The boys' club, known as the Knights of King Arthur, is in a flourishing condition with nearly a full quota of twenty-five members, and has already got its rooms into habitable condition. The Castle desires to express its hearty thanks to those who have so willingly contributed to support it and furnish its rooms. It is now proposed to start a second castle for boys of from 16 to 20 years of age, to meet on Saturday evenings. Contributions of pictures, books, magazines, games, chairs, etc., are still welcome. The organization is conducted by Messrs. Hamer, Barnett and Edwards.

A Thanksgiving Offering

In response to an appeal for relief, sent out by the school authorities of San Francisco, where the school property was destroyed, a general movement has been started in this state to make a Thanksgiving Day offering to the worthy cause. All children, and others as well, are asked to contribute. Remittances should be sent to Supt. Alfred Roncovieri, San Francisco, and County Supt. Risley should be notified of amount sent so the amount of Clallam county's contribution may be known.

MR. KIRSCHBERG TAKES CHARGE

Mr. Levy Bids Goodbye to Dry Goods Trade.

The change in the management of the Pacific Store Company has taken place sooner than we had anticipated, the wholesale house for which Mr. Kirschberg has been traveling having released him from his contract on the 15th of this month.

In retiring from the active management of the store, I wish to thank the ladies of Port Angeles and Clallam county and the public in general for their liberal patronage during the time that I have been in charge. Since the time that my management began the trade of the Pacific Store has increased 150 per cent., which fact is in itself a proof of the popularity of the establishment.

I bespeak for Mr. Kirschberg a successful renewal of his former popular career in the dry goods business in Port Angeles. Respectfully,

LEWIS LEVY.

In again assuming charge of my old business in Port Angeles, which I built up from its infancy and left temporarily three years ago, I wish, first to bear testimony to the popular and successful management of the same, during my absence from the city, by the retiring manager, Mr. Lewis Levy, and second, to assure my old friends and customers thruout the city and county that I will again lend my best efforts to caring for their interests in the various lines that our store carries.

I expect to not only maintain the era of low prices that has been inaugurated by the Pacific Store, but to give further evidence of our ability to buy below the market and give our people the advantage of eastern prices on all lines of goods that we handle.

I respectfully solicit a continuation of the liberal patronage now extended our store, and a renewal of the confidence of my old-time friends and patrons.

Respectfully,

JULIUS I. KIRSCHBERG.

A Special Fur Sale

Owing to an overstock of Fine Furs, which were late in arriving from the East, we have decided to offer every garment at a big reduction in price. The line is unusually fine, and cannot fail to please everyone. We also include in this special sale our fine line of Hats and Children's Coats. If you still need anything in this line it will pay you to learn our prices.

Commissioner Bugge came down from Port Williams Tuesday to make arrangements for repairs to the Burlingame bridge at Dungeness, 120 feet of which was taken out last week, the river cutting a new channel to the west. The Lost Mountain bridge also washed out. The Board engaged the Gate City Contracting Co. to make temporary repairs.

The Rebecca Degree gave another of their social evenings on Wednesday last and a very enjoyable time was had by those present. It is the intention to have one during each of the winter months.

To your horse as well as yourself. You need not suffer from pains of any sort—your horses need not suffer. Try a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment. It cures all pains. J. M. CULTIVATE SPIRIT OF PROGRESS

Say Not: "It Cannot Be Done" Find Ways and Means of Doing It

Every good citizen should believe in the town and community in which he resides. His object should be the welfare, growth and promotion of his town and its people. If you have no confidence in your town, its growth and improvement, move along, that your croaking may not prevent others from coming to help develop its resources.

By all means encourage every movement for the betterment of your home town. Work for it; help to improve it, in words as well as in actions. Do you want trade? Bid for it. Do you want business to come to your town? Encourage what you have. Do you want a prosperous town? Then never permit jealousies to rule your actions, but work together for common prosperity and mutual benefit.

On this subject the Boies Statesman, in speaking of the Seattle spirit, says:

Everybody helps in Seattle. That was well shown to those who have investigated conditions there, but this record of over-subscribing the stock of the proposed exposition in a single day is a concrete illustration of the spirit of the place that everybody can understand at a glance.

Seattle is not a place where one business man waits until he learns how much another has given. There is none there who hides out hoping he will be overlooked. The city has none who stands a committee off saying he has nothing to give. They all work and they all pay; they all pull together; they are always on hand when something is is to be done, and none of them declines to take the lead in any work when asked to do so. That is not a city where a few men have to wear out half a dozen pairs of shoes each trying to get others to do their duty with respect to some needed public undertaking; all they need is a policeman to prevent a crush at the subscription counter.

It is no wonder that Seattle grows. If all other places were inspired by the same spirit they would all grow far more rapidly than they do now.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN CLALLAM COUNTY.

Subscription Price $1 per year.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1906.

The last Thursday in November is the day set apart by President Roosevelt and Governor Mead for Thanksgiving Day, a day wherein every man, woman and child should bow their heads in prayer to their Maker for the multitude of blessings which He has seen fit to bestow upon them. He has been good to the sinner as well as to the saint; He has caused the rain to fall upon the unjust as well as the just, and yet how far we fall short of our duty to our Maker. A great many people misconstrue the object and purposes of Thanksgiving day. To them the day is only for sport or amusement of any nature, no matter how frivolous or inappropriate, anything but the real purpose for which the day was intended. Then there is a class who well know the object and purpose of Thanksgiving day and this class, though small, will respect the day and observe it as it should be observed.

A few of these good people will meet in their home sanctuary with friends and neighbors for an hour of worship and thanksgiving to the Ruler of the Universe for the manifold blessings and comforts He has showered upon them and theirs during the past year.

Young man, stop and reflect. Celebrate the day as it should be and as it was intended to be, a day of thanksgiving to our Maker for his goodness and kindness to us and ours through all the years of our lives.

The present custom of selecting commissioners by vote of the county is entirely wrong. The next legislature should enact a law restricting the election of county commissioners to the districts which they represent. What is the sense of the district naming the candidate for commissioner, and then the electors of the entire county having a say as to whether he shall be elected or not? Each district should hold its commissioner accountable for his official acts, and the commissioner should confine his efforts in road improvements and other public matters solely to his district. Then why should not the people of that district have the right to choose their own representative?

Several states have adopted this plan, and it works satisfactorily. It has a tendency of taking the matter out of politics, and to give each district the very best material in the district for commissioner.

SEGUIN NOTES.

We have just recovered from the effects of the recent campaign and can now devote a portion of our time to other interests than politics.

There are no sore spots in this burg, though we did not get all we wanted, we got more than we expected.

The recent storm did no damage on Seguin except to the telephone and telegraph lines. The Ind. Tel. Co. suffered the most, as their line was carried away by the river. However, by working hard they have all their lines in operation again.

The basket social given by the Ladies Educational Club Tuesday last was well attended and netted eighty dollars, which will be tendered to the Sidewalk committee. Now let us see the sidewalk started at once.

Mr. Joe Doran and wife returned from Seattle Friday last, where they went to be married. They will take up their residence on the old Bell estate. A large number of friends called on them at the Hotel Saturday evening, and after considerable noise were admitted to the house to partake of the good things spread on the table.

The skating rink is doing a lively business. Tuesday was ladies night, and a number of the gentler sex were on hand to enjoy the exercise. The rink opens Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings.

Crews are at work repairing the Burlingame and Cougar mill bridges, which were carried away by the recent storm.

Walter Myers has purchased a lot of J. L. Keeler and will erect a livery and feed stable. Good luck, Walter.

Notices are up for a basket social and entertainment to be given Tuesday next for the benefit of the stockholders of the Farmers Mutual Telephone Co.

Al Fust of Ohio, and an old friend of J. L. Keeler, is visiting the latter.

The Bugge Mercantile Co. have moved into their new store and are now prepared to furnish everything needed by their customers. They have a general deliveryman, Paul Cook.

The clam cannery is operating again, with P. Sullivan in charge

Supervisor Wooding has just completed a fine half-mile of new road on Seguin.

Manager Hermans of the Cougar mill made a business visit to Seattle first of the week.

O. B. Hart, Bert Sindars, and Hammond Keelar were returning passengers from Seattle Monday.

The Ind. Tel. Co. have received a new switch board for Seguin, which will be installed by December 15th, when they will employ two girls instead of one, thus giving night service.

Liberal Measure.

To illustrate the value of exact obedience to orders, a politician tells the following story, which the New York Tribune repeats:

There was a young man in love with a rich and beautiful girl. The girl informed him one afternoon that the next day would be her birthday. He said he would send her the next morning a bouquet of roses, one for each year.

So that night he wrote a note to his florist, ordering the immediate delivery of twenty roses to the young woman. The florist read the order, and thought he would please the young man by improving on it, so he said to his clerk:

"Here's an order from young Smith for twenty roses. Smith is one of my best customers. Throw in ten more for good measure."

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

Cambridge, Mass., provides for privileges of study and travel one year in seven for the public school teachers. A teacher draws a part salary and has regular position upon return.

There is a revival of interest in Kansas in consolidation of rural schools. Their number has increased from six in 1903 to twenty in 1906. A large number of communities are now considering the question.

New Jersey has a new teachers' pension bill. It provides for retirement on one-half the average annual salary after thirty-five years of service, twenty-five of which must be in the district where the retirement takes place.

Claude E. Palmer, an employe of a western railroad at Osawatomie, Kan., who has been working his way through the university of that State, has been appointed to a scholarship in the New York School of Applied Sciences through the influence of Miss Helen Gould.

An Illinois decision is that critic teachers in the practice department of a normal school may not be paid out of local funds. The court held that the work of the critic teacher is to teach pedagogy, and that pedagogy "has no lawful or proper place in the curriculum of the common schools."

From the first year of the Hyannis Normal school there has been a students' loan fund and fully 10 per cent of the graduates have made use of it. It is interesting to note that these same graduates have been among the most successful. Principal Baldwin appeals for funds to put it on a permanent basis.

USEFUL URALITE.

Incombustible and Can Be Worked With Like Wood.

Have you ever heard of uralite? Probably not, for it is a new invention. Yet it is well worthy of your notice, since it is superior to anything of the kind that has yet been produced. It is the invention of a Russian artillery officer and chemist, named Imschenetzky, and the claim to distinction lies in the fact that it is absolutely fireproof.

Uralite is composed of asbestos fiber, with a proper proportion of silicate, bibonate of soda and chalk, and it is applied in various finishes and colors, according to the purpose for which it is intended. In a soft form a sheet of uralite is like asbestos board; when hard it resembles finely sawn stone and with a metallic ring. Besides being a non-conductor of heat and electricity, it is practically water proof (and may be made entirely so by paint), and is not affected either by atmospheric influences or by the acids contained in smoke in large towns, which rapidly destroy galvanized iron.

Moreover, it can be cut by the usual carpenters' or woodworkers' tools; it can be veneered to form panelling for walls and partitions; it can be painted, grained, polished and glued together like wood; it does not split when a nail is driven through it; it is not affected when exposed to moisture or great changes of temperature, and it can be given any desired color either during the process of manufacture or afterward.—Dietic and Hygiene Magazine.

Fried Corn with Bacon.

Cut the grains from four or five ears of tender sweet corn and put in the same pan in which the bacon has already been cooked and removed; pour off some of the fat, if too much remains in the pan; add half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of black pepper; cover with close lid and fry over a slow fire for ten minutes. Stir often. This is a good breakfast when camping. Cut the toast in triangles; have it thin, well browned and serve hot.

The Original Porous Plaster.

It's Allcock's, first introduced to the people sixty years ago, and to-day undoubtedly has the largest sale of any external remedy—millions being sold annually throughout the whole civilized world. There have been imitations, to be sure, but never has there been one to even compare with Allcock's—the world's standard external remedy.

Tells a Story of Awful Suffering and Wonderful Relief.

Mrs. J. B. Johnson, of 603 West Hickman St., Columbia, Mo., says:

"Following an operation two years ago, dropsy set in, and my left side was so swollen the doctor said he would have to tap out the water. There was constant pain and a gurgling sensation around my heart, and I could not raise my arm above my head. The kidney action was disordered and passages of the secretions too frequent. On the advice of my husband I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using two boxes my trouble has not reappeared. This is wonderful, after suffering two years."

Some women interested in charities recently visited a home for discharged female prisoners. They were shown to a room where two women were sewing. "This is the sitting room," blandly answered the superintendent, "and these are my wife and my daughter."

Not more than one of each kind was sold to every applicant at the general postoffice.

A professor of English in the University of Wisconsin, according to Harper's Weekly, tells of some clever replies made by a student under examination in English. The candidate had been instructed to write out examples of the indicative, the subjunctive, the potential and the exclamatory moods. His efforts resulted as follows: "I am endeavoring to pass an English examination. If I answer twenty questions I shall pass. If I answer twelve questions I may pass. God help me!"

An old Bible, bought by a French army officer in a second-hand bookshop at Mont de Marsan contained long lost treasure. The officer, turning over the book in his quarters, was astonished to find in it coupons and scrip to the value of more than $2,000. These bore the name of the holder, at St. Pierre du Mont, and the address of a notary of the same place. On communicating with the notary the officer learned that the holder of the scrip, a small peasant owner, had died some years ago, and that the property represented by the lost papers had not been disturbed. Great was the surprise when the officer handed over the scrip.

Five steamboats are being built for a Kiel shipping company which are said to be wholly unsinkable. A recent trial of one of the boats was carried out in the presence of representatives of the Imperial navy and many shipping firms. The vessel was fully laden to represent two hundred passengers, and it was assumed that, in consequence of a leak caused by a collision, the entire engine room division, into which the water was pumped, had filled, while a hole was made in the exterior to admit water freely. The ship accordingly sank, but when it was full of water it had still about a foot of freeboard above the surface, thus satisfying the conditions imposed.

WORK OF THE DYNAMITER.

Not the Safeblower or the Anarchist, but the Professional.

"The finished type of the dynamiter is the man who has had the ability to rise and the luck to survive long enough to graduate from the plant and become an agent. In his best embodiment the explosives agent is something of a chemist, something of a quarryman, something of an electrician, a good deal of a mineralogist and, above all, a man of resource and coolness. It is he who does the exploding.

"The factory gets notice from a railroad that a contract is open for the destruction of a ledge of rock which blocks its line of advance. Away goes the agent with his gripsack full of ready-made destruction to look the thing over. First he draws upon his mineralogic lore to determine the nature of the rock. If it is very hard he uses a high grade of his explosive, which delivers a quick, shattering blow. In case of soft rock the lower grade supplies a blast which will produce a wider effect, although it will not break the dislodged rock into such small pieces.

"Next, as a quarryman, he considers the nature of the ledge and the indicated fissures or veins and plans his drilling accordingly. Then he must attend to the drilling of the holes, the tamping of the charge, and—here his electrical knowledge is called for, the arrangement of the batteries. After a few blasts he gives the railroad company his estimate and if it is accepted he may oversee the job himself."—American Magazine.

In a letter to Public Printer Stillings directing that changes in spelling advocated by the simplified spelling board be observed in all publications of the Executive Department, President Roosevelt says that criticism of this step is evidently made in ignorance of what is proposed. He asserts that there is no intention of doing anything revolutionary, and that the purpose is for the government, "instead of tagging behind popular sentiment, to advance abreast of it, and at the same time abreast of the views of the ablest and most practical educators of our time, as well as of the profound scholars, men of the stamp of Prof. Loundsberry and Prof. Skeat." He explains, further, "that if these changes in the spelling of 300 words do not ultimately meet with popular approval, they will be dropped, and that there is all there is about it." After quoting several examples in word shortening in popular use, he declares that this reform is not an attack on the language of Shakspeare and Milton, is not an attempt to do anything far-reaching, sudden or violent, but is an attempt "to cast what slight weight can properly be cast on the side of the popular forces which are endeavoring to make our spelling a little less foolish and fantastic."

Eleven head of Galloway cattle from Missouri have been sent to Alaska by the government to begin an experiment in stock-raising in that northern district. They will be kept near Cook Inlet, to the northward of which for two hundred miles lies the Susitna Valley. The valley is nearly as broad as it is long, and is covered with rich grasses, redtop and bluestem, which grow luxuriantly in summer. Salt-grass and bunch-grass, which is an excellent winter food, also are abundant. There are already some Jersey cattle for dairy purposes at Kenai, but they require too much care to be of use for general stock-raising. The Galloways will be crossed with famous butter-making strains, in the hope of producing a hardy breed which can withstand the Alaskan climate and develop a profitable industry.

BAD BLOOD
THE SOURCE OF ALL DISEASE

Every part of the body is dependent on the blood for nourishment and strength. When this life stream is flowing through the system in a state of purity and richness we are assured of perfect and uninterrupted health; because pure blood is nature's safe-guard against disease. When, however, the body is fed on weak, impure or polluted blood, the system is deprived of its strength, disease germs collect, and the trouble is manifested in various ways. Pustular eruptions, pimples, rashes and the different skin affections show that the blood is in a feverish and diseased condition as a result of too much acid or the presence of some irritating humor. Sores and Ulcers are the result of morbid, unhealthy matter in the blood, and Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders that will continue to grow worse as long as the poison remains. These impurities and poisons find their way into the blood in various ways. Often a sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, leaves the refuse and waste matters to sour and form uric and other acids, which are taken up by the blood and distributed throughout the circulation. Coming in contact with contagious diseases is another cause for the poisoning of the blood; we also breathe the germs and microbes of Malaria into our lungs, and when these get into the blood in sufficient quantity it becomes a carrier of disease instead of health. Some are so unfortunate as to inherit bad blood, perhaps the dregs of some old constitutional disease of ancestors is handed down to them and they are constantly annoyed and troubled with it. Bad blood is the source of all disease, and until this vital fluid is cleansed and purified the body is sure to suffer in some way. For blood troubles of any character S. S. S. is the best remedy ever discovered. It goes down into the circulation and removes any and all poisons, supplies the healthful properties it needs, and completely and permanently cures blood diseases of every kind. The action of S. S. S. is so thorough that hereditary taints are removed and weak, diseased blood made strong and healthy so that disease cannot remain. It cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., and does not leave the slightest trace of the trouble for future outbreaks. The whole volume of blood is renewed and cleansed after a course of S. S. S. It is also nature's greatest tonic, made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and is absolutely harmless to any part of the system. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Book on the blood and any medical advice free to all who write.

OPEN PUBLICITY THE BEST GUARANTY OF MERIT.

When the maker of a medicine, sold through druggists for family use, takes his patients fully into his confidence by frankly and fearlessly publishing broadcast as well as on its bottle wrappers, a full list of all its ingredients in plain English, this action on his part is the best possible evidence that he is not afraid to have the search light of investigation turned full upon his formula and that it will bear the fullest scrutiny and the most thorough investigation. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the cure of the weaknesses, periodical pains and functional derangements of the organs distinctly feminine, is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for woman's special use, the maker of which is not afraid to take his patients into his full confidence by such open and honest publicity.

A glance at the published ingredients on each bottle wrapper, will show that it is made wholly from native, American, medicinal roots, that it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs, no narcotics and no alcohol—pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength being used instead of the commonly employed alcohol, both for extracting and preserving the active medicinal properties found in the roots of the American forest plants employed. It is the only medicine for women's peculiar diseases, sold by druggists, that does not contain a large percentage of alcohol, which is in the long run so harmful to woman's delicate, nervous system. Now, glycerine is perfectly harmless, and serves a valuable purpose by possessing intrinsic value all its own, and besides it enhances the curative effect of the other ingredients entering into the "Favorite Prescription."

Some of the ablest medical writers and teachers endorse these views and praise all the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is composed—recommending them for the cure of the very same diseases for which this world-famed medicine is advised. No other medicine for women has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. If interested, send name and address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for his little book of extracts from the works of eminent medical writers and teachers, endorsing the several ingredients and telling just what Dr. Pierce's medicines are made of. It's free for the asking.

FRUIT AND FLOWERS

APPLE PICKING.

A Padded Basket Good For Fancy Fruit and Easily Handled.

In order to make the best of the apple crop much foresight has to be exercised. Where several hundred barrels are to be used, they should always be bought in the knock down, fresh cooperage, and made up on the farm. Long experience has proved this to be the best plan in nearly every case.

Picking baskets ought also to be provided. Some pickers prefer to use a sack slung over the shoulders, but the basket is certainly better, at least for good fruit. A basket with a swinging bail is necessary, the stiff bail baskets being a nuisance. The swinging bail allows a basket to be let down into a barrel and emptied without any trouble, while the fruit has to be poured out of the other basket, much to the damage of the tender apples. The package makers now put out several patterns of picking baskets, nearly all of them good, and varying in price according to the excellence of material and care in manufacture. The best ones are made of oak staves, with oak bottoms, and cost about $2.50 to $3 a dozen. Fairly good baskets of braided slats are put out by some factories. In handling soft or fancy fruit, it may be best to re-enforce the baskets with some soft padding, such as canvas over a thin layer of excelsior. The accompanying cut is from a basket thus padded and in actual use in a large commercial orchard. The same cut shows the hook by which the basket is hung to the limb, while the picker is free to climb about and work with both hands. —Country Gentleman.

Nursery Stock.

Most of our fruit plants may be set in the autumn as soon as the leaves fall naturally, provided the ground is in good shape and the work is carefully done. In transplanting in autumn it is very important to pack the soil firmly around the roots. In Massachusetts autumn transplanting should be done by the middle of October, which will leave about a month before the ground freezes hard. It is also a good plan in the case of autumn planting to mound up about the trees and to stake them so that they will not be blown down in the winter.

Cap raspberries should never be set in autumn, as they are very liable to fail when set at this time. Rhubarb is one of the plants that I think should be set out in autumn, as it does much better when set at this time than if set in the spring. In the case of peach and plum trees it is somewhat doubtful if autumn planting should ever be practiced with them in Massachusetts, as they are somewhat tender and are liable to winter injury when thus planted.—S. The Pacific Monthly in 1907

Will be, more than ever, the great magazine of the West—our West, your West, God's country. With brush and pen its staff of contributors will depict the best of the West from Alaska to the Canal Zone; from the Missouri River to the Philippines. To do this the famous writers of the West, the artists of the West—its poets, will do their best work for The Pacific Monthly.

Herman Whitaker, Jack London, James Hopper, Karl Edwin Harriman, William Winter, C. E. S. Wood, Fred Lockley, William L. Finley, W. Leon Dawson, Lute Pease, Adelaide Soule, Edna Kenton, are some of the writers whose work has been purchased.

Sidney H. Riesenberg, Xavier Martinez, Maynard Dixon, McM. Pease, Eloise J. Roorbach, Beverly Towles, are among those whose brilliant and original work will be reproduced, both in black and white and in color. The most artistic of Western photography will be called into play. Among the most wonderful photos ever taken are F. H. Kiser's pictures of mountain-climbing in the West. These will appear only in The Pacific Monthly.

The best writers of the West have been called upon to describe faithfully and interestingly the various marvels of the West. In the January, February, March and April issues the Oregon trail, the Pueblos of the Southwest, the sheep ranges of Oregon, the great romance of Twin Falls, the undiscovered resources of Yaquina Bay, the unexplored coast of Washington will receive brilliant treatment.

Western bird-life will be treated for the first time adequately and beautifully in every issue by William L. Finley, Herbert Bohlman, W. Leon Dawson and L. W. Brownell. Nothing so exhaustive has ever before been attempted by a magazine.

Nothing so beautiful as the Pacific Monthly will be in 1907 will be found on the news stands. The best that paper-mill, inkgrinders, typefounder and engraver can produce will dress the magazine.

These are some of the things which will go toward The Pacific Monthly, the magazine of the Western American—a magazine equal to the best anywhere.

Tabard Inn Library

A station of the Tabard Inn Library has been recently established in Port Angeles, with Mr. Horace White as agent. This famous institution has Stations in all the cities and towns of the United States and Canada. By payment of $1.50 any one secures a life membership, which entitles the member to the privileges of the library wherever located. Upon payment of $1.50 the member gets a book, and when read it can be returned and another one secured upon payment of 10c, and so on indefinitely.

The library consists of the most modern books. Each Station receives a new set of books each month, which insures a large range of subjects to select from.

The local station starts off with forty members which, no doubt, will be largely increased when the people learn of the advantages of the system.

Lutheran Church Refinished

The improvements that were begun on the Lutheran Church several months ago have been finished, and those who know the church before will hardly recognize it as the same building. Rustic was put on the outside and two coats of paint.

The interior was also improved by a platform around the altar and a room back of the pulpit. A new carpet was laid and the walls improved by a picture of the Lord's Supper, (given by Mrs. Lifferel,) as well as other decorations. Along the front of the church a picket fence improves the appearance considerably. These improvements are a credit to the Ladies' Aid Society mostly as they gave the financial support to a great extent, though all interested in the church helped faithfully. Judging by the improvements that are being made on the place of worship and the growth of the Sunday School, which has doubled its attendance in the last year, the Lutheran Church has a bright future to look forward to.

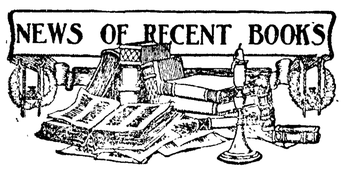
The best treatment for indigestion and troubles of the stomach is to rest the stomach. It can be rested by starvation or by the use of a good digestant which will digest the food eaten, thus taking the work off the stomach. At the proper temperature, a single teaspoonful of Kodol will wholly digest 3,000 grains of food. It relieves the present annoyance, puts the stomach in shape to satisfactorily perform its functions. Good for indigestion, sour stomach, flatulence, palpitation of the heart and dyspepsia. Kodol is made in strict conformity with the National Pure Food and Drug Law. Sold by C. E. Nailor & Co.



The colonel in Arthur Goodrich's "The Balance of Power," who has been called the "Miltant David Harum," is said to have been drawn straight from life. The man in question lived for some twenty years on the western plains, fighting Indians, riding pony express, mining for gold and silver, and now lives in just such a Connecticut city as the Hampstead of the story. Many of the little stories which the colonel tells in the novel are, it is said, true stories of the old West.

Steward Edward White, whose new book, "The Pass," is adding to his reputation for powers of description and appreciation of nature, is very modest about his work. About one of his novels which had become a typical White success, he remarked naively: "And the wonder to me is that they like it at all. It isn't really a novel. It's description around a narrative." And this is really what "The Pass" is; "description around a narrative," but such description that it carries the reader along with it.

There is a wide difference in the methods employed by various authors. One writer, for instance, dictates to a stenographer while he paces the floor and evolves the plot as he dictates. Later he revises the manuscript. Other writers say that they must work out the story in their minds before they touch pen to paper. Some painfully set down every word in ink, while others find that they can do nothing without the assistance of their typewriters. A majority of the best-known authors produce one book a year; others count the year poorly spent that does not see three or four novels issued bearing their names. Will N. Harben is a writer who produces about one book a year. He spends six months working out his story and living with his characters until they become very real to him; then he starts to write. The remainder of the year is spent in writing. He works a few hours each morning and then goes out for air and exercise and to think over what he has written. Ellis Parker Butler does his writing at night. He says he grew accustomed to working by artificial light, and that now he can do nothing until after dark. In this respect he is not different from Booth Tarkington, who did all his best work between midnight and sunrise. Dolores Bacon is also a night worker. To her credit, too, belongs the record for rapid production; she has had three books published in six weeks. Mrs. Bacon was born in Kansas, but she has lived, worked and studied abroad. Rex E. Beach is a vigorous worker, keeping steadily at his desk until he has exhausted completely the inspiration of the moment. He is a young novelist—only 28—and leads an active life. He was in Alaska for nearly two years without a taste of fresh food of any kind, with the exception of a few pounds of moose meat at long intervals.

A CRIME AGAINST SOCIETY.

However, Miss Adela Fed the Tramp, Just the Same.

"He was a very nice-looking tramp," said Miss Adela, defensively, "not at all a rough person, Aurelia; and he had blue eyes that must have been pretty when he was a baby—such an appealing blue, without a tinge of gray in them. It's a pity that something had happened to one of the eyelids to make it droop, because of course it wasn't his fault, poor man, but it did detract a little from the frank look that blue eyes ought to have.

"I am sure a good many people would misjudge him just because of that eyelid—and think how cruel to refuse a man food and drink and perhaps the opportunity to labor merely for an aspect of slyness due entirely to physical accident! He said himself the world was a hard place, and he knew appearances were against him. Aurelia! Are you laughing?"

"Not at his eyelid, Adela," apologized Aurelia, hastily. "He looked a rascal, but perhaps he isn't. It wasn't that. It was—oh, what wouldn't I have given if our club president could have heard you! She had a paper last meeting on 'The Responsibility of the Housekeeper for the Tramp Evil.' She said it was a matter for congratulation that women were awaking at last to the perception that feeding tramps was a crime against society and the State. She said they had been long in learning, but now they had learned. If only she could have come up the path with me in time to see that forlorn old rogue sitting on your kitchen steps, with a tray on his knees just loaded with bread and coffee and corn cakes, and then to see you pop your head out the door and—oh, Adela! Adela! There's nobody like you! Think of asking a tramp:

"'How shall I boil your eggs, sir? Two minutes or three?'"

Miss Adela stiffened a little. "Really, Aurelia," she remarked, "your amusement seems to me excessive. There happened to be no left-over meat scraps, and the man had walked a long way, and needed something nourishing. Eggs were the natural thing to offer, and if he was going to have eggs at all, he might as well have them the way he liked them. And if you are amused because I called him sir, a man whose self-respect needs bracing is exactly the man I want to say sir to. I can't see that I've done anything ridiculous."

Aurelia pulled herself together. "I beg your pardon," she murmured, penitently, but she added, with a flash of humorous expectancy, "You certainly refused him neither food nor drink, Adela. Did you also offer him the opportunity to labor?"

Miss Adela's rigidity melted suddenly to limp meekness.

"I did," she owned. "I set him to dig over the seed bed as soon as he'd finished his breakfast; but—I suppose you've a right to laugh at this, Aurelia—he must have departed as soon as my back was turned. I found the spade sticking up straight in the middle of the bed, and he hadn't turned a single shovelful!"

The conversation took another course after that, but Miss Adela seemed absent minded and inattentive. When her guest started to leave she followed her to the gate and called across it:

"Aurelia, could you borrow that tramp paper for me to read, do you think?"—Youth's Companion.

THE DAVENPORT "STOPS."

That Is What Their Irish Maid Called the Leftovers.

It was Katie Regan who gave the Davenports the word—pretty, trim little Katie, only six months over from Ireland. One morning, when she had been in the house but a few days, she presented herself at Mrs. Davenport's door.

"What will you be having for lunch the day, mem?" she asked, cheerfully.

Mrs. Davenport sighed; not even the bright voice could disguise the old question.

"Oh, I don't know," she said. "What is there in the house, Katie?"

"There's some rice that stopped, mem," the little maid replied, hopefully.

"That what?" her mistress asked.

"That stopped, mem—it didn't all be et," Katie explained.

"You mean that there was some left over?" Mrs. Davenport inquired, with dawning comprehension.

"That's what I was saying," Katie agreed. "The rice was a stop."

The family adopted the word at once, and for some time amused themselves by enumerating the "stops" of which they were possessed.

Molly said she had various silk waists which were stops; Tom always inquired the day after custards appeared whether any had stopped; Elizabeth suggested giving some old furniture which had stopped to the South Side Mission.

Two months later Elizabeth, trying hard to be brave, heard the oculist's verdict: no more Art League for a year at least, perhaps for two. Two years—when every day counted in what she longed to do!

"The class will all go on and I shall be nothing but a stop," she declared to her mother with a laugh which was shaky in spite of the joke.

"But Katie's stops never stayed stops," her mother answered quickly. "You always said that you liked the made-overs better than the originals."

Elizabeth looked up quickly. "I wonder——" she began. And although the sentence was not finished, Mrs. Davenport felt a load lift from her heart. When Elizabeth "wondered" something always happened.

The things that happened were not all remarkable—only a resolute determination to get strong as soon as possible, and meantime discover all the beauty she could. Elizabeth revived her forgotten botany and roamed the meadows by the hour, studying at the same time color and shadow effects through the long summer days and gathering unsuspected harvests by the way.

When at the end of the first year she was still forbidden work, she accepted the verdict quietly, and kept on with her unnamed studies. Then at last the reward came. The eyes were perfectly cured, the oculist said; and at her first lesson the teacher at the Art League asked her where she had learned so much about shadows. But Elizabeth knew that the years had taught her a greater thing than the color of shadows.—Youth's Companion.

Enjoined the Lawyer.

In many ways the American form of government is doubtless better than that which Spain imposed upon its colonies. Nevertheless there are times when we could take a lesson in direct achievement from an incident of the colonial days of Peru, related by the author of "Panama to Patagonia."

"Since the arrival at Quito of a certain attorney, Bachiler Guevara," resolved the Cabildo of Quito in 1538, many suits have been stirred up whereby, as there is no other attorney in the town, many persons might lose their legal rights.

"Therefore the said Bachiler Guevara is forbidden to exercise his profession, or to give advice or his opinion on any controversy or matter of litigation, under penalty of one hundred pesos for the first offense and one year's banishment for the second offense."

Oh, the Joy of It!

"I tell you," said the struggling author, "if I could only assume the name I want I'd write something great."

"How do you mean? What name do you want to assume?"

"John D. Rockefeller's. I'd write myself a check for a couple of million."—Philadelphia Press.

Filling the Mow Made Easy.

An easy method of filling mows with straw from the thrasher or with hay when partly full is as follows: Fasten a pulley on a rafter a little beyond beam. Nail two wide boards C on the beams for the bundle to slide upon. The rope D having a hook upon one end, is placed under and around the straw and fastened. The bundle is then lifted by a man at D. When it reaches the top beam it swings in and is lowered into the mow. It can then be placed where wanted and unfastened. This device is very handy and saves much time.

Macaroni Wheat.

Grant Robinson of St. Paul, Minn., has purchased 40,000 acres of land in Presidio county, Texas, which he will devote to the culture of macaroni wheat on a scale the largest ever attempted in the world. Extensive preparations are now going forward for the consummation of the plans of the capitalist. Seed for planting will be brought to this country from the Volga region of Russia.

The field will be cultivated on the very latest and most improved method of wheat farming. Monster stake plows will be utilized in breaking up the land; in fact, all of the latest types of farming machinery will be used on the plantation.

Mr. Robinson proposes to have the largest and best managed wheat farm in the world. He will build a system of tenant houses and supply the wants of his laboring men from a commissary. A school will be built for the children of the laboring men, as well as churches, etc. The farm is near Valentine, accessible to the railroad, and has proven under tests to be admirably adapted to the culture of macaroni wheat.

Cold Storage for Farmers.

Putting first-class apples in cold storage for sale in late winter or early spring, is usually very profitable, says Farming. Other fruit and farm products may also be stored to advantage. The expense of a cold storage plant precludes its use by most fruit growers. Co-operation among farmers will sometimes be possible along this line. Granges and other farmers' organizations may do educational and practical work also. But available for every farmer are the refrigerator plants now found in almost every city. Rooms or space may be rented as one needs. Generally it is best to store in the city where it is intended to sell, that the produce may be on the ground in case of an advantageous market. Many a grower of fine fruit would be dollars ahead by availing himself of cold storage facilities.

Sheep Shearing Table.

Make a table with a hollow top, on which to lay the sheep. On each side of the board have a strap or rope with a snap hook to hold kicking sheep. The hollow top places the sheep at a disadvantage in trying to get up. This table is also very handy in tagging sheep; also in cleaning hogs, as the water will fall through the slats and will keep the hogs much cleaner.

Sowing Spinach.

Early spinach is seeded in the fall. The ground should be plowed and made fine, plenty of well-rotted manure applied, and the seed sown in rows about 16 inches apart, which should be done with a seed drill having a small roller to cover and press the earth on the seeds, the depth of planting the seeds being about half an inch. The seed should be sown before cold weather sets in. When the plants are up let them grow until the ground is frozen, and then cover with straw, which should be removed early in the spring. Spinach is a very hardy plant and is seldom injured by cold.

Lime Nitrogen.

Every gardener likes to use a stimulating fertilizer to hurry the crops along. For this purpose nitrate of soda and sulphate of aminonia are most frequently employed. Nitrogen is the element chiefly sought and all known means of obtaining it cheaply have been tested. Lately much interest has been shown in lime nitrogen or calcium cyanamid. The results of recent experiments with this fertilizer indicate a high value for it. In some tests it has shown only 80 per cent of the effectiveness of nitrate of soda while in other tests it proved superior.

Lime nitrogen seems to be harmful if placed in direct contact with the seeds or roots of plants. It should preferably be mixed with the soil and applied from eight to fourteen days before seeding. It will then greatly hasten the growth and maturity of garden plants. Some gardeners have found that it is best to mix the lime nitrogen with the soil five to ten inches below the surface. The best results have been obtained by mixing the fertilizer with twice its weight of dry soil before applying. Lime nitrogen should not be applied at a greater rate than 135 to 270 pounds per acre.

Save Falling Leaves.

When the leaves begin to fall, do not burn them. Save all of them. They make the humus that by and by becomes soil, and is of immense value in all its stages of change. The most irrational work ever done by a human being is to take what nature has spent the whole summer in creating for him, and throw it back into its elemental conditions. These leaves are nature's contribution, and her very best contribution to man's wealth. They are naturally spread all over the lawns each year, as a winter protection; and after they have accomplished that mission they are worked over into a compost of humus. As a rule, do not rake them too completely off the lawns. The leaves you do take instead of burning use for banking up buildings, for that will save coal; to cover or bank around plants; for stable bedding; or on the floors of henhouses, and in rooms where the hens may scratch during the winter.

Good Poultry Feeder.

Get a flat, empty grocery box and cut a section out of it, as shown in illustration. Nail a strip of thin board over the beveled portion and set the affair against the wall. Here you have a self-feeding box in which can be put grit, bone, charcoal or grain. One or two partitions put in before cutting out the beveled section would make two or three compartments, in which two or three of the articles could be kept at the same time. This is the easiest possible way to make a self-feeding box. Have the top or cover part of the box slanting, so that the fowls cannot roost on it.

Value of Farm Animals.

The Department of Agriculture has published a statement of the number and the value of farm animals.

There are over a billion and a half dollars' worth of horses in the United States, and the total value of all live stock amounts to $3,655,389,443. The humble mule leads all other animals in average value per head. The detailed list of classes is as follows:

Farm Animals.	No.	Av. price per head.	Value.
Horses	18,718,578	$80.72	$1,510,889,906
Mules	3,404,061	98,31	334,680,526
Milch cows	19,793,866	29.44	582,788,592

No Grain in the Orchard.

There are many ways of caring for an orchard. We work our land in corn as long as possible, in order to cultivate the trees and keep the land clean. This is to prevent us being troubled by rabbits. Where there are no trees or grass we can put the richness back into the soil with clover. If the land is rich this clover may be cut for hay, if poor, it should be left and turned under to enrich the land as much as possible. Never plant any of the small grains in the orchard. Growth is the most necessary item for the young trees.—T. H. Todd, Missouri.

Soapsuds for Plants.

The ordinary concentrated lye is really caustic soda, which is cheaper than potash. Soda lye makes hard soap and potash lye soft soap. Soapsuds from soft soap makes a valuable fertilizer, but soda soapsuds are not considered valuable, except for celery and asparagus, which are always benefited by soda in any form. The use of any kind of soapsuds is beneficial in assisting to liberate plant food in the soil, however.

The Secret of Success.

The superiority of butter made in Denmark is known the world over where butter is sold. Many investigations of Danish methods have been made and the conclusion is that cleanliness is the secret of the success of the Danish dairyman in making butter.

The Sons of Judah.

The young minister, making his first calls in his new parish, found himself one lovely May afternoon upon a corner of the Bakers' tiny front piazza with old "Uncle Jimmy." He hardly knew how he came here. Of course he had not expected to find Dan Baker at at home in the afternoon, but he had counted upon a call on his wife; and instead, here he was upon a corner of the piazza with Mrs. Baker's father-in-law, old, crippled Uncle Jimmy. Uncle Jimmy's shrewd, friendly blue eyes studied the young man's face.

"Don't be put out," he said, cheerfully. "Dan and Fanny will be all right, come Sunday. But there's a heap of things doing on a farm in May, and they haven't got time to talk religion week-days. You might take it out on me, if you don't mind. I've got all the time there is—sometimes, I most think, too much of it, and I'd take it real kind of ye."

It was irresistible, even had the minister wanted to resist. He led the old man on to talk of his early life, and the years before the rheumatism conquered him. Uncle Jimmy told of it all freely, his long years of toil, and then the defeated hopes and plans. There was no word of complaint; indeed, his tone was almost impersonal, but at the end of the story he looked up.

"I'd admire to have you read to me before you go," he said. "There's a Bible on the table in the fore room."

The minister went into the "fore room" and returned with the big family Bible.

"Have you any particular passage in mind?" he asked.

"Yes," Uncle Jimmy answered, "I have. For years I've had a hankering for some minister to read one of those long chapters in Chronicles, say, about the sons of Judah and the sons of Levi, and all the rest of them. I wrestled with 'em myself a lot, but some of the names is certainly a mouthful. I've always wanted to hear somebody read 'em off slick."

"Certainly I will read them," the minister answered, surprised, "but isn't there some other passage that you would like besides—something closer to human life?"

The old man turned his wrinkled face to the young one.

"Well," he said, "I suppose it does sound queer, but mebbe there ain't anybody can tell right off what will help somebody else most. Now me, when I get real down-hearted, I read over the 'Sons of Judah' lists. I say to myself, 'Now here are all these people nobody knows anything about. They lived their lives and passed away. Mebbe some of them were real prosperous—I suppose they were; but mebbe some were failures, like me. But God remembers them all—every last man of them. Folks forgot them thousands of years ago, but He didn't forget. He knew every one of them by name."

"I tell you there are times when there's a heap of comfort in those lists. God ain't the changing kind—He says so. So I know that somewhere in His lists old Jimmy Baker's name is put away, safe and sure."

The young minister's firm hand closed over an old, twisted one.

"Thank you, my friend," he said.—Youth's Companion.

Doing Follows Believing.

When your heart thrills with the thought of being kind and loving and noble, do you aspire to put into activity those God-inspired thoughts? When you have the inspiration to make some great sacrifice, and you know you ought to make it, do you go forward and make it? You cannot accept any affirmation of the soul, that impulse which always drives upward and forward, without doing something. So that if you think you are believing, and you are not doing, then you are of all men the most deceived and miserable. Doing inevitably follows believing. "If ye love me, keep my commandments."

The Higher Life.

Do not despise the mystical and transcendental. If you are to live wisely and with advantage, you must live your life from above. It is because we live our lives on a lower and unworthier plane than we might, that our mind loses its lucidity, that our conscience loses its discrimination, that our heart loses its freshness. It is because life is lived too low down that we fall morally. There is an ancient story about a man who lived in a swamp and prayed unto Jupiter to give him health. "Pray from the hill-top, and your prayer will be answered," quoth Jupiter.—Rev. Thomas Yates.

The Discipline of Difficulty.

How dark are the paths in which God's faithful ones are compelled to tread! How fierce the fires in which the pure gold of their principle is tested! But when the patient feet have plodded through the darkness, the glory is the brighter for the gloom, and the gold is burnished by the flame into a beauty unparalleled before. Not in caprice of power, nor lessening of love, does the Father permit the trial of the child; but we wrestle with the angel in the dark, that, with thews of iron, we may be the stronger at the breaking of the day.—W. Morley Punshon.

THE DESERT PEACH.

A Scrubby Western Cousin of a Favorite Summer Fruit.

"America is so rich in native fruits," said the old traveler, "that I have often thought that if a sudden blight should destroy all the orchards and fruit gardens of the world, we should soon be able to supply the market from the wild fruits of our fields and forests.

"Our wild strawberries, blackberries and raspberries are delicious as they grow, to say nothing of their possibilities under cultivation. Many of our wild grapes are excellent—will you ever forget the foxgrape jelly that 'mother made?'—and they are the original stock of many a favorite cultivated variety, such as Concord, Catawba, Isabella and Scuppernong. Our Pennsylvania mountains yield two species of wild apples, and several varieties of plums, which, in fact, grow abundantly from the Atlantic to the Pacific, many of them being very pleasant tasted, while at least one is delicious.

"As for wild cherries, the woods and hedgerows supply many sorts, though it must be confessed that uncooked they are almost too puckery as a rule for the civilized palate. The wild black cherry, however, has an agreeable winey flavor, and the slight bitterness that is mixed in is only enough to be a tonic.

"How about peaches? Well, I must say I long thought that Uncle Sam would have nothing to say if the present peach orchards were wiped out. A year or two ago, however, I made a trip with a botanical friend through the desert countries of eastern California, and he showed me the desert peach, hundreds of acres of it growing in the scrub along the edge of the great Mojave desert, where it touches the eastern foot of the mountains. It is a good-sized shrub, and in their wild state the peaches are only about as big as marrowfat peas, and in their present undeveloped state not fit to eat. They have, however, the shape and fuzzy skin of the real Delaware article, together with the regulation prussic acid kernel in the stone; and, as they grow in the same state that raised Burbank, I guess, if need be, he could soon make them take on flesh enough to go with cream."

Lincoln's Bar Record.

In his twenty-three years at the bar Lincoln had no less than 169 cases before the highest court of Illinois, a record unsurpassed by his contemporaries. He appeared before the United States circuit and district courts with great frequency, he was the most indefatigable attendant on the Eighth circuit and tried more cases than any other member of that bar, he was attorney for the Illinois Central Railroad, the greatest corporation in the State and one which doubtless had its choice of legal talent; he was also counsel for the Rhode Island Railroad and other corporations and individuals with important legal interests at stake, me was sought as legal arbitrator in the great corporation litigations of Illinois, and he tried some of the most notable cases recorded in the courts of that State.—Frederick Trevor Hill in Century.

The Young Idea in Japan.

No child goes to school in Japan under six years of age. Two hours a week are set apart to teach the child ethical knowledge and one hour for the study of etiquette—how to walk, bow, pour tea and hold the hands and fingers.

Unnecessary.

"Why don't you get something new to talk about?"

"What for?" asked the orator. "People don't fully understand what I have been talking about for the last ten years."—Washington Star.

ROOSEVELT RETURNS

TRIP TO PANAMA AND PORTO RICO COMPLETED.

President Deeply Impressed With What He Saw During His Journey---Panama Canal to Be the Subject of a Special Message to Congress.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Completing a remarkable trip to Panama, during which he traveled several thousand miles and visited not only the isthmus but Porto Rico as well, and voicing his thorough enjoyment of the entire voyage, President Roosevelt returned to Washington at 10.45 last night.

The trip up the Potomac was made in the converted yacht Mayflower.

The president landed within ten minutes of the arrival of the Mayflower. To those who met him he stated that he had had a delightful trip and that he was feeling fine.

The president and Mrs. Roosevelt at once proceeded to the White House, where they arrived shortly after 11 o'clock.

As the president alighted from his c arriage he shook hands with all the attaches and others waiting on the portico. Speaking of his trip the president said:

"We had a very pleasant, very enjoyable time, and I am deeply impressed with the United States navy, with Panama and with Porto Rico."

The Panama canal, it was stated by the president, will be the subject of a special message and consequently on that subject the president will say nothing at this time.

STOCK IS WATERED

Indiana Railroad Commission Makes a Report.

Indianapolis, Nov. 27.—The watering of railroad stocks or overcapitalization by the large transportation lines is commented upon by the state railroad commission in its first report which will be made to the governor of Indiana in the next few days. The report is the first the commission will have filed since its creation by the general assembly two years ago.

The report shows that forty-three roads reporting to the commission state the value of the road and equipment and give the value of each per mile. Along with this report is also shown the amount of stock issued.

In the comparative statement which the commission has made of these items it appears that twenty-two of the companies have issued bonds and stocks in excess of the value of the roads and equipment.

"These excesses," the commission says in its report, "constitute what is commonly called 'watered stock' or overcapitaliaztion. Eighteen of the roads reporting show a valuation per mile on account of cost of roads and equipment in excess of the stocks and funded debt ranging from $41 to $38,000 per mile. An examination of these figures with a purpose of finding any relation between known conditions and the paper valuation is useless."

To Stop Hauling Grain

Omaha, Nov. 26.—The Bee says: The Burlington railroad is about to decide to cease hauling all grain until the coal famine in Nebraska has been relieved. The car congestion has become so serious that several towns in Nebraska are without a ton of coal in reservation and the situation demands immediate remedy. The Burlington officials say they cannot possbly supply the demand for freight cars for grain and coal at the same time, and, as the coal demand is imperative they will turn their attention toward relieving the coal famine.

Adams Goes to Federsl Prison

Seattle, Nov. 24.—George Edward Adams hsa been taken to the federal prison at McNeil's island to serve a sentence of ten years for stealing gold dust from the assay ocffie at Seattle. He left the county jail, where he has been confined for the past year, in company with T. Morton, who is to serve nine months for smuggling, and W. Schmidt, who has two years to serve for altering a postal order.

Discredits Graft Story

New York, Nov. 23.—Dr. Edward T. Devine, who as special representative of the Red Cross, had supervision of the relief work as secretary at San Francisco, following the earthquake disaster, declared before the New York state branch of the Red Cross that while mistakes might have been made in the distribution of the relief fund there was no "graft" there.

Municipal Ownership at Tokyo

Tokyo, Nov. 26.—A report in favor of municipal street railways has been prepared by the judges to whom the question was recently submitted. A special investigating committee had made a similar report, and as the Tokyo city council has approved it, municipal ownership seems likely to be tried, despite strong opposition.

Virginia Two-Cent Rate Law Void

Washington, Nov. 24.—In the Virginia supreme court of appeals Judge Caldwell handed down a decision affirming the decision of the state corporation commission declaring the 2-cent passenger rate act passed by the Virginia legislature contrary to the Fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States.

SWELL MEAL—SMALL COST

State College Domestic Science Class Entertains Business Men.

Pullman, Wash., Nov. 27.—A unique luncheon has been served by the class in household economy of the Washington State college. A dozen business men were invited to partake of a "$2 luncheon" prepared by the young women of the class. This is one of a series of luncheons being served by the class to illustrate what is being done by the department.

The object is to show the thoroughness of the department and how young women are taught to prepare good meals at small expense and to serve them in the most appetizing manner. The first of these luncheons was served last spring to President Bryan and the board of regents and attracted much attention. The luncheon was served to six persons at a cost of $1, and the class has served several at the same price.

The latest luncheon was served to twelve persons and was to have cost $2, but Miss Mallotte, who had full charge of the purchasing and preparation, saved 22 cents from her allowance by judicious purchasing of supplies. The menu follows:

Celery soup, roast pork and gravy, stuffed potatoes, creamed onions, biscuits and butter, baked apples, pickles, celery salad, Graham pudding, cream sauce and coffee. The cost of the articles was given on the card as follows: Milk 10 cents, pork 50 cents, potatoes 5 cents, onions 6 cents, biscuits 10 cents, pudding 30 cents, celery 15 cents, cream 10 cents, pickles 5 cents, apples 4 cents, coffee 6 cents, butter 8 cents, sugar 10 cents, wafers 10 cents.

STATE OIL INSPECTOR REMOVED BY MEAD

Olympia, Nov. 27.—John L. Canutt, state oil inspector, was yesterday removed from office by Gov. Mead because of misconduct in office, and F. A. Clark, of Snohomish, chief deputy in the office, was named as his successor.

The removal of Mr. Canutt is the direct result of the investigation of his department by the committee recently appointed by the governor. In substance the committee charges gross mismanagement of the office, improper use of state funds, the inspector's expenses, including board, lodging and street car fare in Seattle; slipshod method of bookkeeping, and the conduct of his office in a manner altogether unsatisfactory. The formal order of removal was signed late yesterday afternoon.

WON'T COLLECT FARES

Mosquito Fleet Captains Will Not Act as Pursers.

Seattle, Nov. 28 —Mosquito fleet captains who act as pursers without leaving a licensed pilot in charge of the craft while they are collecting fares are in danger of losing their licenses. In fact, it is said that Marine Inspectors Whitney and Turner will discourage the practice of captains taking the tickets, unless they collect them at the gangway before the steamer leaves the wharf.

Such, it is understood, will be the outcome of the investigations now being conducted into the loss of the steamer Dix last Sunday week, by the government inspectors, who have learned, after examining numerous witnesses, that the practice of having purser captains on several of the steamers has been common.

Both the inspectors declare they were not aware that captains not carrying licensed pilots had been acting as pursers in violation of the law. They were aware, however, that it was customary on some of the steamers, but it is said that these carried pilots.

COMMISSION MUST ANSWER

Jndge Hanford Rules in Joint Wheat Rate Case.

Seattle, Nov. 27.—Answer will have to be made by the Washington State railway commission to the objections raised by the railroads to the joint wheat rate order against which temporary injunction is now in force.

Judge C. H. Hanford, of the federal court, overruled the demurrer which had been filed by the commission to the complaint of the O. R. & N., and the cross complaints of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern. The demurrer was based on the ground that the bills of complaint did not state facts sufficient to justify an action.

Judge Hanford held that the complaint was sucfflient to require answer and that he would not pass on the points, such as constitutionality, which had been argued before him, until he gained a complete grasp of the case. Accordingly the injunction remains in force and the joint wheat rate is inoperative until the case is fully decided

Taft Expects Investigation

Washington, Nov. 24.—Secretary Taft said that he had not considered any action by congress in relation to the discharge of the negro troops who "shot up" Brownsville, Texas, "but there is one thing I have learned congress can do," he said laughingly, "it can investigate. I know that from experience, for congress has investiagted every thing I have ever had anything to do with."

Standard Oil Stock Down

New York, Nov. 24.—The stock of the Standard Oil Company sold at $500 on the curb market. This is the lowest price for years. At this price the stock shows a shrinkage in market value of more than $234,000,000 since the high price of January, this year.

UNIVERSITY REGENTS WANT LARGE SUM

Seattle, Nov. 28.—The regents of the state university have decided to ask the legislature for an appropriation of $600,000 for buildings for the university, which are to be at the disposal of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition committee during the epxosition.

The legislative committee of the A.-Y.-P., of which Judge C. H. Hanford is chairman, will also ask the leigslature for $400,000 toward the exposition, the money to be available immediately. The appropriation ,if granted, will be devoted to the construction of necessary buildings. A committee consisting of former United States Senator John L. Wilson, Mayor W. H. Moore, Judge R. A. Ballinger and Henry E Reed, was appointed to draft a bill to congress at its next session for an appropriation by the national government.

PEARY HOME ACAIN

Arctic Explorer Leaves Nova Scotia for New York.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 27.—Robert E. Peary, the Arctic epxlorer, and Mrs. Peary, have left Sydney for New York by rail. Regarding another trip ot the Arctic, Commander Peary said he would not be able to make any announcement until after he meets his friends in New York and discusses the matter with them.

The mate and seamen of the steamer Roosevelt, who are Newfoundlanders, have been paid off. The Roosevelt will be overhauled at North Sydney and a new crew engaged. Commander Peary said that he usually employed Newfoundland seamen for far North work, not because they were better than American, but because their sealing experience accustoms them to dealing with pack ice.

He expressed the belief that sledging is the best known method of reaching the north pole, but would advocate aerial navigation if it were possible to obtain a good airship. He considers the present flying machines to imperfect and delicate for Arctic work.

Relieves Coal Famine

North Yakima, Nov. 24.—The coal famine has been relieved here by the Northern Pacific making announcement that it would handle coal from the Roslyn and Cle Elum mines for the relief of the people in preference to other interests. Two carloads have been put in the yards here for use in North Yakima. A train load was distributed among the little towns in the Yakima valley.

Court of Europe

CONCLUSION.

The heart of London is surrounded by weak lungs. The latest expert investigations show that within a radius of two miles from Charing Cross, near which the Hotel Cecil is, there is no ozone in the air whatever. The device suggested by Dr. Ves Vœux, the lung specialist, last year, that fresh air be brought into the city by means of tube railways and the bad air pumped out by the same channels, has not as yet been put into operation. The city still deserves the name of "Smog," which he gave it, telescoping the two words, "smoke" and "fog," together ingeniously. This "smog" is a good deal noticed as the stranger starts out to see London by way of the Strand.

In Fleet street is a hairdresser's shop which elicits attention by its claim, inscribed upon its facade, that it is the former palace of Henry VIII. and Cardinal Wolsey. There are newspaper offices innumerable in Fleet street and in the narrower streets that lead away from it. Near by is Chancery lane, the chief legal thoroughfare of London. Hidden off here, on the right, is the Temple church, which the Knights Templar built in the twelfth century in imitation of the Round church of the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem, when they returned from their first two crusades.

On this side is Fetter lane, where the White Horse inn once stood, most famous among old coaching houses. Down Bouverie street to Whitefriars, formerly crowded with thieves and debtors, who sought the privilege of sanctuary which the old church conferred.

A ride on the top of an omnibus gives the tourist the proper idea of busy London. Not only does he see much, but he gets in touch with an interesting phase of life. From whatever cause it happens, the pride in race and country which these old drivers feel, their respect for royalty and government represent pretty fairly the highest patriotic spirit of England's lower middle class whom misguided foreigners sometimes pity. There is a sturdiness and independence about them which marks them as belonging to a ruling people, and, what is yet more to the point, their respect for their sovereign is like an extension of their own self-respect. They speak of the king as if he were an elder brother, the head of their family, whom they affectionately revere.

After a day in London a visit to the country is a dreamy contrast. It is a wandering through charming fields and winding country lanes confined by hedge rows and ancient stiles, where the lark's wing song of ecstacy echoes amid infinite variety and pastoral repose. The traveler crosses the battlefield of Shrewsbury, passes a village that contains the remains of a British hill fort, crosses a dike built by the early Saxons. He comes into Wales, land of curious names, crossing by the high viaduct the lovely valley of the Ceiriag. The massive round tower of Chirk castle comes into view, then by a second lofty viaduct the river Dee, and the magnificent oaks of Wynnstay Park. Chester is reached across a great iron bridge. This, the capital of Cheshire, is the quaintest of all old English towns, and most mediaeval in aspect. Here almost every American stops first, and wanders around wide-eyed and admiring. Every stone of the old walls is interesting. Phoenix tower has its tragic memory graven on it. Its inscription tells how Charles I. stood here watching the defeat of his troops on Rowton moor some 261 years ago. Where the canal runs along the north wall there was once a moat.

The tourist who takes a rapid scurry over the island wishes always to take in as a last reminder of merry England the beach of Margate. Margate has all kinds of Coney Island attractions. In fiction its name is mentioned with far greater frequency than Coney Island is. In English stories people are always running down to Margate, provided they do not go to nearby Ramsgate; which is a notch or so higher up the social scale. Of these two resorts Margate is the smaller, and to this fact probably is due the effect which it gives of having the larger number of temporary guests. It has for the entertainment of its visitors a "Hall by the Sea," where concerts are held. It also has two theaters, a kursaal, a grotto, and an open air theater with promenades and a band stand. Bath houses are scattered along its beaches.

Liverpool is stamped all over with the word "America." There are American ships in the harbor, and American goods on the docks. There are carts piled high with American cotton, and, best of all, upon the mainmast of a great liner inviting to a homeward journey, the stars and stripes float proudly, as the giant steamship rides down the Mersey towards the sea.

(The End.)

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.

Madison Square Garden, where William J. Bryan spoke in New York, is one of the notable structures in the city. It stands at 23d street and 5th avenue and looms up in what architects call "warm tones" and is surmounted with a tower planned after the historic Giralda at Seville, Spain. It is capable of housing anything from a circus to a chamber concert, and in it have been held many notable meetings. The annual horse shows are held within its walls, and the number of sporting events that have taken place under its roof are almost without number. The roof of the garden is crowned with artistic domed turrets and the main corner of the structure has an imposing colonnade that is beautiful in design. The architect of the building was the late Stanford White, who on the night of the 25th of June last was shot and killed by Harry K. Thaw in the roof garden surmounting the structure. The statue of Diana, which stands on the pinnacle of the Giralda tower, was designed by the celebrated sculptor, Frederick MacMonnies.

GROWTH OF TROUT.

Age, Food and Temperature Seem to Have No Bearing on Size.

The salvelinus fontinalis, which is currently but inaccurately called brook trout, was supposed for many years to be a small fish. Agassiz was largely instrumental in exploding this fallacy, says the St. Paul Dispatch. It is not an uncommon thing for an angler with ordinary luck to get a six or seven-pound trout of this variety. It is known that a trout may grow to weigh eleven or twelve pounds. There is, however, great difficulty in accounting for its variation in size.

In Northeastern Canada there are large streams and lakes in which only fingerlings have ever been found. In the immediate vicinity of such waters three and four-pound trout are quite common and seven and eight-pounders are not phenomenal. In all these waters crustacea do not abound; there are no small fish of any kind except small trout. All the fish are pure fly feeders. At some places, it is true, frogs abound, but, taken as a whole, the difference in food supply is not an adequate explanation for the difference in growth.

There is no substantial difference in the waters as to temperature, size, origin and course. Climatic conditions are the same. The small trout taken to virgin lakes in which there are no fish have sometimes grown to a great size, have sometimes remained small and sometimes have not thriven. The anglers who haunt these waters have not yet found a satisfactory explanation of this peculiar condition of things. It is one of the mysteries which lends fascination to the art. "You never can tell what is going to happen when you go fishing."

Leighton and His Critic.

The late Lord Leighton, president of the Royal Academy, once had a chance to learn something about himself that perhaps he had not suspected. His chance came to him at a picture gallery where his painting, "Helen of Troy," was on exhibition.

He joined the group of ladies who were standing before it just in time to hear one of the number say:

"It's a horrid picture—simply horrid!"

"I'm sorry, but it's mine!" Lord Leighton exclaimed, involuntarily.

"You don't mean to say you've bought the thing?" questioned the same lady.

"No, I—painted it," the artist humbly replied.

The critical lady was momentarily abashed; then she said, easily:

"Oh, you mustn't mind what I say."

"No, indeed, you mustn't," another began, earnestly. "She only said what everybody else is saying!"—Youth's Companion.

Ate Them.

A young New Yorker had made his first ascent in his new air-ship, under instruction from a professional aeronaut. After an hour's gyrations, his car came tumbling to the ground. When he was picked up and found to be not much hurt, the professional demanded to know what was wrong.

"Why did you not throw over the sand and save yourself?" he asked.

"I did—the whole ten pounds of it."

"Well, then, why did you not sacrifice the sandwiches you were carrying?"

"I did, Mr. Smith," sobbed the jarred young balloonist. "I knew they were extra weight, so as soon as the car started down I ate every one of them."

When you try to be funny what an awful mess you make of it!

ORE NOW HANDLED RAPIDLY.

Great Saving in Cost Effected by Use of Modern Machinery.

During the last ten years no less than 140,000,000 tons of iron ore have been taken from the ranges adjacent to Lake Superior and transported to the furnaces in the Pittsburg district, the Ohio valley and elsewhere. During the shipping season of the year 1905 over 35,000,000 tons was brought down from the Superior ranges.

These figures are of such magnitude that the extent of the industry can scarcely be appreciated. It is due entirely to the remarkable development which has been attained in machinery for excavating the ore, unloading the ore carriers and for serving the furnaces. By using mechanical unloaders and conveyors the cost of transporting a ton of iron ore from Duluth, for example, to Conneaut has been reduced from $3 to 60 cents.

A ton of ore loaded on cars at any of the principal ranges costs but 70 cents, representing the work of excavation. Twenty years ago the price by the ton for unloading and piling the ore was between 50 cents and 75 cents, with the mechanism employed at that time. At present the cost ranges between 15 cents and 18 cents, making the total charges for mining the ore, loading and unloading vessels and for water transportation less than $1.50 a ton.

Ore is now shipped from about thirty large docks at ports on Lake Superior and Lake Michigan. The storage capacity of these docks represents over 1,000,000 tons, compared with less than 700,000 tons in 1900. The largest cargoes which were transported up to the year in question did not exceed 8,000 tons. During 1905 a considerable portion of the material was taken down the lakes in steamers having a carrying capacity of 12,500 tons.

This expansion of size of ore carriers has been due largely to the increased facilities for loading and unloading. In fact, the rapidity with which ships' holds are filled is almost marvelous. At any one set of docks at Duluth a fleet of fourteen vessels has been filled with 64,000 tons of ore in twenty-four hours, while the steamer Wolvin, one of the largest carriers, has taken on 12,250 tons in the actual loading time of one hour and thirty minutes, being at the dock only three hours in all. Nowhere in the world is material placed on board vessels as rapidly as at these ore-shipping ports.—Cassier's Magazine.

Crucial Test.

"Yes, the prisoner was a woman of extraordinary nerve. They tried in every known way to make her nervous."

"That so?"

"Yes. They shot off a gun unexpectedly, yelled 'Fire!' and told her a distant powder blast was an earthquake. Still she was unmoved. Then they liberated a mouse."

"I'll wager a bank roll against a stogie that the mouse made her nervous."

"Not at all. She only stepped on it and laughed."

"Great Jupiter! Such a woman as that wouldn't lose her nerve if the earth exploded."

"Oh, yes. One of the detectives stepped up and whispered in her ear that her hair had been mussed up for two hours, and then she collapsed."

Tall men undoubtedly live longer than short men because short men are never very long for this world.

The easiest way to convince a woman is by refusing to try.

On the first page of this paper we print the excellent Thanksgiving sermon delivered yesterday by Rev. Geo. N. Edwards in the M. E. church. The same is full of meat and thought for study. Rev. Edwards is a deep thinker, and those who fail to hear him are missing some of the good things of this life.

The Christmas spirit is in the air and it is doubtful if there is a city in the state that has made more elaborate preparations for the holidays than our own. The merchants have responded to the feeling of buoyancy that the season creates and they have loaded the shelves and tables and even the floor space of their stores with everything that the season demands. They have bought heavily of holiday goods and everyone of the establishments is a veritable exposition of things that are beautiful and sensible.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will cover 250 acres.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will cost approximately $10,000,000 when the gates are opened in 1909.

Eleven large exhibit palaces will form the main picture of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition.

Many national conventions will be held at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition in 1909.

The management of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition has appropriated $100,000 for a live stock show.

One of the objects of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition is to make known and foster the vast trade of the Pacific Ocean.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will open June 1 and close October 15 1909.

Henry E. Reed, director of exploitation, of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, is now carrying on a campaign to secure state participation. Advices already received from governors assure the representation of many states.

It is estimated that 7,500,000 persons live in the section of country in the United States and Canada within a radius of 1,000 miles of Seattle, who are directly interested in making the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition the true exponent of their material wealth and development.

The masquerade ball given by the Degree of Honor last evening was certainly the most successful of any ever held in the city. Mrs. E. E. Nicholas as Night.

When a man says he always was sick—troubled with a cough that lasted all winter—what would you think if he should say—he never was sick since useing Ballard's Horehound Syrup. Such a man exists. Mr. J. C. Clark, Denver, Colorado, writes: "For years I was troubled with a severe cough that would last all winter. This cough left me in a miserable condition.
