ALL KINDS OF RAILROADS

Seattle Paper Says There Has Been a Fierce Struggle for Territory.

It has been learned by an informal interview with a high railway official who did not give permission to use his name, that the Port Ludlow-Everett ferry proposition has been fully accepted by the Northern Pacific and that not only is the plan to be carried out, but it has been determined to build the necessary railroad connection on the west side of the Sound before the end of the present year, and the car ferry to Everett will be put in operation next spring.

There has been a fierce but under-cover struggle for the possession of this territory between the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific. J.D.Farrell, whose familiarity with the local conditions in the State of Washington gave him a good appreciation of the possibilities of the traffic in lumber across the Sound, is said to have brought this field to the attention of the Union Pacific directortate soon after his appointment to the management of their interests, and received authority to go after it. The result is that Coleman & Ballinger, a firm of attorneys in Port Townsend, have asked for and been granted an additional franchise for a new road, which the Port Townsend people believe to be the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, but which in fact is the Union Pacific. This franchise was granted and it will be interesting to note further developments. It is quite possible that the U. P. and the N. P. will each operate its own line of car ferry from Port Ludlow to Everett although the N. P. will be in operation first, as its lines already enter Everett, while the U. P. cannot come until its Seattle tunnel is built, the only route that will enable it to continue its lines on north of Seattle.

The plans of the N. P. do not stop with Port Townsend, as it is on the boards to run a line around to Port Angeles and tap the richest piece of virgin forest in America. The lumber that will be hauled to Port Ludlow and ferried across to Everett will furnish an enormous freightage for a generation to come.

Neighborhood Celebration

The people of Mt. Pleasant district will hold a celebration in the grove near Clarence McLaughlin's. Patriotic program, including address by Mrs. John Trumbull and others. ### Investigating Power

Engineer E. W. Cummings of Seattle has the contract for survey of the Aldwell canyon and surrounding country in the interest of eastern parties who are intending to purchase it if up to their expectations. L. E. Davick is in charge of the work, the crew starting out Saturday. The Elwha canyon is owned by T. T. Aldwell of this city and Brayne of Astoria and is held at something like $75,000.

ANGELES MONUMENT CO.

Product Compares Favorably with Imported Stones.

Mr. Wm. Barnett of the Angeles Monument Co. set up a beautiful monument in Ocean View Cemetery on the grave of Claud W. Silvey, who was killed near Clallam last fall. The monument is not a large one but it compares very favorably with the high priced monuments of foreign manufacture. A peculiar interest attaches to this event as it marks the beginning of a new industry in this city which is destined to become in time of the greatest importance to Port Angeles. Mr. Barnett says that while the monuments made from Angeles stone do not cost half as much as those shipped in they look as well as anything in the cemetery and they will never lose their beauty like all highly polished marbles. Those who intend to purchase monuments should go to the cemetery and compare the Angeles Monument Co.'s product, made in Angeles, of Angeles sandstone, with the other monuments around it, then consider the cost and we venture to predict that you will order your monument of the home firm. There are a number of fine specimens of carving in the workshop of the Angeles Monument Co. that will well repay the time spent in looking up this new industry that hns been so quietly started in our city.

Same Old Fake

Two peddlars, gotten up as sailors, who have been working the country the past few days selling silk dress patterns, were arrested and fined $5 and costs for peddling without a license in the city. They represent to each possible customer that they are off some ship, have but the one pattern, worth $15, and will sell at most any price, the inference being that the goods are smuggled. Inspector Fisher investigated the case, as he has several times before, and found the goods to be mercerized cotton, containing not a thread of silk, and of a grade sold at from thirty to forty cents in local stores.

Another Crescent Fatality

John Oberg, employed by the logging company at Port Crescent, was fatally injured Wednesday, being thrown from the wharf, striking on his head on logs below. He was brought up on one of the tugs, and died within a few minutes after reaching the hospital. He leaves a wife and child, living at Port Crescent.

TURNER BUYS BARNES HOTEL

Now Has Over $7,500 Invested in Lake Crescent Property.

Lester Turner, of the Port Angeles Peninsular, had placed on record this week two deeds to Lake Crescent property, one from Horace Barnes and wife; the consideration named being $4054.-50, and the other from Paul Barnes and wife, $1511. The Barnes' property, together with the Sanborn place, which Mr. Turner bought some months ago for $2500, gives him the best locations on the lake for modern summer hotels. As Mr. Turner is reported to have said, not so long ago, that he did not care to make any further investments in Clallam county property, this evident change of heart will go farther to convince the public of the successful outcome of the Peninsular promoters efforts than the strongest verbal statements that could be made.

Though there has been no speculation in real estate here as in Townsend of late, and no great amount of property changing hands, yet the payment of some two thousand dollars in options on business lots, with but thirty and sixty days time, and the immediate investigation of the water power at the Elwha canyon, are even more promising. It is said Mr. Turner and associates will be down in a day or two to go over the proposed line from the lake to Quillaynte.

The City Council

The council referred the matter of the employment of an engineer to committee with power to act, agreeing that the salary should be $110 per month from April to October and $140 during balance of year. The lowest bidder, Mr. Smith, has moved to Seattle, and David Ferguson will doubtless be employed.

The surveyors on the proposed municipal water works system have asked an extension of time in which to report.

Councilman Bown introduced an ordinance regulating the sale of lots in the cemetery, permits for burial, care of plats, etc., which will take the place of the present unsatisfactory ordinance.

The sale of a township of timber land by the Weyerhauser Timber Co. for $1,000,000 might be of some value in aiding the assessor of Chehallis county to arrive at a just valuation for taxation purposes.

SONGS OF THE NATION.

BOARDS of education in three Western cities have required that every pupil who enters the high school must be able to repeat the words of several patriotic songs, such as "My Country 'Tis of Thee," "Hail Columbia" and "The Star Spangled Banner." Excellent! It is a crying shame that not one in ten of the average American audience is able to repeat or sing all of the stanzas of "America." An exchange tells of a patriotic Sunday school superintendent who was surprised to find that the national hymn was not contained in the book used in his school. He requested the children to sing it from memory. They got through the first stanza and then faltered. And the adults present were unable to lend them much assistance. This incident is typical. Do you suppose any company of Germans would fail to sing every line of "Die Wacht Am Rhine?" Or could you imagine any audience of the French that would fail to remember a single word of the "Marseillaise?" The fault is with the schools. Youth is the time to learn the songs that are to abide in memory and the school is the place to teach them. It is possible to be patriotic without knowing either words or tune of the national songs. It is also possible to be patriotic without the flag. But the flag symbolizes patriotism. And the dearest traditions of the nation are forever wedded to both song and flag. "Old Glory" ought to be raised over every school house and the national songs should be taught in every public school.—Kansas City World.

A SPLENDID PEOPLE.

THE quick and generous response of the country to the cry of distress from San Francisco is inspiring. It makes one proud that he is a citizen of such a country. The American people are a great people—as great in noble impulses and humane sympathy as in industrial and commercial energy. We often hear it, and more often read it, that this is a land of mammon worshipers. We are told that the fierce, remorseless battle for gain has absorbed our mental faculties and made us sordid and unfeeling. Yet when a city far out on the Pacific coast is suddenly stricken and blighted we see these calloused and cold-hearted Americans rushing from every quarter to lay their savings at the feet of the sufferer. The Atlantic seaboard and the Middle West vie with the Pacific slope in sending prompt and liberal contributions. The rich, the well to do and the poor are mingling their gifts, and hundreds of cars of provisions and other necessaries will soon be speeding across the continent bearing relief to the unfortunates.

It is grand, splendid, glorious! It gives the lie to the calumnies of the critics. It shows that however fast their business pace and however much they overtax their strength in the pursuit of wealth, the American people have human hearts in their bodies and a plentiful supply of the milk of human kindness. The silver lining to the dark cloud of adversity when devastating tornadoes, destructive floods or consuming flames wreck a thriving city or hamlet is the fine exhibition of generous sympathy that they call forth from the people of the nation.—Kansas City Journal.

THE EVOLUTION OF ILLUMINANTS.

WE have been going from bad to worse in the matter of illuminants. The old-time lamps that the wise virgins kept trimmed and burning were no doubt primitive and harmless, little jugs filled with oil or grease into which was inserted a spluttering wick, gave but little light, but enough to enable people to move about from place to place. There was nothing to read in those days and the eyes were not taxed. Then came the sconces with their wax or tallow dips and later the candelabra with their multiplied lights. The flambeau became popular for out of door lighting and Nero lit his gardens on one occasion by burning the bodies of fat Christians whom he charged with the burning of Rome after having fired it himself. There were no electric lights in those days and no gas jets. There were no pavements or sidewalks and the traveler attached a small lamp to one of his ankles to light him on the way. From this custom came the Spiritual phrase: "Thy word shall be a lamp unto my feet." The old poets who rhapsodized the brilliancy of the lights in halls on gala occasions had little to boast as compared with the system of lighting now in vogue. There was nothing that gave a better light than the American pine knot by the aid of which so many Americans in the early days educated themselves.

Gas we have had for long and gas is bad enough on the eyes; but electricity, the product of only yesterday, is the evil genius. We are becoming a spectacled race and we may be on the road to total blindness as scientists claim, but we are not likely to abandon electric lighting.—Memphis News Scimitar.

TUBERCULOSIS TREATMENT.

CONSUMPTION, or the white plague, as it is often called, has received more consideration of late than any other human disease. The fresh air cure is proving more effectual than anything else. Fresh, pure air, in unlimited quantities with sufficient daily exercise to insure full deep breathing is a sure preventive against this disease. In the early stages it may be entirely cured by sleeping in the open air. This brings the question of ventilation straight home to every one. More deaths are caused by consumption in some parts of the country than all other diseases combined. Probably ninety per cent of these deaths could be prevented by the liberal use of fresh air. The other ten per cent could be prevented by the proper care of those suffering with the disease. Consumption is purely contagious. It could be entirely stamped out if everyone would follow the simple rules of health as laid down by physicians who have made a thorough study of this terrible malady.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

THE REVOLT IN SOUTH AFRICA.

BRITISH MOUNTED TROOPS IN CONFLICT WITH THE FIERCE ZULUS.

Some time ago Bambaata, a native Zulu chief and formerly regent under the British for the Greytown district, in Natal, South Africa, revolted, and began a bush warfare against the whites. Many members of the British mounted police have been murdered and other native chiefs joined Bambaata's forces. A tax collecting party, headed by Magistrate Stainbank and supported by a mounted column, was attacked at Mahlabitini, in Zululand, and the magistrate and one of the mounted men were killed, the others of the party narrowly escaping with their lives. Ever since the revolt of Bambaata the mounted police have been in almost daily conflict with bands of Zulus, who after delivering a sudden attack will disappear in the forests or hide in the tall kaffir corn. All of South Africa is now seething with unrest, not only in English but in German territory, and the doctrine of Africa for the Africans is being preached among the blacks. The agitation is even extending to the far north and agents are busily engaged in stirring up revolt against the white man's rule.

The Zulus, a considerable number of whom are now in revolt, are the fiercest native fighters in South Africa and are close seconds to the Arabs of the Soudan in fanaticism. In the past they have waged many desperate wars against the English. It was in one of these struggles, in the 80's, that the Prince Imperial of France, the son of the last Napoleon, fell. In former wars the Zulus depended mainly upon their assegai, or spears, but now many of them are armed with rifles, which renders the situation even more grave. If the disaffection becomes general, affecting the native races, there will be much bloodshed in the dark continent in the near future.

POWER FROM COKE GASES.

German City Contracts for Electric Current at a Low Rate.

One of the problems confronting the city officials of Crefeld, Germany, in providing necessary improvements in the new harbor territory and the suburb Crefeld-Linn, adjoining, was the problem of furnishing these places with cheap electric light and power. The direct current generated at the city power house could not be utilized on account of the distance; hence the city would be compelled either to build and equip a new power house or to set up an alternating current machine and conduct the current to the place of consumption, about five miles away.

The cost to the city would be great to adopt either plan. The consumption of current for the first few years would be small, and in order to secure as little loss as possible from this condition the city closed a contract with the railway directors to furnish the yards and depots of several stations along the lines of the road with light and power for ten years.

One of the coal mine companies operating in the district manufactures coke and has almost completed the erection of a large electric power plant to deliver electric current to cities and villages within reach. This company purposes to utilize the hot gases formed in the manufacture of coke to drive the dynamos of its plant. The coal and coke company can produce by this plan electric current for commercial purposes cheaply, and, as the plant will be an alternating current system, the firm is contracting to deliver it to important places at a distance.

The city of Crefeld has completed a contract with this company to have an electric current delivered supplying all its needs at a price much lower than the city could supply it and the city officials are rejoicing that the occasion presented itself to them at such an opportune time. The distance from the electric light plant to Crefeld-Linn and the harbor territory is about ten miles, but the contract with the city is made to cover a large additional district, which is to get electric current cheaper than the plants in operation can make it under the old system.

Law to Improve Living.

SOME LOCAL RESULTS OF CELLBRATING THE FOURTH.

—Williamsport (Pa.) Grit.

THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER.

O say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming—
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the clouds of the night,
At the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming!
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there;
O! say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave?

On that shore dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, now conceals, now discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines on the stream;
'Tis the star-spangled banner; O long may it wave
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave!

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has wash'd out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight, or the gloom of the grave;
And the star-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave.

O! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with victory and peace, may the heav'n-rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto—"In God is our trust;"
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave.

—Francis Scott Key.

Willie Perkins was 8 years old and Nero was only 4, but when Nero walked on all fours he was nearly as tall as Willie, and when he lifted his great shaggy dogship upon his hind legs he could lay his forepaws on somebody's shoulders, and that somebody was Willie's father.

Mr. Perkins called Willie and Nero "the chums," and it was indeed seldom that the two were apart, except at school times and meal times, and when the sandman had paid Willie a visit; even at those times they were not far apart. When Willie went to school Nero trotted along by his side, and, like the good fellow that he was, when they came to the door and Willie said, "Now, old boy, you wait for me right here in the yard and be sure not to frighten any of the children as they come in. Tell me good-by now and be a good fellow," Nero would wag his tail very hard, lick the hand that had been patting his head so lovingly all the time Willie was talking to him, and then lie down and watch his master disappear through the great door of the school house.

By and by Nero would get tired of lying still and would go for a walk around the building. The sly fellow! He well knew that the janitor's wife would have a little heap of bones hidden off in one corner of the yard for him, and when he enjoyed his feast he would look up to see her watching him from the basement door. Then again that great tail would wag as if he said: "Thank you so much for those nice, meaty bones." When winter came on there was a large box that the janitor's wife and Willie taught him to go into when he was cold and wanted to lie down, and so his school days were not at all dreary ones.

But the happiest time for "the chums" was when Willie put his books away for the long summer vacation and he and Nero had the whole day together. Even when Willie had cut the kindling it was Nero who carried it to the house in a basket held tightly by his strong teeth, while Willie carried a bucketful of coal.

By and by Willie began to tell Nero of a great day that was coming, when all the boys would have firecrackers and Roman candles and torpedoes, and there would be flags flying and bands playing and everybody would have a good time. Nero always listened to every word that his little master said, and now and then when Willie would give his head an extra hard pat by way of emphasis Nero would bark and set his tail going harder than ever. That tail always wagged when Nero was pleased. Sometimes Willie's mother would allow the dog to come into the sitting room, but one day the tail knocked a handsome vase off of the table and broke it, and after that Nero had to lie down very quietly if he got into the house.

Two days before the Fourth Willie bought his fireworks; there were five packages of firecrackers and five of torpedoes, four rockets, four Roman candles, two wheels and a long piece of punk. Nero went with Willie to the store to buy them, but he had to wait outside while Willie went in, and so as soon as they reached home Willie opened the package and showed Nero everything it contained.

"Heard the news?" Tom asked.

"No. What is it?" answered Willie, forgetting for a moment his trouble over Nero.

"Ed Bishop's going with his folks to the city for the Fourth, an' so you'll have to find some one else to take his place in our procession."

Willie gave Nero a quick look. "Oh, I wish you had hands!"

"Who'll you get?" asked Tim, after waiting a moment for Willie to speak.

"Dunno yet; I'll have to think about it first. See here, I've got lots of things. Twice as much as we have to have."

"I should say you have! You're lucky. All the other boys say they had a hard time to get what they had to. How'd you manage it?"

"I earned the money, getting coal and kindling," Willie explained.

"Well, you ought to have the right to give out the flags. We'll all meet here at 10 sharp," and Tom sauntered on.

When he was gone, Willie began to talk to Nero again.

"Now, there it is. I have firecrackers an' torpedoes enough for you an' me, too, an' you helped me earn 'em, carrying kindling, didn't you? Oh, why haven't you some hands to carry a flag with!"

Willie was excited now, and up jumped Nero, waving his tail as hard as he could. Willie looked at him for a minute and then turned a double somersault, and came up shouting, "Hurrah! hurrah! You shall march with us. I know I can do it!"

THEY FORMED IN DOUBLE COLUMN.

"Now, we'll fire off a few crackers," said Willie to Nero, "but we'll have to save the most of them till the Fourth, b'cause us boys are going to have our crackers an' torpedoes together. Won't we have a fine time, marching to the commons, with our drums beating and horns blowing and flags flying! But there's one trouble about you, Nero, an' that is, you can't march with us, b'cause the boys decided that nobody can march without they have one of our flags, an' there's just ten flags an' ten boys. I'm to give out the flags an' if there was any boy that was sick you could have his place, if you could only wave a flag."

Nero dropped his head and looked very sad. Willie thought it was because Nero was so badly disappointed, but perhaps it was because the faithful fellow saw that his friend was troubled. As they sat there, Nero looking so sad and Willie with his elbows resting on his knees and his chin buried in his hands, they heard some one whistle and, looking up, saw Tom Evans coming toward them.

At last the Fourth came, and at 10 o'clock all the boys except Ed were gathered in Willie's yard and Willie was talking to them.

"Now, boys," he was saying, "you left it to me to put some one in Ed's place, an' I have selected some one that you all know an' like. He has his share of crackers an' will wave his flag fine. Will you promise to give him a rousing welcome when he comes, so's he won't feel hurt at being asked to march with us at the last minute?"

They all promised, and then while they were asking who it was Willie ran into the house. A few moments later he came out, and who should come trotting by his side but Nero, carrying in his mouth the handle of a basket that was filled with firecrackers and wagging his tail, to which was tied a little flag, pole and all!

The boys all gave a great shout when they saw Nero, and then they formed in double column and started for the commons, Nero walking by Willie's side, the proudest dog that ever waved a Fourth of July flag.

German School

Rev. Wm. C. Drahn of the Lutheran Church will give German and biblical instruction for two months. School opens in the chapel on Laurel and 9th Sts. Monday morning at 9 o'clock sharp, for the German speaking children, and 1 o'clock sharp for the English children, though one class is not excluded from the other. A fee of 50c per month usually charged, though it is not compulsory, for chief object is the moral and mental training of the children.

Even Billy, the bewhiskered goat, joined in the general attempt at decoration on the Fourth, flying flags both fore and aft. Filled with patriotism, wall paper trimmings, and an intense longing for plug tobacco, he made his regular morning call at the tin foundry and butted in on the proprietor's shins until he received his treat and decorations. It is estimated he consumed over two bushels of firecracker paper, et cetera, during the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Myers have been entertaining the formers cousin, Mrs. W. H. Payne, and her husband, of Chicago, the past week, and endeavoring to interest them in the abundant resources of Clallam county. ## Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

Opinions of Great Papers on Important Subjects.

DON'T FISH IN THESE WATERS!

A CHICAGO chap lost $5,000—his pile—on the stock market. "I'm not kicking," he says. "Now I can settle down to work again. I've served my conscription time—that's all. It's just like Europe. There every man has to serve his time in the army; here every man has to give a part of his life to the financial sharks."

No man is ever beaten so long as his pluck is left. And there may be no real misfortune in the loss of even all a man's money if it leaves him wiser than before. The young man who imagines he can beat the "financial sharks" at their own game cannot be disillusioned too young. The older he is when he gets the lesson, the more he will lose and the harder he will find it to recover. If his sad experience impresses upon his mind effectually the vital fact that success depends upon hustle, not chance, he is getting the best possible return for his money.

It is true that all of us must contribute to the "financial sharks." The trusts levy lifelong tribute. And up to the present time there has been no way discovered for avoiding it. But we need not voluntarily contribute. They take enough from us through prices of commodities and watered stocks—without our bodily plunging into shark-infested waters.—St. Louis Chronicle.

A WIFE WHO CAN WORK.

GROVER CLEVELAND WHITE, a Massachusetts boy of 18, has jilted his sweetheart, 17, and married her mother, a woman of 42, with two sons older than himself. Silly boy—eh? Maybe not. Marriage is not altogether a question of ages.

This young man, though fickle in his affections, has an idea or two of his own not half bad. "Although 42 years old, my wife," he says, "doesn't look to be over 25."

This is a point worth considering. A woman, we know, is no older than she looks—certainly she is no older than she looks to her husband. So long as she is young in his eyes she is safely within the limits. "She knows how to cook," says the young husband, coming to more prosaic defense. "She knows how to wash, iron, mend clothes and keep house, and that's more than a majority of the young girls of the present day know."

Youth fades. Love very often cools in a little while and frequently even congeals in the divorce court. But ability to cook, wash and keep house abides always; and the young man who at 18 has secured to himself such a treasure as this need have no concern for his future.

A wife old enough to be his mother and not averse to hard work must be able to support him; and is not that infinitely better for a young man of 18 than a giddy young thing who can do nothing but love him through a brief honeymoon that dismally ends when the larder runs empty? It would seem that Grover Cleveland White is a wise young man.—Kansas City World.

DECLINE OF NEIGHBORLINESS.

IT has been asserted that one of the regrettable characteristics of our age is the decline of neighborliness. There is a plausible reason for this view to be found in the increasing tendency of the population to flock in cities. There is an old proverb of the Romans, "A great town is a great solitude," which still holds good, and is impressively true of the vast modern municipalities. Long ago, when the English cities were villages compared with the overgrown modern municipalities, a British writer observed that there was not in them that "fellowship" which was in small communities. In patriarchal times there was little difference between a neighbor and a friend, and in districts where the old simplicity of life exists the "neighbors" are usually, in a very accurate sense, friends and brethren. The loss of this association, so much in evidence in every large town, finds no compensation in any of the advantages of urban life. "A crowd is not company; faces are but a gallery of pictures and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no friendship."

The commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," is hard to obey when the neighbors are multitudinous. We must leave it to the interpretation of the wise whether it is applicable in a great city, save in the general sense that we should love all mankind. Obedience to the injunction seems to be more faithful in the small communities of the countryside, where life is close. We can imagine that the great commandment which implies the brotherhood of mankind found its first response where there were no cities.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THE PREACHER AND THE NEWSPAPER.

SEVERAL good points were made by Bishop Fallows in an address before the General Council of the Reformed Episcopal Church in a meeting at Philadelphia upon the attitude of the modern pulpit to the press. The argument was that the minister should use the newspaper as one of the most effective agents for assisting him in his chosen work. In the first place, its style should be followed by the preacher. The ideal newspaper article, the bishop said, is sharp, short and to the point. It is designed to catch the eye and hold the attention.

There was a time when the minister was much more influential relatively than he is to-day. This does not imply any diminution in the regard paid to the cloth or less interest in the theme which should be at the foundation of every sermon. It simply recognizes that modern society, with fast mails, telegraph, telephone, and improved mechanical devices has developed the newspaper into a daily encyclopedia of information, illustration, and inspiration, which materially lessens the labors of the minister and at the same time proves one of his greatest aids in the general improvement of moral and social conditions toward which he ever strives. The individual minister makes his voice heard only by a limited number. The newspaper, with its association with agencies for the transmission of important items to all other journals of its class, makes its influence felt round the world.—Chicago Tribune.

TWO-CENT RAILWAY FARES.

THE Ohio legislature this winter passed a two cent per mile passenger fare bill covering all railways in the State. Two cent fare has been operated on the many roads in New York State for a number of years. The Iowa legislature killed the two cent a mile railway fare bill for that State. Of course conditions are different in Iowa, the population is not so dense as in Ohio or New York, but the sentiment for cheaper railway fares is growing and probably within another year some way out of the difficulty may be found. No one wishes to hamper the railway companies in their efforts to operate their lines at profit. Because of crooked work in certain directions the railways of the country have come in for a great deal of unfavorable criticism of late, some of which has been deserved, but a good fair survey of the situation in a general way shows that the railways have been instrumental in building up the business of the country and have done more than any other one institution in making this the foremost nation so far as domestic trade and intercourse is concerned. Where the population is thick enough, reduced railway fares pay the companies because cheaper fares induce more travel, but this rule will not apply in every case. The railway men themselves usually are the best to judge and they have been reducing fares for business purposes alone. The inhabitants of Iowa have a right to demand the lowest possible passenger rate commensurate with the service given. The tendency is for cheaper fares and we are sure to get them.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

PAPERS BY THE PEOPLE

FEDERATION OF THE CHURCHES.

By Rev. J. W. Hegeman.

It is plain why the churches can no longer succeed without federation. Instead of remaining ignorant of the facts and ignoring other factors, each church must comprehend all the facts and co-operate with all other factors. The coincidence of these two obligations determines the form of the co-operation. Each church must co-operate with other religious factors to ascertain all the facts. The foundation of all successful federation is the co-operative parish plan. Several methods have been found successful. In a village of 1,000 inhabitants the pastor of the one church had a house to house canvass made, its results recorded in a card directory, the territory divided into eighteen districts, with a secretary over each whose duty it was to report changes, and was thus able to leave to his successor a photograph of religious conditions brought up to date. Several churches can do the same by each taking a section, mutually reporting, or they may employ one visitor to look after the whole in the name of all.

MISUNDERSTANDINGS.

By Juliet V. Strauss.

MRS. STRAUSS.

Our attitude toward other people is so frequently mistaken. I often hear people accused of haughtiness who are quite the reverse, and it is quite the common thing for people's entire mode of living to be misinterpreted by their neighbors. Timid people often suffer the charge of hauteur. There are many people to whose lips the pleasant and familiar word they would like to speak simply will not come. It is not dignity that holds it back; it is a devil of dumbness that lays hold upon naturally timid people. I believe that timid or backward people are nearly always misunderstood.

Then there is the person who suffers from absent mindedness. They are persistently misunderstood and accused of coolness to their friends, of saying the wrong things and making all sorts of mistakes. They meet people and forget to speak to them, they forget names, they fail to answer one friend's letter and write to another twice in succession. They get to thinking about something and forget to talk when they have company. They trump their partner's trick at whist. They make observations upon the general workings of the universe, forgetful of the fact that such generalizations are deemed heresies by orthodox people.

Then there are the nervous people who are constantly misunderstood by those who have no nerves. They are blamed for having nerves, and they are regarded as rebellious and ill-conditioned people who deliberately let their eyelids twitch, and who "give way" when it isn't necessary—as if giving way were not their disease, and if they could help giving way they would not be afflicted. How little we take into account the physical makeup of our friends. How we blame them for what is bred in the bone, for things for which their grandfathers are responsible.

Might we not better devote ourselves to living down our own pet idiosyncracies and to helping our children as much as may be out of the rut of evil heredity?

DESPERATION OF AMERICAN LIFE.

By Charles E. Hughes.

Where shall we look for emancipation if not to the college halls? The American spirit is to "make good," to "go higher" at almost any cost—any hazard. I could almost liken it to a hundred yard dash for wealth and position. We want less of the desperation witnessed when men seek to rush through a quintennial or a decennial to some great achievement which will in the long run bring to them not only position, but also a substantial gain. Sound character and deserving influence in public life on the part of any man must be based on an honest and a strict accountability not only to the public, but to self. What we need just at this moment is a baptism of self respect, a baptism that will enable men to stand high in the public respect in spite of the almighty dollar. We look to the men coming from our universities to maintain the high quality of public service. In the universities alone men secure independence by education.

This is no time for indiscriminate criticism of men in public life. Rest assured that the machinery ready for operation by the government will handle these matters, however questionable, in an exacting manner. Let the men who have done wrong be identified and punished, and let the honest man go, his reputation unsullied and with the added good will and strengthening such a man deserves in the confidence of the public.

A SOCIAL DILEMMA.

An old custom, now obsolete, in the commercial hotels of England is described in the "Memoirs of Sir Wemyss Reid." Dinner was then served at 1 o'clock for the commercial travelers, and the youngest man present was expected to act as president and to perform the conventional duties. On one occasion Mr. Reid, then a young man, arrived in the town of Preston. He did not know a soul, but was directed to an inn, which he reached just as the 1 o'clock dinner was being served.

The coffee-room, when I entered it, was filled by commercial travelers, all hovering wth hungry looks round the table that had been laid for dinner. They seemed relieved when I, as shy a youth as could anywhere be found, entered the room.

Instantly they seated themselves at the table. I looked round for some corner in which I might hide myself from what seemed to me to be their almost ferocious gaze, and was filled with alarm when I found that the only seat left vacant was that at the head of the table. A waitress approached me.

"You are president of the day, sir," she said, and motioned me to the vacant seat at the head of the board.

I do not think I was ever more miserable or more frightened in my life than when, under her imperious direction, I took my seat and met the gaze of a dozen hungry men. On the sideboard stood the soup-tureens, the waiting-maids beside them, but not a cover was lifted or a motion made, and dead silence filled the room. I sat in blushing bewilderment, waiting for the dinner to be served.

Suddenly, from the other end of the table, a harsh voice issued from the lips of a burly, red-faced man:

"Mr. President, if you are a Christian you'll perhaps be good enough to say grace, and let us get to our dinner, which we want very badly."

I managed to stammer forth the formula of my childhood. But I was incapable of maintaining the deception in which I had been innocently involved, and taking my courage in both hands, told the company that I was not a commercial traveler, and as I knew nothing of the usages of a commercial table, would beg the gentleman at the other end of the table to take upon himself the duties of president.

There was a burst of laughter, and good humor was immediately restored, and I was allowed to look, a silent spectator.

OVERSHOES IN GERMANY.

Use of This Article Is Increasing in Kaiser's Realm.

Consul Hurst, writing from Plauen, believes it will be of interest to American overshoe exporters to know that American rubbers are scantily represented in that city, which possesses 105,000 progressive inhabitants and has a climate resembling that of the New England States.

While the people do not employ this footwear to the extent prevalent in the United States, its use is increasing, perhaps more for women and children than for men. It is a habit further encouraged by the advertising of domestic producers, and there is no valid excuse why American rubber overshoes should not have an equal place with other makes.

There are two manufacturing concerns that now dominate the market, one near Hamburg, the other at St. Petersburg, which exports widely. The overshoe in demand is rather low and heavily constructed, and all on sale in Plauen are pointed in shape, following the style of the shoe in vogue. Storm slippers are not usually kept in stock, as there seems to be little demand for this variety. The buckle arctic of rubber and waterproof cloth is not used here. Although American shoes are on sale, they are without exception of the largest widths made by American manufacturers, shaped up with rather narrow toes, so that they approximate the prevailing fashion. The overshoe that must be furnished to the trade should meet the local style of shoe, a style, however, that does not rapidly change. While from point of durability it may be granted that the foreign overshoes and the American may be alike, the latter, especially those shown on this market, while somewhat lighter in weight, generally surpasses in elegance and fineness of quality European grades.

What is true of Plauen may be assumed of other German cities, and if there is any disposition on the part of an active wholesaler to explore this territory the way is open for his energy and skill. It seems astonishing in a large city such as this that the American rubber is rarely mentioned, but the imported Russian is well known and a fine seller.

Has Seven Preacher Sons.

Seven sons of one mother in the ministry is the record of the Mouer family, of which the Rev. J. R. Mouer of Monessen, Pa., is a member. Five denominations have secured a pulpit supply from this family. Arrangements for a family reunion at which all of the preacher brothers will gather are being completed, and it will be held at McKeesport in June. The Rev. Mr. Mouer is pastor of the Monessen United Brethren church. None of the Mouer brothers has ever heard any of the others preach, and during the week they expect to be in the reunion they will hold religious services and each will take his part as leader at a meeting. The brothers have one sister. She is the wife of a minister, and he will also attend the reunion. — Philadelphia North American.

Reform.

The bill was in danger and the general counsel of the corporation which it was designed to enrich hastily called in his legislative agent.

"All the reform elements are against us," he said, anxiously. "How are we going to beat down such a formidable opposition?"

"Don't try to beat 'em down. Pay 'em what they ask," said the legislative agent, who in his day had seen a number of quickenings of the public conscience.—Puck.

A farmer's idea of easy riches would be to cut his farm up into town lots and sell every one of them.

CALL OF THE STREAM.

It's pretty tough to have to work
At driving nails or writing,
To be obliged to stay in town
When little fish are biting.
The man whose nerves are out of whack,
Whose brain is in a tangle,
Should polish up his fishing rod
And find a place to angle.

Work, though it modest is and light,
Is really quite appalling
If one is glued right down to it
When little fish are calling.
One feels like throwing up his hands
And taking for vocation
A job of fishing all the time
On one lifelong vacation.

When figures run around the page
And make his head grow dizzy
He wants worst way to join the gang
And with the line get busy.
And so he frets and stews around
And every hour keeps wishing
That he could chuck the blasted books
And put his time in fishing.

And so he mopes about the place
An air dejected wearing;
Quite savagely he kicks the cat
And does some quiet swearing.
If he is crossed in little things
He growls and feels like fighting,
For who could labor and keep sweet
When little fish are biting?
—Brockton Enterprise.

JIMMY THE DREAMER

GRIMM'S "Goblins" began it for Jimmy Traut—Grimm's and "The Arabian Nights." Of course there were other fairy stories Jimmy got hold of where magic tinder boxes, rings, lamps and the like brought treasure and consequent happiness to their lucky possessors.

Jimmy used to dream over these delightful happenings by the hour in his childhood, and he found it a great comfort. When he was struggling with his home lessons that tangled themselves up hopelessly in his puzzled brain it was so sweet to imagine some beneficent brownie or other appearing unexpectedly to wave a wand and cause the exasperating examples to arrange themselves in neat and correct solution on the tear-blistered paper before him and to picture the subsequent surprise and flattering commendations of his teacher. Or when circus day was approaching and he was bemoaning the parsimony of his parents, face downward in the clover in a secluded corner of the orchard, then to think of a leprechaun whom he might seize and squeeze out the price of a whole row of the best reserved seats! What pots of gold Jimmy discovered at rainbows' ends; what plunder of robber bands in secret caves; what wishes he wished in series of threes! Well, we all have wished and imagined the same things, I suppose, only we get over such nonsense as we grow older. Jimmy never did.

He came to the city. He did not at all intend to stay there. He would merely remain long enough to make a fortune and then return to dazzle everybody with his splendor and munificence for the rest of his days. If Jimmy's dreams had come true poverty would have been abolished in that little village of his, I can tell you.

But the dreams didn't seem to come true. Jimmy wasn't much more than an errand boy at first and it was rather rough sledding for him. The boss didn't call him in and after telling him that he had observed with gratification the evident devotion to the business he, Jimmy, had displayed, make him a junior partner. The only time the young man was called into the sacred presence during his first year was when he was informed that the next time he took an hour and a half to go from Market street to State street and back he would be fired.

He rose to his clerkship, for, in spite of his dreaming, he could and did work in a way and he was liked. Nobody could help liking Jimmy. He had little to say for himself, but he had a wonderfully ready smile and an equally ready sympathy for anybody's troubles. He was careless with his money, too, it may be remarked. He didn't have a great deal, but what he had anybody could get away from him. He was what is known as an "easy mark."

JIMMY OPENED THE DOOR FOR HER.

In the course of a few years he had one of the great happinesses of his life. He met the princess. She was the only daughter of his employer and was young and beautiful. Jimmy opened the door for her as she came in one day and she smiled graciously at him as a princess should, and ten minutes after that Jimmy had won her blushing acknowledgment of her love for him and her father's consent to their union. The same old partnership followed, of course. Just then Tammit, the chief clerk, touched him on the shoulder and said: "If you've got those invoices ready, Mr. Traut, I'll take 'em."

For two years that happiness lasted and then the princess married Albert P. Wrenshaw of Wrenshaw & Biddles. Perhaps that ought to have cured Jimmy, but it didn't.

At last Jimmy married. If Mrs. Traut was not really the princess, she was at least a mighty capable woman and did wonders with Jimmy's small salary. It was certainly a wonder that she could make it stretch to the needs of that family, for it got to be a sizable family in time. She was rather intolerant of Jimmy's dreaming—his speculations on the convenience, for instance, of a tablecloth that whenever spread instantly covered itself with a square meal, adjusted in size to the appetites of any number of persons who should sit around it; or a carpet that would solve the question of family transportation to Michigan for the annual two weeks' vacation. It was nonsense. But for all that Jimmy feasted royally on the rare viands of the magic tablecloth and voyaged on the carpet, not only to Michigan but to all the Spice islands, distant Adens and Tom Tiddler's grounds of which he had ever heard or read; and the children feasted with him and journeyed with him.

People used to say, "Jimmy Traut must have a hard time of it." It did look a little that way to a superficial observer. Up in the morning early, down to the mill that ground him. Work, work! Day in and day out, rain or shine, wet or dry, and for recompense shabby clothing, scanty fare and the bare, mean shelter that he called home. And yet when the doctor told him that there wasn't any chance, Jimmy said, "I hate to go, doctor; life has been very sweet to me."

A little later he said, "If I had three wishes——" and smiled.

He didn't say any more, but the smile never left his face. It was there when they tiptoed up to look at him through the little oval of glass.—Chicago Daily News.

Does Her Own Stretchin'.

After being without a girl for a week, the mistress of a Harlem apartment was showing an applicant over the flat. She had been liberal in her promises of privileges in the way of afternoons and nights off. She had even gone so far as to extend the hour of the girl's return on these nights and to agree to her using the sewing machine after her work was done.

The new girl seemed pleased, and the mistress was beginning to hope. They walked back into the dining-room and the girl had actually removed one pin from her hat. Then her smile faded and a question mark appeared.

"Do you do your own stretchin'?" she demanded.

"Do we do our own what?" asked the puzzled mistress.

"Stretchin'," repeated the new girl.

"I don't understand."

"Stretchin'," repeated the girl for a second time. "Do you put all the stuff on the table at mealtime and stretch for it, or do I have to shuffle it around?"

The family are "stretchin'" in earnest now, and will until they get a girl who is willing to wait on the table as well as cook the meal. The matron's household vocabulary contains a new word.—New York Tribune.

It's Time Well Used.

"Why do most of you men in this neighborhood wear long whiskers? They're a great nuisance to the man who wears them."

"Wall, I guess they ain't. We don't have t' waste time puttin' on collars an' neckties.'

"But think of the time you waste washing and dyeing them."

"Humph! When a man 'round here washes 'is whiskers that ain't time wasted."

JOINT WHEAT RATE

HEARING AT WALLA WALLA COMES TO A CLOSE.

General Distance Tariff Rates Declared Unreasonable and Discriminatory, but Time Will Be Required for Adjustment. Sound Markets Best.

Walla, Walla, June 30.—The state railroad commission declares that the wheat shippers of Eastern Washington have established the fact that the main markets of Puget Sound are superior to the market of Portland and that they should have the advantage of joint wheat rates. The commission desires time to work out the details of adjusting the rates and meanwhile the shippers and railroads are invited to submit further testimony and suggestions.

Distance Tariffs Unreasonable

The Walla Walla shippers have also convinced the state railway commission that the general distance tariff rates now in force on the railroads in this state are "unreasonable, discriminatory and unjustifiable," but the commission admits that the adjustment of these rates so as to give a square deal to all sections of the state will be a difficult problem.

At the conclusion of the hearing the commission issued the following statement:

"Upon the question of establishing joint wheat rates, the commission is satisfied that the complainants have established by the evidence that the markets of Puget sound are superior to the market of Portland and that an injury results to the producer and shipper unable to reach Puget sound markets and that an order should be made establishing joint rates on wheat

Formal Order Deferred

"The commission has not worked out the details connected with the promulagtion of such an order and the formal findings and order upon this question will be announced at as early a time as the commission can do so. And the further hearing on this question is continued by the commission for this purpose.

"Under the evidence adduced at this hearing the general distance tariff rates now in force by the railroads are, in the opinion of the commission, unreasonable, discriminatory and unjustifiable. The adjustment of the different general distance tariffs involves a great amount of detail work and most careful consideration, having regard to the rights of all sections of the state, and will require time and consideration in its preparation. While considering the details the commission would welcome any suggestion from the shippers, railroads or any other interested party.

"Regarding the complaint of discrimination against the shippers on the line of the Eureka Flat branch of the Washington & Columbia River railway, the commission is not prepared at this time to announce what its findings will be, and the matter will be taken under advisement by the commission."

The commission also finds Bellingham entitled to terminal rates on business originating in O. R. & N. territory, the same as from Great Northern territory.

GOVERNMENT OFFERS PANAMA CANAL BONDS

Washington, July 3. — Secretary Shaw has offered to the public $30,000,000 bonds of the Panama canal loan authoried bv recent act of congress. The bonds will bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent, will be dated August 1, 1906, and interest will be payable quarterly. They will be redeemable at the pleasure of the government at the end of ten years, and will be payable thirty years from date

The bonds will be exempt from taxes or duties of the United States and will be available to national banks as security for circulation. The bonds will not be sold for less than par. All citiens will have equal opportunity to subscribe for them, and the bids must be submitted to the department on or before July 20, 1906

Want Jute on Free List.

Pendleton, Or., July 3.—At a meeting in this city the Inland Empire Wheatgrowers' Association adopted a resolution calling on the next legislature to use every possible means to secure a jute mill for the state of Oregon to manufacture grain and wool bags, and also asking the legislature to memorialize congress to remove the tariff from jute and the manuafctured products of jute.

State Treasurer's Statement.

Olympia, July 2.—State Treasurer Mills has given out a statement of cash balances at the close of business June 30: General fund, $363,474.77; current school fund, $353,831; C. E. P. and R. institutions, current, $15,780; permnaent, $52,374.47; total in all funds, $1,232,150.83; less overdraft of $12,320.62, leaving balance on hand $1,219,830.21.

Fisheries Conference Postponed

Bellingham, June 30.—The Dominion fisheries commission has decided to postpone the conference with the Washington state authorities until after the present fishing season.

BEHIND ON AUTO LICENSES

Owners of Machines Have Generally Neglected to Renew.

Olympia, June 28.—Of the more than 600 automobiles and motor vehicles actually known to be in this state, but 275 have paid license for this year, and of those which are entitled to wear the numbers more than half are new machines; that is to say, they have been brought into the state this year. Of more than 450 licensed last year, but 105 have renewed.

These facts were disclosed at the office of the secretary of state when inquiry was made concerning licensed autos. As in the case of corporation licenses the state laws provide that licenses for automobiles shall be for the twelve months ending May 31. All the old licenses, even if they were issued during last May, expired at the end of that month. The licenses are not good for a year from the date the fee is paid, unless it be paid June 1.

The figures of the delinquents show for instance, that but three autos owned in Spokane which were licensed before May 31 last have renewed, while thirty new machines have been licensed there this month. Seattle shows eighty-one new machines and fifty-eight renewals, while Tacoma shows twenty-two new licenses and nineteen renewals.

PRESIDENT AGAIN SAYS HE IS NOT A CANDIDATE

Colorado Springs Colo., June 30.—W. A. Conant, of this city, who was a delegate from New York to the first national Republican convention more than fifty years ago, recently wrote a letter to President Roosevelt asking if he intended being a candidate for the presidency at the expiration of his present term. Mr. Conant has just received the following reply.

"White House, Washington, June 21, 1906.

"My Dear Mr. Conant: The president thanks you for your letter of the 17th inst. and cordially appreciates your kind expressions concerning himself. He says, however, that you will have to vote for some other Republican candidate next time.

"Conveying to you the president's best wishes, I am, sincerely yours.

"WILLIAM LOEB, Jr.,
"Secretary to the President."

MUCH WORK IN LAST HOURS OF CONGRESS

Washington, June 30.—The final report on the agricultural appropriation bill containing the meat inspection provision was accepted last night, the senate eventually agreeing that the government should pay the cost of inspection. A number of senators expressed themselves as willing only to accept the house provision because it was attached to an appropriation bill and a deadlock would cause the failure of the supply bill. All the appropriation bills will be ready for the signature of the president today. The final adjournment is expected this afternoon.

Conference reports have been agreed to upon the following measures, which were thereby passed:

General deficiency appropriation bill.

Bill creating a bureau of naturalization and immigration.

Pure food bill.

Lake Erie canal bill.

SHIP OWNERS REFUSE OFFER OF ARBITRATION

San Francisco, June 30.—By the action of the shop owners all hope of a speedy settlement of the strike on the waterfront which has been in progress for a month has vanished. The efforts of Mayor Schmitz to bring about a settlement by requesting both sides to the controversy to arbitrate their differences have failed and the strike promises to be long drawn out.

After considering the mayor's communication for nearly a week, the executive committee of the United Transportation and Shipping Association has sent a reply to the mayor, refusing to arbitrate on the ground that the seamen are receiving the largest wages of any men in their line in the world and stated that therefore there was nothing to arbitrate.

Hoch Wants State Distillery

Topeka, Kan., June 30.—Gov. Hoch is in favor of the establishment of a state denatured alcohol distillery in Kansas. "Such a distillery," said the governor, "would furnish means for employing a large number of convicts, and the court could not declare the law unconstitutional on the grounds set up against the state oil refinery measure. This law would have the same effect that was expected of the oil refinery measure, in that it would reduce the price of light and fuel to the consumers."

Twenty Millions in Gold

Seattle, July 3.—The last day of fiscal year closed at the Seattle assay office with receipts of more than $878,000 in gold from Alaska. The receipts for the past fiscal year are roughly estimated by those in charge at the assay office to be $20,000,000, much greater than ever before in the office. The exact official figures will be compiled this week.

BEGINNING TO SEE

CZAR'S EYES SAID TO HAVE BEEN OPENED.

Announcement of "His Majesty's Own" Regiment of Sympathy With Parliament Causes Court to Realize Something Must Be Done to Save Throne.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The campaign which the opposition elements in parliament are waging to compel Emperor Nicholas to dismiss the Goremykin ministry and accept the principle of a responsible ministry promises to be successful soon. Both the emperor and the court are being frightened into surrender by the alarming spread of revolutionary ideas among the troops.

When the Preobrajensky regiment, "His Majesty's Own," pronounced its solidarity with Parliament at Krasnoe Selo, less than a dozen miles from the Peterhof palace, the emperor's eyes opened and the court began to realize that there was only a step from that to declaring allegiance to parliament as against the government.

Even the procurator of the holy synod, M. Pobiedonostseff, who this week celebrated the sixtieth jubilee of his entrance into the service of the state, and who has been much at Peterhoff recently, is said to have reversed the position of a lifetime and to have advised the emperor to yield to the demand for a responsible ministry as the only means of preserving the throne.

Government's Sudden Fear

The government's sudden fear of affronting public opinion after finding the army infected with the revolutionary propaganda is shown in the hurried grant of a new trial to seven men condemned to death at Riga, the acquittal of six others and the commutation of death sentences imposed on three murderers of the foreman of the Putiloff iron works.

The news from the provinces shows that general anarchy is growing. In Altarak and Tauride provinces the peasants are abandoning the fields, and in Tula province roving bands are marching through the country, dragging in their wake not only the workers from the fields but the domestic servants of the gentry.

Conservatives Bow at Last

The only conservative group in the lower house of parliament, which is headed by Count Heydon, has at last bowed before the storm of radicalism and declared in favor of the Constitutional Democrats' argarian problem, including the expropriation of state, church, crown and private lands, insisting only on their distribution into private holdings.

The agrarian scheme drawn for the government by the minister of agriculture is now completed, but has not been finally approved. It still rejects the principle of expropriation, but contains enormous concessions from the program announced by Premier Goremykin three weeks ago, by providing for the distribution of all lands belonging to the state in European Russia, but neither the crown lands belonging to the emperor nor the lands belonging to members of the imperial family or the church are included in it. Besides, it contains the original features providing for the distribution of the lands of private holders, which will be sold through the Peasant bank, and the colonization of peasants, etc.

Comes Too Late

Such a scheme proposed at the opening of parliament might have helped to stem the tide, but wrung from the government it comes too late.

Parliament seems practically to have abandoned its attempts to frame legislation. Its whole energy is directed to attacking the governmentby the medium of interpellations, for the double purpose of strengthening its authority with the masses and ousting the ministry.

PRESIDENT SIGNS RAILWAY RATE BILL

Washington, June 30.—The president late last night signed the railroad rate bill

The senate during the afternoon agreed to the conference report on the railroad bill, which passed the measure, and also passed the joint resolution which makes the rate bill go into effect sixty days after approval by the president.

Senator Tillman, who called up the conference report on the rate bill, renewed his attack on the pipe line amendment as being in the interest of the Standard Oil Company.

Crack Regiments for Manchuria

Victoria, B. C., June 30.—Steamer Kaga Maru, just arrived from the Orient, brought news that owing to the disturbances in Manchuria incident to the evacuation, Viceroy Yuan Shih Kai, of Chili, is sending ten regiments of his foreign drilled Chinese army to Central Manchuria. The Chinese troops will garrison the district between Tieling and Changtu, following the withdrawal of the Japanese.

Russian Army Departs

Harbin, June 30.—The last considerable portion of the Russian army of occupation has departed for Russia. A force of railroad and frontier guards remain. There will be no further withdrawals, it is said, before May, 1907.

WOMEN AND FASHION

A Cause for Regret.

When I was a bride in a new home with little to do, I encouraged my husband to allow his clothes and personal belongings to lie about, as I had plenty of spare time to pick them up and put them away. A stranger in a strange neighborhood, time hung heavily on my hands, so I welcomed the small tasks of brushing and laying away in order the garments left on chairs and bed. He was busy and I idle a great part of the time, so I imagined myself a model wife and felt sorry for those men whom I occasionally saw sweeping the front porches or dusting rugs for their wives. I determined that my husband should never be henpecked.

But years have brought wisdom, at least in a small measure. As long as clothes were new and no mending to be done, when little or no entertaining took my time, while family cares were slight and when time slept on flowers, my plan worked very well; but at present I look back on those days and wonder where my common sense had flown to. If any bride is making a similar mistake let her take warning. It is so easy to form habits and so hard to break them up. The men whom I pitied in my ignorance were really only properly trained when they sent their own laundry downtown, brushed their own clothes, put away books and papers, dressed themselves for church without calling downstairs three or four times for help, took a hand in household tasks in emergencies, and were amply able to keep track of their belongings. And there is no time like the first days of married life for fixing such helpful habits. Many a time my husband insisted upon helping me, but I was too particular and did not like to have my own ways disturbed.

At first the husband may be busier than the wife, but time brings about a change and the home duties crowd thick and fast. My husband is doing his best to correct the effects of my foolishness, but it is hard for both of us. My ideas of neatness have fixed in me a rooted dislike to awkwardly-folded garments and bureau drawers left open, which is hard to repress. It is hard for me to have anyone help, though I am trying to overcome that feeling. I have come to the conclusion that the henpecked husbands are those unfortunate men who have no share in the work of the home, thus making them like guests in a disorderly house, where one pair of hands tries to do everything, instead of partners in a delightful place where mutual help brings in mutual enjoyment.—Mrs. K., in Ladies' Wor'd.

Hints to the Seamstress.

Perhaps everyone may not know that a second gathering thread run just below the first will cause gathers to lay more evenly, and will do away with stroking.

Tailors make use of the unusually short needle called "betweens" for their felling and other fine handwork. Women who are fortunate enough to know about these handy little needles all like them very much indeed for hemming and felling, as they are more conducive to fine work than the larger ones.

The legislature of New Brunswick has passed a law admitting women to practice law on the same terms as men.

The twenty-fifth woman admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States is Sarah Herring Sorin of Tucson, Ariz.

London leads the world in the matter of women's clubs. Twenty-one years ago there was not a single institution of the kind. Now the total membership is over 30,000.

Mineola (L. I.) Trinity church of Roslyn is to have a new building to cost $40,000, that amount to be given by Mrs. Clarence T. Mackay. She recently established a parish house to cost $10,000 in memory of her parents.

Quite a remarkable woman is postmistress at Iron Mountain, Texas. She is 84 years old, has held the position for over fifty-three years and has served under twelve presidents, beginning with President Pierce, and under both the Confederate and United States governments.

Physical culture for babies has opened a new and profitable employment for women in New York. There are many rich parents who seldom bother about exercise for themselves, but who want their babies to grow up straight-limbed, deep-chested and strong, and it is well not only for the babies, but for the nurses who get most of the work. One woman can put half a dozen babies in as many hours through their daily stunts. Every muscle the baby has gets its share of the exercise, and careful mothers have the gymnastics continued until the little ones are big enough to work alone in gymnasiums.

The Horizon Line.

"The average girl's horizon is bounded on the north by her clothes, on the south by her social relations, on the east by her private hopes, and on the west by her income—four solid walls that shut out very thoroughly the world's light and movement." This serious charge, brought by a recent critic of the sex, is based on the statement of the employer of a large number of women that not one in twenty of them ever knows anything of contemporary events, or will ever be fit for promotion beyond mechanical work.

Many newspapers have a department "Of Interest to Women." The index of is contents for a month in one newspaper would be instructive reading for women. Club quarrels, which begin with abuse and end in tears; discussions of long finger-nails; the edicts of "beauty doctors," and the perennial servant question—these testify to the limit of the horizon of women as it appears to the experienced editor.

By and by, when education shall have had a little better chance at girls, and when women shall have "found themselves," they will accept the home with its problems as a matter of course. The woman will regard it as the man regards shop or factory—as a place for work, but also as a place which commands, even in work hours, an utlook upon a larger world.

When that happy day arrives, the things "Of Interest to Women" will include the English education bill as well as the local school committee, the Russian douma as well as the "Rainy Daisies," the regulation of railway rates rather than the latest divorce, and the abrogation of the concordat by France rather than the petty jealousies of the village denominations.

It will not then be as easy to bound the average girl's horizon, and life for both men and women will be both more interesting and more useful.—Youth's Companion.

When Packing.

Don't pack clothes in a trunk which has not been used for some time without airing the latter; it may have been lying in a damp corner.

Don't begin to pack before you have collected together all the things required, else you may, at the last moment be obliged to squeeze some heavy article in the top of the trunk, and thus crush lighter articles.

Don't forget that a dress bodice or blouse must have the sleeves stuffed with soft paper, and any crushable trimmings, such as lace or chiffon, should be stuffed out with rolled-up tissue paper, otherwise all the freshness will be gone.

Eating.

The woman who overeats has only herself to thank for the unpleasant results. She knows better. If she doesn't one experience ought to teach her. The woman who undereats or who eats what simply "tastes" and does not nourish her need not consider herself intelligent.

NEW FRENCH CAPE AND AFTERNOON PROMENADE GOWNS.

One of the queerest effects was seen recently on a summer evening coat of pale mauve, which is pictured in the large group. A long braid of thick satin ribbon down the back gave a sort of stepladder effect, ending in a rigid and perfunctory bow at the end. The same braided ladder of ribbon is now seen on skirts and even in daintier designs on sleeves and bodices. It shows how far the vogue for ribbon and bow trimming has gone. Entire boleros, jackets and gowns are made of alternating fancy ribbons and lace with trimmings of bows in the same or harmonizing ribbons.

The second idea given is of yellow taffeta with yellow lace insertions. The yellow chiffon vest is crossed with taffeta lacings. The boa is of yellow marabout feathers and the yellow chip hat has yellow roses and a black osprey.

The next pink lingerie frock has insertions of valenciennes lace. The pink straw sailor is trimmed with black ostrich tips.

The last gown is a mixed gray canvas with white silk and black soutache braid.

THE MAN THE PEOPLE WANT

One of the candidates for nomination for state senator in New Hampshire pledges himself, in a letter addressed to the public, to do what he can to "aid any movement or pass any laws which will put the government of the state in the hands of the people, where it belongs." Such straightforward statements upon matters of public concern made by a candidate for nomination begets confidence on the part of the people—a belief that the candidate would, as an official, legitimately represent his district. A number of states already have legal provisions by which the people dictate to the Legislatures who shall be chosen senators. The people of Oregon have just made use of this power. Several states are working for the direct primary law—the law which makes it impossible for corporations or interests to control conventions — the law which would make it impossible in this county for any monied interest, by process of trickery politics, to obtain control of the machinery of taxation. The direct primary is a law for the people; against the man who may desire to play the game of politics for personal gain, and against those interests which seek to control party conventions for financial benefits to be derived. The candidate who is not ashamed of his position and who has a proper appreciation of the favor he asks at the hands of the people will have no hesitancy in coming out, as did Winston Churchill in New Hampshire, with a plain, manly declaration or pledge as to his official course, if elected. Whether it be on the question of direct primaries without the intervention of delegates or conventions, or on the question of just and equal taxation of all property within the county, the candidate who realizes the strength of the new wave of straightforward moral principle, and openly declares himself prior to the conventions will find his strength steadily increasing as the days go by.

MRS. HUGH A. TAIT

Passed Away After Short Illness at Seattle General Hospital.

Mrs. Mabel Tait, wife of Hugh A. Tait, former assistant corporation counsel, and a well known Seattle lawyer, died last night at Seattle General Hospital of peritonitis, which set in a few days ago, subsequent to the birth of a little daughter one week ago last Friday. A surgical operation was performed Monday in the hopes of restoring Mrs. Tait to health. That night she took a change for the worse and yesterday her husband, relatives and friends gave up all hope.

Mrs. Tait was well known in Seattle. She was of a lovable and cheerful disposition, and her friends made rapidly remained steadfast. The news of her death was received as a great shock, for there were not many who knew of her serious condition.

Mrs. Tait was born in New Zealand twenty-six years ago. She was the daughter of James Brownlee Dick and Margaret Dick, the former a prosperous rancher near Port Angeles. Her father died eight years ago. Her mother survives her, and for several years has resided in this city. Besides a husband, mother, and infant daughter, the following brothers and sisters are left: Mrs. Charles O'Brien, Riverside, Cal.; Mrs. Geo. Lotzgessel, Dungeness; Mrs. G. M. Davis, James Dick, Wm. Dick, and David Dick, Dungeness; Mrs. H. M. Fisher and Mrs. Frank P. Fisher, Port Angeles, and Miss Tot Dick, this city. Al. J. Tennant, Charles Tennant and George Tennant, all well known young men of Seattle, are nephews.

Funeral services for Mrs. Tait will be held Friday morning at 11 o'clock from the family residence 1150 Seventeenth Avenue North, and will probably be conducted by the Rev. Rev. J. P. D. Llwyd of St. Mark's Church.—Seattle Times. July 4.

Mrs. Frank Fisher and Mrs. Morris Fisher attended funeral services.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction

When Maxim, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he felt sure the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was therefore a great surprise, instead of disappointment. It is the same with the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements. What they do claim, is that it will positively cure diaarhoea, dysentery, pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. For sale by all druggists.

SEGUIN NOTES.

Yes we celebrated, and we are proud of the fact and the manner too. Not a single unpleasantness marred the day or evening. The day was spent witnessing the many sports as they were listed. It was a perfect day. The evening was spent witnessing fireworks and dancing; the music was all that could be desired.

Three new arrivals on July 4th, at the following homes: O. V. Dean, a daughter; R. W. Craig, a daughter, and Chas. McDougal, a son.

A number of young people took a trip to the capital city across the straits, this week.

Farmers are now busy making hay, and old Sol is doing his part as Tuetday was a warmer—ninety in the shade.

The Fort Flagler b. b. team defeated the Dungeness aggregation on the Seguin grounds Sunday last, by a score of 2 to 4, being a fine game.

John W. Donnell died here on the night of July 4th of heart failure. He was one of the oldest inhabitants of Clallam county. He was born at Bath, Maine, August 22, 1822 being nearly 74 years of age. During the gold excitement of 1849 he took passage on a sailing vessel for California, later he came overland to Portland and in 1854 he arrived at Dungeness and one year later built one of the first cabins on Seguin, where he has resided ever since. He built the first house of worship ever constructed on Seguin. The funerai took place on Friday, burial at Seguin cemefery.

DO YOU KNOW

That Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only medicine sold through druggists for woman's weaknesses and peculiar ailments that does not contain large quantities of alcohol? It is also the only medicine, especially prepared for the cure of the delicate diseases peculiar to women, the maker of which is not afraid to take his patients into his full confidence, by printing upon each bottle wrapper all the ingredients entering into the medicine. Ask your druggist if this is not true.

"Favorite Prescription," too, is the only medicine for women, all the ingredients of which have the unqualified endorsement of the leading medical writers of the several schools of practice, recommending them for the cure of the diseases for which the "Prescription" is advised. Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a free booklet, and read the numerous extracts from standard medical authorities praising the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are made, and don't forget that no other medicines put up for sale through druggists for domestic use can show any such professional endorsement. This, of itself, is of far more weight and importance than any amount of so-called "testimonials" so conspicuously flaunted before the public, in favor of the alcoholic compounds.

The "Favorite Prescription" cures all woman's peculiar weaknesses and derangements, thus banishing the periodical headaches, backaches, bearing-down distress, tenderness and draging-down sensations in lower abdomen, accompanied by weakening and disagreeable catarrhal, pelvic drains and kindred symptoms.

Dr. Pierce and his staff of skilled specialists may be consulted free by addressing as above. All correspondence is treated as sacredly confidential. By consulting in this way the disagreeable questionings and personal "examinations" are avoided.

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser contains some very interesting and valuable chapters on the diseases peculiar to women. It contains over one thousand pages. It is sent post paid, on receipt of sufficient in one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only, or 21 cents for a copy in flexible paper covers, or 31 cents for a cloth-bound copy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce as above.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative, two or three cathartic.
