CONSTANTINO CAUGHT.

The Chief Assailant of W. C. Williams Tracked Down.

DISCOVERED BY WALTER GOVAN.

Frank Constantino, Who Made Such a Murderous Assault on W. C. Williams, Seen at Quintia's Ranch on Discovery Bay, Where He Has Been in Hiding Since the Trouble at Port Williams—Sheriff Dyke and Walter Govan Capture Him.

Sheriff Walter Dyke got home Tuesdry morning after a hard and exciting man-hunt, and he brought his game back with him.

It will be recalled that the assault recently on W. C. Williams was made by two Italians and that the chief assailant, Frank Constantino, made his escape at the time. Up to within the past few days no trace of him could be found and his discovery was made by the purest chance.

Walter Govan, of Dungeness, was up at Port Discovery on business and he caught a glimpse of a man, whom he declared was the fellow wanted. He was so positive about it that Sheriff Dyke decided to run the fellow down, so, in company with Govan, they started for Port Discovery, and tramped the beach all the way. Govan thought Constantino was stopping at Quintia's near the Port Discovery mill.

The place has long been regarded as a refuge for Italian and Portuguese criminals. It was this same man that harbored Coello, the Jefferson county murderer for so long a time. Quintia's place is most admirably situated to screen offenders of the law. It is on the beach of the bay, and no one can approach the front by boat unless clearly in view for at least half an hour. Just back of the place lies a forest of dense undergrowth and a man might remain within a stone's throw of the house and elude all efforts to capture him.

At Dungeness Dyke had a talk with ex-Sheriff Harry Pilcher, of Jefferson county, who gave our sheriff some valuable pointers how to land the fugitive.

Dyke and Govan reached Quintia's place about 3 o'clock Monday morning. They hid themselves in the brush at the rear, and, although it was raining hard and chilly, they remained stoically at their posts until daylight.

They were rewarded soon after daybreak by seeing their man around the house. They made a dash over the fence but Constantino had recognized them and hurried inside. Sheriff Dyke rushed to the front and Govan remained at the back. Dyke started into the house but was met by Quintia at the front door who tried to prevent the sheriff from entering. "You are from Clallam county and you have no authority to come in here," he yelled. But a gentle persuader was convenient and he was glad to get out of the way. While this was going on Govan had started around to the front, and Constantino, seeing his chance, broke for the woods, and was out of sight in a moment.

The sheriff and his deputy started after but gave up the chase after a fruitless search of several hours. They went back to the house but after a short rest they determined to try it again. This time they got their man. Sheriff Dyke by the merest chance, happened to spy the fugitive peering through a fence. He evidently was hungry and thinking the pursuit had been abandoned was taking a look at the house to see if the officers were in sight. Sheriff Dyke was able to get within a few rods of him without being discovered. He then called to the man to hold up his hands but instead the poor devil made a break to run. Dyke shot over his head and the fellow dropped to the ground, scared almost to death.

He was searched but no weapons were found on him. They then started him up the beach and marched him to Port Townsend, from which point he was brought down on Tuesday's boat and landed in the county jail.

Sheriff Dyke took Constantino up to Dungeness Wednesday where he had a preliminary hearing before Justice Miner. He was represented by Charles M. Kent, who made an able address in his defence. County Attorney Stewart, assisted by Louis Williams, appeared for the state.

Constantino was bound over to the superior court in bonds of $500, which he was inable to secure and he lies in our sumptuous jail awaiting the pleasure of the court.

A Logging Victim.

Peter Bonny, one of the best known loggers in the state, was brought to town Thursday on the Garland and taken at once to St. John's hospital to receive treatment for injuries received while pursuing his vocation Hall & Bishop's camp at Gettysburg. In some manner the unfortunate fellow was caught between two massive logs, and before his mates could fly to his assistance was severely crushed.—Port Townsend Call.

Turned Over to Jefferson County.

Yves M. LeBitoux, the engineer who was charged with assaulting Capt. E. F. Backlin, of the tug J. E. Boyden, with an ax a few days ago at Port Townsend, and who was brought to Seattle by Deputy United States' Marshal Curtis and lodged in jail, was released yesterday by Judge Hanford on a writ of habeas corpus and has been turned over to the authorities of Jefferson county, within whose jurisdiction the alleged assault was committed.—Seattle Times.

THE SEALER FALCON.

The Captain Comes all the Way From San Francisco to Find He has no Crew

Capt. M. White, of the schooner Falcon, of San Francisco, was in town yesterday.

He is a greivously disappointed man. He had expected to secure a complete crew of Indian sealers here and at Neah Bay, but upon arriving here he finds them all gone and little prospects of getting others to take their place. He had commissioned Inspector Fowler, of Port Townsend, to secure him a crew, but finds that Fowler has done absolutely nothing in the matter. All of the best Indians went out this week on the sealing schooners Bering Sea, Columbia and Swan.

Capt. White's schooner, the Falcon, is the largest vessel that, probably, ever started on a sealing cruise. She could easily store away thirty canoes in her hold alone, and the Indians would have been delighted to have sailed in her. The Falcon reached Near Bay just after the Indians had signed contracts with the other sealers and they were faily beside themselves with disappointment.

Capt. White went to Victoria yesterday to see if he could not secure some sealers there. Word has been sent out to various points in the county, also, that good men can secure a job. Capt. White hails from Prince Edwards Island and is an ideal representative of the kindly, whole-souled seafaring man of that country.

We trust he will be able to secure a good crew and that he will come back next fall with a fine catch and plenty of money.

They Will Bring Their Wives.

Postmaster Hooker during the week received several letters from the officers of the Philadelphia and Monadnock.

The purpose of the writers was to learn if good board and lodging could be secured here for their wives during the stay of their ships in this port.

Major Hooker turned the letters over to the board of trade and Mr. Carrigan will look after the matter.

The reference from the tenor of the letters is that the Monadnock will arrive here about the middle of July and that the Philadelphia will be here about the 1st of August, possibly sooner.

Little People's Party.

On Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock a number of children gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bell to enjoy a birthday party with Elaine Bell.

Games were enjoyed on the lawn and in the parlors until 6 o'clock when a long table was spread on the lawn and a dainty lunch served. After which the children resumed their play till 8 o'clock.

Those present were: Mamie Young, Hattie Mallette, Stella Gatchet, Etta Sherman, Elaine Bell, Sarah Fowler, Annie Ritchie, Vida Brown, Addie Thomas, Maggie Garfield, Grace McIvor, Cathie Willson, May Shields, Cora Tillman, Clara Young, Ethel Mallette, Minnie Fowler, Hazel Shields, Wilda Bell, Wendal Bell.

Last summer one of our grandchildren was sick with a severe bowel complaint. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain, printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. Our Exports.

Clallam county has during the past fiscal year exported to Victoria $20,363 of products, including shingles, logs and farm produce. The imports were nothing to speak of, so the business represents clean cash that came into the county.

A TRIP TO THE SOLDUCK

Made By a Former Citizen of Creston, Iowa.

HE GETS AN EYE - OPENER.

Mr. C. H. Fuller Visits the Famous Clallam County Lakes and the Solduck Valley, and Writes to His People Back East—He Grows Very Enthusiastic Over the Wonderful Resources, Advantages and Beauties of the Country.

PORT ANGELES, Wash., May 25, 1896.

MR. EDITOR: I returned home Friday from a trip to the Solduck valley, about forty-five miles southwest of here.

Drove the "little sorrel" to the buggy to Lake Crescent, eighteen miles, then put her on a scow and ferried across the lake, twelve miles, leaving the cart on this side as the road goes no farther, then put her under saddle and road over a trail, through a primitive forest of very heavy timber five miles to Moore's ranch on the Solduck river, where we camped the first night, sleeping in a cabin on the bank within twenty feet of the river, which is a roaring, rushing, mountain stream, about 150 feet wide at this time, when the water is very low. Leaving the horse here in an enclosure, we took the trail on foot, with our bedding and provisions on our backs, and moved up the river about three miles, over a very crooked trail to our next camp, a dilapidated cabin in thick woods, but near the river, which at this point falls about twenty feet over monster rocks, in a very narrow channel, giving a demonstration of power and grandeur awful to behold, but not to be compared, in beauty, to the falls on our claim on the Elwha.

Below the falls were a great number of salmon from two and one-half to three feet long, plainly to be seen in about six feet of water. We tried to catch them with a gaff hook, but the current was too swift.

Three miles farther on is a most beautiful spot, situated in a narrow valley with high mountains on each side, and for some unknown reason is devoid of trees, there being some fifteen or twenty acres of level open land covered with grass and native plants, which are just now commencing to grow nicely, as the altitude is such that the nights are yet frosty. The next morning myself and one of the party (there were five of us) went up the river two-and one-half miles to the hot springs, the first of the kind I have ever seen, and I say to all your readers who have never enjoyed such a privilege, don't miss an opportunity of visiting any hot springs that you may ever be near, for they contain an interest that is hard to describe, and one can never realize the sensation of putting his hand in natural hot water in any way except by actual experience.

The water comes out at the foot of a mountain, quite near the river, and for a distance of one hundred feet or more, by twenty feet wide, the hot water boils up in hundreds of places from among the rocks, forming a stream of considerable volume, which empties into the river a short distance below. One large spring flows from the side of the bank, above the others, and this has been enclosed with rocks to form a basin, a foot deep, and five or six feet across. This appears to contain the hotest water of any, and I found it impossible to hold my hand in the water as long as I could hold my breath.

The land has been located by a Mr. Moritz, who has a cabin near the springs and uses the water for all household purposes except for cooking. He has a box of earth planted to cabbage, sitting over one of the springs, and the plants are growing nicely, the spring acting as a hotbed. Mrs. F. suggested that he might hatch eggs in the same way, and I think it could be done. The water is strongly impregnated with mineral, but is not at all disagreeable to the taste, althought the odor is strong of sulphur. I like the water and drank all I could of it, and only wish I could get it every day. I brought some home in a bottle for analysis. It was tasted and pronounced good by the members of my family. Within twenty feet of the hot springs there is another of very cold water which indicates and tastes of iron, and still another of pure, cold, soft water.

Taken altogether this is a wonderful place, and will some day be a resort, such as the Arkansas springs are today, but as yet they are entirely inaccessable to invalids, owing to the nature of the trail and the absence of accommodations at the springs.

Here is an opportunity for capital such as is but rarely found. The place has many attractions aside from the springs, such as hunting, fishing, mountain climbing, botanizing, etc. Game consists of elk, bear, deer, cougar, wild cat, badger, otter and grouse. I saw plenty of elk and deer track, but we were not on a hunting expedition, we took no time to look for the animals.

Jones has two elk and one deer skins at his cabin, all of recent catch. There is a nice pool for bathing, at the springs, with water tempered just right, and I regret that I did not take a bath while there. After looking it over carefully and to my satisfaction, we came back to our camp and from there on to Moore's where I had left my horse. Here we made a camp for dinner after which we came on to the west side of the lake, to Mr. Michell's place, where we got supper and stayed all night. Went out in a boat and tried the fishing, but were unsuccessful.

This lake is a wonderful sheet of water clear as crystal, of unknown depth and almost surrounded with mountains, which, in many places rise almost perpendicular from the water's edge. There are some small flats, or benches, between the water from the mountain, with cabins built on them as all the land around the lake is taken up, and six or seven men, and one woman have made their home there.

The one woman is Mrs. Michell, who, with her husband, have made their home here for the last five years, and occupy the only accessible point from the west, and own the land on which a town will be built when a railroad penetrates this beautiful, wonderfully grand, but now wild and rocky region, and which, to an unskilled eye has the appearance of being inaccessible to a railroad.

A preliminary survey, made some years ago shows a practical route over which a railroad can be made, and that at no extraordinary cost considering that it is a mountainous route. There is another smaller lake one mile southeast from Lake Crescent, called Lake Sutherland, which of itself would be an object of great interest and attraction, were it not for the larger one being in such close proximity. The scenery here is just as grand and beautiful as at the larger lake but not so extensive. The road from the top of the mountain on the east leads directly down some 1,500 feet to the margin of this lake, and it is truly a beautiful sight as you look down upon it from that dizzy height, and as you approach the level and catch glimpses of the water through the surrounding trees with a mountain of rock for a back ground, the scene is if possible yet more beautiful. The mile of comparatively level land between the lakes, over which the road passes, is strewn with detached boulders of every conceivable shape, and some of them of prodigious size. One named "Hay Stack" rock lies near the road. The shape and color may somewhat resemble a hay stack, but it would take an exaggerated hay stack to compare with it in size. Poles ten or twelve feet long have been set up against it to enable people to reach the first effect from whence they are able to clamber to the top some twenty or thirty feet higher.

The remainder of our journey home was comparatively tame, being made in a cart over a fairly well built road, through a forest of magnificent cedar, fir and hemlock, with an occasional farm opened up in the timber. These little farms are perfect gems in their way. Everything appears so thrifty. I think I never saw meadows of such vivid green, or of such luxurious growth. All have orchards of more or less extent, and the trees, while nearly all young, show remarkable growth, and scarcely any, no matter how small, were without bloom.

I cannot take time to describe the wonderful natural flower garden found on the bank of the Elwha river, or the wild fruit gardens seen in many places, or the beautiful bird choruses heard on every hand, and many other objects of interest encountered on the journey, but suffice it to say that enjoyed it greatly, and believe that I have been benefited in health and strength by the five days outing.

Try to imagine me as I was one year ago starting out on a trip of this kind, knowing that a part of it must be made on foot over a rough country with a pack of bedding on my back, and with the prospect of having the canopy of heaven for my only shelter during the nights; well, I guess not.

I expect to go into the mountains for a more extended trip during July or August. There is a facination in it which may wear off in time, but until it does wear off, I shall embrace every opportunity of seeing it while it is so, for as sure as the world stands there will be a great transformation in the appearance of the country in a few years. I make this prediction knowing that there is great natural wealth here, which only requires the touch of capital to be turned into dollars, and where the opportunity is, there will capital seek investment. All that is required is to attract the attention of the right men, and point out the opportunity and they will work out the problem in their own way, to their own great advantage, and incidentally to the advantage of the whole country.

C. H. FULLER.

Green-eyed Townsend.

The Daily Call, of Port Townsend, in its issue of June 30th, indulged in a column of persiflage of our programme for the Fourth of July celebration. It concludes with the following paragraph:

"And it is to witness such a fake performance as the foregoing indicates, that the Canadian Pacific Navigation company with Capt. Jno. Irving at the head, prefers to run three excursions from Victoria to Port Angleworms instead of bringing one here."

Comment would be unnecessary and cruel.

SOME AMERICAN SENTIMENTS.

Many Americans who go to Europe disgust their countrymen by belittling American sentiment on foreign affairs and by ridiculing their own country. This is prompted usually by a frantic desire to gain English favor. Be it said to the credit of the English that these people gain nothing substantial for themselves, for English as well as other people admire patriotism. Yet this habit has become so common that it is refreshing to hear a genuine American talk on the other side of the pond. It is also gratifying that the American who has given the European public an opportunity to know and understand American feeling should be no less a distinguished son of the republic than Henry Watterson. As one of the greatest American editors, Mr. Watterson's word in such matters carries with it the weight of truth, and his statements will be regarded as such in England.

Mr. Watterson was recently interviewed by the London Chronicle, and he gave some timely obervations that cannot but have a healthful effect. Amongst other things he told Englishmen what we thought of them on this side of the Atlantic. In this connection he said:

"Strictly speaking, there is no anti-English feeling in the United States. On the contrary, there is a generally friendly feeling. We are republicans, however, whereas you are monarchists. We detest your social system thoroughly. Shoddy Americans who come over here in hot pursuit of social recognition we regard with disgust, as you regard with disdain.

"In a word, we have sincere regard for the English people, and we desire their friendship, but we are not going about begging anybody to love us, and we are disposed to resent the pretence of doing so whenever an overzealous American is caught in the act. You may be assured whenever he does so he misrepresents his countrymen."

Referring to the strength of the United States, Mr. Watterson undoubtedly expressed the American feeling in the following terse language:

"We are more than a match for any two nationalities on the globe. We are a vast imperial republic, and we mean to be respected and felt among nations.

"We mean absolutely to control and dominate in American affairs.

"I look for no serious consequences," he went on, "in the Venezuelan matter. A war between England and the United States would be the disintegration of the British Empire."

Mr. Watterson also corrected any delusion the Britishers may hold as to a lack of sympathy between the North and South on foreign affairs. Having been himself a distinguished soldier of Dixie, Mr. Watterson has a right to speak on such matters that cannot be successfully disputed. Mr. Watterson said:

"The people of the South would welcome a foreign war, because it would give them an opportunity to show their loyalty to the Union. They are a warlike race and there are many things which make them restive. They do not thirst for blood; they are not, as you put it, spoiling for a fight, but they are bent upon expanding our foreign policy and are ready to fight at the drop of a hat.

"Nowhere was the president's Venezuelan message received with greater enthusiasm than in the South."

Who is there to say that Mr. Watterson was indulging in jingoism? We venture to say no well-informed American will so claim. He simply and truthfully outlined the American sentiment as its exists and as it should exist. Americans believe that we have here in North America the greatest, the grandest and the most powerful nation on earth and he who would represent it otherwise misrepresents Americans and Americans are not at all proud of a citizen who does not believe it to be so.

This National sentiment does not require that we should not profit by the experiences and wise legislation of other countries, but it does require that we assert our right to supreme authority in all matters wherein our interests are of paramount importance.

FOR SILVER COINAGE.

The Democratic convention will be controlled by the silver men by about 250 majority. This is even better than free coinage men had hoped. However, early in March THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER made some predictions that have been nearly verified. The only states then claimed by this paper for silver in which they were not successful were Florida and South Dakota. It claimed that votes would be secured in Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin. Without the unit rule Wisconsin would give free silver some votes. Michigan was stolen from the silver forces and Ohio was carried by them. West Virginia was conceded by this paper to gold, but was carried by silver. All the other "doubtful" states and Kentucky, which was then claimed for gold, were claimed by THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER for silver and were so carried.

If each of the state delegations enforce the unit rule the vote at Chicago will be as follows:

Total number of delegates chosen	930
For sound money	342
For free silver	588
Free silver majority	246

If the states do not vote as a unit the silver strength will be greater.

THE Beaver Leader refers to the National debt as the debt of municipal and private corporations and individuals, and the debt of the Nation as the American debt. Where did you get your terms, neighbor?

AN UNHOLY ALLIANCE.

High tariff Republicans urge that Americans must be compelled to purchase in the home market, yet these same Republicans when advocating the gold standard maintain that it is necessary that American money should be good at par in the European centres. Why this inconsistency?

The sole substance of the matter is that Republicans are and have been continually advancing the interests of favored classes. The present gold and protection combination is simply an unholy alliance between the protected barons and the money jugglers. "Give us absolute control of the American market with the privilege of fixing our own prices for our wares and we will give you control of the money circulation," say the barons to the jugglers, and the "financiers" say "agreed." So there you are. What the money lenders fail to get in interest and the appreciation of debts, the manufacturers and trusts get in high prices.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

BOIES OR BLAND.

The Democratic nominee for president will doubtless be before the people before the next issue of THE DEMOCRAT-LEADER. At this writing the chances are that the nominee will be either ex-Governor Horace Boies, of Iowa, or Richard Parks Bland, ex-Congressman of Missouri. It is not saying anything against Governor Mathews, Vice President Stevenson, Wm. R. Morrison, Senator Blackburn, Senator Teller or John R. McLean to say that with either Boies or Bland as president the cause of the people and free silver will be safe. The friends of the white metal, irrespective of party, could, with safety, unite on either of these men. They are stalwart statesmen and friends of the common people.

THE arguments advanced by gold organs that to adopt free coinage would be to confine American commerce to silver countries is ridiculous in the extreme. This country carried on more foreign trade in proportion to the total volume of commerce in the days when the only money in circulation here was "depreciated" and "debased" paper. If we have anything to sell that Europe wants they will buy it no matter what our money is.

REFERRING to Hon. Garrett A. Hobart, the Republican nominee for vice-president, an enthusiastic biographer says: "To-day he is either president, director or counsel for nearly fifty large corporations."

Evidently Mr. Hobart is a suitable candidate to be put forth by a convention that was presided over by Thurston and managed by Hanna.

THE Beaver Leader seeks to make a point on this paper for saying that the "price of silver would go up to meet gold coming down." It maintains that with gold as the money of the great commercial nations of Europe it will remain worth 100 cents on the dollar. No one disputes this wise etatement. What was meant is simple enough to a student of monetery affairs. The relative value of silver and gold as a commodity would meet at the ratio of 16 to 1. The price of silver as a commodity would rise somewhat when compared with other commodities. The price of commodities other than gold, measured by gold, would rise. Or, in other words, the relative value of gold would be less. Gold's purchasing power would come down—hence the price of gold itself. A gold dollar would be worth 100 cents; a silver dollar 100 cents, but the 100 cents would purchase less of the products of labor, pay less of the wage earnings, but still pay as much taxes and debts as at present. This is the contention of the silver men and it is the plain meaning of the sentence to which the Leader objects.

The Beaver Leader has evidently given more attention to the West End than it has to the study of the silver question.

THE chances seem now to be favorable for an alliance of all the friends of free silver coinage in the fight against McKinley and gold. If this is done, the next president will be for free coinage, and the money of the country will have been placed upon a silver basis within two years from the present time, and, perhaps, sooner.

THE Republican money plank was wired to J. Pierport Morgan for his approval before it would be accepted by the Eastern gold bugs. They accepted it so Mr. Cleveland's financial agent must have approved. Which party offers a change to the people?

She is not all well; in fact her friends are quite uneasy about her. Mr. Meagher assumed the duties of his new position the 1st of July.

Chas. H. Fisher, of Elgin, Ill., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Fisher. He arrived last Saturday. He was accompanied by Dr. G. H. Whitford, of Elgin. Dr. Whitford is out here in search of good health, and was led to come to this particular section by reading Admiral Beardslee's article in the Forest and Stream.

Messrs. Ed. Hatch, Jack Wilson, Roy and Ray McClinton, Tom Aldwell and Geo. Meagher went up to Dungeness Saturday on their bicycles to see the game of base ball between the local and Townsend nines. Messrs. Sam Johnson, Tom Watson, Ed Stewart, Bradley, Love and Beam also saw the game, but used the less laborious horse-and-buggy method in reaching there.

J. M. Jordan has purchased the Dean ranch south of town. He will make some extensive improvements and will start a cranberry marsh on the low lands of the place, which he thinks are admirably fitted for such a purpose. A DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.

Jimmy Brown Meets With a Severe Injury That Paralize his Lower Body.

Jimmy Brown, of Sequim, met with a very serious injury last Tuesday.

In company with Henry Zimmerman and Billy Smith, of Sequim, and Len Cripp, of Dungeness he was taking a number of horses over to the mountain grass lands to graze during the summer. The accident happened near Harrican Hill.

In order to handle the horses easily, they were strung together in a line by ropes connecting the tails and heads of the horses. The leading horse came up to a log on the trail alongside of which stood a small tree. The formost horse made a jump to clear the log, but the second horse had gotten his head around the tree and as a consequence the first one landed in a heap across the log. The horses struggled furiously and Brown hurried up with a hatchet to cut the rope and free them. Just as he got to them, the leader threw himself backward and struck Brown squarely on the chest and knocked him down. The horse also rolled backward on the prostrate form and struck him several times with his hoofs.

He was quickly extricated from his perilous position by his companions. At the time it seemed that he was not badly hurt, so they left him there and took the horses on to their destination. When they returned they found Brown in a very dangerous condition.

During their absence Mr. Cox and another man happened to pass near Brown and found him suffering most intense pain. They cared for him until his companions came back. They discovered that the lower part of his body was paralyzed and that his back was afflicted. They rigged up a stretcher and managed to get him as far as George Hatch's ranch that night. Dr. Lewis went out early Wednesday morning and reports that his spine is badly injured and his lower body paralyzed.

He had suffered greatly during the night, but was much relieved before the doctor left. The latter does not apprehend that the paralysis is permanent, but cannot as yet state the real extent of the injuries.

EAST CLALLAM ITEMS.

Hurrah for the Fourth!

Tug Boyden arrived here Tuesday to tow the Fairservice logs out of the Hoko, but on account of low water had to abandon the undertaking and left on Wednesday for up-Sound.

Dan Fairservice has gone to Port Crescent to look over the logging works with the evident intention of starting a store there in the near future.

Several of the Sekiou loggers have been getting out attachments against the Scott & Shaw logs during the past week.

Mr. Shaw, of Sekiou, left Thursday for Seattle.

Oliver Laurence, of Bear Creek Valley, made our city a pleasant call Monday evening.

Judge Rowan, of the Sekiou, was a visitor here Monday.

Messrs. Clarkson and Birmingham, of the West Side, came over Saturday and read the I. O. O. F. goat. Jonny says that he would prefer riding a "Texas Steer."

A grand time is booked for the Fourth celebration here. A well gotten up program of music, racing and sports of all kinds will be the features of the afternoon sports, but the climax will be reached at the grand ball at I. O. O. F. hall in the evening of July 3rd. A grand display of fireworks at 10 p. m. will be worth coming twenty miles to witness.

Bob Smith and Ed. Sargent are both in active training, under that able tutor Pete Fisher, for the 150 yard dash.

The peaceful citizens of our quite little burgh were horribly shocked on Wednesday morning to see two of our most respected citizens in an altercation on Pioneer street in front of the Record office. This thing of growling at one another every time you meet is getting to be a chestnut, gentlemen, so you had better pitch a 24-foot ring, jump into it and have it out, and save the town's good name.

Don't you know Keller has the larges and finest stock of perfumes ever brought to this city. Call and examine,

Quite a number of men are at work on the timbers for the bridge. Everyone will be pleased when they can once more cross the river in safety. The Sokluck river is a beautiful sight when it is high, but it loses its beauty when one wishes to cross it and knows it is at the risk of his life.

The hearing in the suit will come on within a few weeks. James Lewis has been appointed special deputy to look after the logs on the river.
