THE [illegible] RETURNS

From [illegible] Voyage to Honolulu.

ORDERS [illegible]IVED FOR BUILDING

Material [illegible]—The Establishment of a Lumber [illegible] a Strong Probability—California [illegible] the Lumber Trade of the Island[illegible] Gives An Interesting Account [illegible] Honolulu.

The [illegible] W. F. Jewett, Capt. Johnson, [illegible] arrived from Honolulu last Sa[illegible] after a passage of 23 days, [illegible] rough weather when 400 mi[illegible] cape. At the time the Jewett [illegible] the rough weather she was [illegible] 11 days out, and under ordinary [illegible] would have made a remar[illegible] quick trip, reaching here within [illegible]. But the elements decreed o[illegible], prevailing in all their unrestr[illegible]. On the 11th day out Captain [illegible] stated, the vessel was within [illegible] miles of the cape, when a ter[illegible] east wind, blowing at the rate of [illegible] an hour, carried them hundred [illegible] miles out of their course. The wind [illegible] changed to the southeast, a[illegible] not so severe, proved a decide[illegible] sailing breeze. With the exce[illegible] of the storm encountered off the [illegible] a severe gale prevailing on the [illegible]-bound trip, when two days o[illegible] Honolulu, Captain Johnson sta[illegible] could not have asked for more [illegible] sailing weather during the [illegible].

From [illegible] point of view the result of [illegible] of the first cargo of lu[illegible] [illegible] port, has been quite successful and in a degree satisfactory to those concerned. The importation there of Puget Sound lumber is as yet largely experimental, but Mr. Lambert received every assurance, and what he considered substantial encouragement for a receptive demand and a growing market for our lumber, at a price permitting of reasonable marginal profit. An order for 80,000 feet of building material and 250,000 shingles will be filled and shipped on the outgoing trip of the Jewett.

A thorough and critical examination of the local conditions, of the possibilities and demands of that market, has fully convinced Mr. Lambert that the best way in which to build up a healthy and sufficient demand for our lumber is to establish a yard there, supplied with the dimensional building and structural timbers which the market required and will utilize.

There is no question in his mind that when the fact of the superiority of Puget Sound lumber has been full demonstrated, as it can and will be, to the satisfaction of that people, the question of a market will have vanished and the one of an adequate supply to meet the demand take its place as the perplexing, if not disagreeable problem.

California has thus far succeeded in monopolizing the lumber and shingle trade of these islands, and has also built up a profitable trade in produce and manufactured goods. Almost, if not the entire crop of sugar cane produced on the islands is controlled by Spreckels, the California millionaire, while great quantities of the other products of the island are shipped to California, where a good market is found.

There is no reason why Puget Sound should not successfully compete for this trade with California. Her lumber, shingles and produce, are equal, if not superior, in quality to the product of California, can be produced as cheaply and other conditions, such as transportation, etc., are equally as favorable.

The experimental shipment of shingles gave excellent satisfaction, and substantial encouragement was extended for an other order which justifies the shipment on the next trip of the Jewett of 250,000.

The change of government in Hawaii has given a decided impetus to business and to the internal development of the island, and an unprecedented era of advancement will undoubtedly be witnessed during the next ten years.

The annexation sentiment is a very strong one, and if it received any encouragement from the Cleveland administration, the change would undoubtedly soon take place. Whether or not the movement would be practicable, when the fact of the great distance intervening between the two countries is taken into consideration, either side of which has able champions, both of which have advance clear and convincing arguments.

The question, it is maintained by logical thinkers, should be settled by this government establishing and maintaining a protectorate over the island.

However this question may be ultimately settled, the future alone will determine. One fact has, however, been clearly demonstrated. This is that the people of the island entertain the most friendly feeling for Americans; to them they look for protection from the invasion of an unfriendly power, and to them they will appeal, and not in vain, in time of trouble.

Withal Mr. Lambert is more than satisfied with the results of his introduction to Hawaiians, both from a social and from a business point of view. In that people he has discovered the spirit of progressiveness as a dominating trait, and a wealth of natural resources at command to build a prodigiously wealthy little empire, finally the opportunity to cultivate and establish reciprocal trade relations on an extensive scale.

Even the more exacting could not have demanded more.

The Jewett immediately upon her building material, will be taken from the Colony mill, and the remainder of the cargo will be received from the Lambert mill, with the exception of the shingles which will doubtless come from Dry creek.

HER IMPRESSIONS OF HONOLULU.

As the fact was generally known to the many friends of Mrs. W. H. Lambert on the Sound and in the East, that she accompanied her husband on his recent voyage on the schooner W. F. Jewet to Honolulu, an opinion from her of the principal incidents of the trip and of her impressions of Honolulu will doubtless prove exceedingly interesting to them and to the readers of The Democrat-Leader as well. The purpose in view a representative called at the home of this talented lady, and was most cordially received. The appeal for the impressions of her visit abroad was most graciously granted.

"My impressions of Honolulu. Well, I must say they were exceedingly favorable. I was completely captured with Honolulu, its delightful situation, its gracious and hospitable people, its tropical climate, its beautiful plants, the profusion of delicately fashioned flowers, the great variety of tropical fruits, charms and facinates the visitor.

"We arrived at Honolulu in the evening. The vessel anchored in the harbor, and the custom officials and health officers came aboard and examined the vessel to satisfy themselves as to the absence of contraband goods or of any contagious diseases. Before a passenger is permitted to land he must satisfy the officers that he possesses $50. After the examination of the vessel and of its passengers had been satisfactorily prosecuted all barriers vanished, and the freedom of the city was extended the coming guests. I was deeply impressed with the generous welcome extended the coming as well as the departing guests. When a vessel arrives the passengers are met at the wharf by two bands, one of which the players are entirely comprised of natives, and in my judgment they are the better musicians. These natives, like the colored race of the South, are natural born musicians. Music with them is not acquired, it is natural, and is, indeed, an art exquisitely fashioned; it comes from the heart, it penetrates the very soul, the notes sweet, subdued, plaintive, sympathetic, harmonious, floats in waves out on the air and the listener is enraptured and carried from earthly cares to the scene where only angels dwell, and peace and love reign supreme.

"The hotel accommodations in Honolulu are excellent. The leading public houses are provided with a number of cottages for guests, and the latter are given the preference of rooms either in the main building or may occupy a cottage. Meals, however, are only served in the dining hall of the hotel. The service is very efficient, and the fare compares very favorably with the Tacoma or with other leading American hotels. Our bill of fare each day included strawberries and a variety of tropical fruits which were very [illegible] and appetizing. [illegible] [illegible] of Honolulu [illegible] dressed?" A[illegible] dress in exceedingly [illegible] neatly. The color of [illegible] not in[illegible] any white dresses.

"Shopping in Honolulu is done by the woman of the higher class exclusively in the morning, which is also the prevailing custom in the East. You very rarely meet a lady on the street. Whenever she goes out calling or 'shopping,' a carriage is at her command, consequently one of the strikingly noticeable and attractive street scenes is the great number of really elegant family turnouts passing to and fro all times of the day.

"The women of Honolulu are passionately fond of driving, horseback riding and bathing. The bathing grounds of Honolulu are undoubtedly the finest in the world. Nearly all the women there are expert swimmers. The beach firm, the water warm, it is an interesting scene to witness the more daring feats of the surf bathers, and the sport is very invigorating and healthful.

The native women are very fond of horseback riding and ride astride. They are victims of the mother Hubbards, and being unusually large of person assume enormous proportions in these magnifying garments. I was struck with the large physiques of the native men and women. They are indeed magnificent specimens of manhood and womanhood.

"My opinion of the social phase of Hawaiian life. Of the population the

OUR MAGNIFICENT WATER POWER.

The possibilities of the water power of Port Angeles cannot easily be comprehended.

Only by comparison with a far greater power the utilization of which is now in process can a person adequately and intelligently conceive the magnitude, the vastness of the enormous flow of mountain water into Port Angeles harbor, when it will have been harnessed and utilized as a motive power.

The attempt to utilize the tremendous water power of Niagara falls, amazes and confounds a person who endeavors to grasp the almost limitless possibilities of that enormous flow of water. But the experiment has met with unqualified success as the power already developed supplies Buffalo thirteen miles distant.

Mr. George Westinghouse, of air brake fame, than whom no other person is better able to give an intelligent opinion of the magnitude of the enterprise, and whose Company, by the way, is now building three 5000 horse power dynamos for the Niagara power plant, expresses himself as follows:

"You are destined to have one of the greatest manufacturing cities in the world. No locality can compete with your cheap water power, for it can be transmitted and delivered to factories five or six miles distant with a loss of only five per cent. in the transmission from the water wheel into the generator, and of 10 per cent. from the generator to the dynamos in the factories, making only 15 per cent loss sustained; while if steam power was to be generated on the factory premises the minimum loss, that is to say, with the best boilers made, and with the highest test compounding engines, would be 35 per cent., while the cost of installing an electric plant for the transmission and application of power for the distance I have indicated would be inconsiderable as compared with the cost of a steam plant. Then, too, the cost for attendance and maintenance of an electric plant would cut no figure whatever, which, as everybody knows, is considerable with a steam plant. And then the cost of electrical machinery is being lessoned all the time. As an illustration, only a few years ago it cost $3,500 to equip a street car with 25 horse power motors, which is done now for about one third of that amount.

"In your locality electricity will soon come into general use for heating buildings and cooking purposes. Why, you would be surprised to learn what a small number of units of heat are required to broil a piece of beefsteak, and the secret of it lies in the fact that the electricity can be so confined in the oven or broiler that none of the heat is wasted, but all goes into the stake, while with charcoal, for instance, three quarters of the heat which has to be generated goes up the chimney.

"Among the other uses electricity will be put to it will become of invaluable importance in the care and treatment of the sick, where hot appliances are required for the body or any particular part of the human organization."

Speaking further of the prospective growth of Niagara Falls, Mr. Westinghouse said:

"When manufacturers begin to locate there you will be astonished at the rapidity with which they will multiply. Half a dozen factories will attract a half dozen more; that dozen will beget another dozen, and they go on increasing in geometrical proportion."

The power plant in process of construction will, when completed and fully utilized develop 125,000 horse power. Of this amount only a small portion is now in use. But when wholly absorbed it will drive the wheels of all the manufactures street car lines, operate electric lighting systems, etc., within a radius of several hundred miles Yet only the infinitismal unit of the tremendous power will have been utilized. Expert engineers who have estimated its possibilities give the total water power of the falls at from 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 horse power. Should any considerable portion of that enormous power ultimately be developed and utilized, who will attempt to foretell the innumerable benefits which will accrue therefrom to mankind. It would completely revolutionize economical industrial conditions. The cost of living would be greatly reduced. Not only the necessaries but the luxuries of life would be easily within the reach of the poor as well as of the rich. With the many electrical appliances already invented for the use, convenience and benefit of mankind, with the inventions the unsurpassed genious of an inventive age yet will produce for the betterment of humanity, Bellamy's ideal commonwealth may not be as far in the future as the pessimist might imagine.

Now for the force of the application. What does the revelation of the development of Niagara's wonderful water power imply? In what particular does it concern this people?

The situation of Port Angeles from a commercial and from an industrial point of view is, indeed, most advantageous. Its shores are washed by one of the grandest commercial waterways of the world; the soil of its valleys and of its foot hills is very rich and very productive; its vast forests of superior merchantable timber are practically inexhaustible; the possibility of rich mineral deposits is exceedingly favorable; these, some of the natural advantages of this truly favored commonwealth, are, as yet, practically undeveloped.

For the utilization of these varied matchless resources, nature has provided Port Angeles with a magnificent water power, the possibilities of which are almost unlimited. The enormous volume of water that tumbles and thunders and splashes from the mountains through the several waterways and empties into the harbor, if harnessed would develop sufficient power to turn the wheels of the state. And at what a minutia of cost compared with steam could this power be utilized. And to what a variety of purposes could it be applied.

Even if partially developed there is sufficient power for the operation of a plant with the capacity of 50,000 horse power. And what would be the possibilities of that power? It would turn the wheels of the state; it would provide sufficient power for the manufactures, the electric lighting, the street car service of a large city; it would furnish the power for the operation of an electric railway to the lakes, to Dungeness, an electric logging railway into the mountain regions, the power for the manufactures of the city and then not be entirely utilized. In its water power Port Angeles possesses an unlimited source of wealth. The present nor the succeeding generation will probably not witness the utilization of our grand water power on the extensive plan outlined.

But a beginning has already been made. Confronted by a most unfavorable chain of circumstances, with almost overwhelming opposition and insurmountable obstacles lying in the pathway of legitimate industrial advancement, Mr. Norman R. Smith, has demonstrated an admirable degree of energy, pluck, and indomitable courage and perseverance, in developing a considerable water power on Ennes creek. This gentleman claims a sufficient water power to turn the wheels of a large saw and shingle mill and and operate the electric lighting system of the city.

If this much has been accomplished by a man commanding limited financial resources, receiving meagre encouragement for the commendable display of energy and industry, from the large element of financial experts, economic dreamers, and street-corner politicians Angeles unfortunately is inflicted with, how much more will be accomplished when capital and labor brains and muscle combine in the development and utilization of this magnificent force of nature.

Truly, a grand destiny is ours.

LITTLE ALL-ALONEY.

Little All-Aloney's feet
Pitter-patter in the hall,
And his mother runs to meet
And to kiss her toddling sweet,
Ere perchance he fall.
He is, oh, so weak and small!
Yet what danger shall he fear,
When his mother hoveeth near
And he hears her cheering call,
"All-Aloney?"

Little All-Aloney's face
It is all aglow with glee,
As around the romping place
At a terrifying pace,
Lungeth, plungeth he!
And that hero seems to be
All unconscious of our cheers—
Only one dear voice he hears
Calling reassuringly:
"All-Aloney!"

Though his legs bend with their load,
Though his feet they seem so small,
That you cannot help forbode
Some disastrous episode
In that noisy hall.
Neither threatening bump nor fall
Little All-Aloney fears,
But with secret bravado steers
Whither comes that cheery call:
"All-Aloney!"

Ah, that in the years to come,
When he shares of Sorrow's store
When his feet are chill and numb,
When his cross is burdensome,
And his heart is sore,
Would that he could hear once more
The gentle voice he used to hear,
Divine with mother love and cheer—
Calling from yonder spirit shore:
"All, all alone!"

A Cheap Power.

At the same time a reliable power is to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a watch on the engine is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense of an engineer is a serious item in the economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run a day without attention or any accident, and the cost is about one cent per hour for fuel per horse-power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. I don't want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade, and cannot take any more until they are realized on. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, Front and Alder streets, Portland, Oregon.

An Unexpected Marriage Boom.

Owing to the great demand for public work in the parks at $1 a day the city employment committee issued an order some time ago to employ only married men. This had the effect of causing a big boom in business at the marriage license clerk's office. Every unmarried Italian and Pole in Pittsburg seems to be hunting a wife. All the marriageable young women who are willing to begin the married state at $1 a day have been taken, and unless the order be rescinded trouble will occur in the Italian and Polish colonies. Chief Clerk McKenzie of the employment committee said:

"Many men who had been refused work went away and in a few days returned with their marriage certificate, thinking it would entitle them to get a job. When refused a chance to earn $1 a day, they thought they had been trifled with and cursed the committee."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A WEIGHTY YOUTH.

A Virginia Boy Who Is Only Fifteen Years Old, but Weighs 535 Pounds.

Wythe county numbers within its population the greatest man in the commonwealth, if one considers his dead weight—Melvin Grubb, whose wondrous girth and ponderous limbs make him the daily wonder of his neighbors. He was born something more than 15 years ago and has ever since that event kept his neighbors wondering at his growth. Each year since he was 10 has seen from 50 to 100 pounds added to his weight, until he is believed now to be the heaviest youth alive, and should his avoirdupois appreciate at the same rapid rate he will soon break all the heavyweight records since Adam. At 13 years of age he weighed 410 pounds; at 14, 450, and now at 15 the scales creak at 535 pounds, and the end is not yet.

Grubb is not merely a mountain of flesh, but an active and intelligent boy. He can follow a plow all day without unusual fatigue and is a bright and intelligent pupil of the public school near his father's farm at Walter's Bridge, 3½ miles west of Wytheville.—Richmond Times.

HARK FROM THE TOMBS.

Conviction of Voters Who Came From New York's Doleful Prison.

Three men were convicted in the court of oyer and terminer on Monday (two of them pleaded guilty) of the offense of voting from the Tombs in violation of section 3 of article 2 of the state constitution, which declares that "no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while in the service of the United States, or while kept in any almshouse or other asylum at public expense, or while confined in any public prison."

The case of the defendant Cady, who was found guilty by a jury, was peculiar. He had voluntarily resided for seven years, without commitment for any offense, in the Tombs. He had no other home. He was not qualified to vote from any other domicile. He registered and voted from the city prison, from which he readily obtained egress, and he was tried and convicted. Judge Barrett announced, however, that he would give a certificate of reasonable doubt, so that the question whether a man without a home, except such as he obtains for himself in a city prison, is actually and totally disfranchised, might be decided by a higher court. The situation is certainly an odd one.—New York Sun.

An Automatic Press Feeder.

An ingenious arrangement has been devised and put in operation by a London concern by which the automatic feeding of single sheets of paper to printing machines of the ordinary cylinder pattern, or two feeder, perfecting, lithographic or ruling machine is carried out in an entirely satisfactory manner—the apparatus, in a word, while of simple construction and management, is capable of automatically separating a single sheet of paper from the bulk and laying the sheet to exact register in the grippers of the machine. In the accomplishing of this effect two boards are affixed in the usual position on the sides of the machine, which sides also carry two vertical sliding frames surmounted by a crosshead, which supports a radial beam for the purpose of regulating the weight or pressure upon the paper, the apparatus being allowed sufficient play on the slides by means of antifriction pulleys. The motive power for carrying the sheet forward is taken by means of a chain drive from the shaft of the cylinder, thus insuring that no sheet is fed except in accord with the motion of the cylinder.

Heavily Insured Monarchs.

The crowned heads of Europe seem to take a great deal of stock in life insurance. It is announced that the king of Portugal has just taken out a $200,000 policy on his life, but that is an insignificant investment compared with those of some of the other potentates. The late Emperor Frederick of Germany was insured for $4,000,000. The queen regent of Spain has her life insured for a large amount in behalf of her two little daughters, following the example of her husband, whose death mulcted the various companies in which he was insured for $5,000,000.

King Leopold of Belgium's life is heavily insured, as is also that of Queen Victoria. The queen's husband, the late prince consort, was insured for close upon $5,000,000, the income of which has been enjoyed by his widow. About the only sovereign in Europe who is not insured is the czar of Russia, the companies regarding him as too unsafe a risk on account of the nihilists.—Boston Herald.

The Old Man's Sorrow.

"You have a daughter, have you not, sir?" said a minister to an old gentleman with whom he had formed a casual acquaintance as a fellow passenger.

The old gentleman essayed to answer, but the question had strangely affected him.

"I beg your pardon," said the minister, "if I have thoughtlessly awakened in your mind recollections of a painful nature. The world is full of sorrow, sir, and perhaps my question recalls to your memory a fair, beautiful girl whose blossoming young life had withered in its bloom. Am I right, sir?"

"No, not exactly," replied the old gentleman sadly; "I have five unmarried darters, mister, and the youngest of the lot is 28 years old."—London Tit-Bits.

Origin of the Ballet.

As long ago as the middle of the sixteenth century the ballet was in existence in Italy, where it was so popular that members of the royal family and nobles took part in it. The ballet was first introduced in France in the reign of Louis XIII. and both that monarch and Louis XVI occasionally took part in its dances. In its earliest presentation the ballet appeared dexterously in combination with the other theatrical acts. About the year 1700 women made their first appearance in the ballet, which up to that time had been performed exclusively by men, as was the case also with plays and operas, but no woman ballet dancer of any note appeared until 1790, or about a century ago.—Exchange.

What Was Done.

During Stonewall Jackson's campaign in the Shenandoah valley it became necessary that a bridge over a small creek should be built in great haste. One evening Jackson sent for his old pioneer captain, Meyers by name, and pointed out to him the urgency of the occasion, saying that he would send him the plan of his colonel of engineers as soon as it was done. Next morning Jackson rode down to Captain Meyers' quarters, and saluting the veteran said, "Captain, did you get the plan of the bridge from Colonel ——?"

"Well," said the captain, "the bridge, general, is built, but I don't know whether the picture is done or not!"

Spring Medicine.

This is the time for spring medicine, and there is nothing better than green foods. Celery salad, celery soup, celery sandwiches and celery and salt for nerves, rheumatism and relish; lettuce, chicory, escarol, oranges and grape fruit for the blood; water cresses for the voice, breath and lungs; radishes, onions, shallot and chives for the stomach, and butter, smoked meats, eggs, fish and oysters for good digestion. Pickles, olives, spices, pastry and fresh meats are too heavy when a change of diet is in order. Green soups are as real aperients, and young beets, spinach and stewed cucumbers and tomatoes are remedial for a long list of digestive ailments. At least so the doctors say.—New York World.

The Khedive's Favor.

It is well to be on good terms with the khedive of Egypt. This young monarch has lately presented a beautiful bracelet to a young English woman who took his fancy, the value of which is beyond calculation. It is gold set with scarabei, and each stone is upward of 4,000 years old. Some of these belonged to high priests in the days of the pharaohs, and the inscriptions on them relate to magic.—Alexandria Letter.

The best sweet potato soil is a sandy loam.

Clay soil is too cold for the sweet potato, and mucky land produces worthless roots and vine.

Professor Emery of the North Carolina station says that fodder stacked up exactly as hay is stacked, in pretty large stacks, will keep well in a moderate climate.

A North Carolina farmer says that the Silver Hull is the best buckwheat.

Choose for pecan culture, says a Mississippian, land where the hickory thrives. The richer the land the better, alluvial soil being best.

A Tennesseean says that if he were reduced to one rose for outdoor purposes he would select Estella Pradel for his state and south of it.

A BAY KNIGHT ON HOOFS.

He Saved His Master's Little Daughter From the Attacks of a Savage Cur.

The bay Jack is one of a dozen hunters which Mr. James B. Dill keeps in his stable at his home on Harrison street, Orange. His fad is breeding hunters. The other morning Mr. Dill was standing just inside the stable door talking to his groom and had Jack's bridle in his hand.

Suddenly he heard a scream and recognized the voice as that of his little daughter. Jack, the bay hunter, heard it, too, and he must have recognized it, for quicker than it takes to tell and before Mr. Dill realized what had happened, Jack had jerked the bridle from Mr. Dill's hand, backed out of the stable and was running across the stable yard. Mr. Dill followed, and what he saw was calculated to make him follow pretty rapidly. His little daughter was being attacked by a dog—a big, ugly, yellow cur that did not belong around the place. She had seen her father return from his ride and had started from the house to the stable to meet him, as was her custom. The strange dog had sprung at her. Its teeth were tearing her dress, and she was vainly struggling to release herself.

What Mr. Dill saw Jack, the bay hunter, saw, too, and he must have had the same appreciation of the little girl's danger that the father had. Running until he reached the little girl and the dog, he reared up on his hind legs and then brought his fore feet down with crushing force on the vicious cur. The dog released its hold on the girl's clothing and fell, but Jack had not finished his work. Turning just as the dog was about to rise again, he let fly his hind legs and gave the cur a kick that landed it in a heap against a stone fence full 10 feet away. Then Jack's work was done, and he waited for Mr. Dill to come up.

Mr. Dill found that his little daughter was not injured, though badly frightened. Then he went over and took a look at the dog. It was dead. Then he went over to his bay hunter, Jack, gave him an affectionate slap or two and placed his little daughter on Jack's back. The hunter seemed to appreciate the compliment and neighed with delight as he started for the stable, where Mr. Dill told the groom to give him "the best in the house and plenty of it."—New York

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

Senatorial Outlook.

Mr. A. A. Lindsley, assistant state treasurer, was in the city Thursday and Friday.

Mr. Lindsley talked quite freely about the coming legislature. He says that great interest is manifest over the senatorial question. Being asked as to the probable outcome, he said that John L. Wilson is easily in the lead, with Levi Ankeny a good second. However, Mr. Lindsey does not expect to see Mr. Wilson elected on the first ballot, though he might get through all right in the long run.

Mr. Lindsley expects the legislature to make strenuous efforts in legislation; but thinks the expectations or demands for legislation will be so great that there will be great disappointment after the adjournment.

HER IMPRESSION OF HONOLULU.

native, the Chinese and Japanese aggregate two-thirds, the remaining third being whites. The greater number of the latter are Americans. The half-breed element of the population is quite numerous, and of person they are prepossessing. Many of these latter have inherited wealth, received excellent educational advantages, are innately refined and move in the best society. During my brief stay I met quite a number of families, and, from what I saw, am convinced that home life is the most delightful phase of social conditions in Honolulu. In the homes I entered I found a degree of refinement, culture, cheerfulness, contentment and graciousness that was truly ennobling. I met some excellent people, cultured, well traveled, broad-minded and patriotic. And to none other is a more generous welcome extended than to an American. Being mostly American, these people have not forgotten the land of their nativity, the home of their youth, and no more eloquent tribute could have been paid to attest the love they cherish for their native land, than that they have fashioned a Republic with a government strikingly similar to this. And the annexation sentiment is very strong.

"Did I attend church? Yes. And I was amazed, too, at the magnificent church edifices of that city. Why the Congregational church of that city would do justice to New York city. The interior finish of that edifice was, indeed, elaborate, the furnishings exceedingly rich and gorgeous.

"I met Bishop and Mr. Wilder and the Rev. Victor Kitcat of St. Andrew's church, and found them to be very estimable people. And they did everything in their power to make my visit pleasant.

"There are some beautiful homes in Honolulu. They seem to have been built with the point of comfort and convenience as the one principally in view. The parlors or reception rooms, are very spacious, the finish and decorations of which are truly artistic.

"The kitchen or cooking apartment is far removed from the living apartments.

"The greatest nuisance encountered during my visit was the unconquerable, irrepressible mosquito, which exist and flourish in uncountable numbers, and bite with a viciousness and relish that must be experienced to be adequately appreciated. And the worse feature is that the new-comer is the most eagerly sought and thoroughly relishable victim of this little pest.

"One of the most beautiful homes in Honolulu is the property of and is occupied by a Portuguese woman, who life furnishes quite a romance.

"Years ago a Chinaman came to the islands and through his industry, shrewd business judgment, and excellent investments, accumulated a large fortune.

"During the course of his successful career, he met, loved and won the heart and hand of a comely, prepossessing Portuguese woman. They were married and the fruit of their married life was thirteen daughters. A magnificent house was built, and happiness and contentment reigned supreme for years in the domestic realm and doubtless would have continued until the end had not the peace and serenity surrounding the hearthstone been disturbed, and ultimately forever destroyed, by the appearance upon the scene of a son of a former wife of the gay and guileless deceiver. It was the old, old story of desertion, a wife and child is forsaken, and the heartless husband and father flees from justice to another country. The son so forcefully impressed upon the mind of the erring father the imperative duty he owed to his wife and to their child, that he convinced the father of the great wrong inflicted and he finally accompanied him back to China, having solemnly vowed, no doubt, to make amends for the past wrong done by a future of devotion to his former wife and strict loyalty to home and family. Before leaving, however, he willed to his wife the beautiful home, and the major part of his fortune, and the balance, he willed to his 13 daughters, giving to each of them $7,000.

"During the years which have intervened these girls have blossomed into beautiful young womanhood, and have married advantageously, one of whom I saw in the flush of her youthful beauty and happiness as she was returning from abroad on her bridal tour. Whatever became of the repentent Chinaman is not known, but it is natural to presume that he is now living the life of an ideal husband and an exemplary father.

"Yes, I should under favorable circumstances desire to reside in Honolulu, as in years to come it is destined to become the home of the rich, of the cultured and of the pleasure-seeker.

"The dry goods stores of that city are mammoth establishments, they carry immense stocks and I found imported goods other than from this country much cheaper than here, while American goods are considerably higher.

"Should I ever make the voyage again I would much prefer taking passage on one of the trans-Pacific steamships."

The Woman's Era.

Within Her Sphere She Reigns Supreme.

Woman claims her own. Her field widens constantly. Every day brightens her prospects. Her progress foreshadows the greater triumph at hand. Emancipation and equality will be hers in the years to come.

Prophetic of final victory were her achievements at the World's Fair. At her shrine there erected the nations bowed. The lesson taught at the "Woman's Building" will last "till time shall be no more." Their enlightening influence will be felt around the globe throughout the dawning century.

Only less memorable were the honors gained at the Fair by

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award conferred on this peerless preparation, is a fitting accompaniment of the laurels won by the women of America.
