Colored Quartet Entertain Hundreds

Several hundred people crowded the annex of the Methodist Church Tuesday evening, to be entertained by the Cotton Blossom quartet.

The quartet represents the Pinewood school for negroes in Pinewood, Mississippi. The purpose of the group is to travel around the country creating interest in the work of the school which is to educate and prepare the negro for a useful life.

Earlier in the day the quartet were the guests of the Kiwanis club.

Success

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it, who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration, whose memory a benediction.

Town Expected to Junk Only Municipal Railroad

North Brookfield, Mass. — This town soon may lose its municipally owned railroad, believed the only one in the country.

The Boston & Albany railroad proposes to abolish the line operating between here and East Brookfield. Townsfolk soon will vote on the proposal. The road has been in operation nearly fifty years.

School Discards Grades in St. Louis Experiment

St. Louis.—The board of education has set in operation the second of its experimental schools where classes are arranged for the benefit of older boys and girls—from fifteen to seventeen years of age—who find difficulty with seventh and eighth grade studies.

During the past two years a school of this kind where boys with a mechanical bend, for instance, can do first year high school shop work and at the same time study fourth grade reading, has been in operation here with great success.

With the resumption of school work this fall, a second school was opened. At both schools boys and girls are given special studies and training without regard for grades. Older girls may go into advanced cooking and sewing while studying elemental arithmetic and grammar, while boys will receive training as stated.

There will be no worry over diplomats. All students capable of doing so will be given full first year high school vocational training, although they may never graduate from eighth grade.

Speaking of the success obtained at the first school, Superintendent of Schools Henry J. Gerling said:

"Most pupils who enter the school are defiant, surly and distrustful of their own ability. After a year, they are cheerful, confident and self respecting."

At both schools where this special training work is being carried on, regular classes are also carried on for the average pupils.

Alarm Warns of Monoxide in Air

When the amount of carbon monoxide in the air reaches the danger point a new alarm rings an electric gong. The alarm operates from a standard electric circuit. A small fan pulls air samples into the device constantly. If the concentration of carbon monoxide reaches .02 per cent, a point at which a few hours' exposure would produce symptoms of poisoning, the alarm rings.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

BANCROFT REVEALED AS ARCH-TRAITOR

Show Franklin's Secretary as Betrayer of U. S.

Boston.—The American embassy in Paris was little more than a branch office of the British secret service during Benjamin Franklin's mission to France, and prolongation of the American Revolution was due, more than any other single cause, to information which Franklin's confidential secretary sold to the British foreign office, according to Burton J. Hendrick in the Atlantic Monthly.

The arch-traitor of the Revolution was not Benedict Arnold, but scholarly Edward Bancroft, M. D., who completely bamboozled Franklin, furnished Britain with copies of all letters to and from the Continental congress, of all transactions and correspondence with foreign powers and who betrayed his country with disastrous consequences for more than eight years, states Mr. Hendrick, twice winner of the Pulitzer prize for American biography.

Gave Routes of Ships.

"Bancroft contracted to furnish details about every ship sailing from France to America—its officers, crew, its cargo, especially war munitions, its port of departure and date of sailing, its projected course, so that British warships might be most advantageously placed for interception. Ship after ship cleared French ports for America, only to be scooped in by the British cordon and taken to England. From May, 1777 to 1778, congress received no messages or correspondence of any kind from its ambassadors in France for all ships carrying them were captured," asserts Mr. Hendrick.

He attributes the fact that Bancroft was able to carry on his espionage to Franklin's carelessness, lack of perspicacity and devotion to an old friend, for Franklin was repeatedly informed of Bancroft's activities by Arthur Lee, member of the American mission to France.

"Franklin even took Bancroft to the peace conference that ended the Revolution, Bancroft being still on the British pay roll, and Franklin went to his grave without losing faith in the associate who so successfully sold out his country," asserts the writer.

Better Informed Than Congress.

"From 1776 to 1781 it is not too much to say that the British foreign office was better informed of American activities abroad than was congress itself. Not a thing happened in Franklin's embassy which did not instantaneously find its way to Downing street and Windsor, for the man who took chief delight in reading the reports of British spies was George III himself.

"Over Bancroft's own signature we have a conscientious catalogue of his betrayals, written for the British secretaries of state, and of his interview with the latter, which brought him a pension of £200 for life. He provides, perhaps, the most calamitous instance of misplaced confidence in American history," concludes Mr. Hendrick.

Tradition Makes Prince Pay $5 Rent on Riviera

Golfe Juan, French Riviera.—The prince of Wales paid only $5 a month rental for the sumptuous villa "Le Roc" where he spent his summer holiday.

"Le Roc" is a 20-room house with a swimming pool, private beach, and yacht harbor. The prince of Wales is a multimillionaire in his own right, but he is not allowed to pay any more—nor any less.

This is why:

The marquess of Cholmondeley, owner of the villa, invited the earl of Chester (name used by Wales while traveling incognito) to be his guest, placing "Le Roc" at his disposal.

But members of the royal house of Great Britain are not permitted to be guests of their subjects.

A regular lease was drawn up with the amount of the rental fixed at $5 a month!

The lease gives the earl of Chester free use of the villa and the grounds, one speedboat, one yacht, and three Rolls-Royces.

Furthermore the prince insisted on paying the $5.

Viking's Boat, 1,000 Years Old, Is Found in Grave

Uppsala, Sweden.—A 1,000-year-old Viking boat, containing the skeletons of a woman, a horse, and a dog, has been unearthed in a boat grave near here, and, according to archeologists of Uppsala university, is the best preserved find of its kind ever made in Sweden.

In addition to the skeletons the boat contained finely carved wooden vessels, food, a ring of gold wire, a steering oar, and bailer.

The horse and dog had been killed before their burial, scientists say, to accompany the woman on her last journey.

LOCALS

Two thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars was paid this county by the state for old age pension use, it was announced this week. The average grant per person for the state was declared to be $20.66.

Miss Lila Dingle,missionery from the Phillipine Islands, was an honor guest of the Women's Federation when the club met Thursday afternoon in the parlors of the Methodist church. Miss Dingle gave a very interesting talk.

Clallam County's share of the state gas tax money for the month of August was received here Monday, amounting to $11,671.04. The money is credited with the secondary highwav fund.

Guests at the Len Cosser home Monday evening were Miss Katherine Ford, George Cosser and Ceo. Faulkner, bridge was played and light refreshments enjoyed.

Numerous chimney fires have been caused during the present cold snap as a result of overheated furnaces and stoves. The city fire department requests that residents take precautionary measures to see that chimney's and flues are cleaned.

The local show committee for the FHA exposition held all last week at the Masonic Temple pronounced it a great success. Merchants are elated over new business which they claim is a direct result of the show. More than 4,000 people reviewed the displays, it was estimated.

The County Council of the P. T. A. will hold its semi-yearly conclave at the Sequim high school next Saturday, November 9th. A noonday luncheon will be served during the all day session. The state president is expected to be present.

The Child study club met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. H. Kiel. A discussion of children's books was led by Mrs. J. G. Ellis.

Woman Heads Bureau of Criminal Identification

Indianapolis.—A comely, thirty-two-year-old blond, the first woman ever to head a state police bureau of criminal identification, lifted her eyes from a microscope and smilingly remarked that the field in criminal identification work is unlimited for women.

She is Marie Grott, who aided in identifying John Dillinger, late unlamented outlaw, when he was captured with members of his gang at Tucson, Ariz., in 1933.

Beaming with delight over her appointment, Miss Grott smoothed her flaxen locks and surveyed the huge steel cabinets which contain 140,000 fingerprints and Bertillon records. She was engaged in classifying additional prints.

Just beyond the massive files sat two young men and a stenographer, the only other members of the department now undergoing revision in a state police shakeup. Both men, far more experienced in years, are openly proud of their new chief.

Miss Grott started in the department as a clerk five years ago.

"Faithful" Wife of Hindu Forced to Give Up Life

So intense is the shame attached to widowhood by the Hindus that it used to be the practice for widows to commit suicide on the husband's funeral pyre. Suttee, as the custom is called, notes a writer in the Montreal Herald, really means faithful wife. The poor woman who wishes to clear her name from the suspicion of witchcraft and murder would throw herself into the flames, and people would say, "Ah, she was truly a faithful wife."

In some parts of ancient India the widow used to be burned whether she wished it or not, and perhaps this was because the relatives thought her spirit would follow her husband to the next world and wait upon him there. When the British in 1829 passed a resolution making it a crime to assist a suttee they were accused of interfering with the people's religious customs; but this barbarous thing never existed in all parts of India, and the great Mogul Emperor Akbar tried to suppress it in the Sixteenth century.

WARLIKE HABITS OF BUTTERFLIES BARED

Some Show No Hesitation in Attacking Birds.

Washington.—Butterflies are not pacifists. Boldness and pugnacity are mingled in species whose habits have been studied intensively by Austin H. Clark, Smithsonian institution biologist. Some of the smallest species are among the most impetuous and warlilke.

Thus, Mr. Clark observes, the little buckeye butterfly, common after midsummer in northeastern United States, will fearlessly attack wasps, bees, large flies, and butterflies much larger than itself. They will assault any other insect that passes within six or eight feet of them as they sit upon the ground.

Involved in Constant Feuds.

"They are very quarrelsome among themselves," Mr. Clark says. "There is a constant feud between them and the males of the pearl crescent butterfly, which swarm in moister spots along the roads.

"Perhaps the most interesting peculiarity of the buckeye is its intense dislike for the common Carolina locust. If one of these clumsy insects jumps up and takes to flight and there is a male buckeye near, the latter at once gives chase, flying behind, or on either side of it, but always keeping from two to four inches away. If the locust alights on the road, the butterfly alights simultaneously four or five inches to one side and slowly waves its wings in a menacing fashion. If the persecuted locust takes off again the butterfly is after it once more. If a locust pursued by a buckeye passes within 10 feet or so of another buckeye, the second will join in the pursuit, and sometimes a third will join.

"A Carolina locust pursued by a buckeye and trying to escape is a sight that may be witnessed a hundred times a day wherever the two insects are common."

Pearl Crescent a Fighter.

Another fighter, Mr. Clark finds, is the pearl crescent, one of the commonest butterflies in weedy fields. It will dart viciously at larger grasshoppers, flies, bees, and especially at the larger brown butterflies, against which it seems to maintain a special enmity.

Some common butterflies, Mr. Clark says, have no hesitation in attacking birds. One of these is the Camberwell beauty, which he describes as "bold, pugnacious, and aggressive. When two meet they will often rise battling to a height of 20 feet or more. In the open it will dart viciously at the larger dragonflies that venture too near the willows on which it rests, and will also dart at smaller birds, sending them to cover."

The only other butterfly that habitually attacks birds is the common "milk-weed butterfly," which normally is one of the most peaceful in disposition of all its race. Between males of this species there are only feeble half-hearted fights; but it entertains a special animosity for hummingbirds.

"In spite of its essentially peaceful disposition," Mr. Clark says, "it is not without courage, for it will attack most viciously a hummingbird so incautious as to approach too near the flower on which it is feeding, always badly frightening the bird, which makes off in a straight line as fast as possible."

The Dragon Atheletic Club announces that the weekly wrestling smokers held each Friday evening will be discontinued for two or three weeks.

Armistice Day Will Be Observed Here

A general program commemorating Armistice day will be observed in Port Angeles, Monday, November 11 by schools and civic organizations.

Although schools will not close, there will be a program and observance of the holiday in all the schools.

All business houses including the bank will declare a holiday.

The parade in charge of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with the American Legion contributing in the parade promises to be a gala occasion. In addition the American Legion will give their annual veteran's breakfast, a banquet at the Elk's Temple and a dance in the evening at Clyde's.

Roosevelt field will be the scene of the big game of rhe year when the Teddies tackle Port Townsend Redskins. The Indians are as yet undefeated but the Teddies seem to have hit their stride and a battle royal is anticipated.

Numerous holiday trips and excursions have been planned by local residents for the weekend holiday and with the weather warming up Armistice Day promises to be a great success.

Claud Molchior, manager of the local telephone company, reports that a total of 2,500 people attended the firm's open house which started last Thursday and ended Saturday.

Hoare Promises Britain Will Not Fight With Italy—Laval's Peace Efforts Continued—President Roosevelt Returns to Washington.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SIR SAMUEL HOARE, British foreign secretary, assured parliament and the world that Great Britain has no intention of fighting Italy and would not alone apply military sanctions against that nation. He held out strong hopes that the war in Africa could be settled without resort by the league to extreme measures. His speech was plainly an invitation to Italy to talk peace terms.

Sir Samuel Hoare

Denying that the government's policy is hostile to Fascism, Sir Samuel said:

"We have not the least intention of interfering in the domestic affairs of other people."

"The unbroken solidarity of the empire is behind the government's policy," he said. "Let those prophets of misfortune who have marked the empire down for decay and dissolution observe this fact of overwhelming importance."

Hoare hinted at British isolation from continental affairs if the league collapses.

Next day Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin warmly endorsed all that Hoare and Capt. Anthony Eden have done at Geneva. He deprecated even the use of the word war, but called for a rearming of the empire, saying: "In the interests of world peace it is essential our defensive services should be stronger than they are today."

Baldwin announced the adjournment of parliament on October 25 and the election of a new parliament on November 14. The campaign already is under way and is lively, with the international situation furnishing the main issues. The Labor party accuses the government of delaying action in the Italo-Ethiopian embroglio until too late to prove really effective, and impugns its motive in seeking rearmament.

MUSSOLINI made one conciliatory gesture toward Great Britain when he agreed to withdraw a division of troops from Libya; and at the same time he urged that France and Britain make quick reply to his peace conditions. But it became known the troops were to be moved from Libya to Tripoli, where they would be almost as much a menace to Egypt; and the duce's peace terms were so drastic that there was no prospect that they would be accepted by anyone concerned. They included disarmament of Ethiopia, an international protectorate over the central regions and an Italian protectorate over the remainder.

Addressing the foreign affairs committee of the French chamber of deputies, Premier Laval promised he would seek only a compromise that would be fully acceptable to the League of Nations. He told the committee that France's battleships would steam immediately to the assistance of Britain if the latter's fleet was attacked by Italy.

Since the first of the year, Laval declared, he had repeatedly called the attention of the Rome government to the stipulation of the league covenant and warned that France could not approve any violation of it.

WHILE Premier Pierre Laval of France was still trying desperately to find a way of settling the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel that would be acceptable to both Great Britain and Italy—apparently without regard to Ethiopia's real interests—fifty-two members of the League of Nations declared a boycott on all Italian goods and an embargo on various key exports to that country. The boycott binds these nations to prohibit importation of "all goods consigned from and grown, produced or manufactured in Italy or in Italian possessions from whatever place they arrive."

Pierre Laval

If rigidly enforced, this would cut off about two-thirds of the export trade upon which Italy depends in getting funds for prosecution of the war in Africa. The countries applying the sanctions agree to aid one another in compensating losses by increased trade facilities, credits, cash and loans if possible, and discriminating against league members such as Austria and Hungary which continue to trade with Italy.

Austria, Hungary and Albania spoke against the sanctions. Switzerland, which seeks to preserve her tradidtional neutrality, was silent. Some South American republics made complicated reservations.

It was decided that the sanctions should be put in force on October 31, and Laval thus had time to continue his peace efforts. These seemed to center on a way to "legalize" Italian occupation of that part of northern Ethiopia which Mussolini's troops have seized and to arrange for Italy's partial control over the entire empire.

GEN. RUDOLFO GRAZIANI'S forces in southern Ethiopia were reported to have won several important victories in their advance toward Harrar and the railway. They captured several towns despite desperate resistance by the natives, and took many prisoners. The main movement in that region was up the Webbe Shibeli river. The Ethiopians were repeatedly dispersed by aerial bombardment.

In Tigre province, on the north, the Italians were consolidating their positions and preparing for another big thrust toward Addis Ababa. Their line there extended nearly 70 miles from Adigrat through Aduwa to the holy city of Aksum.

Italian aviator-scouts reported that Ethiopian troops were digging in at Makale, about 60 miles southeast of Aduwa and the next logical objective in the Italian campaign of occupation, forming a major concentration for a dseperate effort to frustrate the next attack.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, deeply tanned and in fine spirits, returned to the White House, his holiday tour ended. When he landed from the cruiser Houston at Charleston, S. C., he told a big crowd gathered to welcome him that the country is on its way back to prosperity under the planned economy of his administration, "and don't let anybody tell you differently."

At an informal press conference just before he left the cruiser, the President was asked to comment on the "impending collapse" of his drive to put three and a half million employables on relief to work by November 1. He replied that November 30 was 39 days off and that November 1 had never been set as the deadline, and that he had been very careful to say that substantially three and a half million persons would be put to work. If three million are at work by November 30 he said he would be satisfied with the four-billion-dollar program, and that it could not then be considered to have fallen down.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's first appointments in Washington was for a talk with Secretary of State Hull on the European situation.

FOR the third time in his career Mackenzie King is now prime minister of Canada, following the victory of the Liberal party at the polls. Richard B. Bennett and his Conservative cabinet resigned and King was called on to form the new government, which he did at once. He himself was sworn in as prime minister, president of the privy council and secretary of state for external affairs. Thomas A. Crerar of Winnipeg was made minister of mines, immigration and colonization, interior and Indian affairs. Charles A. Dunning of Montreal is the new minister of finance and W. D. Euler of Kitchener has the trade and commerce portfolio. All the cabinet positions except that of agriculture were filled at once.

Mackenzie King

The resignation of W. D. Herridge as minister to Washington was accepted and became immediately effective. The department of national revenue announced cancellation of dumping duties on the following commodities entering Canada: Plums, prunes, radishes, spinach, and peaches.

NEARLY 5,000 men and women from all parts of the United States gathered in Chicago and held a national convention of the Townsend plan, which, as most people know, would give every person sixty years of age a $200 per month income if the person agreed to spend it all within the month, did not work or have an income all told of more than $2,400 a year.

The elderly California doctor who devised the plan was present, and the delegates seriously undertook the work of formulating a campaign to compel the adoption of the plan at the coming session of congress. They reported that Townsend plan units are growing rapidly in all the states.

Brief Resume of Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers

Walla Walla — A year's count of traffic on all primary roads and important secondary roads will be made in Walla Walla county to determine which roads carry the most traffic.

South Bend — Despite fair weather, both Hall & Olsen and Trygve Tover, South Bend fish buyers, are reporting excellent catches, with dog salmon plentiful and silvers just beginning to run.

Kennewick — County officials of Benton county announce that the county will be free of bonded indebtedness this month. All but four school districts and two irrigation districts are on a cash basis.

Seattle — Impeachment of Mayor Smith and dismissal of Chief of Police Kirtley on grounds that they have not remedied Seattle's vice conditions is recommended in a committee report to the Seattle Municipal league.

Colfax—An allocation of $703,963 for the purchase of 283,000 acres of privately owned land, county cut-over, burned-over and poor farming land in Pend Oreille and Stevens counties is announced from Washington.

Hoquiam — Winfred Terry of Hoquiam smokes two corncob pipes at the same time so that he can use two different kinds of tobacco to get a satisfactory blend. He calls one pipe "Hoquiam", the other "Aberdeen".

Walla Walla—A southpaw wedding, a double one, has been celebrated at Walla Walla by Oregon residents. Both brides and one bridegroom affixed their signatures with the left hand. The minister did likewise.

Yakima — Electrical Inspector E. S. Lueth has removed large globes from light poles on Naches avenue in preparation for Hallowe'en. The globes cost $5 apiece and in the past the city has had to spend several hundred dollars for broken globes.

Coulee Dam — Bureau of reclamation engineers endeavored to determine, if possible, what caused the state highway bridge pier on the east side of the Columbia river to move six inches. The tilted pier appeared safe although it may be restored to its normal position.

Seattle — Walter Gray, 75-year-old blind man, is alive today because the aim of Mrs. Bertha Watson was bad. Gray, returning to his home, attempted to get in the wrong front door. Mrs. Watson, alone at the time, thought it was a prowler and fired through the door.

Wenatchee — Apple growers, who at first wished for "a little frost" to color their apples, have reversed their desires after several days of freezing weather. The apples are loosening on the trees and cold weather has caused a labor shortage. Advices are to close packing and cleaning plants and set all workers to remove the fruit from the tree before the crop is ruined.

Olympia — Allocation of $250,000 to $400,000 from the $10,000,000 relief bond issue to help finance the new $922,000 building in the Olympia statehouse group was announced today by Governor Clarence D. Martin as chairman of the state capitol committee. The money originally was allocated to other projects about the state by the former emergency relief commission but was unspent. It will be used for work relief on the structure, which will be completed by next October.

Kennewick — If any thrifty farmer wants to breed turkeys that will harvest his apple crop, he might communicate with M. G. Helm of Kennewick. Mr. Helm, who specializes in a fine variety of turkeys, states that his turkeys fly up into the apple trees and pick off the apples for the flock, waiting below. Further, he declares, one turkey will pick several apples for the flock, then fly down to eat, and another will take its place in the tree. So far the turkeys have not picked for size and color.

Tie Plants To Open

Chehalis — Eastern Lewis county tie mills, which have been closed several months, have received instructions to resume operations. A number of the plants will start operations next week.

Red Horns, Bell, Make Deer Safe

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

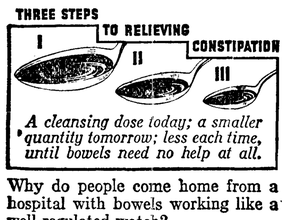
DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:



Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

Let Guest Tell of Tribulations as Sports Ed

Ernest L. Meyer, who writes the column "As the Crow Flies," takes over Hugh Bradley's assignment today to discuss his trials and tribulations while acting as sports editor of a family journal a few—quite a few—years back.

By ERNEST L. MEYER

EVERY time I read Hugh Bradley's sparkling department I recall my own and not very scintillating career as sports editor. I recall it without difficulty, but not without pain.

It happened about 18 years ago when I was doing general assignments for the defunct Milwaukee Daily News and could be found most any hour of the day peacefully sleeping on a davenport at the Press club. It seems that our regular sports editor, after ruminating about life all evening at the Schlitz Palm Garden, was seized by a hankering for travel. He left immediately, on the midnight freight with a quart of gin, and never came back. We never heard from him again.

When I drifted into the office the following day with a yarn about the embalmers' convention, the city editor, a ruthless person named Dean Kirk, grabed me.

"You're sports editor," he said.

"I'm not," I objected. "I don't know a boxing glove from a pneumatic bicycle seat."

"Can't help it. You've got to fill in till we make other arrangements. Dust out to the ball grounds now and phone in the dope for the sports pink."

I dusted, yearning for a nap on my favorite couch at the Press club. The wooden seats in the press box on top of the grand stand were devilishly hard.

I asked Art Schinners, who covered sports for the Evening Wisconsin, how the deuce one writes up a ball game.

"Easy," he said. "Never call a ball a ball or a home run a home run."

I got the idea. A good sports writer in those days would call a baseball a pellet, a horsehide, a globule, a pill or a spheroid. If he caled it a baseball his readers wouldn't know what he was talking about.

Somehow, I struggled through a whole month without calling a home run a home run, so my stories were always lucid and readily comprehended.

I had never in my life seen a boxing match. But the managers and fighters used to drop in, ask for the sports editor, and hand me large, fat cigars.

Ballet Bouncing Vs. Triphammers

"What chance has my man Wildcat Levinsky got against Kid Cuckoo?" the manager would ask me, as man to man.

And I would lean over and say confidently:

"Listen, Mr. Molloy. The kid won't have a chance once he runs into that right ham of your fighting windmill. The Kid's good at dancing, you understand, but his ballet bouncing won't help him once Wildcat connects with his triphammer."

"Sure, that's just how I got it sized up. It'll be a cinch," the manager would say, and hand me a couple more cigars, greatly pleased at my expert opinion.

Then the manager for Kid Cuckoo would breeze in and say:

"Now about this match Friday night. D'ye think Wildcat Levinsky has a look-in with my bird?"

"Listen, Mr. Solomons," I would reply seriously, "here's what I think. Wildcat won't have a chance once he runs into that right ham of your fighting windmill. Wildcat's good at toe dancing, you understand, but his ballet bouncing won't help him once Kid Cuckoo connects with his triphammer."

"Now you're talking!" Mr. Solomons would shout. Then he'd give me three or four rich, ripe stogies.

Everything was rosy till the big match came off. I've forgotten the details. All that I remember is that in the third round one of the fighters did make a connection with the triphammer.

I fainted.

Next day one of the fellows on another sheet had a funny feature story with the headline: "Sports Editor Knocked Out in Third."

THINGS the box score never told me:

Persons interested in keeping the Olympics out of Germany should investigate the case of Baron Gottfried von Cramm, the Davis Cup star. Originally it had been arranged that Donald Budge and Gene Mako were to play in the German tennis championships and in return the baron was to come to the United States for the nationals. Then the trade fell through and now it seems that not only will the German star be prevented from coming to this country but also he will be barred from the 1936 trophy team as Dr. Daniel Prenn was this year.

The reason? Could it be that Hitler discovered that the baroness was Jewish and that therefore the baron must be anti-Nazi and unfit to represent his native country.

Lester Doctor, betting commissioner for the Whitneys, has handled more money than any man on the racetracks. Payne Whitney was the biggest plunger of the tribe. . . . To make sure that Art Lasky would work himself back into condition Brother-Manager Maurice put the heavyweight on the Los Angeles water works pay roll at $4 a day. . . . In spite of Bill Terry's rule against Giants' talking to Dizzy Dean, Hughie Critz and Allyn Stout still bandy words with the pitcher. Stout once was a teammate of the elder Dean and so naturally cannot be prevented from saying "Howdy" now and then. Critz hits Dizzy so hard, so well and so often that it would be a crime to prevent him from crowing a bit about it.

Dizzy Dean.

George Throws Out Ball Players, Too

Forty-seven baseballs, with a wholesale value of $58.75, were lost in the crowd during a St. Louis-Cincinnati night game this summer. . . . The Yankees, because the stands are so convenient that 60 balls often have disappeared during one game, spend from $10,000 to $11,000 for baseballs each season. . . . This is the biggest bill in the American league, the other clubs averaging about $7,000. . . . George Moriarty says that he throws out more baseballs during a season than any other umpire. That is largely because he figures, quite correctly, that when an overhand pitcher sails the ball there must be something wrong with it. . . . He recalls one Boston game where he had to throw out only four balls, though, and Nick Altrock will tell you that he used only one ball while pitching a game for the White Sox back in 1906 or 1907.

Could it be that the Hearst charities and Jack Curley, the wrestling promotor, are planning to go in for professional tennis? Or could it be those youthful reporters who have been left out in the cold on the prize fight promoting end of the newspaper business were merely kidding when they spoke of big dough while tempting Fred Perry to perform at Yankee stadium after the national championships?

The tip-off on U. S. C.'s football prospects may be found in the fact that the Trojans have booked a game with Hawaii university at Honolulu for New Year's day. . . . Although he breeds saddle horses that win blue ribbons at national shows and although he is a trotting race devotee, Bill Brown, the boxing commissioner, never has been inside any park where the thoroughbreds run for money.

Are the Yankees sure that Joe Di Maggio, the outfielder who will come from San Francisco Seals in the spring, is not another of those athletes with trick knees a la Steve Hamas? . . . The daughter of Steve O'Neill, Cleveland manager, won a prize this year for being the best all-around athlete at a girls' school. . . . The most reckless of all fighters when driving an automobile is Paulino Uzcudun. He doesn't think he is moving unless he is doing 75 miles per hour.

Signs posted over the Saratoga race-track call attention to section 968 of the New York penal code concerning bookmaking and pool selling. This is the first time that the signs have appeared and it is a reminder that the game still is not quite legal here. . . . Also it may be that there is considerable tension between the Jockey club and the Racing commission, the latter group taking too much for granted by building betting booths, forbidden in the law.

K. O. Christner now operates one of Akron's most prosperous tobacco shops. . . . Shufflin' Phil Douglas is pitching semi-pro ball around Chicago. He twirls for the Mills team which has produced such celebrated south side athletes as Jocko Conlan of the White Sox and Johnny McCarthy of the Dodgers.

"BUT what about the horses that lose?" says Harry, the Pinhead. "All that you clucks or anybody else ever talks about is the winners."

"Well," I say, "it is with the horses just like with people; nobody wants to hear about the failures."

"Success is a 100 to 1 shot," Harry informs me, "with humans or hides. Out of ten thousand thoroughbreds in this country, there is not much more than a couple of hundred who consistently run in the money. Therefore I ask you again, what about all the bangtails who are a bust? What," he reminds me, "about that filly Orphan Annie?"

But I do not make any reply to that remark because it is an old story and I think it is better I should say nothing. So we sit over our glasses of porter in my stable in the hotel and we keep mum. But I know what Harry is thinking about, and I am thinking the same thing.

Orphan Annie was Harry's favorite filly. Which is a very surprising thing, because Orphan Annie was no wonder horse by no means; she was just a rank selling plater.

Harry bought her when she was a little animal who could hardly stand on her spindling legs. She was bred from King Kong, out of Lonesome Lady, both of whom showed what they could do on the turf before they raised a family.

The Pinhead had high hopes for Annie from the very start. He gives her an acre of turf to run around in, where she wouldn't hurt them lovely legs. And he nursed her like a mother. By the time she was two years old Harry had her trained razor sharp and ready to run.

At her first race Orphan Annie was now a beautiful bay filly, full of fire and crazy to run. And as she passed in the post parade, with Kid Larrup mounted up in Harry's orange and blue silks, the Pinhead was proud enough to bust all his buttons.

Orphan Annie ran beautifully, but she did not win, though she was beat by only half a length. Harry was very disappointed, indeed. But by the time she was ready for her second race he was all bet up again. "She was in the money the first time around an oval," he said to me. "And this event she will surely cop the purse."

But Orphan Annie disappointed him again, running third and just getting in the money by a nose. Twelve times she ran, and still she did not break her maiden with a win. Yet Harry did not lose faith in his prize filly. Indeed, it is a peculiar thing: the more times she lost, the more confidence he had in her. And he keeps on grooming her to cop a kitty because, as it is now plain to be seen, he is in love with that horse and she certainly is in love with him.

When Orphan Annie is four years old, she is still only a also-ran and her racing record is just like thousands of other thoroughbreds who rarely get in the money. "It is breaking her heart," says Harry very serious, "and it is breaking mine, too."

Then Orphan Annie is entered in another maiden event, like it seems for the thousandth time. And like always Harry is ready to bet his roll that she will come in first. But of course we have not taken him up because he has lost so much on Orphan Annie already. However, this time I and the boys surprised him by offering 3-to 1 that his bay filly would not win.

Mudder McMork and Beezer Bertie also give him the ha-ha plenty while we are sitting in the stand waiting for the maiden event. But do you think Harry will back down and admit that judging from past performances we are right? No, not for all the thoroughbreds between here and Santa Anita.

"This is the time," he says, "that Orphan Annie is due to get the nod positive. I have bet my last dollar on it with you clucks and I am not at all worried."

And strange to relate, Orphan Annie does win that race. And of course Harry is very jubilant. He collects three grand from us, but the most important thing to him is that his prize bay filly has at last finished a race in front.

But then something very peculiar happens. And this is that after that race Orphan Annie will not run no more. We all of us try to make her, but every time we take her on the turf she goes berserk and bolts for her stall. And finally Harry makes us leave her alone because he states he has decided not to race Orphan Annie any more.

It is a great mystery to the boys and me that Orphan Annie positively will not run and that Harry insists he will never race her again. For we have all kept our mouths shut, so how would Harry find out that besides the three grand, we lose to him, it also cost us two thousand bucks more to fix that race so Orphan Annie would surely come in first? And, besides, how could the horse know that she did not win on the level?

I know that these things are not possible. And that is why as I look at Harry now sitting silent over his glass, I am still wondering.

Butterflies Shatter Lindbergh's Records

When a butterfly flutters across your path or settles on a flower in your garden, you don't think of it as a long distance flyer. But it may have crossed the Atlantic.

Last year a number of specimens of the Monarch butterfly, which is a native of North America, were seen in England. These are notable travelers, and not only have crossed the Atlantic but also have flown 2,000 miles over the Pacific to the Hawaiian islands.

The beautiful Painted Lady butterflies also are long distance flyers. Born in northern Africa or Asia Minor, they may have covered 2,000 or 3,000 miles before they arrive in America. Some of them have gone even farther; in a few cases to Iceland.

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID INDIGESTION

MILLIONS have found they do not need to drench their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals—or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never overalkalizes stomach or blood. As pleasant to eat as candy and only 10c at any drug store.

EATS OATMEAL TO HELP KEEP FIT

It may be one of Nature's lowest cost foods, but lucky is the boy or girl who gets it for breakfast every morning.

Many are nervous, poor in appetite, system out of order, because their daily diets lack enough of the precious Vitamin B for keeping fit.*

Few things keep them back like a lack of this protective food element.

So give everyone Quaker Oats every morning. Because in addition to its generous supply of Vitamin B for keeping fit,* it furnishes food-energy, muscle and body-building ingredients. For about ½c per dish.

Start serving it tomorrow for a 2-weeks test. Quaker Oats has a wholesome, nut-like, luscious appeal to the appetite. Flavory, surpassingly good. All grocers supply it.

IN VITAMIN B FOR KEEPING FIT . . .

Quaker and Mother's Oats are the same

Remember:

Temperament is, of course, lack of self-control.

Cabby's Pet Hobby Is Feeding Strays

Sydney.—A Sydney tramdriver, Henry Harris, has spent $1,500 on meat for stray cats and dogs. For the past 20 years he has thrown a piece of meat from his meat can to every stray he has seen in the street. Each day before going to work he has bought special meat and cooked it for his free meals for canines.

Moon's Phases

The various phases or appearances of the moon to us are due to the variation in relative positions of sun, earth and moon, notes a writer in the Detroit News. The moon is a sphere, all of whose surface is believed to be lifeless and cold, though it is always the same face or side that is turned toward the earth. As in the case of the earth, the sun lights only one-half of it, while the other half remains in darkness. In the phase known as new moon, the bright face of the moon is turned away from us and the moon is invisible. Then in a few days we see a small part of the bright surface, which, owing to our position, appears as a slender crescent. As the moon moves along in its orbit around the earth, this crescent increases to a half moon and thence through the gibbous stage to full moon, after which it begins to wane, passing through the corresponding stages again. When the moon is between the earth and the sun we have the new moon and phases up to half moon; when the earth is between the sun and the moon we get the phases between half moon and full moon.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, of CLALLAM COUNTY JOURNAL PUBLISHING CO., Inc., published weekly at Port Angeles, Washington, for October, 1935.

State of Washington, County of Clallam, ss.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Bert Lyons, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Temporary Editor, Manager, Business Manager, of the Clallam County Journal Publishing Co., Inc., and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in Section 411, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to-wit:

Managing Editor (Temporary) — Bert Lyons, Port Angeles, Wash.

2. That the owners are: W. W. Meyers, Mrs. Evelyn O'Reilly, C. L. Vaughan, H. M. Grimes, Bert Lyons, Les Guthrie, S. E. Cox, S. C. Miles, Earl E. Baer, Fred Miller, Wm. F. Kilby (all of Port Angeles).

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities, are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

BERT LYONS,
Editor and Business Manager.

It is reported that Lt. C. F. Edge is on his way here from Cape May, N. J. in a new Grumman amphibian assigned to the Port Angeles air base. After his arrival here he will leave immediately for the east to return with another plane. This will make a fleet of three ships here which will be adequate to handle regular patrol duty from this base.
