BOARD HEARS ARGUMENTS

Pro and Con on Increased Assessments Thruout the County.

Upon request of the commissioners, representatives of the timber, farming and business interests, and committees from the City Council and Boosters Club, met with the Board of Equalization yesterday for the purpose of considering the proposed increase in assessment of county realty.

Owing to insufficient notice the Tax-payers League of Dungeness and Seguin was represented only by Dr. McGeorge; he was ably seconded, however, by Commissioner Bugge. The timber interests were represented by Lewis, of Seattle, attorney for the Laceys, and by Ed. Gierin of Port Crescent and the company's attorney, T. F. Trumbull.

The meeting was opened by Dr. McGeorge at the request of Chairman Filion. He wished to know if there had been applications for reductions. There had not, but would be, and the meeting was called to discuss the question in a general way. He then stated it to be the opinion of the people of the county that the timber lands had been assessed too low in proportion to the balance of realty of the county. The assessors returns for 1906 having just been made, it was impossible to say what the relative standing on the tax rolls for the coming year would be. No data had been given out.

Commissioner Christopher, in reply, quoted figures showing the per centage of increase, and drew a comparison between the rate of assessment of his district and the prairie of Seguin. The east and middle districts combined (exclusive of Port Angeles) were assessed at $540,417 in 1904; in 1906 at $744,113, an increase in valuation of $172,-706, or about 30 per cent. The west district was assessed at $1,-219,025 and had been raised to $2,358,015, an increase of $1,-138,390, or practically 100 per cent. Seguin prairie averaged $6 an acre, not going over $10 or $15, less than a third its actual value.

McGeorge replied that the lands on Seguin had all been raised 100 per cent, yet, while the timber land was worth several times its assessed value, Seguin prairie was not. The improved portion is comparatively small and exclusive of buildings, etc., is not worth $45 per acre; the unimproved portion is not actually worth the assessed $6 per acre as it stands.

Attorney Trumbull asked for facts and not opinions as to the value of timber lands. He had recently bought forty claims at an average of $10 which were assessed at more tnan that; the law required assessments to be based on the selling price of lands. While values were not settled on Seguin as the prairie was gradually working up to its basis of equality, those of Dungeness had been staple for years and form a fair basis for comparison. He gave the selling price of a number of large ranches, from 100 to 200 acres, as being $100 and over per acre. He spoke particularly of the McInnes ranch of 200 acres which cost $20,000 and yielded a net revenue of from $6,000 to $8,000.

Dr. McGeorge replied that the selling price included buildings, dairy herds, and all equipment; the land alone was not figured at over $75; the profit was due as much to the accessories as to the land itself. Further, it was a well-known fact that everywhere the rich man escaped with less taxes, proportionately; these ranches were not listed high enough. There were but a dozen of them. It was not just to claim the raise of the whole east end is too low because it is too low on a half dozen ranches, nor to use those ranches as a basis of valuation. Timber land had been rapidly increasing in value, several sales had lately been made at high figures. Prices paid by timber men to owners of small holdings are not any basis of valuation at all. Timber should bear its just proportion of taxes in accordance with increased value. In the east end, save a few small tracts, there is no timber. Except a few improved farms, the whole east end is of little value; has no timber; much of it wont pay for clearing. The east end has not been increasing in value and its increase in assessment should not be used as a basis for the west end.

Attorney Lewis, who represents the Lacey holdings that, next to the Goodyear and Merrill-Bliss lands, pay the highest rates, claimed that there was very little real timber in the west end; that it grows on gravel soils; land of no value; danger of fire great; assessed too high; increase of 100 per cent a rank injustice. Recent big sales no standard of value; as likely as not prices claimed paid were greatly in excess of actual considerations; he personally knew, altho he didn't give figures, that the Robinson sale was given at higher price than paid.

Christopher stated that the heavy fir timber lay in a narrow strip extending north from Forks; great portion of country was covered with timber of little value, not 20 per cent of the west end is good fir land. A. A. Smith suggested that perhaps there is no timber down there at all, which summarized the apparent contention of the timber men to a nicety.

E. E. Seevers, for the business men, directed the attention of the commissioners to the fact that the increase in the districts was proportionate and just, because the timber land had heretofore been assessed too low. To double the assessment of improved farming land, and to double that of the best timber land twice, brought them on an equal basis.

THE SOLDUCK HOT SPRINGS

Health Resort as Seen by Representative of Olympic-Leader.

Hot Springs, Aug. 6, '09.

After a stay of a month at Clallam county's noted health resort, our party returns home thoroughly convinced that these springs will one day be the mecca of summer tourists as well as health seekers.

The springs are in a beautiful little valley, 15 miles from Lake Crescent. The Solduck river runs through and the mountains rise abruptly to a height of several thousand feet on either side. The accommodations at the spriugs are a little crude, and necessarily must be, so long as everything is transported over the narrow mountain trail on the backs of ponies. But Mr. Storm, the proprietor, anticipating the needs of his patrons, has recently increased the number of bath rooms to six, with seven bath tubs, and one booth for hot mud baths.

A number of those here find good accommodations at the hotel, but the largest number are camped in tents. Supplies can be had, and trout fishing is good.

The largest per cent of the people here are suffering from rheumatism. Several of whom have been greatly benefitted from baths and from drinking the water. One man had to be assisted into the house when he came three weeks ago; he leaves for home tomorrow practically a cured man. A lady who came out when our party did, and who was badly crippled from rheumatism, so that she had to be lifted bodily onto her pony when leaving the lake, found no diffculty when near the springs in springing into her saddle at the sight of a bear. The lady was off the pony resting.

About two miles up the valley are the falls and gorge—a second Niagara. The waters fall nearly 100 feet, then rush down the gorge another 100 feet to the pool. Nature has provided a point of observation 200 feet below and 100 feet above the pool. To stand there and look forward was an outlook both awe-inspiring and soul-searching; with the scenic grandeurs answering for the uplift, and the majestic gray-faced mountains, the grand old trees, and rushing waters to shrink the beholder to microscopic littleness in comparison with its stupendous heights and depths. Some day, when the iron-horse has traversed this valley, and the mighty forest has been subdued, this Western Niagara will rise with its sister in the East in point of interest.

Another point of interest is the park and lakes near the summit of a mountain to the west of us, 4,500 feet above the ocean, or 2,900 feet above the Hot Springs, reached by a trail three miles in length. The largest lake is half mile long and very deep, supposed to be the crater of an extinct volcano. Those who have climbed this mountain say that the same is beyond description. The ocean, Vancouver Island, and range upon range of mountains greet the vision.

The tourist who has not visited the Hot Springs of the Solduck has missed a number of the beauty spots in the great State of Washington. W. B. W.

The political crime of the age is the failure of free citizens who are armed with the ballot to take any part in the election of their public officials and lawmakers. Just at this moment, when a hundred million of Russian peasants who are sodden in ignorance and steeped in the degradation with which centuries of despotism can overwhelm a people are struggling desperately to gain control of their national government, thousands and even millions of the free citizens of the United States are voluntarily abandoning their political rights and duties and are refusing to have anything to do with their public affairs, and, above all, they contemptuously discard the ballot.

HERITAGE OF CIVIL WAR.

Thousands of Soldiers Contracted Chronic Kidney Trouble While in the Service.

The experience of Capt. John L. Ely, of Co. E, 17th Ohio, now living at 500 East Second street, Newton, Kansas, will interest the thousands of veterans who came back from the Civil war suffering tortures with kidney complaint. Capt. Ely says: "I contracted kidney trouble during the Civil war, and the occasional attacks finally developed into a chronic case. At one time I had to use a crutch and cane to get about. My back was lame and weak, and besides the aching, there was a distressing retention of the kidney secretions. I was in a bad way when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills in 1901, but the remedy cured me, and I have been well ever since."

The Song of the Shirt.

With fingers weary and worn,
With eyelids heavy and red,
A woman sat, in unwomanly rags,
Plying her needle and thread.
Stitch, stitch, stitch!
In poverty, hunger and dirt,
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch
She sang the "Song of the Shirt."

"O men with sisters dear!
O men with mothers and wives!
It is not linen you're wearing out,
But human creatures' lives!
Stitch, stitch, stitch!
In poverty, hunge rand dirt;
Sewing at once, with a double thread,
A shroud as well as a shirt.

"Work, work, work!
My labor never flags,
And what are its wages? A bed of straw,
A crust of bread and rags,
That shattered roof and this naked floor,
A table, a broken chair
And a wall so blank my shadow I thank
For sometimes falling there.

"Oh, but for one short hour—
A respite, however brief!
No blessed leisure for love or hope,
But only time for grief.
A little weeping would ease my heart,
But in their briny bed
My tears must stop, for every drop
Hinders needle and thread!"

A woman sat, in unwomanly rags,
Plying her needle and thread.
Stitch, stitch, stitch!
In poverty, hunger and dirt.
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch—
Would that its tone could reach the rich!—

HOW WAX TAPERS ARE MADE.

The Manufacture of Night Candles and Paraffined Paper.

In the manufacture of wax matches and the long and slender tapers which are known as rats de cave (cellar rats) the method introduced into France by Pierre Blesmiare in the middle of the seventeenth century is still in use, says the Scientific American.

The method is practiced to-day in the Carriere factory at Bourg la Reine, near Paris. The cords of which the wick is composed pass into a basin of melted wax heated by a small furnace, from which they are drawn through a perforated plate to a large wooden drum which is turned slowly by hand. The operation is repeated two or three times, the size of the hole through which the cord passes being increased each time. When the waxed cord has attained the required size it is wound on large reels in skeins of 400 or 500 meters (about 1,500 feet), which are boxed and shipped to wholesalers. It is also furnished in lengths of from 3 to 10 meters (10 to 33 feet) folded as often as may be required for convenient packing. These tapers are now used chiefly by wine merchants and by sextons in lighting church candles.

The very short and thick candles called veilleuses, or night candles, are composed of a mixture of wax and stearine. The moulding machine differs considerably from the apparatus used for ordinary candles, although the principle of the operation is unchanged. After the little candles have cooled the attendant removes them from the moulds and conveys them to women, who put them into tin cups, which prevent the escape of melted wax during combustion, and pass them to other women, who label and pack them.

Paraffined paper is made simply by drawing long rolls of paper by means of a series of cylinders through a steam heated trough containing a solution of paraffine and stearic acid and thence to a large wooden cylinder on which it is rolled.

A UNIQUE MARKET.

It Is in Fairbanks, Alaska, in Rich Tanana District.

The world's unique game market is in Fairbanks, Alaska. Fairbanks is on the Chlena river, in the rich Tanana district, of which it is the thriving metropolis. It lies close to the arctic circle and in common with other communities in the valley of the Yukon has an average temperature of about 10 degrees below zero during the months of November, December, January, February and March, says the San Francisco Chronicle. At intervals during the long winter season the thermometer goes as low as 75 degrees below the zero mark, but such an excessive temperature is not absolutely necessary for the successful operation of the Fairbanks game market, although, it is true, the intensity of the arctic cold is the chief factor in establishing and maintaining the town's claim to distinction in the item of its game market. It is almost superfluous to suggest that the market, operating as it does only during the months named, is spared the expense of artificial refrigerating apparatus.

Now, here is where the novelty begins. Instead of skinning the game and curing up the carcass as in the ordinary, everyday market, the deer, the moose or the bear, as the case may be, is simply stood up on the floor of the market, which is located in one of the principal buildings of the town, and allowed to freeze solidly, or, probably it has frozen solidly within thirty minutes after it was killed. The low temperature that continuously prevails permits the keeping of the game in this shape for months at a stretch, as once the carcass is frozen there is no decay until the freezing weather is over.

One may enter the market and order a bear steak cut from bruin, who has occupied a particular corner in the establishment, looking for all the world as if he were alive, for several months, or a haunch of venison from the deer that has been in another corner for an equally long period; or, perchance, a choice cut of the lordly moose or the kingly caribou that have been making lifelike poses in other sections of the market. Or, if it be a mountain sheep or a goat that the fancy craves, the same opportunity is offered for selection. The animals appear just as they did in life, and the person who visits the place for the first time is apt to imagine himself in a menagerie rather than a market.

The flavor and quality of the game under such conditions is said to be unexcelled. The freezing process and the length of time that is allowed to elapse between the killing and eating of the animal seem to impart to the flesh a tenderness and ripeness that are characteristic.

The market attracts attention to its location by placing on the sidewalk before its door, just as the cigar man puts out his wooden Indian, a bear, a moose, a stag or some other animal from its stock in trade. Last season the same bear was used for the purpose every day for five months, and was then cut up into steaks that were pronounced to be the most delicious that had ever been eaten in a locality that is famous for its well-flavored bear steaks.

WHEELING THE BABY.

Opinions of a Young Lawyer Who Trundled a Perambulator.

A certain young lawyer, whose business connections bring him much in touch with some corporation interests, has not had his head swelled by his rapid rise in the last few years, and has vetoed some of his wife's ambitious to climb the social ladder. He has a baby daughter to whom he is very much devoted and occasionally, on a Sunday afternoon, will take the youngster for an airing in her perambulator.

A few Sundays ago the lawyer and his wife were out with the baby carriage when they met the head of one of the big concerns for which the lawyer holds a retainer walking with a friend.

"I never was so mortified in my life!" exclaimed the wife, after the magnate had passed.

"You must not wheel the baby carriage in public again!"

"Nonsense," replied the husband. His further remarks were interrupted by his brother, who had been hurrying to overtake him.

"I heard a compliment to you just now, Jim," said the brother. "You know Steele, the traction man?"

"Just met him," said the lawyer.

"So did I," said his brother. "He was talking with his friend about you. I heard him say, 'A very promising young lawyer—must be a decent sort of chap, too. He's making a lot of money, but he isn't too proud to push his own baby carriage. I'll have to keep an eye on him.' Pretty good, wasn't it?"

The lawyer's wife hasn't had anything to say about the family dignity since the incident.—New York Globe.

His Idea of a Gentleman.

Cardinal Newman's definition of a gentleman has probably never been surpassed. Here it is:

"It is almost the definition of a gentleman to say he is one who never inflicts pain. He has his eyes on all his company; he is tender toward the bashful, gentle toward the distant and merciful toward the absurd; he can recollect to whom he is speaking; he guards against unseasonable allusions or topics which may irritate; he is seldom prominent in conversation and never wearisome.

"He makes light of favors while he does them and seems to be receiving when he is conferring. He never speaks of himself except when compelled, never defends himself by a mere retort; he has no care for slander or gossip, is scrupulous in imputing motives to those who interefere with him and interprets everything for the best. He is never mean or little in his disputes, never takes unfair advantage, never mistakes personalities or sharp sayings for arguments or insinuates evil which he dare not say out."

Policeman Moved.

A certain well-known Chicago policemean, whose last name is not unlike Murphy, walked unannounced into the Hon. Timothy Sullivan's room at Saratoga while Mr. Sullivan was earnestly talking to another man.

"Hello, Murphy! Glad to see you! Do you play checkers?" asked "Tim."

"I haven't played in a long time, but I guess I could," replied Murphy.

'All right," retorted the New Yorker, looking toward the door; "it's your move."

Mr. Murphy thought a moment and then went out.

Penniless Girl Discovers She Is an Heiress When She Buys a Book.

Mlle. Bertha Chavanne, a penniless young French girl who lives in St. Etienne, discovered the other day under cuirously romantic circumstances that she was heiress to a fortune of $83,500.

She lived for some years with her great-aunt, Mme. Berthon, who died intestate at the age of 85 a few weeks ago. Mme. Berthon had no direct heirs and her property was to be divided up among a number of distant cousins. Accordingly a sale of her personal effects was arranged for at the public salesrooms.

Mlle. Chavanne, who had been devoted to Mme. Berthon, attended the sale in order to buy something to keep as a memento. But Mlle. Chavanne is poor, and although she bid for various articles of furniture and treasured curios of her great-aunt's, some one always went a little higher and put the article beyond her reach.

At last an old book was put up. It was a devotional volume from which Mlle Chavanne had constantly read to Mme. Berthon just before her death. The girl determined to have it at any price. Nobody else showed any desire to possess the volume, so it was knocked down to her for a few shillings.

The auctioneer handed down the volume and it was passed along the crowd to Mlle. Chavanne. As she took it in her hands a folded sheet of paper dropped out. She opened it and found it to be a legal-looking stamped document bearing her great-aunt's signature. She as puzzled by the quaint praseology of the document and showed it to her relatives.

They took it to an attorney, who pronounced it the last will and testament of Mme. Berthon, duly signed and attested, and bequeathing her entire property to her beloved niece, Mlle. Chavanne.

"I know," said a business man of wide experience, "how crowded with studies the schools are now, and I should be loath to recommend the introduction of any new ones. But I do wish sometimes that the boys and girls who are giving time to so many little fads could be induced to give more to the art of writing letters." He did not refer to the mere art of writing correct English or the art of writing an interesting personal letter, but to the preparation of really good business letters, in which the matter in hand should be treated not only clearly and concisely, but also courteously. The need he mentioned is one which is felt by thousands of business men, and may well claim the attention of young people of both sexes who look forward to business life. The ability to write intelligibly is not rare, but the capacity to write in such a way as to produce a pleasant personal feeling for the house one represents is extremely rare. Many writers fail in the matter of courtesy—either in way of constant omission of articles and constant abbreviation, or, more commonly, in neglecting to give the other man the benefit of the doubt. In other words, the fault with most business letters is a fault of poor manners rather than of mental deficiency. "Never, in any circumstances, allow your first letter, in a case of difference, to be harsh or discourteous," said a business man to one of his clerks. "No matter how much you think the man has injured us, give him the benefit of the doubt. Assume that he has made a mistake rather than that he has misrepresented. To take the other course is to enter a blind alley. You may have to turn round to get out of it."

SEGUIN NOTES.

At the request of his good wife, about thirty-five of P. W. Gallup's friends dropped in on him Monday evening last to remind him of his sixty-third birthday. The evening was spent in games and song, after which ice cream and cake were served. Mr. Gallup acknowledges that it was a complete surprise on him and he looked it when the crowd arrived.

A number of Seguin residents are adding new sewing machines to their house furnishings; a traveling salesman has been here the past week.

C. F. Seal is giving his personal attention to his business on Seguin during the absence of Wm. Peterson.

Mrs. Herman Sindars was a passenger for Seattle Monday last, where she will visit with relatives and see the circus.

Mr. and Mrs. Thad Wagoner are in Seattle seeing the sights.

Commissioner Bugge is receiving the plaudits of this community for the stand he took in regard to taxation at the last meeting of the Board. If the lumbermen think Seguin land is worth $100 per acre, we wish they would come and buy it.

The burning of a slashing on Angeles road has caused a great deal of trouble to the telegraph and telephone lines.

Dr. McGeorge is erecting a fine dwelling on his property.

R. R. Parks joined his wife here Thursday and they will visit with J. L. Keeler.

Miss Mildred Borst, accompanied by the children of H. F. Sindars returned Thursday from a visit up sound.

Dr. McGeorge transacted business in the Queen City the first of the week.

It is rumored that Seguin will soon have an uptodate meat market; let it come.

Bert Mathews is selling apples.

The Seguin ball team has chartered the Rosalie for an excursion to Friday Harbor, Sunday 26th inst.

The Sub-District Convention for the counties of Jefferson and Clallam, Tacoma district of Epworth League wrs held here from Tuesday to Thursday. Delegates were in attendance from all the towns in both counties.

The intense itching characteristic of salt rheume and eczema is instantly allayed by applying Chamberlain's Salve. As a cure for skin diseases this salve is unequaled. For sale by all druggists.

CLALLAM BAY

From the Record

James Keltner has sold to Rev. Fred Lamoreux 160 acres of land along the Clallam river, two miles from town, known as the Westbrook place. The price was something over $2,000. Mr. Lamoreux expects to make his permanent home there next spring and make a dairy farm of the place.

Lou Sands of Forks, left here on Saturday for Colville in the eastern part of the state for the benefit of his health. His home at Forks has recently been gladdened by the advent of a baby girl.

James Keltner had one of his legs cut by falling against a mowing machine while at work yesterday. The wound is a painful one and will lay him up for a week or more.

"Make Hay While the Sun Shines."

There is a lesson in the work of the thrifty farmer. He knows that the bright sunshine may last but a day and he prepares for the showers which are so liable to follow. So it should be with every household. Dysentery, diarrhoea and cholera morbus may attack some member of the home without warning. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which is the best known medicine for these diseases, should always be kept at hand, as immediate treatment is necessary, and delay may prove fatal. For sale by all druggists.

Hansen - Tyrrell

Miss Mae Tyrrell, one of the fairest and most popular young ladies of Angeles social circles was married in Seattle at Trinity Parish last Friday evening to Mr. S. Calvin Hansen, of Portland. Mr. Hansen is in the employ of the Alaska Steamship Co. and is one of the best known transportation men on the sound and south-eastern Alaska, having been in several official capacities on the company's steamers.

The wedding was private, a few friends only being present. The wedding party was joined at Townsend by Miss J. A. Trumbull and Mr. Allan Trumbull who were to officiate as bridesmaid and groomsman. After the ceremony the wedding party went to the Olypus Cafe where a special wedding supper was served. The happy couple then took the boat for this city where they will make their home for the present.

Mrs. Hansen has many friends in this city, all of whom hold for her their best wishes for her future happiness.

Home-Made Grain Box.

There is enough grain stored on every farm to warrant the building of a grain box, particularly when one can be built for a very small sum and with but little labor. Such a box is easily constructed from dry goods boxes, using a number of the same size to obtain the desired capacity and setting them end to end, fastening them together or not as desired. The fronts are cut so as to obtain the proper slant and then a cover is made so that the box or boxes may be locked if necessary. Divisions are made in the inside in accordance with the quantity of each kind of grain to be stored. The boxes are set on legs about fifteen inches high and each of these legs has an inverted cap of tin placed on it near where the leg joins the box. These tins will prevent vermin in the shape of rats and mice from easily climbing up the box and getting at the grain. If desired the several divisions may be lined inside so as to make them more vermin proof. The illustration shows how simple this grain box is.—Indianapolis News.

THE HOME-MADE GRAIN BOX.

Shearing Sheep by Machine.

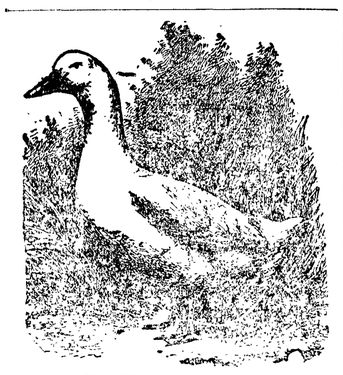
I have used a sheep-shearing machine for the last five or six years, says a correspondent of Rural New Yorker. The machines have been very much improved in that time. The first knife, or clippers, that I had very soon got clogged, and did poor work on sheep that had fine or oily wool, or had any wrinkles. The one I now have, used on the same machine, will clip any kind of a sheep or wool. Now as to the direct question, Has the machine any advantage over hand work? So long as we had the old-fashioned shearers, who could turn off thirty to forty sheep a day, well sheared, I had no need of a machine. As the old men died off, or were unable to shear any longer, and because of the scarcity of sheep—few young men took up shearing—it became a problem to know how to get the sheep well and economically sheared. The men who were unused to it not only cut the sheep and tangled up the wool, but they would shear only a few sheep per day, which made it expensive. For this reason I put in a machine.

Seed Corn Breeding Pays.

Corn-breeding work, still in its infancy, already has spelled profit for many growers. Material increases in yield, due in large measure to planting improved tested seed, have been so general that farmers everywhere are adopting better methods of seed selection. And other countries, noting what has been accomplished by American corn breeders, have taken steps to follow their example. Recently an American seed-corn breeding company shipped 1,300 bushels of corn to the agricultural department of the Egyptian government. The same company has also exported an order of 10,000 pounds of seed corn to Australia, where it will be used in breeding work conducted by the agricultural authorities of that country. It is to the corn belt of America that the peoples of the earth come for corn. Our corn crop is the envy of all civilized countries which cannot or do not grow corn.

White Pekin Ducks.

The White Pekin is a popular duck which has a distinctive type especially its own, and differing from all others in the shape and carriage of its body. The legs are set far back, which causes the bird to walk in an upright position. In size these ducks are very large, some reaching as high as twenty pounds to the pair. Their flesh is very delicate and free from grossness, and they are considered among the best of table



WHITE PEKIN DUCKS.

fowls. They are excellent layers, averaging from 100 to 130 eggs each in a season. They are non-setters, hardy, easily raised and the earliest in maturing of any ducks

Guineas.

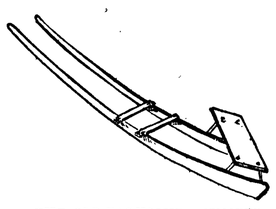
The Guinea is said to be a native of western Africa and is a very active bird of a rather wild nature. The wild nature of the beautiful fowls is an objection with many poultrymen. There are two breeds of guineas, the pearl and the white guinea. The pearl guinea is of a wilder disposition than the white guinea. Both breeds are about the same size. The flesh of the pearl guinea is darker than that of the white, which makes the white guinea preferable as a table fowl. Both breeds of guineas are good summer egg producers. They begin laying in April or May and continue to lay until late in the fall. The pearl guinea is very sensitive about having her nest disturbed and often leaves the nest if a part of her eggs are removed. The white guinea is not so particular about her nest and will continue to lay in the nest if only one egg is left in it. Our white guineas often lay in the nest boxes in the poultry house with the chicken hens. Guineas are valuable insect destroyers. They will eat insects that the chickens will not, such as the potato bug and gooseberry worm. I noticed our guineas picking the worms off the gooseberry bushes and not a worm escaped that the guineas could reach. They picked the worms off as high as they could jump.

How to Girdle Grape Vines.

The girdling or ringing of grapevines is done to increase the size of each cluster. It is not done generally, however, although some find the method profitable. The bark is entirely removed below the fruit cluster about a month before the period of ripening which hastens maturity about a week or two and enlarges the bunch and berries. The sap ascends through the pores of the wood to sustain growth, but the elaborated sap descends through the wood and the bark and can go no lower than the point at which the girdle is made, where it stops and is utilized in feeding the grapes. Some injury is done the vine below the girdle, and hence it may not pay on an extensive scale.

Jumper to Break Colts.

A Canadian farmer says that there is nothing yet discovered so useful in breaking a colt in winter as the old-fashioned "jumper." A jumper is simply made of two saplings twenty feet or more long, weakened about five feet from the butt ends by shaving the upper sides half through, so that the poles sag when the rider is on the seat and the colt hitched. The seat is supported by four posts and the horse is placed far out in the shafts. A colt cannot go over backwards with this.



THE OLD-FASHIONED JUMPER.

Good Tonic for the Hogs.

If the hogs are growing as fast and doing as well as they can do, nothing is needed in the way of medicine. But if they are a little off in any way, a few doses of the following will straighten them up.

Wood charcoal, 1 pound; sulphur, 1 pound; sodium chloride, 2 pounds; sodium bicarbonate, 2 pounds; sodium hyposulphite, 2 pounds; sodium sulphate, 1 pound; antimony sulphide, 1 pound. Pulverize and thoroughly mix. The dose is a large tablespoonful for each 200 pounds weight of hogs to be treated, given once a day. The hogs will eat this mixed in their food, unless very ill, when it should be poured into them, mixed in water.

Beardless Barley Crop.

Beardless barley is entirely free from barbs, unless the seed is accidentally mixed with some other variety. It does not yield so well as some of the bearded sorts, nor is it a good malting barley. It is a good feed for pigs, sheep or fowls and for horses when crushed. Its distinguishing advantage is that it stands up well and ripens very early, coming off the ground soon enough to let the clover or alfalfa sown with it take possession before it is much weakned by shading. It is the best nurse-crop yet found for clover or alfalfa, and for that purpose is recommended.

Field of a Million Acres.

The largest fenced pasture field in the United States is on the Blackfeet Indian reservation, in Montana. This field contains 1,500,000 acres, and the 200 miles of barbed wire fence inclosing it have been completed. About 400,000 pounds of wire were required for the work. There are 60,000 head of cattle wintering in this pasture, half of which belong to the stockman, who are paying for the privilege of pasturage.

Feed for Mare in Foal.

While in foal the mare does not necessarily require food different in quality from that fed at other times, but, all things being equal, the quantity should be somewhat larger. Oats are the best feed, yet shorts and bran may be fed with beneficial results. Mashes can be given occasionally, and where possible cooked feed may be supplied at night three times a week.

MOTHER LOVE.

If I might build a palace fair
 With every joy of soul and sense,
And set my heart as sentry there
 To guard your happy innocence;
If I might plant a hedge too strong
 For creeping sorrows to writhe through,
And find my whole life not too long
 To give, to make your hedge for you.

If I could teach the laden air
 To bear no sounds that were not sweet,
Could teach the earth that only fair,
 Untrodden flowers deserve your feet,
Would I not tear the secret scroll
 Where all your griefs lie closely curled,
And give your little hand control
 Of all the joys of all the world.

But ah, I have no skill to raise
 The palace, teach the hedge to grow;
The common airs blow through your days,
 By common paths your dear feet go;
And you must twine, of common flowers,
 The wreath that happy women wear,
And bear, in desolate darkened hours,
 The common griefs that all men bear.

The pinions of my love I fold,
 Your little shoulders close about;
Ah! could my love keep out the cold,
 Or shut the creeping sorrows out!
Rough paths will tire your darling feet,
 Gray skies will weep your tears above.
While round your life, in torment beat,
 The impotent wings of mother love*
—Pall Mall Gazette.

ADAM AND EVE.

I Don't blame girls for falling in love, because they've nothing else to do; but I can't see why fellows want to. They've cricket and footer and all sorts of things, without making asses of themselves.

Ted Johnson is an awful swell at cricket, and he plays footer for the county, so he hadn't any excuse for bothering about girls; but he went and got engaged to Violet all the same. She's my sister, and four years older than I am. (I'm fifteen and in the lower fifth.)

He and Vi had just "fallen in love," as they call it, when I came home for the summer holidays, and they made awful fools of themselves over it. They had just fallen out when I came home for Christmas. The whole of both families made fools of themselves over that.

It was a jolly nuisance, because Minnie Johnson and I were rather chums. I don't think much of other girls, because they're so silly; but Minnie isn't. She isn't quite so good as a boy at doing things, but she's sharper at thinking of them. It was she who gave me the tip to put wax on the back of Uncle George's chair to fetch his wig off. There was rather a row about that. He was going to cut me out of his will, and the mater made a terrible fuss; but Minnie heard about it and came over to our house and told Uncle George that she proposed it. She got round him somehow. (Girls can.) He said she couldn't help it, because she was a daughter of Eve, and I was like Adam, "fondly overcome by female charm." It always puts him in a good temper when he makes a quotation. So it was all right afterward—only they called us Adam and Eve.

A fellow has to stick up for his friends as well as his family. I wasn't going to be down on Minnie just because Ted and Vi had quarreled. I went and whistled behind their back fence the first afternoon I was home, and she came out and stood on the big roller and looked over it (the fence, you know). I said "Halloa!" and so did she. Then we stared at one another.

"Well," she said at last, "you've looked at me long enough to know me. What do you think of me?"

"Your hair is redder than ever," I told her.

"I know a boy who likes red hair," she said.

"Who is he?" I asked.

"It doesn't matter to you," she said, "because I'm not to speak to you in future, mother says."

"Well," I told her, "you're speaking to me now, anyhow. If you don't want your mother to see, you'd better come this side of the fence."

I tried to catch hold of her and pull her over but she got out of the way.

"It isn't red," she said.

"All right," I agreed; "it isn't then. Come on."

So she jumped down, and we went and had a slide on the pond behind Brooks' barn. Then we went to Mother Green's and had some tuck. (The governor had given me a tip.) Some one saw us there and told our mothers. There was a row, of course.

The next day we went on the golf links and made slides on the mud. (You can make a ripping slide on mud when it's half frozen.) We thought we were safe from them all there; but we ran right into Ted. He was looking at something and shaking his head. He stuffed it in his pocket when he saw us, and held out his hand to me.

"Glad to see you, old chap," he said. "I—er—this is a very unfortunate business." He gave a sort of groan. "Well, I'm glad you two aren't bad friends, anyhow."

"We are," Minnie said. "At least I am. He says my hair is red."

"Never mind," he said. "I know a boy who likes red hair."

Then he went off. I asked Minnie again to tell me who the bounder was, but she wouldn't. So I tried to think what I could say to aggravate her.

"Your brother is a silly cake," I said. "I bet that was Vi's photo that he was looking at."

She got in a rage directly, and stamped her foot.

"It wasn't," she contradicted. "He doesn't care a bit for her; and she's a beast."

"She isn't," I said; "and if you say it again I won't speak to you."

"She's a beast," she repeated directly.

I turned round and walked off one way, and she turned round and walked off the other; but somehow we met round the corner. I was going by without taking any notice of her, but she laughed over her shoulder.

"I know a boy who likes red hair," she said.

"He's a beast," I told her.

"Yes," she said; "he is! But if he took me out he'd take me home."

"Come along then," I said.

So we made it up again.

The day after we went to Delsham. I had a catapult. We were trying if they would break greenhouse glass, when who should come along the road but Violet! She was reading a crumpled old letter, and she put it in her muff when she saw us. I knew she wouldn't tell, so I didn't care.

She gave me some chocolate drops, and offered some to Minnie; but the little beggar put her hands behind her.

"No, thank you, she said.

"It's about her brother," I explained. I knew she must feel pretty bad about it to refuse chocolates. (They were big ones, with sweets on top.)

"Yes," Violet said, and gave a sort of sigh. "You are quite right to take your brother's part, dear; but—well, I'm glad you and Jack are friends, anyhow. Goodby." She walked on.

"If you call her a beast again," I said, "I won't speak to you; and I mean it."

"You ought to," Minnie agreed; "and I wasn't going to. Jack, that was one of Ted's letters and she'd been crying."

"Rot!" I said. (She had, though!) "Vi wouldn't cry about him. She could get engaged to a dozen fellows if she wanted to."

"She doesn't want to. She wants Ted. That's just it."

"Well," I said, "there's no accounting for taste."

"No; I know a boy who likes—red hair."

"Then he can take you out to-morrow."

"All right." She laughed. "But you've taken me out to-day. So you may as well be agreeable. I'll race you to the sign post."

So we raced. Then we had another practice with the catapult. I hit a can that a milkman was carrying and she hit the man. So we had to race again. You should have seen the chap jump!

Mother and father were out when I got home, so Vi gave me my tea. She was very agreeable and talked to me about Minnie. She was a dear little thing, she said, and I mustn't quarrel with her, whatever I did.

"Girls are different from boys, Jack dear," she said. "They say things sometimes and don't mean them, and pretend they don't like people when they do, and make out they like other people when they don't. If Minnie ever pretends she likes some one else better than you, don't you believe her; and if you ever quarrel make it up again directly. People ought to."

"Umph!" I grunted. (My mouth was full of muffin, and I hate being preached at.) "Then why don't you make it up with Ted?"

You never know how girls will take things. I'm hanged if she didn't begin to blub, and then ran right out of the room. I couldn't make it out at first, but I saw it before I had finished the muffins. She wanted to be engaged to him again!

I told Minnie about it next morning. (It was Christmas eve.) She said I was right "for once"; and she'd tell me something, too. "Ted wants to be engaged to her again."

"Then why don't they?" I asked. "Nobody wants to stop them that I can see."

"They're both obstinate," she explained—"like you are."

"I can't be 'both,'" I objected.

"No," she agreed; "I meant myself, too. That's how it is with Ted and Violet. If they knew how the other one felt about it, they'd make it up directly; but they don't."

"Let's tell them," I proposed.

"Donkey!" she said, "I know what we will do. You tell Violet that Ted wants to speak to her about something very important, and he would be very much obliged if she would meet him in Delse lane, by the big oak, at three this afternoon. I shall tell him that Violet wants to see him there."

"Umph!" I said. "I may be stupid, but I've sense enough to know he won't believe that. Violet would cut off her head before she'd ask him. She isn't the sort to run after a fellow."

"No—o," Minnie said; "she wouldn't. I know what she would do, though. I'll tell him that you told me that she always walked to the oak about three, and you believed it was because she thought he might be there."

"Umph!" I said. "They'll find out in five minutes that we've been stuffing them."

"They'll find out something else in five seconds," she said. "They're better at finding out things than you are!"

Ted danced Minnie around the room and gave her a florin when she told him. Vi went red, and smiled—and kissed me.

"I don't know that I shall go," she said. "He's no right whatever to ask such a thing; and mamma would be dreadfully cross. I really can't— Are you sure it was three? And by the oak?"

"It doesn't matter if you aren't going," I said.

"Don't be mean," she begged. "You've been such a nice, kind boy, Jack; and I'll give you a shilling. Tell me?"

"Three o'clock," I said, "by the oak. Thanks."

Minnie and I hid behind a tree and saw them go into the lane. We waited half an hour before we went down there. He had got his arm round Vi (she pulled it away when she saw us), and they were grinning like Cheshire cats!

"You young—story tellers!" Ted said.

"You dears!" Violet said.

"I suppose you're engaged again?" I asked.

Thanks to you two," Ted said.—The Sketch.

IRONING AS DONE IN COREA.

Laundress Beats Cloth with a Club—Amusements.

Flatirons form no part of the outfit of a Korean laundry. "Ironing is done by beating the cleansed cloth with clubs."

Upon certain days the narrow and generally unkempt streets of Japan's new protectorate resound to the rhythmical tapping of multitudes of girls who are "finishing the wash"—imparting the polishing touches to the white garments with which the Koreans clothe themselves.

Taking a garment that has been dried after the wash, the girls place it upon a stick of wood and then, with other sticks, pound every square inch of the surface until the article has been given a crisp freshness that the Koerans like as well as the finish given garments in this country by the flatiron.

This is only one of the queer customs that may be observed in Korea, says the Philadelphia North American. Sometimes work can scarcely be distinguished from play. Not infrequently the traveler sees gangs of Korean coolies dumping earth to mend the highway or performing some other labor. As they work a man sings and beats a drum, and the laborers keep time to the music.

Some of their amusements are as novel. When they finish their tasks and have time for recreation, the Korean young men do not repair to vacant lots with ball and bat or take part in athletic contests. During the winter they engage in stone battles, which are fiercely fought and in which many are severely wounded. In the summer they attach long straw-rope swings to the limbs of tall trees and spend hours gayly swinging.

Often three or four may be seen enjoying the same swing, standing upon one another's shoulders like acrobats in a circus.

Tokens Sent by Jockeys.

One of the greatest of living jockeys has a most remarkable collection of tributes from admirers, unknown and otherwise. It contains, among other strange things, pawn tickets, writs and summonses contributed by unsuccessful backers of his mounts, talismans of all kinds to bring him luck in his races, sermons and tracts for his spiritual welfare, recipes for all kinds of ailments from coughs to a tendency to corpulence, forms for insuring against accidents, offers of marriage accompanied by bundles of photographs of would-be wives, welchers' tickets and a pair of wornout boots with the legend: "All that is left of them after walking from York to London; backed all your mounts."

A few years ago, after his horse had lost an important race, a well-known turfman went up to the jockey and made him a formal and public presentation of a silver snuffbox, saying that if he would look inside he would see the kind of horse he ought to ride in the future. The jockey opened the box and found in it half a dozen fat snails.

It was the same satirical owner who on another occasion presented his jockey with a sumptuous casket, which on being opened disclosed a wooden spoon, and to a third jockey who had failed to win an important race he handed a pair of crutches bought from a beggar on the course.—Minneapolis Journal.

Tennyson's Prediction.

Tennyson predicted the day of his death. Just a year before his death friends of the poet were visiting Aldworth house. The late Lord Selborne turned to Tennyson and remarked: "You ought to be happy here." "Ah," sighed the poet, "I have only a year to live." His hearers laughed at the remark, but it was a prophetic assertion that was verified to the minute.

 As a song bird, Miss Belle!"

TRUTH ABOUT ANGORA GOATS.

Their Ability to Clear Brush Is in Some Cases a Detriment.

There are three possible sources of profit in Angora goats—the fleece—their wonderful ability to clear brush—and their natural increase from year to year (about 50 per cent). Then their value as food cannot be ignored, for Angora mutton is pretty good if you can forget that it is "goat"—or else not let the other fellow know it. They also fertilize their pasture lands and the skins, although inferior to the common goat, can be used for leather, writes Claude H. Miller in Farming.

They really possess little value as milk producers because what is gained on milk is lost on fleece. Milking keeps the goats from growing and if they are worth having at all their mohair will produce more annually than their milk. The common milch goat is unquestionably their superior in this respect.

The one fact that even their malligners can't deny is their ability to clear waste brush land and convert it into pasture. Given brush briers, weeds and pasture land, the Angora will take the former in preference, as they are browsers by nature and thrive much better on rough, wild land. They will eat almost any kind of scrub stuff and even the poisonous weeds. By this constant browsing of the leaves the brush soon dies. Practically every kind of vegetation that grows from Maine to Florida is food for them. And they will thrive on ranges where sheep would almost starve.

The first thing then for a farmer to determine is whether this characteristic of eating everything in sight is an advantage or a detriment. If their browsing is going to destroy young growing timber in localities where timber is valuable and the cleared land practically worthless they are certainly a serious detriment. It's a question of forestry or goating. Don't try both in the same lot. In order to direct their energies where they will be appreciated they will have to be fenced in on a limited range. Then comes the question, will the cleared land be worth as much as the bare cost of the fence? and this doesn't mean an ordinary fence that will turn cattle, but something they can't crawl under, climb over or butt through and in the West a fence that will not only keep the goat in but the wolves and wildcats out.

A Neat Retort.

Mme. de Stael's daughter, the Baroness de Broglie, was an extraordinary beauty. Her charms made such an impression on Prince Talleyrand, that in contemplating them, he was often deficient in his attentions to her highly gifted mother. One day, being on a party of pleasure on the water, she determined to confound him, and put this question: "If our vessed was to be wrecked by a storm, which of us would you strive to save first—me, or my daughter?" "Madame," instantly replied Talleyrand, "with the many talents and acquirements you possess, it would be an affront to you to suppose that you cannot swim; I should therefore deem it my duty to save the Baroness first."

SILVER NOW NEEDED

GOVERNMENT PROPOSES TO PURCHASE FOR COINAGE.

Stock of Bullion Has Been Exhausted for Over a Year—Purchases to Be Distributed So that Market May Not Be Unduly Affected.

Washington, Aug. 11.—For the first time in thirteen years the government has announced its purpose to purchase silver for coinage. Tenders are invited at the office of the director of the mint in this city on Wednesday, the 15th inst., up to 1 o'clock p. m., and every Wednesday thereafter until further notice. These tenders are to be for delivery at the Philadelphia, New Orleans and Denver mints, settlement to be on the New York basis of bullion guaranteed 999 fine. The treasury reserves the right to reject all tenders or accept such part if any tenders as may suit its convenience. It is understood that, anticipating that its reappearance as a purchaser might temporarily disturb the market unduly, the treasury has obtained control of considerable amounts for future delivery, so that it is in a position to drop out of the market for several months if desirable. The average requirements of the treasury department throughout the year will probably not exceed 100,000 ounces per week, and it will be the policy of the department, while keeping a reasonable amount on hand, to so distribute its purchases throughout the year that its demand will be uniform and not an element of uncertainty in the market.

Bit of Monetary History

From the resumption of specie payments in 1879 down to the year 1900 the constant increase in the stock of subsidiary coin required by the growing tade and population of the county was supplied by the recoinage of old and uncurrent subsidiary coins which accumulated in the treasury under the resumption act. In 1900, as this stock was running low, authority was granted in the monetary act of March 14 to the secretary of the treasury to divert bullion purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, for the coinage of silver dollars to the coinage of subsidiary pieces. Under this authority about $33,000,000 has been coined since 1900.

The stock of bullion in the treasury was exhausted more than a year ago, and since then no bullion has been available for the subsidiary use.

The stock in the treasury had become so low that it was apparent, according to the department, that the demands of a constantly enlarging trade could not be met without additional coinage. The secretary of the treasury was in doubt whether existing statutes authorized him to buy bullion for this purpose, and, moreover, was of the opinion that it would be a better policy to meet future demands for subsidiary coins by the recoinage of silver dollars in the treasury, and so recommended to congress. Congress, however, having failed to act upon his recommendation, Secretary Shaw requested an opinion from the attorney general as to authority to purchase under existing laws, and he received a favorable reply, based on section 3526 of the revised statutes. The policy now announced was accordingly determined upon.

Factor in Silver Market

The United States government has been in the past an important factor in the silver market. In preparing for the resumption of specie payments and the redemption of fractional paper currency issued during and following the Civil war, it began in January, 1875, a series of purchases ending in February, 1878, whch aggregated 3 - 603,915 fine ounces at an average of 1.188 per ounce.

The next appearance of the government in the silver market was under the Bland-Allison act of 1878. The purchase under this act was made at 12.1 5-16 per fine ounce, and the total expenditure for bullion under this act was $308,279,260, at an average price of $1.058.

Government Purchases Increased

The Bland-Allison act was succeeded by what is popularly known as the Sherman act of 1880, which enlarged the purchases of the government to 4,500,000 ounces per monnth. The total purchases under this act amounted to 168,614,632 fine ounces, at an average of $0.924 per ounce. The last purchase was made October 30, 1893, and was at 72 cents per ounce. From that date until the present the government has been out of the market for the purchase of silver except as agents of the Philippine government in the purchase of a little over 18,500,000 ounces, which was bought at an average of $0.54½. The lowest price for silver was touched on December 3, 1902, when the price on the London market was equivalent to $0.418 per fine ounce; the average for last year on the London market was 61 cents per ounce, and for the month of July last 66 cents per ounce.

NEW VOLCANIC ISLAND

Alaska Hunter and Trapper Says It Has Risen Since Last Spring.

Seattle, Aug. 13.—The report that a volcanic island had been formed in Bering sea, received last March, is confirmed by L. L. Bales, an Alaskan hunter and trapper, and by officers of the steamer Orizaba. Ths men were told of the island by officers of the United States revenue cutter Perry, who are reported to have visited it. The island is said to still be discharging streams of lava.

Mr. Bales states that he went close to the island in a sealing schooner. He estimated its height at 900 feet and length at about three miles.

"The island has come from the depths of the sea since last spring," said Mr. Bales. "I hardly credited the report when I first heard of it, but went close to it shortly afterward in a sealing schooner. There were streams of lava still running down into the sea from the crater, or one of the craters. The sea is almost covered by thousands of dead fish. They have been killed by the heat from the lava. Close to the island the sea almost boils It is rugged and about 900 feet high, or possibly a little more. The island is almost enveloped in clouds of steam and some smoke It lies about fifty miles west of Dutch Harbor, almost directly between the Bogoslof islands."

Capt. Truebridge, master of the Orizaba, was told by the captain of the cutter Perry of the existence of the island. The Perry approached the island, but on account of the steam and running lava could not make a thorough examination. She was to have left for the spot when the Orizaba sailed from Dutch Harbor.

TO TRY CHINESE LABOR ON ISTHMIAN CANAL

Washintgon, Aug. 13.—Chinese labor will be given a thorough test on the Panama canal. Contracts calling for 2,500 Chinese for canal work have been prepared, and advertisements will be issued by the isthmian canal commission in a few days, asking for proposals from labor agents.

If the initial 2,500 Chinamen prove a success, it is likely that many more will the taken to the isthmus to do the work, which is said to be too hard for the Jamaicans now employed there in large numbers.

Organized labor has offered many objections to the use of contract Chinese labor but the Jamaican workmen have proved inadequate, sufficient Spaniards cannot be had immediately to rush the work, and the Chinese are the last hope of the commission.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Taft, Chairman Shonts, of the canal commission, and other men prominently identified with the canal work are known to have delayed employing Chinese until it became evident that the other help available was not equal to the demands.

UNION MEN WILL FILL PLACES OF STRIKERS

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 13.—Second Grand Vice President Val Fitzpatrick has ordered the switchmen's strike here to end at once. Thes ituation as developed by the peremptory ending of the strike is said to be unique in the labor world. Mr. Fitzpatrick maintains that the sincerity of purpose of the brotherhood in its dealings and agreements with the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad must be upheld, and as he finds the strike was both illegal and unwarranted, and as the company will refuse to take back the strikers the duty of the brotherhood, through the grand officers, is to fill every striker's place with competent, trustworthy men, even if men must be taken from other railroads for the time being. About 260 men are affected.

Harriman Controls Wells-Fargo Co

New York, Aug. 13.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of Wells, Fargo & Co., in this city, the thirteen directors headed by E. H. Harriman and composed of the members of the present board, were elected over a ticket named by counsel for Walter C. Stokes, who has been heading an opposition movement among the stockholders. The full vote of the Harriman ticket was 47,508 to 26,216 for the Stokes representatives. Not only did the Harriman administration elect their directors, but they also succeeded in defeating every proposition advanced by the oposition party.

To Survey State Road

Vancouver, Wash., Aug. 15.—County Surveyor Bailey expects to start the survey in a few days on the state road which will be built from Llyle to Washougal. The counties through which this road extends are required under the law to pay one-third of the cost, while the rest is borne by the state. The entire length of the road will be about 90 miles. It will add another resource to Clarke county, as it will tend to develop the country above Washougal.

British War Office Scandals

London, Aug. 11.—The war office has issued the report of the royal commission which was appointed to investigate the South African war stores scandals. While the report acquits the British commissary officials concerned from the worst charges of corruption, it finds that the losses, equaling about $5,000,000, were due rather to grave mismanagement and incompetence than to fraud.

TO STUDY RATE LAW

RAILROAD LAWYERS HOLD MEETING AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Chairman of the Meeting Says the Ob ect Is to Learn What Is Required of the Roads to the End that the Law May Be Intelligently Obeyed.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 15—More than sixty lawyers representing all the larger railroads east of the Mississippi river, particularly those traversing the territory south of the Ohio river and the New England states, assembled here yesterday to make a detailed study of the provisions of the railroad rate law, which will go into effect Wednesday, August 29.

Ex-Judge Edward Baxter, of Nashville, Tenn., special counsel for several of the leading Southern railroad companies, the presiding officer, said:

Object of Meeting Stated.

"This meeting of attorneys was called by the executive and traffic officers of the railroads east of the Mississippi river and south of the Ohio river. Counsel of all the Eastern trunk lines were also invited to participate in the meeting although we afterward learned that the Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio and the New York Central roads, with some other companies, were holding a meeting of their own.

"A series of printed questions, asking opinions as to the meaning of various provisions of the interstate commerce act as amended on June 29 last, were presented to us for answer I answered them and my answers are being taken up one by one for discussion. Already some have been approved, some rejected and others laid over for further discussion. They involve many important subjects and cannot be discussed in one or two days.

Not for Evasion of Law.

"We have not met here to find any way to evade or avoid the new law. We are here solely to consult among ourselves and decide just what our clients will be compelled to do in order to carry out the provisions of the new measure. The questions are not secret, but they are lengthy.

"We would not object to making them public if the daily press would give space to print them in full, together with their answers. There are questions which, if printed alone with their answers, would be misunderstood by the public, so it has been decided to keep the questions to ourselves. It cannot be made too emphatic, however, that we are here on a peaceful mission and we do not expect to even communicate with the interstate commerce commission."

A large corps of stenographers is present to take in detail the arguments over the many points of difference among the legal representatives. A guard is stationed at the entrance to the committee room and strangers are not permitted to get within earshot.

GET CEDAR RIVER ROUTE

Fight Against Construction of Milwaukse Road There Collapses.

Seattle, Aug. 15.—The fight against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road's entrance to Seattle by way of the Cedar river and through the city's watershed, has collapsed. The King County Medical Society has officially announced that the decision of Prof. C. A. Abbott, University of Pennsylvania; Prof. W. T. Sedgwick, sanitary engineer, and Dr. Charles Harrington, of Harvard, would be accepted. These sanitary experts reported the railroad would not coontaminate the city water supply either during construction or operation. The fight against the road's coming by this route has been waged bitterly by the doctors, who claimed the water supply would be polluted. In railroad circles it is insisted rival lines inspired the opposition to the Milwaukee road.

DEFEAT FOR TICKET SCALPERS

Injunction Issued Against Them by Federal Court at Omaha.

Omaha, Aug. 15.—The case of the railways against the ticket scalpers of Omaha and Lincoln, has been decided by Judge Garland, of the federal court, and the injunction asked for against the brokers has been granted. Under the decision the brokers cannot traffic in reduced rate tickets. This case is one of a series instituted against the scalpers from Los Angeles, Salt Lake, and Denver to Indianapolis, St. Louis and Eastern centers, which have been uniformly decided against the brokers.

Dismissal of Appeal Recommended

London, Aug. 10.—The judicial committee of the privy council has recommended the dismissal of the appeal of Dunsmuir vs. Dunsmuir and Hopper vs. Dunsmuir. The appeal resulted from the suit of Edna Wallace Hopper to break the will of Alex Dunsmuir, her step-father, in which his brother, James Dunsmuir, former premier of British Columbia was the principal legatee.

Longworths Home from Europe

Oyster Bay, Aug. 13.—Representative and Mrs. Longworth, who arrived from Europe by the steamer St. Paul, have arrived at Sagamore Hill and will remain the guests of President Roosevelt for several days, when they will proceed to Cincinnati by way of Washington.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

STATE REPRESENTATIVE.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination of State Representative, subject to the action of the Republican county convention. C. W. THOMPSON.

The Direct Primary League has prepared the following pledge, which will be tendered to each candidate for the legislature: "I pledge myself, if elected to the legislature, to vote for the direct primary election law for the nomination of all candidates for the United States senate, house of representatives, state, county and municipal offices, as drafted by the Washington Direct Primary League, subject only to such minor changes as may be agreed to by the legislative committee of the Washington Direct Primary League."

No man who is favorable to the direct primary should hesitate to take such a pledge and no man who is not favorable to the direct primary should receive the votes of the people for the legislature; because no man who is afraid to trust the people to select their own candidates for office is entitled to act as a representative af the people.

Thurston county republicans adopted a resolution, last Friday, favoring the direct primary movement.

King county democratic central committee has endorsed the direct primary system.

It is expected the wheat warehouse which the Great Northern is building at Everett will be ready the first week in October; the capacity has been changed from the original plans and the building will be much larger, holding 1,000,000 bushels.

Unnecessary Expense.

Acute attacks of colic and diarrhoea come on without warning and prompt relief must be obtained. There is no neoessity of incurring the expense of a physician's service in such cases if Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is at hand. A dose of this remedy will relieve the patient before a doctor could arrive. It has never been known to fail, even in the most severe and dangerous cases and no family should be without it. WOULD ATTRACT MANY TOURISTS

Country Almost Inaccessible at Present Would Make Show Spot of West.

"Uncle Joe believes that the sooner the elk and other game are killed and the white man enters into possession of the West the better it will be for humanity and the country. And, I might say, as long as Mr. Cannon is speaker of the national house, just so long will it be impossible for the State of Washington to secure the passage of any bill creating a national park in the state."

Congressman Will E. Humphrey made the foregoing statement today in discussing the work of the state delegation in its endeavor to secure the passage of a law creating a national park in the Olympic Mountains. Residents of Jefferson and Clallam Counties have urged the congressional delegation to secure the passage of such an act.

It is believed the passage of an act making the Olympic mountains a national park would greatly benefit the State; the Olympics would furnish a greater show spot for tourists and pleasure-seekers than any other part of the country, not excepting even the Yellowstone National Park.

"The time is not far distant when the mountain ranges of Washington will become the Mecca of wealty residents of the East in search of health and recreation. It is my firm belief, said Mr. Humphrey, that if we could secure appropriations from congress for a national park to be established in the Olympic mountains, the delegation from this state would not only render a great service to the state but to the people of the entire country.

"The opposition of Speaker Cannon is due to his policy regarding expenditures. At the same time, knowing that Mr. Cannon has seen the State of Washington, it seem strange that it has been impossible to get his aid for small appropriations for these purposes. We secured $50,000 for the Rainier National Park by sidestepping the speaker. The money will be spent in road building. What is now being done in the Rainier National Park should be also done in the Olympics and in the country about lake Chelan."—Times.

Norman Govan

The funeral of Norman Govan, one of the most popular and highly respected ranchers of the East End, whose death occurred on Saturday last, was held at the home at 1:00 p. m., Monday the 20th the Rev. G. F. Graham, officiating. Interment was in Dungeness cemetery; the attendance, the largest of any funeral in the county for years, attesting the universal esteem in which he was held.

Norman Govan was born in Oregon in 1874; came to Washington in 1878; he was married to Ethel May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hooker, in 1904. One child has been born to them, a boy, who was lain to rest on the 28th of March, 1905. Of Mr. Govan's family, his wife, father, and five brothers, Peter, David, Chester, Walter and James, and one sister, Mrs. Grace Myers, are left to mourn his loss.

There is nothing so pleasant as that bright, cheerful, at-peace-with-the-world feeling when you sit down to your breakfast. There is nothing so conducive to good work and good results. The healthy man with a healthy mind and body is a better fellow, a better workman, a better citizen than the man or woman who is handicapped by some disability, however slight. A slight disorder of the stomach will derange your whole body, your thoughts and your disposition. Get away from the morbidness and blues. Keep your stomach in tune and both your brain and body will respond. Little indiscretions of overeating can be easily corrected and you will be surprised to see how much better man you are. Hunting Season Near at Hand and License Necessary

Hunters' licenses are now in order.

If you contemplate a few days in the mountains this summer, stalking deer and swelling the income of the powder trust; or,

If you have an engagement for later in the season at some nice, quiet farm house, right in the heart of the pheasant district, where you can shoot all day without getting pulled for poaching; or,

If the fuzzy-wuzzy ducky ducks look good to you; if there's anything in the "Call of the Wild" likely to tempt you there with a gun and a big ambition, better be safe and get a license, for the Game Warden might get you if you don't.

Imagine the feeling, after a day's sport in sylvan retreats, to suddenly find Chris. Armandt at your side.

"Fine deer you got, ain't it?" he'd say.

"You bet; killed it myself, too!" you'd answer.

"H'm—got a license?"

"Hey? Got a what?"

"License, L-I-C-E-N-S-E, license, come on, now, pungle up!"

Then, think of the embarrassment if you couldn't produce and had to go with the big warden back to civilization and a court house. There the judge would annex 25 big silver dollars, and the warden would take the deer. Licenses cost only a dollar, and they can be had from Billy Smith at the court house. With a license artfully concealed in your pocket, you can hunt from here to Mount Olympus and back again, and swear artistically at all the wardens in the state.—Apologies to the Call.

Hunting will soon be here. Just received a nice line of shot guns and rifles. Will be on sale at reasonable prices. We also carry a full line of ammunition. Come in and see them. H. Gutenberg Hardware and Furniture Co.
