William Smith on a farm near Mishawaka, Or., has produced an excellent article of tobacco the leaves and flavor, when properly cured, being in every way equal to that grown in the Southern States. He supplies the home market in the Nehalem Valley, both for chewing and smoking, at a reasonable cost, and says that the soil of Nehalem has all the elements necessary for the production of the plant.

The Shoshone Falls of the Snake river of Idaho, which have a body of water 900 feet wide with a fall of 210 feet, are to be used for developing electric power for irrigating purposes. A large number of water wheels will be put in, and pumping stations operated by electric motors of large capacity will be established at suitable points. By this means the water will be elevated to canals, through which it will be distributed to lands in the adjacent valleys.

Mayor Hazard of Los Angeles proposes to veto the contract with the smelting and refining works to build a smelter inside the city's limits. Los Angeles is a city of homes, and he does not intend to permit without protest the destruction to animal and vegetable life such as would follow from the fumes and smoke of the smelter, beside the poisoning of the water of the river, which is used in some cases for domestic purposes.

In Caldwell, Idaho, some families have been experimenting with some negro servants, and the successful results have far exceeded their expectations. The negroes went to Idaho from one of the Southern States. In response to a demand for their services, a large number of negroes, both men and women, will go to Idaho from the South in the course of a few weeks.

Work is progressing rapidly on the first section of Professor Lowe's mountain railway at Pasadena. There will be a continuous cable in the mountain, and the gravity plan will be used, the descending car raising the ascending one. The balance will be further maintained by water tanks, from which water will be slowly discharged on the downward trip. Electricity will be the motive power from the Terminal road to the foot of the inclined plane.

An old trapper, who resides in the Blue Mountains and knows every foot of the country between the Union Pacific railroad and Snake river, tells the Milton Eagle that there is a desperate band of horsethieves, robbers and murderers making their rendezvous between the banks of the Umatilla and Walla Walla rivers. There are secluded mountain retreats in that section, where stock can be successfully hidden until all search on the part of the owners is over. Then the stock is run off and sold. Men who have mysteriously disappeared are believed to have discovered the secrets of this outlaw band, and their bones now lie moldering in some isolated canyon.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

Philadelphia Chinese Propose to Defeat the Geary Law by Means of Fictitious Photographs.

Senator Dolph has filed with the War Department a letter in relation to the appointment of a board to examine and report a site for a gun factory on the Pacific Coast. He requests that care be taken in the selection of the officers, that they may not be prejudiced in favor of one sight as against another. This precation, he says, is particularly necessary, because some officers have privately expressed their belief that Benicia is the proper location.

More than usual interest attaches to the forthcoming annual report of the Commissioner of Pensions. The statement has been made that the amount required for pensions the next fiscal year will nearly reach the enormous sum of $200,000,000. The work of compiling figures is, however, sufficiently advanced to show this estimate is in excess of the actual requirements. It is now thought Congress will be asked to make an appropriation of about $180,000,000 for the coming fiscal year, about $18,000,000 of which is in anticipation of an increase of that amount over the actual expenditures of last year. It is the judgment of General Raum that, while this amount is likely to be increased the next year or two, yet he feels confident the maximum limit has already been reached.

President Harrison in his message to Congress will not turn his back upon the present Republican tariff law. On the contrary, he will give it an earnest indorsement. The President said he did not blame the McKinley tariff law for the recent defeat at the polls, and after having given it his indorsement prior to a test of Republican principles at the polls he was not inclined to repudiate it in the hour of adversity. The President believes that the Republican principles of protection will live longer and stand the various tests of time with better success than will the present Democratic supremacy. There has been considerable curiosity expressed in certain quarters as to what the President would say in his message to Congress, which he is now completing, in reference to the tariff law, as many Republicans are inclined to hold it almost wholly responsible for the recent defeat. There need be no doubt in that direction. President Harrison believes in protection of the character now afforded by the Republican party.

Word has reached Washington from Philadelphia that the Chinese in that city propose to try to defeat the Geary law by means of fictitious photographs, the same as at Baltimore. It is believed in Philadelphia and Baltimore that a scheme is now on foot among the Chinese all over the country to defeat the purposes of the Chinese exclusion act. The promoter of it is the Hip Sin Tong, a powerful fraternal society, which has six branches—Junk, Lee, Chang, Shu, Young and Mock—embracing every State in the Union. The Hip Sin Tong is having photographs turned out by the thousands to supply any Chinaman who may need one. The colony in Washington has been notified that a batch of pictures would be sent to them in a few days, from which they can select as many as they wish and return the balance. Photographs are being sent all over the country, and in a few weeks each colony will have enough on tap to meet any demand that might be made upon them. It is reported that the Chinese are trying to secure the services of Robert G. Ingersoll and General B. F. Butler to test the constitutionality of the Geary law.

THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION.

Mayor Washburne Taking Active Steps for the Opening of the World's Fair on Sunday.

For the Idaho World's Fair building in a block of stone 10x6 feet will be carved the coat of arms of the State of Idaho and in other blocks the name of the State.

Vermont will send to the World's Fair an odd exhibit in the shape of the skeleton of an enormous whale, which was found several years ago near Lake Champlain, ninety feet above the sea level.

The first exhibit at the World's Fair grounds is an immense redwood tree which was cut by the Tingo River Lumber Company near San Gabriel, Fresno county, Cal. The sections are being placed in order in the government building.

A conference of the newspaper publishers of Chicago and the Hon. J. W. Robinson, Chief of the machinery department of the World's Fair, was held at the Herald building the other day, with James W. Scott presiding. The object was to consider plans for the publication of a morning and afternoon paper in the machinery hall during the World's Fair, in order to afford the general public an opportunity of observing the many processes incident to the production of a daily paper. The meeting, which was of a harmonious character, had reference to the particular presses that should be used and their location.

Mayor Washburne of Chicago is taking active steps for the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. The Mayor sent a message to the Council declaring the people to be most benefited by the fair are those who are unable to enjoy the luxury of travel and those who literally earn their bread by the sweat of their brows. Sunday closing would deprive these people of their chief opportunity to see the fair. Furthermore, Chicago must next year extend hospitality to thousands of foreigners, and on this account alone it would be admissible to open the fair Sundays. The Mayor stated that the great majority of the people are in favor of an open Sunday, and asked the Council to prepare an official address to Congress on the subject. The suggestion was heartily indorsed, and the committee appointed.

ON CREMATION.

It matters little to the winged sprite
That flits and flits the clustered stars among
What fate befell the useless vesture flung
So sadly earthward at the time of flight.
Eyes dazzled by a sudden flood of light
Cannot look into darkness. Hymns are sung
In vain for spirit ears, on which has rung
God's perfect music, heard at last aright.
Yet for this worn out garment seems more fit
Than beak of Parsee bird, or wormy shroud,
Or grinning ages in Egyptian pit,
A chant of merry fire tongues singing loud,
While deft flame fingers shall unravel it
And slim wind fingers weave it into cloud.

—George Horton in Harper's.

Too Big a Family for Him.

A tall, solemn looking young man entered the restuarant with a mild, apologetic air and seated himself at a vacant table near the middle of the room. It was evident that he dreaded to intrude. He wanted to get as far away from other people as possible. He even blushed painfully when he gave his order, and the most casual observer could have told that he was bashful.

Just as his dinner was brought to him a buxom looking women with seven small children entered the place. The head waiter swept the field with his eye, pounced down upon the table where the young man had sought solitude, motioned to the mother, who clucked to the chickens, and a moment later they were all around that one table. That young man's face was a serial story.

Other people entered the restaurant, glanced at the group, smiled significantly and seated themselves. "He doesn't look it, does he?" queried a pleasant faced old lady in an audible whisper. "She looks at least ten years older than he," murmured a girl at the next table.

He flew to the hatrack, tossed a dollar to the cashier and tried to go through the door without opening it.—Detroit Tribune.

The Etiquette of Cues.

In China the men take as much pride in their hair as women, and the "pigtail" is a thing of no little moment. In making the cue the whole head is shaved except a circular patch upon the crown. The hair from this is braided, and strands of silk are added, which end in a tassel reaching to the heels. In full mourning the black strands are replaced by white ones, and in second mourning by light blue or green.

It is an unpardonable breach of etiquette for an inferior to enter the presence of a superior with his cue wound round his neck or head, as it is frequently disposed of during work, and the greatest insult one man can offer another is to pull his cue. It seems very odd to see sailors and soldiers on ship or in barracks combing each other's long tresses or coolies at the street corners performing the same friendly office. Custom forbids a man to wear a beard and mustache until he becomes a grandfather.—Detroit Free Press.

Rapid Work for Fingers.

The deaf and dumb, as every one knows, "speak" by means of their fingers. How many words, then, can a good hand speaker form in a minute? The average number of letters per word in the English language is five. Now a ready hand speaker can make the English alphabet ten times in a minute—that is to say, 260 letters. It is usual for him to pause for the space of one letter after each word to show that the word is complete. If therefore we subtract from the total just given about one-sixth for these stoppages, the total will be reduced to 215 letters.

Let this be divided by five, the average number of letters per word, and we shall find that a fairly expert deaf and dumb person will speak forty-three words per minute. A person in possession of speech will probably speak 150 words in the same space of time.—Yankee Blade.

They Work While Others Rest.

Throughout England "drapery" stores are closed one afternoon in each week, in most places Thursday afternoon, as that is their slackest day; but although the clerks and many others in the employ of the firm may take themselves off to pleasure, this is a busy time for the window decorator, the cleaners, scrubbers and general interior decorators. These have to work for all they are worth, for the morning must show a complete transformation scene in every part. This policy is followed to a limited extent in a certain line of the retail dry goods trade in New York city. On the east side and down town, especially where a night trade is catered to, some of the stores are closed on Thursday afternoon and a few on Friday afternoon.—Dry Goods Economist.

Carlyle on Novels.

A letter of Carlyle's gives us the opinion of novels entertained by him in the year 1866. To a budding story teller he wrote to suggest that she should "Shove her own novel well aside for a good while or forever; and be shy even of reading novels. If she do read, let it be good and wise books which not one in 10,000 of the kind called 'novels' now is." And yet Carlyle was himself guilty of at least beginning to write a novel.—London Globe.

Slingers of the Roman Army.

The Romans maintained troops of slingers who, like the archers, harassed the enemy with volleys of stones and bullets, and when their position became serious fell back to the rear. The range of the slings is said to have been 600 Roman feet. Soldiers carried a supply of their projectiles with them in a fold of their tunics, which formed a sort of bag.—Harper's Young People.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1892.

OF the $100,000,000 Jay Gould left, a large part of which he secured by robbing widows and orphans, not one cent was set apart for charity by his will. In return for the countless financial failures he has brought about, the widows he has made penniless, the panic of Black Friday brought about by Gould and Fisk, and above all the example placed before the youth of land, that a man may bribe legislators and judges, perjure himself on the witness stand, rob his dead partner's widow, and commit countless other crimes, and at the same time be honored and die one of the richest men in the world, he gave as little as possible at his death, but stipulates that his immense wealth be hoarded by his own family. The world does not mourn when such a man gets out of the way.

A BILL has been introduced in the house of representatives by Congressman Harter of Ohio, having for its object the establishment of uniform revenue customs duty upon sugar and the abolishment of payment of sugar bounties. If the Democrats propose to reduce the tariff on some things but in its stead put a duty on such necessaries of life as sugar they will find their lease of power will be of short duration. The people demand that the burden of taxation for the support of the general government be readjusted so that a man shall be taxed in proportion to the property he holds and not in proportion to what he eats and wears; in proportion to a man's income, so that of two men, one having an income of $100,000 and the other of $300 a year, the tax shall be in proportion to what they receive and not to their store bill. A graduated income tax is satisfactory to all the people except the very rich. It was at the behest of the wealthy people of the East that the income tax imposed during the war was abolished at its close.

The Growth of a Great Publishing House.

About a year ago we published a brief sketch of Mr. B. O. Fowler, the editor of the Arena, and then took occasion to note the phenomenal success of this popular Boston review in the field of serious periodical literature.

Since then we have watched with interest the rapid strides of this magazine, and the progress of the Arena Publishing Company in developing from merely the publishers of a great review to one of the most important publishing houses of New England, or, for that matter, of this country.

The Arena has from its birth steadily and rapidly grown in circulation and influence, long since distancing, with one exception, all high priced reviews in point of popularity and circulation. This is largely due to the courage, boldness and the moral conviction which has ever been one of the distinctive characteristics of this review. It is also the only American review which appeals to the tastes of all members of the family in which it circulates. By publishing each month strong, short stories, biographical sketches, prose etchings and interesting pen pictures it has won its way into the hearts of tens of thousands of people who have been through these features attracted to its pages. The admirable portraits of leading thinkers and the introduction of fine illustrations when the text has called for them, have also contributed to its popularity, but doubtless the fact that it is in perfect touch with the most advanced, progressive and reformative thought of the age and employs the ablest living thinkers to write for its columns, also gives it a prestige enjoyed by no other great review. At the present time the Arena is read each month by more than 100,000 people in America, while during the past six months its European circulation has increased more than 1,000 copies.

This is due largely to the great interest felt in the Bacon-Shakespeare case now being presented by the giant thinkers of two worlds, who are combatting the opposite claims of the two most illustrious names in the golden age of literature in England. When such eminent persons in Great Britain as the Marquiss of Lorne, Edmund Gosse, Alfred Russell Wallace, D. C. L., Prof. J. Donaldson, principal of St. Andrews University, and Henry Irving, consent to act as jurors, it is evident that in England as well as America, the interest in this discussion is very great. Another reason for the growing popularity for the Boston review in Europe lies in the fact that in England and on the Continent the thoughtful and progressive people are learning for the first time acquainted with the Arena and thus learning that in a larger degree than any other magazine reflects the best progressive and reformative thought of both the old and the new world.

THE PUBLISHING OF BOOKS.

The phenomenal success of this great review under the editorial management of Mr. B. O. Fowler, is no more remarkable than the progress made during the past year in the business management of the enterprise under the vigorous and energetic personal direction of Mr. H. H. Boyce, who as business manager, has made the Arena Publishing Company one of the most important book publishing concerns in the New World. This company has recently published "The Rise of the Swiss Republic," a finished and scholarly work, being the first elaborate history of Switzerland published in the English language. It contains a detailed account of all the recent Governmental innovation so successfully introduced in the little Republic such as the Referendum and the Initiative. This book is one of the handsomest specimens of the printer's art of the year; printed in large type on heavy paper, wide margin and richly bound. Another handsome book which bids fair to be one of the greatest successes of recent times has just been issued by this company. We refer to M. French-Sheldon's story of her travels in the wilds of Africa, entitled "Sultan to Sultan." It is one of the most superbly illustrated books of travel ever published, containing almost four hundred photogravures or text cuts, many full page pictures made direct from photographs taken by M. French-Sheldon. The achievement of this remarkable American woman stands without parallel in the history of extraordinary attainments by women even in this day of their wonderful achievements. It will be remembered that she penetrated one thousand miles into the heart of savage Africa, having a train of between one and two hundred native porters and interpreters, but with no white person in the caravan. Her story is of absorbing interest and rich in information contained in no other work on the Dark Continent.

In addition to these works the Arena Publishing Company has, since Mr. Boyce took control of it, brought out many other important books, for example: Mr. Savage's popular evolutionary religious work on "The Irrepressible Conflict Between Two-World Theories." Hamlin Garland's novels, "Jason Edwards" and "A Spoil of Office." Helen Gardner's powerful new story, "Pray You, Sir, Whose Daughter?" Prof. Emil Blum's and Alexander's "Who Lies?" Mrs. Florence Huntley's "The Dream Child." Mrs. Celestia Root Lang's "Son of Man." Rev. Dr. Marion Shutter's "Wit and Humor of the Bible." Will N. Harben's "A Mute Confessor—The Romance of a Southern Town." Rev. Minot J. Savage's "Some Ghost Stories" Benjamin Hathaway's "The Finished Creation." "Redbank," by M. W. Cowles, and a beautifully illustrated book of "Songs" by Neith Boyce. The company has also published five numbers of the "Copley Square Series," all of which have achieved an instant success.

In the meantime the sales of Helen Gardner's "Is This Your Son, My Lord?." Mr. Garland's "Main-Travelled Roads," and Mr. Flower's "Lessons Learned From Other Lives, (all published by this house) have been exceedingly large. It is a notable fact which indicates the sagacity and keen discernment of this firm, that they have brought out not a book which has not been a positive and unequivocal success. It is a matter of just pride with the management, that thus far the Arena imprint has been placed on the page of no volume which has been, even in a general way, a failure.

The sales of one of their books has already exceeded 50,000 and another 35,000 copies.

The great publishing house of Harper Brothers point with pride to the fact that during the past year they have published no less than seventy-five new books. Comparing a young house with one that stands almost at the head of the publishing business, it is a remarkable fact that the Arena Publishing Company has within one year given to the world twenty-one new books, and every one of them a marked success. The plans of the Arena Publishing Company for the future are even more comprehensive in the way of book publishing. It is quite evident that they have caught the ear of the public, both with the Arena and with their other publications.

The handsome offices of this company are on Copley square, and a casual visitor who is always cordially received, is impressed with the tremendous amount of business that is transacted there. Under the present management the Arena Publishing Company, in addition to conducting the livest and most popular review in the world, the paid circulation of which has been doubled in one year, is bound, in the natural course of events, to become one of the greatest book publishing concerns in America.—Boston Weekly Journalist.

The agricultural department has made chemical analysis of the sugar beets grown in the Palouse country and the report is very flattering and encouraging to that section of the country. The chemists say that the juice of the beets went 17⅜ per cent sugar. This figure excels the best sugar districts in Nebraska. The general portion of sugar runs from 11 to 14 per cent. In comparison the Palouse ranks foremost of any beet sugar country in the world. The samples reported were sent to the department by Mr. Hans Michalson, who resides within a few miles of Colfax. This gentleman has the experience of sugar beet culture in Germany, and says he can profit $100 per acre from raising the sugar beet on the basis of an average percentage of sugar. He thinks the sugar beet will soon be one of Washington's chief products.

The vastness of the timber resources of this state is realized by but very few. "The Lumberman has been gathering statistics of the standing timber of the State of Washington," says Victor Beckman, the associate editor of that journal, "and we have received full reports from every county in the state with the exception of Snohomish, Whatcom, Mason and Asotin counties. These returns alone show that there are over 214,000,000,000 feet of standing timber in this state. When we receive the reports from the other counties the aggregate amount of standing timber will be found to be over 300,000,000,000 feet. Some idea of how much this amount really is, can be obtained by a comparison with other states. In nine Southern states in which yellow pine, pitch pine and cypress are grown, the total amount of standing timber is 200,000,000,000 feet. Just stop and think for a moment how this amount compares with the amount in this state alone. Michigan only has 24,000,000,000 feet of standing timber, according to the report of 1890."

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a cornet band will be held at the Farmers' Mercantile store Monday evening. Part of the money necessary for instruments has been raised. All parties interested in the project are urged to attend.

The people of Port Angeles and vicinity would do well by calling upon C. E. Bell & Co. for groceries, hardware, stoves, tinware, buggies, wagons, farm implements, ammunition and fishing tackle. See their advertisement elsewhere in this paper.

It is a noticable fact that the merchants who advertise make the quickest sales, and by making quick sales are enabled to sell at lower prices. Look over the advertising columns of the BEACON and patronize the enterprising firms represented there.

Farmers Mercantile Co's store at Washington Harbor have a complete stock of goods and all orders can be filled at the lowest prices. George Hunt as manager, will attend to your wants and will not allow anyone to undersell him, he will purchase your produce, and pay the highest market price.

Dr. H. B. Runnalls is thinking of locating in Dungeness, believing this to be a good location for a physician. He will want to buy twenty-five or thirty acres of good hop lands near Dungeness. Parties having land to sell can get additional information by calling at this office.

A number of G. A. R. men from Michigan were on the Garland this morning, en route to Port Angeles, but they had heard of the immense crops raised by the farmers of the Dungeness valley and some of the numerous other advantages that this section of the country presents, and some had decided to locate here when they came to make permanent homes.

In a country where 600 and 700 bushels of the best potatoes in the world can be grown to the acre; where the water is pure, and where lumber for boxing is close at hand, as is the case at Dungeness there is no imaginable reason why a starch factory would not bring large returns to its owners. It would cost little to start such works, and it would certainly be better for the farmers in the community than shipping at the prices they usually receive.

The Port Angeles election held Tuesday, resulted in the election of Norman R. Smith mayor, E. E. Seevers treasurer, C. S. Stakemiller assessor, Dr. A. B. Lull health officer, J. H. Ristine, J. E. Krueger, Thomas Moore, John Rose, J. E. Beam and H. S. Carver councilmen. The officers elected are equally divided between the citizens ticket and the peoples' party. Edward Metcalf, the hold over councilman, is a republican, giving the opposition to the peoples' party control of the city council.

The carpenters of Dungeness are certainly not complaining of lack of work. The buildings now under course of erection are the M. E. church, the co-operative town hall, Cays' hotel, Rollin's store building, John Morrissy's house, Chris Miller's residence, Thomas Miller's residence and A. H. Cummings' residence. The river bridge is being built and the buildings just completed are the Farmers Mercantile Company's store and the school house, besides the others completed five and six weeks ago. And a number of others will be started soon.

The masquerade ball to be given on December 26th will be the best affair of the season. It will be under the management of Messrs. Blake and Stark, which fact in itself is sufficient guarantee of the success of the affair. All who dance previous to 12 o'clock will be required to mask, and after that time any who wish may participate. The price for tickets will be $1.00. Spectators 25 cents; ladies free. All who enter the hall will be required to raise their mask at the door and be identified by the doorkeeper. Supper will be served at the Cays Hotel at fifty cents per plate.

We wish to call the attention of the advertisers of Clallam county to the fact that the BEACON goes into nearly every home in the county east of Morse's creek and that in the territory named the paper has a larger circulation than all the other papers of the county combined, and that too, where the farmers are the most prosperous and have more ready money than those of any other part of the county. The BEACON has a respectable circulation in Port Angeles and the west end, also, and its circulation in those quarters is steadily growing. If you want to invest your money where it will bring in the surest and most profitable returns advertise in the BEACON.

Rev. M. Eells, superintendent of the State Ethnological department, and also collector for the United States Ethnological department, was in our town Thursday. He has been among the Indians at Jamestown the past week, making collections of exhibits for the world's fair. At Jamestown there are about 100 Indians, twenty of the number professing Christians and members of the Congregational church. Mr. Eells has been among the Indians on the Skokomish reservation many years, working under the direction of the American Missionary Society. His father came to Washington to do missionary work among the Indians fifty-four years ago, and he has spent all but three years of his life here.

Now that the long winter evenings are upon us the young people of Dungeness are urged to organize a literary society. The farmers of the Quillayute, Blynn and other parts of the county have very successful organizations and surely we can do as well if a little interest is manifested. The farmers' Alliance and the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Associations, which are to be found in nearly every farming community in the Southern and Western states, are little more than literary societies, where the greater amount of study has been upon financial and political questions, conducted in such a manner as to interest the women and younger members as much as the older men. Last winter we were permitted to take part in a society formed by twelve young men and women wage-workers, where the program included a monthly journal made up of original contributions by each of the members, debates on subjects generally agitating the public mind, readings, declamations, essays, music, talks on historical and current literary subjects and book reviews. This winter the society has become larger, secured permanent club rooms, and from its printed program we learn that well-known lecturers are secured one night, musicians give musical entertainments another and the old program is kept up the other two sessions in each month. Many societies take up the Chautauqua course. There is little expense attached to such a work and much pleasure and profit are to be obtained. If you take an interest in such lines and are willing to lend a helping hand to organize and make the society a success afterwards do not be afraid to say so.

He has lived in this neigborhood nearly all his life and all know him to be a young man of steady habits and an honor to the community in which he lives. AN IRISH VILLAGE.

Mrs. Harte's Ingenious Plan for an Exhibit at the World's Fair.

Mrs. Harte is an English lady, who has devoted many years to labor for the betterment of the Irish people and is now working to get an Irish village exhibition at the Chicago World's fair. Her life has been one of earnest struggle. When she was Miss Rowlands she studied to become a painter, decided that she had not the talent and went to Paris to study medicine. There she met Dr. Ernest Harte and became his wife. She induced her husband to go to Ireland, and together they made a study of the poorer districts in the northwest. She organized cottage industries and societies for distributing work of which she says in a recent interview: "They are in fact organized industries, planned on an immense and elaborate scale by the great shirt, under linen, handkerchief and embroidery firms of the north of Ireland. I know for a fact that one house gave out no less than a million dozen pocket handkerchiefs to be made by hand in a year, and mainly for the American market. This industry, however, has been nearly destroyed by the McKinley tariff, to the great dismay and distress of the Donegal peasant women, for these industries are the sole support of hundreds and thousands of families in Ireland. I hope that our village will bring home to the American citizens some realization of how prosperity can be brought to oppressed Irish homes by their purchasing Irish goods.

MRS. HARTE.

"In the plan I have submitted to the Chicago executive I have suggested an irregular street of seven cottages. At the top, facing the pathway, will be the beautiful ruins of Donegal castle, and behind the oriel windows of the banqueting hall there will be a room for sales, exhibitions, etc. To the right of the castle will be found a model dairy, where iced milk from the famous Kerry cows can be enjoyed on hot summer days. An old mimic cross and well will give picturesqueness and interest to the street. In each cottage will be shown an industry carried on with the same simple appliances and by the very same people that one would see in such cottages in Ireland. Spinning and dyeing from bog plants and the weaving of the hand and heart homespuns of the Donegal industrial fund will be special features. I expect to show the actual process of vegetable dyeing which I taught the peasants."

It is not necessary to add that this will be a singularly attractive feature of the exposition.

NAVIGATION OF THE AIR.

The Germans Declare They Have Made It a Success.

When the Swiss government last year granted permission for the great Breslau firm of Kleinstorff to conduct aeronautic experiments among the Swiss mountains very little was thought of it. A few days ago, however, the Russian frontier videttes telegraphed in alarm to the czar that airships had sailed over the line from Germany, and now the Kleinstorffs declare they have done it.

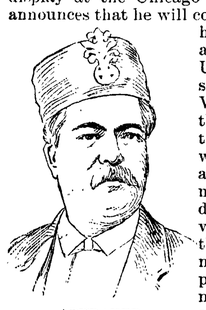
The Prussian government offered 1,000,000 marks for an invention imitating the flight of birds, and the experimenters went to Switzerland to keep clear of spies. Herr von Prigaldsky is the inventor and conducted the tests. He and the Prussian officers selected for a locality the two peaks of the Napf and Santis, in the comparatively little visited region near St. Gallen, of which Schaffel has sung in his romance of the monk Eckehard. On Sept. 28 the apparatus was taken up the mountain side, bridgelike structures of wood were erected on either peak and a connection by wires was established. The experiments began on Oct. 2, a windless day, when the country below was hidden in fog. They were viewed by Herr von Prigaldsky, the two officers of the aeronautic corps of the Prussian army and by two civil engineers of the Swiss government.

The first flight from one peak to the other took an hour and eighteen minutes. In the beginning the aeronaut had some trouble in making the ship rise, but after he had succeeded in this he was able to continue his way with great rapidity. On the following days the time of the flight was considerably reduced, so that in the end they could cover the distance between the two mountains in almost as short a time as a carrier pigeon. All in all, from Oct. 2 to 14, the flight was performed eighteen times, until one of the propellers got out of order and certain repairs became necessary, which had to be done at the works in Breslau. How to make a propeller which is sufficiently powerful without going above a certain weight still remained a problem, it seems, when the experiments were discontinued.

Such are the salient facts as given in reports from Switzerland and Germany, and it is added that other airships have been started, so the Russian videttes may in fact have seen some.

Coming to the Fair.

Abubaker, sultan of Johore, is not only making arrangements for an extraordinary display at the Chicago World's fair, but announces that he will come himself with his suite. This is at the request of United States Consul Rounseville Wildman, and through his report the country learns with surprise that all the Malay peninsula is in a condition of rapid development and that Johore is the most progressive part of it. It is now traversed by a railway and is exporting large quantities of valuable timber. The sultan or maharajah will send a complete Malay village to the exposition. He is now the only independent prince in that part of the world, Holland, France and England having taken control of all the rest of the country. He is in his sixtieth year, has traveled extensively through Europe and has introduced many reforms in his native land, being especially favorable to educational institutions.



ABUBAKER.

The family is ancient. His ancestors have ruled Johore since 1311, and before that were for centuries the sultans of Malacca. The area of the country is estimated at 20,000 square miles, covered in many parts by virgin forests. It has been but partially explored. Apart from the less civilized tribes of the interior the population numbers some 100,000, principally Malays and Chinese.

Over Nineteen Million Lives.

Humanity is continually at war against itself, without even having taken time to reflect and ask the reason why. It opens its veins for the simple pleasure of seeing its noble blood flow—blood that is always young and continually renewed. How many men are destroyed by war in a century? Official reports and documents presented in the best accredited historical treatises enable us easily to calculate the number of soldiers who have been killed or have died during modern wars.

Thus, for example, we know that during the Franco-German war of 1870-1, 250,000 victims were slain on the two sides; that during the Crimean war, 1854-5, 785,000 were slain; that during the short Italian war of 1859, 63,000 men fell on the field of battle or died in hospitals; that the game of chess between Prussia and Austria in 1866 deprived 46,000 inhabitants of life; that in the United States the strife between the north and south caused the death of 450,000 men in 1860-4.

We know also that the wars of the first Empire poured out the blood of 5,000,000 Europeans, and moreover that France has taken up arms twenty times since 1815 On adding the number of victims of war during the last century a total of 19,840,900 is reached simply in the civilized countries of Europe and in the United States.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

A Cobbler's Well Filled Head.

"I once knew an old Scotch shoemaker living in the little town of Timpson, Tex., who was perfectly familiar with the works of all the great writers and thinkers since the dawn of Greek civilization," said J. T. Bishop. "He worked at the bench with the dramas of Euripides, the philosophy of Aristotle, the metaphysics of Kant and kindred works ever before him. There he sat year after year, surrounded by the choicest flowers of Grecian rhetoric and old shoes, keeping time with his hammer to the music of earth's mightiest bards. He had not only read but digested everything that was worth reading.

"There was not a quip of the sage of Ferney, not a sigh in Wilhelm Meister, not a covert sting in Swift's irony, nor a Parthian arrow in Carlyle's remorseless satire that escaped him. Yet he was but a cobbler. His little shop was to him a palace, whose roof touched heaven, whose walls inclosed the intellectual hierarchy of all ages. The blind bard of Chios struck the lyre and sang to him the wondrous tale of Troy; Socrates sat by his side and discoursed to him, and Demosthenes poured out his fervid eloquence for his entertainment and instruction. Why should he not be happy? Life is very much what we make it."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Wonderful Fish Story.

"When I was fishing on the Kankakee some fifteen years ago," said the man with the cigarette, "a whirlwind came along and carried off my vest that was hanging on a limb just over my head. It had my watch in it and a tailor's account. Well, the whole outfit sailed out of sight in less than a minute. Seven years afterward a party of us were camped up the same river, only 100 yards farther up. It was my turn to do the cooking, so I started out for some dry wood, stepped on a log, which caved in, and lo! as the story books say, there lay my watch, with the same old tailor's bill twisted through the ring. It was still running.

"Oh, come off! You want us to ask you how such a thing could be and then you'll explain that the whirlwind wound your watch up so tight that it ran for seven years."

"I didn't say the watch was still running," said the story teller, as he lighted another bacillus exterminator; "I had reference to the tailor's bill. It is running yet, in fact."—Indianapolis Journal.

Botanic Garden at Buitenzorg.

The now famous tropical botanic garden at Buitenzorg, Java, is about thirty-six miles from Batavia, on one of the long ridges that extend to the north of the great mountain of Salak. It is most favorably located, the mean average rainfall amounting to 180 inches per year. It was founded in 1817 by Reinwardt, the commissioner general, under the direction of two chief gardeners, one of whom was a pupil of the royal garden at Kew.

The history of the garden has been one of many vicissitudes, but through the devotion of individuals, especially the energetic Teysmann, it has made important contributions to science.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Moons of Saturn.

One of Saturn's moons, called Mimas, about half the size of the earth's satellite, is so close to the planet in its circling that it seems to cross the face of the latter at an astonishing rate of speed. Of the seven others, Titan has a diameter of 3,300 miles; Iapetus, 1,800 miles; Rhea, 1,200 miles; Dione and Thetys each 500 miles, while Enceladus and Hyperion are very little fellows. Several of them in the sky, together with the flaming ring of star dust stretched athwart the heavens, must make a gorgeous spectacle by night on the Saturnian sphere.—Providence Journal.

A Walk in the Winter Greenwood.

The warm fir wood is dark and low
Within a sheltered valley deep;
When o'er the hills the night winds blow,
They rock its nappy tribes to sleep.

A thousand tiny tracks are made
Upon its carpet soft and white,
And through its thick and fragrant shade
Brisk bird wings glance in sudden flight.

Here feasts are spread and mouths are fed
Where seeds and buds are scattered wide,
And many a warm and cozy bed
Is heaped where dreaming sleepers hide.

Sometimes a golden sunbeam strays
Within to light the green and white;
Sometimes at night the full moon's rays
Fill these dim aisles with silver light.

But we are interlopers here!
Our steps are strange, our voices new,
The dwellers shy look forth in fear
And vanish with a swift adieu.

Electrical Reporting.

Electric Power describes a new system of reporting baseball and other games by means of an ingenious electrical apparatus. The special object of the apparatus is to enable a full report of games to be made in sight of a large number of people and at the same time to dispense with one or more of the assistants now required in reporting such games. This device is intended not only to indicate the progress of distant games, but actually to be used at the opposite end of the ball field from the grand stand, in order to enlighten the spectators on many points on which they are liable to be momentarily in doubt. Spectators coming in late are often unable to ascertain the number of innings played, the striker at the bat, the number of balls and strikes called, etc., and even those already on the ground sometimes find it difficult to determine whether the umpire has called a strike or a ball. All these weighty issues, upon which the baseball enthusiast expends such intense solicitude, can now be clearly and reliably recorded, and all anxiety and uncertainty can be removed by a glance at the exhibition board placed in sight of the spectators, the indicators on which are electrically controlled and operated by an experienced person located close to the diamond.

Eclipses in 1891.

This year's eclipses will be somewhat beyond the average. On the evening of May 23 the moon will rise in eclipse at five minutes to 8, but the shadow will for the greater part have already passed away, and it is only in eastern countries and at the antipodes that her face that evening will be seen wholly obscured. It will be otherwise with the total eclipse of our satellite, which will begin at thirty-five minutes past 10 on Nov. 15 next. This, as the almanacs tell us, will be "entirely visible at Greenwich," whither, no doubt, the legendary cockney will once more betake himself in time to witness the phenomenon.

There will be two solar eclipses—one annular, and visible in this country as a partial eclipse on the upper limb, beginning at two minutes past 5 on June 6; the other a partial eclipse on Dec. 1, which will be visible chiefly in the South Pacific. Besides these there will be, on May 10, a transit of Mercury over the sun's disk, which will be only partially visible in this part of the globe.—Science Notes.

Odd Journey of a Tree.

A stately elm tree is being moved several miles to Graceland cemetery, and since it began its travels, which are about half over, it has killed one man and slightly injured several others. The tree grew about three miles from Grosse Point, and is destined to adorn a lot where a Mr. Lathrop is buried. It was dug up about a month ago, the earth around its roots boxed up, and it was placed in a standing position upon a platform moving upon rollers. The platform is pulled along by horses. During the process of changing the supports the other day a laborer was crushed to death under a falling beam. It is estimated that when placed in the cemetery the tree will have cost not less than $2,500.—Chicago Tribune.

To Protect Lamp Chimneys.

The season is just on us when lamp chimneys break in spite of all precautions, and cause people to use bad language who are usually above such weakness. The usual remedy or preventive recommended is to chip a fragment out of the glass to allow for expansion. Nine times out of ten the glass is cracked by the process and destruction expedited. If the chimney is washed in coal oil and never even wiped with a damp cloth it will be practically indestructible, and will smoke jet black before it will crack. I have recommended this remedy to customers for years, and have never heard of its failing.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Outrage Reported at Lewiston.

A man who signed himself "Citizen," and who is a way off on spelling, writes the Lewiston city marshal that he has been hit by two snowballs thus far this season, which he thinks were maliciously aimed at him by some bad boys. He notifies the city marshal that this throwing of snowballs at him must cease at once, or there will be trouble in the Androscoggin valley in the very near future.—Lewiston Journal.

Will Pay His Respects.

Napoleon McDaniel, a noted train robber, recently convicted at Texarkana, Tex., and sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary, has escaped from jail. Two eminent criminal lawyers who unsuccessfully defended him are now living in daily dread, having received a message from McDaniel that he intends to kill them "because they did not do their best in his defense."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Paw's Innocence.

Old Gentleman—There goes young Broxhall. His father was a very eminent man, but I see no hope for the son. He appears to have inherited none of the elements of greatness.

Young Gent—Why, Paw! It isn't a week since he was acknowledged the champion football kicker of the clawss.—Good News.

DUNGENESS

IS CELEBRATED THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE NORTHWEST FOR ITS fertile soil, producing immense crops of wheat, oats, barley, hay, potatoes and vegetables of every description.

Dairying is a very prominent industry in this region, the soil producing the finest grass in the world for this purpose, rivaling the celebrated dairying districts of England.

Fruits of all kinds suited to this climate yield in abundance.

As a resort for the pleasure-seeker and sportsman it cannot be excelled. The drives are delightful, and beautiful groves along the Dungeness river provide fine spots for picnic and camping parties. This river also furnishes unrivaled sport for the angler, while the country abounds in game, from the quail, grouse and duck in the lowlands to the deer, elk and bear found in the mountains, a few miles distant.

The new town of DUNGENESS, only a few months old, is situated on Dungeness Bay, at the mouth of the Dungeness river, having a $12,000 wharf, at which several steamers land daily, directly to and from Seattle, Port Townsend and Port Angeles. A fine new hotel provides accommodations for guests. Educational advantages are of the best; a new schoolhouse, to cost $2,500, is now in process of erection. A neat church building provides a place of worship for a flourishing congregation. Daily mails and a telegraph station furnish speedy communication with all points.

The scenery at this point is superb. Charming views on water and on land meet the eye, and furnish a paradise for the artist.

The climate of DUNGENESS is one of the most pleasant and healthful in the world.
