Wolfolk, who has been in sight of it recently, says the black smoke shoots straight up in a large volume from the snow capped peak, and the sight is a grand one from the summits at the head of Bloody run.

Wilson Garber, who for four or five years has been suspected of being a moonshiner, and whom the Federal officers of Idaho have long suspected of supplying the scattered Indians of the Big Creek country with illicit whisky, met a violent death about a week ago while fleeing from a party of men whom he thought were officers of the law. He with a couple of Indians while in a boat were carried over a forty-foot waterfall.

Work will be commenced on the Idaho building just as soon as possible.

No one substantiates the report to a certainty.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

Ivan Petroff Discharged for Giving False Information in Reports of Alaska in Behring Sea Cases.

The President has appointed Silas Alexander of New Mexico Secretary of the Territory of New Mexico, vice Benjamin M. Thomas deceased.

Secretary Noble has appointed Robert Schellicher of Lewiston, Idaho; James F. Allen of the Indian office and Cyrus Beebe of Alaska as a commission to negotiate with the Nez Perce Indians in Idaho for cession to the United States of the surplus lands of their reservation under provisions of the act of July 14, 1892.

Captain W. G. Coulson of the United States revenue marine service, has been detached from duty in command of the revenue steamer Rush and ordered to duty in the life-saving service as inspector of the stations on the Pacific Coast, vice Captain J. M. White deceased. His successor as commander of the Rush has not as yet been selected. Hobart Wilcox has been appointed keeper of the life-saving station at Cape Arago.

It has been definely decided that Governor Stone, Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office, shall be appointed Commissioner of the Bureau to succeed T. H. Carter, who resigned to accept the chairmanship of the National Republican Committee. There are several applicants for the Assistant Commissionership, and if the policy of promotion is followed, M. M. Rose, the present efficient Chief Clerk of the land office, will be given the place.

Superintendent of the Census Porter has discharged Ivan Petroff, the special agent, who, it is stated, gave false information in reports of Alaska for the State Department in the Behring Sea cases. Secretary Noble approved Porter's action. Porter in a letter to the Secretary stated that a complete history of Petroff's action precluded the supposition that Petroff was suffering from insanity. Prof. James H. Blodgett of the census office was placed in charge of the Alaska work, and after verifying it in every particular will superintend its final publication.

The State Department is disposed to have more respect for Venezuela's position in the case of refugee Mijares since the announcement by Senator Pietrie that General Crespo intended to hold the consignees of the Philadelphia responsible for her Captain's refusal to surrender Mijares. It is clear to the officials that the Venezuelan authorities have a good case, otherwise they would be disposed to allow the matter to drop. An official admitted that the Venezuelan authorities would have a perfect right to arrest and punish the consignees of the Philadelphia if it should transpire that Mijares was a criminal under the common law. The department heretofore has figured from the assumption that Minister Scruggs had prima-facie evidence that he was a political refugee, and that the charge of cattle-stealing was simply trumped up to get him off the steamer. In this light he would undoubtedly be upheld by this government, and the arrest of the consignees would probably result in a protest.

THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION.

One Haunting Fear Pervades the Inner Councils of the Managers of the World's Fair.

The expense of organizing the Russian section of Chicago Columbian Exhibition will amount to 800,000 roubles.

Mrs. Langtry is having a doll three feet high especially modeled to represent her in face, and to be dressed exactly as she was in "Cleopatra." Mrs. Langtry sends the doll as a contribution to the Chicago Exhibition.

One haunting fear pervades the inner councils of the managers of the World's Fair in Chicago. It relates to the possibilities of the return of cholera with the opening of spring. In that event it is acknowledged that the Fair would receive a blow from which it could scarcely recover.

Auditor W. K. Ackerman, of the World's Fair Commission, has tendered his resignation and has informed the local Executive Committee that a leak exists between the treasurer's office and the gates. Ackerman does not charge that the shortage is due to dishonesty, but claims that thousands of tickets of admission to the Fair have disappeared, and as he has no control over the men at the gates he declines to jeopardize his reputation by remaining in his office.

The jelly palace to be erected by the women of California for the World's Fair, of which mention has before been made in this column, will be 16x20 feet and twenty-five feet high. The entrance will be by two doors, approached by marble steps. The framework of the building will be of wire, and on this will be firmly placed several thousand jelly-glasses—cups, globes, prisms, etc. containing jellies of many colors and shades of color arranged with artistic effect and in beautiful designs. The cost of the frame work and glasses alone is estimated at $2,700, and the brilliant effect will be heightened by many electric lights.

Rewarded Five Times Over.

A mountaineer and his wife had come down out of the mountains of Kentucky to go to some new location in Tennessee. They had a little jag of household goods, and both were dressed poorly. After he had paid the freight on his goods he lacked a few shillings of having enough to pay their fare. I heard them talking it over as they sat on a baggage truck on the platform.

"We 'uns will hev to go back, I reckon," said the man.

"But we 'uns can't go back," she replied. "We 'uns has sold out and hev no place to go to."

"But what kin we 'uns do?"

"Heven't we 'uns got money 'nuff?"

"No."

"And they 'uns won't take us?"

"No."

"And we 'uns is in a fix?"

"Sartin."

"But the Lord is down yere as well as up'n the hills, hain't he?" she asked.

"He mought be, but the chances seem agin it."

"But I'll go out among the cotton bales and find a spot to pray. The Lawd never did desert his own."

"You mought try it," he said doubtingly.

I had told three or four of the boys, and we chipped in $5 and handed it to the man, and he had the money in hand when the woman returned.

"Did you pray?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Fur how much?"

"A dollar."

"And the Lord has dun sent us five!"

"Then we 'uns is no longer in a fix."

"Yere it is, and our troubles are over. Tillie, we 'uns orter hev cum down yere twenty years ago. Up thar when we 'uns axed the Lord for a dollar we 'uns sometimes got two bits out of it. Down yere when we 'uns ax fur the same he piles it on ten times over, and doan' even want to know whar' we cum from or which church we belong to!"—New York Sun.

The Tobacco Heart.

The influence of tobacco upon the heart is frequently more strongly marked than in any other direction. There are few persons who use this substance to excess who do not suffer from the disordered action of the organ in question. The impulse is rendered weaker and more irregular, so that faintness, intermittent pulse and palpitation are induced.

The tobacco heart is so well known and recognized by physicians that when the organ is found to be in an abnormal condition questions to the patient in regard to the use of tobacco are never omitted, and prohibition is insisted upon in every case without exception. I am very sure, from my own experience, that many young persons lay the seeds of organic disease of the heart from the excessive use of tobacco or from beginning it too early in life.

It not only lessens the nervous influence by which the heart is kept in action, but it causes a deterioration of the organic muscular fibres of which the organ is composed. "Weak heart" and "heart failure," so commonly met with in our day, are, I have no doubt, very often the direct consequence of the abuse of tobacco.

The use of tobacco by minors should be absolutely prohibited, not by laws which are impossible of enforcement and which encumber the statute books, but by home influence and command. If this were done we should have much less of the deleterious effects of tobacco, for it is very certain that no young person can use this substance, even in moderation, without suffering more or less severely at the time and laying up for himself future troubles of even more serious import.—Dr. William A. Hammond in New York Herald.

Show Windows Two Stories High.

"It seems strange to me," said a man who had recently returned from Europe, "that some of the New York merchants who sell dry goods, carpets, furniture, etc., do not have show windows such as are seen on the continent, which extend from the basement to the ceiling of the ground floor. If one such were arranged it would not only attract great attention on account of its novelty, but also because it would afford such an excellent opportunity for the display of goods. The longest portieres could be hung up in it, and be seen to much better advantage than is possible in most of the present windows.

"An idea of some of the merchants in Germany is to have their show windows of this kind divided into two floors. The top one is fitted up as a library or reception room and the bottom as a kitchen or dining room. The effect is very realistic, as the window looks like the section of a house."—New York Tribune.

Nutritive Properties of Cream.

The fact is not so well known as it deserves to be that cream constitutes an admirable nutriment for invalids. It is superior to butter, containing more volatile oils. Persons predisposed to consumption, aged persons, or those inclined to cold extremities and feeble digestion are especially benefited by a liberal use of sweet cream. It is far better than cod liver oil, and besides being excellent for medicinal properties it is a highly nutritious food.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Brought to a Fine Point.

"I call that rug Satsuma," said a head of a house, who refuses either to know or to pretend to know anything about pottery, although his house is well filled with specimens collected by members of his family. Satsuma has come to be his expression for everything that his youngest boy calls "daisy," and his daughter's new toque and his wife's latest purchased painting are classified alike by him, "Very pretty, quite Satsuma."—Boston Transcript.

The Monkey Wrench.

The monkey wrench is not called so on account of its fancied or actual resemblance to a monkey, or because it is a handy tool to "monkey" with, but simply because it is the invention of Mr. Charles Moncky, of Kings county, N. Y. Although the world has pretty nearly lost track of Mr. Moncky, it seems to be a settled fact that he sold his patent for $2,000 and invested the proceeds in a homestead in the above named county.—St. Louis Republic.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1892.

It's rather odd that of the eighty or more Irish members of Parliament over one-half are bachelors, who don't know anything at all about home rule.

CROMWELL said that "it was his aim not only to strike while the iron was hot, but to make the iron hot by striking." Some men wait for opportunities, and others make opportunities and circumstances wait upon them.

A LEARNED man has said that the hardest words to pronounce in the English language are "I made a mistake." When Frederick the Great wrote to the Senate, "I have just lost a battle and it's my own fault," Goldsmith said: "His confession shows more greatness than his victories.

MERE hints are the cause of nine-tenths of the misunderstandings that arise to destroy friendships, overthrow churches, and darken communities. We are afraid of each other, and so try to suggest by an indirection the wish that we dare not speak. If we would train ourselves to speak plainly, and yet kindly all our mind, there would not be a single friendship broken where there are a hundred now.

DR. CHARLES W. DULLES, a prominent physician of Philadelphia, holds to the opinion that there is hope for consumptives and that medical science will soon be abe to control the disease. In a recent paper on the subject he pointed out that while in England half a century ago there were 55,000 deaths annually among 15,000,000 people, there are at present in a population of 40,000,000 but 14,000 deaths due to phthisis.

IN the manufacture of paper this country has been making tremendous strides during the last few years. The industry has been brought to such a high state of development, and the production reduced so much in cost by improved machinery and the successful use of wood pulp under a special process, that a large export trade has been established, particularly with England. A market has also been found with Australia and elsewhere.

How many doctor's bills would be saved if every one had acted upon the suggestions of Bishop Vincent. He says: "If I were a boy with my man's wisdom, I should eat wholesome food and no other; and I should chew it well, and never 'bolt it down.' I should eat at regular hours, even if I had to have four regular meals a day. I should never touch tobacco, chewing gum, or patent medicines; never once go to bed without cleansing my teeth; never let a year go by without a dentist's inspection and treatment; never sit up late at night unless a great emergency demanded it; never linger one moment in bed when time came for getting up; never fail to rub every part of my body with a wet towel, and then with a dry one, and so forth, and so on. But all this takes will-power—and that is all it does take."

AT A DISADVANTAGE.

Many men seem to have the idea that the free coinage of silver would benefit the silver mine owner the difference between 85 cents an ounce and $1.29, the price it would be under free coinage, but that the farmer and others would be the losers. In the three staple exports, petroleum, wheat and cotton, we come into competition with silver-using countries exclusively, with the exception of Australia. Egypt and India supply cotton and wheat to Europe, and with declining values of silver in terms of gold, so long as we are on a gold basis those countries will be competing with us at a tremendous advantage. This is proved by the enormous increase in the exports of wheat and cotton from India during the last few years. By causing the appreciation of silver, as measured in gold, we make Indian wheat and cotton cost just so much more as the rise in the gold price of silver measures.

Of course we cannot expect to get the full measure of this advance. The augmented price of wheat and cotton in India and Egypt must, to a certain extent, react in order to meet the increased competition from America. But European markets will rise in sympathy with the higher cost of these exports from those countries measured in terms of gold. Of our cotton crop we export in round numbers 5,000,000 bales, and of our wheat crop from 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 bushels. It is fair to assume that the advance under normal conditions in the price of the exportable surplus of these two staples would be two-thirds of the advance in silver, allowing one-third to be taken off the increased standard for Indian and Egyptian wheat and cotton, to enable those countries to export at all. We have therefore the enhanced value of the exportable surplus of wheat and cotton, to say nothing of oil.

Assuming that we receive three cents per pound more for our cotton out of the inevitable 50 per cent rise in the value of silver, we should thus have $15 per bale added to the value of the exportable surplus of cotton, and thus the country would receive from Europe $75,000,000 more than it has received for this staple previously. The same on wheat and oil.

Given $150,000,000 more in the pockets of our farmers, and it is safe to argue that an activity such as we have not witnessed in years in this country must follow in all lines and ramifications of business. It is not the miner alone that will be benefitted, but the farmer and with him all other classes aided by his prosperity.

Local news is not very plentiful this week owing to the absence of the editor of this department, who has been in Seattle for several days.

The Farmers Mercantile Company and F. J. Ward have ordered large street lamps to put in front of their buildings. It would be a good plan for all business houses to follow suit.

There is a move on foot to erect several cottages in town for rent. It would be a good scheme as there is a good demand for houses. George Hunt had ten applications to rent his house when he vacated it.

Wm. J. Ware, representing the World's Fair Commission, is in Dungeness this week. Mr. Ware requests that all exhibits for the world's fair be addressed or brought to him either here or at Port Angeles.

The U. S. Clothing Company has opened a clothing store in the Clark Building on Front Street, Port Angeles.

The boys now feel very much relieved that Tom M. is at last married, although he fooled them beautifully. He has perhaps by this time become reconciled to the peculiar customs in this section of which he complained some time ago.

The clam business at Washington Harbor is increasing. If the Hastings steamboat would only give them a regular boat service so that they could make their shipments it would soon develop into a good enterprise. The clams are the finest on the sound.

Last Tuesday evening Mr. Thomas Miller and Miss Hattie Wright, both well known young people of Dungeness, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Rev. Kindred officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Miller will make their home near the mill where Tom holds the position of chief engineer. The BEACON tenders its best wishes.

Last Thursday evening the house of George W. Watts at Sequim was broken into and almost completely looted. The thieves even took his bedding and everything of any value whatever. Mr. Watts has telegraphed sheriffs at surrounding towns to watch for the thieves, but thinks they are secreted and have a rendezvous somewhere in the foothills. A certain young man of unsavory reputation who has not been at home for some time is suspected of the theft. This affair is rather hard on Watts as he is a poor man and not able to buy a new outfit, and the suspected party is fully aware of the fact. Too much of this petty stealing has been going on in this end of the county for the past few months. Some of the settlers should organize a still hunt and run the thieves out.

Christmas Tree.

There will be a Christmas tree given under the auspices of the M. E. church of Dungeness, on Christmas Eve at the Colony Hall. ### A Farewell.

With this issue of the BEACON I relinquish charge of the local department and sever my connection with the paper; being about to enter another field of labor. To my friends who have assisted me in my work here and who have extended to me many courtesies which I may never be able to repay I wish to tender my sincere thanks. Port Angeles will be my address for the present.

JOE M. BALLINGER.

Will Hold a Bazaar.

Ladies all bring baskets.

County Items.

Auditor-elect Troy has selected Willard Brumfield as his deputy.

The work on the Port Crescent Mill Company's new mill proceeds steadily. The main building is completed and much of the machinery is in place.

The Y. M. C. A. room is the only public reading room in Port Angeles, where one will find books, magazines, Clallam county and Seattle papers. The building is on Union Pacific dock, opposite Johnson's livery stable. We often wonder that the Angeles papers never mention it.

The Republicans and Democrats of Port Angeles have put out a fusion ticket for city officers, to be elected next Tuesday. The ticket is as follows: Mayor, Norman R. Smith; Treasurer, S. A. Hall; Health Officer, Dr. W. W. McGeorge; Councilmen, A. M. Johnson, Dr. F. S. Lewis, Thomas Moore, John Rose, J. E. Beam, and Warren R. Dodge. The Peoples' Party nominated for Mayor, S. P. Carusi; Treasurer, E. E. Seevers; Health Officer, Dr. A. B. Lull; Assessor, John Hitch; Councilmen, J. H. Ristine, J. E. Kreuger, W. W. Maltby, J. D. Yarnell, S. M. Cramer, and H. S. Carver.

On last Sunday the Elwha river created great havoc along the banks near the Peters and Gleason ranches. It is estimated that the water in the river bed was higher than usual and its terrible current tore away acre after acre of valuable farm land all along its banks. The new sawmill owned by Mr. Peters and located about seventy feet from the edge of the river bluff was washed entirely away, and the machinery now lies in the stream. It is thought, however, that it can be saved without being seriously damaged. At the Gleason farm the mighty force of the water again asserted itself, and soon made such inroads in the bank beneath the residence of Mr. Gleason that the building gradually sunk toward the river and now rests at a dangerous angle upon the bank. About one and one-half acres of Mr. Gleason's orchard and meadow were also washed away, and all along the shores a thick sediment was deposited which will prevent the growing of vegetation during the next year.—Port Angeles Leader.

The case of the State of Washington vs. B. F. Schwartz, in which he was charged with larceny by embezzlement, was given to the jury Wednesday evening. The jury rendered a verdict of guilty Thursday afternoon and recommended the prisoner to the mercy of the court. The attorney for the defense requested an arrest of judgment, which was granted, and entered a motion for a new trial, which will come before the court for hearing Saturday, December 10. The attorneys for the prosecution are G. V. Smith, the county attorney; Louis Williams, the assistant county attorney, who is paid $900 a year by the county for his services, and Geo. C. Hatch, who the county commissioners saw fit to pay $200 to assist in this case at the request of Will R. Gay. John Trumble, of Port Townsend, is for the defense.

Carrying the United States mails through the great forests is by no means an unalloyed pleasure, as a local incident will fully illustrate. On Monday evening as Sam R. Snecal, the mail carrier on the route between Port Crescent and Gettysburg, was taking the mail out horseback as usual he had an experience that he will not soon forget. When about half way toward his destination his horse suddenly stopped. On looking ahead through the twilight its rider saw two immense panthers in his immediate vicinity. One was on a log in an advantageous poise for a leap. The other lay directly in the trail. The horse refused to move forward and as its rider had nothing with which to shoot he shared the disinclination of the horse to proceed in the face of such unpleasant obstructions. Whirling around the mail carrier soon had his horse galloping toward Port Crescent with all speed. On glancing back he was frightened to see the cougars following with great strides and steadily gaining on him. He then whipped his horse vigorously until the beasts desisted from the pursuit.—Port Crescent Leader.

W. R. Jarman, of Port Angeles, probably the oldest pioneer on Puget Sound, has fallen heir to three large estates in England. Mr. Jarman left England a half century ago. His whereabouts was unknown to his relatives until two weeks ago when a young man, his nephew, walked into C. M. Bradshaw's sawmill at Port Angeles and informed Mr. Jarman that there were three estates in England subject to his orders. The old man was almost stunned by the sudden acquisition of wealth. His father died over twenty years ago, and the subsequent demise of two aunts left him heir to three English estates. Inquiries had been made in nearly all parts of the world for him. His nephew spent several months in Australia in search of his uncle, and had abandoned all hopes of his discovery. He was returning to England, when he stopped in San Francisco for a few days, where by the merest accident he found Mrs. Head, a sister of Mr. Jarman. She had left the old country many years ago and joined her brother on Puget Sound, where she was married. Mrs. Head never communicated with her relatives and she was thought to be dead. While the nephew was making inquiries among the old pioneers of San Francisco he ran across one man who said that he was acquainted with a married lady whose maiden name, he believed, was Jarman. This clue was followed and led to the discovery of Mr. Jarman.—Post Intelligencer.

Jay Gould died at 9:15 this morning.

A party of four, names unknown, were lost in the recent gale off Esquimalt harbor.

The storm which has prevailed on the Straits for the last week has greatly inconvenienced shipping. Several vessels took shelter in the Port Angeles harbor.

John Wilson and Frederick Marshall, of Victoria, who went duck shooting last Saturday, were lost in the Straits, their Columbian boat going to pieces in the storm.

The BEACON is mailed to any address in the United States or Canada for $1.50 a year.

The Farmers Mercantile Co. invite the ladies of Dungeness, Sequim and Port Angeles to call and inspect their new stock of dry goods. It is no trouble to show goods.

Farmers Mercantile Co's store at Washington Harbor have a complete stock of goods and all orders can be filled at the lowest prices. George Hunt as manager, will attend to your wants and will not allow anyone to undersell him, he will purchase your produce, and pay the highest market price.

WOMAN AND HOME.

MISTAKES SOMETIMES MADE BY WOMEN WHO HAVE TACT.

Neatness in Dress at Home—Japanese Women at Prayer—A Sweet Idea in Presents—Just Plain Clean—Let Your Servant Alone—Best of the Sheep.

The existence and use of tact cannot be too highly regarded. That keen and ready sixth sense which discerns an uncomfortable situation while yet it merely threatens, and averts its consequences by prompt speech or action, occupies a deservedly honored place in the ethics of all social intercourse. In every department of life, indeed, tact is a valuable endowment, the more since its possession seems a birthright rather than an acquisition. But often this kindly office is misconceived, its graceful ministration much abused. There seems, to some indelicate natures, an elasticity about the term which permits it at times to cover a gross rudeness and discourtesy.

Here, for example, is a young woman naturally kind hearted and deservedly popular. On several occasions she has distinguished herself by doing so nearly the right thing that it is accepted as such, and she comes to be considered equal to any emergency. Her friends say "Phœbe has so much tact," and Phœbe is only human that she seeks to emphasize this reputation. It is at this point that she needs to be well on her guard. A fine instinct, a delicate perception, are indispensable now. She is perhaps spending an evening out. Across the room from where she is standing one of a gay group is a young man, solitary, and embarrassed to find himself so. Phœbe's glance falls upon him; she honestly pities him and she sees an opportunity.

"It is too bad," she says; "Mr. M. has been there alone for minutes and minutes; I am going over to speak with him," and she starts off followed by admiring silence, which shortly resolves itself into complimentary utterances. Phœbe feels rather than hears them, and aglow with consciousness approaches her victim. For Mr. M. is a victim and he knows it. From the moment of her setting out he has divined her errand, and he shrinks from the ordeal.

His pride and his intelligence resent what his bashful inexperience prevents his properly meeting. Phœbe has all the advantage on her side; her card is full; her cavaliers surround her; nobody will question her motive—and of Mr. M.'s wounded dignity she has never a thought. If some one could only teach her and her sister Phœbes that the abuse of tact is intolerable just as politeness is sometimes officious to rank discourtesy!—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Neatness in Dress at Home.

The importance of neat and tasteful house dressing cannot be overestimated. The matron who appears before the members of the family in a shabby soiled wrapper and makes the excuse, if indeed she takes the trouble to make one at all, that "it is so much more comfortable," has little idea of the possible consequence of such a course. Could she but realize that her dress is an evil example to her daughters, and one productive of consequences that will reach far beyond her own span of life; that her husband and sons cannot fail to draw comparisons between her dress and that of the ladies they meet in other homes, and that these comparisons cannot fail to decrease their respect for her, she might be induced to give more attention to her personal appearance.

Not even the burden of care and constant employment can furnish a sufficient excuse for careless personal habits, for few things are more important to the well being of a family. There is an old saying to the effect that an untidy mother has disobedient children, and while neither parents nor children may realize the why or wherefore of it, yet there is always a lack of respect and an indifference to the authority of a mother who takes no pride in her personal appearance.

And it is not the mother alone upon whose shoulders rests the burden of responsibility for home neatness and order in dress; the father has his duties to look after as well, and should never fail to insist upon the younger members of the family presenting themselves with well kept hands, clean faces, neatly brushed hair and orderly dress, at least at every meal where the family assembles.—Christian Leader.

Japanese Women at Prayer.

In the big cities of Japan on almost every summer evening there is a pilgrimage to some sanctuary or other—sometimes in honor of a god so ancient that nobody remembers exactly his role in the world. After business of all kinds, with its bargains and barters, has been suspended, after the innumerable petty trades have stopped their monotonous noise, when the myriads of little houses and shops begin to put up their light shutters, the women dress themselves, ornament their hair with their most extravagant pins, and set out, holding at the end of flexible sticks great painted lanterns. The streets are filled to overflowing with their little persons, ladies or mousmis, walking slowly in sandals and exchanging charming courtesies.

With an immense murmur of fluttering fans, of rustling silks and of laughing chatter, at dusk, by the light of the moon or beneath the starry night they ascend to the pagoda, where gigantic gods with horrible masks await them, half hidden behind bars of gold, in the incredible magnificence of the sanctuaries. They throw pieces of money to the priests, they pray prostrated and clapping their hands with sharp blows, "clack, clack," as though their fingers were of wood. But most of the time they are chattering, turning round, thinking of something else, attempting to escape by laughter from the fear of the supernatural.—Pierre Loti in Harper's.

A Sweet Idea in Presents.

According to a luxurious fashion of the age every article a woman wears should exhale a subtle fragrance, and to secure this end sachets may be kept in all the bureau and chiffonier drawers and hung on the hooks of the amoir where her dresses are kept. Therefore a charming present to prepare for a fashionable friend's acceptance would be a set of sachets fitted to the bureau drawers. They can be made of silkaline (a thin material that resembles silk) or of thin India silk. They should be double and stuffed with cotton thoroughly sprinkled with violet or other sachet powder. As each woman has her special fancy in the matter, it would be well to find out the preferred perfume and select it for this use.

After the large sachets are finished they should be tacked, like a comfortable, with one or two silk stitches at each tacking. A handsomer one of the same kind may accompany the others, to use as a bureau cover. This must be of silk, and a little bow of narrow ribbon can be tied at each point of tacking. The edge should be finished with a row of box plaited ribbon, and at each end a fall of plaited white lace can be added. The perfume should be even more lavishly used on the stuffing than upon the sachets to be kept in the drawers, for exposure to the air exhausts it sooner.—Mrs. M. C. Hungerford.

A Seventeenth Century Student.

Among women remarkable for large attainments and broad culture may be chronicled a brief sketch of Maria Cunitz, the daughter of a physician of eminence in Silesia. The father, recognizing the talents of his child, afforded unlimited opportunity for the development of her best gifts. It is recorded that she made herself mistress of the German, French, Italian and Polish languages, and also made intimate acquaintance with Latin, Greek and Hebrew. We are also told that general culture kept pace with abstruse studies, but, above all, her most earnest attention was given to mathematics and astronomy. They pre-eminently were her favorites.

In 1630 Maria Cunitz married a Dutch physician, Elias de Loewen, who doubtless sympathized fully in the scholarly instincts and abilities of his wife, for it is recorded that at one period during the Thirty Years' war her "tables, published under the title of Urania Propitia sive Tabulæ Astronomicæ," and which gave to their author a widespread reputation, were prepared in a polish convent, whither they had taken refuge to insure a needed degree of quiet. —Harper's Bazar.

Just Plain Clean.

A pretty little woman said with a sigh, as she laid down a fresh list of axioms for beautifying the person: "It is just enough to wear any one all out to follow half the directions written now to make you beautiful. I've tried them all. I've used vaseline and glycerine, acid, cocoanut oil and almond paste, rosewater and lemon juice. I have bathed in boiling water and ice water and in tepid water and in milk and water. I have washed my face in a towel of the roughest crash I could buy and rubbed my very cuticle off in my struggles to follow out the directions, and I have half washed it, as I would a bit of porcelain, with the softest, finest flannel I could buy. I think the worst of all was when I didn't wash it at all for a while, because some one said the hard water here in New York would cause wrinkles, so I wiped it off with one thing and another as long as I could bear it, when my husband suggested that I try just keeping plain clean for a while, and do you know I haven't had a particle of trouble since."—New York Letter.

Let Your Servant Alone.

Any girl who has brains enough to make a satisfactory servant will devise her own ways of doing things, and they will be the best ways, simply because they are her own. Some mistresses are unwise in exacting too much of a servant in this regard. The wise mistress should temper her demands with discretion, and should demand of her servants simply that results should fit her wishes. Let a servant choose her own methods of producing that result, and both result and servant will be better for it. It really doesn't matter to a mistress whether a cook puts pepper or salt first in the soup, if the soup is equally good either way; or whether she gathers up the silver first or the glass, when she clears the dinner table, if neither silver nor glass suffers at her hands. Insist that a servant shall produce the result you want, wise mistress, but let her get that result in the way that is best suited to her individuality.—New York Evening Sun.

The Advantage of Being a Woman.

I remember one Saturday morning a line of about twenty irate women were kept waiting while the cashier told me what a certified check was. I hadn't one and didn't want one, but as I saw the name up I thought I would like to know what it was. Of course I knew it wasn't anything to eat or drink, but I thought it had something to do with the marriage ceremony on account of its being certified. I am not exactly clear about it yet, though the cashier brought all his brain power to bear upon me, and I smiled my sweetest and said, "How nice!" and when I went home and told the family about it the masculine part of it called me a delightful idiot, but again announced that they would like to see any cashier in New York take the time to inform a man about anything. There are a number of advantages attached to being a woman; for one thing, you do get such a lot of information!—New York Letter.

A Girl's Chances as Compositor.

A smart girl will be a fairly good compositor in six months. This is on plain work. Table work and advertising is now generally left to special compositors. In a year you will get "the motion" and probably reach the limit of what you can do. If on a weekly paper, you can earn from $5 to $8 per week. If on a daily, you ought to earn from $10 to $14. Few girls, however, are to be found in the composing rooms of daily papers, especially of morning papers.

Compositors, as a class, carry a deep fraternal spirit, and have a sort of freemasonry among themselves. The great majority are well educated, genteel in deportment, and about the last thing they would do would be to exhibit rudeness to a girl trying to make a living by working with them. It is longer hours than type writing, but there is more money in it.—Detroit Free Press.

Pay of German Servants.

Servant girls in Germany get almost nothing. Your aunt tells me she pays big wages and her girl gets thirty-two marks a quarter. Think of it—$10.24 for three months; and in this country they are indeed servants in every sense of the word; they do work for which we employ men. When coal or wood is bought for the winter they have to shovel or throw it into the cellar, or carry it in, if the cellar is in the back part of the house. If a woman goes to the depot she takes her baggage there for her, and when she returns at 8 or 10 o'clock at night her girl meets her and carries her baggage for her. All through Germany ladies can go to the theatre unattended by gentlemen; the performances begin at 6 or 6:30 p. m. and close at 10 o'clock. The servant girl meets them at the theatre and sees them home.—Cor. Indianapolis Journal.

Children's Eating.

Some parents compel their children to eat against their will, as when they come to the breakfast table without an appetite, or have lost in prospect of a visit or a ride, or for the sake of "eating their plates clean" in discouragement of wasteful habits. Unless we are thirsty we cannot drink the purest spring water without aversion, and as for eating when there is no appetite it is revolting, as any one may prove to himself by attempting to take a second meal in twenty minutes after having eaten a regular dinner. The appetite, the hunger, is excited by the presence of gastric juice about the stomach; but if there is no gastric juice there can be no hunger, no appetite, and to compel a child to swallow food when it is distasteful is an absurdity and a cruelty.—Hall's Journal.

A Few Hints About Oil Lamps.

The tank, or reservoir, for holding the oil should be of metal rather than china or glass. Wicks should be dry, be just long enough to reach to the bottom of the reservoir and be softly woven. They should be just wide enough to easily fill the wick holder without being pulled or squeezed in. It is necessary, too, that they be soaked with oil just before using the lamp. When the lamp is lit the wick should be at first turned down, and then slowly raised as it burns.

One great essential to avoid all odors from a lamp is to have it thoroughly clean, and all charred wick and dust removed before lighting. In putting out a lamp where it has no extinguishing appliances the wick should be turned down, and a sharp puff blown across the top of the chimney, but not down on it. A little systematic care in the use of a lamp will bring, instead of discomfort, a warm, cheering atmosphere to the home.—New York Ledger.

Soda Will Save You Sugar.

Have you ever stood despairingly before a crock of stewed cranberries, gooseberries, rhubarb, dried plums—or, worse than all, prunellas—throwing in sugar, tasting, puckering your face and throwing in more, glancing dubiously meanwhile at the lowering of the sugar in your "dollar's worth" can? I remember well my grandmother's rule for sweetening pie plant pies. It was this: "Put in all the sugar your conscience will allow, then shut your eyes and throw in a double handful." Her pies were excellent, but the rule was expensive. Here is a cheaper one: When sweetening extremely acid fruits like the above stir in a little soda before adding the sugar. Experience will guide you as to the quantity you may safely use without injuring the flavor of the fruit, but, as a general rule, I think a half teaspoonful of soda to a quart of fruit may be easily borne.—Good Housekeeping.

Things Well to Know and Do.

Hot sunshine will remove scorch.

The best liquid for cleaning old brass is a solution of oxalic acid.

Kerosene applied to unused stoves will keep them from rusting.

A damp cloth dipped in common soda will brighten tinware easily.

To clean knives cut a small potato, dip it in brick dust and rub them.

Grease may be removed from silk by applying magnesia to the wrong side.

New iron should be gradually heated at first; it will not be so likely to crack.

Paint splashes may be removed from window panes by a very hot solution of soda, using a soft flannel.

Milldewed linen may be restored by soaping the spots, and while wet covering them with powdered chalk.—Hall's Journal.

She Has Sailed for Nineteen Years.

Mrs. Belle Wooster Higgins, of Sullivan, is "a veritable salt." She has been at sea almost constantly for nearly nineteen years, and during that time has sailed to nearly every part of the globe, including several European ports, Africa, Australia, the island of Sumatra, South America, every port of the West Indies and nearly every Atlantic port in this country. She is an expert in navigation, and is possessed of sufficient nautical skill to enable her, if it should ever become necessary, to take full command of a vessel and sail her to any part of the world.—Ellsworth American.

The Best Part of the Sheep.

Do you know how nice a stuffed shoulder of mutton is? You probably do know that it is less expensive than the leg, and have avoided it in consequence. Well, in England, where they know more about mutton than we do here, they prefer the shoulder to the leg, both for quality and juiciness. Try it once and see. Get your marketman to bone it for you, then you stuff it as you would veal, roast it, and see if you ever buy the leg again for a roast. You have saved money and you have a better dinner. You'll say that I am right.—Eva Lovett Carson in Housewife.

Use Glass Dishes.

Butter or apple sauce in a bowl may be just as clean and well made as when served from a dainty plate and glass dish, but to one with an eye to the fitness of things they will not taste as well, while it is no more work to wash the latter articles than the former. Glass dishes for serving the sauce or berries and for pickles and jelly are so inexpensive there hardly seems an excuse for not using them.—Exchange.

A few cold boiled potatoes left from dinner are not a very appetizing addition to the tea table. Take these potatoes, slice or cut in small bits, not too fine, add pepper and salt, mix with a spoonful of salad dressing, slice a hard boiled egg and scatter over the top, and the result is a potato salad, suitable to offer any guest who may have dropped in at meal time.

Mrs. Howard Teufel, better known as Blanche Willis Howard, is so much occupied with the care of young women whose education she superintends that she does little novel writing. She edits an English magazine at Stuttgart, and makes its pages interesting with her bright thoughts and witty reflections upon her neighbors.

After a long or dusty journey the pores of the face become so clogged that only a vapor bath can cleanse them. The easiest way of giving the face a vapor bath is to fill a bowl with boiling water and hold the face in the steam until a profuse perspiration follows.

Over one-third of all the children born in this world die before their fifth year, and nearly all these deaths can be traced to an impurity in the milk supply, which man, with his wild and thoughtless grasp for wealth, will stain and corrupt himself to introduce.

In France, during the Middle Ages, a ring woven from straw or one made of horseshoe nails was placed on the bride's finger at the conclusion of the marriage rite. The couple also stood in a ring five or six feet in diameter made of mistletoe or straw.

Lady Wilde, mother of Oscar Wilde, is remarkable for her beauty, brilliancy of conversation and accomplishments. She speaks half a dozen languages, has cordial manners, excellent sense and a great social following.

It has been decided by the elders of the Syracuse, N. Y., presbytery that women may with propriety take part in church prayer meetings on precisely the same level with men.
