. They carried sundry mysterious packages from which was produced refreshments in vast variety, including hot coffee and chicken fixings which was militarily served and highly appreciated.

Thereafter Mrs. Haynes, president of the corps, made some fraternal remarks and happily introduced first, Mrs. Place, who touchingly recited a poem, "The Army Mule;" secondly, Mrs. Malony, who read "The Clown's Baby;" thirdly, Mrs. Phelps, who impressionably rendered some patriotic reading, and lastly, Miss Chambers, who thrillingly entertained the assembly by a recitation "Drafted."

This being the end of the ladies' program, the post commander signaled Commander Bradley "To the front and centre." The Captain acting on behalf of the post, thanked the ladies in some well chosen remarks, closing with a poetic tribute from Rogers' Human Life, entitled "Woman."

Comrade Phelps then sung "Marching Through Georgia," all joining in the chorus with a patriotic hum and vigor that made everyone glad to be there—in the hall.

Captain Bradley was next called upon for a song or story. He hesitatingly advanced to the foot of the rostrum, and firmly remarked, in dignified and solemn style:

"I will sing, with your permission, if you please, a solo which should be followed by the chorus to the song—a chorus which is doubtless familiar to some old soldiers, if not to our American nightingales. When I say "chorus," I would like to have all of you unhesitatingly join in the singing of it."

Undivided attention followed these remarks. The "vets" swelled out their chests like so many organ bellowses ready to play; the ladies signified their confidence to follow and the Captain cleared his throat in Emerald Isle style, not taking a drink, however, and set out with the rollicking song "The Irish Schoolmaster:"

Ould Teddy O Rourke kept a bit iv a school,
In a place called Claran-nin ny, and made it a rule,
Phin the moind wouldn't mark, faith he'd soon mark the back,
Wid his riddle, come daddle, come diddle, come whack,
Singing tu ra, ra da, da fa de la, la da dum,
Tu ro ra, ra da, fa de la-lay.

Chorus.

Wid his birchin' and batin, his drinkin' and atin',
His hil-la-ba loo, his row-de-dow-whack,
His whack fa de la, de dum, fal de lal lay,
Whack fa de la, de dum, too rah, de lay.

Boistrous laughter followed and the singer murdered because no one joined in the chorus."

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Portland Oregon, September 23, 1892.

Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—Years of exposure and hard work, combined with the strain coming from the jar of an engine, gave me a severe case of lame back, from which I suffered for seven years. I was so bad that I could not bend my back. Was all doubled up with it. I bought one of your belts. It helped me inside of two days, and I continued to wear it for four months, being perfectly cured. That was two years ago, and I am as well to-day as I ever was in my life. I know your belt well, and I know lots of people who have been cured by it. Many others need it, and if they would try it they would find it the same as I did—the best remedy in the world. CHAPTER XIV.

A MIDNIGHT MISSION.

I started. To Dead Man's swamp! To enter that uncanny, mysterious place at midnight was a prospect which might well daunt the most courageous of women. What could be Maurice's motive in visiting that spot? How was Portia to be benefited by such an adventure?

As if he read my thoughts, Mr. Raymond said:

"Yes, little woman, you hesitate. I expected that, but you need have no fear. You will be amply protected, and I want your assistance and presence. I need you. Will you come?"

A thrill shot through me at these words. I raised my eyes and saw in his only the kindest and tenderest expression.

"Come," he said again, holding out his hand.

I would have followed him to the ends of the earth had he so bidden me. I put my hand in his.

"I will go," I said.

At nightfall the rain ceased, but the sky was black and overcast. I shuddered as I drew back the curtains and looked out and thought of the dense tangles and thickets of the gloomy swamp. How black, how awful, how impenetrable, seemed those dusky recesses I remembered! What was I to see—to hear on this wild midnight quest? I scarcely dared ask myself.

But I resolved there should be no misgivings, no faint heartedness. I had put my hand to the plow, and I would not turn back. To save Portia, Maurice had said. Ah, yes! if by any sacrifice of creature comfort I could exorcise the evil influences surrounding my poor friend, how gladly would I make that denial!

But what did it mean? Had Maurice in any way discovered that Portia intended to pay one of her nocturnal visits to the swamp? Was it his plan to follow her and plead, threaten or command her to give over forever her association with the half human devotees of that hellish cult?

But of what avail were questionings? I found no answers to the many riddles puzzling my mind. I trusted Maurice with the blind, unreasoning trust which every woman gives to the man she loves.

For I had acknowledged the fact to my lonely heart that I loved this brilliant, intellectual, masterful man. Though my superior in every way, I yet lifted my eyes to him as a weed clings to the base of a mighty tree. Did he love me? It seemed absolute folly to think so, and yet I could not banish the look in his eyes, the ring in his voice nor the magnetic pressure of his lips upon my hands. "Good little hands," he had said, looking down on them. And now as I looked down on them, too, and remembered his words I was thankful they had never been stained with evil, and that though small they were strong and could help him on his mission, whatever it might be.

Portia did not appear at dinner, sending down a message that she was not well. I knocked at the door, but she would not admit me.

Colonel Marchmont appeared to be plunged in deeper gloom than ever. He scarcely noticed Mr. Raymond or myself. Daphne only could rouse him from the lethargy which surrounded and enveloped him. It was painful to see him so depressed, so unhappy. When spoken to, his gaze wandered, and his answers were incoherent."

"Oh, God!"

"You are not well, dear fellow," said Maurice as we left the dining room.

"I cannot sleep. I have not slept for two nights," returned the colonel. "When I close my eyes, I see her as she used to be, not as she is now—oh, God!" wildly breaking off.

"Listen, Jermyn," said Maurice in a low voice. "Your troubles are nearly at an end. No, do not ask one question now. Before another day dawns your doubts, your sorrows, will be dispelled. All I ask of you is to go to the library and remain there until I come. Do not leave the room or house. Wait there for me if you wait until daybreak. Do you promise?"

Colonel Marchmont stared at Raymond in a dazed fashion.

"Trust me, Jermyn," said Maurice, "and promise me."

"I promise," said the colonel in a strange voice.

Overhearing this, I marveled more than ever. Was it possible that Maurice intended, after bringing Portia from her rendezvous with the voodoos, to lead her into her husband's presence and oblige her to beg his forgiveness? I grew more and more mystified.

The evening dragged away. Daphne was sent to bed, Sophie receiving orders from Maurice, who seemed to have assumed command of everything, not to leave the child for one moment during the night.

Eleven o'clock. I sat in the drawing room waiting for Maurice, as we had agreed to meet there. The great house was still. There were lights in the library, where the unhappy husband kept his vigil. But everywhere else darkness brooded over the mansion. The silence, the hour, the nervous expectancy possessing me grew almost unbearable. "Where is he? Why does he not come?" I cried to myself.

Suddenly I heard stealthy footsteps in the hall above, on the stairs, then the rustle of a woman's dress.

Stepping softly to the drawing room door, I looked out. A figure wrapped in black was descending the stairs. It was Portia. Clinging to the stair rail with one hand, with the other she was drawing a long black lace scarf over her face, which in the dim light was ghastly and terrible to see.

Just as she reached the lower stairs a man stepped quickly out from the corner of the hall. Maurice!

Without a word he confronted her. She stared at him for an instant with dilating eyes; then, evidently realizing her helplessness, with a gasp fell forward. He caught her in his arms and carried her up the stairs. I heard the door of the room open and in another moment shut. Then a key softly clicked in a lock, and presently Maurice came down the stairs again.

He came into the drawing room. "Prudence," he said in a low voice, "are you here?"

"Yes," I responded, going toward him.

"Are you ready?"

"Yes."

"Give me your hand. Ah! Pulse all right, nerves steady. Good. Come."

"But Portia"——

"Well, what of her?"

"She is ill. I ought to go to her."

"She will soon be better. It is nothing serious. You can help her more by going to the swamp than in any other way."

He drew me out upon the piazza, wrapped my shawl closer about me, and tucking my hand under his arm led the way down the path toward the swamp.

There was no conversation. We walked in utter silence. Once or twice he turned and looked back. I had a fancy that he was looking to see if we were followed.

Just as we came to the wall and the closed gate a dark figure rose suddenly up, it seemed to me, from the earth.

I suppressed a faint shriek.

"Don't be alarmed," said Maurice. "Jake, is that you?"

"Yes," answered the big overseer.

"You have your rifle?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are the boys at hand?"

"Yes, sir; here they are," as two brawny negroes stepped out of the darkness.

"That's all right. Now, I don't apprehend any trouble; still there may be some. I wish the lady to be protected in any event. You remain here close by the gate. If you hear my pistol, come; otherwise wait for us."

"All right, sir," replied Jake.

Mr. Raymond drew a key from his pocket and opened the gate.

He held out his hand.

"Come, Prudence," he said.

We stepped through the gate. He did not lock it behind us.

"Remember, Jake," he said in a low tone, "if you hear my pistol, lose no time."

"Yes, sir."

Black, slimy and filthy stretched the morass about us. We were in Dead Man's swamp.

CHAPTER XV.

THE FRIGHTFUL TRUTH.

The path was so narrow we were obliged to go in Indian file for a part of the way, but as the forest grew thicker and denser about us the path broadened. Huge cypresses barred our way; long, drifting moss dangled in our faces; brackish pools wet our feet, but on, on we went. Through clusters of huge fern, over logs rising like reptiles from the water, our road lay. Around us stretched those sullen solitudes, oppressive and hideous. To my excited fancy it seemed that ghostly hands were reaching out to impede our progress or to trip us as we walked. Closer I clung to Maurice's side, and tighter his hand gripped mine.

And now, as on the first night I had seen this desolate place, I was conscious of a strange impulse urging me on. Who was it calling me? What was it that beckoned me? I could not go fast enough, but longed for wings to fly.

"Oh, what is it?" I whispered to Maurice. "What does it mean? We are losing time. Let us hasten."

"Hush!" he gently said. "Yes, time has been lost, but we are not too late."

Suddenly a mournful sound was borne through the forest—a monotonous droning wail, horrid, harsh and threatening. And then at a quick turn in the path a bright light glowed through a rift in the black foliage, and I saw a sight I can never forget.

In a little clearing was a bonfire. Round about this fire circled slowly, with lugubrious cries, a ring of half naked black men and women. Back of the circle on a rough throne built of boxes and logs sat the horrible old negress Jezebel. Her rags fluttered in the night wind; her scanty locks were tossed over her bare, skinny shoulders. In one hand she held a forked stick, and in the other, dreadful to relate, a writhing, wriggling snake. As we looked, rising from her throne she held the serpent aloft and waved her forked scepter slowly three times. It was the signal for a wild, unlicensed dance, an abandoned, lascivious measure, in which I was horrified to trace resemblances to Portia's audacious outburst in the hall a few nights before.

"Those are Portia's friends," whispered my guide. "What do you think of them?"

"Oh, is it not terrible?" I murmured. "We must—we must save her!"

Old Jezebel shook her serpent. The negroes leaped and bounded in frenzy. Many fell exhausted on the ground, foaming at the mouth and clutching at the fire.

It was the most awful sight I had ever seen. "Oh, let us go back!" I moaned. "What can we do here?"

"Our work is only begun," said Maurice. "Nerve yourself now, little Bunker Hill, for what is coming."

By this time the negroes had fallen down and lay insensible here and there.

Old Jezebel shook her serpent.

The old woman sank back upon her throne in a stupor. She held the snake pressed to her withered breast. I was sickened, terrified, faint.

"Do you see that wretched hut yonder?" said Maurice. "That is old Jezebel's home. We must enter it."

"Oh, why?" I asked in a terrified whisper.

"Because there only is the talisman which will save Portia," he answered.

Creeping stealthily forward, we passed the stupid voodoos, worn out with their disgusting orgies. The hut, quite overgrown with trailing vines, was scarcely fit for swine to inhabit. Through the half open door the red gleam of the fire darted, lighting up the miserable room. In one corner was a wretched pallet of straw and rags, and on it something lay.

"Come here," said Maurice solemnly, taking off his hat as if in the presence of death; "come here, Prudence.

I looked—and, oh, God! Oh, God! What was this?

Worn and wasted to a skeleton, clad in filthy rags, pale as marble, insensible, dead perhaps, lay—Portia!

Yes, the real Portia—not the handsome, bold pretender up at the great house yonder, but my Portia—my Portia, the friend of my girlhood, the cousin of my Maurice.

I flung my arms about the wasted form. I kissed the pallid brow. I wept and moaned as a mother might over a dead child.

"You recognize her?" said Maurice.

"Oh, my Portia, my dear friend, who has done this cruel thing? Let us take her away," I sobbed.

Maurice bent down and lifted her in his arms. As he did so a faint moan escaped from her lips.

"She is alive!" I cried joyfully.

Slowly she opened her eyes and looked straight in Maurice's face.

"Oh, home, home!" was all she moaned.

"Yes, dearest," said Maurice tenderly, "you are going home."

Gathering her closer, he strode from the hut. I followed more dead than alive.

Past the sodden voodoos, back through the night and the noisome swamp, we fled with our precious burden; back to the gate guarded by the faithful servants. Jake flung it open when he heard our footsteps.

"Are you all right, Mr. Raymond?" he cried, advancing to meet us. "You were so long I was afraid something had happened. My God, what is it?"

"Strike a match, Jake," said Maurice.

The man obeyed.

"Come closer, and you, Tom, and you, George," he added, "and tell me who is this."

The men bent their rugged faces.

"Great God!" said Jake, "Mrs Marchmont."

"It's missus," cried the others. "Den who?"

"Yes. Who—who is the other?" cried Maurice, white with rage. "I know who it is. You were all blind to what was going on, but I knew her from the first. Lock the gate, Jake, and you men come up to the house with me. I've work for you yet tonight."

Up to the great silent mansion we hurried—the steps, the piazza, the hall and now the library.

Colonel Marchmont had risen at the sound of our footsteps and stood facing the door.

"Jermyn," said Maurice in a voice choked with emotion, "Jermyn, I have brought home your poor wife."

He laid her tenderly in her husband's arms. Colonel Marchmont stared at Portia as he might at a specter.

"Is it true?" he whispered hoarsely. "Is it true? Have you come back from the grave, darling?"

His pathetic words moved us all, and George, one of the biggest, blackest negroes on the place, suddenly burst out crying like a baby.

Possibly that act saved his master's reason, for he, too, wept then, laying his face close to the hollow, sunken cheek of the woman he held to his heart.

CHAPTER XVI.

A FIGHT FOR LIFE.

What a night that was!

As I recall it now it was a shifting panorama of action and tumult. There were ringing of bells, rousing of servants, lighting of fires, preparation of baths and cordials and a hurried summons of the physician from the neighboring town, who sat by the bed till daybreak fanning the feeble flame of life which threatened to go out forever.

"She has been dosed and drugged so long," Dr. Spencer said, "that I greatly fear it will not be possible to save her. However, I'm going to make a fight for the poor lady's life."

Oh, it was pitiful to see her, a mere wreck of herself, helpless as a baby, at times moaning in distress and only saying feebly over and over, "Home, home!"

Her arms were one mass of scars. The doctor examined them gravely. "Here is where they have injected their poison," he said. "It's a marvel she is alive. This has been going on for two years. She has been starved and drugged. I cannot understand why they didn't kill her outright. It would have been infinitely more humane."

"Do you see?" said Maurice to Colonel Marchmont, lifting one of the thin arms and pointing to a mark, "Do you see, Jermyn? There is the little tattoo mark I gave her when a boy. I had tattooed my hand here," and he showed the place, "and when she saw it she begged I should tattoo her arm. Then nothing would do but Sidonie must have one too. However, I made a different mark on that devil."

"Don't, my dear boy," said the colonel gently. "Don't speak about her now."

The scene in the drawing room when Maurice forcibly tore back the sleeve of our hostess suddenly came to me. I knew now for what he was looking.

But who and what was this other woman—this Sidonie, who was the exact counterpart of Portia, and who had for some wicked reason brought all this misery on a happy home?

WELL CHOSEN.

If England's radicals really desire reform they will hardly refuse the leadership of the Earl of Rosebery. Lord Rosebery's practical reform, his genial fellowship and his brilliant attainments have done much to help the Liberal party. Under his leadership success is more sure for the Liberal party than it would be under that of any man in England, save Gladstone.

There was but one other man in Great Britain who could successfully hold together those people who have learned to follow the "Grand Old Man."

Harcourt would not do, he is too weak and too old. Labouchere has not the confidence nor the respect of the English business world. Majoribanks is an astute politician and a keen statesman, but he would not make a premier and he knows it, so he supports Rosebery.

Lord Spencer and the Earl of Kimberley, are both encumbered, as is Rosebery, with a peerage, without the latter's splendid abilities to their credit, so both were out of the question. So it remained to select between Lord Rosebery and plain, honest John Morley. Morley has long been the main support to Gladstone in the House of Commons, and by his steady, uncompromising fidelity and his undisputed ability he has gained the confidence of all men.

It mattered little which of the two was chosen. Rosebery is probably more popular, and is certainly more brilliant. His career has kept him before the people to a greater extent than Morley's. However, England has the service of both. With Lord Rosebery as premier, John Morley will be the right hand man just as Lord Rosebery would have been had John Morley been selected as the Liberal leader.

The Liberal party will not default for want of leaders.

A SOUND BASIS.

The Seattle Trade Register, referring to the business out-look, says:

Business is improving all over the country in most encouraging style. The sound cities are also beginning to feel trade pick up, and this too on a far better basis than in past years.

The benefits derived from having a sound basis on which to do business are not lost on the business world. All appreciate the difficulties of sustaining the artificial condition of affairs that has existed since the operations of the McKinley tariff have dominated everything, and none realize better than the business men of the country the advantage to them of the passage of the Wilson bill, which cannot be delayed much longer.

TUESDAY was a cold day for Democrats in Seattle—but then there were not many apparently to feel cold.

WHILE everyone expected Seattle to give a substantial Republican majority at Tuesday's election, the Republicans themselves did not expect their majority to be so overwhelming. The cause of the result was, more than anything else, the Democratic quarrel and the Krugg matter, together with the hard times.

THE Republicans are profiting, apparently, from the evil doings of both their party and the Democratic. They got the country into a hole and have succeeded in deluding a few people into believing the Democrats to be responsible, and then Democratic hair pulling and mud-slinging has worked to the advantage of the Republican party.

The pensions appropriation bill passed the House of Representative Wednesday without opposition—receiving the support of all parties and all sections. It provided for $14,000,000 less than the bill of a year ago.

TRADE AND SHIPPING.

Review of Seattle Markets for the Past Week.

BARLEY AND BEANS ARE HIGHER.

Hops and Wheat Unchanged—Sweet Potatoes and Cauliflower Higher—Butter Lower—

Seattle, March 9, 1894.

Exchanges at Seattle, Tacoma and Portland clearing houses to-day were:

	Clearances.	Balances.
Seattle	$151,189.97	$37,814.37
Tacoma	82,222.00	19,748.00
Portland	158,000.00	34,000.00

But few changes in prices in agricultural products have taken place during the past week. An advance in barley and beans makes about all the difference Hops and wheat remain the same.

In vegetables sweet potatoes and canliflower have advanced.

There is a decline of two cents per pound in all kinds of butter, and a similar decline in eggs.

Lard and provisions have been marked down.

Apples are scarces, especially the better grades and prices are advancing.

The Most Successful Gas Engine

In the market is run without an electric spark battery. Theory is all very well, but the every day experience of constant practical use is the best test of merit. The man who runs a launch and finds himself drifting with the tide and wind because the "spark" fails to ignite the charge of gas in his engine; the man who prints a daily paper and fails to get it off on time because the "spark" again fails; the man who has fruit that is injured for lack of irrigation because "spark" fails in his engine that runs the pump not only such parties but others who have trouble from like causes should bear in mind that the Hercules gas and Gasoline engine is free from such difficulties. The ignition is simple and sure. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until these are realized on. Palmer & Rey Type Foundry, Front and Alder streets, Portland, Oregon.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. Wortmann, of Worthan, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism; but it can be done, if the proper treatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert, of New Brunswick, Ill: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right today; and would insist on everyone who is afflicted with terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once."

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

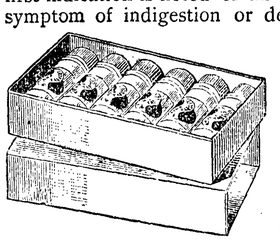
act gently but promptly upon the kidneys, liver, stomach and intestines; cleanse the system effectually; dispel colds, headaches and fevers; cure habitual constipation, making enemas unnecessary. Are acceptable to the stomach and truly beneficial in effects. A single TABULE taken after the evening meal, or just before retiring, or, better still, at the moment when the first indication is noted of an approaching cold, headache, any symptom of indigestion or depression of spirits, will remove the whole difficulty in an hour without the patient being conscious of any other than a slightly warming effect, and that the expected illness failed to materialize or has disappeared.



Disease commonly comes on with slight symptoms, which when neglected increase in extent and gradually grow dangerous.

If you suffer from Headache, Dyspepsia or Indigestion,	TAKE RIPANS TABULES
If you are Bilious, Constipated, or have a Disordered Liver,	TAKE RIPANS TABULES

March 5. COOPER & LEVY Seattle, Wash

During the mon we have added a full line of D. M. FERRY'S SEEDS. We know the importance of having reliable seeds. All the work and expense of planting amounts to naught unless the seed is of the very best. If you intend raising vegetables do not neglect to look over our seed list and order in time.

IT IS VERY GRATIFYING.—We are constantly adding new customers—our old customers stay with us and appreciate the fact that we are saving them from fifteen to twenty-five cents on every dollar. This means considerable; particularly to the cash buyer who is deserving of the closest prices.

IT IS A SUCCESS.—Out of town people who have traded with us have become convinced that they can order by mail, saving expense and time of trip, and buy the very best groceries as cheap as the shrewdest buyer in the city, and that money entrusted to us is perfectly safe and value given for every cent.

THE GENUINE AND THE SHAM.—Every good thing has its imitators. These imitators choose the best thing to counterfeit, so that when they claim their sham is as good and their prices equal to ours, the public may depend that our goods are superior and prices mere reasonable. The sham proves the genuine merit of the thing copied and never has this been better illustrated than by the imitators of our price-list, who wait every month until ours is issued and then dig in a little here and a little there. But the public understand this old game thoroughly and are not eager to change from a tried and reliable house that fills the bill in every respect.

TERMS—All orders must be accompanied by cash. Remittances can be made by express, money order, postal note or registered mail.

☞N.B.—Send no checks on interior banks. We can only use checks on Seattle banks and cannot send out goods unless these terms are complied with. Give post-office address and shipping point with each order. Do not omit to sign your name plainly to orders or letters.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Send your full name and address with proper shipping instructions. Send all remittances direct to the house, as we have no traveling agents. WE MAKE NO CHARGE FOR PACKING OR DELIVERY TO RAILROAD STATION OR WHARVES.

We quote only a few articles, and will cheerfully furnish prices on anything in the grocery line. Reference, Dexter, Horton & Co., bankers, Seattle, and Scandinavian-American Bank, Seattle.

PRICE LIST.

Our Best—This is the name of a brand of Baking Powder put up expressly for us—It is the very best baking powder that money and brains can manufacture. We claim it equal to the "Royal" or "Prices" and offer it for much less money. In place of spending thousands of dollars in advertising, and adding this cost to the price of the Powder, we have decided to introduce it among our customers. Royal and Prices baking powder are first-class, still these people spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in keeping their names before the people. Who do you suppose pays for all this? You and everybody who buys their powder. Try a can of OUR BEST POWDER in your next order; if it is not fully as represented return it and we will cheerfully refund your money. Compare these prices with Royal and remember what we say regarding the quality of OUR BEST BAKING POWDERS. Full weight—guaranteed.

SPECIAL NOTICE—We have been for a long time and are still opposed to oleomargerine. We believe two thirds of the grocers plam off the stuff for butter every time they can. We will not handle oleomargarine and believe the farmers in this state should be protected from a compound that can be manufactured at a big profit and sold at 8 to 10c per pound. We would like to see a law enforced prohibiting its sale entirely. Our specialty is PURE BUTTER.
