SURPRISING STATE OF AFFAIRS COMES TO LIGHT

Servant of the People Endeavors to Usurp Right to Select Officials by Choosing Candidate for Them to Elect.

We are apparently going to have a lively school election tomorrow afternoon, caused, as usual, by the injection of matters entirely impertinent. We have learned from several sources of a story being circulated, and have, in fact, had the argument made to us direct, that if Dr. Hartt be elected he will appoint Mr. Risley as superintendent of the city schools.

Of course such a report is absurd, because there are three directors and a majority rules. But, nevertheless, hearing these rumors, we interviewed Dr. Hartt to find out what, if any, truth there was in them. The Doctor emphatically denies that there is any foundation whatever for such a report, and stated that those who started it manufactured it out of whole cloth. He further stated he never had any conversation with Mr. Risley in regard to the matter; that Mr. Risley never made any such proposition to him, and that he certainly never thought of Mr. Risley in such a position, much less speak of it. Mr. Risley also tells us that he is not a candidate, and that he will not be one under any circumstances.

The Doctor told us that at no time had he sought this office; that the first one to speak to him in regard to being a candidate was Mr. Mahaffy. Dr. Hart said: "He," Mahaffy, "came over to my house on Sunday, November 18th, and asked me if I would run for the office. He said he wanted to hold the position of superintendent for two years more; that if a hostile director was elected this year and another one next year, he could hold his position for one year anyway, but if he could elect a friendly director this year he could not be removed for two years. I told Mr. Mahaffy I could not consider it. He afterwards tried to induce others to be candidates but they refused. I had no further talk with him until the night when the city primary election was held. I was going home and Mr. Mahaffy stopped me and said he had heard my name mentioned on Tumwater Hill as a candidate for school director. He wanted to know if it was true, and if I was elected how I would stand towards him. I told him if his work was satisfactory he would have my hearty support. If his work was not satisfactory I would not support him, even if he was my father. He came to see me at my office several times after that and his interviews amounted simply to this, that he wanted me to run as his candidate, in his interest. I flatly refused to be committed to him in advance, or to run on any such conditions. I was finally persuaded to allow my name as a candidate by a number of citizens who did me the honor to say that they believed I could do a great deal to build up the character and standing of the schools. The people did not ask from me any pledge that I should remove anyone or support anyone. They had confidence enough in me to know that I appreciate the value to any community of good schools, and as far as I know they were not actuated by any motive other than a desire to have the standing of our schools second to none in the state."

If Dr. Hartt's statement, which we have written as literally as possible from memory, is true—and we believe it is—it is high time that a quietus be put upon this class of "pernicious activity." Perhaps in the whole range of human endeavor there is no calling of such importance to the people as that of a teacher. It follows that too great care cannot be used in the selection of teachers properly equipped to bring about the best results. The best interests of our boys and girls demand the employment of a man of recognized ability, a man fresh from some good university or college, up-to-date, enthusiastic, vigorous, and, withal, broad-minded; to bring our schools to the best standard. The board of directors select the teachers and it also follows that too great care cannot be exercised in the selection of that board. If a teacher thinks more of holding his job than he does of the good that he may accomplish in his calling, manifestly he is not a fit person.

It is a rule of the Civil Service Commission that "pernicious activity" of an official or employee results in his removal for the good of the service.

It is well known that Mr. Mahaffy attempts to commit directors in advance to his interests, so that he can hold his position. He tried to get Dr. Hartt to commit himself; failing in that, he tried to get other persons to run—they have personally told us of his requests. He employs the methods which are condemned by every enlightened public man from President Roosevelt down, and which the primary election bill now being unanimously passed by our legislature is aimed at — methods which every writer on the subject says have done more to corrupt our municipal government than all else combined. It is bad enough when such methods are employed in the election for a city marshal, but it is the limit when they are introduced into a school election. A superintendent of schools should in his life, at least, exemplify ordinary morals and ethics, so that his scholars should not find in him a pernicious example. But what can be said of the morals of a man who deliberately seeks to have persons run for an office pledged to him? What idea of American citizenship will his pupils have? Will the fathers and mothers of this city want their children to follow their superintendent's example in his methods of keeping a job? We think not.

BATTLESHIPS FOR PACIFIC

Definite News Concerning Scheme for Better Protection of this Coast.

A San Francisco dispatch says: It is authoritatively, altho unofficially, reported in local naval circles that the formation of a strong armored fleet on the Pacific Coast will be inaugurated by the dispatching to this city at an early date of the battleships Indiana and Iowa.

These two battleships will form the nucleus of the Pacific battleship squadron which will be further strengthened by the addition of the new battleship Nebraska, now nearly completed at Seattle, and the battleships Wisconsin and Oregon, which are now being extensively overhauled at the Puget Sound naval station. These five battleships may be reenforced during the next few months by two more from the Atlantic.

It is said to be the policy of the navy department at this time to unite the Asiatic fleet and the Pacific squadron into one great fleet, its component vessels interchangable, and all under the command of the three vice-admirals, which it is thought congress will authorize at an early date.

MAY LIMIT TRAIN SPEED

Illinois Legislature Seriously Considering Measure.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 26.—Aroused by recent numerous railroad wrecks and the appalling loss of life, Illinois legislators have begun seriously to consider laws regulating fast trains.

It is believed a law can be put through which will give passengers some sort of assurance that they can undertake a journey with some chance of getting to their destinations in good health and condition, instead of in a box or in fragments.

Logan Hay, of Springfield, who is a member of the upper house, said it was within the province of the legislature to regulate the speed of trains, both state and interstae, within the boundaries of Illinois. Lieutenant Governor L. Y. Sherman has contended for some time that this subject should be taken up by the legislature and given serious consideration. He is one of those who insists that fast trains are not necessary to the existence of commercial life.

The president, it is said, favors the provisions of the La Follette bill.

AT END OF CONGRESS

LEGISLATIVE CONGESTION SAID TO BE GREATER THAN USUAL.

If a Number of Important Pending Measures Remain Unpassed an Extra Session Will Be Needed---Night Sessions Have Begun.

Washingtion, Feb. 25.—The dangers that accompany a congestion of legislation confront congress. Members of both houses fully realize the grave embarrassment of the situation and they are exerting every possible effort to expedite public business. Senator Hale, acting for the chairman of the appropriations committee, openly counseled his colleagues Saturday to "get their houses in order," so that they could attend night sessions, beginning tonight.

The house of representatives, with the passage Saturday night of the sundry civil bill, has cleared up all but one of the big supply measures. The senate has yet to clear five of them. Indeed, with the exception of the postoffice bill, three of these measures have yet to go before the senate committees for their action before being reached.

Postoffice Bill Pending

The postoffice bill was reported as a "dummy" to the senate late Saturday afternoon, in order that when the committee reports consideration of it, which will be sometime today, it can be printed and ready for the senate without delay.

The agricultural appropriation bill, which has jogged along for a week, was Saturday forced over for final actino by reason of a strong fight made by Western senators against the government's forest reserve policy.

The congestion of business is in a way satisfactory to senate leaders, because it will force from the appropriation bills special legislation which is steadily increasing and against which the leaders have been fighting.

The time has come in the life of this congress when no private or public bill against which strong opposition develops, can pass. Hostility to special items in an appropriation bill is now sufficient to kill the drovision ifit cannot be so modified as to meet the wishes of the objectors.

Good Laws in Danger

But the danger of all this lies in the fact that meritorius legislation now can be easily defeated. It will require almost every minute of the time of the senate from now until noon of March 4 to consider and pass the supply bills, the failure of any one of which would require an extra session. The Aldrich financial bill and the agricultural bank bills are among those measures which the leaders desire passed.

The greatest bone of contention is in conference. All these measures that the senate is to act upon must go there for the purpose of having adjusted the differences between the two hoses. Then these reports must be sbmitted in detail to senate and house for adoption.

Important legislation has not for years been known to be as congested as it is today. Both senators and representatives are beginning to show evidence of the high tension and heavy strain under which they have been laboring for the last few weeks.

No Canteen for Old Soldiers

At Saturday night's session, and following a sharp debate, by a vote of 91 to 86, an amendment offered by Representative Bowersock, of Kansas, excluding the canteen from the national soldiers' homes was adopted. The galleries were crowded at the time by temperance advocates from all over the country.

J. Sloat Fassett, Republican, of New York, former candidate for governor of his state and a temperance advocate, made a speech in favor of the canteen, which electrified the house. It was not pleasant to be there to be confused with the representatives of greed, lust and rum, but he knew what experience had taught him in the case of the old soldiers. No one, he said, had asked these men whether they drank poison or rum when they offered their lives to the country. He said it was not a question of legislating to make these men moral in the evening of their lives, for that would be as useless as to legislate to make them intelligent, but it was a practical question of administering to the comfort and happiness of these men.

RAILROADS LOSE IN NEBRASKA TAX CASE

Washington, Feb. 26.—The cases of the Union Pacific and Burlington railroads against the county treasurers of Nebraska involving the tax rate upon the property of the railroads and calling into question the administration of the Nebraska state tax law, have been decided adversely to the railroads by the supreme court of the United States. The decisison was announced by Justice Holmes.

Omaha, Feb. 26.—The decision of the supreme court of Nebraska, which is upheld in the decision of the federal supreme court in the tax cases, means that the railroad parties to the suit must pay into the treasuries of the sixty-one counties interested an aggregate of about $3,000,000 of taxes now due, including penalties. This includes the taxes for three years.

EXPERIMENT WITH RAMIE

Secretary Wilson Will Try to Grow Valuable Chinese Fiber Plant.

Washington, Feb 23.—Indications now are that Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture, will score once more in his efforts to introduce into this country new crops for the lasting benefit of the farmers. After agitation running for some years, a favorable report has been made by a committee of congress for an appropriation providing for experiments to demonstrate the value of ramie as a crop to be grown in this country. Ramie is a fiber plant belioging to the nettle family, and as it is successfully grown in all portions of the Chinese empire and even as far northas Kore a and Manchuria, it is thought that it will flourish in nearly every section of the United States. The fiber is said to be much longer and stronger than that of flax, cotton, jute or silk. The fiber is pearly white and about as glossy as silk, and it will take colors with all the luster of silk. The consequence is that it is used as an adulterant of silk in China, and, when so used, really improves the goods by making them stronger and of better wearing quality.

The greatest difficulty in handling the crop has always been that there was no way except by hand work to remove a very sticky gum which binds the fiber together under the bark of the plant. Now it is asserted, however, that a amchine has been devised by which this can be done, and it is the purpose of the department of agriculture to establish a factory in which the value of the fiber and of the various machines for handling it will be demonstrated in order to show that there is a market for the crop in this country.

In favor of the crop, so far as the farmer is concened, it is noted that it bings at the pesent time in the open market from $90 to $200 a ton; that it is easily grown and treated; that it does not requrie annual planting but after being once established grows each spring from the roots left in the ground all winter; that the fiber can be removed two or three times every summer and that the stand gets better as the years go by. An average crop is 3,000 pounds to the acre a season. It is thought it will grow in nearly all portions of the United States. In fact it has been grown for a number of years in the botanical gardens in Washington, and the climate here is not very different from that of Ohio and Indiana and Southern Michigan.

SAYS STATE SHOULD CONTROL ROAD WORK

Olympia, Feb. 23.—Samuel Hill, president of the Washington Good Roads Association, and C. S. Lancaster, of the road division of the United States government, addressed a joint meeting of the committees on roads and bridges. To emphasize his estimate of good roads, Mr. Hill brought with him one of the new globes he had constructed last year. He pointed out the pathways of commerce that he insisted called for comprehensive development of the state system of highways.

Mr. Lancaster declared a central control by the state of road work would accomplish far better results than a return to any old system of widely scattered road building by inexperienced men.

UNION PACIFIC GETS ENTRY INTO SEATTLE

Seattle, Feb. 23.—All obstacles to the entrance of the Union Pacific into Seattle have been removed. That road will now enter Seattle along the proposed Fifth avenue south route.

Two quitclaim deeds, one for a strip thiry feet wide and the other for two 15-foot strips on each side of the 30-footstrip, have been filed in the county auditor's office by the Washington and Montana railroad, the name under which the Great Northern operates in this state, both deeds being signed by Louis W. Hill, president, and Edward Sawyer, secretary. This now gives the Union Pacific a right of way through the property of the Great Northern to its terminals on Jacksons treet.

TALK OF TIMBER FAMINE

Federal Forest Inspector Issues Warning Against Waste.

Chicago, Feb. 23—Unless the strictest economy is practiced a timber famine will result in the United States within the next few years, is the opinion of R. S. Kellogg, United States forest inspector, who spoke before the Western Society of Engineers. The output of timber has remained stationary for many years, while the demand has increased steadily.

White pine lumber has advanced 106 per ccent in price in the last 20 years. Economy must be practiced in the next few years in order to avert a timber famine.

Mr. Kellogg asid the annual output of forest products in the country amounts to $1,000,000,000.

Prssed Bill for Armories

Olympia, Feb. 27.—After a debate of three hours, for which a special order of business had been set aside, the senate passed house bill 292, by the joint commmittee on military affairs and soldiers home, which provides for the construction of armories for the national guards at Seattle, Tacoma and Spokane. The bill carries arpropriations of $130,000 for that at Seattle, $95,000 for the one at Tacoma, and $58,363 06 for the completion of the one at Spokane.

ELEVEN RESCUED

PRINCE DOES GALLANT WORK IN BERLIN DISASTER.

That Any of the Passengers Were Saved Largely Due to Determination of Henry of Holland---Thirty Hours of Dangerous Work By Lifeboat Men.

London, Feb. 22.—The worst disaster in many years in the history of the busy cross channel traffic between England and the continent occurred during a heavy gale shortly before 6 o'clock yesterday morning, when the Rotterdam mail steamer Berlin, from Harwich to Hook of Holland, having satisfactorily weathered the hurricane, was wrecked as she was entering port. There were 143 persons on board, and a large majority of them have undoubtedly perished.

The terrific seas broke upon the steamer with such awful suddenness that all attempts to save life appear to have been hopeless.

Hook of Holland, Feb. 23.—Largely as the result of the courage and determination of Prince Henry, of the Netherlands, the prince consort, that which last night appeared to be an impossible task has been acnhieved, and the heroic and unifinching efforts of the Dutch lifeboat men have succeeded in rescuing alive eleven more of the survivors of the illfated steamer Berlin.

The gallant Dutch lifeboat men were rewarded after more than thirty hours of hard and dangerous work. Buffeted and driven back time after time, they refused to relax their attepmts to rescue the handful of shipwrecked people, and finally at 3:20 in the afternoon, the receding tide and some improvement in the weather having made some conditions easier, their long fight was crowned with success.

Although several of the persons were in the last stages of exhaustion, they are now on the road to recovery and some of them have been able to tell of their awful experience. Two women and a child are still on board the wreck, but it is feared they are dying. Nothing daunted, however, the brave Dutchmen are preparing to make further desperate efforts to rescue them. The prince consort, after his firs tattempt to reach the wreck, when he saw there were still some survivors on board, declared:

"We won't return to The Hague before we save them. We must get them somehow."

Rescuers Are Cheered

The news that this determination had been fulfilled reached the waiting crowds and there was a wild rush of the people to the various points of vantage overlooking the harbor.

When the prince consort came ashore his face was radiant with grateful joy. Every Dutchman present forfeited his national reputation for stolidity by joining in a rousing cheer.

London, Feb. 23.—A dispatch from Amsterdam reports that the three survivors who were left on the remnant of the wreck of the steamer Berlin were rescued early this morning.

SAN DOMINGO TREATY IS RATIFIED BY SENATE

Washington, Feb. 26.—By a vote of 43 to 19 the senate last night ratified the Santo Domingo treaty. The ratification followed an executive session in which Mr. Bacon, of Georgia, condemned the treaty as worse than the one negotiated in 1905, which is now supplanted. The 1905 treaty authorized the United States to examine into the detts and pay what was justly due.

He declared this government has no right, under the constitution, to create a protectorate by treaty, and he was even doubtful if it could do so under an act of congress. "It means annexation, and nothing else," he said.

He believed it would be ground for similar proceedings in relation to other West Indian islands, and that it would extend to take in practically the entire group.

IMPORTANT RULING

Judge Wickersham Says Muck Mining Will Hold Claim.

Dawson, Y. T., Feb. 23.—Important news to all owning claims in the Forty-Mile, Tanana, Circle and other districts of Alaska, is brought by J. L. Sale, just from Fairbanks, in respect to the rulings of Judge James Wickersham, of the United States district court, sitting at Fairbanks and the United States appellate court., sitting at San Francisco.

Mr. Sale says that the appellate court has held that a discovery in the muck or surface rgound is deemed sufficient to hold a claim, and that the gold does not have to be discovered in the lower gravels so long as found elsewhere on the claim.

Even pannings with a pie plate, says Mr. Sale, were held to be sufficient to hold a claim. It matters not how few or how small the colors, so long as colors are obtained.

Dominican Government Accepts

Washington, Feb. 27.—Secretary Root has been informed that the Dominican government accepts the amendment to the Dominican treaty adopted by the United States senate.

STEVENS RESIGNS

CHEIF ENGINEER OF PANAMA CANAL WILL QUIT.

President Practically Decides to Abandon Contract Plan and Have Canal Built Under Supervision of United States Army Engineers.

Washington, Feb. 27.—By an order addressed to Chairman Shonts of the isthmian canal commission, President Roosevelt, as far as lay in his power under the existing law, transferred to the engineering branch of the army the responsibility for the construction of the Panama canal. He also formally recorded the abandonment, for the present at least, of the project of having the canal work done by contract on the percentage system. Another feature was the announcement of the resignation of Jonhn F. Stevens as engineer in chief of canal construction. Mr. Stevens is in New York, where he will today preside at a meeting of the directors of the Panama railroad company, of which he is president, and will, it is expected, formally resign that office.

The president intends that there shall be an entire reorganization of the commission, with three army officers of the engineering corps as the leading members, who are to have charge of the engineering feature of the canal work. The chairman and engineer in chief of the commission will be Maj. G. W. Goethals. His associates will be Maj. Du B. Gaillard and Maj. William M. Seibert, to rank in the order named. These officers are all comparatiely young, ambitious and energetic.

Senator Joseph S. C. Blackburn, of Kentucky, who will retire from the United States senate on March 4, is to be made a member of the reorganized commission. The nominaations of the present commmission now pending before the senate, include the names of Messrs. Shonts Stevvens, Haines, Endicott, Herrod, Gorgas and Jackson Smith. Their confirmation is desired in order to remove all doubt as to the legality of certain acts they haev performed in connection with the making of contracts. The retirement of Messrs. Shonts and Stevens will leave but two vacancies, so that there will be two more retirements necessary to make way for the three army officers and Senator Blackburn.

Work Shall Proceed

The president is determined that the work on the canal shall proceed continuously and the temporary "dislocations" caused by the resignations of higher officials will not be allowed to interfere with progress. The president is unaware of the specific reasons which have been influential in prompting Mr. Stevens to resign. It surprised him very much, for as late as the middle of December Mr. Stevens made no mention of his wish to retire. It has been known, however, that Mr. Stevens has been stung by criticism aimed at him in connection with the canal work, some of which came out during hearings of committees of congress. It is understood Mr. Stevens is leaving to accept a position in connection with a great engineering enterprise in this country at an annual salary more than double that he now receives from the government. His friends contend that the organization of the forces on the isthmus is excellent. Mr. Shonts is said to believe that he can now terminate his connection with the great enterprise without in any way jeopardizing its success.

Stevens Dissatisfied

For some weeks it has been rumored here that Mr. Stevens was dissatisfied with the plan of letting the canal work by contract, but, as explained by a member of the cabinet, Mr. Stevens really proposed to the president the adoption of this method of constructing the canal. The probability is that the administration may determine to give out the work to be done on the isthmus under contract under the general direction of the army engineers.

After Maj. Goethals and his army associates have been at the isthmus sufficient time to become fully acquainted with the work to be done, they will submit a report on the situation to the president. If they feel the work can be done better by contract than under the present system the question will again be considered by the president and the services of the same high class contractors whose bids are now rejected, or others of similar standing, may be invoked.

The president's reasons for making the changes and refusing all bids so far offered for building the canal, are noted in a letter to Chairman Shonts.

Cleary City Has Bad Fire

Fairbanks, Feb. 27.—A fire at Cleary city on Feb. 19 destroyed the Washington-Alaska Bank building, the Independent Market building, Gallaher building, San Francisco Clothing house and the F. D. Hall furniture house. The damage is $20,000. The fire started from an overheated stove over the bank.

Customs Collector Is Upheld

Washington, Feb. 23.—The board of general appraisers has affirmed the decision of the collector of customs at Port Townsend in assessing duty on 1,500 cubic feet of granite entered there by J. Ruthe and others. The importers provtested that the collector had not used proper methods of measurement.

Don't laugh. If you didn't look like this when you were a boy and lived away back in the country, your daddy did. Folks called him shiftless, and said he would never amount to shucks. Proof of Merit.

The proof of the merits of a plaster is the cures it effects, and the voluntary testimonials of those who have used Allcock's Plasters during the past sixty years is unimpeachable evidence of their superiority and should convince the most skeptical. Self-praise is no recommendation, but certificates from those who have used them are.

Allcock's are the original and genuine porous plasters and have never been equaled by those who have sought to trade upon their reputation by making plasters with holes in them. Avoid substitutes as you would counterfeit money.

Had Plenty of Confidence.

Augustus Thomas, the well-known playwright, was talking about first nights and the heartrending anxiety of them. "On my own first nights," he said, "I am a pitiable object, utterly without hope, convinced in advance that my play is bound to fail. At such times I often wish I had the self confidence of Charles Reade. He, after he had dramatized his novel of 'Never Too Late to Mend,' wrote on the margin of a certain passage, 'If the audience fails to weep here, the passage has not been properly acted.'"

Let the traveling public organize a national protective association, which shall employ able, conscientious and high-class lawyers, medical examiners and agents, and which shall devote its entire efforts to obtaining from the railroads proper damages for accidents due to lawlessness or negligence, in which category a large proportion of American railroad accidents come. CATARRH BLOOD DISEASED

AND SYSTEM DISORDERED

Catarrh is not merely an inflammation of the tissues of the head and throat, as the symptoms of ringing noises in the ears, mucous dropping back into the throat, continual hawking and spitting, etc., would seem to indicate; it is a blood disease in which the entire circulation and the greater part of the system are involved. Catarrh is due to the presence of an excess of uric acid in the blood. The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels frequently become torpid and dull in their action and instead of carrying off the refuse and waste of the body, leave it to sour and form uric acid in the system. This is taken up by the blood and through its circulation distributed to all parts of the system. These impurities in the blood irritate and inflame the different membranes and tissues of the body, and the contracting of a cold will start the secretions and other disgusting and disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh. As the blood goes to all parts of the body the catarrhal poison affects all parts of the system. The head has a tight, full feeling, nose continually stopped up, pains above the eyes, slight fever comes and goes, the stomach is upset and the entire system disordered and affected by this disease. It is a waste of time to try to cure Catarrh with sprays, washes, inhalations, etc. Such treatment does not reach the blood, and can, therefore, do nothing more than temporarily relieve the discomfort of the trouble. To cure Catarrh permanently the blood must be thoroughly purified and the system cleansed of all poisons, and at the same time strengthened and built up. Nothing equals S. S. S. for this purpose. It attacks the disease at its head, goes down to the very bottom of the trouble and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. removes every particle of the catarrhal poison from the blood, making this vital stream pure, fresh and healthy. Then the inflamed membranes begin to heal, the head is loosened and cleared, the hawking and spitting cease, every symptom disappears, the constitution is built up and vigorous health restored. S. S. S. also tones up the stomach and digestion and acts as a fine tonic to the entire system. If you are suffering with Catarrh begin the use of S. S. S. and write us a statement of your case and our physicians will send you literature about Catarrh, and give you special medical advice without charge. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, but no good resulted. I then began S. S. S., and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a short while was cured. This was six years ago, and I am as well today as any man. I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know there is nothing on earth better for the blood than S. S. S. Nobody thinks more of S. S. S. than I do. M. MATSON, Lapeer, Mich.

Colonel W. H. Peters came down from Seattle this week to get his new home, the Thompson residence in the Third Ward, in readiness for his family, whom he expects today. The Colonel, who is a very agreeable gentleman and, by the way, a stalwart republican, says he will open an office in the rooms formerly occupied by the Caldwell Real Estate Co., but will only do a general office law business, doubtless feeling that a lifetime spent in active trial practice entitles him to a partial rest. As secretary of the Clallam Land and Investment Co. he will, with President G. M. Rouse, become actively identified with the future growth of this city and county, and may be relied upon to boost his new home as he has the old one.

Mr. Day Has Unfortunate Accident

E. E. Day was the victim of an unfortunate accident Monday, while taking a man out to Lake Crescent to look after his place, being thrown from the wagon and having both bones of his lower leg broken. The horses started up unexpectedly, when Mr. Saylor, who was also riding out, was changing his seat, and a wheel striking a boulder, Mr. Day was thrown forward, his leg under the wheel. It will be some time before he can be about again and look after his business.

Gone with a Handsomer Man.

John—
I've worked in the field all day, a-plowing the stony streak;
I've scolded my team till I'm hoarse, and tramped till my legs are weak.
I've choked a dozen swears so as not to tell Jane fibs,
When the plow point struck a stone and the handles punched my ribs.
I've put my team in the barn and rubbed their sweaty coats;
I've fed 'em a heap of hay and half a bushel of oats,
And to see the way they eat makes me like eating feel,
And Jane won't say to-night I don't make out a meal.
Well said, the door is locked out here; She's left the key
Under the step in a place only known to Jane and me.
I wonder who's dying or dead that she's hustled off pell-mell;
Here on the table is a note—probably this will tell.
Good God, my wife is gone! My wife has gone astray;
The letter it reads, "Good-by, for I am going away.
I've lived with you six months, John, and so far I've been true,
But I'm going away to-day with a handsomer man than you."
A handsomer man than me—why, that ain't much to say;
There's handsomer men than me go past here every day;
There's handsomer men than me—I ain't of the handsome kind—
But a loviner man than I was I'll vow she'll never find.
Curse her! Curse her, I say, and give my curses wings;
May the words of love I've spoke be changed to scorpion stings.
Oh, she filled my heart with joy; she emptied my heart of doubt,
And now with the scratch of a pen she lets my heart blood out.
Curse her! Curse her, say I, she'll rue this day;
She'll some time learn that hate is a game that two can play.
And long before she dies she'll grieve she was ever born,
And I'll plow her grave with hate and seed it down to scorn;
And when her face grows pale and when her eyes grow dim,
And when he is tired of her and she is tired of him,
She'll do what she ought to have done—she'll coolly count the cost—
Then she'll see things clear, she'll know what she has lost,
And thoughts that are now asleep will wake up in her mind,
And she'll mourn and cry for what she has left behind.
And maybe she'll sometimes think of me, of me, but no,
I've blotted her out of my heart and I'll not have it so!
And yet there was something or other she had
That sort of fastened a man to her, and she wasn't entirely bad,
And she loved me a little, I think, although it didn't last;
But I mustn't think of these things—I've buried them with the past.
I'll take my hard words back, not make a bad matter worse;
She'll have trouble enough, she shall not have my curse.
But I'll live a life so square, and I well know that I can;
She always will sorry be she went with that handsomer man.
Ah, here is her kitchen dress; it makes my poor eyes blur;
It seems when I look at it as if 'twere holding her;
And there's her week day shoes and there's her week day hat,
And yonder is her wedding gown—I wonder she didn't take that.
'Twas only this morning she came and called me her dearest dear,
And said I was making for her a regular paradise here.
O God, if you want a man to sense the pangs of hell,
Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell.
I'll worship no woman again, but I guess I'll learn to pray
And kneel as you used to kneel before you ran away.
And if I thought I could bring my words on heaven to bear,
If I thought I had some little influence there,
I would pray if only it could be so
That I might be as happy and gay as I was half an hour ago.

Jane—
Why, John, what a litter here—you've thrown things all around.
Come, what's the matter, now, and what have you lost or found?
And here's my father here waitng for supper, too;
I've been riding out with him—he's that handsomer man than you.
Ha, ha, ha! Come, pa, take a seat while I put the kettle on
And get things ready for tea and kiss my dear old John.
Why, John(you look so strange—come, what has crossed your track?
I was only joking, you know; I'm willing to take it back.

John—
Well, if this isn't a joke with rather a bitter cream,
It seems as if I'd awoke from a mighty ticklish dream;
And I think she smells a rat; she looks at me so queer.
Good Lord, I hope she don't; I hope she didn't hear.
'Twas one of her practical drives; she thought I'd understand.
Before I break sod again I'll get the lay of the land.
One thing is settled with me—to appreciate heaven well
It's good for a man to have some fifteen minutes of hell.
—Will Carleton.

A Fragile Pendulum.

You know, of course, that if you fill a tumbler or goblet to the brim, or a little above the brim—for you can "pile up" the water a little bit by pouring very carefully—and then press a large card down tightly on the top of the filled glass with one hand, grasp the glass with the other, and turn it upside down, you can take away the hand that holds the card without spilling a drop of water. The card will stick to the edge of the glass as if it were glued there, and it will hold up the glassful of water.

You know, too, that it is the pressure of the air that supports the card and the water. The air presses upward on the lower face of the card with a force of fifteen pounds for every square inch of surface, and as the top of the glass measures five or six square inches there will be a pressure of seventy-five or ninety pounds to hold up the card and water, which weigh only about half a pound.

It is only the size of the mouth of the glass, not the size of the whole card, that counts, because on the outside part of the card the air presses up and down with equal force, and so has no effect.

GLASS LIFTED BY THE AIR.

Now, as the force of the air is many times stronger than is needed to lift the water suppose we make it lift something else in addition, say the heavy glass.

To do this, press the card on the full glass as before, but instead of inverting the glass lift up the card by two opposite corners. If you are very careful and the card is very stiff you may succeed in lifting glass, water, and all in this way, but the card is apt to bend and let in a little air somewhere, which, of course, spoils the trick. Here is a better plan.

Make a little hole in the middle of the card, pass a cord through the hole, make a knot on the end of the string close to the card, and stop the hole tightly with a drop of sealing wax. Now, if you press the card on the glass of water carefully you can lift the whole affair by the cord, and if you fasten the other end of the cord to a hook the curious pendulum will swing a long time if you cautiously set it going.

It is best to rub a little grease on the rim of the glass to make it fit the card perfectly and adhere slightly, and it is advisable to experiment with a cheap glass in a place where water may be spilled without damage.

In Our Lane.

There's a little gray bird in the apple tree,
And every day
When I go to play,
I stand for a minute to hear him sing,
And I peek for the nest where the apples cling,
And look for his home that he's hid from me,
Where the big red apples cling.
And early, early, when daylight comes,
I watch the sun-
Flecks, one by one.
I lie for a minute and think how sweet
It is to live in this little street,
With a pretty bird to feed with crumbs,
And a boy next door, and things to eat.
Once mother said, "Who loves you true?"
I didn't say
Just right away,
But stood for a minute, then said: "Oh, yes;
The cunning little gray bird, I guess!"
But I don't think mother meant that; do you?
—St. Nicholas.

Dog that Brought Luck.

One rarely hears of a stray dog found practically starving in the streets of a city rising to fame and bringing fortune to its benefactor. Such, however, is the history of the celebrated dog Brigadier, which, forty years ago, after being hustled about the streets of Manchester, found a sympathetic friend in the late Mr. Foulkes of that city.

Finding the dog in the street homeless, Mr. Foulkes took it home, and with it, after careful training, succeeded in winning the Waterloo cup. With the money thus won Mr. Foulkes purchased a hotel at Withington, a suburb of Manchester, which he renamed the Waterloo Hotel.

In a quiet spot of the hotel grounds stands a tombstone, erected to the dog's memory.

Curious Friendship.

A curious case of friendship between birds most strangely assorted is reported in the London Globe from Rosenberg, in Prussia. A hen had just hatched a single chicken, when one morning, nobody knows how, there appeared in the nest a young sparrow, just beginning to wear its first fluff of feather. The chick and the sparrow became fast friends at once, and the parent hen, taking kindly to the changeling, gave equal care to both alike, the sparrow hopping about the nest at first, and the hen never going far away, and sheltering both her young at night, until, as the sparrow's wings grew stronger, he at first indulged in little flights, returning to the sheltering wings at night, and finally disappeared altogether into the sparrow world.

CURE FOR SMOKING LAMPS.

Daily Cleaning as Well as Frequent Boiling of Burners Needful.

Nearly every family uses lamps even in this day of new inventions, for after all neither gas nor electricity can equal the soft, steady glow of lamplight for reading and sewing. But unless a person has been educated in their proper care the result is bound to be unsatisfactory. However, nothing is simpler, and there is absolutely no reason for a lamp smoking or scenting the room with the unbearable odor of kerosene if a few rules are adhered to.

Daily cleanings of every lamp in use should be as much a part of the housewife's duties as making the beds and the boiling of burners at least once in a fortnight is as important as the weekly sweeping. Wicks should not be trimmed with shears, but wiped off with a soft cloth, for in the former case there are always jagged or uneven portions left, which cause the flame to flare and the lamp to smoke. By carefully wiping off the charred portions of the wick each day a steady, symmetrical light will be obtained.

Another precaution to take to prevent wicks from smoking is to boil them. Buy them in bunches, place in a porcelain kettle, cover with strong vinegar, bring the latter to a boil and set where the kettle will keep warm for three hours.

Drain out the wicks, dry thoroughly and keep away from dust. Wicks thus soaked almost never smoke.

If chimneys are bought in quantity and boiled they also may be prevented in a great measure from breaking. Lay some shavings in the bottom of a wash boiler, pack in the chimneys, throw a handful of salt over them and fill with cold water. Allow to come to a boil slowly, simmer for two hours, then take from the fire, cover thickly, so that they will be at least three hours in cooling. When cold wash the chimneys in hot water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse in hot water, dry and store in a closet.

Boil all the metal portions of lamp burners in strong soda water for ten minutes, rinse and dry in sun or on the stove. Chimneys should also be washed in hot soda water, rinsed well and dried with crumpled newspapers.

Never leave the wicks turned up when the lamps are not in use, for the oil will ooze out and run down the base, creating not only an unpleasant odor but being disagreeable to handle. In carrying a lamp from one room to another, turn down the wick in transit, but never allow the wick to remain turned down, for it is sure to smoke and smell disagreeable.—New York Telegram.

FRUIT BY ELECTRICITY.

Englishman Says Apples and Grapes May Be Plucked in Mid-Winter.

B. H. Thwaite, an English electrician, is authority for the statement that fresh apples all the year around are a commercial possibility even in cold climates. Fresh grapes, he says, may be plucked from the vines in March and ripe cherries picked in December. The fruit, he says, can be ripened by electric light.

"Fruit culture by electricity," says Mr. Thwaite in a recent interview, "is no new thing. It was first tried twenty years ago; and it has now reached a commercial phase. Extensive experiments have been made in Manchester, under my direction, and the results were thoroughly encouraging from a business point of view.

"William Siemens was able to show twenty years ago apples, bananas and other fruit which he had brought to maturity by electric light. He had advanced his experiments a considerable way when he died and I took them up where he stopped. Electric light can be produced at enormously lower cost to-day than in his time.

"The artificial development of the plants, also, can be helped along by other means. They need not only light, but carbonic acid. I feed them with it by artificial means. Then, besides bathing them in electric light, I apply a feeble electrostatic current, and this not only stimulates the roots of the plants but kills all parasites.

"The fruits which I produce are, therefore, always sound, and they excel, besides, in size, flavor and aroma. Common sense and simplicity are the characteristics of the new method. Any fruit grower can apply it easily and at trifling expense."

DARING OF DYNAMITE MAN.

Death May Come at Any Time, But He Does Not Fear It.

"Some day I guess 'twill get me. We never know."

J. B. Boone, professional powder man, dynamite and nitroglycerin handler, moved cautiously about a fire as he talked. At his feet lay fifty pounds of dynamite—frozen. Three feet away was a roaring fire. He was at a stone quarry at Courtney, Mo., where the night before 500 pounds of his material had exploded. And he had built the fire to thaw out more.

"This is the dangerous part of the work," he said. "The jar of a cinder popping from the fire striking this dynamite would make it explode. A twig snapped against it or some object dropped upon it would bring the end. Dynamite is not exploded by heat. It requires some jar—some friction. When it is frozen—and it freezes sooner than water—it is fairly safe to handle. But in thawing the warmer it gets the more sensitive it is. When these sticks are warm a dime dropped upon them will make them explode. It's a dangerous business."

No screen was between the dynamite and the fire where "the powder man" worked. If he feared that fatal cinder popping from the dry sticks in the fire he did not show it. In a methodical, careful way this grave, quiet man worked swiftly and silently by the fire.

"I began it with my father when I was 15 years old," he said. "More than twenty years now I've been a powder man and—well, I'm here today, anyhow."

But he would venture no prediction for the morrow.—Kansas City Star.

FIFTY POUNDS OF PAINT.

Among the recollections of Capt. Charles P. Low is the memory of an amusing bit of comedy which occurred on the Houqua, a clipper-ship, during one of his first voyages. One Saturday afternoon, late, the sailors had just finished holystoning the decks and painting the bulwarks. The second mate had a fifty-pound keg of black paint in the paint locker on one side of the bowsprit, under the topgallant forecastle. Unfortunately the sailors owned a large Borneo monkey or baboon, and he had been made fast on the bowsprit within reach of the paint.

Like a monkey, always full of mischief, he upset the bucket of paint, which ran down the scuppers as far as the mainmast over the clean white decks.

The second mate, as soon as it was found out, caught the monkey and swabbed the paint up with him till he could hold no more, and then threw him overboard; but this made bad worse, for the monkey caught the side ladder hanging over by the main rigging and came up, and before any one could stop him, ran the whole length of the bulwarks, leaving the black paint all over the fresh straw-colored paint, and making an awful mess.

The man who owned him caught him and hurried him into the forecastle, but it was "All hands to clean ship;" for the decks had to be scraped and wiped off and then painted again for Sunday must find the ship in perfect order.

As for the monkey, the men turned to and shaved him clean, and he was the worst-looking animal that was ever seen. The second mate was as angry a man as could be for a time, but soon got over it after the ship was set to rights again, and he never molested the monkey, who was a great pet.

Trolley on the Highways.

In districts where the construction of permanent tramways would be out of the question owing to prohibitive initial cost there are in use in Germany and France electric transport systems running on the ordinary roads. These draw their supply of electricity from overhead wires similar to those in use in tramway working.

Provision is made for passenger traffic by means of omnibuses run singly or with a trailer, while freight traffic is handled by motor vehicles drawing two or three trailers. The first of such lines was opened in 1901 and since that time quite a number of services have been inaugurated in different districts. The routes are for the most part comparatively short. One of the longest lines is that of the Charbonnieres-les-Binius, near Lyons, which is worked with six motor cars of a seating capacity of thirty-eight passengers each.

A line is also working between the towns of Neuenahr, Walporthian and Ahrweiler. A line is working regularly in connection with an industrial center in the neighborhood of Wurzen, Germany, over which thirty wagons are taken either way daily.

Permanent Trellis of Wire.

The scarcity of bean poles forces me to resort to other means of giving support to my lima beans, says a gardener in Farm and Fireside. At one time I thought we could get around the difficulty by planting the newer bush limas. The latter however have never given me more than a fraction of the crop that I can and do get from my "pole" limas, and now I plant the latter exclusively. They are trained to a post, wire and string trellis.

Posts should be set firmly, and not too far apart. I use galvanized wire of fair strength and find it good for a number of years. It has to stand quite a strain, as the load of thrifty vines is very heavy, and I, therefore, give as much support, by supplementary stakes (between the posts), as is convenient. The wires are made to rest in a crotch at the upper end of the pole or stake.

To make the trellis still stronger, I

now put several rows side by side, and connect the posts and stakes across the rows by cross strips fastened high enough to allow the horse in cultivating to pass under it.

For each row I stretch two wires, one about six inches above the ground surface, the other about five feet from the ground. Common binder twine is wound zigzag around the two wires. It makes a useful and quite ornamental support for the limas, and the vines take readily, particularly and remarkably so, to the strings, even without much assistance or coaxing on the part of the grower.

Superiority of the Mule.

The mule is less nervous than the horse and therefore loses less energy in useless fretting. In fact, one of the chief characteristics of the mule is his ability to take care of himself under all circumstances, says Farming. Much of the apparent shirking which is charged against the mule is an inborn tendency to husband his strength and make every effort count. The result of this instinctive care on the part of the mule is that he is able to turn out more work than would be possible for a horse of the same weight under the same conditions. The mule instinctively avoids holes, sharp obstacles, barbed wire fences and various other forms of danger which are not so successfully avoided by horses. It is a matter of common observation that in instances where mules run away they seldom injure themselves to any serious extent.

Fumigation to Protect Orchards.

In Germany some interesting experiments have recently been made in the protection of orchard trees against night frosts by means of fumigation. A part of an orchard in bloom was thus successfully guarded against an April frost by the dense smoke of napthalene. But the experiment was very expensive, fifty kilograms of napththalene being consumed by seven flames in one hour. Later a new preparation of chemicals was tried, producing a comparatively large volume of smoke with the expenditure of only two kilograms of the material per hour. These trials are under the direction of an experimental gardening association.

Pulling Old Fence Posts.

Fasten chain to post close to the ground, pass it over the wheel of an ordinary corn planter, hitch team to chain and go ahead. It don't damage the wheel and the broad tire keeps it from sinking into the ground.

POST-PULLING DEVICE.

Setting Fence Posts.

Some farmers argue that it is best to set posts early in the fall, when the ground is solid. Of course, a post carefully set at any time will remain in its place, but the fall season is really a much worse time than in the spring. Digging the hole makes the soil loose, and if done in the fall it has not time to become compact again. Water filters down through the loose soil, which will raise the post a little every year until it throws it out altogether. If the soil has time to settle it absorbs less moisture, and after the first year, if the heaving out has not already begun, it will rarely begin.

Anthrax and Earth Worms.

From recent experiments it is certain that earth worms are responsible for conveying the spores and anthrax from various buried carcasses to the surface of the earth and thus bringing about a reinfection. This process of reinfection was urged by M. Louis Pasteur, but without success.

Make an Asparagus Bed.

Here is a reminder from one who evidently appreciates the good things every farmer may have in his garden. He advises everyone to make an asparagus bed, and says very truly it is easily and quickly done. Asparagus needs a rich, mellow, warm soil. Manure the ground thoroughly with well rotted stable manure. Plow eight to ten inches deep or deeper. Plant in a long row. Pulverize thoroughly with disk and harrow. Secure a hundred 2-year-old plants at a cost of from 50 cents to $1. Open a row with plow or a cultivator. Set plants two feet apart in row with crown three inches below surface. Press soil firmly about plants, fill up the row and cultivate same as corn or beans, and next year you will have an abundance of delicious and healthful food, and the same will continue for years if you keep free from weeds and add each year a fresh supply of farm fertilizer.

Value of a Silo.

It is very important to provide some means by which the dairy cow can be supplied with good food at all seasons of the year in order that she may yield milk most economically. Such medium may be found in the silo which furnishes a place for the storing of food in the form of silage. It is a well-known fact that the nearest an ideal food that can be obtained for the dairy cow is good pasture; but for several months in the year green pasture is not available. At such times the best substitute are corn silage and such roots as mangels and turnips. Corn yields an average of twice as much dry matter per acre as root crops; and since the latter involve much more labor, and greater expense, silage is far more economical.

How to Grow Rhubarb.

Have the ground on which rhubarb is grown very rich, it requires well-rotted manure. Divide the roots, allowing one tuber to the hill. This should be done every other year. Keep the dirt hoed up loosely around them and as soon as the first leaves come and begin to droop over on the ground, cut them off; this will start the stalks to growing the taller and straighter. All stalks should be cut when they begin to droop toward the ground. Never pull them, for if you do, you take with them the shoots for the next stalks and also break the small roots that help nourish the plant. Cut them one inch above the ground. Always cover with about three inches of straw in the fall. Follow these rules and your pieplant will yield abundantly till frost kills it.

Home-Made Corn Sheller.

This is a cheap way to make a good corn sheller. Get a poplar plank six inches wide, one inch thick and three feet long. Dress the plank smooth; drive some 8-penny nails into the plank to within one inch of the heads; put them one-half inch apart in rows in a square six inches each way.

THE HOMEMADE CORN SHELLER.

Bees and Smoking.

Many times bees are smoked more than is necessary; perhaps, because not every one knows that during a nectar flow some honey is lost every time a hive is opened, says Farming. When bees are smoked they fill themselves with honey and if so much smoke is used that most of the bees in the hive at that time take honey, it will be more than an hour before it is redeposited into the cells and the regular work resumed. Bees sometimes gather nectar enough to make a pound of honey an hour, so one can see that it would be quite a loss if every colony in a fair sized apiary were smoked enough to interrupt the work for one hour.

To Ripen Cream.

Cream left to itself will become sour spontaneously. This is the result of the growth of lactic acid bacteria, which feed upon the milk sugar, and as a final process convert it into a lactic acid. Other forms of bacteria are always present in cream; some have little or no effect in the ripening process, while others, if allowed to develop, produce undesirable and often obnoxious flavors. To cultivate and develop these "wild" germs is called "spontaneous" ripening, and is often attended with uncertainty. Good butter making demands the use of a "starter," either home-made or a pure culture. The former should be made of selected skim milk.

Keeping Hogs Clean.

To give the pigs a thorough scrubbing may appear to be labor thrown away, but if two lots of pigs are treated alike in every respect, except that one lot receives a thorough scrubbing with soapsuds once in a while, there will be a marked difference in favor of the hogs that are washed when the time for slaughter arrives. A clean bed of straw with a dry house, so as to afford them comfort at night, will also promote thrift and growth. The hog is naturally a cleanly animal and enjoys a bath. If considered a filthy animal, that devours filthy food, it is because of the treatment given. Hogs will select clean and wholesome food if given the opportunity to do so.

SPENT MUCH MONEY

SHORT SESSION MAKES RECORD ON APPROPRIATIONS.

Amount Is Practically a Billion Dollars---Besides Appropriations Considerable Important Legislation Has Been Enacted. Adjournment Monday Noon.

Washington, March 4.—More money has been appropriated during the short session of the Fifty-ninth congress, which passed into history at noon today than during any previous session. The amount approximately is a billion dollars.

Two big battleships for the navy were authorized, and for the artillery corps appropriations were also made. A general service pension bill was granted to veterans of the Mexican and Civil wars, and like provisions were made for army nurses. For river and harbor improvements the appropriations aggregated $83,000,000.

Increased salaries were given to cabinet officers, the vice president and senators, the speaker of the house of representatives and its members, to ambassadors, ministers and consuls, to postoffice clerks and letter carriers.

The public made more inquiries for information from the document rooms of congress regarding the ship subsidy bill, the currency measure and the bill regulating the hours of labor of railway employes than any other pending leg slation. Ship subsidy died hard in the last hours.

The imigration bill, one of the measures brought over from the long session, was completed under the spur of the president, that he might meet the California-Japanese situation by giving the administration control of coolie transportation through passports. The bill further restricts the admission of aliens to this country. A bill was passed for the establishment of an agricultural bank in the Philippine islands. The fr e alcohol law of last session was modified so that farmers may distill waste products to be denatured.

The right of appeal in criminal cases was granted the government, a measure intended to strengthen the anti-trust legislation by affording a means whereby the supreme court may pass on the constitutionality and construction of such laws. An intestigation was ordered regarding the condition of women and child workers. The interstate commerce commission was authorized to ascertain if the express companies of the country are evading the railroad rate law of last session by buying, selling and handling on consignment fruit, vegetables and oysters.

Reed Smoot was retained as a senator from Utah, ending a four years controversy.

The senate ratified treaties with Santo Domingo and Algericas.

The president was authorized to use his good offices to prevent atrocities in the Congo.

The senate also launched an exhaustive investigation of the Brownsville affray.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP DISCUSSED IN U. S. SENATE

Washington, March 1.—Senator Patterson, of Colorado, yesterday advocated on the floor of the senate governmental ownership of railroads under condemnation proceedings at an estimated market valuation of $11,000,000,000. He presented a comprehensive plan of operation calling for the appointment of a non-partisan transportation board, acting under supervision of an enlarged interstate commerce commission

Senator Patterson's plan contemplates an exchange of securities to finance the scheme, and declared that the bonds issued for this purpose would readily sell at 3 per cent. Continuing, Senator Patterson said::

"The power of the railway potentates is undiminished, the half dozen managements controlling all lines combining to thwart the government and mold it to their own ambitions.

"Railway lobbies everywhere overshadow the legislative sessions. The political conventions, backed and controlled by the railroads, put their guardians in public offices, bidding those elected to serve their wills. This deadening influence extends from the top to the bottom of the political system."

Safety Before Speed

Washington, March 4.—Postmaster General Cortelyou has issued instructions defining the attitude of the postoffice department regarding fast mail trains. He states that while the department should insist upon the most expeditious service possible, it should not exert its authority to such an extent as to compel the establishment of railroad schedules inconsistent with entire safety to all persons carried on these trains. The postmaster general thinks that there is danger of some of the roads being ovvertaxed in the matter of speed.

Cleary City Has Bad Fire

Fairbanks, March 1.—A fire at Cleary city on Feb. 19 destroyed the Washington-Alaska Bank building, the Independent Market building, Gallaher building. San Francisco Clothing house and the F. D. Hall furniture house. The damage is $20,000. The fire started from an overheated stove over the bank.

FRUIT GROWERS FEDERATE

Organization Formed for Purpose of Steadying Prices.

Seattle, March 5.—For the purpose of making prices more stable and to prevent the understocking or the overstocking of any one market, various fruit growers of the state met at the Diller hotel last night, and after a quiet session affiliated themselves into an association known as the Federation of Washington Fruit Growers. The organiaztion was brought about as a result of a suggestion made at the convention of state horticulturists at Everett in January of this year. Since then the matter has steadily attracted interest throughout the state, and two weeks ago the project was lifted out of the abstract by the announcement that a meeting would be called at Seattle The organization will be completed at a meeting today.

Seattle, March 6.—At a meeting of the delegates from the various fruit and produce growing sections of the state, held yesterday at the Diller hotel, the Federation of Washington Fruit Growers was formally organized, and its campaign for the betterment of produce market situations throughout the state commenced.

Senator W. H. Paulhamus was elected president, E. T. Balch, of Wenatchee, vice president and B. E. Harrison, of East Sound, secretary-treasurer.

ARMIES OF NICARAGUA AND HONDURAS FIGHT

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, March 6.—The army of Honduras is mobilizing upon the frontier under the command of President Bonilla, whose arrival at the front has inspired the troops with enthusiasm for a series of operations against Nicaragua. The first fighting since February 18 occurred the evening of March 3, when Gen. Chamorro, a Nicaraguan leader, who, serving with the Hondurans, attacked and defeated 400 Nicaraguatn troops and captured fifty prisoners. The Honduran loss was small.

Mobile, Ala., March 6.—The Thacker line steamer Mercator has just arrived from Puerto Cortez, Spanish Honduras. According to statements of passengers, Nicaragua forces are on Honduras soil in great numbers and making rapid advances. There is fear, according to passengers, that Gen. Leo Christmas is hemmed in in the Oilanche district.

In Puerto Cortez preparations are being made in event of an attack which is feared not so much from the Nicaraguan land forces as by the small navy of that country.

"Wha Honduras now fears more than war with Nicaragua," said a passenger, "Is internal troubles. A revolution among its own people is threatened. Americans are prevented from leaving Honduras except by permission from the minister of war. If an American desires to leave he makes application to the commandante, who telegraphs the minister of war for permission. Conditions in Honduras are really alarming."

Washington, D. C., March 6.—The gunboat Princeton, now in Southern California waters, will be ordered to Central America to assist the cruiser Chicago in looking after American interests threatened by the war between Nicaragua and Honduras.

It has also been decided to send either the Dubuque or Paducah to Bluefields, Nicaragua, to assist the Marietta in looking after American interests in the Caribbean sea.

Jamaican Governor Resigns

London, March 5.—The resignation of Gov. Swettenham, of Jamaica, has become an accomplished fact, and he will leave that island as soon as his affairs can be arranged. The governor sent his resignation in January 23, as the result of the incident involving Rear Admiral Davis. It was the desire of both the American and British governments to smooth the trouble over and the colonial office, while tentatively accepting the resignation, left the door open for him to reconsider, but, according to a statement by Under Secretary Churchill in the house of commons, Swettenham has now definitely decided to resign.

SENATOR SPOONER HAS TENDERED RESIGNATION

Washington, March 4.—Senator J. C. Spooner has written a letter to Gov. Davidson, of Wisconsin, tendering his resignation as senator of the United States, to take effect May 1 next. The letter was dated Saturday, but the fact that such a letter had been written or that Mr. Spooner contemplated resigning did not become known until late Sunday, when it created great surprise, and the Wisconsin senator at once found himself the subject of many anxous inquiries. To all these he answered that his mind was fully made up. He had found, he said, that to continue in his present position would require a sacrific on his part that he could not justify himself in making. In reply to questions he said he would resume the practice of law, but declined to say whether he would be located in Wisconsin. He did say, however, that he would continue to be a citizen of that state as long as he lives.

Whatcom Soil Survey

Washingtonn, Feb. 28.—The bureau of soils announces that a survey of the soil in the western part of Whatcom county will be made in May.

FOR REFERENDUM

HOUSE PASSES BILL FOR CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Bill Providing for Torrens System of Land Transfers Also Passed By Lower Branch of Legislature--Emergency Clause Added to Gunn Bill.

Olympia, March 2.—The house has passed the house measure providing for submission to vote of the people a constitutional amendment for the initiative and referendum. The vote was 66 ayes and 25 noes, or one more than a constitutional majority The house also passed the measure providing for the Torrens system of registration of land titles, extending to seven years the time for removal of timber from state lands, which is now five years; passed the bill authorizing Gov. Mead to name four new superior court judges and for the election of their successors—one each for Whatcom, Spokane and Kittitas, and one for Benton, Franklin and Adams jointly; passed the senate bill providing for the metropolitan park system and a number of other bills, some of which caused considerable debate.

The referendum bill has been one of the most interesting ones before the house for several days and has been several times shifted about by the committee on rules to prevent it being brought to a vote. At other times the house has reached it and hastened to adjourn, but the advocates of the bill inssited on a vote, and when it came there were enough men pledged to vote for it in addition to those actually in favor of it to procure its passage.

The same bill has been on the senate calendar for several days, but put over from day to day on motion of Senator Cotterill, its chief hampione, who desired to have it votedc on in th house first. There was a better chance of passing it in the house and he desired the prestige of its passage there to help it through the senate.

The passage of the bill by the house brings it before the senate in the best possible shape, since if that body fails to pass it it will be the senate record on the measure that will be read against its individual members in future campaigns for the election of members of that body. This will make it difficult for senators to vote against the measure who desire to continue in politics in districts where there has been an active campaign for the bill conducted.

Olympia, March 1—Senator Gunn's bill for the exemption of moneys and credits from taxation, which passed the house without an emergency clause, was taken up in the house yesterday and amended by adding an emergency clause. The senate at once concurred in the amendment. The bill went to the governor last night and if he favors the bill he can sign it in time for this year's assessment.

T. D. RCockwell, member of the state tax commission, recommended the emergency clause. The bill has a provision preventing banks from setting off debts against credits.

BOERS WIN AT POLLS; TO RULE IN PEACE

London, March 6—Gen. Louis Botha will be chosen premier and minister of native affairs for the Transvaal by the new parliament of the colony. The remainder of the ministry will also be made up from the Boer party.

This means that the Boers will rule the Transvaal, the scene of much rivalry and bloodshed. In the recent elections, the Boer party, or Het Volk, won 37 seats, the Progressives, or British, won 21, the Labor party 3, the Nationals 6, and the Independents 2.

The Het Volk, Nationals and Laborites, forming the Boer affiliation, have a majority of 23 in parliament.

The victory of the Boers is remarkable. Although outnumbered by the English-speaking electors, they swept the colony in the election, securing the victory largely through the support of Englishmen who were opposed to rule by mine owners. The victory in peace is a sharp contrast to the defeats of the Boer war.

Louis Botha, the new premier, commanded the Boer forces at the bloody battle of Spion kop, where the English met terrible defeat. He was also one of the most stubborn of the Boers, rejecting very liberal terms offered by Lord Kitchener in 1901, which included amnesty and the return of the Boer prisoners from exile, and self government. Still, he is not now regarded as a radical.

Winthrop Assistant Secretary

Washington, March 5.—It is announced that the president has tendered to Beckman Winthrop, governor of Porto Rico, the position of assistant secretary of the treasury. Mr. Winthrop has accepted the appointment and will assume his new duties soon.

To Remove California Capital

Sacramento, Cal., March 5.—The assembly has adopted a resolution providing for the removal of the state capital to Berkeley by a vote of 59 to 19. It has already passed the senate. It must now be voted on by the people.

DOOR LOCKS ARE EASY.

Expert Finds Only One Fastener Warranted to Keep Out a Crook.

"There's only one lock in the world that I can't open if you'll give me a few minutes at it, and as for ordinary door and drawer locks, I'll open them as easily as if there was no lock there. Any expert burglar can do the same."

The foregoing statement was made by an experienced locksmith of this city.

"Few persons know how insecure their homes are," he continued. "Few persons realize that the average lock is absolutely worthless for keeping out an experienced burglar. The ordinary door lock is good for nothing but reminding casual business or social callers that they must ring to be admitted. None of these ordinary door fasteners—and that's the best you can call them—will deter a burglar two whole minutes. If there's no key in the lock he soon fits one to it. If there is a key in the lock, he inserts a pair of pincers and in ten seconds has it opened. Understand me—I am speaking of the experienced burglar. The clumsy burglar is the one who gets into trouble. He'll fumble around with a lock until somebody hears him. There is only one unpickable lock made. That's the six-pin lock made by the government. It will defy any expert. There are six little steel pins in the lock, which have to be raised just a certain distance to open it. Some of the pins are one-fourth of an inch long and some of them half an inch. If one of the pins lacks even a hair's breadth of being raised the proper distance, the lock will not open. It baffles all the experts."

This locksmith is so expert he can open the majority of the safes by putting his ear to the combination and listening to how the tumblers click into places as he turns it.

"I intended at one time to be a burguar," this locksmith declares. "I had it all planned out, even had a set of burglar's tools made. Then I decided that honesty was the best policy and I stuck to my trade."—Kansas City Times.

WIT OF THE YOUNGSTERS.

Visitor—How is it that you can only count up to ten, Tommy? Small Tommy—'Cause that's all the fingers I've got.

Uncle Joe—If you keep on, Harry, you'll soon know as much as the teacher. Harry—Huh! I'd know as much now if I had the book before me at the time like she does.

"Why do you want a light left in your room when you go to bed, dear?" asked Elsie's mother. "Are you afraid?" "No, mamma," replied Elsie; "I want it so I can see to go to sleep."

Little Nellie—Oh, mamma, I met a little girl to-day who never saw a cow! Mamma—Indeed! Who is she? Little Nellie—I don't remember her name, but she said her papa was a milkman.

"Mamma," queried little Florence, "should I say pants or trousers?" "Trousers, my dear," replied the mother. "Then," said Florence, "I must give Fido some water, for he trousers just awfully."

"Mamma," queried little Fred, "how old will I be on my next birthday?" "You'll be 5 years old if you live, dear," replied his mother. "Yes, but suppose I don't live," continued the small inquisitor, "how old will I be then?"

One day when it was thundering very loud Willie, aged 5, said: "Mamma, I guess the angels must be cleaning house." "Why do you think so, dear?" asked his mother. "'Cause," was the reply, "I hear them moving the furniture around."

"Pshaw!" exclaimed little Margie after hearing the story of Adam and Eve, "that old serpent couldn't have tempted me with an apple, 'cause I don't like apples." "But," suggested small Elsie, "s'pose somebody had told you not to eat apples?"

Trifle Absent Minded.

It is seldom that ministers compete with one another to tell stories that task the credulity of their hearers, but upon one occasion Rev. Stephen W. Dana, pastor of the Walnut Street Presbyterian church, carried off the honors. "There was a physician whose absent-mindedness was so marked that it often caused queer complications," said Dr. Dana. "Why, when he was married the minister told him to place the wedding ring on his bride's finger. He reached for her hand, felt her pulse, and, as it was naturally beating faster than normal, exclaimed: 'Let me see your tongue.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Nature's Soap.

Near Ashcroft, in British Columbia, are a number of small lakes, whose shores and bottoms are covered with a crust containing borax and soda in such quantities and proportions that when cut out it serves as a washing compound. The crust is cut into blocks and handled in the same manner as ice, and it is estimated that one of the lakes contains 20,000 tons of this material.

THE FOOL AND HIS MONEY.

Some Schemes of Wildcat Promoters for Parting the Two.

The fact that one of the firms of pseudo-bankers infesting lower Broadway has been taking the fools' money for five years is an indication of its success, says Success.

Now half a dozen mushroom "banking" houses, with elaborately furnished quarters in New York, and branch offices in all the larger towns in this country and Canada and even abroad, are using this ingenious scheme to sell spurious mining, oil and manufacturing stocks.

The house most successful at the game has forty branch offices here and abroad, besides agents in many smaller towns. It brings out a new company every little while and sells the stock usually by the mail order and agency system.

Years of experience have given these parasite promoters an invaluable "sucker list"—little investors all over the country whose financial credulity has not been shaken by repeated losses. These "investors"—wage earners, country merchants, clergymen, teachers and other professional men—are reached through circulars and letters.

The first stocks sold by this house paid cash dividends for a while, and the "investors" who were doubling and tripling their savings bank incomes spread the glad tidings among their friends. The cash dividends were followed by scrip dividends—in some cases by no dividends at all. The stockholders who complained too loudly were offered in exchange for their unsatisfactory stocks other stocks in new companies brought out by the house.

A "trust fund" established "for the protection of investors" is made up, supposedly, of sound mining stocks, and when an investor gets tired of one spurious stock he can send it in and exchange it for something else. This, of course, is just as spurious, but it keeps the victim quiet for a while.

He is advised to hold the stock until the mine strikes the expected bonanza ore, when the stock will rapidly increase in value. In this manner the house manages to keep its dupes quiet for many months and to sell them more stock besides.

JAPAN TO OWN RAILROADS.

Nation to Pay Double the Cost of the Private Lines.

Now that the Japanese government has undertaken to nationalize seventeen private railways, having a total of 2,887 miles of line, at a cost of 421,500,000 yen ($210,000,000), or about $73,000 a mile, the latest annual report of Ichiji Yamanouchi, director of the imperial bureau of railways of Japan, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1905, becomes of the highest historical and comparative value.

The total mileage open for traffic in 1905 was 4,693, divided as follows: Government railways, 1,461 miles; private railways, 3,232 miles. This showed an increase of nearly 198 miles over 1904.

Calculating the Japanese yen at 50 cents (commercially 49.8 cents), the cost of construction of the mileage was:

	Cost.	Per mile.
Government railways	$ 76,051,649	$52,054
Private railways ..	120,502,452	37,284
Totals	$196,554,101	$41,882

It will be perceived that the Japanese government now pays almost double the original cost of constructing the private railways, and there is no suggestion of graft or excessive valuation in the transaction. The price paid was twenty times the average of the net earnings from operation for 1902, 1903 and 1904, divided by the cost of construction and multiplied by the paid-up capital.—Railway Age.

SPOILED HIS PLAN.

Worm Wrecked Michigan Man's Crop of Railroad Ties.

The best laid plans of mice and men go often wrong: Dr. A. H. Sauerman, who lives a few miles east of Union City, Mich., conceived a plan a few years ago whereby he expected to make a fortune. He planted quite a tract of land of yellow locust trees, setting them close together in rows, the tract containing something like 50,000 thrifty young trees. Their growth was hastened by frequent cultivation, good fertilizing and irrigation and they attained a most thrifty growth until last autumn.

Dr. Sauerman's idea was to care for these trees for a few years until they had reached a sufficient growth to be used for railroad ties, when they were to be marketed and the tract of ground replanted again to trees. An investigation showed that a small worm was creating havoc with the trees, boring into the trunks and in some cases weakening the trees so that they fell over in a strong wind. And thus the genial doctor's visions of a fortune have gone a-glimmering.—Manistee Times.

There's Nothing New.

The Chinese had the printing press
When Moses was a boy,
And printed all the news, I guess,
About the fall of Troy.
The things that ours we proudly call—
Machines to reap and sow—
The Chinese knew about them all
Six thousand years ago.

Gunpowder, paper, ice cream, steel—
They knew about each one
Before the Roman placed his heel
The conquered world upon.
They hit on everything, 'twould seem,
And I've no doubt, O, no,
Some Chinese poet used this theme
Six thousand years ago!

SHOOT AT HUMAN TARGETS.

Frenchmen Bring Bloodless Dueling to an Exact Science.

Shooting at human targets merely for the sport derived from it and as a test of marksmanship, in other words, bloodless dueling or fencing with pistols, has been made possible through the invention by a Frenchman of a harmless wax projectile. This new diversion is really no more serious than fencing with swords and has that spice of realism in it that tends to make any sport popular.

The new bullet is an ingenious device and required a great deal of experiment before being perfected. The situation was thus: A heavy projectile must necessarily have a wounding force, a light one loses its precision and a soft bullet will be changed in shape and describe an irregular trajectory; therefore a harmless projectile to be effective must differ from all these. The Frenchman's product is a spherical ball of wax-fat, with a small charge, and in tests twenty-four balls were lodged in succession in a rectangle four by five inches at twenty yards. At a six-day tournament held in the Tuileries the efficiency of the wax bullet was demonstrated.

The combatants wear thick screens for masks, with heavy glass over the eyes, and wear thick clothing to prevent bruising from the impact of the balls. The distance is 25 paces and the weapons are revolvers. The director of the combat, keeping his gaze fixed upon a metronome which beats eighty to 100 times a minute, makes the inquiry as in an actual duel, "Are you ready?" and when they reply "Yes" the director, timing his words exactly to the beats of the pendulum, cries, "Fire—one—two—three!"

At the command "Fire!" the adversaries raise their weapons and shoot. The two shots must be made before the command "Three!" As the participants in these trials were experts they made a good average, hitting their man six or seven times out of eight shots. Although more than 1,600 balls were fired, there was not the slightest accident.

The wax bullets can be used in apartments as well as in the open air without the inconvenience of the lead ball of small caliber, which will probably lead to its introduction into the armies of the various nations for practice shooting.—Popular Magazine.

RESULTS NOT AS PLANNED.

Nature Turns Assouan Dam Into a Joke on England.

Every year sees new harnessing of nature's forces by man for his uses. But Mother Earth seems to have a sense of humor and gratifies it by turning man's devices into means for his discomfiture. The dam of Assouan is the latest humiliating instance of a tremendous achievement producing results opposite to those planned.

That mighty engineering work was to be the monument to the British occupancy of Egypt. It was to end all famine in the Nile valley. There was to be no further dependence upon the chances of the seasons for the enrichening overflows. Held within Assouan's mammoth reservoirs, the fertilizing flood could be released whenever needed. The Nile crops would be perfect and the people happy each year, instead of at such intervals as the whim of the river willed.

All the nations applauded England when the work that was to make Egypt a land of plenty was completed. But nature had not been consulted with sufficient care. And to-day the Egyptians are damning the dam of Assouan with oriental fervor.

Outbursts of fanatics, aggrieved because some of the most sacred relics of the past have been submerged might be disregarded. But there are more practical reasons for the growing discontent. Water, once an occasional boon, now is had in plenty. But the crops are not what they were when the Nile attended to its own overflowing. Grain is scantier, and cotton, the country's most valuable product, is deteriorating, its once unequaled fiber approaching every year nearer similarity with the more brittle, least costly American staple.

The explanation is simple. It was not the Nile flood but the fertilizing matter held in solution that richened the soil. Those properties are precipitated when the water is held stagnant behind the barrier at Assouan. England, thinking its work finished, finds that it has only begun a more difficult task. Dame Nature has had her joke.—New York Mail.

PLEASANT SURPRISE PARTY

Appreciative Friends Remember Mrs. Capt. Jones 67th Birthday.

A party from Dungeness, Seguin, Blyn, and Port Williams gave Mrs. Capt. Thos. Jones a surprise Saturday evening, (the occasion being the 67th birthday of Mrs. Jones) at her residence, Sunburst, near Port Williams.

Their friends wished to show the old couple how much they desired to keep in touch with them. So, after they had made themselves welcome, one of the crowd brought in a handsome telephone, of The Farmers Mutual Telephone Co. of Seguin, with the compliments of their friends, and wanted to know where they desired to have it placed. Mrs. Jones remarked she had better carry it in her arms. (So it would be handy.) A place was soon chosen and the instrument duly installed. Mrs. Jones was asked to ring up Central, which was promptly answered, "Hello," when other congratulations were spoken from that end of the wire.

Aside from the 'Phone, friends did not forget the inner man; refreshments were served, which all partook of, showing they were all in good health—by their appetites. Following are the names of the donors.

Messrs. and Mesdames Wm. Hamilton, Chris Miller, J. W. Grant, Chas. Carpenter, Carl Hamilton, John Smith, Fred. G. Cydell, John Dickinson, John Ward, Otto Halverson, George Hamilton, Chas. McDougall, Dr. Wm. McGeorge, A. Silver, Wm. Patterson, Wm. Ward, Mrs. Rose Dellson.

At midnight all wished their friends many happy returns of the day and took their departure.
