COMMITTEES ARE APPOINTED

Cutting of Timber in Park is Prohibited. New Cemetery Ordinance Necessary

At Tuesday evening's session of Council an ordinance was introduced by Councilman Grubb, revoking all rights given the P. A. Pacific Ry. on Dec. 8, '02, and was referred to ordinance committee.

Communication from H. White, Sec'y of Commercial Club, asking for free electric lights, referred.

City attorney instructed to purchase copies of 3rd Ballinger's Code and 1905 Session Laws for Clerk's office.

$1,000 bond of K. T. Church as Marshal approved.

Mayor Appleton made the following committee assignments:

Streets, Thompson and Brophy.
Finance, Brumfield and Brophy.
Fire, Light and Water, Grubb and Polhamus.
Ordinance, Brumfield and Bown
Electric Light, Hallahan and Grubb.
Franchise, Polhamus and Thompson.
Cemetery, Bown and Hallahan.
Fire Wardens, Hallahan and Polhamus.
Health, Brophy and Bown.
Special Water Works, Hallahan, Grubb, and Brumfield.

Councilman Hallahan reported cemetery ordinance appeared to be defective, stating that committee did not wish to act on request from Naval Lodge until investigation was made.

Bown thought a new and less lengthy ordinance should be drawn up. City Att'y Smith reported present ordinance illegal.

Questions of obstructions in streets and alleys and of drainage of Chase street were discussed with considerable warmth. No action taken in regard to obstuction as it was definitely stated same would be removed promptly; Chase street ordered drained.

Councilman Bown brought up the matter of the reported cutting of timber on City Park, believing as long as there was any doubt concerning the advantage of present arrangement it should be terminated. Motion by Coun. Grubb that clerk be instructed to notify O'Brien to have no more wood of any kind cut in park until further notice, was carried.

Fog Signal Making Progress.

Senator Piles has secured a favorable report from the senate committee on commerce on bills appropriating $10,110 for fog signal and dwelling at Ediz Hook, and $225,000 for construction of a revenue cutter to replace the Grant.

Among the many handsome calendars put out by the merchants this year, none are equal to that of the Angeles Brewing and Malting Company, which is not only beautiful in its delicate tints, but practical as well, with large plain figures.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Absolutely Harmless.

The fault of giving children medicine containing injurious substances is sometimes more disastrous than the disease from which they are suffering. Every mother should know that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly safe for children to take. It contains nothing harmful and for cough, colds and croup is unsurpassed. For sale by W. J. Mathewson.

Collided with Wanderer

The ship W. H. Macy, from Tacoma with 1,600,000 feet of lumber for Sidney, was towed in last night with a broken bowspit, the result of a collision with the big tug Wanderer. The Wanderer struck a floating log, bringing her to a stop, when the black ship, doubtless no lookout posted, crashed into her. The tug is also considerably damaged; but the main damage is to the ship's stem which is split. She will have to go on dry dock for repairs.

ANGELES MONUMENT AND BUILDING CO.

Local G. A. R. Post to Have Handsome Shaft.

The Angeles Monument and Building Company, is a new industry which has started up this week on the Morse dock. Mr. Lingenwalter, an expert stone cutter of Seattle is in charge and already busy roughing out headstones, of which the company has advance orders from a dozen different local parties. There will undoubtedly be plenty of work in this line in the county as the blue sandstone will make a handsome and at the same time inexpensive monument. They will later ship in a stock of marble and granite. Contracts will be taken for foundations; for the trimmings of brick and the walls of stone buildings.

In the way of special work Mr. Lingenwalter has a very neat design for fire place and mantel which will be beautifully carved, upon order from R. A. Muskett, of the Times Mart. The company is figuring with the local G. A. R. Post for a cemetery monument—shaft on bases—of Angeles sandstone, and have submitted designs.

The Boosters' Club takes credit, through President Barnett, for the showing necessary to start this small industry, which will not only be a decided help in beautifying our cemetery, but improve the city in other ways.

Two Carloads of Rice

A shipment of two carloads of cracked rice, 400 sacks in all, arrived from the east Wednesday for the Angeles Brewing Co.; the freight alone amounted to over $250. At the same time they also received a large consignment of prepared barley. Pilsner Beer is steadily winning its way up sound and the shipments are growing at a pleasing rate.

Has Proper Spirit.

The residents of south Peabody street are certainly indebted to Wm. McIvor, who spent some time this week raising and repairing a dangerous piece of sidewalk and crossing along the property of an absent neighbor.

The Times Clothing Mart has just received a new spring pattern book for made-to-measure clothing. Call and see the new line before ordering elsewhere.

Stomach Troubles and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are the best thing for stomach troubles and constipation I have ever sold," J. R. Cailman, a druggist of Potterville, Mich. They are easy to take and always give satisfaction. I tell my customers to try them and if not satisfactory to come back and get their money, but have never had a complaint. lief." For sale by W. J. Mathewson.

DROWNED JAP FOUND TODAY

Body Floating Alongside Log Boom at Ediz Hook

Two Japanese stowaways from the British ship Gleneldan were drowned last Sunday night in an attempt to reach American soil. The Gleneldan has been here two weeks awating orders, the Japs not being allowed ashore The prospect of being deported did not please them and Sunday night they stripped off their clothing and putting it into a tub started to swim ashore, half mile distant. The water evidently proved too cold for, hearing cries, a boat was lowered from the ship and a fruitless search made. Capt. Hansen found the tub of clothing on the spit Monday; also a suit of wet clothing alongside. Its his opinion one reached shore with the tub and started to change his clothes, when cries for help from the other caused him to swim out again and both were drowned.

Crushed by Large Rock

Mr. Flat of Dungeness was brought to the General Hospital Tuesday suffering from a crushed pelvis and other injuries. Mr. Flat was a newcomer, having bought the Bowman place last November. He was excavating under a large rock, intending to sink it below the surface, when the stone rolled onto him. Dr. McGillivray thinks he stands a fair chance of recovery, tho the case is very serious.

Won Watch & Medal

E. Symmes, who went from Angeles to Vancouver, B. C., a couple of years ago, was the winner of the grand aggregate prize, a handsome medal, in the sharpshooting competition between the city schools of that city at the close of the last term. His record was 318 points, the next highest being 301. He also received a watch for the highest individual aggregate on his own school team.

"Another One."

Wallace B. Jessup, who worked strenously for two months getting out a twelve page edition of a local publication, is now in Port Angeles writing nice things about that city's business men at so much per. Mr. Jessup is using the Times-Tribune as his medium through which to separate the unwary from their hard earned simoleons.—Port Townsend Call.

THE LITTLE ANIMALS.

The bay mare stands at my kitchen door,
And saucily shakes her head
For a bite of apple, pinch of salt
Or a sugared crust of bread.
But, oh, for the little wooden horse
I found in a corner to-day,
And the little groom that straddled him
And rode him out to play!

Old Rover naps on the shaded porch,
While his great, brown, kindly eyes
Follow me to the golden gate
And back to my bread and pies.
But, oh, for the cotton dog on wheels
That romped on the velvet floor,
And the little master that shall come
And play with him no more!

The Spanish cock with the crimson comb,
When he hears my feeding call,
He answered with a flap of wings
And a crow from the garden wall.
But, oh, for the plaster cock that crowed
When my baby pressed the spring—
My tiny poultryman that hauled
Him round upon a string!

I love the calves in the pasture lot
And the cattle in the barn,
The geese that squat by the water trough
And gabble through the tarn.
But, oh, when the evening shadows fall,
And the ache of the lonely dark,
I turn to the painted animals,
In a little wooden ark!

And, one by one, I take them up.
And cuddle them to my breast,
For the love of the careless little Noah
That set them here to rest—
Here by the sunny window-seat,
In a corner of his room,
Where curious roses climb and peep
And wonder into bloom.

I have mothered many an orphan lamb
For the faint and fallen ewe,
And many a downy duckling housed
From the weasel and the dew;
But now, that every mother's babe
On the farm is safe at rest,
I turn to the little wooden sheep
And fold them to my breast!

MISS MARTIN'S LEGACY

MISS ANNA MARTIN had lived all her life in the small village of Camden. She owned a two-roomed cottage and had an income which sufficed for her simple wants. But when she was fifty, a distant relative died and left her a thousand dollars; and on this bright afternoon she was trying to decide what to do with the money.

"I don't think I need to keep it," she said to herself. "It doesn't cost me much to live, and with what I earn sewing I have more than enough for my needs, and shall have something for sickness or old age. No, I'll use that thousand dollars. I'll have a parlor; it won't cost much to have one built on, about fourteen feet square. I'll have Brussels carpet on the floor, and nice furniture and two large oil paintings. Then I'll have a silk dress—yes, two of them, a black and a brown—and a new bonnet. And I'll give fifty dollars to the church," she added by way of afterthought.

But why was it just then she thought of the Dilling children—three in number—who on the morrow would be "bound out" to live with any person who might be willing to take the responsibility of caring for them?

About two years before, Charles Dilling had met with an accident which confined him to the house for months, and finally took him away forever. When Mrs. Dilling had time to look about her after this blow, things were very discouraging indeed, and a hard struggle followed. The rent was very much in arrears; the doctor presented a bill which fairly took her breath away, and there were numerous other accounts which must be paid. She sold part of her furniture, and then worked early and late; but in a few months her health failed, and she soon followed her husband.

Then, of course, something had to be done with the little ones. Mrs. Dilling had often been urged, after the death of her husband, to let the children be separated, but her only answer had been: "As long as I can work, they shall be kept together."

This answer was sufficient for all who knew Mrs. Dilling. But now she was gone, something must be done. There was no relative to care for the children, and at last it was decided that they should be "bound out."

This meant separation, and it was an appalling thought to the children, who were knit together by the ties of more than ordinary strength. No other course presented itself, however, and as Mr. Randall, the overseer of the poor, said: "They must be provided with food and shelter some way, and if they could earn their keep, they must do it."

The next morning Miss Martin ate but little breakfast.

"It seems too bad for the children to be separated," she mused, as she looked out at the Dilling house. "I hope they'll be where they can see each other sometimes. They are good children—been well brought up."

Miss Martin's work moved slowly that morning. She spent much time looking over at the Dilling house. She saw Mr. Randall when he came to take charge of the few articles of furniture that were left, and attend to the "binding out" of the children. The neighbors dropped in one by one, and at length a farmer who wanted a bound boy arrived. He had tried two already. One had run away after a few months, and the authorities had taken the other from him on account of cruel treatment.

Miss Martin shut her lips firmly together when she saw this man. Probably he would want Fred, who was eleven years old. It would be a shame to see so good a boy go to such a place.

She threw a shawl over her head and stepped to the door. Then she went back and sat down by the window.

"I could have a bed for him upstairs," she thought. "And he could split wood and bring water for me. I believe I'll go over anyway."

Farmer Burnham was talking very loudly to Fred when she went into the dark, gloomy kitchen. The boy's face was white and his eyes filled with tears as he looked at Bessie, his sister.

"You can't have him," said the little girl, choking back her sobs. "He's all we've got left, and we're going to keep him!"

"Ho, ho!" laughed Mr. Burnham, "we'll see about that. The sooner we have the papers made out the better, I reckon." And he made his way toward Mr. Randall.

"Fred, would you rather come with me?"

It was Miss Martin's voice, and Fred grasped her hand eagerly, while his sister cried: "Oh, do go with her, Fred!"

"I'd rather do it, Miss Martin, if you could get along with me," said the boy, earnestly. "I'd try hard to help what I could."

Miss Martin's face lighted up as she listened. This was a new experience to her. Her life had been wholly centered upon her own interests. She could not help thinking of it even in the midst of this excitement. A new feeling swept over her. How selfish she had been! Would God forgive her?

While these thoughts were passing through her mind she was making her way toward Mr. Randall. Would she be too late. No; Mr. Burnham had been called in another direction. She pulled the poormaster's sleeve and whispered hurriedly:

"I'll take Fred."

"All right," he replied, and the deed was done.

The proprietor of the village hotel was talking to Bessie.

"Don't you want to go and live with me at the hotel?"

"No, I don't. I want my own home, and that is all."

"But, child, you can't stay here; the house is all empty, and you've got to go."

Miss Martin's eyes flashed. The idea of that sweet girl going to such a place, never;

IT WAS NOT CHEERFUL COMPANY.

"I'll take Bessie, too," she said, and Mr. Randall gladly agreed.

"I can have a bedroom and a tiny kitchen added to my house instead of a parlor," thought Miss Martin, "and can take the old kitchen for a living room. I don't really need a parlor, anyway."

And now what about little Ray? There he sat, seemingly unconscious of all that was going on around him, printing some words on a piece of card-board. Ray was only seven years old. He would need care for a long time, perhaps all his life, for he was not strong in body. He was fond of books and flowers and shy and reticent. He held up the cardboard at length and looked at the words he had printed. They were: "Trust in the Lord."

Nobody wanted Ray. He could not be of much use anywhere, and it was decided that he must go to the county farm.

"I'll take him home with me to-night," said Mr. Randall, "and send him away to-morrow morning."

Sitting around Miss Martin's table at supper that night very little was said. Fred had filled the wood box, brought water, and made himself useful in various ways; but now he was thinking of his little brother. Bessie could hardly keep back the tears.

Miss Martin could not help noticing the children's faces, and altogether it was not cheerful company.

As they arose from the table there was a knock at the door, and Miss Martin opened it to confront Mr. Randall.

"Is Ray here?" he asked.

"Why, no."

"Well, he's a queer boy; I don't know where he is, and now I can't find him."

"Is the Dilling house locked?"

"No, there is no use locking it; it's empty."

"You stay here, children," said Miss Martin, kindly; "I'll be back in a few moments."

Then she slipped over to the little old house, and, as quietly as she could, peered into every room. There, in the half twilight, she found Ray at last, half-lying, half-kneeling on the bare floor, in the little room where he used to sleep. In his arms was the cardboard on which he had printed: "Trust in the Lord."

The boy was talking, and she listened.

"It don't seem like home. Bless dear Miss Martin. She's good."

Miss Martin could hear no more. "I can never dress in silk and know that this poor boy was away from his brother and sister," she thought. "O Lord, forgive me for thinking so much of my own desires! I'll try to use my legacy in a way that will be pleasing to Thee."

Then she stepped forward and touched the boy gently on the shoulder. He started nervously, but when he saw who it was, smiled through his tears.

"Come home with me, Ray," she said, tenderly, "and the Lord will care for you and for all of us."—Zion's Herald.

A REMARKABLE OPERATION.

Farmer Grafted Live Rabbit to Injured Horse's Shoulder.

Elmer Purdy, a local farmer, who is also something of a horse and cow doctor, has just succeeded in perfecting a cure which is attracting considerable attention hereabouts, says the New York World. The method used is not new, but so far as known it has never been applied to a horse.

Several weeks ago a valuable roan colt belonging to Purdy ran into a barbed-wire fence and lacerated its off shoulder. The wound did not seem to be serious and the usual methods for healing were applied. For a time the wound got along well enough, but later developed into a running sore and the colt went lame. Some of the shoulder muscles were affected and it looked as though the animal would have to be killed.

Purdy tried all the remedies he knew of, but they did not good, and finally he determined to graft a live hare onto the leg over the wound. He therefore set a box trap in the woods, baited it with popple bark and a carrot and caught a lively jack rabbit. Purdy then undertook to etherize the bunny, for fear that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which is particularly active in Rutland County, would step in and make things disagreeable for him. Not being an expert in administering ether he killed the hare.

Later on he caught a second rabbit and was more successful, etherizing it properly. When this had been done a slit was made in the skin along the side and the fur pulled back far enough to cover the sore on the colt's shoulder. The wound was then bathed with a solution of corrosive sublimate to sterilize it and the rabbit bound in such a way as to completely cover the same. The skin was then stitched to the horse's hide and the colt was swung off his feet that he might not lie down and crush the hare.

When bunny came to his senses he seemed astonished, but made no effort to get away. The colt looked around at him in equal surprise, but the warm body added to his comfort and he offered no objection. The hare was fed regularly and for the most part remained quiet. It was necessary to bind down his hind legs, as he was given to kicking, but, on the whole, he took matters philosophically.

Two Women Authors.

Miss Mary Johnston, the celebrated southern novelist, who is very frequently in Washington, is a sad physical wreck, the victim of too strenuous a success operating on a frail vitality. She said to a number of people who met her this summer and autumn at Warm Springs, Va., where she had gone in search of health, that she never hoped to be well and strong again, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat. She is a pale, pathetic little creature, with a wistful appealing face and large brown eyes, set intellectually far apart. She has realized handsome profits from her books.

Another southern writer, Amelia Rives, the Princess Troubetskoy, who was in physical eclipse for a number of years, has renewed her youth and uncommon beauty and looks like a girl of 16 instead of the woman of 40 that statistics show her to be. She ascribes it all to the idyllic existence she leads at her ancestral country home in Virginia, where she and her princely husband love to dream away the hours. "I believe entirely in the simple life," exclaimed this charming woman. "I'm into bed at 9 and out of it at 7. What would your fashionable women think of such a regimen?" she laughed. The forceful beauty of her recent poem "Selene" is an advance in literary strength and grace over anything the lovely lady has ever done.

He Knew the Law.

A Civil War veteran, several times representative from his own district to the New Hampshire Legislature, and at one time speaker of the House, had just returned home from a closing session of the legislature, at which, says a writer in the Manchester Union, the law pertaining to the right of way to pedestrians had been passed.

He was crossing the street from his office one day soon after his return, when an electric car came bounding along. The motorman, alive to the danger of the veteran, made frantic efforts to attract his attention, and when they failed, shouted:

"Look out, major! If you don't get off the track I shall run over you."

The mayor stopped stock-still in the middle of the track.

"If you do, young man, you'll hang for it," he said, firmly.

An Empty Assurance.

"Mike," said Plodding Pete, "did you hear dat stump speaker say de world owes us a livin'?"

"Yes. But dere's no harder job on earth dan collectin' bad debts."—Washington Star.

It's so much easier to borrow trouble than it is to pay debts.

WOMEN AND FASHION

Husbands Who Never Praise.

Apparently there are some men in the world who would not be likely to live long if, by any possibility, they should be betrayed into praising their wives. The man of this description is a self-sufficient creature, who evidently believes that creation was instituted for his benefit. He is a little surprised and a good deal annoyed that things were not arranged more to his liking, but he tolerates the arrangement, not because he approves of it, but because he cannot help it.

The wife of this man is a woman whom no old maid should envy. And no old maid should ever marry this man when his first wife is worn out and laid in the grave; if she does she will regret it to her latest day—that is, unless she has backbone enough to put the man where he belongs and keep him there. And it is never pleasant to any true-hearted woman to feel that she has to master her husband in order to live comfortably with him. The man who never praises his wife will find fault with everything on every possible occasion. It is the easiest thing in the world to find fault—easier than the proverbial sliding down hill. It gets to be a habit with some men, and they are hardly conscious when they are exercising it.

Why cannot a man show his wife that he appreciates her efforts to please him? Why cannot he praise the pudding of his wife as well as the pudding of her neighbor, Mrs. Jones? Why cannot he speak kindly of her mince pie and charitably of her sponge cake? Why cannot he say that the bonnet is becoming to the face of the woman who loves him? Kind words make his wife happy, and no decent man ought to withhold them.

Cone-shaped velvet crowns with felt brims in the same or contrasting shade, by the way, are quite a feature of the season's millinery. A Parisian creation in porcelain blue with circular felt brim showed a wreath of tiny pink primroses at the lower edge of the velvet cone, while a rosette of them underneath the brim tipped up the hat the slightest bit at the front. White ostrich tips covered the hair at the back.

Another feather trimmed hat which is extremely stunning, but suited only to a tall woman, has a very high crown with one long white plume rising majestically directly at the front, the curling tip reaching over the top of the wide back brim, which is turned abruptly up. In the example in question the foundation is of velvet in London smoke gray with immense rosettes of silk in a darker shade filling in the back and catching the plume at the front.

Concerning Women.

In the period between 1840 and 1860 women of fashion wore shoes made of the same material as their gowns; prunella boots being the accepted style.

Miss Louise Hartness of Indianapolis has been a practical shoemaker for twenty-one years past, and is proud of the fact that the shoes she turned out fit well and wear a long time.

The first European woman to adopt engineering as a profession is Cecile Butticar, a Swiss, 24 years old, who recently passed her examination at the University of Lausanne with honors.

An enterprising young woman is Miss Anna Webb, of Summitville, Ind., who was left a grist mill when her father died. Thereupon Miss Webb gave up her school and taught herself how to run a mill, put a practical miller in charge and took the rest of the business on her own shoulders and is thriving.

A Woman's Worst Fault.

There are many situations in life that are pretty hard to bear, and which, at times, tax all our endurance, but they are never improved by either a display of temper or the indulgence of a tirade of which we are heartily ashamed after the heat of passion has cooled off. The one who keeps cool in any argument or disagreement of any kind always emerges at the winning end of the game. The woman who rules her household through her temper and the fear of it which she inspires in others can never hope to be loved. She may be feared, and it is a thankless job to try to please her, but as for love—having no control over herself—she cannot hope to control others.

A temper never improves with age. If nursed and given away to when young in life, it gets worse and worse until those who love you heave a sigh of relief when death comes as an emancipation from the thraldom.

And yet even the worst temper can be cured by thought and keeping a strict watch over oneself. One of the most passionate women it was possible to know cured herself by leaving the room and counting one hundred before she allowed herself to speak. It is a simple method, but certainly efficacious, given the wish to cure that which wrecks many homes.

Womanly Beauty.

The perfect loveliness of a woman's countenance can only be found in that majestic peace, which is founded in the memory of happy and useful years—full of sweet records; and from the joining of this with that yet more majestic childishness which is still full of change and promise—opening always, modest at once, and bright, with hope of better things to be won and to be bestowed. There is no old age where there is still that promise—it is eternal youth.—Ruskin.

To Grow Thin, Try This.

Exercise until tired out.

Cut out sweets, cakes, pastries, ices.

Walk before breakfast, then eat very lightly.

Do not drink many liquids, especially with meals.

Do not sleep more than seven hours out of twenty-four.

Get out of bed instantly upon waking in the morning. Take a cold bath.

An Inexpensive Cleanser.

An inexpensive all-round cleanser can be made as follows: One part pumice powder to three parts soap powder. Mix these two well together. Take an old baking powder tin, knock holes in the lid with something sharp, put your mixture in, and sprinkle a little on what you wish to clean.

WINTER OUTFITS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

For the Opera.

White broadcloth coat, embellished with bands of Russian lace. Coat in two pieces falling in wide plaits from pointed neck.

Fashion Notes.

A little sealskin bolero with a cloth skirt is a nobby combination.

A tulle ruche and a tight little wreath of roses tdim the mushroom hat.

Amethyst is a color that is seen more frequently as the season advances.

The luxurious evening coat is lined throughout with ruffles of narrow valenciennes.

When one wishes to appear particularly well, the becoming picture hat remains the favorite.

There is a new net inlet with horizontal stripes of lace, which makes lovely evening gowns.

Blouses of satiny leather in white or colors are the modish shirt waists for motoring or driving.

Belts of gold braid are fetching and will brighten up the dark shirt-waist suit to be so much worn this winter.

Many women have their gowns made up with two skirts, one short and severe, the other long and trimmed.

Such a pretty opera bag for the woman in black is of black Irish crochet over silk. The mounting is gun metal.

The streets will be a gay riot of color this winter if all the rainbow-hued suits one sees in the shops are to find purchasers.

In one shop is shown a gown with little creatures like ermine sprawled all over it. It would make lovely woman look like an awful barbarian.

Velvet is quite the thing for a street gown this winter. The tailored gown of black velvet, made severely and worn with handsome furs, is first choice.

Modish White Hat.

Very pretty hats are shown in soft white felt, trimmed in folds of gold gauze and in wings of mottled white and dead-leaf brown. This color combination appears in one hat, whose brim turns sharply on right side. The idea is French and the light neutral colorings of wings and felt make the models more appropriate at this early date than the darker and warmer looking felts and velvets.

When She Excels.

If I were a woman and wished to cast the net of my personality over a man, I would cultivate the fine art of listening. No woman can talk as charming as she can look.—The Philistine.

Invention of Shot.

Watts, the inventor of leaden shot, once fell into a drunken sleep and dreamt that it was raining molten lead, which in falling took the shape of millions of peas.

When he awoke he determined to try the effect of dropping molten lead from a considerable height, in accordance with the conditions of his dream.

The result was an exact fulfillment of what he had pictured in his sleep, and his experiments were the foundation upon which he was able to build up a substantial fortune.

The highest shot tower is at Villach, in Carinthia, where there is a fall of 249 feet. After cooling, shot is sifted to separate the sizes, and polished by rotary motion in small octagonal boxes.

Must Have Fads.

"If a woman hasn't a fad, there's something wrong with her," remarked an observer of mankind. "She's in love, or out of it, or her liver is out of order.

"American girls are the greatest for taking up new cults. Now, an English girl settles down to doing one thing, and sticks to it, and nothing short of an earthquake or a dynamite explosion will turn her out of the way of it.

"But you just suggest to an American girl that some new physical exercise will give her a plump neck, or reduce her hips or any other old thing, and she will be nothing else for—well, until the novelty wears off or something else turns up.

"Just now it's boxing. Every boxing master in town is rushed to death with applications for instruction from girls. Boxing, you know, is warranted to do the impossible; consequently they all want it.

"But, then, after all, I suppose it's just that variety and unexpectedness about the girls over here which makes them so attractive. You never know where they're going to break out next."

Size of Atlantic Waves.

The size of the Atlantic waves has been carefully measured for the Washington hydrographic bureau. In height the waves usually average about 30 feet, but in rough weather they attain from 40 to 48 feet. During storms they are often from 500 to 600 feet long, and last 10 or 11 seconds, while the longest yet known measured half a mile and did not spend itself for 23 seconds.

SORES THAT DO NOT HEAL

Whenever a sore or ulcer does not heal, no matter on what part of the body it may be, it is because of a poisoned condition of the blood. This poison may be the remains of some constitutional trouble; the effect of a long spell of sickness, which has left this vital stream polluted and weak, or because the natural refuse matter of the body, which should pass off through the channels of nature, has been left in the system and absorbed into the circulation. It does not matter how the poison became intrenched in the blood, the fact that the sore is there and does not heal is evidence of a deep, underlying cause. There is nothing that causes more discomfort, worry and anxiety than a festering, discharging old sore that resists treatment. The very sight of it is abhorrent and suggests pollution and disease; besides the time and attention required to keep it clean and free from other infection. As it lingers, slowly eating deeper into the surrounding flesh, the sufferer grows morbidly anxious, fearing it may be cancerous. Some of those afflicted with an old sore or ulcer know how useless it is to expect a cure from salves, powders, lotions and other external treatment. Through the use of these they have seen the place begin to heal and scab over, and were congratulating themselves that they would soon be rid of the detestable thing, when a fresh supply of poison from the blood would cause the inflammation and old discharge to return and the sore would be as bad or worse than before. Sores that do not heal are not due to outside causes; if they were, external treatment would cure them. They are kept open because the blood is steeped in poison, which finds an outlet through these places. While young people, and even children, sometimes suffer with non-healing sores, those most usually afflicted are persons past middle life. Often, with them, a wart or mole on the face inflames and begins to ulcerate from a little rough handling; or a deep, offensive ulcer develops from a slight cut or bruise. Their vital energies and powers of resistance have grown less, and circulation weaker, and perhaps some taint in the blood, which was held in check by their stronger constitutions of early life, shows itself. It is well to be suspicious of any sore that does not heal readily, because the same germ that produces Cancer is back of every old sore and only needs to be left in the circulation to produce this fatal disease. There is only one way to cure these old sores and ulcers, and that is to get every particle of the poison out of the blood. For this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. It goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, cleanses the blood and makes a permanent cure. S. S. S. enriches and freshens the circulation so that it carries new, strong blood to the diseased parts and allows the place to heal naturally. When this is done the discharge ceases, the sore scabs over and fills in with healthy flesh, and the skin regains its natural color. Book on Sores and ulcers and any medical advice desired will be furnished without charge.

I have had a crippled foot all my life, which compelled me to use a brace. By some unaccountable means this brace caused a bad Ulcer on my leg, about six years ago. I had good medical attention, but the Ulcer got worse. I was induced to try S. S. S., and am glad to say it cured me entirely, and I am convinced that it saved my leg for me. I have, therefore, great faith in S. S. S. and gladly recommend it to all needing a reliable blood medicine.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

WHEN writing to advertisers please mention this paper.

In his address of welcome at the one hundred and fifty-second opening of Columbia university, President Nicholas Murray Butler took occasion to point out the forcible illustrations now being afforded the rising generation of the difference between reputation and character. The American people are receiving some painful lessons in practical ethics, as President Butler says, and of late we have been watching reputations "melt away like snow before the sun." President Butler had in mind, of course, the insurance scandals. There has, indeed, been matter brought to light to make an honest man blush. Hamilton W. Mabie, another American, whose patriotism and cleanliness of thought none will deny, even though he may not rank as a financier, has just returned from Europe. Current scandals in commercial life, he says, are the talk of the hour in Europe and it is a matter of shame to any American to hear his countrymen referred to as swindlers and sharpers. Mr. Mabie fears that our business prospects and the respect in which our financiers have heretofore been held have been changed. To-day in England, Germany and France the American, when finance is discussed, must be prepared to meet the faint smile and quiet sneer of contempt. This is a penalty we have to pay for the wrong-doing of the big men of the American money world, who have long abused confidence reposed in them and managed their trusts for their own profits rather than for the benefits of the people they represented. It will not do, however, to take a too hopeless view of this situation. America has no monopoly of crookedness in finance. It is true that it is hard to recall a time when in foreign affairs so many names of prominence were besmirched as in the present New York disclosures, but England has had its Hooleys of recent date, and as for France, it is the last one entitled to set up as critic. Principally, however, the saving feature is American public opinion. No man can for a moment doubt that the people of our country are right. If men who have sat in high places must fall, if family names long honored must have the stain of thievery put on them, if reputations must be punctured through and through with graft and deceit, it is better it should all come at once. And it must be noted that public opinion is not in favor of sparing any one, but clamors rather for full exposition of all the iniquity and the throwing out of the grafters and thieves.

Good Salad Dressing.

Yolks of two eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of mustard, a little sugar, salt and cayenne, half a teacupful of vinegar. Mix butter in a saucepan, mix in a teacup mustard, vinegar, salt and cayenne, beat up the yolks of eggs, add mixture, stirring all the time; add butter, stir until it thickens like custard, leave to cool and thin down with milk. Can be bottled, and will keep good a month.

Admiral's Words Carry Weight.

Rear-Admiral Hichborn is one of the best known officers of our navy. His statements concerning Peruna will have much weight as they go out in the world. What he says is echoed by many other officers of high standing.

What the Admiral Says.

Philip Hichborn, Rear-Admiral of the U. S. Navy, Washington, D. C., writes:

"After the use of Peruna for a short period, I can now cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy to any one who is in need of an invigorating tonic."—Philip Hichborn.

An Ever-Presenet Foe.

The soldier and the sailor are especially subject to catarrh. In the barracks and on the field, Peruna is found equally efficacious to overcove this physical enemy. If taken in time, it will prevent colds from developing into catarrh. Even after a cold has settled in some organ of the body, Peruna can be relied upon as an efficacious remedy to promptly overcome it.

Peruna will relieve catarrh, whether acute or chronic, but a few doses of it taken in the first stages of the disease will be more effective than when the disease has become established.

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies: those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers: those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., and in order to buy the genuine article and to get its beneficial effects, one has only to note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package. Price, 50c per bottle. One size only.

Genuine—Syrup of Figs

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington for Clallam County.
D. E. McGillivray, Plaintiff, vs William E. Truesdell, Defendant.

Under and by virtue of writ of Execution issued out of and under the seal of the Superior Court of the State of Washington, holding terms at Port Angeles, in and for said county, on the 5th day of January, 1906, upon a judgment rendered in said Court on the 30th day of December, 1905, in favor of D.E. McGillivray, and against William E. Truesdell, for the sum of One Hundred and Seventy-four ($174.00) Dollars, together with attoney's fees, interest, costs, and increased costs, and to me directed and delivered, I have this day duly levied upon all the right, title and interest of the above named Defendant, William E. Truesdell, in and to the following described real estate, to wit: The South half of the Southwest quarter of the Northeast quarter of Section Twenty-five (25), in Township Thirty (30) North, Range Stx (6) West of the Willamette Meridian, in Clallam County, State of Washington.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given That on Saturday, the 3rd day of February, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, I will sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said judgment, together with attorney's fees, interest, costs and increased costs, in all amounting to the sum of Two Hundred and Sixteen and 90-100 (216.-90) Dollars.

Said sale will take place at the front door of the court house at Port Angeles in said county and state, and will be at public auction, for cash in hand to the highest and best bidder.

Dated at Port Angeles, Wash., this 5th day of January, 1906.

E. E. HOPKINS, Sheriff.

Date of first publication January 5, 1906.

Order to Show Cause on Sale of Real Estate.

In the Superior Court of Clallam county, State of Washington.
In the matter of the estate of Henry Anderson, Deceased.

J. A. Johnson, the administrator of the estate of Henry Anderson, deceased, having filed his petition in this Court duly verified praying for an order of this Court for the sale of all the real estate of which the said deceased died seized, for the purposes therein set forth;

And it appearing to the Court from said petition, that the personal estate of the said deceased in the hands of said administrator being none at all and is not sufficient to pay the claims against the said estate and the expenses of the administration thereof, and that the sole heir at law of deceased is his mother Anderson residing in Sweden, Europe, that it is necessary to sell all or a portion of the real estate of the said deceased to pay said claims and expenses of the administration. And it appearing to the Court that said petition conforms to, and is in accordance with the requirements of law in such case made and provided, it is ordered by the Court that all persons interested in the estate of the said deceased appear before said Superior Court on Saturday, the 27th day of January, 1906, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the court room of the probate department of said Superior Court in the City of Port Angeles, in said Clallam county, then and there to show cause, if any they have, why an order of this Court should not be granted to said administrator authorizing and empowering him to sell the said real estate of said deceased, or so much thereof, as may be necessary to pay the aforesaid claims and expenses of administration. It is further ordered that a copy of this order to show cause be published at least four successive weeks before the said 27th day of January, 1906, in the Olympic-Leader, a newspaper printed and published in said County of Clallam and of general circulation therein.

Done in open court this 26th day of December, 1905.

GEO. C. HATCH,
Judge of said Superior Court

State of Washington, County of Clallam, ss.

I, E. A. FitzHenry, County Clerk and ex-officio Clerk of the Superior Court of said Clallam County, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true and correct copy of an orignal Order to show cause, made by said Court on the 26th day of December, 1905, in the matter of the estate of Henry Anderson, deceased.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Court this 26th day of December, 1905.

Imperfect Digestion.

Means less nutrition and in consequence less vitality. When the liver fails to secrete bile, the blood becomes loaded with billious properties, the digestion becomes impaired and the bowels constipated. Herbine will rectify this; it gives tone to the stomach, liver and kidneys, strengthens the appetite, clears and improves the complexion, infuses new life and vigor to the system. 50c a bottle.

Mathewson's Pharmacy.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Music, vocal and instrumental, interspersed with reading and recitation, and balanced by short, interesting talks made up a very lively and entertaining program—one that was for the young folks as well as their elders; and all had a jolly good time. It was in the refreshment part of the evening that the lodge workers shone out grandly. Ham sandwiches that melted in the mouth, (ask E. D. Short) cake, pie, coffee that would make your mother jealous, and a welcome! Well—it cannot be measured. The lodge is deservedly gaining in favor, and an invitation to its regular socials is being earnestly looked forward to. The scruples and feelings of all guests are carefully regarded, and hospitality is genuine.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Porterville, Calif. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventative of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and so safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that a few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale by W. J. Mathewson.

Happy to be Home.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Craig and Mr. Carlisle returned yesterday from their extended Eastern trip. Mr. Craig, in expressing his great pleasure in getting home, said the snow covered the fences and it was bitter cold in the country they passed through, the train being delayed several hours so that they arrived in Seattle at 3:30 a. m., in the midst of a continuous hard rain. No wonder they enjoyed seeing again this warm, bright, sunny April land. Mrs. Craig is even more enthusiastic over the climatic and other advantages of Port Angeles and says that while its a great pleasure to visit so many life-long friends, and while she does not like to be so far from her son, yet there is no place in the East or even on Puget Sound that equals Port Angeles as a home.

Of Interest to the Housewife.

In the February Delineator there is much of housewifely interest. Isabel Gordon Curtis' helpful household serial called "The Progress of a Housewife" touches upon the kitchen and its utensils. Delicious recipes for onions and desserts are supplemented by an interesting and instructive article on "Meat and Its Uses," and the pages of Illustrated Cookery are extremely suggestive. Gardening and house furnishing are other topics of particular interest in the home.

Indigestion is easily overcome by the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, because this remedy digests what you eat and gives the stomach a rest—allows it to recuperate and grow strong again. Kodol relieves Indigestion, Belching of Gas, Sour Stomach, Heart-Burn, etc., and enables the digestive organs to transform all food into the kind of rich blood that makes health and strength. THE FARMER'S SON AND THE CITY.

WHY do farmers' sons leave the country to find employment in cities? The drift of population toward cities has been so marked in the last decade that the United States industrial commission has made a special study of the question. The farmer's son is just like the son of anybody else. He likes to know what is going on in the great world, and he realizes that if he remains on the farm always and has not the means to travel, his knowledge of the world will be narrow.

The country boy has a bright mind. In the common schools he learns of the deeds of public men, and he aspires to be a great man some day himself. He goes away to college and takes high rank. Other professions than farming are open to him and he may choose one of them. Both of the United States Senators from Indiana were farmer boys and scores of other successful public men, who were raised on farms, could be named.

But what does it matter if the tendency is to move from the farm to the city? Population will adjust itself. When the farmer boy finds that the city does not hold out superior advantages, he will remain on the farm. Doubtlessly many a young man from the country makes a mistake when he goes to a city with the belief that he can make an easier and better living. It will not take long to discover that the country has its advantages, too. When he finds himself ordered about by an employer from ten to twelve hours a day, he will begin to appreciate the independence of farm life. Before he leaves the farm a salary of $15 a week may seem large, when he is receiving scarcely more than that for a month's work, but after he pays the innumerable bills that a city man must pay, he will find that the $15 a week salary is not half so large as he imagined it.

The farmer boy may be influenced by what he reads of "hayseeds" and by the prevalent newspaper cartoons of hewhiskered ploughmen. Yet if he stops to think, he knows that the city-bred fellow is the greenest creature on earth when he goes into the country and can't tell corn from wheat or pumpkins from sour apples. If newspapers were published in the country, there would be some of the funniest city-fool cartoons that a man ever shook his sides over.

The country holds out more inducements than it did a few years ago, and the inducements will be still greater. Just as soon as it is clear that the farm offers equal or better opportunities than the city, the farmer boy will stop drifting toward the city. The matter will adjust itself. Just now there is a reaction in favor of the farm.—Indianapolis Sun.

WOMEN IN INDUSTRY.

ALONG with his excellent recommendation that the Department of Commerce and Labor investigate thoroughly conditions of child labor throughout the United States, President Roosevelt in his message urges that the subject of women's employment in gainful occupations be carefully studied by the same department. Many enlightened women of this country are eager for such an inquiry by the government. Doubtless it is in response to their arguments that the President makes his strong presentation of the importance of this matter.

Formerly woman worked in the home and only in the home. To create and maintain the home by the toil of her hands applied directly to fireside industries was her absorbing care. But the factories have taken those industries from the fireside and woman has followed them into the factories. The result has been that the woman who has been relieved of such work is not bound to her fireside as was the housewife of former generations, while the woman in the factory has few or no family ties. As the President says, "change and disturbance in the domestic life of the nation" has resulted from these new conditions. The decrease in marriage and in the birth rate are some of the symptoms of a revolution which may have a sinister effect upon the country in general. The result in many cases to the individual worker is equally disquieting.

These conditions affecting the individual, the nation and the race should be dealt with in the light of accurate knowledge such as a federal inquiry should secure. The 5,000,000 women who toil in gainful occupations must be protected and dangerous tendencies must be curbed.—Chicago News.

GOOD PREACHING.

"DON'T put a $5 hat on a 5-cent head. Quit taking $5 buggy rides on $6 a week. Eschew cheap jewelry. Get a bank account. Get a home of your own. Get some property. Get a start in the world in some way. What good is it to you that you live in cities with paved streets if you don't own anything? Don't be satisfied with the shadows of civilization; get some of the substance."

That is Booker T. Washington's advice to his people. He is getting down to fundamentals. The negro has not behind him, as the white man has, the inherited thrift of centuries. On the contrary, his people who have gone before him have had a longing for the good things of life, which longing has been denied them.

The white man is the heir to habits of prudence in expenditure. The negro has been taught, until the last forty years, to take no thought for the morrow. Considering the fact that the colored man has gone against the inbred traits of his race whenever he has tried to live within his means, he has made wonderful progress. Especially is this true of the Southern negro, who has accumulated, in eleven former slave States, more than $300,000,000 worth of property.

And again: Is not the advice in Washington's pungent phrase also applicable to the white man? The negro is not the only type of spendthrift who takes $5 buggy rides on $6 wages and neglects to provide for the rainy day. And it must also be said that the preaching against shiftlessness has little effect either on white or colored ears. Moral maxims go into one ear and out at the other—with most persons. Still, the preaching must go on. A little of it finds lodgment. And here and there men are helped by it to stand on their feet as men. It is mighty good preaching, anyway.—Kansas City World.

MAKING POSTAL ENDS MEET.

THE postal deficit in the United States for the last fiscal year was over $14,000,000, and will be large this year. It is said by the department that the rapid extension of rural free delivery is the cause of the deficit. But annual postal deficits have been the rule for a long time, and reached into some millions before a single rural delivery route was established. It was then clearly perceived and pointed out that the annual deficit was caused by the transportation of an immense amount of matter at losing rates. Some of the waste has been stopped, but a big leak there still exists. Many persons who have looked into the matter say the government pays extravagantly for transportation. Congress should investigate and stop abuses. Appropriate legislation will end the deficit.

Rural free delivery has come to stay. It is a good thing, and ought to be broadened in its work. The people do not ask that the postoffice should turn a big net profit into the treasury, as is customary in Europe, but they want the department to pay its way, and lop off the dead weight and impositions it is saddled with. A $14,000,000 deficit will compel attention in Congress.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TREES' EFFECT ON CLIMATE.

Disforestation Causes Arid Wastes and Sometimes Floods.

Whether forests exercise a perceptible influence upon the climate is an old question, and even to-day it is not definitely settled. In many countries a drying up of the climate has occurred, which is shown perhaps most strikingly in almost the whole of Africa. That deforesting has assumed constantly growing proportions in almost every part of the world is still more apparent. The climate of Greece, where to-day only 16 per cent of area is covered with forests, has deteriorated. An increase of temperature and decrease of rain are noted, compared with ancient times, especially in Attica, which was thickly covered with forests about 3,000 years ago, and where hardly any rain now falls, while the heat in the open air attains a degree which would make the Olympian games almost an impossibility.

A similar condition exists in the peninsula of Sinai, where thousands of years ago the people of Israel lived in a luxuriant and fertile country and where to-day only forestless deserts abound. Palmyra, also once a flourishing oasis in the Syrian desert, presents to-day only a desolate waste of stones and ruins.

In Mexico, where the Spaniards cut down the forests in the mountains, drouths changing to devastating floods are now noticeable, especially in the vicinity of the City of Mexico. In upper Egypt, where only 100 years ago rain was abundant, drouth now usually prevails. In Algeria, where, since the middle of the last century, the forests have been cut down on a large scale, dry weather has increased, and in Venezuela, the level of Lake Tacarigua, to which Alexander Von Humboldt drew attention, has been lowered in consequence of disforestation.

If these and other facts are kept in mind the sentence, "Man traverses the earth and a desert results," is understood. It must not be forgotten, however, that this applies mainly to the influence of civilization upon appearances and is not always due to climatic changes produced by deforesting. Some authorities even deny the influence of forests on the weather and climate. It cannot be denied, however, that dense forests favor moisture and prevent the drying out of the soil to a considerable degree. At any rate, deforesting, which in modern times assumes constantly growing proportions for industrial and agricultural purposes, is of universal importance.

Germany, with a forest area of about 26 per cent, realizes annually nearly $60,000,000 worth of timber therefrom, while the wood importations are about of the same value. The consumption of wood increases from year to year and systematic forestry has not succeeded in keeping up the forest area of Germany. If it is furthermore borne in mind that Canada, which formerly possessed more than 300,000,000 acres of forests, has to-day only a forest area of about 225,000,000 acres, it becomes evident that the question of deforestation assumes great importance. If civilization continues to chance the face of the earth the problem of its wood supply will present itself like that of coal and force the finding of a suitable substitute.

SENSATIONS OF A WORM.

Being Cut in Two or Four Has Little Effect on Squirmer.

Some remarkable experiments have been carried on to prove whether the lower animals suffer pain or sensations of any kind when injured, says the Kansas City Star. The most striking of these experiments were made on the common earthworm. If such a low animal be divided at its middle transversely only the posterior half shows those squirming and jerking movements which, anthropomorphically viewed, seem to indicate pain; the anterior half (containing the brain) crawls, as ordinarily, away. Now, if these halves be halved again the posterior segment of each squirms, while the anterior halves crawl away. This same process may be continued with precisely like result until the pieces are no longer large enough to crawl independently. The striking phenomenon is explained in part by the two sets of musculars fibres in the worm, one longitudinal, causing the squirming and jerking, and the other circular, which produce the crawling. Why in the posterior segments the former set should be stimulated and in the anterior the latter set Prof. Norman says he does not know. For its purpose the experiment seems conclusive.

The abdomen of a hermit crab may be cut in two without any "but a very slight response" from any remaining movable organ. "Limulus" stops a few seconds when 400 or 500 abdominal segments are cut away, then proceeds quietly breathing as before. Its order of events is, regularly, cessation of breathing, flexion of abdomen, pause extension of abdomen, respiratory movements. "Geophilus" cut in two in the middle continues its crawling, the front half going forward and the rear half backward. Millipedes divided while walking do not hasten nor stop nor jerk.

An Impossible Feat.

Ainsworth R. Spofford, chief assistant librarian of the Congressional Library, speaking of fiction, said: "Much of it is false—as false as the story of Napoleon and the one-armed soldier.

"Napoleon, seeing this one-armed soldier on the streets of Paris one day, called him up and said:

"'Where did you lose your arm, my friend?'

"'In your last campaign, sire,' the soldier answered.

"'And you were never decorated?' said Napoleon.

"'Never, sire.'

"'Then here is the cross. May you wear it with honor,' said the Emperor, and, taking the cross from his own breast, he pinned it on the soldier's faded coat.

"The one-armed soldier flushed with pride at this great honor. His eye glittered, his breast heaved, his lip curled proudly.

"'And, sire,' he said, 'suppose I had lost both arms, what then?'

"'Then,' said Napoleon, 'I should have made you an officer of the legion.'

"On hearing these words the soldier, quicker than thought, drew his sword and cut off his other arm."

A LIFE'S SORROWFUL SETTING.

Former Governor of Wisconsin Homeless and Penniless.

Homeless and penniless, former Governor William R. Taylor, of Wisconsin, who scourged the railroads of the State in the early 70's, as champion of the "granger" movement, has entered the Gisholt Home for the Aged, a semi-charitable institution just outside Madison, Wis. The $500 entrance fee was raised by friends and at the age of 85 ex-Governor Taylor retires forever from the scene of life's activities. His last days are as pathetic as his first days were pitiful. His mother died when he was 3 weeks old and six years later his father, a sea captain, was lost in mid-ocean. He was born practically without a home and raised among strangers, and he will spend his last days in a "home" that is not a home, but a retreat for relics of a past generation.

EX-GOV. TAYLOR.

Thirty years ago it was different. Mr. Taylor, in 1873-75, was in the executive mansion at Madison, swept into office by the "granger" movement, one of the most unique uprisings that ever colored the pages of western history. It was the movement on the part of the "patrons of husbandry," as they were named by President Johnson, who was the real promoter of the Grange as a national organization.

Throughout the Western States, particularly in Wisconsin, the agriculturists, reduced to sore straits by the civil war, banded to gether in one great brotherhood, and the "grange" almost took the place of church, club and theater. In Wisconsin the "grangers" fused with the Democrats in 1873, and Taylor was put at the head of the ticket, the only fusion candidate to be elected. He went into office like a cyclone. He whacked away at the railroads in his inaugural address, and when the Legislature assembled he was at it hammer and tongs for the passage of a law that would relieve the farmers from excessive rates.

In 1874 Governor Taylor began by refusing all railroad passes and franks. Then came the enactment of the "Potter" law, creating a commission to fix and regulate railway rates. It placed the roads under State control, limiting the charges for transportation of passengers and freight and classifying the freight. A howl went up from the railroads. They took the position of injured innocence and some of them served formal notice that they would not respect one of its provisions. Up rose Taylor's fighting blood. The controversy was one of national extent and consequence, and the contention extended both to State and Federal courts, the main question involved being the constitutional power of the State over corporations of its own creation. A test suit went against the railroads, and the court sustained the position of the State and rendered judgments against the corporations. The decision established finally the absolute power of the Legislature to modify or repeal the charters of corporations. Governor Taylor also attacked and routed the timber sharks who had been robbing the forests of the State.

When he became Governor in 1873 Mr. Taylor was comfortably situated, so far as worldly goods go. He owned a farm of 360 acres and had much personal property. Since then he has met with misfortune in nearly all his ventures, a fact that has brought him to his present condition.

Misfortune in business attended the Governor almost on the day that he left office. To recoup his losses Mr. Taylor turned to speculation and met with almost uniform failure.

The early years of the "farmer Governor" were filled with hardships. With the family with whom he lived he moved to Jefferson County, N. Y., and at the age of 11 was working in the clearings from morning until night, digging out stumps and tilling a stony soil. At 16 he broke away from this life of toil and in two years saved enough to enable him to enter the Academy of Union College, Schenectady. Later he taught school in Ohio and then settled on a farm near Cottage Grove, Wis., working as a lumberman and riverman in winter. It was as a farmer he was elected Governor.

KEEPING WITHIN THE LIMIT.

The Inconvenience of Having Pursestrings Which Do Not Stretch.

Why is it that the only hat in the shop that is becoming is generally the most expensive, and that the suit which exactly answers the requirements is always five or ten dollars more than the purchaser cares to expend?

One woman says she only takes the actual amount in her purse that she wishes to spend. But does this assist the woman who has a monthly account, or do away with the possibility of giving part payment? Another woman exclaims: "Dear me, I would not do that way; that does not help matters at all, because my husband does not like me to go without a little extra money in case of accident. I simply go to a store where they keep things within my price."

"That store is rather difficult to find which never has articles more expensive than my purse allows," observes a third woman. "I find the best way is to refuse to look at the expensive things, and tell the saleswoman to bring me only such as come within my limit. Then I resolutely shut my eyes when I can see tempting things in the high-priced cases."

"H'm! rather inconvenient to have to shut one's eyes!" ejaculates another speaker. "Why don't you wear smoked glasses when you go shopping? I think the only way to keep from spending more than one should is to have a little self-control. I should be ashamed to admit that I was led into unnecessary extravagance for want of a little will power. Now look at this hat. I went into Zero's the other day, and I had made up my mind to spend just $8 on a hat. And (triumphantly) here is the hat, as you see."

"But that hat cost $10," objects a former member of the group. "I saw it at Zero's myself yesterday."

"Well, yes; it was $2 more than I wanted to pay; but you see it was really more economical in the end because—well—the ostrich tip made the difference, but it will do on another hat next year, and I can save that much next season! It is always well to look ahead!"

WAY TO KEEP FISH ALIVE.

French Scientists Discover Microscopic Algae of Great Value.

Consul General Guenther, of Frankfort, Germany, writes of a report that the French naturalists, Billard and Bruyant, have made a discovery with reference to keeping fish alive which may be of great importance.

The reported discovery concerns a tiny alga, by itself not visible to the naked eye, which posseses the remarkable property of preserving the water in which it exists in a state of great purity for an almost unlimited period. The little plant possesses also the advantage of multiplying rapidly and thrives in almost all kinds of fresh water. To the naked eye the presence of these algae is noticeable through the brilliantly green color of the water, provided it contains a large number of them.

The two scientists have succeeded in keeping brook trout alive in a large-sized vessel for six weeks, so that their taste at the end of this period did not appear to be impaired in the least. This is all the more remarkable, as it is well known that otherwise brook trout can only be kept alive in running water. Leeches have been kept alive by the same process one and one-half years without change of water. Experiments have already been made to make practical use of the discovery for the transportation of live fish.

Live brook trout, for instance, were shipped by rail, the journey consuming seven hours, at a temperature of 25 degrees, in vessels filled with water to which these algae had been added. The trout were all fresh upon arrival, while of others, shipped at the same time in pure water not containing these algae, not a single trout arrived alive. The explanation of this phenomenon is probably that these algae, like other green plants, decompose the carbonic acid exhaled by the fish and so reoxidize the water. The two scientists are also of the opinion that the algae also render the poison, which may have been secreted by the fish, harmless.

Origin of Railway Whistles.

Locomotives, seventy-five years ago, had no whistles. The engineer kept by his side a tin horn, which he blew before curves and dangerous crossings. But the noise was feeble.

In 1833 an English farmer's cart was run down on the way to market, and 1,000 eggs, 100 pounds of butter, two horses and a man were lumped in one great omelet on the rails.

The railway had to pay the damages. The president sent for George Stephenson and said, angrily:

"Our engineers can't blow their horns loud enough to clear the tracks ahead. You have made your steam do so much—why don't you make it blow a good, loud horn for us?"

Stephenson pondered. An idea came to him. He visited a musical instrument maker, and had constructed a horn that gave a horrible screech when blown by steam.

From this horn the locomotive whistle of to-day descends.

A Frightened Rabbit.

"I was walking across a field with my dog at my side when a young rabbit emerged from a wood close by," says a writer. "Suddenly it fell to the ground and was to all intents dead. The dog sniffed at it, and I watched it for about ten minutes, thinking it absolutely dead. I walked away about fifty yards, when I looked back and saw the rabbit rise and run rapidly into the wood whence it came. It is evident that it saw the dog and dropped down out of fright."

An Object in View.

"Aren't you ashamed to swear at the mule in that manner?" asked the respected citizen.

"Yes," answered the driver, "but I ain't as 'shamed as I would be to swear at a golf ball or an automobile or something else that couldn't possibly take notice. I've at least got an object in view."—Washington Star.

"MANY HAPPY RETURNS."

The Formal Dinner Party Was in Honor of a Birthday.

Judge Edgell hurried into his house as usual at half-past six, threw off his coat, washed his hands and hastened into the dining room. At the threshold he recoiled in surprise. A blaze of light dazzled him. The best silver and glass were laid out. Candles burned at the four corners of the table. Cut flowers filled the room with a fragrance that extinguished the usual smell of cooked food.

At the table his wife bloomed like a young girl. Her best gown of white voile trimmed with lace—her mother's wedding lace—showed her fine throat and arms. His little daughter sat with the self-conscious smile of party correctness, wearing blue ribbons on her "pigtails," and his son beamed behind a great deal of glistening shirt-front. His older daughter was busy giving a last touch to the sideboard. She was the most serious of all in her grave officiousness.

"Goodness! Well! What! Who's coming? Have I forgotten a dinner engagement? The Bryces aren't coming till next week."

"The week after next," corrected his daughter, soberly.

"Then who? What? My, what a handsome spread!"

"Daddy," observed the youth in the white shirt, "I thought judges never got surprised at anything, and here you are like a minister at a slipper party."

"My son," said Mrs. Edgell, "you are not quite old enough to make comments of that sort on your parents. Charles," she said, turning to her husband with a cool but gentle smile, "you need not dress; there is not time. This is rather a special event, but I will not explain until dessert. Sit down, dear, and enjoy it with us."

Judge Edgell's training as a lawyer taught him not to ask futile questions of his wife. He sat down, ate one good thing after another, admired his wife, talked with his son about football and school, and came completely out of the abstraction into which the lingering memory of cases in court sometimes plunged him during meals.

When angel cake and colored ice creams came in, the handsome lady across the table smiled and said:

"Charles, Don Carlos"—it was the name she had used playfully in their youthful courtship, and threw him back twenty-five years—"Don Carlos, this is a birthday celebration."

"Oh, it isn't mine, mama," came from the little girl. "I had two last winter."

"No, my dear, it is mama's."

"Mama's!" cried Judge Edgell. Then, as his son would have said, he "tumbled." Everybody, he certainly, had forgotten the dear lady's birthday. The self-contained if not venerable justice left his seat, strode round to his wife and kissed her heartily. The woman glowed. The elder daughter brushed away a tear. Seeing the tear, the small daughter began to cry. Mr. Edgell looked distressed, and his more manly son pooh-poohed at the fuss. "That's a nice way to end a good dinner!"

"My boy," quoth the father, "it is a good way to end a dinner which has in it a little repentance, and it is a good way to begin now for other dinners, about one a year. No, we won't wait a year. This one does not count. To-morrow night we'll have a real birthday celebration for mother, and she shall not have to superintend it. We'll have a caterer to do the job. It is a poor stick of a husband who makes his wife get up her own birthday celebration."—Youth's Companion.

TOO MUCH PRINTING

PRESIDENT ISSUES SOME PERTINENT INSTRUCTIONS.

Orders Departments to Cut Down their Annual Reports—Committee to See that Unnecessary Matter is Excluded, Copy Being Edited Before Instead of After Printing.

Washington, Jan. 23.—To do away with the unnecessary printing originating in the departments and to improve the form of the annual reports and other department documents, the president has issued the following instructions, applicable to all executive departments:

"There shall be appointed by the head of each of the executive departments an advisory committee on the subject of printing and publication. The chairman shall be an assistant secretary, or other qualified official, and at least one member of the committee shall have had practical experience in editing and printing.

"It shall be the duty of such committee under direction of the head of the department to see that unnecessary matter shall be excluded from such reports and bulletins; that copy is carefully edited before and not after going into the printing office; to do away with the publication of unnecessary tables; to require that statistical matter may be published in condensed and intelligible forms; to prepare the frequent revision of mailing lists; to prevent duplicatiion of printing by different bureaus; to exclude unnecessary illustrations from department documents, and to prevent the printing of the maximum edition allowed by law when a smaller edition will suffice; to recommend to the head of the department for inclusion in the recommendations contained in his annual report needed changes in the statutes governing department publications."

To Govern Annual Reports.

The president has directed that the following general principles shall hereafter govern the form of annual reports of the various bureaus and offices of the departments:

"First—Annual reports shall be confined to concise accounts of work done and expenditures incurred durinng the period covered, with recommendations relating to the future, including plans for work to be undertaken.

"Second—Contributions to knowledge in the form of scientific treatises shall not be included in annual reports.

"Third—Illustrations in annual reports shall be excluded except: (A) reports and diagrams indispensable to the text; (B) views of monuments or important structures begun or erected; (C) views showing conditions in outlying possessions of the United States and relating to work done or recommendations made.

"Fourth—Inserted material, written or compiled by persons not connected with the reporting office, and biographical and eulogistic matter relating to the past or present shall be excluded.

Will Exclude Much Matter.

"Fifth—Reports of officers who do not report directly to the head of an executive department shall not be printed in the annual report of a department, but where necessary shall be summarized in the reports of the officials to whom such officers do report.

"Sixth—Tables shall be inserted only when verbal summaries and statements of totals are inadequate and complete texts of law and court decisions shall, except in cases of great importance, be excluded.

"Seventh—Detailed descriptions and lists of methods, processes, purchases, bids, rejections, installations, repairs, specifiations and personnel employed shall be oimtted except when required by their unusual importance or by statute."

The president also announced that he will appoint a general commission on bookmaking, advisory to all the departments, to consist of the librarian of congress, as chairman, the public printer, a representavive of the department doing the largest amount of printing and two printers not in the public service, of large experience in making up books, who are to serve without compensation other than their traveling expenses. This committee is to be appointed to promote the economy, utility, appropriateness, durability, and, so far as practicable, the uniformity of government publications. This comimttee is not to deal with contracts of publications, but solely with their form, size, style, paper, type, make-up and binding.

This action of the president is the result of a report to him on public printing by the Keep committee, which has been investigating the subject by his direction.

Among the administrative changes in the printing office recommended by the committee are the following:

The installation of a cost-keeping system in the government printing office, and the employing of expert assistance in installing such a system; the keeping of efficiency records of the work of employes, and the use of such records to weed out incompetent persons. The public printer's attention has been called to the statement of the committee that the number of supervisory and unskilled employes in proportion to the skilled ones has largely increased in recent years, and he has been directed to make careful investigation into this subject.

CONVICTS FOR ROADS.

Spokane County Will Make the Experiment this Spring.

Spokane, Jan. 22.—In order to experiment with convict labor on the public roads, Governor Albert Mead made an offer to the county commissioners of Spokane county to supply as many convicts as would be desired. This order was at once accepted by the commissioners and the governor will be asked to send fiften convicts to the county.

The offer of the governor was made through Highway Commissioner J. M. Snow, who attended the sesssion of the commissioners. Mr. Snow said there would be a bill introduced at the next session of the state legislature providing for the employment of convicts on road work, and the governor desires to experiment in order to determine the advantages and disadtages of such a system.

By the agreement the state will furnish the convicts and agrees to guard and board them, the county in return to furnish medical attendance, housing and bedding.

"We do not know how soon the convicts will arrive, but we expect them in a short time," said County Commissioner George W. Collins.

"The men will be put to work on the coutny's rock crusher at some quarry in the county. We expect to crush rock and to start macadamizing roads throughout the county."

PACIFIC COAST COMPANY STOCK TRANSFERRED

Seattle, Jan. 22.—A dispatch from San Francisco, which is the Pacific coast headquarters for the Harriman system, announces that ten millions of Pacific Coast Company's stock has been transferred in New York either to Harriman or Hill interests. The dispatch also states that the purchase is believed to have been made by Harriman for the purpose of acquiring terminal facilities for the Union Pacific in Seattle.

That the stock purchase has been made by Harriman is further confirmed by the fact that the recent purchases of tide lands by the Harriman interests in this city adjoin property holdings of the Pacific Coast Company in this city in most instances, and that in every case the holdings acquired by Harriman are in close proximity to Pacific Coast Company water front property.

SEA WALL FOR 'FRISCO.

California Supreme Court Declares Bonds Legal.

San Francisco, Jan. 22.—The supreme court has handed down a decision by which funds will soon be available for the completion of the San Francisco sea wall. The court sustained the validity of the so-called sea wall act, passed by the legislature in March, 1903, which authorized the state board of harbor commissioners to issue $2,000,000 in bonds to complete the San Francicso sea wall.

The harbor commissioner proceeded to issue bonds under this act, but State Treasurer Reeves refused to approve the issue. The commissioners thereuponn applied to the supreme court for a writ of mandate to compel the state treasruer to sign the bond issue.

The court by its dceision directs the state treasurer to sign the bonds. The harbor commission, it is understood, will now issue bonds under the act from time to time until the full $2,000,000 worth is out of the market.

ALL STATES SHOULD ACT.

Insurance Commissioners Want Reform Adopted Without Delay.

New York, Jan. 22.—A general decision that insurance reforms should be inaugurated immediately by state legislatures throughout the country was arrived at by the insurance commissioners of several states which conferred here with the New York legislative committee which investigated the matter. Conferences between this committee and the state commissioners have covered a period of two days.

Senator Armstrong, chairman of the New York committee, said that there would probably be no more conferences. He said that the committee's report would be ready for the legislature in about two weeks.

Printers Appear to Be Winning.

New York, Jan. 20.—Members both of the Typothetae and the "Big Six" Typographical union, express themselves as entirely satisfied with the condition which prevailed at the opening of the third week of the printers' strike. Thirty-six of the 80 typothetae firms are standing together for the 54-hour week and the open shop. In 275 book and job printing concerns the union's demand for a closed shop and the 48-hour week has been accepted.

Oregon Patents to be Issued.

Washington, Jan. 20.—At the request of Senator Gearin, of Oregon, and upon the recommendation of the commissioner of the general land office, Secretary Hitchcock has revoked the order of March 15, 1905, by which he suspended the approval of entries for selection of public lands in the state of Oregon. Several thousand patents of land, involving many thousands of acres in that state, which have been withheld from delivery will now be released to the owners.

AGREE ON RATE BILL

HEPBURN MEASURE TO BE REPORTED UNANIMOUSLY.

As Finally Agreed Upon in Committee the Bill Includes Many Ideas Set Forth in the Democratic Measure—Hepburn Expects Immediate Consideration by the House.

Washington, Jan. 24.—After a conference lasting all afternoon the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce agreed upon a rate bill to be known as the Hepburn bill and to be reported to the house with the unanimous recommendation of the eighteen members of the committee.

In the main the bill is the original Hepburn bill, but a number of concessions were made to the Democrats, and their ideas is set forth in the Davie bill were freely incorporated in the perfected measure.

Chairman Hepburn was congratulated by all the members of the committee on the drafting of a bill upon which the two parties could agree, and the members of the committee assert confidence that the successful outcome of their long conference will have marked effect upon the attitude of the senate toward the measure.

Mr. Hepburn and other Republican members agreed to accept the wording of the Democratic bill in the provision for the fixing of the maximum rate. The amendment which was accepted provides that the commission shall fix a just, reasonable and fairly remunerative rate, which shall be the maximum rate.

It was maintained by the Democrats that under the original Hepburn wording the commission was required to fix the highest of the just, reasonable and fairly remnerative rates, in casue there were several such rates. Chairman Hepburn and the Republicans do not believe there is any difference in the practical effect of the two wordings, but were perfectly willing to accept the language of the Davie bill.

The amended bill also provides for seven members of the interstate commerce commission instead of nine, as was provided in the original Hepburn bill. Another amendment incorporated at the request of the Democrats provides that in cases where no damages are assessed the commission may simply state its conclusions and need not set forth its findings.

A section of the Davie bill requiring that the attorney general in appealed cases shall file the certicfiate necessary to expedite the hearing was incorporated in the amended bill. Another amendment provides that orders of the commission shall continue in force for three years unless repealed.

No existing cases are to be affected by the bill, and all laws relating to witnesses and the conducting of hearings before the commission are to be continued.

Mr. Hepburn will make a favorable report on the bill at once and epxresses confidence that the measure will be considered by the house within a week.

HEPBURN RATE BILL SOON TO BE REPORTED

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—Thee republican members of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce held a conference at the capitol at which the Hepburn rate bill was discussed at considerable length. The bill it is believed, will be reported to the house this week in slightly modified form. Senator Doliver, of Iowa, attended the conference and joined with the republicans in reviewing the provisions of the measure. The caucus was held in Mr. Hepburn's committee room.

The caucus reached an agreement on the provision regarding the phraseology to be used in defining the rate which may be fixed by the committee. This will provide for a just, reasonable and fairly remunerative rate which shall be the maximum rate which may be charged by the carrier. This language shifts the position of the word "maximum" in such a way as to meet, the republicans hope, the opposition of the democratic members, who held that its original position on the general position in the bill left room for ambiguity on the general question of the reasonableness of the rates.

Jewish Students on Strike.

New York, Jan. 20.—There is a strike in the Rabbinical seminary. The seminary has 100 students between the ages of 17 and 24 years, studying to become rabbis. They declare they will not resume their studies until the following demands are conceded: To have English taught; to be allowed to know more about affairs outside their religious routine; to study the bible in addition to the Talmud; to have modern method and spirit injected into the school. The principal is Rabbi Nahan Dahn, of Slutzk, Russia.

Against Assay Office at Portland.

Washington, Jan. 20.—It is believed at the treasury department that the bill intrtoduced by Senator Fulton for the establishment of a government assay office in Portland has but little chance of passage. The director of the mint is opposed to the establishment of any more assay offices on the Pacific coast, believing that the offices at Seattle and San Francisco are sufficient for present and prospective needs.

WASHINGTON EARNINGS.

Twenty-Eight Per Cent of N. P. Revenue Earned in this State.

Olympia, Jan. 22.—Twenty-eight per cent. of the gross earnings from the operation of the Northern Pacific railway was earned in the state of Washington, according to the first annual report submitted by that road to the state railroad commission.

The gross earnings of the operation for the entire system were $50, 771,-070.95, and in Washington $14,132,-304.62.

The total mileage of the systeem, including leased lines, is 5,676.26, of which 1,535.14 miles are in the state of Washington.

The average receipts per mile from each passengeer and the average receipts per mile from each ton of rfeight in the state of Washington are slightly in excess of the averages in these particulars for the entire system, as follows: The average receipts per mile per passenger in Washington were $.02326; entire system, $02231. The average freight receipts per mile per ton in the state, 8.79 mills; system, 8.32 mills.

The number of fare-paying passengers carried in the state during the year was 2,177,529, and on the entire system, 5,142,891.

The lines in the state carried 5,294,-190 tons of revenue-producing freight, and the entire system, 13,036,789 tons.

The operating expenses within the state for the year were $7,889,392.89.

The report shows that of the 2,000,-000 passengers carried in this state, two lost their lives and thirty-eight were injured from accidents during operation of trains.

The company owns 915 locomotives, 741 cars used in passenger service, 35,137 freight cars, and 780 company service cars.

The entire system has cost in construction and equipment to June 30, 1905, $322,676,620.19. Its funded debt outstanding is $293,087,449.36.

RAILROADS AGREE ON SUMMER EXCURSIONS

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Transcontinental lines have decided upon reduced rates for many important gatherings to be held during the coming summer. The coast lines, however, refused to grant equally low rates for events in the Middle West as are granted for conventions in the Far West.

The conventions were placed in two groups, those on the coast to be granted a rate of $62.50 from the Middle West, and those to be held in the Middle West and South to be granted a rate of $72.50 from the coast. The only exception to this is the Grand Army reunion, for which a rate of 1 cent a mile was made, which holds good within a radius of about 150 miles from the coast cities, where the rate will be one fare for the round trip.

Conventions carrying the lower rates are: Mystic Shrine at Los Angeles, May 7 to 10; Baptist convention, September 12; Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in 1907.

YOUNG MEN WANTED.

Urged to Get Into the Political Game and Revise the Rules.

New York, Jan. 24.—Enough members of the Young Men's Christian Association to fill the Majestic theater to standing room thundered their approval when Mayor Mark Fagan, of Jersey City, and Senator Everett Colby, of New Jersey, advised them to get into politics. Both speakers, who were introduced as New Jersey's political reformers, denounced political rings in bitter tones.

"I want you to get into politics," said Senator Colby. "That does not mean holding office. We need a lot of fresh brains in politics to take the place of the dried up and overtrained political minds that never can see the point of this new game. I have followed with interest the proposed changes in the rules of football and should like to see the same changes made in the game of politics. We need to make the game more orderly, abolish interference and do away with coach in from the side lines by the corporations."

Mayor Fagan said, among other things:

"Too many Christian men stand aside and look with horror and disgust on the existing conditions in our public life—conditions for which they are responsible. Every man owes it to his country and to his God to take an active part in politics. Join the clubs of your party and don't leave all the work to the political 'heelers' and 'grafters.'"

Deficiency Bill Completed.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The subcommittee of the house committee on appropriations has completed the urgent deficiency bill. It carries appropriations aggregating $135,000,000, and includes the additional appropriation for carrying on canal work until June 30, 1906.

Life Station at Flattery.

Washington, Jan. 20.—A favorable report from the committee on commerce has been made by Senator Piles on bills authorizing the construction of a life saving station at Cape Flattery, and appropriating $10,110 for a fog signal and keeper's dwelling at Ediz Hook station.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1906.

Very Properly Acquitted.

The immigration bureau got busy Saturday and caused the arrest of Capt. Robbins of the Gleneldan, on charge of not having used proper precaution in caring for the stowaway Japs. Inspector Nicholson of Port Angeles was assisted by Inspector Lavin and U. S. Marshal Britman of Seattle. Trial was held before Commissioner James Stewart, and the case was dismissed.

Captain Robbins did not take the proceedings, with the attendant expense, in a kindly manner, stating that according to international law he had no right to keep foreign subjects in confinement when in port; that had he done so, they could have commenced action against him in the first British port he visited; that it was the duty of the immigration authorities to take charge of the men while he was in port; and that were he required to keep the men, he considered a half mile of cold water as ample a safeguard as could be desired. The inability of the men to make the shore would seem to evidence the soundness of this last point at least.

Captain Robbins was very favorably impressed with Port Angeles, and being related to Mrs. Alice Raymond of this city, would doubtless have made this port when again seeking a charter on the sound, but he left with anything but a kind remembrance of his treatment here.

Pev. Carlisle P. B. Martin, L. L. D.

Of Waverly, Texas, writes: "Of a morning, when first arising, I often find a troublesome collection of phlegm which produces a cough and is very hard to dislodge; but a small quanty of Ballard's Horehound Syrup will at once dislodge it, and the trouble is over. I know of no medicine that is equal to it, and it is so pleasant to take. I can most cordially recommend it to all persons needing a medicine for throat or lung trouble. For sale at Mathewson's Pharmacy.

Ten Cent Play House.

A ten cent play house is to be established in Port Angeles. Realizing the demand for a cheap form of entertainment, or for those which, while not necessarily cheap in character, can be put on at a low price under favorable conditions, J. O. Morse is having his store room, two doors west of the Merrill grocery house, fitted up for a theater. He proposes to secure an attraction of merit for a week's run once each month. The first has already been engaged, an electrical "moving picture" show, said to be the best ever touring the Coast.

A neat stage has been built and the seats are to be tiered, work being done by Chas. Morse. Johnson & Bork are papering and painting the room throughout, and Mr. Bork is painting the drop curtain and wings. It will be a very neat, attractive room and, properly conducted, will be well patronized.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Absolutely Harmless.

The fault of giving children medicine containing injurious substances is sometimes more disastrous than the disease from which they are suffering. Every mother should know that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly safe for children to take. It contains nothing harmful and for cough, colds and croup is unsurpassed. For sale by W. J. Mathewson.

Death of Wm. Bishop.

William Bishop, Sr., of Port Townsend, died Sunday at midnight at his home in that city. Mr. Bishop was one of the first settlers of the Olympic peninsula arriving in Port Townsend in 1865, and by early acquiring valuable farming lands in the Chimacum valley, laid a substantial foundation for future prosperity; he was reported to be one of the wealthiest men in the county. Of his seven children, one, William, Jr., of Chimacum, who is interested in logging operations in this county, and who is state representative for Jefferson, is well known here. Rev. Walter Bell of Dungeness is a nephew of Mr. Bishop.

Has Sold a Pile of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for more than twenty years and it has given entire satisfaction. I have sold a pile of it and can recommend it highly.—Joseph McElhiney, Linton, Ia. You will find this remedy a good friend when troubled with a cough or cold. It always affords quick relief and is pleasant to take. For sale by W. J. Mathewson.

Prune Your Trees Now!

If you haven't the time to do it yourself, or don't know just how to go at it, I should be pleased to do it for you. I know how to prune trees JUST RIGHT, and will not mutilate and disfigure your orchard, but on the contrary will make good trees out of some of your old cripples.

If you want roses trimmed I will promise to leave them as if a Kansas cyclone had gone through them, but you need not settle with me for that kind of work, either with a rolling-pin or otherwise, until the daffodils bloom in the springtime and the roses will have recovered from the terrible shock and show evidence in my favor.

Spraying will be in order next month sometime. I shall be prepared with a good big outfit to do the work properly, and if you have any poor, worthless fruit trees that you want grafted to better fruit, I can do it for you. I am now cutting my scions (or slips) from some of the best bearing trees I can find in city and country, and shall get some new varieties from Pullman and other places to try.

Can furnish fine strawberry plants from $3.50 to $5.00 per 1,000. Clark's Seedling, Hood River, Sharpless, Marshall, and others. $2.00 extra per 1,000 set and a full stand guaranteed first season; dead and sick plants replaced and planted free of charge.

Leave word at the Port Angeles Grocery or at Seevers' store and I'll call and see what you want.
