Buying a Silk Dress

In days gone by was an event of a life time Fashions did not change so often as they do now-a-days and silks lasted longer than most merchants would care to promise today for what they call "pure silk" Manufacturers at that time made the production of good silks a matter of honor Among the few who, through the years have adhered to this policy are the makers of our

OF THE
TIMES CLOTHING MART
IS DETERMINED TO SELL OUT HIS DRY GOODS

Price is no object. Room he must have for his new fall stock of rubber goods and oil clothing that is on the way.

A few splendid Ladies' Coats, Skirts, Waists, Underwear, and Corsets.
Black Underskirts at 50c worth $1.00

Thread all colors down to 6 for 25c.

We must clear. This is no put up job to make money. That is not what I want. I need room.

If some snide traveling firm came into town with cheap goods at high prices some folks would scramble over each other to get first snap and then be beat. Its hard to make some people understand a genuine bargain.

Prints advanced to 6¾c on July 23rd. I am selling at 5c while stock lasts.

I cannot give time and space to quote all prices but ask you to come in and look around. If you buy, all right, if not, all right. It don't cost to look around, and very little to buy.

MOUNTAINEERS ARRIVED

Forty-six enthusiastic members of the Mountaineers' Club arrived on the Whatcom on Wednesday clad in kiaka suits and high lace boots and immediately set out for the first camp three miles above McDonald's on the Elwha. It was impossible to get enough teams to carry the personal luggage of the party and the women who wished to ride the first day and as a result about two-thirds including a goodly number of women were compelled to walk the thirteen miles to the site of the first camp and this before supper, all arrangements being made to eat the evening meal at the camp.

The parties, however, are somewhat hardened to the task before them, fifteen preparatory outings having been heretofore arranged and carried out for the purpose. All are equipped with sharp iron-pointed staffs and corked boots and fully prepared for roughing it for a period of at least three weeks. The purpose of the more hardy of the party is to climb Mt. Olympus, while the majority will content themselves with ascending the minor peaks in the vicinity of the king of the range which surround the permanent camp located near the Clallam-Jefferson line Southwest of this city.

The trip is not arranged wholly for pleasure, however, as government and state as well as the society history gatherers have representatives along to secure pictures and data for an exhaustive study of the resources of the region. It is thot that many new and interesting features will thereby be added to the now somewhat meager knowledge of this wonderful country, and the result cannot but be beneficial to this section.

Prominent among the party are: Wm. D. Lyman, professor of history and science at Whitman College, Walla Walla; Prof. Henry Landes, geological authority at the State University; Prof. Flett, botanist, of Tacoma; Prof. Plumb of the Seattle public schools; Rev. F. J. Van Horn, pastor of Plymouth Congregational church, Seattle; Dr. Cora Smith Eaton, secretary of the club; Asa L. Curtis, photographer, and several government investigators from the Smithsonian Institution at Wash ington, D. C., and forty-three others.

The second party, which will leave August 3, will be as follows: Prof. Theo. C. Frye, Miss Ina M. Hanna, Miss Gertrude Niedergesaess, Prof. H. C. Stevens, Miss Lavina Rudberg, of Seattle, Charles Landes of Tacoma, and Dr. Weaver of Berkeley, California.

E, B. Webster of the Olympic-Leader, the only Angeles member of the club, accompanied the Mountaineers, and our readers may expect to hear from him later.

WE'VE TAKEN TO TALL TIMBER

Mr. Carlisle says he never appreciated that old song "We wonder why, as we go down the street," until he began to manufacture Wilgrow. He knows now why the largest timber always grows along the Salmon streams, and sees his finish — unless he can induce two or three of the "boys" in town to take a course in in the preparation of the new product. By the way, have you tried Wilgrow on your flowers yet? By Jove, its great stuff!

WE'D ALL LIKE TO KNOW

A "City" with four blocks of water front! Who drew up the incorporation papers of this city? Can anyone enlighten us?

A few cases of measles and scarlet fever are reported in town and in various parts of the county, but under a strict quarantine.

QUESTION OF DEVELOPMENT

The Matter of Good Roads for Bettering the Community Discussed.

Mr. Samuel Hill, President of the Good Roads Assoiciotion, gave us a kindly call Thursday on his return from the Lakes. He was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Lindley and Miss Stimpson, of Ballard, who are more than pleased with our summer resort. Mr. Hill, wished to be understood in all fair kindness and the very best wishes for our community, stated "he has been here but a few times in several years, the prettiest part of the state, and never get in here without feeling bad as it is not very accessible to outside people. Mr. Day is an ideal hotel man and a good transportation man in Mr. Chambers.

"There is no reason why this country should not be filled full, except for this reason, that the roads are not put in the right places. Now, the way of getting out of this city is something damnable and discouraging to many. The roads could be made to double the population many times and also the business, if the attractions here about, were only brot to the attention of the outside people.

"Some years ago I indicated where a road should be built on easy grade from Lake Crescent in, but in place of following water grade put the road on top of the hill. The transportation facilities on water between Seattle and Pt. Angeles are in very competent hands and steamship company is already doing their share to build up but don't think the cities of Clallam County are. The best assets you have is scenery, they can't take that away and don't cost anything to maintain it.

"But the bad tax you pay, if not almost prohibitive tax, is the bad roads tax. At the present time the facilities for getting into Lake Crescent from Port Crescent are such as to make any man who tries it a fit candidate for the lunacy commission but this condition may not always exist, and the thing for Port Angeles to do is to realize in time, that while their distance is a little long to the Lakes they can overcome this by good roads. And nothing can be done to make the place so attractive as to build good roads, and money that will come from that investment will more than repay them many fold."

HARBOR MASTER AT SEA

Harbor Master J. F. Franck, since the question of city boundaries has been raised, is wondering just where he is at. Perhaps he has authority off the shore of the county — perhaps not. Can the attorney enlighten him as to his powers in case a ship starts discharging ballast alongside Railroad Avenue, just east of Lincoln street?

MIGHT USE A FEW THOUSAND

The county has over twelve thousand dollars in its bridge fund, a small portion of the total amount paid into the fund by the city of Port Angeles, which has never reaped any direct benefit therefrom. Wouldn't this be a good time to make a start towards bridging the gulches?

The Times Clothing Mart will continue to sell all prints at 5c the yard as long as the stock lasts.

ACCIDENT AT FILION MILL

Walter Hall Thrown Upon Knee Bolter Saw and Injuries Prove Fatal.

Walter Hall, a youug man living on Lincoln Heights and employed in Filion mill, was thrown into one of the saws Saturday afternoon, losing both hands and one leg, and dying from the injury about three hours later.

Mr. Hall and Mr. Vitale were feeding the cut-off saw — a circular saw, swung from overhead, which is used to cut up the short end of a log left from the drag saw — when the saw, striking a knot, kicked the piece of wood outward, knocking both men down, Mr. Hall falling or being thrown onto the knee bolter. He was conscious and realized the extent of his injuries, but suffered very little pain; upon arrival of the doctor he was taken to the hospital and died shortly after.

Charles Walter Hall was born in Missouri about 17 years ago, being, in fact, but twenty days less than seventeen, and came to Angeles with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Absom Hall, about three years ago. He is a nephew of Councilman C. W. Harding and Mrs. E. B. Fleming. The oldest of a family of four children, he had started in to make his way in the world and being of a bright, happy disposition, and of good habits, was well liked by everyone with whom he came in contact.

Funeral services were held at Lincoln Heights M. E. Church Monday at 2:00 p. m., Rev. Drahn of the Lutheran Church officiating.

VIC COOKE AT THE PARLOR

Cornell & Cooke have been playing a week's engagement at the Parlor Theater, drawing good houses and pleasing everyone. The name "Vic Cooke" was a guarantee of an evening of mirth to all those who had seen him before, and Mr. Cornell easily became a favorite. The week closes tomorrow evening; at the popular prices. The house will be crowded, so get your seats early.

MOUNT OLYMPUS ASCENDED

Cut in Ahead of the Mountaineers and Claim to Have Made First Ascent.

H. C. Parker of New York, Walter G. Clark of Seattle, and B. S. Brown of Tacoma, members of the National Geographical Society, made an ascent of Mount Olympus, reaching the summit Wednesday the 17th.

Rupert Bowman informs us the gentlemen said the trip involved a day up over snow fields to get near the summit, and a second day of twelve hours hard work to reach the top. They returned with sunburned and blistered faces and were emphatic in the statement that the climb was harder than Mts. Baker or Rainier and fully equal to Mt. McKinley in Alaska, they having been members of the party to make that famous peak last year. Rupert says, judging from their appearance, not more than a half dozen of The Mountaineers will be able to make the summit.

Portland, July 20 —After a conference between Chief Engineer Darling and contractors of the Portland & Seattle railroad, it has been announced that the last spike will be driven November 1, on the line between Kennewick and Vancouver, and trains placed in operation. This means that the road will be completed, with the exception of bridges over the Columbia and Willamette, two months earlier than expected.

Harriman Will Advertise

Chicago, July 22.—Harriman lines are preparing for the most energetic advertising campaign in their history, a campaign in which more than $2,000,000 will be expended. The heads of all the advertising dpeartments are meeting here and discussing plans for the campaign. The method pursued in arriving at a decision as to how the money shall be spent is unique. The publications and the work of each department come in review before all of the other departments for criticism. It is understood that the companies have decided to do more newspaper advertising than before and to issue fewer booklets of an expensive character.

Pioneer Penitentiary Burned

Olympia, July 20.—Another landmark of the state was destroyed yesterday afternoon, when the pioneer penitentiary at Bucoda burned. The fire is supposed to have been started by tramps. A number of residences and the plant of the Mutual Lumber Company were endangered by the hot blaze, but the work of the fire department saved them from destruction. The penitentiary was built in 1879.

COLLISION AT SEA

NEARLY A HUNDRED LIVES WERE LOST.

Passenger Steamship Columbia Bound for Portland Struck By Steam Schooner San Pedro Off Mendocino Coast----Collision Occurred Midnight Saturday.

San Francisco, July 23.—As near as can be estimated seventy-two persons lost their lives in one of the worst marine disasters in the history of the California coast when the steamer Columbia and the lumber laden steam schoner San Pedro came together in a midnight collision in Shelter Cove, southwest of the Mendowcino-Humboldt county line early Sunday morning.

The first details of the disaster were brought to Eureka by the steamer Roanoke and the steam schooner Daisy Mitchell, which have arrived in San Francisco, bringing some of the rescued.

The Columbia was bound from San Francisco for Portland, Or., and carried 189 passengers. The San Pedro was south bound. There had been a heavy fog, but at the time of the collision the weather was clearing and the sea smooth. Both vessels were running at full speed and the San Pedro sank her stem fully ten feet in to the Columbia's port bow.

Nearly all of the Colubmia's passengers and some of her crew were asleep in their cabins and bunks when the crash came. As the San Pedro backed away the sea poured in through the ragged hole in the Columbia's bow above and below her water line, and in five minutes the vessel sank to the bottom, the deep waters of Shelter Cove covering even he tips of her masts.

Eureka, Cal., July 23.—Hourly the death list of the marine horror off the Mendocino coast shrinks. The best advices at this hour are that 177 of the 249 on board the steamer Columbia escaped death when that vessel went to the bottom of Shelter cove between midnight and 1 o'clock Sunday morning. One hundred and seven of the Colubmia's passengers and thirty-seven of her crew have been brought to this port by the steamer George W. Elder, which towed the colliding schooner, San Pedro, from the scene of the disaster to Eureka. A late message from Shelter cove says that three more life boats have been picked up, one of them containg eighteen persons, another fifteen and the third not reported.

The Columbia was a steel vessel, 1,746 tons, 309 feet in length, 38.5 beam and 144. in depth. She carried a crew of 74 men under Capt. A. P. Doran, who had been master of the vessel for the past five years. The vessel was built at Chester, Pa., in 1880, and was owned by the San Francisco and Portland Steamship company.

During the earthquake and fire the Columbia was lying at the drydock of the Union Iron works and the shock loosened some of her blocks, with the result that the vessel capsized. But she was entirely refitted and when she left here Saturday she carried a full list of passengers, about 300.

The San Pedro was commanded by Capt. Hansen and is a wooden vessel of 318 tons. She is 166 feet long, 31 feet beam and 12 feet deep. She was owned by the Eastern and Western Lumber Company.

WYOMING MILLIONAIRE CONVICTED OF CONSPIRACY

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 20.—In the United States district court here F. M. Holbrok, a millionaire, E. H. Lonabaugh, a prominent attorney, and Robert McPhilamy, a well known business man of Sheridan, were found guilty of conspiracy to defraud the government of coal lands in Sheridan county.

The maximum penalty on each of the two counts on which the men were tried is two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $1,000 Sentence was deferred.

Advance in Spool Thread

New York, July 22.—Housewives will be asked in the near future to pay 10 cents a spool for thread. The thread trust has ordained it. Spool cotton of the domestic sizes has sold in department stores and many shops for 4 cents. Now spool cotton sells for 6 and 7 cents, and 10 cents is declared to be the ultimate selling price which the cotton thread trust has in mind to charge the housewives of America.

To Repeat Weather Messages

Portland, July 20.—All messages hereafter received at the wireless station at North Head are to be repeated to the San Francisco station, according to instructions received by District Forecaster Beals. Messages picked up at San Francisco station are in turn to be repeated to this station.

Iron Miners Strike

Duluth, Minn., July 23.—Sixteen thousand men employed by the United States Steel Corporation and independent mine owners on the Vermillion and Mesaba ranges are on strike, paralyzing the entire iron ore industry of the puper Lake Superior region. The men ask for a general increase.

ASK HILL FOR $10,000,000

Clarence Venner Wants an Accounting on Burlington Deal.

St. Paul, July 23.—Clarence H. Venner, of New York, wants James J. Hill to account for an alleged profit of $10,000,000 which Venner claims Hill made in the deal whereby the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies acquired the capital stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy.

Venner has begun suit against Hill and the Great Northern Railway Company in the Ramsay county district court, the complaint filed late yesterday, in which he alleges that Hill wrongfully and fraudulently, while acting in his capacity as president of the Great Northern Railway Company, acquired stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway at prices averaging about $150 per share, and that he induced the board of directors of the Great Northern to pay $200 per share for the stock. He claims that Hill thereby made a profit of more than ten million dollars. Venner sues as the holder of 300 shares of Great Northern stock, and asks the court to compel Hill to account for his profits and to pay to the stockholders of the Great Northern the alleged illegal gains.

IMPORTING SONGBIRDS OF ENGLAND TO PUGET SOUND

Tacoma, July 23.—English skylarks singing in the meadows of Puget sound country, linnets and goldfinches piping from hedgerow and orchard in answer to the songs of throstles, goldfinches and English blackbirds, is the dream of Dr. Charles McCutcheon, of this city. Dr. McCutcheon, who spent his early life in England, is now undertaking the difficult and epxensive task of stocking the Puget sound country with the birds he loved in his childhood.

As an experiment last fall, he brought over from Liverpool, where he had been visiting, five dozen skylarks, four dozen linnets and three dozen goldfinches. On account of the heavy mortality among the feathered exiles during the trip from Liverpool toT acoma, he arrived here with but forty skylarks, six linnets and one goldfinch. During the winter these died off until he had but three dozen skylarks and two linnets to set free with the coming of spring.

Dr. McCutcheon has begun to hear from the skylarks, and from the reports made to him by people who have heard and seen the birds, they have spread over a wide area of country, nesting and raising broods. Rev. P. F. Hylebos, of Tacoma, says he heard one of the skylarks at Kernahan's farm in the Succotash valley, forty-five miles from Tacoma. Dr. McCutcheon has also received reports of the birds at different points on the wide prairie region south of the city, and ranchers in the vicinity of Puyallup and Sumner have heard strange and wonderful singing birds which the doctor is certain were his larks.

Encouraged by these reports Dr. McCutcheon has sent orders to England for large numbers of birds, which will arrive here the coming fall. He will keep them in aviaries during the winter, releasing them in the spring when he believes they will prove themselves well able to make their living and breed in the Sound region. Included in the consignments imported this fall will be a number of English blackbirds. These birds, Dr. McCutcheon says, are very different from the blackbirds of this country, and are notable for their singing powers.

FRENCHMEN DISTURBED BY ACTION OF GERMANY

Paris, July 23.—The French newspapers are greatly incensed over the decision of the German authorities to suppress the teaching of French in the common schools of the "lost provinces," Alsace and Lorraine. The loss of the provinces, the statue of which on the Place de la Concord, is forever freshly piled with flowers, is the sorest point in connection with the settlement of the Franco-Prussian war, and the decision to "Germanize" them by suppressing what it the native tongue of the vats majority of the population is gall and wormwood for the emotional French people. Statistics are cited to prove that along the frontier four-fifths of the children are born of French parents and speak nothing but French.

Rules as to State License

Olympia, July 20.—The attorney general has rendered an opinion addressed to the state treasurer, in which he holds that a state liquor license, for which an annual fee of $25 is required, can not be issued for a shorter time than one year nor for a less payment than $25, but that the license may be transferred from one person to another, and that the location designated in the original license may be changed in the event of a change in the location of the person holding it. These changes can only be made, the attorney general holds, under regulations to be prescribed by the state treasurer.

More Customs Inspectors

Washington, July 20.—On account of the increased business in Puget sound customs district, the treasury department has authorized the appointment of two additional deputy collectors and inspectors and two night inspectors.

DIVIDE EARNINGS

PROPOSED READJUSTMENT OF RAILROAD RELATIONS.

Cash Dividend of Hill Lines to Be Distributed, and Joint Control of Burlington Ended---Matter that Has Hung Fire for Two Years Nearing Adjustment.

New York, July 20.—The proposal for a readjustment of the relations existing between the three Hill lines, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern and the Burlington, has reached such a stage that it was stated on excellent authority yesterday that in all probability steps in this direction will be taken by the end of this year.

What is proposed, according to this well informed prediction, is the purchase by the Great Northern of the Northern Pacific equity in the Burlington, the distribution of a $20 cash dividend to the Northern Pacific stock holders, and such arrangement with the holders of Great Northern, Northern Pacific atnd Burlington collateral trust bonds as will permit the distribution of the Burlington stock to the Great Northern stockholders, with provisions for the guaranteeing of dividends.

Details Not Defined

The details of the plan were not very clearly defined in the reports and other difficulties will have to be overcome to carry the plan into effect. The purchase onf the Northern Pacific equity in the Burlington has been discussed on several different occasions over a period of two years or more. and at one time Hill interests were understood to be practically prepared to announce the plan. The matter went over, however, and it is only recently, it is said, that it has again been taken up for serious consideration, the plan being amplified to include the eventual distribution of the Burlington stock.

Earnings Have Increased

Since the Burlington was acquired by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific in 1901, the road's earnings have increased at a rapid rate, and each year a large surplus over dividends has been earned and expended in the improvement of the property.

The forthcoming annual report, it is stated, will show that the expense accounts are now beginning to be relieved of some of the heavy expenditures for improvements, and as a result the road's earnings are expected to show from this time on even larger increases than in the past. There will be available an increased amount for distribution to the stockholders of the Burlington, namely, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. Rather, however, than merely increase the Burlington dividends and turn over the Northern and Great Northern dividends, it is said that the Hill interests prefer to entirely readjust the relations existing between the three roads.

TALK OF UNIFORM GRADING OF WHEAT

Garfield, July 20.—Idaho State Grain Commissioners Goodnight, Sweet and Wood met the Washington commissioners at Garfield the past week to discuss the uniform grading of wheat. Chief Grain Inspector Arrasmith, of the Washington commission, said:

"Idaho grain goes into the same market as Washington grain, and the grade should be the same in both states. The annual meeting of the Washington commissioners will be held early in September, and we shall extend an invitation to the Idaho commissioners to meet with us.

"The wheat crop is practically made," contiuued the inspector, "and if we have good weather, the state will have a full crop and an excellent quality of grain. Owing to the hot July last year there was a smaller percentage of No. 1 than ever before. This year a large percentage of the wheat will grade No. 1, providing there is no damage by damp weather before the grain is housed."

Unknown Verdi Opera Found

Milan, July 19.—In a box of old papers in Verdi's old home at Santa Agua, there has been found the manuscript of a hitherto unknown opera written by the great composer. In accordance with the will of Verdi the contents of this box were to have been destroyed, and it was while going through the papers preparatory to carrying out the dead man's wishes, that the opera was found. It has not yet been decided by Verdi's executors what will be done with the manuscript. It is supposed to have been one of his early works.

Eating Alaska Roasting Ears

Dawson, July 5.—Gus Johnson, proprietor of the Cascade laundry, has on exhibition the first full grown and matured roasting ears ever reported in Dawson. Johnson had a meal of the roasting ears this week from corn grown in his own gardens in the heart of Dawson. The corn was started in the hot house in March and was transplanted a few weeks later. The corn is of the early dwarf variety.

PASSING OF STEAM ENGINE

Internal Combustion Motor Expected to Supplant It.

Washington, July 23.—Auxiliary to its investigations of the fuel resources of the country and the eradication of the smoke evil in cities, the technological branch of the United States geological survey has developed some remarkable results, tending to show the passing of the steam engine in the near future and the rise in its stead of the gas engine, or, as it is now more familiarly termed by engineers, the internal combustion motor.

The results of experiments which have been under way at the fuel testing plant at St. Louis for several years, and which recently have been continued by the government experts at Norfolk, Va., have just been made public by the geological survey. Manufacturers throughout the country are taking an intense interest in the work of the government, as a better utilization of fuel means economy in the pronduction of goods that will give Americans larger opportunities in the trade of the world.

GERMANY TO OPPOSE BRITISH PROPOSITION

The Hague, July 24.—Germany will opose the ordering of the British proposition regarding the elimination of armaments. She contends it is impossible to acknowledge the urgency of disarmament when no practical scheme has been devised for the reduction of military burdens.

At a special sitting of the committee on sea warfare the British delegation withdrew their proposition regarding the definition of a warship, as it appeared that, instead of facilitating an understanding on the regulations for transferring merchantmen into warships, it really complicated matters.

The British delegation also abandoned their proposition, already opposed by General Horace Porter, according to which the commander of a belligerent warship was allowed to capture and destroy merchantmen suspected of provisioning the enemy. It has been observed that such a measure was tantamount to the re-establishment of privateering.

Dr. Ruy Barbosa, of Brazil, at yesterday's session, delivered a long speech supporting the American proposal regarding the collection of contractural debts and oposing the Drago doctrine. M. Castro, of Uruguay and M. Matte, of Chile, also spoke in support of the American proposal. Baron Marshal von Bieberstein, of Germany, delivered an able speech on the question of arbitration in general, approving the American proposal.

RE-SENTENCED FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

San Francisco, July 23.—Repetition dulled the edge of what otherwise would have been a day of sensations in the Louis Glass bribery trial. Second Vice President Emile J. Zimmer, of the Pacific States Telephone Company, undaunted by the term of five days imprisonment spent by him in the county jail last week for contempt, again took the witness stand and again refused to testify against his superior officer, First Vice President Glass. Judge Lawlor re-sentenced him to one day's imprisonment for contempt and notice was served on him by Assistant District Attorney Heney through the court that on each and every succeeding day of the trial he will be called to the stand and "given an opportunity to see the right and do it."

Supervisors Lonegran. Forey and Mamlock each in turn testified to his betrayal of the public trust in the acceptance of bribes for votes in favor of public utility franchises.

OFFER CHEAP RATES TO AVOID COAL SHORTAGE

Chicago, July 23.—J. C. Stubbs, traffic director of the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line, has issued the following statement:

"The Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line are endeavoring to induce consumers of coal along their respective lines to store coal. For this reason they have offered 25 cents per ton reduction in the freight rate and 25 cents per ton reduction in the price of coal, additional, for coal shipped during the months of July and August, and in store August 31, 1907, having received the authority of the interstate commerce commission to publish that reduced rate without giving the usual thirty days notice."

ATTORNEY GENERAL DEFINES DRUG STORE

Olympia, July 20.—Drug stores which sell soda water, cigars or anything except drugs straight, must close on Sunday, according to an opinion rendered by the attorney general to the prosecuting attorney of Skagit county.

The latter has been trying to enforce the Sunday closing law and complaints that drug stores have laid in stocks of candy, tobacco, etc. If they have done this, the attorney general says, they have lost the right to be known as drug stores, which are exempt as such under the law.

YIELDS TO JAPAN

KOREAN EMPEROR ABDICATES HIS THRONE.

Action Taken Upon the Advice of His Ministry and the Elder Statesmen — Many Reported Killed in Riots Which Followed News of Abdication.

Seoul, July 20.—The Korean throne, tottering wbith 44 years of misrule, toppled Thursday night. Upon his arrival Thursday, Viscount Hayashi, the foreign minister of Japan, was greeted by 15,000 Japanese, who were expecting the annexation of Korea. The peril of the emperor began to be realized Wednesday morning among the Koreans and considerable excitement prevailed Thursday, the people feeling that their ruler might meet an untoward end.

It is reported that a most dramatic scene occurred at the palace Thursday night when the ministers, headed by Premier Yi Wang Yong, appeared before his majesty and made the cabinet's final representation in urging the emperor's abdication. His majesty was in a high state of excitement; but the premier in a most humble but firm tone dwelt at length upon the want of precaution and prudence of the emperor's policies hitherto, especially in diplomatic aaffirs, whereby he was endangering the safety of the nation.

The premier enumerated the facts of his majesty's duplicities which culminated in the dispatch of a deputation to The Hague peace conference and forcibly reasoned the uselessness of the emperor's disavowal of his relation with The Hague affair.

Seeks a Last Refuge

Unable successfully to combat the logic of the premier's representation, the emperor sought a last refuge in a council of Korean elder statesmen, doubtless anticipating their sympathies. The council immediately convened. Four elders quickly responded and appeared before his majesty at 1 o'clock Friday morning. The emperor's disappointment and surprise were boundless when they unanimously agreed with the ministers' advice. His majesty's mind was finally made up and he consented to the draft of an imperial rescript announcing his abdication, which was placed before him for isgnature.

Greatly agitated and perturbed, he signed the document and the seal was affixed amid impressive silence.

MANY KILLED IN SUCCEEDING RIOTS

Seoul, July 20.—Maddened by the enforced abdication of the emperor, the Koreans are in revolt against the Japanese. Korean soldiers who refused to obey their officers led the mob in the attack and rioting took place in all parts of the city. The climax of the day of rioting came at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Korean troops mutinied, refused to obey their officers and escaped from their barracks, guns in hand, attacking the police on the main street at the Great Bell. After firing several volleys they scattered, continuing a desultory firing and attacking individual Japanese. They were joined by the populace, who used stones and clubs The police admit that 25 Japanese were killed or wounded. The number of casualties among the Koreans is unknown Martial law has now been established the city being placed in charge of Gen. Hasegwa, commander of the Japanese impreial guards.

Artillery from the Japanese barracks has been posted in the streets. Gen. Hasegwa has sent Japanese cavalry in all quarters of the city to search for the mutineers. All business is suspended

Thousand Whales in School

San Francisco, July 22.—The Kosmos steamer Mera, Capt. Reimer, arrived here Sunday from Hamburg by way of San Jose de Guatemala. While bound up the coast from Santa Barbara channel the Mera encountered a large school onf whales, which followed the vessel several hundred miles, finally leaving as the steamer neared port. Officers of the ship state that it was the largest gathering of leviathans ever seen by them in their seafaring experience and some even approximate the number at 1,000.

Clay Gives Trouble to Railroad

Lewiston, Idaho, July 18.—The Northern Pacific road is still having great difficulty with its big cut at Culdesac, on which work had to be abandoned last winter because the clay in the bottom kept rising almost as fast as it could be removed. At the present time the clay stands as high as did the hill in the beignning. Work was begun again a few days ago, but it was found that the clay continued to rise at the rate of about six inches every twenty-four hours.

Bonds Prove Fiasco

London, July 24.—The South Manchurian railroad bond issue of 4,000,000 pounds, issue o1 f907, interest at 5 per cent, bonds payable in 25 years and guaranteed by the Japanese government, has proved a fiasco. It is officially admitted that the underwriters are saddled with about one-half the total of the loan.

TO WORK YEAR ROUND

Jute Mill at Penitentiary To Be Operated Continuonsly.

Walla Walla, July 20.—The jute mill at the penitentiary will not be shut down this winter, according to Warden M. F. Kincaid. The repairs to the machinery which have usually been made during the time the looms were idle in the cold season will be made while the mill is in operation.

Grain bags are in great demand, and a large supply will be turned out this winter. Sacks are being called for every day and many are being sold. Work will also be started on the new jute mill at the prison in a short time, and the structure is to be completed within a year. It will be located a short distance north of the main prison. Structural steel, brick and concrete are to be used as much as possible in the construction.

FIRST PEACE MEETING AT SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, July 24.—One thousand men and women, interested in the civic and industrial warfare of this city, gathered yesterday at Christian Science Hall to attend San Francisco's first industrial peace conference. They came to listen and to learn, to discuss and hear discussed the economic conditions that have arrayed capital against labor to propose plans, measures upon which may be built up a public sentiment that will eventually put an end to industrial strife.

The delegates were from all walks of life. The captain of industry sat ty the captain of labor. The civic reformer, the economist, the philanthropist and the thinking woman of the home—all were there to hear and judge and advise of a method to establish and cement a universal harmony between the wage earner and his employer.

Mayor Taylor Speaks

In the opening of the convention, from the beignning of the address of welcome delivered by Mayor Taylor, until the last speaker closed, there were enunciated principles broad and encompassing—principles that could leave no doubt of the purposes and hopes and aims of the conference. For the most part the questions at issue were dealt with in the abstract, but at times there were suggestions that came straight from the shoulder, suggestions which involved the very conditions that are at the bottom and are the cause of industrial dissention.

Prof. Adolph Miller, head of the department of economics, University of California, presided at the meeting.

TELEGRAPHERS STRIKE HAS BEEN SETTLED

San Francisco, July 20.—The telegraphers' strike has been settled. By an agreement entered into yesterday between the telegraph companies and the officials of the union, the striking key men will return to work Monday. The terms of settlement provide that all the men shall be reinstated and that the matter of an increase in wages shall be adjusted at a later date.

At a meeting of t he members of the union at Oakland the agreement was ratified by a vote of 103 to 4. All the men express satisfaction at the agreement which has been negotiated by their national president. They aver that the agreement is a tacit recognition of the union. Further than this they say that it is verbally understod that the increase of wages asked for will be granted at a later date. On the other hand the officials of both companies state that their men returned to work under the same conditions that existed before the strike was inaugurated.

MUST FURNISH CONNECTIONS

Federal Judge Renders Important Telephone Decision.

Helena, Mont, July 18.—Judge Hunt, in the United Stiates court yesterday held that one telephone company could not withhold the use of its lines from another even though it be competing.

The Montana and Mutual Telephone Company applied to the court for an order compelling the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Company to furnish connections when desired at reasonable compensation. This was resisted on the ground that the lines were built for its patrons and not for competing companies.

The court will name a commission to fix the division of charges when such use is made of connecting lines.

Mrs. Sage Gives to College

Syracuse, N. Y., July 24.—Mrs. Russell Sage has sent her check for $100,000 to Chancellor Day as a gift to the teachers' college at Syracuse university. This college occupies fourteen acres of land and a large castle of Normn style of architecture adjoining the campus, which was the home of Mrs. Sage in her childhood.

Calls for Bids for Plumbing

Olympia, July 24.—The state board of control has issued calls for bids to be opened here August 10 for remodeling the plumbing at the Western Washington Hospital for insane at Fort Steilacoom and for construction of the new training school building for the state normal school at Ellensburg.

SHELVES OWNERSHIP

MR. BRYAN ADVISES TRIAL OF RAILROAD REGULATIONS.

Doubts that It Will Accomplish the Desired Results, But It Is Evident that the People Are Not Ready to Go Further Until Trial Has Been Made.

Lincoln, Neb., July 22.—In a statement issued Saturday, William J. Bryan removes government ownership of railroads from the list of Democratic issues.

"As the campaign approaches," he says, "it becomes more and more evident that, of economic questions, three—the trust question, the tariff question and the railroad question—will share public attention, and these three really present the same issue between the general public and the privileged classes: Shall the government be administered in the interest of the whole people, or in the interest of a few? This is the issue presented by the trust question, the tariff question and the railroad question.

Try Regulation First

"Government ownership is not an immediate issue. A large majority of the people still hope for effective regulation, and while they so hope they will not consider ownership. While many Democrats believe, and I am one of the number, that public ownership offers the ultimate solution of the problem, still those who believe that the public will finally, in self defense, be driven to ownership, recognize that regulation must be tried under the most favorable circumstances before the masses will be ready to try a more radical remedy. Regulation cannot be sufficiently tried within the next year, and there is no desire anywhere to make government ownership an issue in 1908."

Mr. Bryan fully agrees with those who believe that it would be unwise to turn attention from regulation, on which the people are ready to act, to government ownership, upon which the people are not ready to act. To inject the government ownership question into the next campaign, he says, would simply give representatives of the railroads a chance to dodge the issue of regulation and deceive the public.

Has Been Ineffective So Far

"So far the railroads have been successful in preventing effective federal regulation and state regulation has as a rule been restrained by the United States courts It is about twenty years since the interstate commerce commission was created. It required about ten years for the courts to find out that the powers conferred were insufficient, and then it took about ten years to secure an amendment. The railroads fought the amendment at every step and the president was finally forced to compromise with the railroad Republicans in the senate in order to secure their support. Even that amendment, secured with tremendous effort, falls short of what it should be. It aims to stop passes and rebates.

"State legislation for the reduction of rates has resulted in an agitation on the part of railroads for legislation which will deprive the state of authority and centralize all rate legislation in congress. The Democratic party must meet the issue presented. It must resist the encroachments upon the authority of the states.

What Democracy Should Do

"The Democratic party has in three national conventions demanded reforms, while the Republican platforms have been silent on the subject. The president has partially adopted the Democratic view on this subject, but so far the Republican leaders have resolutely opposed it. The president is helping to educate the people up to the need of railroad regulation, but his party, under its present leadership, is powerless to accomplish this or any other important reform.

"If the Democratic party will clearly and unequivocally demand first, the ascertaining of the value of all the railroads; second, the preventing of over-capitalization; and, third, the reduction of rates to a point where they will yield only a reasonable return upon the value of the roads—if the party will do this, it will commend itself not only to Democrats, but to those Republicans who have been led to study the railroad situation. The railroad situation presents a vital issue and the issue should be so stated that every one can understand the party position."

Atlantic Liner Sunk at Dock

Bremerhaven, July 22.—The North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II was sunk at her dock Saturday evening owing to the imperfect stowing of coal which was taken on. The coaling had been almost completed when the vessel suddenly listed. The water poured into her bunkers and boiler compartments through the open coal ports and the vessel careened and lay on her side on the bottom. The ship does not appear to be damaged, but her sailing will be delayed several days.

Bad Fire at Victoria

Victoria, B. C., July 24.—Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed property in the lower section of the city to the value of $200,000. The burned district included a part of Chinatown. The buildings destroyed were mostly small wooden structures.

PAPERS BY THE PEOPLE

MEN ARE TRUER FRIENDS THAN WOMEN.

By Juliet V. Strauss.

JULIET V. STRAUSS.

It is true, friendships are so seldom disinterested that it is hard for those who never had a real one to believe that they exist, but there is a genuine affection sometimes, a tie of natural affinity, that it is a pity to have broken.

The saddest thing in life is to have outgrown a love; the next is to have outgrown a friendship. We may bury our friends out of sight, and long years of grief will not cure the wound, but it is a loving pain, marred by no unkindness, no cruel recollection, but the old friendship that is gone never to return! The queer sound of the once familiar and beloved voice when it falls upon the stillness of our hearts is "like sweet bells jangled out of tune."

The man or woman who would be your friend if you hadn't a penny to your fortune is the one you want to cherish, whose abuse you should take cheerfully, and whom you should not snub for those who love you when you wear the cap and bells, who care little enough for you when you no longer amuse them.

IS MODERN LIFE TOO STRENUOUS.

By Andrew Wilson.

How much heavier mental and physical strain can the average man, compelled to battle for livelihood in large centers, endure without collapsing? Where is the limit of human endurance under the nerve shattering and increasing stress of modern life? "I believe," a medico-sociological savant informs us, "that we are approaching a condition of life under which men and women cannot live long and keep their reason. I further believe that this condition will bring about the evolution of a markedly different type of man and woman that can live and thrive under the strain.

In some future time of stress, say, during some epidemic, panic, or the like, there is likely to be a wholesale breakdown in population. The mass of people survive, however. Man is an adaptable animal, and the quick, nervous, undersized specimen of man now being bred is able to stand up under the life. Meantime, however, the giant mill is being fed with humanity from the outside, and every day sees the larger grist ground out, every day sees the machine speeding faster.

Dr. F. Peterson, a well known specialist in nervous complaints, states that it is as impossible for a man to pass through one day of life and not encounter more or less friction as it is for a bullet to travel through the air and escape the same. The intensity or speed of existence marks the amount of friction. The amount of permanent loss to the man depends on the ability of his constitution to recuperate, and on whether or not the friction be resumed before the collapsed tissues of brain and body are completely rebuilt.

TO LESSEN CRIMINALITY.

By Cesare Lombroso.

From material submitted to me came the evidence that crimes in Australia are diminishing both in number and in gravity. How can this marked decrease of crime be explained, with all the statistics elsewhere being in contradiction? For even in Germany, one of the most advanced of European nations, one sees crime and dereliction steadily increasing, sees the number of renegade criminals nearly doubled.

The signal diminution in Australia may be explained on the ground of its social reforms, for even the proletarian there stands better economicaly than an official in Europe. Another reason lies in the scattering of the people in isolated outlying farms and the rule of pastoral life, which is little predisposed to crime, and, finally, in the continual, uninterrupted warfare that is waged against the corruption of the young.

Further than this, many judges and attorneys, who now feel themselves pledged to inflict some punishment for the crime, will find another way and transform the social revenge into a healing process which will be far more efficacious than punishment.

ARGUING WITH WOMEN.

By Wallace Rice.

Women have strange notions about the arguments of men. Few of the sterner sex have any good opinion of one of their fellows who has not convictions he is prepared to stand by with the greatest earnestness. Most of us have them ourselves, and we expect them from other men.

Women, not comprehending just the part that argument plays in masculine mental economy, have a corresponding form of discourse which may best be characterized as wrangling. They talk and they differ, but it is seldom done with a view to obtaining light from an opponent.

Therefore men find what they consider argument with womankind not in the least profitable. It frequently settles down into an exasperating desire to have the last word without the least reference to anything that has gone before it, or remains a sort of vocal strength test. When this contingency arises the wise man departs, and, if the matter is worth it, goes to his office and says what he has to say on paper.

A MOTHER'S QUESTION.

Soft waves of chestnut hair—gold in the sun—
Red mouth, whose curving lips dimpled with fun;
Skin fair and soft and smooth, cheeks tinged with rose,
Eyes in whose smiling depths happiness glows,
Never the cloud of tears shadowed their blue—
This was the mother's face my baby knew.

Hair white as driven snow, face seamed and drawn,
Pale lips with grief-lines marked, all laughter gone,
Eyes dull and lusterless, faded by tears,
Empty arms, aching heart, all these long years
Lord, if we meet again, by Thy dear grace,
How shall my baby know his mother's face?

An Adventure on Dartmoor

"A promise made under compulsion," I observed in the course of argument, "carries no obligation."

"It depends," declared Billy Higginson. "I made one once and nothing on earth would have induced me to break it."

I caught his eye.

"A girl?" I queried.

He nodded.

"But it's quite a funny story," he remarked persuasively.

Billy Higginson loves telling people about his numerous girls.

"If you must—you must," I groaned, "but wait till I'm ready."

I always take the same precautions when I know I've got one of Billy's yarns to listen to.

My pipe glowed red before the first gray crust of ash formed over it.

"Right!" I said, putting my feet on the mantelpiece.

Billy started off at once.

"It was when I was down at Okehampton last year," he said, "it was horribly dull and she was awfully pretty."

"Please don't describe her," I begged, "I can quite imagine her."

"Hair as black as a raven," he went on ignoring my protest, "and eyes as blue as the sky."

I looked at the gray day outside, but made no comment. Billy was never a poet.

"So, of course, we became good pals. Her father had a small farm out by Belstone."

"How did you meet her?" I inquired maliciously.

"There was only one trouble," he continued; "she had been 'walking out' with the son of a neighboring farmer, one Peter Collins by name. and he was a jealous, morose sort of beast."

But she didn't care for him, and we used to go for long rambles together over the moor, and that's how the trouble came about.

She had promised to show me Cranmere Pool—about the worst bog on the moor, and we went there one Sunday afternoon.

I had always thought her a sensible girl, but suddenly as we stood just by Perrot's cairn of white stones—he was a local guide," he broke off to explain, "she turned to me and put both her hands on my shoulders."

"D'yeu love me?" she asked, her eyes burning into mine.

"Of course I do, little woman," I said lightly.

"No, not like that," she blazed and stamped her foot so the sodden earth quaked, "not 'little woman,' not a light-o'-love! D'yeu love me as my man?"

It was a horribly awkward moment, and then I tried to change her mood.

"Hetty," I said, smiling, "you're a dear, good girl, but you've broken a promise."

"Me?" she queried.

"You said you'd show me the pool," I said; "come along."

My plan seemed to have succeeded, for she dropped her hands and turned towards the bog.

"You'm best follow careful," she cried over her shoulder, "else belike you'll get mired."

I followed behind her till she stopped, and then she turned and spoke to me, her arms hanging by her side.

"Won't you answer—straight?" she asked.

"What, dear," I answered, gazing over the moor.

"Hev you bin playin' with me?" she said straight out.

"You're a very dear friend," I said, putting my hand on her arm.

"Yeu an' me can never be friends," she answered, with hard eyes.

There was a pause.

"Oh, it's love—your love—I'm thirst-

"HOW DID YOU MEET HER?"

in' for," she cried out suddenly. "Ban't I pretty enough for you?"

She threw off my hand and stood swaying before me, her hands stretched out to me.

"You are very pretty," I said, solemnly.

"But you don't love me?"

"No."

I couldn't lie to her, but I longed to say "Yes."

"Yeu'm playin' with me?" she said.

"No, not that," I cried, "upon my honor, never that, only I never thought you'd care for me—I thought we'd be just—good friends."

"My heart's broke," she said simply.

"Forgive me," I said, catching her dress as she passed me.

She tore it from my fingers.

"Can't you leave me alone now?" she cried, her eyes blazing.

"As you wish," I answered, longing for the scene to end.

I watched her figure to the cairn of stones, and then the mist and the twilight hid her.

I lit a cigarette and started off myself, but every step I floundered more in the mire, and in the end I shot suddenly up to my shoulders in the bog. I didn't dare struggle much, I was afraid of going in farther, but I lifted up my voice heartily enough, though how far I could be heard I don't know. It seemed ages to me, and it must have been several hours before I saw a light flashing in the distance. I called out frequently, and it gradually drew nearer me, and presently a lantern flashed in my eyes.

I heard a low laugh.

"I was told by Hetty some 'un were mired," he said, and then I realized it was Peter Collins, "but I didn't ax who un be."

"Pull me out," I said, blinking in the glare of the lantern.

"Wait a while," he answered; "I be master, you'd best keep that to mind."

"What do you mean?" I demanded.

"Only this, you'll stay where you be, else——" he stopped.

"Go on," I said.

"Else you promise me never to see Hetty again."

I didn't want to see her again, you may imagine, but I didn't like giving in to the fellow.

"You wouldn't dare," I rejoined.

"Don't fox yourself," he retorted. "No soul knows I've trapsed here seven miles cross Dartymoor. Yeu'll go in further yet before you'm missed."

He swung his lantern to and fro.

It didn't take me long in the end to make up my mind.

"I promise," I said.

"That's enough," he answered, and had me out in a few moments.

He walked home almost in silence, but in the morning I went to see him.

"What for?" I asked.

"He saved my life, and—well, somehow I wasn't very proud of what I'd done."

I looked at him approvingly.

"I wouldn't have thought it of you, Billy," I said.

"They're married now," he concluded, knocking his pipe out, "and Collins sometimes writes to me."

"Writes," I ejaculated. "Why?"

"I wanted an investment," replied Billy Higginson awkwardly, "so I lent him some money on his farm."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

THE LINCOLN FARM

At a sale of land for unpaid taxes at Louisville, Ky., in August 1905, there was one tract of 110 acres being the birthplace farm of Abraham Lincoln. One patriotic citizen conceived the idea of purchasing this farm and developing it into "A Lincoln National Park which should stand forever as a fitting memorial to Lincoln's high service—a memorial worthy of the man and worthy of the American people."

This view was coincided with by most prominent men of our country and acting on the general suggestion an Association was formed and incorporated as Lincoln Farm Association, the purpose of which should be to secure funds to develop the Park, and erect monuments and buildings. "It was determined that as Lincoln was raised up from the people to perform his mighty work, it should be the privilege of the whole people to raise up this enduring memorial to him." Membership in the Lincoln Farm Association is open to every man, woman and child who wishes to contribute to the fund. The contributions being from 25 cents to $25.00, and to such contributors will be issued a handsomely engraved Certificate of Membership. The Association has today about 35,000 members.

The G. A. R. was the first association turned to as the one most fitly to head the list in this great work. The home post has appointed as a committee to wait upon all who wish to donate, R. R. Harding, chairman, H. W. Doty, F. S. Thorp, O. W. Burdock and J. C. Fields.

EASTERN MAN SUPERINTENDENT

From quite a list of Eastern applicants, who desired to make a change to the milder climate of Puget Sound, the Board selected Prof. Thos. Geisness, Supt. of Schools at Farmington, Minn., to fill the same position here. He is a collegeman—Yale and Northwestern—and has had something like fifteen years experience as teacher and superintendent. While the contract sent him has not been returned as yet, he undoubtedly will accept, and is expected to arrive in Angeles by the middle of the month.

MORRIS-MILLER CO.,
Wholesale Dry Goods, Notions and Furnishings.

The Priscilla club, composed of the young ladies of the First Congregational church, gave a lawn fete Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. A. J. Cosser for the benefit of the parsonage fund, and the affair proved a decided success socially and financially and a neat sum was netted for the commendable work undertaken by the church people.

SERVICES EVERY SUNDAY

Rev. Drahn informs the Olympic-Leader that he has decided to remain in Angeles permanently and will continue his services as pastor of the German Lutheran Church. The churchmen have decided to increase his salary and Rev. Drahn will give up his charge at Victoria and devote his entire time to the work here. Services will be held at the church each Sunday—German in the morning and English services in the evening. All of which will be cheering news to all of Rev. Drahn's Angeles friends.

CUT THE WEEDS

Property owners will save themselves endless expense in lawn and garden by seeing to it that the weeds in the vacant lots about them are cut at once. The pestiferous thistle is getting ready to scatter his progeny for miles. A dozen other noxious growths are obeying their law to multiply and cumber the earth. There is a good weed statute now and there is no reason except public negligence why careless property owners should not be required to clear their lots.

An important suit involving 12,000 acres in townships 28, 30 and 31, ranges 13, 14 and 15, was instituted this week by Mr. M. J. Carrigan, plaintiff, vs. N. J. Foley and Wm. T. Hoey of Alpena, Mich. The suit is on a contract to transfer certain timber lands in the west end of the county at the price of $20 per acre or for a cash payment of $240,000. For some reason the defendants backed out, hence the suit to compel the transfer as per contract. It is understood Mr. Carrigan is acting for a railroad company.

The Council asked City Attorney Smith for an opinion as to the legality of the council meeting on Tuesday evenings, instead of on Wednesday evenings as provided by city ordinance. And immediately George Venerable proceeds to force his opinion on various subjects upon the council not contemplated by that body. Evidently the Olympic-Leader has the learned (?) jurist "on the run."

Card of Thanks.

We, the undersigned, and other immediate relatives, wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all who were so very kind to us when we were so sadly bereft by the accidental death of our dear Walter. While such acts of kindness cannot heal they do soothe the wounded hearts. May the Supreme Ruler of all reward and preserve each and every one from experiencing such afflictions. Mr. and Mrs. A. H. A GOOD RESULT

Under the operation of the new Pure Food Laws, baking powders now generally bear on the labels a statement of the ingredients. This is of the utmost importance because of the harmful ingredients used in many cases.

Royal Baking Powder is known to be the only baking powder made of Royal Grape Cream of Tartar, and this no doubt explains its greatly increased sale here.

Careful hourekeepers are taking advantage of the protection which the Laws afford, and are examining all the reading matter on the back of the label before adopting any brand for use in the home.

When in place of the words Cream of Tartar the words "alum" "aluminum" or "phosphate of lime" appear among the ingredients, they heed the warning and avoid baking powders containing these substitutes.

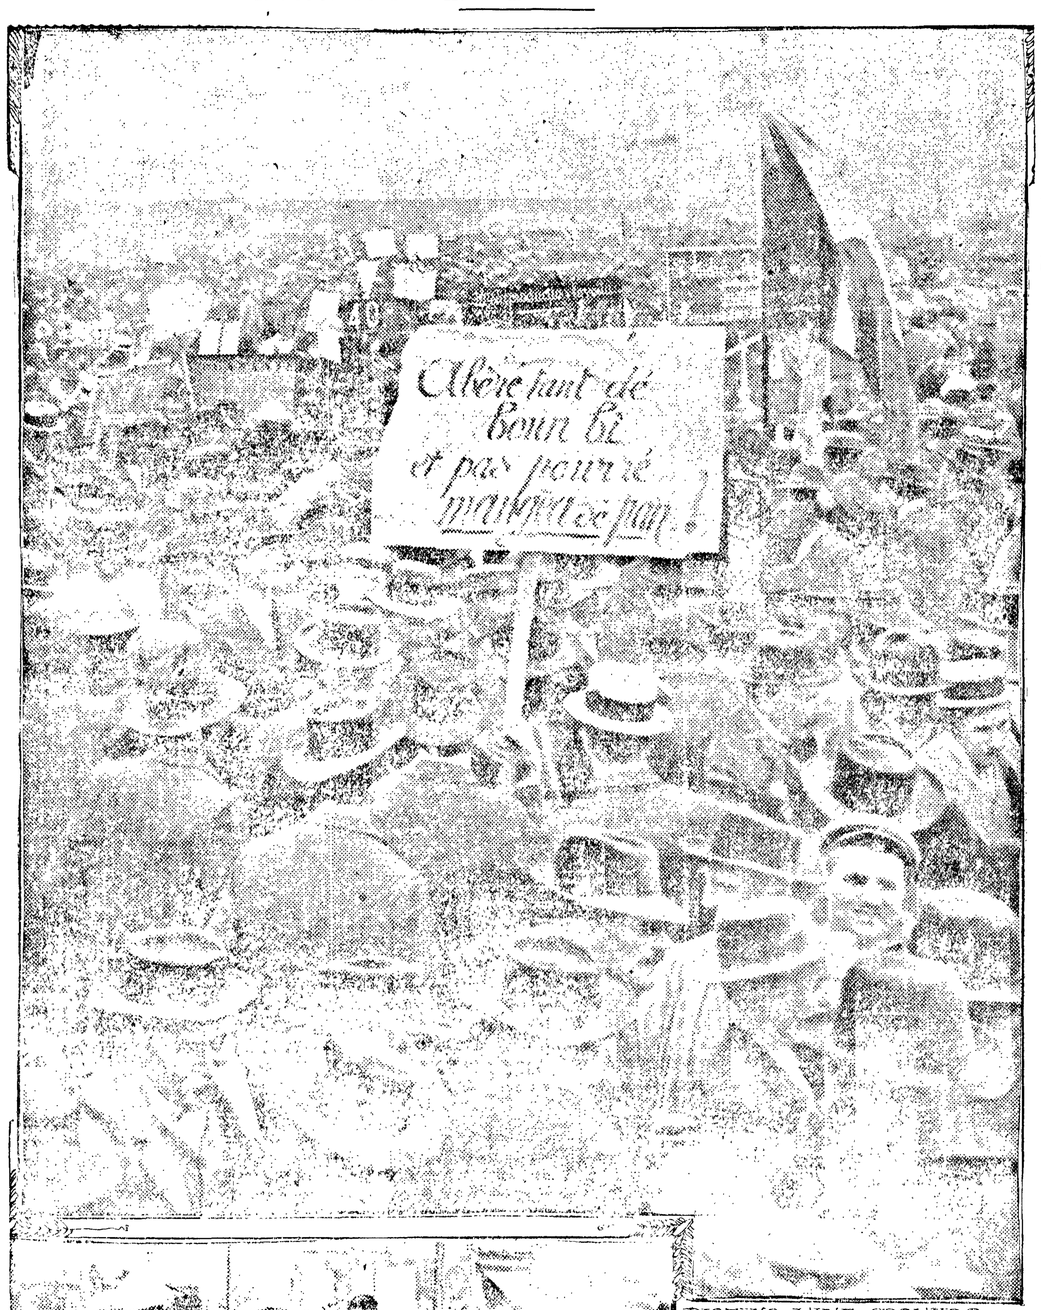
RIOTOUS SCENES IN THE WINE WAR IN FRANCE.



RIOTING WINE-GROWERS IN THE STREETS OF NARBONNE

TROOPS CAMPING IN THE STREETS OF BEZIER

The wine war in France has recently resulted in dangerous demonstrations. Not since the height of the Dreyfus scandal has such a sensational scene been enacted in the Chamber of Deputies as was witnessed when Premier Clemenceau demanded a vote of confidence. The wildest rumors were swept about, one being that mutiny had spread throughout the entire army and that it would be impossible to check the winegrowers' revolt. Following the desertion of the Seventeenth Regiment, half of the Eighty-first Regiment, sent against the mutineers, joined them. The One Hundredth Regiment also mutinied. Fresh troops from the north of France were hurried into the disturbed district.

The authorities of Narbonne issued orders that specific routes should be followed by those attending the funerals of the riot victims. The routes were entirely isolated by troops in the hope of preventing dangerous demonstrations.

STORY OF A STURDY SWEDE.

Remarkable Life of a Little Known Minneapolis Millionaire.

Emigrant, coachman, multimillionaire! These are the three grades in the life of C. A. Smith, a Swede who lives in Minneapolis. Smith is only 54, and the next stage in his life will be given up to placing his descendants on a rock of fortune that will endure for centuries, perhaps.

The story of this sturdy, thrifty Swede is one of the many stories of fortune which the Northwest loves to tell. Smith tumbled off an emigrant train in Minneapolis on June 28, 1867, at the age of 14. He was a strong boy, without a word of English, but in a day or two he went to work as a chore boy at the home of ex-Governor Pillsbury. His native name was unpronounceable, so he became Smith. Soon he was good enough to drive the coach. He went to school a little, and then entered Pillsbury's hardware store. Finally Smith went into the store business himself, with Pillsbury as his partner. It was at Herman, Minn., and they sold grain, lumber and farm implements. Every year the young man was gaining business wisdom, putting more money away, and becoming Americanized.

C. A. SMITH.

In a few years the country store was too small for his activities. He went back to Minenapolis, and the first of the C. A. Smith lumber mills started to cut logs in 1884. The business grew, and the mills with it, until they soon were the largest in the world. In 1899 Mr. Smith bought out the Pillsbury interests in the business. Since then the big company has been composed of but one man, C. A. Smith, who says he believes he owns more standing timber to-day than any other one man. Either Mr. Smith or James B. Walker of Minneapolis owns most. It is a question of which is entitled to the title of "largest" owner in the world.

When the vast woods of Minnesota and Wisconsin began to disappear Mr. Smith led the way to the wooded slopes of the Pacific, where he now owns more millions of standing trees than his mills can convert into lumber during his lifetime. And he is well aware of this fact. He admits it, and is buying more every week, almost every hour. He declares he will never sell a single acre of timber land. His aim is to secure enough standing timber so that his sons and their sons and grandsons may make planks and shingles from the family forests long after the rest of the North American continent has been denuded.

In 1878 Mr. Smith married Johanna Anderson, whose parents came from Wermeland, Sweden. They have five children.

PLAYS PENUCHLE WITH HUBBY.

Should Wife Let Him Win Just to Keep the Peace?

"Penuchle is a peculiar game," observed the married woman. "When a woman wins it's because she is lucky, but when a man wins it's due to his good judgment and nerve in holding his cards for big melds. I play the game two or three nights a week with my husband for an opponent, and the way he frowns when things are not coming his way is enough to make one smile. But I do not dare smile.

"I do not even dare resent it when he says things about my dumb luck when I lay down kings for an 80 meld or when he sneeringly suggests that I should be a speculator if I quietly spread out four aces on the table.

"If I win the first game he demands that I shuffle the cards decently during the next game, or if he does the shuffling he takes two minutes to do it and declares that the cards are going to be mixed all right this game.

"If on his own deal he gets a hand that doesn't look good he murmurs something about the luck being all on one side and looks at me as if I were a criminal if I meld the first deuce and pick up the king or ace of trumps.

"Suddenly his demeanor changes and I know he is getting some good cards. Then he lays down the 150 meld and tells me what nerve he had in holding for it, as he had no trumps in the deal, and was half-way through the hand before he had anything. I smile and make the same meld on the next play. Then he becomes angry again and is vicious in his denunciation of my luck.

"There is a limit to my endurance, so I remark that he should have known by his own hand that the other cards were very likely out against him, and that had he led trumps it would have been all off with me. He has no answer to that, but he frowns dismally and picks up his next card with the air of a martyr. And so it goes.

"If he loses three games in succession he gets up from the table without a word, puts on his coat and goes out without saying where he is going or when he will return. From the way he slams the door after him I gather the impression that he is angry.

"Then I wonder if it would not be the wise course for me to deliberately lose the games and keep him good natured. But somehow I can't do it. I love to beat him."—New York Press.

Lightning Flashes.

Lightning flashes in a storm are found by an English observer to be much less irregular in period than they appear. Such storms have usually two foci, sometimes three, from which the flashes radiate, and the discharges from each come at regular intervals. The apparent irregularity is due to the varying rates of the different centers. In one storm noticed the two foci were about a mile and a half apart, and in an hour the northern center emitted thirty flashes at intervals of fifteen, thirty, forty-five, sixty and ninety seconds, and the southern center gave sixteen flashes at intervals of seventeen, thirty-four and fifty-one seconds. Another unexplained observation is that just before each great flash there is a momentary faint lighting up of the sky in the stormy region.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE FORMED.

Equal Suffrage Movement to Become National in Scope.

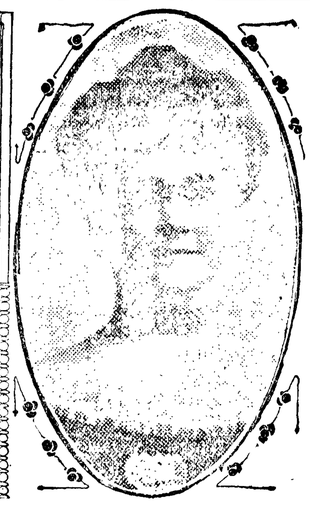
The American men folks are in for it. The suffragetes are coming! The movement started in England has been taken up in New York. Plans of organization are under way and the equal suffrage women in other cities are becoming interested. The New York association is known as the Women's League. It is purposed to make its initial salute an agitation such as has had no parallel since Elizabeth Cady Stanton held her woman's rights convention. It is to be launched as a federation of the women of the State, looking to a larger national council, and a committee at Albany to lobby for every measure that affects the sex will be a vital part of the program.

The movement is headed by Mrs. Dore Lyon, who is president of the Eclectic Club and one of the best dressed women in New York. But behind her looms Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, daughter of the late Elizabeth Cady Stanton. It was Mrs. Blatch who fired the first shot in the proposed campaign last winter, when she organized the League of Self-Supporting Women.

The plans of the American suffragetes is to conduct a militant campaign such as the women of London carried forward until they awoke all England. At the last meeting of the Women's League Mrs. Wells, a London member of the "fighting women," told how they "boo-ed" an obnoxious member of parliament from a public meeting.

Mrs. Blatch here arose and said that women had been insulted by a prominent legislator at Albany recently when they went there to secure certain rights.

MRS. HARRIET STANTON BLATCH.



MRS. DORE LYON.

Mrs. Blatch remarked that this man would have occasion to regret it at his next public declaration because "the women would be there." That indicates the temper of these new American suffragettes. There are many well-known women in the movement.

IS IT A TREASURE CHEST?

Officers of the Alabama Make Discovery in Cuban Waters.

While the various battleships comprising the Atlantic fleet were at the rendezvous on the south shore of Cuba it came to pass on one stilly morning in April last that one of these, the Alabama, flagship of the second squadron, must needs lose an awning stanchion by dropping it overside, says the New York Times.

Now, awning stanchions are not a very important part in the equipment of a battleship, and one more or less makes no serious difference. This one had gone overboard in about seventy feet of water, and at about the same time the crew was going to breakfast, so no effort was made to recover it. But it so happened that the surgeon of the vessel, Surgeon L. von Wedekind, came on deck just then to smoke an after-breakfast cigar, and leaning over the aft rail discerned a white object glimmering in the depths beneath. Gazing more intently into the limpid depth—the ship just then having swung so as to form a lee—the surgeon made out the outlines of another object resting on the sea bed some seventy feet under foot, and one which took the shape of a stout chest, iron-bound and apparently incrusted with the barnacles of a hundred years or more.

The surgeon called others to look, and one or two of his brother officers got a glimpse of the chest before the sea breeze again blurred the surface of the water. Then it was that a resourceful lieutenant constructed a water glass, and through this made a careful scrutiny of the chest, and from his observations judged that it had rested there upward of a century or more. The chest appeared to be of very stout build, bound around with iron bands and one end of it was deeply sunk in the bed of the sea.

Admiral Davis, the flag officer who flies his pennant from the Alabama, was informed of the discovery, as was also Captain Comly, who commands the battleship. Both came to look, and both heard with great interest the report of the lieutenant who had inspected what is supposed to be some sunken treasure chest. None on board could guess from what galleon it had been flung overboard, but all were quite certain that it contained many fortunes in pieces of eight. That it held vast treasure of some sort all were convinced, and arrangements were being made by which a diver could be sent down to pass a tackle around the chest when the flagship Connecticut, anchored a few miles away, made signal for the Alabama to get her anchor and proceed to the target range.

A half-dozen grate bars were hurriedly lashed together, a long length of line attached, and at the other end a vinegar cask was made fast. This was thrown overboard to mark the position of the chest, and some day, very soon, these men of the Alabama mean to fit out an expedition at their own expense and go down there, drag up that box and see what it contains.

GOOD MANNERS' SECRET.

Two Theories of the Acquirement, Unselfishness and Conventionality.

Most mothers hold, consciously or unconsciously, one of two theories about the acquirement of manners by their children.

One mother says: "Manners are only the outward sign of the inner nature. If my daughter has a kind heart and a well-trained mind she will behave in a gentle, charming fashion. I will teach her compassion, respect for age, unselfish zeal for helping with the world's work. Her manners will take care of themselves."

Another mother says: "My girls will never get on without conventional manners. They shall be taught from babyhood to emulate the speech and bearing of ladies. They shall be instructed in the proper behavior for every occasion. They shall walk and dance and write and speak with graceful perfection."

Neither method, says the Youth's Companion, produces altogether satisfactory results.

Unselfishness is truly the foundation of good manners, but not the superstructure. Many conventional restrictions have grown about social relations. Some can be explained by the demand of kindness and some can not. Could a child infer from his desire to help others that he should not eat with his knife? Many offenses against good taste interfere in some way with the rights of others, but many others do not.

Still no set of rules to produce a polished lady will achieve a result fit for the strain of life. The members of the French boarding school may adorn the ballroom, but are too likely to fall at the breakfast table or in the crowded car. The woman of perfect manners must re-enforce her unselfishness by social rules, and conventionality must be vitalized by the warm desire of others' pleasure. The best of life never "comes naturally," whether in manners or morals.

The secret of charming manners is the desire for them. When the mother wishes them for her daughter as much as she wishes the other goods of the world her daughter will have them.

The First Marlborough.

Herbert Paul in his book on Queen Anne of England paints a queer picture of the great Duke of Marlborough.

He was not truthful. He was not straightforward. He was not honest. In his love of money and his capacity for hoarding it he rivaled those wretched misers who have done no more than contemplate their gains. And yet, such are the strange freaks in which nature indulges, this mean and selfish intriguer was endowed with perfect courage, with an irresistible charm of manner, with a temper which even his wife failed to disturb, with a brain that no sophistry could obscure and with a military genius before which criticism is humbly silent.

He was treacherous even in a treacherous age. Wholly devoid of cruelty and by nature humane, he is said never to have sacrificed an unnecessary life. He used his fellow creatures for his own purposes, and when he had no further use for them he forgot their existence. He made his plans and carried them out with the absolute efficiency of sheer intelligence and the serene implacability of impersonal fate.

A Lesson in Philanthropy.

A whole-souled resident of Harlem the other evening received the jolt of his career as a parent. While reading his evening paper the doorbell rang, and a parcel from a big department store was announced. The cost was 30 cents, and he gave his little bright eyes, a girl of 6, a two-dollar bill with which to pay the boy.

Half an hour later the subject recurred to him.

"Here, Mabel," he said. "Where's that money I gave you for the boy?"

"Why, papa," was little bright eyes' reply, "I did the same as you did yesterday with the newsboy. I told him to keep the change."—New York Globe.

Balanced.

"Miss Fluffy would be a pretty good-looking girl if her feet weren't so heavy."

"She stacks up pretty well, though; her head is light."—Detroit Free Press.

A new use for the automobile is described in Country Life in America by C. H. Claudy. The author and some friends took a car straight across the country, up hill and down dale, through woods and across streams, on a wager. The account will prove of interest to any automobile enthusiast.

"Dante and His Italy," by Rev. Canon Lonsdale Ragg, has been published by G. P. Putnam's Sons. The book is not merely a biography of the "divino poet," it is rather an attempt to depict afresh the life of Dante's time and to look at the mediaeval world, and especially the Italian world of the Trecento, through Dante's eyes. Accordingly, Dante's own writings and those of his contemporaries have been made the basis of the work.

An interesting passage in "The Life and Letters of Edwin Lawrence Godkin" is the extract from a letter of Mr. Godkin's, in which he describes his first meeting with Gladstone: "In the evening I went to Bryce's to dinner. I expected to see the G. O. M., but I had not seen Bryce for a fortnight and did not know whether he had succeeded in getting him. I found, on going in, Sir Alfred Lyall, whom I knew; Sir George Trevelyan, whom I did not know, but was glad to meet; Wemyss Reid, the biographer of Foster, whom I had been trying to meet ever since I came, and Lord Aberdeen, Mahlon's friend. But the G. O. M. was not there, and I was afraid to ask whether he was coming. Suddenly 'Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone' were announced, and there sure enough he was, and my eyes fastened on him as they have never fastened on any man since I was 20. The first words he said to Bryce on shaking hands were, 'Is Mr. Godkin here?' and then he began to apologize to me for not having sooner taken any notice of my card, pleading pressure and loss of voice since he came back from his stumping tour in the West. I sat by him at dinner and had a most delightful talk with him. He is younger in appearance than I expected, as young as I am in play of mind, with a charming little vein of humor and endless interest in all sorts of things. He left immediately after dinner to go to the house."

OUR GROWING COUNTRY.

Though the Population Expands There Is Still Room for More.

The cities of the United States are the most expansive in the world, and naturally take much interest in reckoning up their population from time to time. Every tenth year they find that city directory estimates are apt to be too liberal, but actual counts seldom fail to show a large and substantial increase. At this time there is a general protest against the calculations of the government census bureau, and they are in truth far too mechanical. Averaging the growth of American cities between 1890 and 1900, and adding the annual increase to the years since the last census was taken, is not an accurate rule, though it restrains an undue optimism. The last seven years has ben a period of great business prosperity. Over a million immigrants a year are coming in. Urban population is gaining on other forms. Some cities have been quickened in growth and others are slowing up. The census bureau merely applies the measurements of the last decade, which, in general, will fall short. But the next national census is not far distant and the official figures will show the bureau that its plan of computation is crude.

According to the department's reckoning the population of the United States in 1906, without Alaska and the insular possessions, was 83,941,510, and including these 93,182,240. This is an addition of 8,000,000 to the continental population of the country in the six years ending with 1906. Cities have gained 15.9 per cent and the rural section 8.8 per cent. The four greatest cities are New York, credited with 4,113,043, Chicago with 2,049,185, Philadelphia with 1,441,735, and St. Louis with 649,320, leading Boston, next in rank, by 47,042. An increase of a million and a third a year is the estimate for the whole country. A bluebook recently published in London places the annual increase of population in the world at 6,300,000, a fourth of which is in the United States. At the present rate of immigration more than 10,000,000 aliens will come to this country in the next ten years, but the tide will recede if the uneaxampled business activity of the present time should fall off.

Extravagant Economy.

Paul Morton, in a recent address on insurance, said of a certain proposed economy:

"That would not be an economy, but an extravagance, in the long run. It reminds me of the boy and the jam.

"'My son,' said this boy's mother, "isn't it rather an extravagance to eat butter with that superb jam?'

"'No, ma'am, it's an economy,' the boy answered. 'The same piece of bread does for both.'"

Had Not Been Decided.

A Missouri lawyer tells of an assault and battery case that was recently tried in a Kansas City court.

To the first witness called the presiding magistrate put this question: "Why did you not go to the aid of the defendant when this fight occurred?"

"Because," answered the witness with a smile, "I didn't know which one of them was going to be the defendant."

Warning Notes Calling the Wicked to Repentance.

The more we trust the Lord to-day the easier it will be to trust Him to-morrow.

Diamonds will burn and gold will melt, but the word of the Lord will be as good as ever when the mountains are gone.

The self-made man is apt to worship his work.

Men may come and men may go, but character stays forever.

The man who is always finding fault never finds very much else.

While we are drinking the bitter, Christ is preparing the sweet.

Trying to add a cubit to the stature is a business that is sadly overdone.

There is something wrong with the preaching that makes a sinner feel like a saint.

The man who always looks on the bright side can always find a bright side on which to look.

The heart of a child is a safer guide as to what God is, than the biggest book on theology ever made.

The man who is not doing anything to help the man who fell among thieves is little better than a thief himself.

The earnest man never waits for a golden opportunity, but makes a good one out of the iron and brass of the common things around him.

THE DIPLOMACY OF DIAZ.

Thirty years ago, when Porfirio Diaz became president, Mexico was full of robbers and cut-throats. The mountains swarmed with outlaws in league with confederates in the cities who kept them informed as to the movements of travelers.

Diaz knew that the resources of Mexico could not be developed until brigandage was stamped out, so orders were given to execute all brigands. This policy overawed to a great extent the lawless population, but the mountains were still fastnesses for thieving bands.

Then a bright idea came to Diaz. Many, perhaps most, of the men had lost all they possessed during the fierce wars of the country. They had become outlaws largely through the force of untoward circumstances. Might it not, Diaz queried, be a wise thing to offer these Ishmaels of civilization the opportunity to regain their foothold among law-abiding citizens

Accordingly, when the brigands were caught they were questioned:

"How much money do you obtain a week on the average in your lawless and criminal life?"

The prisoners answered. Diaz pondered well. At last he announced that he would pay the bandits double the amount which they claimed as the average they obtained by thieving.

He would enroll them as members of the Mexican constabulary or rurales, and they were to extend this offer to all the members of the bands they knew; but each man must swear to serve the state with fidelity, and if any bandits refused to accept the offer, they were to be hunted down and killed wherever found.

The idea worked admirably. Soon Mexico was like another land, and the rurales became the strongest military and police arm of the republic.

Dies Stealing a Timepiece.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Chadwick, bishop of Derry and Raphoe, in a speech at the synod of the Irish Protestant Church referred to the story of a pickpocket having been found dead with the watch of the clergyman who had come to attend him in his hand. The clergyman in whose experience this strange incident occurred was the late Rev. W. H. White, chaplain of the Savoy and chaplain to the speaker of the British House of Commons in the reign of Speaker Brand.

Mr. White was aroused in the small hours of the morning from his sleep by a sick call when early in his ministry he was a curate in a Brighton parish. He was summoned to a bad quarter of the town and was led to the bedside of a man who was rapidly sinking amid surroundings of destitution and squalor.

The man passed away while Mr. White was offering prayers on his behalf and Mr. White on rising from his knees discovered to his astonishment that his watch had been removed from his pocket and was held tightly in the grasp of the dead man.

Words of Learned Length.

Miss Vassar—Why, ma, what made you think of such a thing? He was merely showing me the proper use of labials in practical osculatory exercises.—Baltimore American.

For a person with nothing to do, and plenty of attention, a baby kicks a good deal.

THE BACKWARD CHILD.

Treated Differently Now than a Quarter of a Century Ago.

Ignorance, which is almost always cruel, is nowhere more so than in dealing with children. Those who are grown up can too well remember the almost invariable cruel fate of the backward children—the exasperation of their teachers and the scorn of their classmates.

A quarter of a century ago no one dreamed that there was anything to do with the so-called stupid child but to goad and jerk and jeer and gibe him along the road to knowledge. Fortunately, science, aided by good common sense, is at work changing all this, and to-day any teacher worthy of the name seeks for the cause behind the backwardness, and is convinced that in very few cases indeed can it be traced to "original sin."

We are not now considering the question of deficient children—of those who really have something wrong with the brain. Although the parents of these unfortunates often speak of them as "backward" in the effort to hide, even from themselves, that they are not like other children, they are, as a matter of fact, a class by themselves, and should be recognized and handled accordingly. By "backward children" is meant all those who rarely know a lesson, who never seem to pay attention, who pass any given point on the road to knowledge with unnatural slowness, and who do not seem to be reached by the usual motives of emulation, shame, and so on.

It will usually be found on careful examination that these cases have a physical basis. Often in the case of the very poor it is a heart-breaking fact that this basis is partial starvation. The children start for school in the morning either on no breakfast at all, or on such a meager or badly prepared one that it is the same as none. Experiments in the line of furnishing these poor children with a meal in the school building have met with astonishing results in the improvement of the mental condition.

Adenoids are the cause of much apparent stupidity in children. A child afflicted with these growths never breathes properly, his blood is not aerated, and that causes a state of autointoxication; so that he sits with his mouth wide open, staring vacantly into space, attending to nothing and forgetting everything.

It is no longer the fashion to shout angrily at this poor child. Instead, he is taken to a specialist and his adenoid growths are removed. The result is a most astounding improvement in his general condition and power to study.

Eye-strain, or deficient vision, often keeps children backward. If a child is observed to twist into wrong attitudes while writing, or to have trouble in reading from the blackboard at a reasonable distance, he should be examined by a competent oculist.—Youth's Companion.

To Clean Knives.

An easy way to clean knives is to use a small piece of old Brussels carpet, sprinkled well with either bath brick or emery powder and slightly moistened with menthylated spirit. Double over and rub the knives backward and forward, using the left hand to steady the carpet.

Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.

Cream Cake.

One cup of maple sugar, one egg, one-half teaspoonful salt, one cup sour cream, one and one-quarter cups of flour, one teaspoonful soda. Add the soda to the cream, when it foams add the egg, well beaten; next the sugar and salt, last the flour. Bake in a quick oven.

Ping-Pong Balls.

Two teaspoonfuls melted butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, two and one-half cups rolled oats, one teaspoonful baking powder, a pinch of salt and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Cream the butter and sugar, beat eggs and add vanilla and salt and mix all together; then add rolled oats and baking powder. Stir well and drop by spoonful into pan, pinching up into shape with fingers. Bake ten minutes in quite a hot oven. Do not brown too much.

An Embarrassing Situation.

Visitor—Tommy, is your mamma at home?

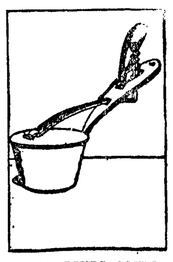
Truthful Tommy—Well, she told the girl to say she was out if you came, but she said she'd whip me if I ever told lies.—Baltimore American.

To Keep Lemons Fresh.

It is said that lemons will keep fresh for weeks if placed in a bag of cornmeal; or keep in cold water, changing it once a week.

Attachment for Pans.

So many housewives have suffered burned fingers while examining the contents of a boiling pot that it is small wonder they are anxious to procure some utensil which would obviate this disagreeable feature of housekeeping. An Ohio inventor seems to have attained the coveted utensil in the very simple attachment shown in the illustration. As here shown the cooking pot is provided with a handle of more than the average length. In connection with the handle, in close reach of the user's hand is a small lever. By grasping the latter and forcing it down a connecting rod raises the lid of the pot, the lid being hinged to the edge of the post close to the handle. There is absolutely no danger of burning the fingers or hand. Another advantage is the fact that any liquid in the pot can also be drained off quickly and with ease.



LEVER LIFTS COVER.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Idleness as a Cause of Gossip.

"Do women gossip more than men?" asks an exchange. They do, but that's because they have more time and not because they have the stronger inclination for it. An idle man can beat a woman gossiping seven days out of every week.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The most stylish arrangement of a girl's hair now seems to be to make it look as much as possible as if it had been combed with a sofa pillow.

Apple Snowballs.

For apple snowballs boil one-quarter pound of rice in water until perfectly tender. Pare and core a few apples, replace the core by two cloves, brown sugar and a squeeze of lemon juice. Cover each apple with a little rice and tie up separately in a cloth. Boil for half an hour and serve with a sweet sauce flavored with lemon.

SKIN DISEASES
HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

When the blood is pure, fresh and healthy, the skin will be soft, smooth and free from blemishes, but when some acid humor takes root in the circulation its presence is manifested by a skin eruption or disease. These humors get into the blood, generally because of an inactive or sluggish condition of the members of the body whose duty it is to collect and carry off the waste and refuse matter of the system. This unhealthy matter is left to sour and ferment and soon the circulation becomes charged with the acid poison. The blood begins to throw off the humors and acids through the pores and glands of the skin, producing Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum and skin eruptions of various kinds. Eczema appears, usually with a slight redness of the skin followed by pustules from which there flows a sticky fluid that dries and forms a crust, and the itching is intense. It is generally on the back, breast, face, arms and legs, though other parts of the body may be affected. In Tetter the skin dries, cracks and bleeds; the acid in the blood dries up the natural oils of the skin, which are intended to keep it soft and pliant, causing a dry, feverish condition and giving it a hard, leathery appearance. Acne makes its appearance on the face in the form of pimples and black heads, while Psoriasis comes in scaly patches on different parts of the body One of the worst forms of skin trouble is Salt Rheum; its favorite point of attack is the scalp, sometimes causing baldness. Poison Oak and Ivy are also disagreeable types of skin disease. The humor producing the trouble lies dormant in the blood through the Winter to break out and torment the sufferer with the return of Spring. The best treatment for all skin diseases is S. S. S. It neutralizes the acids and removes the humors so that the skin instead of being irritated and diseased, is nourished by a supply of fresh, healthy blood. External applications of salves, washes, lotions, etc., while they soothe the itching caused by skin affections, can never cure the trouble because they do not reach the blood. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and forces out every particle of foreign matter and restores the blood to its normal, pure condition, thereby permanently curing every form of skin affection. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I suffered with Eczema for forty years and could find nothing to cure me until I tried S. S. S. I suffered intensely with the itching and burning; pustules would form from which there flowed a sticky fluid; crusts would come on the skin and when scratched off the skin was left as raw as a piece of beef. I suffered agony in the long years I was afflicted, but when I used S. S. S. I found a perfect cure. There has never been any return of the trouble.

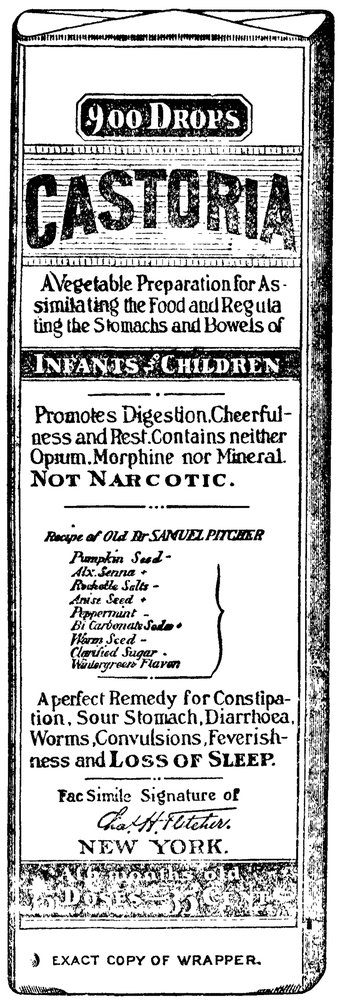
Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.



EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Theo. Jensen returned to the city Tuesday after an absence of nearly four years spent in Chicago and Germany. For the past three years Mr. Jensen has been taking instruction in harmony and violin and piano training at the Conservatory of Music at Liebsic, Germany, and has also for a period of two years been under the private and personal training of Prof. Hilfe. He will spend the summer vacation here and will return to Germany in Obtober to resume his studies.

L. A. Jensen returned Tuesday from Chicago and points in Wisconsin where he has been on business for the past eight weeks. He is glad to get back to Port Angeles and reports that there are a large number of people in the east who are desirous of coming to the great Northwest. Port Angeles is well advertised thruout the East and the general belief is that we are soon to begin to realize our great hopes as to the future of this city and county.

The many friends of Ed. Sindars, who was accidentally shot in the leg some weeks ago while out hunting, will be pleased to learn that he is again able to be about and has left the hospital for his home at Sequin. It will be sometime, however, before he will again have the complete use of his leg, but he feels that he is extremely fortunate.

The Stone Quarry, including everything owned by the company in the county was sold last week by Sheriff Cosser to satisfy a judgment of about $20,000. The mortgagee was the only bidder. The original company has a year to redeem the lands if it so wishes, but the personal property, consisting of the quarry machinery, derricks, etc., is irredeemable and for this reason there is not liable to be any redemption. It is understood that when the new owner is sure on this point that he will put the plant in operation.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heartburn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz., Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities, among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of American Dispensatory; Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., Author of Specific Medicines; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., Author of Materia Medica and Prof. in Bennett Medical College, Chicago. Send name and address on Postal Card to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive free booklet giving extracts from writings of all the above medical authors and many others endorsing, in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient of which "Golden Medical Discovery" is composed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. They may be used in conjunction with "Golden Medical Discovery" if bowels are much constipated. They're tiny and sugar-coated.

Mrs. L. E. Mahaffy was the guest of honor Wednesday at a gathering of the ladies of the Parliamentary Club at the home of the Secretary Mrs. E. J. Nailor. Mrs. Mahaffy and family leave shortly for their new home in Yakima county.
