FOR DEVELOPMENT OF PORT ANGELES

SEATTLE REAL ESTATE MEN ANNOUNCE THEIR PLANS

Are Offering Choice Business Lots in Vicinity of East End Brick Hotel to Seattle Buyers.

Seattle, May 13.—A syndicate of local capitalists, headed by Arnold Zbinden, proprietor of the Palace Hotel, and councilman from the sixth ward, closed a deal yesterday whereby Port Angeles property valued at $75,000 changed hands. The deal is stated on the best of authority to be but the beginning of a systematic campaign for the development of Port Angeles prior to the construction of a railroad there, and before the plans are completed several hundred thousand dollars of Seattle money will go into the thriving little city in Clallam county.

One of the larger Seattle banks is about to establish a branch in Port Angeles; the syndicate that Zbinden is identified with is about to construct a large hotel there; two lumber mills of large capacity will be constructed; store buildings will be put up, and the development project started here promises to assume large proportions within the next few months.

Zbinden and his associates, William White and W. S. Turner, yesterday closed a deal with John Cain, whereby 100 lots in Port Angeles, in the business portion of the town, became the property of the Seattle syndicate. The consideration is $50,000. The syndicate has also acquired a large number of lots from the government.

Port Angeles is the county seat of Clallam county, and has a population of 4,000. No railroad runs into the city yet, but the Northern Pacific has already applied for franchises within the city limits, and there is every assurance that the road will be constructed soon.

Messrs. Zbinden, White and Turner, the parties who have an application before the city council for a street railway franchise, have filed with the County Auditor this week Receiver's receipts for eight of the ten-acre blocks at the head of the bay, including the "Lauridsen" block which was assessed at $160.00 per acre.

Timber Land Frauds.

The hearing of evidence in the case of the United States against C. B. and J. E. Paul, Charles R. Moorhouse and the Washington Lumber Company was resumed yesterday afternoon before Roger S. Green, master in chancery in the case, in Judge Green's office. The government alleges that about 2,000 acres of timber land in Clallam county, each quarter section of which is worth from $10,000 to $20,000, according to the federal counsel, was filed upon subsequent to an agreement between the locators and the defendants to this action for its transfer, contrary to the federal laws.—P.-I.

W. F. DELABARRE'S LODGE, OPPOSITE EAGLE POINT, LAKE CRESCENT.

LANDED 18 LB. BEARDSLEE

Has Sport that, Aside from Lake Tahoe, Could Not Be Equaled Elsewhere on Earth.

E. E. Day entertained his friend, Captain McAlpine of the Rosalie, with a little fishing trip to Sunshine Camp last Sunday, in consequence of which Lake Crescent has secured another enthusiastic booster—for the Captain caught an 18-lb. Beardslee under circumstances of which any man might well be proud.

They went on the lake at 5 o'clock in the morning, trolling with an eight ounce rod and No. 2 Hendryx spoon, the which is but a trifle larger than one's thumb nail. The tackle used, and the fact that they hadn't thot it worth while to put the landing net in the boat, showed plainer than words could tell that the Captain was counting on small fry—would have gone home more than pleased had he hooked and successfully landed even a four or five pounder. But at this season the big trout are running near the surface, and in less than an hour he had hooked a whale, lacking only a half pound, according to Mr. Sanborn, of the lake's record. They played that fish for an hour and a half, finally getting it so exhausted they were able to make shore. Just at this most interesting point the leader snapped off and with a lunge the Captain was after his fish, grabbing it by tail and gills and reaching shore.

When displayed at the Merchants in the evening, the trout still had the tiny hook and spoon, attached to a few inches of slender leader, in its gills. It was over 35 inches long, 20 in circumferance, and a man's two fists could be easily put into its mouth at one time.

FLAGLERS 7, ANGELES 5

Fast Game of Base Ball with the Soldiers Sunday Afternoon.

The soldier boys and their team, a crowded steamer-load of blue, came down from Fort Flagler Sunday to show our boys how the national game should be played. They won, by two scores, which, in view of the limited practice, so far this season, of the home team, was to be expected. The features of the game were the brilliant work of Center Fielder Dilling and Pitcher Tyrrell; Kemp, who had shown good work in practice, allowed the visitors to make five runs out of seven hits in the first two innings.

It is thought the new steamer service will be inaugurated within the next few days, but official notice has not yet been received.

SURVEY WORK STILL GOES ON

Reports that Milwaukee and Union Pacific Surveyors Have Been Withdrawn Are Absolutely False.

The Milwaukee and Union Pacific surveying parties, working in the western part of this county, and in this vicinity, have not been withdrawn, as reported in upsound papers, nor will they be until their work is completed. The transferring of one or two of the several crews to other localities where there is greater immediate need for them, is all the foundation there is, or was, for the reports. The Northern Pacific surveys are finished ready for the contractors and the work contemplated by the Milwaukee will be finished before they leave the field.

Messrs. Johnson & Woods ship their first raft of piles to Everett this week, where they will be treated with preservatives. The next shipment will be by schooner to California.

TRUST IS ENJOINED

AGREEMENTS AS TO PRICES HELD VIOLATION OF LAW.

Federal Court in Indiana District Issues Order Forever Restraining Drug Combine From Continuing Its Operation—Blacklists Are Forbidden.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 11.—The so-called drug trust has been perpetually nejoined from continuing its operations. The injunction came in the form ofa decree of the United States court, district of Indiana, upon the copmlaint of the United States, filed by Joseph B. Keating, United States district attorney. The defendants, ninety-eight in number, who are the members, officers, directors, agents and attorneys of the National Association of Retail Druggists, the National Wholesal Druggists' association, Tri-Partite Proprietonrs, "Black List Manufacturers, Direct Contract Proprietors, Wholesale Contract Proprietonrs and Charles C. Baumbaugh are perpetually enjoined from combining and conspiring to restrain the sale of drugs, fix prices by agreement, blacklist proprietors who cut prices or to refuse to sell any retailer on equal terms.

Blacklists Forbidden

All publication of blacklists are forbidden and all contracts and agreements covered by the charges are declared void. The direct contract serial number plan is prohibited as well as the securing of the adoption of schedules for the sale of drugs.

Charles C. Baumbaugh was charged in the bill of complaint with being engaged in printing and circulating lists called blacklists, which contained the names of druggists throughout the country who sold proprietary articles and medicines at prices less than those which the alleged combination ordered. As charged, he would send each month to every retail and wholesale drugigst in the United States who belonged to the association a list of those accused of cutting prices, and as a result of this these "aggressive cutters," as they were called, could not buy drugs. It was further charged that those accused of cutting prices on proprietarv medicines were unable to purchase any kind of drugs from the members of the several associations. All such practices are perpetually enjoined.

Consent to the Decree

The decree entered was dictated by the government attorneys and agreed to by the defendants. With the entering of the decree the litigation came to an end with ac omplete victory for the government

FEDERAL EIGHT HOUR LAW HELD VALID

Washington, May 14.—Justice Harlan of the supreme court of the United States, has announced a decision in seven cases involving interpretation of the law of 1892 by which employment of laborers and mechanics on public works is limited to eight hours per day. The defendants were all prosecuted criminally and were all found guilty and fined by the trial court. The suits were instituted epsecially for the purpose of testing the applicability of the law to laborers and mechanics employed on dredges in river and harbor ipmrovements, but other points were also necessarily involved. The court held the law to be constitutional, but held that it does not apply to laborers and mechanics on dredges, and that men so employed cannot be held to be employed on public works.

All the cases came to the supreme court on writs of error from the federal court from the district of Massachusetts. Justice Moody delivered a dissenting opinion. The decision will have immediate bearing upon the letting of contracts for the $87,000,000 worth of river and harbor work authorized by the last session of congress. Most of the contracts under the law were held up by the war department pending settlemsent of these cases.

Justice Holmes' opinion that the men employed on dredges in river and harbor improvements are not laborers or mechanics was based upon the ground that in effect such men are seamen. He said that all other employment is incidental to the work of the men upon the dredges and to their services as seamen, and that therefore they must be classified as seamen.

Justice Moody held an opposite view, declaring that the duties of the men in handling the dredges are incidental to their work as laborers. Their principal duty was that of digging and removing dirt, and the fact that they are employed on a vessel does not alter their case.

Justices Harlan and Day concurred in the dissenting opinion.

President Cannot Come

Washington, May 11.—The president was asked by Commissioner Ballinger of the General Lland office, on behalf of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, to be present and break ground for the exposition buildiangs on June 1. The exposition officials in a dispatch to Mr. Ballinger suggested that if the president could not come, he might send Secretary Taft as his representative. Neither the president nor Mr. Taft will be able to go, but a telegram expressing the best wishes of the chief executive will be read at the ceremonies.

ABANDON RAILROAD WAR

Surveying Parties of Two Roads Will Be Brought From Field.

Seattle, May 13.—An engineering corps under the leadership of A. A. Leighton, which included a group of timber experts sent into the Olympic peninsula country by interests close to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, have returned to Seattle. The engineers in that party, together with two other groups of surveyors in the Olympic mountain country for the Northern Pacific and Milwaukee, will be recalled and will be ordered to abandon their work indefinitely.

The railroad building war threatened on the Olympic peninsula, will be abandoned for the time being and may be called off indefinitely. An understanding has been reached between the warring factions, and the transcontinental roads will allow the peninsular country to remain undeveloped until money conditions are better and operating difficulties are removed. There is no hurry about the construction of new lines on the Olympic peninsula and all the railroads interested in that section of the Northwest have agreed on the proposition, it is said.

Harriman engineers have been working in the district, but railroad men do not believe the Harriman line will push work if the other two lines withdraw.

RADICAL REFORMS IN NEW LEWISTON CHARTER

Lwesiton, Idaho, May 11—This city began yesterday its existence under a new charter which is believed to contain more reform features than any other city charter in either the United States or Canada, despite the Dominion's boast of its up-to date municipal methods. The new Lewiston charter places in the hands of the people a full measure of self government and is chock full of such restraints as the initiative, the referendum, the recall, and grants the city the right to build gas, electricitfy and power plants and electric railroads, and permits the council to absolutely control and regulate the prices for gas, light, power, railway fares, and authorizes the comptroller to examine the books of all public service corporations. It is believed Lewiston is the first Western city to adopt the Galveston plan of electing all councilmen from the city at large.

Six Councilmen to Govern

In Lewiston there will be six councilmen who, with the mayor, will exercise all legislative duties as in any other municipal corporation, but each of whom, in addition to these duties will be the head of a department. All six of the councilmen may be chosen from the same ward, or from the same block. One councilman is police commissioner, his pay being for his donuble duties of a leigslator for the city and the head of the police department. In the same way another councilman will be fire commissioner, the third will be street commissioner, the fourth commissioner of public property, the fifth waterworks and sewer commissioner, and the sixth the commissioner of finance and revenue. Because they are not elected by wards it is possible to pick the best men for each place.

Under the new charter the city has the power to put in force a most novel and interesting method of inducing all citizens to exercise their voting privileges. The council may pass an ordinance imposing a poll tax of $3 on each elector, but this poll tax shall be credited as paid to each person who voted at the last election. In Idaho, where the women exercise full surffage, there are thousands of women who refuse to vote, and this provision, when put in force, will arouse the indignation of many who will most certainly be opposed to being fined $3 when they do not vote, and this poll tax provision is in effect a fine.

TO BEGIN PROCEEDINGS TO OUST M'CLELLAN

The next few weeks are expected to establish judicially whether or not he was legally elected.

TWO SCORE KILLED IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA WRECK.

Special Train Carrying Three Delegations from Eastern States Piled Up Near Honda—Fire Adds to Confusion—List of Dead as Far as Known.

Santa Barbara, Cal., May 12.—At least 25 persons have perished in a disastrous wreck on the Coast line of the Southern Pacific yesterday afternoon, when a special train carrying three delegations of Eastern Shriners, returning from a week of merrymaking at Los Angeles, left the track at Honda, a station 59 miles north of here, and piled up on the sandy beach. ADVICE IS TO BUY COAL NOW TO AVOID FAMINE

Seattle, May 13.—"The city and state are in as great danger of a coal famine the coming winter as it was last winter, and the shortage is sure to come if the people do not begin at once to lay in their winter's supply of fuel."

With these words Attorney General John D. Atkinson, who is a member of the legislative commission to investigate the fuel famine of last winter, sounds a warning note to procrastinating citizens who are putting off until later what they should do today, in connnection with their fuel supply.

"In my travels around the state, both on the east and west sides of the mountains, I have talked with dealers and mine owners in reagrd to the matter. All agree that the amount of coal to be handled this winter, once the fall crops begin to move over the railroads, will, in all probability, be little, if any, more than was handled last winter. The majority of the dealers in the state have no facilities for laiyng in at this time the immense supply necessary to accommodate the demand for the coming winter in case some precautions are not taken by the ndividuals.

"Hence, when the dealers' supply is exhausted and the railroads are unable to replenish them from the mines, the situation of last winter, in all its seriousness, will prevail again. If the people start now and lay in their coal the dealers can accommodate them and will be able with the supply they can store to tide the winter over in excellent shape."

COAL LAND WITHDRAWAL TO REMAIN IN FORCE

Seattle, May 11.—All lands embraced in the coal withdrawal orders of 1906 and 1907 are to remain withdrawn from entry until they are examined, classified, priced and restored to entry. This, in substance, is the purport of an order received at the local United States land office yesterday afternoon.

Furthermore, in all cases of application to make final proof, final entry or to buy lands under any public land law, such applications must be submitted for examination to the chief of the field division in which the land is located. If approved by the chief of the field division, the final receipts may be issued, but if protested by him proof must be held up for examination by the general land office.

Large numbers of proofs will be delayed indefinitely by these orders But the order will do away with much grafting and for this reason has been issued. This is the explanation given by the officials at the land office.

In the district handled by the local land office there were originally thirty-four townships withdrawn from entry under this order. Eight have since been restored, making twenty-six townships affected by the order.

EMPLOYE IMPLICATES HIGH INSURANCE MAN

New York, May 11.—C. F. Carrington, a former epmloye of the international pollicyholders' committee, testified in police court that George R. Scrugham, manager of the committee, instructed him and other employes to alter defective ballots sent to them in connection with the election of directors of the New York Life Insurance Company. He declared also that Scrugham had not forwarded to the New York Life tellers so-called "administration ballots" which fell into the hands of the policyholders' committee. "Scrugham told me that when any of the administration ballots fell into my hands there was no need of sending them to the company," testified Carrington, "and he added, jocularly, that I might send them upstairs to him, as he had some chloroform for them."

WORN TO A SKELETON.

A Wonderful Restoration Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.

Mrs. Charles N. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was fading fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

Stuffed Cabbage.

Lay a firm white cabbage in cold water for an hour, then boil for ten minutes in salted water. Drain and when very cold stand it on the stem end and open the leaves, carefully, being sure that there are no particles of grit or other impurity between them and filling the interstices with a stuffing made of a cup of cold chopped, boiled or roast chicken and the same quantity of boiled rice, half as much chopped ham, a little butter and seasoning to taste. When the leaves are well filled with this mixture close the cabbage and tie it up tightly in strong and coarse netting. Boil gently in salted water for an hour and three-quarters. Take from the water, remove the netting, put the cabbage on a heated dish and pour a well-seasoned white sauce over and serve it.

SNOW ROLLERS OF VERMONT.

Simple Device in Use for Keeping Highways Passable All Winter.

Snow rollers are used extensively in Vermont and other States of the northern border, says the Springfield Republican. The snow roller is no new contrivance, but has been in use in Vermont for many years. Nearly all of the Vermont townships own several. It has never been displaced by a more modern device for opening the winter roads, and has proved to be not only the easiest and cheapest means of overcoming drifts, but also is a producer of better winter roads.

One used in the town of East Hardwick has been in service for twenty years. It has rollers, both of which are six feet in diameter, each nine feet wide with a space of about nine inches between. Thus it will be seen that the whole roller presents a total width to the roadway of nearly twenty feet, enough to make ample room for traffic by going over a roadway once. The rollers are usually drawn by four heavy horses and are taken on circuits that vary from six to nine miles in length.

Of course the rollers cannot surmount all drifts, and the men who accompany them are often obliged to get down and shovel. But even then the final results are way and beyond those obtained by the plow method. The rollers, heavy in themselves, are often ballasted, and they pack the snow down into an even roadway that is without ruts and is not cut up easily. As the winter progresses, with alternate thaws and storms, and each succeeding snowfall is packed down by the rollers, a road of remarkable durability results. These hard, frozen roadways resist the coming of spring for a long time, prolonging the "sledding" through the sugar season, and obviating to a large degree the usual bad going of spring. The roads last so long that when they finally do succumb it is rapidly, owing to the advanced sun, and the mud and slush is soon gone.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

Where A holds a mortgage on a farm and assigns the same to B, and B assigns the same to C, only C need to give a satisfaction of the mortgage when the same is paid. By recording the assignments of mortgage, the records show that C is the owner thereof, and that he is the proper party to satisfy the mortgage.

One has no right to shoot a strange dog, that simply happens about his premises, and is liable to the owner in any damages for so doing. One, however, has the right to shoot a dog that is a nuisance because of his killing sheep or other animals, or because of the likelihood that he will otherwise do injury to a party either in person or property.

The railway company is not liable for killing a calf upon a public crossing, unless it could have avoided the killing by due diligence. The railway company is bound to fence its track and is liable for damages done to all stock straying upon the tracks because of a failure to build such fence, upon the theory that such killing is through the negligence of the railway. But it is not bound to look out for stock upon crossings.

"When a teacher in a public school of a common school district in Minnesota refuses to pay his board bill, can the wages of such teacher be garnisheed in order to recover payment of such bill?" Ans.—Yes. Counties, towns, cities, villages and school districts are liable to garnishment in Minnesota, the same as is an individual, since 1901. As a general rule public corporations are not garnishable, upon the grounds that it is against public policy, but the statutes in many States have changed the rule, as it should be. There is no more reason why a municipality should not be garnishable than a railway company, a corporation, or any individual.

"Does a railroad company have to construct crossings for farms?" Ans.—"Any railroad company constructing a railroad so as to leave a part of a farm on either side of the railway, shall construct a proper farm crossing convenient for such farm." This provision seems to apply to the road when it is first put through. Another provision of the statute provides that "persons owning land abutting upon a railroad may construct at their own expense, crossings and drains in such place and in such manner as not to impair the use of such railroad, which crossings and drains shall be maintained and kept in repair by the company." From this it would seem to follow that the railroad companies are not obliged to put in crossings for farms that have been cut up after the railroad was put through.

Some Encouragement at Least.

"So the editor sent your poem back to you," remarked the sympathetic friend.

"Yes," replied Woodby Rhimes.

Lalande and Neptune.

The astronomer Lalande narrowly escaped being made famous by a discovery. He accidentally struck Neptune with his glass on May 8, 1785, but supposed it was a star. He put it down in his notebook as a star and recorded its exact situation. Two days later he struck it once more and made a record of it. But when he looked over his notes he found he had it down as being in two different places, and as a star cannot move in forty-eight hours he supposed he had made a mistake in one of his notes. If he had used his mind a little less mechanically he easily might have been a Columbus.

Lemon Cream Pie.

Boil one and a half cups of milk and stir into it one and a half tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one-half cup of sugar, the juice and grated rind of a lemon, one tablespoonful of butter, and, gradually, the beaten yolks of two eggs. Pour into an open crust and bake. When done spread with a meringue made of the whites beaten stiff with a quarter-cup of sugar. Brown lightly, then take from the oven and allow to cool very slowly.

White Cake.

One-quarter cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of sweet milk, one and one-half cups of flour, sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder, the whites of two eggs. Cream the butter and sugar, add the milk, flour and baking powder; lastly, beat the eggs to a stiff froth and fold into the batter. Bake in two tins.

Soon after King Edward of England decorated Prince Henry of the Netherlands for his gallantry in rescuing passengers from the wrecked steamship off the Hook of Holland, in February, Queen Wilhelmina presented gold medals of the Order of Orange-Nassau to the three sea-captains who assisted in the rescue, and silver medals to the members of the boat crews who risked their own lives in the work.

RHEUMATISM
CAN NOT BE RUBBED AWAY

It is perfectly natural to rub the spot that hurts, and when the muscles, nerves, joints and bones are throbbing and twitching with the pains of Rheumatism the sufferer is apt to turn to the liniment bottle, or some other external application, in an effort to get relief from the disease, by producing counter-irritation on the flesh. Such treatment will quiet the pain temporarily, but can have no direct curative effect on the real disease because it does not reach the blood, where the cause is located. Rheumatism is more than skin deep—it is rooted and grounded in the blood and can only be reached by constitutional treatment—IT CANNOT BE RUBBED AWAY. Rheumatism is due to an excess of uric acid in the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural avenues of bodily waste, the Bowels and Kidneys, have failed to carry off. This refuse matter, coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. The aches and pains are only symptoms, and though they may be scattered or relieved for a time by surface treatment, they will reappear at the first exposure to cold or dampness, or after an attack of indigestion or other irregularity. Rheumatism can never be permanently cured while the circulation remains saturated with irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. The disease will shift from muscle to muscle or joint to joint, settling on the nerves, causing inflammation and swelling and such terrible pains that the nervous system is often shattered, the health undermined, and perhaps the patient becomes deformed and crippled for life. S. S. S. thoroughly cleanses the blood and renovates the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling all foreign matter from the system. It warms and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acrid and corrosive matter in the muscles, nerves, joints and bones, the body is fed and nourished by rich, health-sustaining blood which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. is composed of both purifying and tonic properties—just what is needed in every case of Rheumatism. It contains no potash, alkali or other mineral ingredient, but is made entirely of purifying, healing extracts and juices of roots, herbs and barks. If you are suffering from Rheumatism do not waste valuable time trying to rub a blood disease away, but begin the use of S. S. S. and write us about your case and our physicians will give you any information or advice desired free of charge and will send our special treatise on Rheumatism.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

VOUCHES FOR ITS TRUTH

Oscar Nelson Gives Striking Example of Unequal Assessment.

Gettysberg, May 15th.
Editor Olympic-Leader,

Dear Sir:—It's good news that the timber of Clallam county is to be assessed a little more, that is, after it is cruised. I do hope the commissioners will not rush in and tax the timber too high. At present the logging companies are paying about $2 a thousand for good timber, and it is assessed at about 16c a thousand. It costs about $2.50 a thousand to get the logs down to the saw mill, and the average price at the mill is $12. How different that is to assessment of other property.

But assessment of property in Clallam county is remarkable in more than one way. I will give you an example: Forty acres were bought, about four years ago, from a logging company, by one of its employees, but the deed was not recorded for the reason that assessment would be doubled if transferred to a home-builder. That forty acres has good improvements and had from four to six head of cattle and other personal property, but the 1906 assessment was only $100 all told, when unimproved land belonging to parties with only one vote at election time and no money to help get the best man back into office have to pay taxes on an assessment of $200 per forty. It is only an instance. It is the same all over. The big timber holder cannot pay honest taxes because the good people wont let them.

OSCAR NELSON.

EDITORIALS

OPINIONS OF GREAT PAPERS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS

FOR PURITY OF SPEECH.

CITIZENS of Westfield, Mass., already renowned for a tendency toward reform, are engaged now in a new struggle. They are going to have swearing stopped or know the reason why, and they do not believe there is a reason. Audible profanity in Westfield means a trip to the police court and a fine of a magnitude distinctly promotive of abstention.

Westfield will have the sympathy of the thoughtful in this uplift, and there will be a hope that it may find itself elevated to a plane to which profanity will be alien. There is nothing to be said in defense of the habit of swearing. It not only mars a language more forceful without it, but it is painfully offensive. The person who is loudly profane regardless of his surroundings is the most intolerable of boors. The idle, irrelevant oath not only bespeaks churlish ignorance, but is shocking to sensitive people. It is to be heard in public places. Ladies passing along the streets have their ears saluted by it. Men in street cars often swear as freely as though to do this were a natural instead of an abnormal act.

While under stress of anger or pained surprise a man might swear without creating a feeling of disgust, the ordinary and most objectionable profanity is utterly lacking in excuse. If the people of Westfield shall cleanse the common vocabulary, they will not only raise the local tone, but set their neighbors an excellent example.—Philadelphia Ledger.

RESTRICTING IMMIGRATION.

AFTER many years of agitation a comprehensive act dealing with the subject of immigration has been passed by Congress. Several minor acts have been passed in the meantime, but now we have a law that covers the whole matter. The extreme importance of the question is seen when we consider that the country is obliged, by its system of opening the door to people of all nations, to receive and assimilate a million aliens every year.

The new laws specifies more clearly than did the old law the classes of undesirable immigrants who will not be admitted. The list is long and thorough. It includes all who are defective in mind or diseased in body, convicts, anarchists, paupers and persons unable to earn their living, persons who are imported under contract to perform labor, and other classes that need not be mentioned. Stringent provisions for the inspection of immigrants and rigid regulations requiring steamship companies to deport all rejected inimgrants make the previous law more effective.

For the benefit of immigrants, all vessels bringing aliens into the country are required to provide ample space, which is specified in the law, for the use of passengers; and a division in the Department of Commerce and Labor is to prepare and distribute to the newcomers publications to show the resources, products and physical characteristics of the several parts of the country.

The President is empowered by a carefully worded proviso to forbid the entry into the United States proper of aliens who have emigrated to the insular possessions from countries which issue passports to their citizens. This provision is expected to exclude Japanese coolies—a step which is acceptable to the Japanese government, and which was taken in deference to the wish of the people on the Pacific coast to put a stop to the immigration of laborers from Japan.

A commision is created which is to study the whole question of immigration and to report hereafter to Congress. These are the leading features of an act which may not diminsh the number of those who seek homes in this country, but which will certainly improve the average quality of those who are permitted to enter it.—Youth's Companino.

GET OUT INTO THE AIR.

THE most effective of the present-day doctor's prescriptions is one that hasn't a drug in it. It reads: "Get into the open air." The doctors to a man nowadays give this advice to consumptives, and they save the lives of most of the patients who have the nerve to follow it.

The best spring tonic has only one ingredient—fresh air—and the statement holds true when you substitute any other season for spring and tack the word tonic on. Fresh air won't cure all diseases, but it will prevent most of them, and persons who have heard the old adage know the comparative worth of prevention.

Man talks about spring fever and complains of lassitude. If it isn't sheer laziness, this spring ailment is nothing more nor less than the seasonable reawakening of the ancestral desire to get out into the open. Spring fever afflicts only the walled-in. Mr. Roosevelt finds fault with mollycoddles. If he hadn't struck for the open as soon as he had the use of his legs it is entirely possible that the President might be a mollycoddle himself.

There is no opiate like the open air. The man who sleeps natural sleep can't by any courtesy of terms be called sick, though he be the hypochrondriac of hypochondriacs. Nature doesn't issue any fresh-air cure almanacs with testimonials imprinted therein in large type. She simply puts her cure where all men may get it without money and price, and probably holds as fools all who don't take advantage of the opportunity.—Chicago Post.

THE PRESS AND CRIME.

LET us suppose that the newspaper could be censored, so as to exclude from publication all mention of crimes, catastrophes and shocking events of all sorts, and the columns of the press were filled with accounts of charitable and religious occurrences, and everything that can be considered decent and entirely respectable. What a paradise it would make for criminals, villains and rascals of every sort. The most of them would never be brought to trail but for the publicity given by the press, and if the same sort of suppression of the truth were extended to the courts, few would ever be convicted, since the pressure of public opinion in important cases goes a long way with the average jury. Fortunately, secret trials of criminals are barred by the national Constitution, if that counts for anything.

The same considerations of justice which demand a public trial demand likewise the printing of the testimony. There is no argument in favor of suppressing or garbling the evidence which does not apply as well to the exclusion of the public from the court room. The right "to a speedy and public trial" is fundamental.—New Orleans Picayune.

NEWGATE'S HORRORS.

Modern Structure Replaces a Grim Old London Prison.

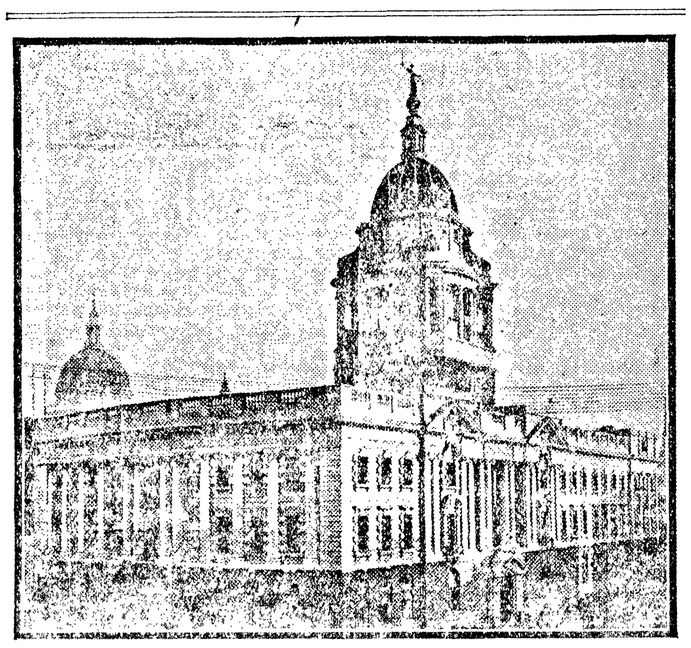
The recent opening in London of the new Sessions House on the site of Newgate prison and the old Bailey marks the passing forever of a grim and tragic relic of the past.

Newgate's history is unusually filled with horrors and tens of thousands of unhappy mortals have been executed within and outside its walls. During the reign of King Henry VIII. alone 72,000 executions took place at Newgate and Sir Thomas More tells us in his Utopia that twenty thieves might be seen hanging from a single gibbet at the same time and that hangings were of almost daily occurrence. In those days the theft of a loaf or the snaring of a hare upon a game preserve were crimes punishable with death.

Up to 1868, when Michael Barratt, an Irish Fenian, was hanged, all the executions at Newgate were held in public. The public regarded such events as holidays and crowds used to assemble outside the walls and camp out during the night in order to have vantage points from which to view the ghastly spectacles. Whisky and gin were sold freely, even upon the steps of the scaffold, and often when a criminal, who had committed some glaringly atrocious crime, was led forth to be hanged the mob would fling themselves upon him and half murder him before the rope could be put around his neck. At the time, earlier than this, when criminals were confined at Newgate and executed at Tyburn, they were wont to be assaulted on the way to Tyburn by savage robs and were frequently pelted with stones and mud as they hung suspended from the gallows.

Nor was it the mere rabble who enjoyed these degrading spectacles. People of "fashion" paid as high as $25 for advantageous places from which to witness an execution and the governor of the prison usually gave breakfasts to "persons of quality" that they might be in the proper humor to see the hanging of a poor fellow mortal. How enormous were the crowds who witnessed executions at Newgate may be inferred from the statement that 200,000 jeering people looked on at the hanging of Jack Sheppard; and in 1807, when 80,000 people had gathered to see a double execution, 28 persons were killed and 70 injured in the wild rush and scramble. Fights were common among these onlookers and spectators often had their limbs broken and teeth knocked out.

Newgate prison dates back to the twelfth century. One of the early prisons upon its site was built by the celebrated Dick Whittington. This building was destroyed in the great fire of 1666. Another Newgate was destroyed during the Gordon riots of 1780, when for several days London was at the mercy of a mob and more than 450 persons were killed. On the burning of Newgate on this occasion 300 criminals were set free and immediately joined the rioters to plunder and kill. Lord George Gordon, who precipitated these outrages because of his opposition to remedial legislation for Catholics, afterward became a convert to Judaism and died in Newgate prison of fever. Old Bailey, which was virtually a part of Newgate, was the trial court. Now both are displaced by the new sessions court.



THE NEW SESSIONS HOUSE, LONDON.

Caoutchouc Tree in Cuba.

In describing the cultivation of a hardy variety of rubber tree in Cuba a writer in the National Magazine of Cuba says that it is advisable to plant the small trees about six meters apart. In this way, at the age of 15 to 20 years the trees having reached a height of say thirty feet do not interfere with minor cultivations.

While the trees are reaching maturity the grower can raise beans, kidney beans, nuts or cassavas, malanga, cotton and maize. The pineapple will make a profitable interpolated crop.

The caoutchouc requires no cultivation, the grass and the vegetation assisting the young plant, and when older the shade eliminates all useless grasses and herbs. The tree can be tapped at the fifth year, but more satisfactory results will be attained by waiting until the sixth year, and then, instead of abstracting two or three pounds of juice it is prudent to take no more than one to one and a half pounds, according to the development of the tree. An average of one and a half pounds would be very reasonable.

If methodically handled the rubber tree is extremely long lived, and from the eighth to the tenth year the tree will produce about six pounds annually and still remain in condition to give service many years to come.

RELIGIOUS

Making To-morrow's Character.

To-morrow's character is determined by to-day's action. Therefore it is not only possible to control the future—it is our positive duty to do so. Whether we will or no, we are making or unmaking character to-day, for "character is habit crystallized." To recognize this ought to help us to take the higher ground always. No man can safely say that he will "take things easy" to-day, and to-morrow do differently. To-morrow may not come; but if it does come, he is less likely to do well than he was to-day, if to-day he has shoved character a peg downward. We have the privilege of looking at our every act as typical of our real and final character; and we have a duty to do so while each act awaits our decision. What is left of to-day may still be so regarded and so controlled, if the control is given to One who alone can overcome the past.

Union with God's Will.

Man's will alone can do great things. God's will can do greater. When the two are joined together, limitations are swept away. Every man knows by experience something of the possibilities of his own unaided will-power. There have been times when, in estrangement from God, and without prayer, we have depended upon our own will alone in the accomplishment of a certain matter, and by sheer determination have succeeded. It may have been only a small accomplishment, but it was enough to prove the existence and the working value of a will. What God asks of us is that we use that same will, and in that same spirit of determination, in working with Him and with His will. If we would try as hard with Him as we sometimes try without Him, life would begin to show results.

Source of Discontent.

There is a law that runs through all things, which finds its cruelest force in money. The more a man has the less he thinks he has. All that God promises is all that we need, not all that we desire. Our desires are infinite—they are made for God, and what is great enough for him is too great for anything less. We are always trying to make ourselves little enough for the world to fill us, and we cannot. This is the source of our divine discontent. We perish with hunger so long as we seek to fill ourselves with the husks the swine do eat. It is only in the Fathers' house that there is bread enough and to spare, and the heart will never be merry with the abiding merriment until we arise and go to the Father.—Mark Guy Pearse.

Looking Beyond.

There are many people who go through the highways and byways of life with eyes that see not. Some keep their eyes ever turned toward the past; some have their eyes fixed solely on the future, others are always blinded by present care and their own personal anxieties.

That one may see, the soul must have risen to where the little frets and worries may be dismissed.

One must break through the crust of indifference and slip out beyond the "cares that infest the day." The spirit must have gone to meet the Infinite and found peace.

Then, when we walk forth in God's sweet out-of-doors, the eyes will see the beauty of the King, and the ear will hear the still, small voice.—W. H. Hamby.

Uncalled For Anxieties.

Would it not be better to leave to-morrow with God? That is what is troubling men; to-morrow's temptations, to-morrow's difficulties, to-morrow's burdens, to-morrow's duties. Martin Luther, in his autobiography, says: "I have one preacher that I love better than any other on earth; it is my little tame robin, who preaches to me daily. I put his crumbs upon my window sill, especially at night. He hops onto the window sill when he wants his supply, and takes as much as he desires to satisfy his need. From thence he always hops to a little tree close by and lifts up his voice to God, and sings his carols of praise and gratitude, tucks his little head under his wing and goes fast to sleep, and leaves to-morrow to look for itself. He is the best preacher that I have on earth."

Trusts from God.

Every burden laid upon us is a compliment from God. An employer does not commit great responsibilities to incompetent workers. The more important the work is, the more careful he is to select only those who can safely represent him in the way they should while carrying that responsibility. So with the affliction and sorrow and business and household cares that are bearing down to-day upon many of God's children. The Father believes in those to whom he is entrusting such burdens, and he is showing his confidence in their ability to represent Him by the way they meet such responsibility. To bear nobly the part He gives them, trusting all the rest to Him, that is His charge to each.

Doing Our Best.

We are bound always to take the best plan; the best plan of life, on the whole, as far as it may lie within our own choice; the best course through each separate scene; the best way of doing each several duty. We have no right to act in an aimless and indolent manner, and then expect all our negligences and slips to be made up and corrected by an over-ruling providence. There is an over-ruling providence, but there is also a teaching wisdom of God, and if we wish to be fully under the protection of the one, we must open all our faculties to receive the instructions of the other.—Dr. A. Raleigh.

Doing Good.

Let me do good and never know
To whom my life a blessing brings;
E'en as a lighthouse freely flings
O'er the dark waves a steady glow,
Guiding the ships, which to and fro
Flit by unseen with their white wings;
Let me do good and never know
To whom my life a blessing brings.

As thirsty travelers come and go
Where some fresh mossy fountain springs;
It cools their lips, and sweetly sings,
And glides away with heedless flow;
Let me do good and never know
To whom my life a blessing brings.
—Canon Wilton.

Honoring God.

Let a man make it his object in life, to bring to God all the honor that he can; to show that he remembers Him and regards Him and reverences Him, even when it is not likely to be noticed, even when it is inconvenient to himself, even when there might be many excuses found for postponing, omitting or forgetting it; let a man live thus, and God Who is thus honored by him will, in turn, honor him. He will cause men to see that a life of remembering God is, on the whole, in the long run, a happy life, and a successful life, and an honored life.—Dr. Vaughan.

THEY "RESUMED."

Hentley villagers still chuckle over the story of Alonzo Peters' courtships, although Alonzo died, an old man of 90, several years ago. But he was, in his far-away youth, chiefly notable as a wooer. He courted nearly all the eligible maidens in the town—not simultaneously, for he was no gay trifler with hearts, but consecutively, and with serious matrimonial intent.

Not that his suit was ever rejected, for he never reached a point where it could be; that was the trouble.

Alonzo was slow. He was very slow. Girl after girl wearied or despaired, and married some less deliberate suitor. Then Alonzo, after a brief pause for retrospection and selection, would transfer his affections and try again. He had been trying some twenty years when Lydia Worrell, one of his earliest sweethearts, was left a widow. Hentley tradition tells that he came awkwardly up to her after church and stammered drawlingly with painful effort:

"Howdy, Lydia! You and me used to see quite a little of one another once. Shall we resume?"

"Certainly we'll resume," the pricked ears of many of the lingering congregation heard Lydia answer, sweetly, "but shall it be where we left off, Mr. Peters, or twenty years further along? It's as you please."

They "resumed" as far along as matrimony.

"Leap-year may have its uses in other places, and I'm not denying it," commented Captain Billy at the store, proudly. "'Tain't needed in Hentley, though. Lyddy Worrel's way is a long sight better!"

"Lyddy Worrell's way" has indeed passed into a local byword, which never fails to be quoted when a shy or dilatory suitor needs encouragement.

FAMOUS GAMBLERS.

Old Time London Betting Clubs and Their Members.

There were three principal clubs—White's, Brookes' and Boodles'. White's was originally a "chocolate house" in William III.s time, but became a private club early in the eighteenth century and was used by the Tories. It was a club always noted for high play and betting, and very curious some of their bets were, the old wager book being still preserved. Brookes' was the Whig club and was then conducted by that

Liberal Brookes, whose speculative skill
Is hasty credit and a distant bill;
Who, nursed in clubs, disdained a vulgar trade,
Exults to trust and blushes to be paid.

Among the members of this club were the Prince of Wales, and, of course, his fidus Achates, Sheridan, besides the great Charles James Fox, who here played deeply and whose name is oft recorded in the wager book, which, however, is of older date and was kept when the club was held at Almack's. "Lord Northington bets Mr. C. Fox, June 4, 1774, that he (Mr. C. F.) is not called to the bar before this day four years." "March 11, 1775, Lord Bolinbroke gives a guinea to Mr. Charles Fox and is to receive a thousand from him whever the debt of this country amounts to £171,000,000. Mr. Fox is not to pay the £1,000 till he is one of his majesty's cabinet." "April 7, 1791, Mr. Sheridan bets Lord Lauderdale and Lord Thonet 25 guineas each that parliament will not consent to any more lotteries after the present one voted to be drawn in February next."—From "The Dawn of the Nineteenth Century," by John Ashton.

Blood Humors

Commonly cause pimples, boils, hives, eczema or salt rheum, or some other form of eruption; but sometimes they exist in the system, indicated by feelings of weakness, languor, loss of appetite, or general debility, without causing any breaking out.

Hood's Sarsaparilla expels them, renovates, strengthens and tones the whole system. This is the testimony of thousands annually.

Accept no substitute, but insist on having

Hood's Sarsaparilla

In usual liquid form or in chocolated tablets known as Sarsatabs. 100 doses $1.

Do you feel, my son, that you have a hard time? Your hours are long. Your task is hard and the wages rather small. The contents of your Saturday envelope will scarcely carry you over the week. Sometimes you must wear patched trousers or a frayed coat. Your employer expects a great deal from you. Other young fellows dress well and always have money. They have coddling fathers or mothers while you toil six days a week to make a living. Never mind, son. You are way ahead of the boy who has every luxury at home. You are getting experience that he must get somehow later on. Because, sooner or later, he must fight the real battle of life for himself. And you have the advantage. While life has been made easy for him he lacks the drill and discipline which every life soldier must go through. He may go in without preparation and fail. Work, sonny, is a great blessing. You cannot see it now, but some day you will say that you were fortunate in your boyhood because you were compelled to work. Because you cannot get power to do things save by doing them. Look over the successful men you know. Get their history. Nearly every one was compelled to work in boyhood. They toughened their muscles by hard work and sharpened their brains by looking out for themselves. Work makes men. Luck usually fails. Pluck nearly always wins. To succeed in anything one must overcome obstacles. Force and fibre are built up by hardships. Grit is as necessary in the making of a man as gumption. Hardships are not always handicaps. Often they are helps. You will understand this better in twenty years. Meantime permit one who has lived that twenty years, and more, to advise you in this: Hang onto your job until you are sure of a better one. Dependable boys are in demand. And no boy can be depended on who does not finish the task he sets his hand to do. However disagreeable your work, do it thoroughly. Do it better than the average boy will do it. In that way you will come to be known as a dependable boy. And mind you this: Men everywhere are looking for capable, honest, gritty, dependable boys. The sooner you let people know you are that kind of a boy the sooner you will get a better job. And don't be in a hurry to give up the work you already have. Be sure something better is offered. Wait awhile. Do your work well. Promotion will come. And do not envy the boy who has an easy time. You would much better pity him! He has a good time now, but some day he must "make good." With his flabby muscles and his easy habits and his many wants he stands a far poorer chance than you. Remember above all, my son, you are making a man out of yourself.

Short Suggestions.

Cream and acids do not curdle where milk and acids will.

When broiling steak try brushing it over with butter and flour to keep the juice in.

When blowing out a candle hold it above you and blow. If this be done the wick will not smoulder.

Turkey rhubarb is neither obtained nor imported from Turkey, but comes from Siberia and is a Russian monopoly.

If sponge cake is mixed with cold water it will be yellow, but if it is mixed with boiling water it will be white.

When making white cake use one-half a teaspoonful more of cream of tartar than soda, as this extra amount of the cream of tartar makes the egg whites stiffer.

Brooms dipped for a few minutes in boiling suds once a week will last much longer than they otherwise would. They should immediately afterward be plunged into cold water to stiffen the straw.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

RUEF CONFESSES

INDICTED SAN FRANCISCO BOSS ENTERS PLEA OF GUILTY.

Admission of Guilt Came as Great Surprise and Was Made Contrary to Advice of His Attorneys, Who Withdrew From Case Before It Was Made.

San Francisco, May 17.—Abraham Ruef, better known as "Abe" Ruef, the acknowledged adviser of Mayor Schmitz and once the recognized dictator of municipal affairs in San Francisco, pleaded guilty to the charge of extortion in Judge Dunne's department of the superior court yesterday. Sentence will be pronounced upon him two weeks hence. After a private conference with his four attorneys in Judge Dunne's chambers, and when they had withdrawn from his case because of the resolution he had taken to change his plea and avoid trial, Ruef. to the utter astonishment of the prosecution, arouse in court and in a dramatic address announced tha tafter long and earnest consideration he had determined to withdraw his plea of not guilty and enter a plea of guilty. He asked that the jury be dismissed and the case abandoned.

Text of Ruef's Statement.

In pleading guilty to the charge of extorting money from the Delmonico French restaurant, on the threat that if the bribe was not forthcoming the license to sell liquor would be revoked, for which he was indicted jointly with Mayor Schmitz, Ruef addressed Judge Dunne as follows:

"If your honor please, I desire to make a statement. I do so after only a short consultation with my attorneys, to whom I have only within the last half hour disclosed my determination and against their earnest protest. I take this occasion to thank them for their services, fidelity and friendship.

"Notwithstanding the court's finding yesterday that this trial might be safely carried on without injury to my health, physical and mental, I wish to assure you that my personal condition is such that I am at the present time absolutely unable to bear for two or three months daily the strain of an actual trial of this case, the consequent continual nightly preparation therefor, the necessary converastion and consultation with my attorneys in regard thereto, to say nothing of other cares and responsibilities.

"Moreover, the strain of these proceedings upon those whom I hold nearest and dearest of all on earth have been so grave and so severe that as a result of these prosecutions, their health has been undermined; they are on the verge of immediate collapse and thier lives are indeed now actually in the balance.

"I have occupied a somewhat prominent position in the city of my birth, in which I have lived all my life, where are all my ties and interests, and from whence, when the time comes, I hope to pass into the eternal sleep.

Borne an Honored Name

"I have bonrne an honored name; in my private and professional life there has been no stain; in my public affiliations, until the municipal campaign of 1905 and the election of the present board of supervisors, the abhorrent charges of the press to the contrarry notwithstanding, no action of mine ever gave just ground for adverse criticism or deserved censure.

"But the assault of the press and their failure to credit honesty of purpose and a desire to hold together a political organization, which had been built up with much effort—means of holding it together being otherwis impossible—did in a measure influence me and corrupted the high ideals for which I had hitherto striven.

"During the past two weeks I have thought deeply and often of this situation, its causes and conditions. To offer excuses now would be folly To make an effort at some reparation for the public good is, however, more than possible. To assist in making more difficult, if not impossible, the system which dominates our public men and corrupts our politics will be a welcome task. I have decided that whatever energy or abilities I possess for the future shall be devoted, even in the humblest capacity, to restoring the ideals that have been lowered.

Return to Civic Morality

"I shall, as soon as opportunity be accorded re-enlist on the side of good citizenship and intergity. May it be allotted to me at some time hereafter to have at least some small part in the re-establishment on a clear,sane basis, a plan of high civic morality and just reciprocal relations between the constantly struggling constituent elements of our governmental and industrial life.

"In the meantime I begin by an earnestness of purpose, a purpose to make the greatest sacrifice which can befall a human being of my disposition, to acknowledge whatever there may have been of wrong or mistake and so far as may be within my power to make it right.

"I reached the final deterimnation last night after careful reflection and deliberation. Where duty calls I intend to follow, whither hereafter the path of my life may lead, and however unpleasant and painful amy be the result.

"I make this statement so that the court and the whole world may know at least the motives which have guided me in the step I am about to take. As an earnest I have determined to make a beginning. I ask now that this jury be dismissed from the further consideration of the case.

"I deisre to withdraw my plea of not guilty and to enter the contrary plea, and at the proper time to submit to the court further suggestions for its consideration."

Ruef Ready to Tell What He Knows

San Francisco, May 16.—"If I am called before the grand jury I will tell the entire truth about the corruption that has existed in San Francisco, so far as I know. So said Abraham Ruef last night, following a consultation with Henry Ach.

If Ruef lives up to this statement a number of men very proimnent in the business, financial and social world, will be indicted for bribery.

If, as he declares, he is to tell the entire truth, the inside workings of the various deals in which he has engaged will be bared to the grand jury, and the exact manner in which he shared his "fees" with Mayor Schmitz given to the world in detail He can also tell may other things of which the public has had only rumors, and which undoubtedly will create a very great sensation.

CONDEMN PRESIDENT AND WM. J. BRYAN

New York, May 22.—President Roosevelt was accused at a meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers at the Astor House in this city of lacking moral courage to cut loose from labor unions entirely and give the country a "square deal" on the labor question.

The condemnation of the president was made by F. C. Nunemacher, of Louisville. The association voted to print Nunemacher's address and spread it broadcast throughout the country. Nunemacher's topic was "The Employer in Politics." He said in part:

"Even President Roosevelt has been influenced by labor unions in some appointments and rulings. He has never yet in unequivocal terms made a stand for a sincere square deal on labor questions that we, as American citizens, are justly entitled to expect from one occupying the highest place in our nation, who is usualy most courageous and fearless."

Nunemacher also attacked W. J. Bryan for having declared that those who oppose the eight hour day did so through ignorance of labor conditions.

"Mr. Bryan," said Nunemacher, "showed woeful lack of knowledge as to true facts. Such an utterance is most unfortunate and criminally unfair if he knows the real facts, as he should."

SUBMARINE BOATS ARE SUBMERGED 24 HOURS

Newport, R. I., May 22.—With all hands well and contented, with a bountiful supply of fresh air, and with records for submergence broken, the submarines Octopus and Lake rose to the surface of Narragansett bay, ending a test of 24 hours under water.

The Octopus' crew and the members of the trial board crowded about her as the conning tower hatch flew open. The members of the trial board at once went below to see what conditions existed on board and also to test the air supply. Samples of air were bottled every two hours through the test for analysis by the board.

The Octopus blew out foul air only twice during the 24 hours she was at the bottom of the bay. It was computed that only one-fifty-fifth of her air supply was exhausted, and if these figures are correct, they tend to show that the boat could remain submerged thirty-five days provided the food and fuel supply were sufficient.

The Lake also stood the test well, although a leak was sprung in the superstructure. She was pumped out twice, but what portion of her air supply was used up could not be learned.

Cannot Finish Armored Cruisers

Washington, May 22.—The Union Iron Works of San Francisco will build no more warships and have notified the navy department that the armored cruiser California, which is 99.6 completed, and the South Dakota, 97.4 completed, must be taken over by the government and completed by the navy department. The reason given is that the strike of the iron workers makes it impossible to finish the contract.

FOR CHURCH UNION

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIANS APPROVE COMMITTEE REPORT.

Minority Report Takes Opposite Views ---Spirited Debate in Northern Assembly Over Proposed Change in Church Government.

Birmingham, Ala., May 21.—By a vote of1 6 to1 0 the special comimttee named to consider the constittionality of the articles of agreement and overtres bearing on closer relations of chrches using the presbyterian system, adopted a majority report as follows:

First—We have conted the vote of the presbyteries and find that fifty of the seventy-nine which have made retrns voted in favor of the addition of the articles, twenty-seven voted in favor of rejecting them, two took no action.

Second—In or opinion, the general assebmly can adopt the articles of agreement without violation of the constitutHion of the chrch.

Third—We carefully considered all overtures and papers sent by the presbyteries and find none of them requires answer from this assembly other than that contained in this report.

Forth—We recommend that the articles of agreement be adopted.

Fifth—As the Presbyterian chrch in the United States will be entitled to twelve representatives in the concil, we recommend that representatives be divided into three classes of for members each, to consist of two ministers and two ruling elders.

Sixth—We recommend that the moderator appoint a committee of five to nominate a representative to this general assembly with the nameHs of twele personsq ualified to serve as representatives from this church, dividing the same into classes asp roided fo in this report

A minority report taking a directly opposite position, holding the adoption of the articles o agreement to be unconstitutional has also been prepared.

IN SPIRITED DEBATE

Proposed Change in Presbyterian Rules Raises Cry of Hierarchy.

Columbus, Ohio, May 21.—After a spirited discussion, during which it was charged that an attempt was being made to build up a Catholic hierarchy, the Presbyterian gedneral assembly yesterday adopted the report of the committee on administrative agencies, which provides for the establishment of executive committees by presbyteries, synods and general assembly by the moderators of thel respective organizations, who shall be the head.

The majority of the presbyteries approve these overtures and the committee will report to the next general assembly a plan for an executive committee of the general assembly.

The report of the committee was presented at the morning session, but action was not taken until the closing hours of the afternoon The adoption of the report of the committee does not bind the assembly to the suggestions.

Ninety presbyteries have indorsed the proposition of the Erie presbytery to the general assembly, asking that a committee be appointed to open negotiations with the United Presbyterian church with a view of bringing about a union of that body with the parent body. The United Presbyterian church has about 225,000 communicants, and outside of its adherence to the Psalmody of David there is said to be no vital point of difference that would prevent a union.

PLAN PANAMA LINE TO REDUCE FREIGHT

Seattle, May 21.—The matter of exorbitant freight rates imposed by the railroads upon Pacific coast business was the chief topic of discussion at a meeting of the Commercial Club. The committee on commerce and navigation was authorized to draft a memorial to President Roosevelt to get in touch with Coast commercial bodies and to have them co-operate in an effort to establish a line of fast steamers from Panama along the coast, in order to compete with the railroads. The discussion of freight rates was extensive, among the speakers being George H. Landley, agent of the Manufacturers' Association, of San Francisco.

Roosevelt's Fall Trip

Washington, May 21.—President Roosevelt is planning a trip next fall down the Mississippi river, from some point in Middle Illinois or Iowa toM emphis. It will, if made, be with the members of the inland waterway commission, who, like the president, will be guests of the Lakes to the Gulf Deep Waterway Association.

Chinese Show Gratitude

Shanghai, May 20.—A banquet was given to J. L. Rogers, United States consul general here, by a number of Chinese officials. Smiling is nothing but twisting your face;
Moving is nothing but changing your base—
What's the use?

What is the use of it? What is the use?
Smoking is pumping stuff into your lungs;
Having your way is to kick like the deuce;
Fame is a ladder with grease on the rungs,
What is the sense of it all, anyway?
What is the—Why is the—Hang it all!
Say,
What's the use?

His Proposal

Mr. Augustus Sheringham entered his hansom with much the demeanor with which an indifferent sailor might climb into a seagoing ship. He had a bad half hour before him, and he was well aware of the fact. Having directed his coachman to an address on 5th avenue, and straightened his immaculate tie at the strip of looking glass beside him (this last a purely mechanical proceeding), he leant forward, and with fixed, unseeing gaze, that seemed to scorn the traffic of the city, again surrendered himself to the problem that had been torturing his brain for hours. What on earth should he say to her? How could he ever hope to explain the position in which he found himself?

New York was looking its best that fine June morning. In the pale warm sunlight Central Park glowed gently; the merry chorus of birds blended harmoniously with the jingle of busses and the soft purring of electric automobiles. It was a day to delight the senses of one who loved his New York but half as intensely as did Mr. Sheringham on ordinary occasions. But today as had been hinted, he cared for none of these things—saw them not, indeed. For almost the first time in his forty years of blameless life Mr. Sheringham, on that drive to 5th avenue, neglected to observe and return the salutes of passing acquaintances. He was thinking, too, deeply to be conscious of anything but the one question that absorbed him, and which he did not know how to answer.

Presently he drew from his pocket a letter, and fixing his glasses, regarded the paper with a frowning concentration that seemed determined to gain some inspiration from its mere perusal. The action was, however, an empty one, for he already knew the contents of the letter by heart, had read and re-read it fifty times since it had burst like a bombshell into the midst of his placid bachelor breakfast. But for the fifty-first time he strove to grapple with the problem that it presented.

"My Dear Mr. Sheringham—Your note only reached me this morning, but I am obeying your wish and replying to it with as little delay as possible. Perhaps it is unnecesary for me to say how much your proposal has touched me; it cannot be otherwise than flattering to a woman of eight-and-thirty (my age!) to be asked to be his wife by a man whom she both admires and esteems. But, dear friend, while fully sensible of the worth of what I renounce, you must forgive me if I say that I fear it cannot be as you wish. Some day, perhaps, I may try to explain to you my reasons; till then, and always, please permit me to remain, as before, your sincere and attached friend.

"ANNETTE PILKINGTON."

A sufficiently straightforward and charming letter, you will admit, for a woman to send in reply to the proposal of any man. Why, then, did Mr. Sheringham, whose appearance was hardly that of the rejected suitor, feel apprehensive? The reason is simple. He had not written the letter to which this was an answer. Mr. Sheringham, in short, had never proposed to Mrs. Pilkington, and was now faced with what he conceived to be an unpleasant duty of telling her so.

He had small doubt as to the miscreant who was almost certainly the cause of his dilemma. Not for nothing had Mr. Sheringham been a bachelor uncle for the past twenty years. He remembered with grim satisfaction how often he had reproved his sister Mary for her absurd leniency toward those unconscionable boys, how often he had predicted that some day Tom, now a cadet at West Point, with his dangerous capacity for imitating handwriting, would achieve some serious mischief. His pride in the fulfilment of this prophecy was dashed by the reflection that he could never proclaim it. He felt that he owed it not only to the lady's dignity, but to his own, that no living soul should ever hear of the affair. Vengeance, secret but severe, upon Tom was a matter to which Uncle Augustus could attend at his greater leisure.

Meanwhile, in the immediate present was the interview with Mrs. Pilkington. With a final quiver of reins the hansom drew up before the door of the widow's house, and Mr. Sheringham slowly descended. From one direction came the distant echo of German musicans playing La Matchiche, and imparting to that frolicsome air all the Teutonic melancholy of their race. Nearer at hand a commercial vocalist with a cart was vaunting the excellence of ripe strawberries in what is so appropriately termed a fruity baritone, and two elderly gentlemen had paused in the very center of the pavement to discuss a question of politics. Mr. Sheringham noted all these trifles with the sharpened perceptions of a drowning man. He felt absurdly as he did when, as a small boy, he was led to the family dentist.

"There will be no occasion for you to wait, Henry," he said, in a hollow voice. Then he walked up the steps and pressed the bell.

The room into which he was shown was one that had long stood to Mr. Sheringham as a model for all that such a a room should be. It was long and low, full of soft, delicate color, and odorous with flowers. The dim light of the drawn blinds was grateful to him in his nervous and overwrought condition; he felt vaguely rather than realized an atmosphere of tranquillity that had already begun to soothe him as he crossed the threshold.

At his entrance the mistres of the house arose with a little startled gesture. Mrs. Pilkington was a tall and remarkably graceful woman, whom time had treated with gentleness. Her age, given by herself as 38, might well have passed in that subdued light for at least ten years less, and she wore with distinction a gown of the kind occasionally described by masculine novelists as "some soft clinging material."

"Ah," she said in a voice which, while agitated, betrayed no great astonishment, "you have come, then."

"Yes," repeated Mr. Sheringham mechanically. "I have come." After an imperceptible pause he added, "I—I felt that it was better that it was due to both of us, that I should do so."

WITH A LITTLE STARTLED GESTURE.

"Sit down," said Mrs. Pilkington, herself sinking on to the couch from which she had risen.

Mr. Sheringham obeyed in silence. With returning self possession, there was beginning to grow upon him an almost overwhelming sense of the difficulty of the task that he had undertaken. He dreaded the humiliation which he must bring upon the charming woman before him—how charming he realized in that moment as never before. His eyes, that dared not look up, were attracted suddenly by the delicate beauty of the hand that played nervously with the cushions beside her.

For it would have been obvious, had not Mr. Sheringham been still too preoccupied to perceive it, that Mrs. Pilkington was extremely nervous—far more so than the tone of her note could have led him to expect. Not only did this involuntary movement of the hand betray her (in one usually so restfully composed), but a little agitated color that kept coming and going in her cheeks. Mr. Sheringham, however, was now looking at his boots, and saw nothing of this.

"I—I have something to explain," he began unsteadily, "something that it is right you should learn from me personally." He paused before the final leap. "It is about that letter."

"My dear friend," she interrupted him, "surely no explanation is needed. Your letter, which I shall always be proud to have received, was quite sufficient in itself. It told me everything!"

Mr. Sheringham felt then that he would gladly give a large sum of money to know exactly what that implied. "You—you have kept it?" he asked clumsily.

"You speak," she laughed back, but with an uncertain ring in her voice, "as though you were anxious to withdraw the offer. Be reassured. I shall not bring action."

Here at once was his opportunity, given by herself. Before he could take it, however, she had continued in an angered tone—"But do not think that I shall part with that letter."

"Why?" asked Mr. Sheringham, startled into an upward glance.

"You want an answer to that?"

"Of course."

"Because it made me more proud and happy than anything I have ever read in my life."

Then, quite suddenly, Mr. Sheringham saw that the thing was not to be done. Perhaps the tone of her voice showed him. Better a lifelong misunderstanding than a disclosure—after that. He breathed a sigh of genuine relief.

"And yet you refused me," he said, watching her, and seeing for the first time that tremulous color. "Why?"

"You have a right to ask. Yet—it is difficult sometimes for a woman to explain her reasons."

"But you gave no hint in your answer. It was not that—that I am distasteful to you?"

His voice was unreasonably anxious, and he was unable now to take his eyes from her face. How beautiful it was in its unexpected blushes!

"Ah, no! You must understand that at least it was not that. But, surely—we have known each other too long, you and I, for any nonsense of sentiment between us."

"Our engagement could have been the shorter," returned Mr. Sheringham, almost gaily. Now that his ordeal was removed, he found himself enjoying the interview amazingly. "And so, for this no reason at all, a whim which you cannot even explain, you have condemned me to solitude!' He sighed, with gentle self pity, a mental picture of his bare bachelor lodging, in contrast with this dainty room, coming to add pathos to words in which already he more than half believed. "Ah, cruel, cruel!"

"My dear friend," said the widow, "is it possible that you have not yet seen the absurdity of wishing to join your life with that of an old woman like myself?"

"Old!" cried Mr. Sheringham gallanty. "Perish the thought! you have the advantage of me by years!" He meant it, too; with the danger behind him, he felt that he could safely allow himself the luxury of a little sentimental regret. "If you are old, Annette, what of me?"

"A man is different; a bachelor is a youth at 60."

"Because he has never lived!"

She smiled, and half held out her hand as though to place it upon his, then drew it back again. "Your views are not altered then," she said softly after a moment (and surely the hesitation might have warned him); "you still wish to hear my reason for replying to you as I did?"

"Can you ask it?"

"Then I will tell you. It was because, having to answer to you immediately, I wrote in such haste that perhaps"—again she hesitated, then finished in tones that weer barely audible—"perhaps I did not wait to know my own mind."

"What!" Mr. Sheringham had been listening in a pleased reverie, soothed by the gentle murmur of her voice. He sprang up, white with emotion.

"Is it so difficult to understand?"—Mrs. Pilkington raised her eyes to his, smiling shyly—"the woman's privilege. I am an old woman, but not yet, I fear, a very wise one. How astonished you look. Could you not see what it was that has been making me so foolishly nervous ever since you came in? If—if you, too, had regretted your decision, you should never have known. But now—now, Augustus, if you still want me. it shall be as you wish!"

Mr. Sheringham gasped. The comely figure of Mrs. Pilkington danced grotesquely before his vision, the floor seemed to be giving way beneath him. Only two intelligible thoughts remained in his mind—one was that it was now become absolutely impossible to undeceive his old friend, the other that somehow, in the last ten minutes, he had fallen in love with her.

"Annette!" he said, "Annette!" It was the only thing to say, and he followed it gallantly with the one action that was appropriate to the circumstances.

"How we shall astonish people," murmured Mrs. Pilkington.

"Yes," said Mr. Sheringham truthfully, "it is no doubt something of a surprise—for everybody."

"Tell me, Augustus," said his fiance, somewhat later, when they were seated upon the sofa, "how came you to be at West Point yesterday?"

"At West Point?" Mr. Sheringham looked bewildered.

"Yes. Your letter—the letter—was post-marked from there."

"Oh, of course, yes," said the lover, "the fact is I ran up to have a look at my nephew, Tom—Mary's eldest, you know," he explained.

Mrs. Pilkington gazed at him admiringly. "How like your kind heart," she said—"to think of a schoolboy—at such a crisis!'

"Not at all," said Mr. Sheringham. As a matter of fact he was thinking of him at that moment, but his thoughts were of too tumultuous and contradictory a nature to be expresed in words.

* * * * * * *

So these were wed (about four months later), and merrily rang the bells. That was at the end of the summer holidays, and when, on a bright September morning, Mr. Sheringham, radiant now, and more than reconciled to his fate, left Trinity church with Mrs. Sheringham on his arm, his nephew was observed to be among the most delighted of the guests. The bride was given away by her brother-in-law, but so far the true history of the proposal has been given away by no one. Perhaps this is accounted for by the fact that Tom returned to West Point after a severe lecture from his justly indignant uncle, with what is vulgarly known as a flee in his ear. But in his pocket were ten golden eagles from the same source.--London Sketch.

FLAG DAY.

Friday, the 14th of June, will be the one hundred thirtieth anniversary of the birth of the flag of the United States. The resolution by Congress for the adoption of the Stars and Stripes on June 14, 1777, was as follows: "Resolved that the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation." The design of this flag is credited to George Washington, and in part was taken from his family coat of arms. Such is the orgin of a flag now grown to forty-six stars, dedicated to the proposition that "all men are created free and equal." Let us honor the natal day of our national flag—displaying it from our public buildings, schools, and homes in recognition of this memorable day.

Warren Lee Goss, National Patriotic Instructor, G. A. R., in a circular letter says, that the men of the Grand Army of the Republic, who preserved the nation in the greatest war of modern times and made vital the declaration of our fathers, call upon all who live under the flag to recognize this day by patriotic observances in schools and—on the Sunday preceding—in churches. Such recognition will nourish the greatness of our nation, inculcate noble citizenship, the principles of civil liberty, and be an object lesson to the new generations that have come upon the stage since the civil war.

Let Angeles honor the day as becomes a patriotic people.

SEGUIN NOTES.

Wednesday evening, 22d, being the anniversary of three Seguin ladies, namely, Mrs. Hattie Grant, Mrs. Etta Keeler and Miss Lula Breece, the trio entertained their many friends at Mrs. Keelers. Cards were first on the program and eight tables were filled with enthusiastic progressive pedro players. The first prize was captured by Mrs. Goldsmith; gents prize went to the old veteran, Herman Sindars, Sr., and the booby to Prof. Bown. Next came dancing, which was enjoyed by many. Then a musical program was rendered, which was very much appreciated. Those who kindly lent their assistance were J. H. McKesick, phonograph, Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Lee, Wm. Brown, Mrs. VanAntwerp, and Miss Sadie Robertson. After the program all partook of refreshments — ice cream, cake and claret punch. All declared themselves as having been well entertained and wished their hostesses many more such occasions.

Intended for last week.

Fine weather, fine people, and plenty of business; that is Seguin.

Mrs. J. L. Keeler is spending a week's vacation in Townsend.

Wm. Ansland entertained a party of friends at his bachelor quarters Thursday night last.

C. C. Kennedy has accepted the position as bar tender at the Corners.

Call at the Corners and see the big eagle shot by W. H. Knapman.

J. L. Keeler and S. M. Harned disposed of ten acres of fine land this week. The purchasers are from Bremerton and will immediately move to Seguin. The price paid was $80 per acre with water. This shows what the stranger thinks of our country.

The Cougar mill has been idle for the past few days, having broken down.

Kirschberg, ths merchant prince of Port Angeles, was a visitor to Seguin first of the week, having driven up in Gibson's new auto.

The Seguin Mfg & Lighting Co. have installed a fine new edger in their new mill. This makes it the finest saw mill in Clallam county.

Notice—On and after May 1, 1907, all Independent telephones will be furnished to residences at $1.00 per month, payable at the central office in advance. Ind. Tel. Co.

One month's free service will be given to the party who figures out the most words in, Independent Telephone Company. All answers to be sent to J. L. Keeler before June 1.

Don't forget, the largest and most enthusiastic Fourth of July celebration for many years will be held at Seguin.

DUNGENESS

Farmers have finished planting.

The rain this week is a boon.

Dungeness Civic Club gave a dance last Saturday evening which proved remunerative as well as enjoyable.

Mrs. Gordon, the music teacher, is going East, and Dungeness will have no teacher in that line.

Mrs. Fred Tracy, who lives on the Cydell farm, is a first class dress maker, and is prepared to do all kinds of work in that line, having learned her trade in France.

Capt. Horne has gone East to visit his boyhood haunts and hunt up old friends. His daughter, Miss Mabel, accompanied him. They will take in the Jamestown exposition before they return.

Mrs. Norman Govan, having sold her farm at Discovery, is visiting her friends and relatives in Dungeness.

C. O. M.

KALE

Mrs. Aaron Emery returned last Friday from Seattle, accompanied by Miss Vina, who has been away attending school.

Saturday, Miss Viola Stilwell returned from Mr. Wiliston's, bringing the two little boys with her. Horace is still very ill.

Charlie Lewis went to Angeles Saturday to work with his brother, W. E. Lewis. Word comes back that he is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

Fred Neuenschwander has sold all his live stock, seeded his farm and gone away to work. We are wondering if he will locate near Tacoma.

Ed. Walker has moved his family down to the little settlement at the Elk mill. The company is soon to establish a store there.

Henry and Charley Mackenheimer are home from Crescent, looking the worse for wear. Overtime is all right financially, but not physically.

BLYN

Arthur Hillier is in Blyn paying a visit to old acquaintances.

Chris Burrowes spent the latter part of last week in Port Angeles, rusticating.

Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kirmer, is reported as improving.

Joe Moniz is proudly exhibiting a large bear which had been pig hunting.

Mrs. J. F. Delaney and daughters have returned from a weeks visit to Seattle.

Wallace Lousberry and family are moving to Seattle. They leave the latter part of this week.

We have our game warden. Our next request is for a man who will undertake to pound all the steak used by residents of our prosperous town until the present supply is exhausted, as it is too tough for ordinary muscles. We think, perhaps, a blacksmith will do.

W. B. Main is expecting a schooner with several tons of freight. All the ladies of Blyn are expecting to buy their new summer gowns right away.

The Rex Cedar & Fir Co. expect to start up very soon under a new management.

Some of the ladies of the town were startled from their slumbers by what they at first thought to be the war-woops of an invading band of Indians. Investigation revealed the fact that they were pale face warriors on their way, not to a war dance but to a peace dance. They returned Sunday morning, with noise undiminished, to their respective homes along the way. In spite of the fact that it was a peace dance we are inclined to think that they found some fire-water. We may be mistaken but we are judging by the noises.

News from Dist. 32.—Blyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Risley, Dr. and Mrs. Hart, from Angeles, and Mr. Cook and Mrs. Dr. Cook from Seguin, were up to Blyn May 22, picking rhododendrons. They had a picnic at the spring on Delaney's ranch.

Mrs. Delaney and her daughters Misses Mabel and Ruby spent a week in Seattle. They returned last Monday.

Antone Zaccardo was slightly injured in a runaway first of the week.

James Curry of Blyn was badly hurt in a logging camp at Discovery this morning.

Frank Delaney and Antone Zaccardo went to Port Townsend today.

Miss Mary Silva is very ill. It is said she has measles.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Zaccardo's baby is not recovering very rapidly.

Mr. Lonsberry and family moved to Seattle today. MISCHIEF.
