PACIFIC COAST FLEET

PLANS COMPLETED FOR CONSOLIDATION OF WARSHIPS

Groups of Ships Will Remain the Same as at Present, but Will Meet for General Drills.

A statement from the navy department shows that the group of ships in the Pacifie will remain in the same general position and perform much the same duties they have at present. They will, however, meet for general drills and exercises.

The department does not expect to send any of the battleships now in the Atlantic to the Pacific. The first squadron of the Pacific fleet will be made up of the following vessels:

First Division—West Virginia, Colorado, Maryland and Pennsylvania; second division—Chattanooga, Galveston and two others of the same class.

The second squadron will consist of these vessels: The third division—Charleston, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Chicago; fourth division—Albany, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Raleigh

The third squadron will consist of: First division—Rainbow, Concord, Helena, Wilmington; sixth division—Volcano, Quiros, Villalobos, Callao, Paraguay, Pampanaga, Panay, Arayet.

The coast defense vessels Monterey and Monadnock and a number of submarines will be in this division; also two torpedo flotilla, including the Barry, Date, Decatur, Chauncy, Brainbridge, Paul Jones and Preble.

To Protect Young Timber.

By the President's proclamation of March 2nd, it is claimed by the forest service that a great step has been taken towards the protection of standing timber from indiscriminate slaughter, says the P.-I. Care is said to have been taken to eliminate any land from reservation which might possibly be suitable for cultivation.

The additions to the Olympic national forest are merely a few small areas, aggregating 119,000 acres, which have been withdrawn from settlement for some time. They are heavily timbered, but for the most part lie within old burns. The lands are absolutely unfit for agricultural purposes, lying on high, steep slopes of the Olympic range. All the additions carry a great deal of dead cedar and a dense stand of young fir, cedar and hemlock. The additions on the western side were formerly included within the Olympic.

Investigating for Mountaineers Club

A. Curtis of Seattle was here this week securing data regarding the proposed trip of the Mountaineers' Club to Mt. Olympus this summer. He went up the Elwha in company with Guide Sisson to get an idea of the lay of the land. The Club will definitely decide upon their outing at a meeting to be held this evening. Mr. Curtis, who is one of the best known photographers of the Northwest, is particularly desirous of adding fine views of Olympic mountain scenery to his collection; he is also a leading spirit in the Mazamas, being one of the two or three who actually reached the summit of Mt. Baker on their trip last year. He says there will be about 100 in the club; that if they come here all their supplies for their two months' outing will be bought in town, and ten horses engaged for packing purposes.

The Great Magicians.

Monday and Tuesday evenings, next, the people of Angeles will have an opportunity to witness the brilliant work of Prof. G. Mortimer Slocum and Mme. Melba Hermann, renowned operators in magic, at the Opera House. While the engagement of The Missouri Girl for last evening was cancelled, the coming attraction, it is believed, will give even greater satisfaction.

Surveying North from Summit.

Monday morning a crew of surveyors started in at Summit, ten miles from Elma on the Grays Harbor branch, to make final location of the line from that point to the Homa Homa river, to which stream the route was already selected by the crew which was withdrawn recently to send to the west side of the Olympics, says the Call. Permanent location has been made from Quilcene, the present southern terminus of the P. T. S., a distance of between 30 and 40 miles.

Last summer the N. P. ran a preliminary survey from Summit north, and the surveying party now on the ground will make a final selection of route.

Some three years ago the N. P. improved the branch line to Summit, putting in concrete culverts and other permanent improvements costing thousands of dollars.

Again Working at This End.

Engineer Fitch and crew, having completed the preliminary survey to Junction City, returned to Angeles this week and are going over the ground again to Morse Creek, and will also run a few preliminary lines a little further on, and will then take up permanent location work.

Would Save the Big Trees.

There ought to be a law against the crime of murdering the supreme kings of the forest. A tree whose life is traceable to the time of Christ should be exempt from the vandals. If the tree is monstrous the crime of cutting it is still more monstrous. One of the most stately monarchs of the Washington forests is marked for slaughter near lake Whatcom this week. It is a cedar, 63 feet in circumference, over 300 feet in height, and is estimated to be 2,000 years old. Some saw mill man, with no greater sense of propriety, or reverence, or sentiment, than a siwash would show the works of Michel Angelo, is cutting it to make shingles and boards. It is the largest known tree in all the surrounding forest, and is slashed to earth with the greediness that ought to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of the man or men responsible for its destruction.

For Joint Institute.

Superintendent Risley returned from Port Townsend today, where he has been endeavoring to arrange for a joint institute at Port Angeles this year. At a meeting of the Townsend teachers, all expressed a desire for the innovation, and Supt. Phillips believes the county teachers will not object. Jefferson county institutes have an attendance of 30 to 35 and Clallam about 50. Much more interest would be taken and better work done by a joint institute.

ORDER WILL RESTORE THIRTY MILLION ACRES

Washington, March 12.—President Roosevelt will sign an order restoring to entry approximately 30,000,000 acres of land recently withdrawn as coal lands. Secretary Garfield, of the interior department, is completing the details of this order and expects to have it ready for the preisdent's signature tomorrow. The land was part of a withdrawal aggregating 64,000,000 acres. Since the withdrawal experts of the geological survey have been engaged in ascertaining the coal bearing value of the withdrawn lands, and while lands to be restored to entry are still classified as coal lands it is understood their value as such does not warrant their exclusion from pubilc entry. The location of the lands and the details of the order are withheld until the president's approval is given.

Jute Mill Again in Operation

Walla Walla, March 9.—After several months idleness 300 penitentiary convicts are again at work in the jute mill, 150 bales of jute having arrived. Work of turning out sacks will not start for several days, as it takes some time to get warp on looms, and this must be done before finished product can be turned out. The consignment of jute is only a small part of the amount contracted for—3,500 bales. The work of enlarging the mill is expected to start soon after the bill making the appropriation for the purpose passes the legislature.

COURT UPHELD IN LAND FRAUD CASES

San Francisco, March 12.—Judges Gilbert, Ross and Hunt, of the United States circuit court of appeals, have upheld the United States district court of Oregon in the cases of ex-Congressman Williamson, Marion Biggs and Von Gesner, convicted of land frauds. The contention made in taking an appeal was that it was no crime to violate a rule of the land department. The court conceded that had a mere rule of the department been violated no criminal offense would have been committed, but that the present case was not one merely involving the violation of a rule, but a crime prescribed by law against conspiracy and perjury.

WALL STREET SCARED

PRESIDENT PROMISES TO SEE RAILROAD MEN.

Interview Is Arranged by J. P. Morgan---Pointed Out That Railroads and Other Corporations Are Much Alarmed Over Attitude of Administration.

Washington, March 12—J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York, was in conference with President Roosevelt for two hours yesterday. The financier came here at the request of certain business men of New York to discuss the business situation, particularly as affecting the railroads. He asked the president to grant an interview to four railroad presidents, which request was granted. The object of Mr. Morgan's visit was to urge the president to take some action to allay the public anxiety now threatening to obstruct railroad investments and construction.

Mr. Morgan pointed out to the president, it is said, that the financial interests of the country are greatly alarmed at the attitude of the administration toward corporations, and particularly railroads. At Mr. Morgan's earnest request, president Roosevelt has agreed to have a conference with four leading railroad presidents, Messrs. McCrea, of the Pennsylvania; Newman, of the New York Central; Mellen, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and Hughitt, of the Chicago & Northwestern, to determine if some agreement can be reached as to the relations between the railrods and the administration.

Harriman May Participate

It is probable that E. H. Harriman, head of the Harriman lines, may also participate in the conference, which, it is understood, will take place at the White House within a few days.

After boarding his train shortly after midnight to return to New York, Mr. Morgan dictated to the Associated Press the following statement:

"At the recommendation of many business men, before leaving for Europe, I came to Washington to see the president to discuss the present business situation particularly as affecting the railroads. I suggested to the president that it would be greatly in the public interest if he would see Mr. McCrea, Mr. Mellen, Mr. Newman and Mr. Hughitt and confer with them as to what steps might be taken to allay the public anxiety now threatening to obstruct railroad investments and construction so much needed, and especially to allay the public anxiety as to the relations between the railroads and the government. The president said he would be glad to see the gentlemen named with this end in view.

Hard to Negotiate Loans.

B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the board of directors of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad, who had an interview yesterday with the president and members of the interstate commerce commission regarding the railroad situation, told President Roosevelt that the agitation in various states regarding 2-cent fares and the reduction in freight rates have made it almost impossible to negotiate loans on their securities. He declared that "the railroad men are willing that the supervision of railroads be centralized in the national government."

"That," he added, "would restore confidence and give the people to understand that the railroads wish to observe the laws, and it would stop the hostile legislation in various states."

GREATEST OF RAILROAD BATTLES PREDICTED

New York, March 9.—As a direct result of the interstate commerce commission's investigation, it is reported on Wall street that an action is to be started to compel the Union Pacific to dispose of the Southern Pacific stock and divorce the two corporations entirely.

It is said that the Harriman interests have been tipped off and are preparing to make one of the most desperate fights in railroad history to prevent the execution of the commission's recommendations

Washington, March 9.—Interstate Commissioner Knapp refused to confirm the Wall street report of the suit against Harriman. He said: "I will take testimony April 4, and cannot make a decisive answer before then. I cannot state what the course will then be."

Fishburn, of Ellensburg, a member of the state board of dental examiners, succeeding himself. Julius C. Hubbell, of Ellensburg, was named member of the state fair commission, succeeding W. H. Talbot, term expired.

Steffen Visiting Seattle

Sacramento, Cal., March 9.—Lincoln J. Steffen, the celebrated magazine writer, and who is studying corruption in the various cities of the United States, leaves here Monday for Seattle.

LANE SUGGESTS RELIEF

Lumbermen May Ask for Joint Rate By Way of Portland.

Washington, March 9.—Lumbermen in the Puget Sound region have complained to the interstate commerce commission that they have been unable sincee January 2 to obtain transportation of their products to Eastern points because of the inability of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads to handle the traffic. Commissioner Lane, of the interstate commerce commission, has received letters from lumbermen west of the Cascade mountains saying it is impossible for them to get their products to Missouri river points and asking whether the commission cannot afford them some relief.

Commissioner Lane has suggested that they can make formal complaint to the commission requesting it to grant them a through joint rate from the Puget sound region via Portland, Or., over the Northern Pacific, and thence via the Oregon Short Line and Union Pacific to Missouri river points.

The Great Northern and Northern Pacific admit that they cannot carry more than a fourth of the lumber that is offered, but heretofore they have refused to permit the Oregon Short Line or the Union Pacific to make a through route or a joint rate with them.

It is expected that the lumermen will act upon the suggestion of Commissioner Lane.

ROOSETELT TO MEAD ON FOREST RESERVES

Olympia, March 11.—Gov. Mead has made public the following letter which he has received from the president regarding the forest reserves in the state of Washington:

"The White House,
"Washington, March 3, 1907.

"My Dear Gov. Mead: I enclose herewith a copy of a letter from Mr. Gifford Pinchot, chief forester. I call your especial attention to our experience with the Olympic reserve. In this a very large elimination was made some years ago in repsonse to a plea that it was more valuable for agriculture than for timber; but, as a matter of fact, the lands were almost entirely taken up under the timber and stone act, are largely today without settlers, and their extremely valuable timber has passed into the hands of a few timber companies.

"I agree entirely as to the admirable character of our new commissioner of the general land office, Judge Ballinger. During this coming summer I intend to have Secretary Garfield, Commissioner Ballinger and Chief Forester Pinchot go most carefully over the whole forest reserve matter, and, so far as practicable, have them visit personally at least some of the reserves. If it shall appear that any of the reserves we have made, whether recently or of old date, included agricultural land, that land will be restored to entry. But it is surely destructive in the highest degree to the interests of the country and the interests of the state of Washintgon to turn over rich timber land to great syndicates, who skin it and leave it worthless. We wish to use the forests, but to use them in the way that every really civilized people does use them; that is, to preserve them for future generations. In short, we wish to administer the lands so that they will be preserved for the actual home makers and for the children who are to come after them. I am sure, my dear governor, that this is also your purpose, and that no man is better able to put it into effective form than your fellow citizen, Judge Ballinger, of Seattle, whom I have just appointed commissioner of the general land office, and who enters upon his duties tomorrow.

Sincerely yours,
"THEODOER ROOSEVELT.

"Hon. Albert E. Mead, Governor of Washington, Olympia, Wash."

Traffic Men in Conference

Chicago, March 9.—Traffic men from every part of the country west of Chicago are gathered here in conference regarding transcontinental rates. The general situation is being gone over and the result, it is said, will be a large number of changes in the rates and in the minimum weights, which will increase railroad revenues in nearly all the territory. It has already been practically decided to make an increase in minimum weights alllowed in carloads, which will in itself materially increase the revenue from freight cars.

Said N. P. Will Rush Construction

Everett, March 9.—President Elliott, according to information received here, has announced that work on the Olympic peninsula will be rushed this summer. He expects that the Port Ludlow-Port Angeles line will be completed this year, and that before 1908 a car ferry will be running between Everett and Ludlow.

SUGAR TRUST SUED

FORTY MILLIONS ASKED BY PENNSYLVANIA REFINERY.

Complaint Alleges Violation of Sherman Act and Conspiracy to Prevent Plaintiff From Engaging in Sugar Refining Business---Receiver Behind Action.

New York, March 9.—A suit asking for $10,000,000 actual and $30,000,000 tentative damages has been commenced in the United States circuit court by the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company against the American Sugar Refining Company, H. O. Havemeyer, its president, John C. Parsons, the corporation's general counsel, and G. E. Kissel, Walter D. Robinson, George L. Trigg and Morris J. Werner. The action grows out of the failure onf Adolph Segal, in Philadelphia, whose bankruptcy, involving millions, was one of the financial sensations of last year, coupled as it was with the death of Bank President Frank R. Hipple, of Philadelphia. The complaint alleges that the defendants, in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, conspired to prevent the plaintiff corporation from engaging in the refining of sugar, and actually did succeed in preventing it from operating its plaant. Because of this, it is claimed, the plaintiff suffered an actual monetary loss of $10,000,000. The federal statutes permit the plaintiff to sue for treble damages.

The Allegations

The complaint states that the plaintiff was cpitalized at $5,000,000 and had in December, 1903, erected in Philadelphia a sugar refinery and was ready to begin operations. December 20, 1903, the company alleges, a meeting of the refinery's board of directors was held, at which the defendants, Kissel, Rabinson, Trigg and Werner, who composed a majority of the board, were present. A resolution was adopted, it was claimed, that no proceedings looking toward the commencement of operations should be taken without further orders of the board of directors. Through the complete and absolute control of the board which, it is charged, the defendant directors had, the refinery had been kept closed, and thereby prevented from becoming a competitor of the sugar trust.

Segal Was Decoyed

The complaint alleges that Adolph Segal, promoter of the Philadelphia sugar refinery, was "decoyed" into the power of the "trust" by Gusav R. Kissel, of New York, who procured a loan of $1,250,000 for Segal on condition that Kissel have control of a majority of the stock of the company and be given power to name four of the seven directors. This having been agreed to, Kissel, who, it is said, was acting under the direction of John C. Parsons for the defendant corporation, put four clerks in the banking house and had them adopt the resolution which kept the refinery closed. When Segal finally awakened to the true condition of affairs, it is asserted, he went to Kissel with the amount of the loan and offered him a bonus of $100,000 besides, but Kissel would not receive it. Consequently the new refinery in Philadelphia, which was capable of putting out 4,000 barrels of refined sugar a day, has never turned a wheel, it is declared.

George H. Earle, receiver of the Philadelphia company, it is said, is the moving force behind the action.

RUEF ARRESTED AT SUBURBAN RESORT

San Francisco, March 9.—Abraham Ruef, the indicted boss of San Francisco, was arrested last night at the Trocadero, a well known resort about six miles from the center of the city, by William J. Biggy, who was yesterday afternoon appointed by Judge Dunne as elisor, after the sheriff and coroner had spent two days in a vain hunt for the elusive boss. He was brought to the office of Assistant District Attorney Heney and remained there for nearly three hours, after which he was taken to the St. Francis hotel under guard for the night. Ruef seemed to regard the whole matter as a joke. He has promised to make a statement later.

HELPS LAND-OFFICE AFFAIRS

Garfield and Ballinger Will Spend Much Time in West.

Washington, March 12.—Secretary Garfield and Land Commissioner Ballinger expect to spend considerable time in the West during the coming summer familiarizing themselves with the work of the interior deparment. Mr. Garfield feels that he can better acquaint himself with Western conditions and public land affairs by personal observation and conversation with field officers than through official correspondence.

Mr. Ballinger understands the land question in its many ramifications, but he is already convinced that the public land administration can be greatly improved, both in his office here and in outlying offices, and it is probable that as a result of his trip there will be radical reforms in local land offices and in the inspection service in the fields.

SUIT INVOLVES TITLE TO SHORE LANDS OF STATE

Olympia, March 13.—The case of the Brace & Hegbert Mill Company, against the State of Washington, now being argued before the superior court of Thurston county, will settle the question as to whether the state has any right, title or interest to the shore lands of Lake Union and Washington.

John W. Roberts, of Seattle, is appearing, with J. A. Faulknor, for the state. He is representing the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition. The law requires that the suit shall be tried in the county that the capitatl is situated in. This action was brought by the mill company to quiet title to land which they have occupied since 1888, situated at the end of Lake Union in the city of Seattle.

In the suit they claim that the state has no title and never did have, to the shore lands of the lake; that the title rests with the owners of the shore lands. This question was raised long before the passage of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific bills, and was pending at the time the bills passed. The suit is expected to settle the question of title to lands valued at over a million dollars.

There is little doubt that the case will be taken to the supreme court whatever the decision of the lower court.

BIG FRENCH BATTLESHIP DESTROYED BY EXPLOSION

Toulon, France, March 13.—The powder magazine on board the French battleship Jena blew up at 1:35 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and as a result Capt. Adigard, commander of the battleship, Capt. Vertier, chief of staff of the Mediterranean squadron, and from 70 to 80 blue jackets are dead, while Rear Admiral Manceron and hundreds of men are suffering from injuries. Naval circles are aghast and the public is stunned by the appalling catastrophe, coming so soon after the loss of the French submarine boat Lutin, in which sixteen were killed.

The entire after part of the Jena was blown to pieces.

The primary cause of the accident was the explosion of a torpedo. What causes the explosion is not known, but the powder magazines of the Jena were set on fire and the results practically destroyed what was considered one of theb est vessels in the French navy.

Homeric City Found in Greece

Berlin, March 12.—The announcement that William Dorpfeld, head of the German archaeological Institute of Athens, has discovered in the island of Ithaca what he believes to be the ruins of a Homeric city, has greatly interested archaeologists. Remnants of the walls and of monochrome decorated earthenware, as well as a number of more laborately ornamented vases, have been discovered. Some distance from the ruins of the city was found a cavern containing evidences of prehistoric inhabitants. Under the convent of St. John, Herr Dorpfeld found a temple with Doric and Ionic columns.

Railroads Fight Nebraska

Omaha, March 9.—In retaliation for adverse legislation, culminating in the passage of the 2-cent per mile passenger fare bill by the Nebraska legislature, all Nebraska railroads, including the Union Pacific, Burlington, Northwestern, Missouri Pacific, Rock Island and Great Northern, have issued circulars absolutely abolishing all classes of reduced fares. The circular calls attention to the fact that it is the purpose to make the 2-cent rate the only possible rate to apply on Nebraska passenger fares.

Ruling in Rockefeller Case

St. Louis, March 9.—The Standard Oil Company and John D. Rockefeller must stand trial in this city. Four judges of the United States circuit court sitting on the case decided that the government's ouster suit can be brought to St. Louis for trial regardless of what portion of the country they may have their legal residence. Seventy defendants, including Rockefeller, Rogers and Flagler, must answer.

Moyer Trial to Be Held in April

Boise, Idaho, March 9.—Attorney Hawley, chief prosecutor in the case of the state against Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, said yesterday at Caldwell that the case against the federation officials who are charged with complicity in the assassination of former Gov. Steunenberg, will probably be called for trial about the middle of April.

Spring Medicine

The best is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is the best because it does the most good.

While it makes the blood pure, fresh and lively, it tones the stomach to better digestion, creates an appetite, stimulates the kidneys and liver, gives new brain, nerve and digestive strength.

An unequaled list of cures—40,366 testimonials in two years—proves its merit.

Sarsatabs—For those who prefer medicine in tablet form, Hood's Sarsaparilla is now put up in chocolated tablets called Sarsatabs, as well as in the usual liquid form. Sarsatabs have identically the same curative properties as the liquid form, besides accuracy of dose, convenience, economy,—there being no loss by evaporation, breakage, or leakage. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. C. I. Hood Co., Lowell, Mass.

Mrs. J. F. Gee, 50 Gould Street, Stoneham, Mass., says: "In 25 years experience I have never known Hood's Sarsaparilla to fail, for spring humors and as a general blood purifier; it cures scrofula, eczema; has no equal as a general spring medicine. It gives me genuine satisfaction to say this."

To Pickle Green Tomatoes.

Slice thin a peck of full grown green tomatoes. Pour over them enough vinegar to cover, and add to each quart of vinegar an ounce each of whole cloves, allspice, pepper, two ounces of yellow mustard seed and two white onions, chpped fine. Boil all together for a minute, then set aside to cool, and in a week they will be ready for use.

Stood the Test.

Allcock's Plasters have successfully stood the test of sixty years' use by the public; their virtues have never been equalled by the unscrupulous imitators who have sought to trade upon the reputation of Allcock's by making plasters with holes in them, and claiming them to be "just as good as Allcock's."

Allcock's plasters stand today indorsed by not only the highest medical authorities, but by millions of grateful patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

Sour Sauce.

One cup of granulated sugar, one-third cup of butter, one heaping tablespoonful of flour, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-half a nutmeg, grated. Cream the sugar, butter and flour together, add the vinegar and nutmeg and then pour in about a pint of boiling water, stirring the sauce while pouring in the water. Cook for a few minutes to thicken.

THE SUGAR WE EAT.

Average of Seventy-five Pounds a Year for Every Person.

He would have an idle mind indeed who, as he dropped his one or two lumps into his morning coffee, turned to wondering how many pounds of sugar he uses in one way or another during a twelvemonth, and if he tried to guess he would probably hit far from the truth, says the Providence Journal. When, however, the government gives the information, as it does in a statement given out recently through the Department of Commerce and Labor, the busiest man may without loss of self-respect give passing notice to the curious fact. The total consumption of sugar in this country for the last year for which complete figures are in the government's possession aggregate almost two and three-quarters millions of tons, an average annual consumption for each inhabitant of about seventy-five pounds. This makes us the largest sugar-consuming country in the world, though in per capita consumption the British surpass us.

Of course, however, this is a matter of no significant interest compared with the chief fact brought out in this report, that in the list of commodities imported into the United States last year, greater in value than in any year before, sugar was by far the largest single item. This is a fact which has an obvious bearing on more than one question of national legislation, and which should be kept firmly fixed in mind, even though we may safely forget, almost as soon as we have read, the precise quantity that each of us takes into the stomach in the course of a year. A commodity of which we import so much—more than a hundred and fifty million dollars worth in 1905—necessarily requires special consideration in any arrangements that may be made regarding our foreign trade.

We are to-day not only the largest consumers of sugar in the world, but we are steadily and rapidly increasing our consumption—so rapidly, indeed, that though the sugar producers at home, both cane and beet, are continually adding to their output they are not at all keeping pace with the growing home demand. The quantity from abroad has doubled in the last twenty years, while the population has increased but 50 per cent. As in the meantime every reasonable pecuniary inducement has been offered for the production of sugar at home, it is clear that we must continue to depend mainly on foreign supplies for our multiplying requirement.

WILD LIFE IN JAMAICA.

In Kingston, Jamaica, the vultures are greatly valued as scavengers and a heavy fine is the penalty for killing one of them. They are to be seen everywhere and, as they are never molested, they regard mankind with indifference. Another bird which is protected is the pelican, which may be seen grubbing about in the shallow waters of Kingston harbor at almost any time. The natives' name for the vulture is "John Crow" and the pelican they call "Old Joe."

Jamaica has many song birds, the chief of them being a variety of mocking bird, larger than that found in the southern states of this country and somewhat diffently marked. As a songster it is very sweet, but it seems scarcely as animated in its singing as is the delirious warbler of the gulf states. It is called a nightingale by the Jamaicans, with their English traditions to direct them, but it resembles that songster even less than does the American mocking bird.

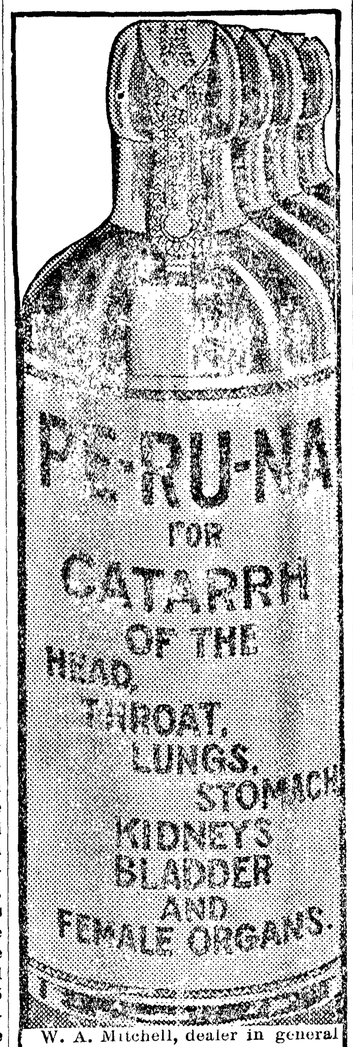
Poisonous snakes and destructive sugar rats caused the importation of the mongoose from India into Jamaica years ago. This lively little animal killed off the snakes and thinned out the sugar rats, but it especially enjoyed destroying the chickens. Now it is a costly nuisance. All the island poultry has to be kept within wire netting and usually above the ground and the price of eggs is high.

There are few flies or mosquitoes in the island, but there are swarms of the most villainous ticks, which have to be guarded against continually. To walk across a pasture or, in fact, to step off a beaten path or roadway is regarded as a very foolish performance by a Jamaican. Strangers usually begin by running headlong into danger and then repenting in haste.

Friendship with Wild Life.

If a fairy had ever offered to grant me three wishes, "the full confidence of wild animals" would surely have been one of them, and probably the first. If we seek opportunities to befriend wild creatures and take advantage of them we shall often find, as I have done, that there is no lack of response on the part of the animals. I once walked up to a pine siskin as he was feeding on the ground and picked him up in my hand. He did not seem a bit alarmed, and when, a few minutes later, I set him down, he continued his search for food within a few inches of my feet. On another occasion a yellow throated vireo allowed me to lift her from her nest when I wished to count her eggs, and nestled down comfortably on her treasures the moment I put her back. With a forefinger I once stroked the back of a red breasted nuthatch as he was busy feeding on a tree.—St. Nicholas.

There may be no such thing as pain, but you have probably observed that the children in a Christian Science family shy at the prospect of a whipping the same as all others.



W. A. Mitchell, dealer in general merchandise, Martin, Ga., writes:

"My wife lost in weight from 130 to 68 pounds. We saw she could not live long. She was a skeleton, so we consulted an old physician. He told her to try Peruna.

"She gradually commenced improving and getting a little strength. She now weighs 106 pounds. She is gaining every day, and does her own housework and cooking."

Grape Toast.

Stem only perfectly ripe grapes, wash thoroughly, place in a double boiler without water, and scald until broken, then remove the seeds by rubbing through a colander. Let them cool, then sweeten to taste. Toast rather thick slices of bread, first removing the crust; soften with hot cream, and place in a tureen or deep-covered serving dish. Heat the prepared grapes, and pour a tablespoonful over each slice of toast, and serve.

FADED TO A SHADOW.

Worn Down by Five Years of Suffering from Kidney Complaint.

Mrs. Remethe Myers, of 180 South Tenth St., Ironton, O., says: "I have worked hard in my time and have been exposed again and again to changes of weather. It is no wonder my kidneys gave out and I went all to pieces at last. For five years I was fading away and finally so weak that for six months I could not get out of the house. I was nervous, restless and sleepless at night, and lame and sore in the morning. Sometimes every thing would whirl and blur before me. I bloated so badly I could not wear tight clothing, and had to put on shoes two sizes larger than usual. The urine was disordered and passages were dreadfully frequent. I got help from the first box of Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and by the time I had taken four boxes the pain and bloating was gone. I have been in good health ever since."

After his attack of stage fright, Miner Hicks repudiated his contract as a lecturer at $600 a week and has gone back to the mines at $3 a day. Would there were more cases of stage fright.

It is the misfortune of the average British colonial governor that while he takes Robert Clive and Warren Hastings as his models in respect of their masterful temper he lacks the genius of those eminent looters and bulldozers There is something to admire in the career of Clive. He was not a petty despot but a born ruler of men, and the verdict which declared that he had "rendered great and admirable services" to the English nation was justified by the facts. So, too, with Hastings. Money stuck to his hands; so did blood. He was a tyrant when he deemed it necessary. But he, like Clive, rendered his country service. His greatness cast his mercenary and inhuman characteristics into obscurity. Much is to be excused to a big man with human failings. The same thing can not be said of the little man who imitates the big man's failings and ignores his virtues. Our friend Swettenham in Jamaica was a survival of the Clive and Hastings traditions in the matter of arrogance and serene confidence in his own wisdom and ability to confront any emergency. His picture shows a typical British face of the official type—self-satified, stubborn, supercilious. Such a man with brains makes an ideal administrative officer where inferior races are to be dealt with. Such a man lacking in brains sooner or later gets into a mess, especially when he comes into relations with white people quite as self-satisfied and many times as acute as he. That was Swettenham's fix. He suffered as the result of using East Indian methods in the West Indies—of adopting the high and mighty attitude where a certain savoire faire was indicated. In other words, Swettenham has made an ass of himself through trying his oriental system upon Americans. It is altogether probable that nine out of ten British colonial governors would have made the same mistake, since they are all trained in the same school. The British functionary of the colonial system is taught by precept and tradition that he is the biggest man in the service of the biggest nation in the world. He makes the assumption "go" in such a majority of cases that he is immeasurably surprised when he confronts a situation where the formula not only fails but causes him trouble. If Swettenham lives 1,000 years he will never cease to marvel that his calm assumption of the right to bulldoze Americans as well as negroes and coolies got him into difficulties. It is contrary to all his experience and habits of mind.

Fold over like an omelet and turn out on a hot dish. Garnish with parsley.

SKIN DISEASES

HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

When the blood is pure, fresh and healthy, the skin will be soft, smooth and free from blemishes, but when some acid humor takes root in the circulation its presence is manifested by a skin eruption or disease. These humors get into the blood, generally because of an inactive or sluggish condition of the members of the body whose duty it is to collect and carry off the waste and refuse matter of the system. This unhealthy matter is left to sour and ferment and soon the circulation becomes charged with the acid poison. The blood begins to throw off the humors and acids through the pores and glands of the skin, producing Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum and skin eruptions of various kinds. Eczema appears, usually with a slight redness of the skin followed by pustules from which there flows a sticky fluid that dries and forms a crust, and the itching is intense. It is generally on the back, breast, face, arms and legs, though other parts of the body may be affected. In Tetter the skin dries, cracks and bleeds; the acid in the blood dries up the natural oils of the skin, which are intended to keep it soft and pliant, causing a dry, feverish condition and giving it a hard, leathery appearance. Acne makes its appearance on the face in the form of pimples and black heads, while Psoriasis comes in scaly patches on different parts of the body One of the worst forms of skin trouble is Salt Rheum; its favorite point of attack is the scalp, sometimes causing baldness. Poison Oak and Ivy are also disagreeable types of skin disease. The humor producing the trouble lies dormant in the blood through the Winter to break out and torment the sufferer with the return of Spring. The best treatment for all skin diseases is S. S. S. It neutralizes the acids and removes the humors so that the skin instead of being irritated and diseased, is nourished by a supply of fresh, healthy blood. External applications of salves, washes, lotions, etc., while they soothe the itching caused by skin affections, can never cure the trouble because they do not reach the blood. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and forces out every particle of foreign matter and restores the blood to its normal, pure condition, thereby permanently curing every form of skin affection. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I suffered with Eczema for forty years and could find nothing to cure me until I tried S. S. S. I suffered intensely with the itching and burning; pustules would form from which there flowed a sticky fluid; crusts would come on the skin and when scratched off the skin was left as raw as a piece of beef. I suffered agony in the long years I was afflicted, but when I used S. S. S. I found a perfect cure. There has never been any return of the trouble. C. H. EVANS, Stockman, Mob.

A NATIONAL PRIMARY IS WITHOUT AN EQUAL

WHAT SHOULD ROOSEVELT DO WHEN HIS TERM EXPIRES

In What Capacity Would You Prefer to Have Him Serve? Or Should He Retire to Private Life?

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, will, on the part of the state of Washington, attempt to present the opinions of its citizens as to what President Roosevelt should do after his present term of office has expired. "The movement to obtain this consensus will be properly termed a 'national primary,' having its inception in a plan of the North American, of Philadelphia, which has invited fifty-five of the leading newspapers of the United States to contribute directly to completing the canvass."

President Roosevelt is a national character. The people have an interest and an abiding faith in him, and will wish him well after his present term as president has expired. "What should he do? What vocation should he follow? Upon what task could he most usefully bring to bear the force and integrity and tireless ability which have made his administration one of the most important in the history of the United States?"

These questions the P.-I. asks its readers to answer. Each Sunday for the next six weeks that paper will print answers from its readers. Write today; address "Roosevelt Editor, The Post Intelligencer," and select a career for Theodore Roosevelt at the close of his term, and tell why he is fitted for it.

WILL START ABOUT JULY 24

Mountaineers, Organized in February, Has Charter Membership of 169 and is Growing Rapidly.

Climb the mountains and get their good tidings. Nature's peace will flow into you as sunshine flows into trees. The winds will blow their own freshness into you, and the storms their energy, while cares will drop off like autumn leaves.—John Muir.

The Chamber of Commere rooms were crowded last night by the Mountaineers, who were there to hear Asahel Curtis lecture on the ascent of Mount Baker made last August by the Mazamas, says the P.-I. The lecture was illustrated by over 100 lantern slides from photographs taken on the trip. Mr. Curtis outlined the trip from the start until the summit was reached by only five of the party of thirty-six. He said the climb while dangerous at times, and while the greatest difficulties had to be overcome in crossing crevices and almost perpendicular fields of ice and snow, was yet most interesting, and reaching the summit more than made up for all the hardships endured. At the time the ascent was made, in August, the climb was especially hazardous, because the snow bridges had in many cases melted away and the crevices had become wide. The party reached the summit after climbing up the last and steepest ice field on the northeast slope of the mountain, having at places to mount an almost perpendicular wall of ice.

The Mountaineers, under the leadership of Mr. Curtis, are already making arrangements to climb Mount Olympus. The party expects to leave Seattle about July 24th and will be in the mountains three weeks.

The Olympic range is the least known of the mountains of the West and offers splendid opportunities for exploring. As there is no record of anyone ever reaching the summit of Mount Olympus, the highest peak of the range, the Mountaineers are looking forward to the trip with much pleasure. Already a number from the different Western Universities have arranged to join the outing, and their field work will add greatly to the scientific interest as well as to the pleasure of the outing. The plan of the club is to collect and publish authentic information regarding the regions visited, thus making the club publication the scientific magazine of the Northwest.

North and going into the horizon of the South.

The Olympics are full of game, and from their snow-capped peaks trout streams run down to the sea. Of how they tumble down one can gain a better idea when he is told that they average twenty to seventy-five miles in length, and that in this distance they fall 7,000 feet. This makes pools, waterfalls and rapids of tremendous power and gives one an outdoor attraction the equal of which cannot be excelled anywhere.

These mountain landscapes are invariably very broken and rough and they are trimmed with the perpetual green of the fir, spruce, cedar and hemlock, and each new turn of the trail opens a new picture of intense interest.

No matter what one's particular hobby may be concerning the outdoors, it can be enjoyed within the boundaries of the state of Washington. Here nature seems to have been a riotous spendthrift, for she has combined all of the things that one finds scattered in small quantities elsewhere over the world.

Whether one's hobby be hunting, fishing, sailing, tramping or automobling, or all of these, he might live to be as old as Methuselah and still would not see or do all that he would want to see and do in this favored locality.

Best of all, coupled with this situation, is the fact that it is never too hot in summer nor too cold in winter to enjoy every hour of life.

Probably half of the population of our cities from choice live in tents and camps during the summer months while attending to their usual business and professional avocations. In the East it would be necessary for them to take vacations to attain the same enjoyments. These conditions are mentioned because they have a vital bearing on the out-of-doors situation here and on the sane enjoyment of the multitude of privileges that nature has provided.—W. S. Phillips in Post Intelligencer.

Dared Not Vote Against Them.

In saying that this legislature has done what the people have expected it to do, one has but to point to the direct primary and congressional apportionment, says the Tacoma News. The first sprang from a positive demand of the people; the second should have been done long ago. Both were passed by a legislature that at heart sympathized with neither, but dared not vote against them. Old machine politicians and party bosses will not be able to understand that. The direct primary law is not as strong as it might have been. It chief weakness lies in the ballot that preserves party organiztion. The blanket ballot feature would have been better. The strength of the law is the opportunity it gives for a non-partisan judiciary and its advisory vote on the United States senatorship.

It can do no harm in any state, or condition of the female system.

MRS. ERICKSON GONE HOME

Will Be Laid to Rest at Quillayute Sunday
Her Loss Deeply Felt by Everyone Who Knew Her.

After a short illness, Mrs. Erickson, the loved wife of County Commissioner K. O. Erickson, died last Saturday, March 16, 1907, at the Seattle hospital, leaving, besides her husband, an infant babe, and little Kenneth, two-and-a-half years old.

The circumstances that surround the death of this good woman are particularly sad. Mrs. Erickson was getting along finely, and her friends were encouraged to hope that she would soon be at home with her family, when the grim reaper came, found her ready, and she passed suddenly away among strangers, her life's work at an end. Her heart-broken husband hurried to Seattle, but did not reach there from his home at Mora until Tuesday afternoon, three days after the death of his wife.

Susie Johnson was born in San Francisco, Cal., in 1871; was united in marriage to Mr. K. O. Erickson, in November, 1898, residing with her husband and family at Mora where they located at an early date and builded for themselves a home in the then vast wilderness of Clallam county. And who can tell of the hardships and privations of the early pioneers!

Mrs. Erickson's life was a quiet one, devoted largely to her home and her family, but in a modest, unostentatious manner, spreading by the wayside little deeds of charity and kindness that made many a heart happy.

Funeral services will be held Sunday, conducted by Rev. C. E. Fulmer of this place. Burial in the cemetery at Quillayute.

And names the stars by night—

They tell me he's a clever boy,
But I wish that he could add.

Romance of a Fan

Outside, the leaves rustled beneath the starlit, frosty sky, and the wind moaned fitfully around the solitary old gray house. I knew that the sky was cold and star-gemmed, because I could peep up at it through the unshuttered window from my resting place on the little table. Inside, the firelight danced on the oak-paneled wall of the low-ceiled room, and Joyce, from the cozy depths of her chair, watched the play of the flickering shadows among the gleaming old silver on the tea table before her.

Her lovely face, framed in its halo of dead-gold hair, was very sad and wistful. I could read her thoughts, for I possessed certain occult powers, owing to my eastern origin. She was living over again the sad events of the last two weeks.

She seemed still half dazed from the suddenness of it all. Perhaps she could scarcely realize even yet that her dear mother, her loving lifelong companion, had been taken from her forever.

"I cannot go on like this any longer," her thoughts ran; "the loneliness would drive me mad! Was any girl ever in such a sorry plight, I wonder? Of course, I always knew that mother's income was only for her lifetime; but then I never thought of her dying, nor did she, except in the dim future.

"And now here I am, after the funeral expenses and the doctor's bill have been settled and the servants paid off, with exactly a ten-pound note between myself and starvation—literally starvation! The house is my own, truly, and I have clothes to last me a twelvemonth or more," glancing down ruefully at her plain but dainty mourning.

"There's all of granny's lovely old silver, too. That is mine now, of course; but even if I sold it I should only be staving off the evil day. And it would be almost a crime. I must bestir myself and think of something tangible. If only Jack! If only——" And she broke off with a sigh.

At this point in her musings my eyes caught hers in a flash of sympathy, and, stretching out her little white hand, she took me up caressingly.

I was the first love offering he had made her, and in my way was considered a rare curio of intrinsic worth and great beauty.

Well! I have said that Joyce took me up caressingly. She did, and pressed me a moment against her pretty lips. She was thinking more of Jack than of me, I knew. But where was the use of looking back? It was all nearly two years ago now, and the mystery was still unsolved. She had never been to another dance since that fateful night; consequently neither had I.

That fatal night of the Hunt ball was our last glimpse of gaiety. And he was there, and he had never come near us; he had carefully avoided meeting her eyes whenever the mazes of the dance had brought him into her vicinity. Her pride had forbidden her to make the slightest sign, and she had borne up bravely until we were back in her pretty bedroom, quite alone. And well I knew then how much she had really cared!

A few weeks later she heard he had gone abroad—gone without a word or a sign.

* * * * * * *

A few days later Joyce journeyed off to the smart little country town some three miles distant, and the next morning the following advertisement appeared in the county paper, for I heard her read it out to our one faithful maid-of-all-work:

"Lady desiring residence in beautifully situated country home can be received on moderate terms. Apply The Cottage, Mereton."

And a week later, after the usual formalities had been exchanged, the lady arrived, and was duly installed—an exceedingly prim old lady of quaint and dignified demeanor, with gray curls down each side of her face and her eyes partially obscured behind smoke-colored glasses. I detested her on the spot.

One evening, a few days after her arrival, Joyce and her paying guest were chatting amicably over their teacups when the latter suddenly exclaimed, in the gruff voice I disliked so much:

"What a very pretty fan that is, and how those two emeralds gleam in the lamplight!"

Joyce rose from her chair and handed me over for inspection.

"Remarkably well cut stones! I do not think I ever saw such perfect imitations!"

"Oh, but they are not imitations! They are genuine, I assure you!" corrected Joyce.

"My dear child, are you not rather unwise to have anything so valuable lying about? Real stones of this size must be worth quite a sum of money!"

"I have never thought about its monetary value. It was a present from some one for whom I had a very deep regard, and is associated with many very dear memories. I think it is quite safe. You see this is my own private sanctum, and very few people beside myself ever come here."

* * * * * * *

In that same night, just as the clock in the corner had ceased chiming 3, I heard a stealthy step outside in the hall, and the door of the room I was in was cautiously opened.

I could just discern the figure of a man groping his way toward the tea table, where the beautiful silver service rested on its tray. He commenced quickly to transfer the silver pieces into a large canvas bag. Then clutching me roughly, he thrust me into the darkness of an outside pocket, where everything became blank.

My next recollection was of being jerked violently out of the man's pocket and landing in the mud of a silent gas-lit street. He hurried on—he was running—leaving me behind, a prey to many fears, splashed and begrimed, and wondering what my fate would be.

Later on the sleeping street began to arouse. At last a postman saw me, stooped and picked me up, muttering something about a "queer piece of mumbo jumbo." And, wiping the mud carefully from me with his red handkerchief, he put me into his pocket, and once more everything became blank.

* * * * * * *

One evening a few days later there was a knock at the door of the little parlor, and a pleasant manly voice explained:

"I have called in reference to your advertisement respecting a fan."

Where had I heard that voice before?

"Well, sir, if you can describe it satisfactorily, as I stated, you can have it!"

"You said a curious fan, entwined initials, J. J. It was the coincidence of the initials which struck me, as I had them carved on the fan myself when I presented it to the lady to whom I fancy it belongs."

That voice! Of course, it was Jack's! My green eyes glowed with suppressed excitement.

"If it is the fan I suppose, it is carved out of ivory, with two large emeralds set obliquely in the first stem."

"That is your fan, sir! Half a minute, sir!"

And in less than that time I was in Jack's firm clasp.

There was a little chinking sound, a surprised and grateful "Thank you, sir," on the part of the postman, a brisk "Good night" from Jack, then off once more.

Where was I bound for now? And what would be the sequel to it all, I wondered! But I could almost guess.

* * * * * * *

I was back in my dainty little sanctum; was clasped between Joyce's dear soft hands; and they were crushed against her throbbing heart. I could feel how fast it was beating!

I was very interested, and kept an eye on each of them. She had only just come into the room. He stood on the hearthrug facing her, and she was staring with lovely wide, startled eyes up into his own. She had taken me mechanically from him; scarcely, as I could see, grasping his explanation.

"I—er—saw the little beggar advertized, you know, with our joint initials, and—and—all the rest of it!"

No answer.

"I heard of your loss, Joyce," glancing tenderly at the little black-robed figure; "and that you had not married Marsden after all!" he went on, hurriedly. He was very white and agitated, I could see.

"Married Marsden!" she echoed, faintly, trying to calm herself. "Marsden never proposed to me!"

"Never proposed to you! Do you mean to say that she lied? That it has all been some hideous mistake?"

"Who lied? What has been a mistake?"

"Hilda Marsden! She told me you had accepted her brother that night of the Hunt ball. You remember? Joyce, darling, can you ever forgive me?"

And so the mystery was explained at last! Hilda Marsden had been Joyce's most intimate friend those days! The old, old story of love and jealousy, I suppose.

Of the thief who stole me nothing more was ever heard, or of the beautiful old silver tea service, or of the paying guest, for she disappeared the same night, leaving her black silk gown, with her cap and ringlets and spectacles behind her.—Modern Society.

One Thing or the Other.

FARMS AND FARMERS

Driving Four Horses Abreast.

To drive four horses abreast, two full sets of lines are not absolutely necessary as an arrangement such as that shown in the accompanying illustration can be used.

B B B B are the bits. A A are ordinary driving lines on the middle horses. C C are straps from the inside ring of the outside horses' bits fastened to the hame ring of the inside horses. D D are straps or extra lines reaching across from the ordinary lines to the outside ring of the bits of the outside horses. As a matter of convenience, one may attach these to the lines at the buckle, but that plan has this objection, if the outside horses are hard-mouthed it has a tendency to pull the lines out too far and worry the inside horses' mouths. This can be entirely overcome by making D D longer and attaching it further toward the hand of the driver. If one is driving unbroken or vicious horses it is a good plan to run DD out far enough that the driver can slip his hands through the loops thus made and use them as a pair of holders are used on a hard-mouthed driving horse.

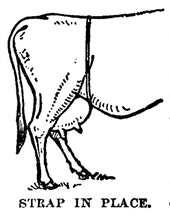
In the second illustration the inside horses are shown with a tie strap fastening them together. In driving, tie the hand pieces of each off rein together, also those of the near horses, which, if of equal length, enables the driver to handle four horses with as much ease as two.

Timothy and Clover Hay.

Timothy hay is the one most commonly grown on the farm and found in the market, according to a Pennsylvania bulletin. Timothy sells for a higher price in the market than other hay, and is regarded as being particularly adapted to horses. It is deficient in protein, and for that reason should be fed with a grain ration of a nitrogenous nature. For horses no better basis for a ration can be found than timothy hay and oats. It is less valuable for cattle and sheep. Clover hay is next to timothy in common use, and the two are more often found mixed than either is found alone. The nitrogenous nature of the clover aids in supplying the deficiency of protein in the timothy. Clover is more valuable than timothy for cattle and sheep, but is not considered so satisfactory for horses.

An Anti-Kicking Device.

An arrangement which will cure the worst kicking cow that I have ever seen is shown in the sketch. Take a strong strap such as a heavy harness line and buckle it around the cow's body just in front of the udder. One must be very careful in placing it first on the kicking cow and not buckle it too tight. She will probably object and jump around a little at first, but will soon become used to the arrangement and will not raise any more disturbance. A rope may be used instead of a leather strap if it is not tied too tight. Be gentle with the cow and treat her right and in a few weeks you can take off the strap and she will remain quiet. In case she begins to kick again, replace the strap and leave it on her for a while.—C. H. Parker, in Farm and Home.



STRAP IN PLACE.

Salt for Dairy Cows.

The carefully kept cows on the Detroit dairy farm receives four ounces of salt daily, mixed with their feed. They eat their food better, and the owner thinks they do better when they have this amount than when the allowance is smaller. The cows are fed three times a day ,and the salt is divided between the three feeds. Fine table salt is invariably used. The cows prefer it to coarse salt.

Spring Pastures.

When the spring opens there is a temptation to put stock on the pastures rather early in the season. This should not be done, as tramping by the animals may do harm. A heavy roller should be used over the pasture field so as to press down and smooth the surface for the mower, if the field is cut for hay. Very young grass or rye is laxative, and cows will fall off in the yield of milk if put on too early or kept on the pasture too long.

Farm Brevities.

Never pasture the alfalfa the first year.

A healthy flock of sheep is a profitable flock.

Mutton eaters are increasing faster than mutton.

Apple Seedlings.

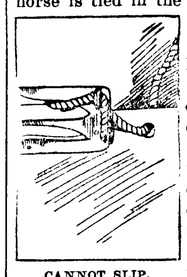
We are asked the question if the seedling used in grafting apple exerts any influence on the tree as to hardiness and if so what are the best to use. The apple seedling is the foundation for the tree, as the scion depends on this at least the first two years for establishing itself and forming the nucleus of the future tree. In the past there has not been given the attention as there should have been to hardiness and adaptability of the stocks of our different fruit trees, and it has just commenced to be agitated by horticulturists the last few years. It has been the custom of many nurseries to import from France seedlings of French crab and domestic apples for grafting on. Many of these are known to be tender and hence many of the losses from trees dying out could be traced if we knew directly to the stocks on which the tree had been grafted. If we were to save seed from such varieties as Duchess of Oldenburg, wealthy, northwestern greening, etc., we would soon see a marked difference in the hardiness of our trees. Some of our painstaking nurserymen are very careful on this account and buy their apple seeds in Vermont or northern New York, where it is washed out of the pumice of the cider mills in sections where they have had for years large seedling orchards. While the fruit was inferior, yet the trees were hardy, and this is the only requirement in a stock, as the quality of the tree will always be influenced by the scion.—Twentieth Century Farmer.

Pruning the Plum Trees.

It has been frequently noticed that old plum trees do not produce as good quality fruit as a rule as the younger trees and sometimes become very inferior and unproductive. In many cases the old trees would be benefited by severe cutting back, and besides that, it would be well to keep the plum tree in better training than has been the usual practice in the west; cutting back the long and spreading branches, and compelling them to head in short and close to the trunk. This might not be good practice for all varieties, and it would be well to undertake it with some care, selecting some few individuals and noting the effect of such pruning upon them.—Rural World.

Halter Tie.

The necessity of making a knot in the end of the halter every time the horse is tied in the stall is done away with by the invention of a North Dakota ranchman. Where a hundred or more horses are employed the time involved in tying them in the stalls each day is considerable. The halter tie, as shown in the illustration, is made of one piece of metal, through which extend two slots. These slots are wider at one end than at the other. By placing a rope through one of the slots and pulling on the same the rope is sure to become wedged in the slot tighter and tighter. The halter tie is nailed at the head of the stall in advance of the horse, so that the latter in pulling on the rope will force it more tightly into the slot. Only a few seconds are required to slip the rope into the slot and over a small hook at the inner end. While in this position there is no danger of the horse working the halter loose and roaming in the stable.



CANNOT SLIP.

Cultivating Young Trees.

The soil will dry very rapidly and to a great depth if allowed to get hard and compact. There is but a small space left for air in solid soils, and from this fact they become hot and dry to a great depth in summer, while if air is present, as it is in loose soils (being such a poor conductor of heat), it will allow only a small portion of soil to become hot, which soon cools at night and is filled with a copious dew, not only retaining the moisture already in the soil, but also adding to it at a season when moisture is especially desirable. Newly set trees are always benefited by cultivation, because all their roots are surface roots and cannot thrive in a hot, dry, compact soil, hence the necessity of summer surface cultivation of newly set trees.

Poisoning Cutworms.

Recent experiments in poisoning cutworms, which have been working on wheat and alfalfa, have shown the following mixture to be superior to spraying with paris green, as formerly recommended:

Thoroughly mix while dry 1 pound of paris green and 50 pounds of wheat bran; make moist, but not sloppy, by adding water in which a quart of cheap molasses has been dissolved. Place this mixture in spoonful piles where the worms are working. It attracts the worms from the wheat and oats. It is also good grasshopper poison.

Birds the Farmers' Friends.

Professor Cook of the national agricultural department declares that of the 300 different kinds of birds, but three are the farmers' foes, the English sparrow leading. He held that, while the robin is looked upon as a destroyer of early fruit, his diet is but 1 pound of fruit to 9 pounds of insects.

OUTDOOR GARDENS IN WINTER.

Charm of Rustic Nook Where Plants, Vines and Trees Are Ever Green.

The beauty of the outdoor garden during the winter season is largely a matter of thought rather than that of expense, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A little ingenuity in the selection and grouping of plants, shrubbery, trees and vines will go further toward producing permanent beauty than any amount of cost and skill in the purchase and the care of the home beautifiers. An evergreen tree, one of the beautiful conifers, a dwarf cedar or a tall pine or hemlock, will prove far more beautiful than the deciduous shade trees for certain positions in the home grounds; and there will be but little difference in the original cost. An evergreen magnolia as an ornamental plant in a small city yard will cost no more than a magnolia that sheds its leaves each autumn, and while the latter will present only bare, straggling branches through the winter, the former will hold up in stately magnificence its thick glossy evergreen leaves—resembling huge leaves of the indoor rubber tree—and give the little outdoor garen dan effect of almost tropical greenery through the season of ice and snow.

A simple and quaintly beautiful rustic summer house, suitable for little yards of city homes, or sheltered corners of suburban or country estates may present beautiful as well as durable qualities when formed of irregular cedar branches in rustic design and ornamented with variegated euonymous vines trained up the posts and about the seats. The variety known as euonymous radicans variegata is a delicate looking beauty, but of exceedingly sturdy growth and perfectly hardy. The masses of small green and white leaves remain on the outdoor vines all winter; and the same desirable characteristics are displayed in the euonymous shrubs which will form well-rounded decorative bushes, as beautiful in winter as in summer.

NORTH COUNTRY INDIANS.

One of the most distinctive features of the Hudson Bay Company, says the author of "The North Country," is its cultivation of the Spartan virtue of truth upon the part of its employes in dealing with the Indians. No misrepresentation is permitted for the purpose of effecting sales in that service, or for any other purpose, and any infraction of the rule is promptly met with summary dismissal.

This money-making corporation thoroughly believes, and its long experience fully demonstrates, that the Indian of the north woods is not only industrious, but honest as well.

Upon this theory an Indian comes into a trading-post in August or September without a cent. He has no furs to sell, but he has many needs to supply. He requires flour, tea, sugar, bacon, a new gun, powder, shot and bullets, traps, and many other things to maintain him eight months during the winter. He has no money, but he has honesty and industry and skill; and for the company's trader this is sufficient.

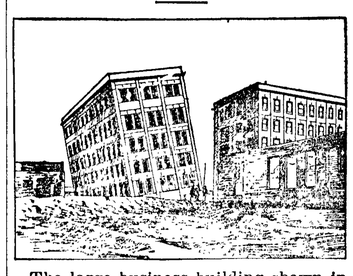
He is furnished with all he desires, and the company extends him credit on its books for supplies aggregating from two hundred to five hundred dollars, and the Indian, with loaded canoe, departs into the forest to his hunting-grounds three hundred or five hundred miles distant.

The trader loses no sleep, for he knows that when June has thawed out the ice of the lakes and streams the canoes will return, bearing their valuable furs, and he will be busy balancing accounts with his former debtors, who have returned to discharge their debts and to receive credit for the additional furs they have brought to the trader.

Last summer a post-trader was asked about the frequency of bad accounts. He replied that he had never had a bad account; that it sometimes happened that the Indian was unable to make full payment, but in such cases the payment was simply postponed until he had a more successful hunt.

The only event which prevents the Indian from paying is his death, and in that case the company cancels the debt.

BUILDING ON SAND.



The large business building shown in the picture was built on a sand foundation just outside the gates of Tunis, north Africa. It was barely finished before it shifted in the fashion indicated in the cut. French engineers have agreed to restore it to its proper level, and there is a prospect that they may succeed.

PLAN FOR HARMONY

CONFERENCE ON RAILROAD LEGISLATION IS SUGGESTED.

Minnesota Executive Proposes National Meeting of Governors, Commissioners and Attorneys General to Discuss Railroad Control With President.

St. Paul, Minn., March 18.—A national conference of state governors, railroad commissioners and attorneys general to discuss the question of railroad control with President Roosevelt and the interstate comerce commission is the suggestion made by Gov. John A. Johnson, of Minnesota. He advanced the idea Saturday and probably will follow it up with an official communication to the president.

Mr. Johnson agrees with the president that great harm and confusion iare likely to come from state and federal control of railroad rates exerted at the same time and over the same territory. He does not believe that the states can relinquish their control of traffic within their borders, but does see tqe necessity for harmony between the two systems at this time. To this end he believes that a national gathering of state and national officials can accomplish a great deal in bringing about the adoption of a comprehensive and harmonious program.

"I agree with the president," said he, "that a thorough and efficient supervision of railroad charges by the national government would be the ideal system, entirely replacing state regulation. Probably we will come to that some day. The preisdent has been credited with a desire to confer with some governors of states on this question. It seems to me that the best way to bring order out of chaos will be for him to call a national convention or a congress of governors, attorneys general and railroad commissioners to meet the interstate commerce commission at some central place, such as Chicago, and discuss this whole question.

"I think the railroad men should have a hearing. The most progressive of them want government control, they want it effective and their views on the subject would be valuable. The railroads are more in need of government regulation to protect them from themselves than the public needs it for protection from the railroads."

TRAINMEN REJECT OFFERS OF RAILROADS

Chicago, March 20.—Trainmen and conductors on all roads west of Chicago have rejected the offer of managers of the systems for an increase in wages, according to information reaching the Record-Herald. It is stated that the trainmen have voted to strike if their demands are not granted. Unless the railroad managers offer other concessions a strike of 50,000 men is likely to result. When the conference between representatives of the companies and the employes adjourned February 27, it was the understanding that another conference would be held after the men had voted on the offer of the managers. The second meeting will be held next week. The managers have already offered to submit the entire controversy to arbitration, but it is said this proposition has also been rejected.

It was explained to the men when the vote was taken that a verdict rejecting the offer of the railroad managers would carry with it a strike vote. As the matter now stands, the strike vote has been carried, but no order to quit will be issued until further efforts to reach an adjustment have been made.

MAY DELAY TIETON DITCH

Scarcity of Labor and Car Shortage Affects Government Project.

North Yakima, March 20.—From present indications the Tieton canal project, which is to reclaim 25,000 acres of land in the Yakima valley, will be delayed a year on account of the scarcity of labor and inadequate service of the railroad in carrying supplies. The ditch was supposed to have been completed by 1908, but it is hardly possible to finish it until late in the summer of next year, which will cause the loss of next year's crop.

Work on opening thep ortals of the three long tunnels has progressed as far as possible until more machinery arrives and the powerhouse is completed. Joseph Jacobs, the engineer in charge, finds it impossible to secure sufficient laborers, although they are receiving $2.25 a day for eight hours. About sixty men are now at work on the portal of the long tunnel, about ten miles from Naches City, and he wishes to increase this number to ninety at once and has sent to Seattle for thirty men.

It is the intention to place 700 men at work as soon as drilling machinery arrives. The government is doing the work itself, the bids for construction having been rejected because considered excessive.

No Free Press or Speech

Lisbon, March 20.—The efforts of the Liberals in favor of the freedom of speech and the press have been unavailing. The new censorship bill has been adopted by the chamber of deputies by 51 to 38.

TWO MILES A DAY

Tracklaying Proceeds Rapidly on the Portland & Seattle.

Kennewick, March 19.—Three hundred carloads of steel and building material are at the Finley yards and 1,000 carloads more are on the way, expected to arrive here within the next three weeks. A force of eighty men is now at work unloading and sorting material and preparing it to be loaded on the Portland & Seattle work train, to be sent to the front as soon as needed. The track laying which was interrupted on account of the uncompleted rock cut opposite Wallula, is again in progress and pushing towards its destination at the rate of two miles a day. The grade is now completed about seventy miles below Finley.

The location of the material yards at Finley incidentally has proven a benefit to agriculturists. The steel shipments arriving from Chicago are loaded in stock cars which contain from two to six wagon loads of fertilizer. This can be had for the taking, the company being pleased to get its cars cleaned out. If the cars yet to arrive are in the same condition as those already received, there will be at least 4,000 wagon loads of this material for distribution among the farmers.

MELLEN AND ROOSEVELT HAVE A CONFERENCE

Washington, March 20.—The interview between President Roosevelt and Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railway, recently arranged for the purpose of discusisng the railroad situation, took place at the White House, tut only lasted 35 minutes. No statement of the questions discussed was made the White House, and Mr. Mellen declined to talk.

Mr. Mellen said he did not again expect to visit the White House for a conference with the president unless he was sent for. Mr. Mellen's visit was the outcome of a call made at the White House last week by J. P. Morgan, the New York financier, who came to Washington at the request of many business men to discuss the present business situation, paritcularly as affecting the railroads.

The president says frankly that he is learning all he can regarding the railroad situation and that he intends to continue to consult with railroad people and others on the suject.

It is understood that he is making inquiries on some points pertaining to federal supervision and control of the railroads; to the question of an appraisment of the physical valuation of such properties and to the matter of the issue of various forms of indebtedness. As to the last named, he regards it as perfectly proper and he sees no objection to a proper issue of obligations for equipment, terminals and betterments, but thinks there should be a careful scrutiny to see that stocks or bonds are issued for such purposes.

The president has not reached any final determination as to whether he will make any recommendations to conrgess for legislation on any of these matters. The president has made it plain to his callers that he cannot be expected to outline his policy in informal talks with them, and that inferences as to his attitude must not be drawn from what he says in these casual talks.

When he has made up his mind and is ready to tell the public just what his attitude is on particular questions and specicfially on the railroad issue, he will do so in a speech or message to congress. The president is scheduled to make four speeches between now and the middle of June, and it is expected that he will have something to say on the railroad question in one of these speeches.

ROCKEFELLER MAY GIVE TO CHINESE EDUCATION

Washington, March 19.—With a view to uplifting the Chinese in their own country, John D. Rockefeller is planning to donate $50,000,000. The fact that the oil king has decided to give this enormous sum has been made public by men who were consulted by him as to the best method of distributing it so that it will do most good. Rockefeller thinks that $50,000,000 will be sufficient to lift the Orientals into paths of Western civilization by endowing in the Chinese empire educational institutions free from any religious organization.

New York, March 19.—The report that John D. Rockefeller plans the establishment of a fund of upwards of $50,000,000, the avowed purpose of which is to modernize and educate the Chinese race, is not confirmed among Mr. Rockefeller's closest associates in this city. It may, however, be true Certain it is that during the last three or four years Mr. Rockefeller has been devoting a greiat deal of attention to the study of China's educational methods and he is known to be very much enraptured with the subject.

Sentenced For Sand Frauds

Omaha, March 20.—Four men convicted here last December in the sensational government land fraud cases have been sentenced by Judge Munger in the United States circuit court as follows: Bartlett Richards and William G. Comstock, to pay a fine of $1,500 each and to serve a year in thec ounty jail. Charles C. Jameson and Aquilla Triplett, to pay a fine of $500 each and to serve eight months in thec ounty jail. All the defendants filed notices of appeal.

OPERATE COALMINES

OKLAHOMA CONSTITUTION HAS PROVISION TO THAT END.

Will Be Prohibition State Under the Most Stringent Liquor Law in Existence, Which Prevents Even Shippiog Intoxicants In side Its Borders.

Guthrie, Okla., March 18.—The only state constitution to be produced under modern conditions—that intended for the proposed state of Oklahoma—has finally been drafted here. The constitutional convention finished its work Friday and adjourned. The constitution will be submitted to the people of the two territories at a special election on August 6.

Woman surffage was defeated in the convention by a few votes.

The initiative and referendum, patterned after the Oregon law, was adopted, as was a provision for the nomination of all state ocfflers and United States senators by direct primaries.

Sucession in state officers is prohibited, and it is provided that the senate committees shall not be named by the lieutenant governor, but be selected by the body itself.

Oklahoma will be a prohibition state, the most stringent liquor law in existence, prohibiting not only sales but the introduction of liquor into the state. The enabling act provides that Indian territory must accept prohibition for 21 years. The convention provided that the whole state shall vote on the question, and there is no doubt that the terms of the enabling act will be made uniform over the whole state.

Provision is made for a state railroad commission, to be elective, and a two-cent passenger fare order.

Railroad companies are prohibited from owning any productive agency of a natural commodity, a provision particularly intended to cover coal lands.

Has Fellow Servant Law

A fellow servant law is embedied in the constitution.

Corporations are prohibited from owning more land than is absolutely necessary in the operation of their business.

The issuance of watered stock is prohibited and the books of all corporations are made subject to inspection at all times.

The organization of corporations to deal in real estate outside of incorporated cities is prohibited.

A commission is appointed to negotiate the purchase of the segregated mineral lands in the Indian territory, valued at many millions of dollars, and state ownership and operation of coal mines thereon is contemplated.

The legal rate of interest is fixed at 6 per cent and the contract rate at 10 per cent. A majority vote only is required to amend the constitution.

CLAUSEN HOLDS SALARY INCREASES NOT LEGAL

Olympia, March 19.—Trouble is brewing at the state house. State Auditor Clausen is holding that under the constitution the last legislature did not have the power to increase the salary of the fire warden, oil inspector, members of the board of control and others, and he will refuse to pay any but the present salaries May 1 next, when the first vouchers come in under the new appropriations and new laws increasing salaries.

Years ago, when a populist legislature voted several thousand dollars extra compensation to committee clerks and others a test case went to the supreme court, which held that the constitutional provision that the salary of no officer should be increased or diminished during his term of office applied to appointive as well as elective officers A test case will undoubtedly be made in the present instance.

It is said that there is an easy way to get around the constitution—that is for the officials to resign and be reappointed, but quite a number of them fear to do this; for there is a chance that once they quit the governor might name some one else in their place. The situation is causing many of the appointive office holders uneasiness.

Investigate Reclamation Service Fraud

Washington, March 18.—Secretary Garfield has received a report from the special agent at Biose, Idaho, relating to alleged irregularities between contractors under the reclamation service. The secretarvy has not reached any conclusion regarding the difficulty and will not adjust the matter until a final decision has been made. It is understood at the department that the difficulty had its origin in politics and has been under investigation by special agents for some time.

To Investigate Proposed Canal

Hoquiam, March 20.—A communicationr eceived by the Commercial Club from Maj. Chittenden, of Seattle, army engineer in charge of the Grays harbor district, states that he will visit Grays harbor March 28 for the purpose of making an examination regarding the building of a ship canal to connect the waters of Puget sound with Grays haror. Maj. Chittenden will be the guest of the commcerial bodies of Hoquiam and Aberdeen, who wlil go over the harbor with him.

RELIGIOUS

Mrs. Lamson's Talk.

"The Lord has laid it on my heart to say a word in this meeting," said Mrs. Lamson; and the deacons looked round, and even the minister was surprised. For in that little church it was not often a woman's voice was heard in meeting, and Mrs. Lamson was one of the conservative members.

"I've been praying for guidance to say the right thing, and I hope I shall say it. Anyhow, I'm going to try.

"Most of you know that we have a poorhouse in this town, but I don't suppose many of you have ever been there. I've been past it all my life, whenever I've driven along that way, but I've never had any particular errand there, and I don't suppose you've had. But last week I went there. I think it's a shame for this town to treat its poor the way it does."

The little company was thoroughly alert by this time, and Mrs. Lamson was well under way, and found it easier to talk on than to stop.

"I don't find any fault with the overseers of the poor. I suppose they do all they can with the money they have. I don't doubt they give the inmates enough to eat, and things looked clean. But it's the most forsaken place I ever saw. The little things those old people have done to try to make it homelike are enough to make your heart ache. It's just pitiful.

"I've been thinking about it ever since I was there, and it seems to me that if we take up collections for the heathen we might sometimes do something for our own poor.

"I know we pay our taxes, grudgingly, too, sometimes, and we see that no one suffers. But I've been thinking that that isn't the whole of Christian duty. They are nearly all old people there—there are eight of them who are past 70—and not a rocking-chair in the place. What few pictures there are look as if they had come out of the ark.

"I just made up my mind I'd send up a rocking-chair for one of the old ladies, and while the team is going up, if any of you have anything you want to send I'll take it along.

"The Lord has a blessing for those who visit the sick and those in prison and those that respect the aged. Those people are old and sick and in prison and poor and friendless and—everything. And I think that if we have any of the kind of religion that the good Samaritan had, we'd ought to stop driving by on the other side."

She sat down breathless and appalled to think how long a speech she had made. But the minister was quickly on his feet.

"Friends," said he, "this is a good word, and we ought to receive it as a message from the Lord. I suggest that we appoint a committee of ladies, of which Mrs. Lamson shall be chairman, to ascertain what articles of furniture are needed at the almshouse, and that the list be read from the pulpit, in an endeavor to make the last home of the poor among us not only habitable but pleasant."

It was done, and the list was a long one. Out of the attics came chairs, couches and bedsprings, out of style, perhaps, but serviceable; and many little articles besides, that made the bare old rooms more homelike.

The reports that were made from time to time enlivened the prayer meeting and cheered the donors, shaming them the while that they were getting so much of credit for what cost them so little, and that they had not done it long before. And into that thrifty New England community, where shiftlessness is the chiefest of sins, and poverty carries with it the stigma of implied unworthiness, there came a new spirit of compassion for the unfortunate and the unsuccessful.

The men who had paid their taxes, and supposed that in so doing they had performed their whole duty to the poor, found ways of ministering in the spirit of their religion, and heard the words of the psalmist with new interest: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor."—Youth's Companion.

The Duty of Happiness.

Human life, if rightly ordered, has happiness for each of its stages. The vale of years need not be a "vale of tears." The great Father never intended that it should be so to any of His children, and, least of all, to those whom He has guided for so long and who are near their final home in His presence. Amid the manifold duties which press upon us, we are very apt to forget the duty of happiness. It is not only our right, but our duty, to enjoy, for gladness of heart is a form of thanksgiving to God, while at the same time it radiates gladness on those around us. The man whose morals have made him melancholy does not recommend virtue to his fellows, and the discontented cynic is a kill-joy in the world. "We live by admiration, hope, and love," said Wordsworth, and there is no reason why these should decay when we grow old.

The Spirit-Filled Life.

When one loves the Word of God and mediates upon it continually, the thoughts, feelings, affections, dispositions, and the whole character becomes colored with the spirit of the Word. Such a filling of the heart and memory with the pure Word of God is the best way to prepare for any future of darkness into which the life may pass. It is like hanging up a hundred lamps, while the light of day still shines, to be ready to pour down their soft beams the moment the daylight fades.

The Spirit-filled life is a life of trust. There is beauty and power, but it is not to be forgotton that there is also such a prevailing trust in God that whether the sun be shining or whether it be obscured in the clouds, one is always filled with rejoicing.

Spiritual Oil.

The wise are those who have oil in their vessels, the grace of the Holy Spirit in the heart continually. As the good housewife fills her lamps every morning so they will be in readiness at the evening time, so the Christian will every morning and every evening, and often through the day, go to the throne of grace for that oil of the spirit which will keep the soul alight with the truth of God.—Rev. William Barnes Lower, D. D.

Seeds of Kindness.

A kind word, a gentle act, a modest demeanor, a loving smile, are as so many seeds that we can scatter every moment of our lives, and which will always spring up and bear fruit. Happy are those who have many around them; they are rich in opportunities, and may sow plenteously.

HOW HEART AFFECTS WATCH.

Timepiece is Uncertain if That Organ is Irregular.

Nobody would ever think that something the matter with him would cause something to be the matter with his watch, but a watchmaker is the cause of much uneasiness in an East End family, and all because he insists that he does his best with a certain watch, and that the reason it does not keep good time is because the man who carries it must have an irregular heart beat.

It came about in this way: The head of the family has a gold watch that cost him $200 ten years ago. He has carried it ever since, but a year ago it began to act queerly. For some days it lost time, and then it began to gain time; again it would gain time mysteriously and then strangely lose a minute or two a day. It had been to the watch repairer three times in twelve months, and was still acting irregularly a week ago when the man's wife took it to the watchmaker.

"I think I know what is the matter with this watch," said the craftsman. "I don't believe that your husband's heart beats regularly. Now don't get alarmed. It is not necessarily a disease. He may be just one of those men who can't have a watch that keeps good time, simply because of their irregular heart beats."

"You see a watch has a regular rhythmic movement," said the watchmaker. "It is carried close to the human heart, which ought to have a regular rhythmic movement, too. Now, while the watch is beating away the heart is beating also. If its pulsations occur regularly, punctuating the rhythm of the watch at specific intervals, the rhythm of the watch movement is undisturbed; but let the heart pulsations occur irregularly, now pulsating with the tick of the watch, again stopping discordantly in between the ticks, the watch is bound to be affected. Leave this watch here, and let your husband carry your watch, which, we know, keeps regular time. Let him wear it a month and see if I am not right."

So the woman handed her husband her watch to note the result. She wanted him to consult a specialist immediately upon her return from the watchmaker, but he compromised by agreeing to try the test suggested by the craftsman.—Pittsburg Gazette.

MAXIM OF MAINE.

American Inventor of a Famous Gun and His Career.

The fierce, white whiskered man, with breast gleaming with orders, representing the latest portrait of the famous inventor and scientist, Sir Hiram Maxim, would hardly be taken for a native of Maine. Yet, such is the case, for he was born in Sangerville, of the Pine Tree State, a little over sixty-six years ago, says the Pittsburg Gazette. His Maxim gun and "cordite," a smokeless powder, have made him world famous.

Probably the most thankless task that he ever performed for erring humanity was the result embodied in a book of two months' sojourn at Monte Carlo. He proved that tradition, superstition and the most elaborate "systems" were alike ineffectual in the fighting game played there. By a mathematical demonstration of the law of averages he showed that two insurmountable obstacles must sooner or later overwhelm the most successful player and the most carefuly devised systems—the bank's percentage and limit placed on stakes.

For the last ten years and more Sir Hiram has devoted himself to attempts to solve the problem of aerial navigation. Like Santos-Dumont, he early discarded the balloon and devotes all his energy to constructing an aeroplane which can be propelled with such velocity as to lift itself and its navigator free from Mother Earth. While the young Brazilian has only succeeded in propelling his aeroplane over a track which it almost clears, Sir Hiram, in speeding over his track one morning, suddenly found himself lifted clear of the ground and precipitated several yards to the right. It was, perhaps, the first instance in which a flying machine had actually lifted a human being from the terra firma.

Warning Notes Calling the Wicked to Repentance.

Give love the pow- and it will always help.

There are still some folks who think that making a noise in church is religion.

No matter how much religion we claim to have, all that counts is that we live.

We are all the time making character, whether we are doing anything else or not.

MAP IS AID TO PEDESTRIAN.

Enjoyment for the Walker When He Is Properly Equipped.

"The bicycle, and later the automobile, gave a great impulse to the sale of road maps, but," said a man who takes his outings afoot, "useful as good maps are to those who by such means traverse the country maps are, as they have always been, no less useful and desirable for the pedestrian.

"I wouldn't dream of walking anywhere without a map. The map is not only a guide, but it is a companion and friend that tells you about the country as you go along. It tells you not only precisely where you are at whatever moment you consult it, and the distances here and there, but with the country outlined before you and its features marked there on the paper you can find a far greater satisfaction in the walk than would be possible without the aid of this pocket companion.

"Aside from the help the map gives you in getting where you want to go, halt where you will where some inviting prospect attracts and open up the map.

"Only be sure that you hold it correctly adjusted to the points of the compass, and then the map will tell you what arm of the sea or what bay or lake it is whose waters you see far away to the east, or what village it is whose church spire you see rising to the north; it will tell you the name of the brook you have just crossed, and of the stream you'll be coming to a mile further along on the road.

"With a map, in short, every feature of the country near and far is revealed to you. You know not only where you stand at the moment, but with intelligence the country round about as far as the eye can reach. A region new to you, it is all the more interesting because of its novelty, but the enjoyment you find in it is vastly broadened and heightened by the illuminating knowledge you gain of it from the map.

"Invaluable as a guide, the map is scarcely less to be esteemed in its capacity of companion and friend for, telling you of what you see, it makes, in a way, most pleasantly acquainted where otherwise you might be simply a passing stranger."—New York Sun.

Paradoxical?

A young woman who has been doing missionary work on the east side had an experience last week that came near ending her charitable efforts. On one windy, cold day she met in the streets three Italian children—two girls and a boy—who were barefooted. She stopped them, and they told her that their parents couldn't buy them shoes, they were so poor.

The charitably inclined young woman first fitted them out with stockings and then bought them three pairs of shoes. The children started for home looking very happy. The next day she met one of the girls on the street.

"Won't you come and visit us?" asked the girl.

"I'd be pleased to," said the missionary, who felt that what she had done was appreciated. "Where do you live?"

"Oh, you'll have to go out to Englewood, N. J.," said the little girl. "We're going to move to-morrow. Papa has bought two houses out there."—New York Sun.

Strives to Please.

Uncle (to little Bertie, aged 5, who is being taken off to bed)—Good-night, Bertie. Of course, you always remember your uncles and aunts in your prayers?

Bertie—Oh, yes, Uncle Felix. Shall I tell you what I say? "God bless Aunty Kitty and make her thin, and God bless Uncle James and make him fat, and God bless Uncle Felix and——" which do you want to be—fat or thin?"

And many a woman's greatness is due to the smallness of her husband.

President Roosevelt — In what activity of statesmanship or learning, or constructive enterprise would his energy and ability and convictions achieve the greatest fame for himself and the greatest good for his country and humanity, at the close of his present term, asks the P.-I.

When a man has become so great in statesmanship and in achievements for the public good that his fellow countrymen are seriously asking themselves these questions, there should be but one future for him: Place him in the Nations Executive Chair for another term—that he may carry to a successful conclusion the great problems of his administration. No man should be bigger than his party.

The failure of the legislature to pass an act empowering county assessors to employ expert help to cruise the timber of the state is no reason why the county commissioners should not authorize a cruise of the standing timber of Clallam that a more just and equal assessment may be made of all the real property in the county.

The board of commissioners of King county have definitely arranged a plan, says the P.-I., whereby the large timber owner of King shall bear a just burden of the taxes—no more, no less. It is thought that a fair and just assessment of the 350,000 acres of standing timber in King county will add from $75,000 to $100,000 to the revenues annually. If in King, why not in Clallam?

Speaking of Senator John L. Blair of San Juan county, who represented also Jefferson and Clallam in the senate, Representative Troy was unqualified in his endorsement of the aged legislator's work during the session. "Senator Blair," said Mr. Troy, "proved himself to be a man of sterling worth, a man who looked on the practical and utility side of every question rather than on the political, and a man who came to be counted as a force in the senate before the session had grown many weeks old. Senator Blair was always given that hearing which ability, honesty of purpose and wisdom of action demands in any public body."—Townsend Call.

Springtime is here and the enterprising citizen is busily engaged cleaning up his premises and putting the same in a more presentable appearance. There is no reason why Angeles should not be the cleanest as well as the most picturesque little city on the Sound. Everybody should help.

MRS. JOHN MACHENHEIMER

After an Illness of Several Months, She Passed Peacefully Away and Now Waits on the Other Shore.

Pauline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schenk, and wife of John F. Machenheimer, died Saturday, March 16th.

Mrs. Mackenheimer was born in Switzerland, Sept. 7, 1881; came to Nebraska in 1885; married to Robt. Sutter in 1898; moved to Angeles in 1901, Mr. Sutter dying the following year.

October 27, 1904, she was married to Mr. Machenheimer; to them was born one child, a son now eighteen months old.

To her the struggle and burden bearing of earth is ended, and we confidently trust that like one who wakes from a troubled dream she has awakened to see life's endless morning break and knows herself at home with all the vast throng of loved ones, missed from earth, safe about her. Her home instincts were strong here in this fevered world of disappointment. Her affection for friends and kindred was tender and abiding.

Among us all she ranked always as a woman of refinement and sympathy, a kind neighbor, devoted mother and a true friend, and withal a woman of heroic mould in bravely meeting the stern requirements and often the disappointments of life.

Gone from our sight! but because life and love are stronger than death she is ours still. She is still the mother of her dear child, upon whom she doted with such clinging fondness, and the companion still of him who mourns earth's greatest loss, and may she not by this very transition wield over them a stronger force for goodness and truth than before.

Funeral services were held at the residence on Seventh street Monday evening; burial was in Blue Mountain cemetery on Tuesday; Rev. G. N. Edwards officiating in both instances.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to all those who so kindly assisted us during the sickness and with the funeral of our beloved Pauline.

THE FAMILY.

This legislature has taken a long step forward to the building of good roads. The foundation of a comprehensive system has been laid.

Of the strictly good roads bill, one provides for a special tax levy of one-half mill. This will produce $360,000 during the next two years. State roads and state aid roads will be built out of this fund.

The second bill outlines the method of obtaining state aid. Half the cost of all state aid roads is to be defrayed by the state, 35 per cent by the county and the remaining 15 per cent by the people living along the road. The law is so drawn, however, that the county may build the road by paying half the cost without consulting the residents of the district the road may traverse.

The third bill adds greatly to the powers of county surveyors, or engineers, as they are termed. It gives them absolute supervision of all county roads, and co-ordinate supervision with the state highway commissioner of state aid roads.

The general roads bill provides for the division of counties into road districts, each under the charge of a supervisor. Twenty-four districts are permitted to each county. The objection made to this has been the possibility it may afford of building up a powerful political machine.
