To those who live in Clallam County, we would say, that your interests are our interests and that nothing so aids in building up a county as a live and aggressive newspaper and, to that end, in helping us you are helping yourselves.

WILL THE TRUTH SEEKER PLEASE EXPLAIN?

The Commonwealth of Port Angeles, Wash., says:

"The TRUTH SEEKER makes some curious mistakes in an attempt to criticise Henry George. To see how it mixes itself up in the use of terms it does not understand is amusing. Before Brother Macdonald essays another criticism of Henry George he should get his works and the back numbers of the Standard, and read them carefully. If he does so he will find his criticisms without foundation in fact and may be able to answer intelligently some, if not all, of the conundrums he propounds."

With the exceptions that the TRUTH SEEKER has made no criticism of Henry George, that Brother Macdonald read "Progress and Poverty" probably before the editor of the Commonwealth ever heard of the book, and has read all of the numbers of the Standard and all of Mr. George's works that have been published the above is well enough. It is a good many years since we first encountered Mr. George, and the first recommendation to read his scheme came from his own lips. The reason that we have not publicly criticised it is because on the whole it helps industrial progress, and when the people arrive at the point of adopting it its inadequacy will be so apparent that they will drop it and think out a much plainer and better one.—Truth Seeker.

For the better information of Brother Macdonald we will say that the writer began the study of the land question in "Social Statics" and was a believer in the inequity of existing land tenures before George had written Progress and Poverty and proposed and advocated editorially the exemption from taxation of improvements on the homestead of each family of such an amount as would give them all the necessary comforts free of taxation before he was fortunate enough to get hold of Progress and Poverty about four years ago. Since that time, however, we have as good a record as Bro. Macdonald as we have read every number of the Standard since its publication with perhaps a few exceptions while traveling where they could not be obtained. We are glad Bro. Macdonald has improved his opportunities so well. What surprises us is that it has done so little for him. He says he has not publicly criticised it because, on the whole, it helps industrial progress. That is like damning a man with poor praise. It is the attitude of a good many men toward the church. They think the majority of church people mean well and that on the whole the moral teachings of the clergy tend to elevate society. Does Bro. Macdonald justify the position in them? Bro. Macdonald sees something or thinks he sees something so far ahead of the single tax that the latter dwindles into utter insignificance. Now Henry George and his followers claim that the adoption of the single tax unlimited will bring about a reign of justice. They are offering their nostrum for sale to all who will purchase on the same terms as religion is offered "without money and without price" but the idea is the same, it is either what it pretends to be, or it is'nt, and will do what we cranks think it will do, or it wont.

In either case Bro. Macdonald has a duty to perform. If the nostrom will not do what is claimed for it he should expose it as he would any other humbug. If it will do what is claimed for it or go a long way toward doing it he should come to the front and contribute the weight of his extended influence to the cause. Bro. Macdonald, don't you know that tens of thousands of children, choicest of the flowers of earth, are robbed of the fresh air and sunshine every year till they droop, wither and die? that a hundred thousand women each year in this country alone are added to the ranks of the erring? that the country is infested with tramps? that crime is on the increase? that a million stalwart men with families dependent on them or who should have families if they haven't, are begging for work in vain while their wives and little ones are on the verge of starvation? Don't you know these and a hundred other horrors of a so-called civilization? Of course you do. And you also know that we cranks are turning the world upside down in an effort to abolish all other taxes except those on the values added to land by the growth of society in the, as you say, vain hope that it will set labor free; that it will increase the production of all good things; that it will abolish involuntary poverty; in other words that it will restore justice between the people of the earth. And you know that the scheme is ina equate and don't tell us wherein. Isn't it unkind of you, Bro. Macdonald, to let us climb the ragged hights only to climb down again? For see what you say. "When people arrive at the point of adopting it its inadequacy will be so apparent that they will drop it and think out a much better and plainer one."

The better scheme has not yet been thought out. That is an important admission indeed. It convinces us almost that Bro. Macdonald is hedging. He don't exactly want to appear a crank but is willing to aid the cause by admitting that no better scheme than the single tax has ever been thought out. If it has Bro. Macdonald has kept it carefully treasured in his own brain, and will, perhaps some day, discharge it upon an unsuspecting world. Out with it Bro. Macdonald, let the world have it now. Or if you have not thought it out be kind enough to give us Single Taxers a pointer in the right direction for we want to bring justice by the shortest route and we are foolish enough to continue driving away at the single tax till we find out a way to set labor free which is shorter and better.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The Constitutional Convention will, in all probability deal with woman suffrage in one of two ways, viz: Submit a separate clause to the people or so define the qualifications of voters as to include women.

The latter would be the most proper method because it is right. The other plan would probably best suit the politicians. Of the intelligent men in the community a majority favor woman suffrage simply on the grounds of justice. They are well aware that the introduction of women into politics will create complications of a most disagreeable kind but with them this counts for nothing as against justice. They know that consent is the chief element in just government and under present conditions women are not able to record their consent to the laws under which they live Yet they fear the influence of woman's vote in maintaining and intrenching superstition and if woman suffrage is denied by the people of this Territory that fear will largely be the cause. Men are fast outgrowing their fetitchisms and losing faith in restrictive measures as a means of elevating the masses, while the chief advocates of compulsory Sunday observance, God in the constitution and prohibition are found among women. This fact will operate to their disadvantage in securing the rights of suffrage, whether they are right or wrong. Those who would gladly welcome woman suffrage but see in it the danger of coercive sectarian or sumptuary laws are forced to choose between two evils. As between the disfranchisement of women and compulsory Sabbath keeping and prohibition they naturally choose the former as it is an evil of known quantity. The open advocacy by extremests advocating those views has injured if not killed the suffrage movement for some time to come.

SUNDAY LAWS.

The effort being made by certain ignorant enthusiasts to secure the passage of the Blair Sunday law deserves ignominous defeat. To attempt to hamper the people in their liberties to the degree of saying what they shall or shall not do on any day is no part of the duty of legislative bodies. It requires but a thought to see the foolishness of the idea that an act justifiable or highly moral on one day is the reverse when done on any other day. Christ never taught the keeping of any day and those christians who have lived in fear of condemnation all their lives lest they break the Sabbath should "search the Scriptures" more carefully. In order to encourage them to do so we will give a five dollar hat to the man or woman who will find the word Sabbath-breaker in the New Testament. Here is a chance to distinguish and instruct yourself at the same time. Surely Sabbath breaking is such a heinous offense in the sight of God that Christ and his apostles could not have omitted it from the catalogue of sins!

Who will get the hat?

THE PETITION.

We print elsewhere a form of petition to the Constitutional Convention which is being numerously signed by all classes throughout the Territory. It can be cut out and pasted on the head of a sheet of paper and used to obtain signatures.

We desire that as many names as possible be secured from Clallam County and to this end ask our subscribers in the various precincts to do what they can in obtaining them and forward the petitions to the COMMONWEALTH.

The demands made in the petition are of the utmost importance to the plain and hard working people of this Territory and the Convention should be made to feel the force of their opinions.

One clause in the petition deserves especial mention. It is that the land held idle by speculators be taxed as high as the land of the farmer which is cleared by his labor and used to benefit himself and society. This should be the law. Under it no large tracts of land could be held out of use while the labor of the farmer and the artizan made it valuable.

See to it that you do your part in forwarding the good work.

NEW YORK LETTER.

[REGULAR CORRESPONDENCE.]

Patriotism Uppermost—Old Tars Cast Adrift—Electrocution.

NEW YORK, July 1, 1889.—The evidence of the near approach of our great national holiday is on every hand. Patriotism and patriotic things are the chief topics of discussion now and, will be for several days to come. Our Fire Commissioners have issued the same old edict against the use and sale of fireworks but it is being violated in the same old way as in years gone by. The spirit of patriotism in the hearts of our American small boy cannot be crushed out by the edict of any commissioner and he will therefore go on celebrating, and incidentally blowing himself to pieces, just as long as July the Fourth is put down as Independence Day. The fact that it has become unfashionable to celebrate in New York does not seem to have any effect on said small boy who continues to make as much noise as ever; but, seriously it is a matter of sincere regret amongst those who have the honor of their country at heart. The only good excuse, perhaps, for the failure to celebrate the Fourth in this city is the excessive heat; but this is an objection which the signers of the Declaration evidently could not have obviated even if they had known the inconvenience it would cause. At all events the result has been to make Memorial Day supersede the Fourth as the great time for New Yorkers to celebrate. In this patriotic connection it might be well to state that there is a movement on foot to have the stars and stripes displayed on all public buildings throughout the country, not only on holidays but on every day in the year. In my opinion this is a movement which should receive generous encouragement.

THE SAILOR'S SNUG HARBOR.

The fact that a number of old sailors have been expelled for bribery from the Sailor's Snug Harbor on Staten Island is causing considerable talk and serves to recall one of the most remarkable bequests ever made in this city. The Sailors Snug Harbor is the result of the bequest of Captain Randall, himself an old sailor, who died about a century ago, leaving a farm of 30 acres in what is now the heart of the city, on which was to be built an asylum for old and worn-out sailors. When everything was ready to build, it was found that the city had grown so rapidly around the farm that it was decided to build on the less valuable land of Staten Island, and there it remains a monument to old Captain Randall, while the rent of the city land is constantly piling up. In order to be admitted, a sailor must have served at least five years before the mast in the American Navy. The inmates have the best of living, without nothing to do unless they wish to work for which they are paid cash. No one outside the trustees knows how many million the city property is worth now, but it is supposed to be devoted to the benefit of the old sailors. The place is indeed a "snug harbor," and while the old tars who have been expelled probably deserved their fate, still much sympathy is felt for them, because they are, in a sense turned out of their own home and have no place to go but the poorhouse.

ELECTROCUTION.

The first case of execution by electricity is making a great deal of trouble for the courts, and may cause a temporary return to the old method of hanging which is not exactlp played out yet. It seems that the condemned man Kemmler stoutly objects to being "electrocuted," but whether from fear of the name, or of the thing itself does not appear. He is appealing now to the higher courts, and the lawyers are trying to show that it is very improper to kill persons be electricity, They may be right, but for the life of me I can't help thinking that the bottom of the whole trouble was touched long ago by the man who wrote:

"No rogue ere yet felt halter draw
With good opinion of the law."

Edwin Arlington.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 21.—Official returns have been received from every county in the State. The majority against the prohibitory amendment is 189,020. The majority against the suffrage amendment providing for the repeal of the poll tax qualification is 235,540.

New York City, June 22.—William E. Howard, the ex-reverend electric sugar swindler, was sentenced to nine years and eight months in Sing Sing Prison, by Recorder Smythe, in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions, this morning.

4th of July Oration.

Delivered By Col. TROWBOOD, of New York.

Free born American Citizens, of this Great and Glorious Republic.

Having been called upon to address you I deem it best on this memorial occasion to acquaint you with a few facts of our nation's history.

I recognize the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus as the first and greatest event at that time.

Then the spots where you now sit were located elsewhere, and the noble savage pranced up and down the precints, scared his mother-in-law and was happy; then the pilgrim fathers and mothers, their uncle and their aunts, all came over in Plymouth Rock, and landed on the May Flower. They introduced rum, gun-powder and hymn-books, into this happy and reunited country; transformed a quiet and inoffensive land-scape into a land of liberty, sugar trusts, credit mobliers, and whiskey rings.

About this time Uncle Sam was a baby and Mrs. Columbia carried him around in her arms. Now Johnny Bull and she got into a little trouble; I tell you how it was; you see he was all the time bothering her, by making little Sammy do this then that, and one day when Johnny insisted upon selling her some stamps which she didn't want she threw a mess of tea upon him and ordered him out of doors.

Now, a good many seem to think that George Washington, all honor to his name, was about the only true friend that Mrs. Columbia had at this time. But tain't so; there was lots of other big-hearted, whole-souled fellows, who stuck up for her too, even if they didn't ride a horse and wear spurs. They hustled around bare-footed through the snow at Valley Forge, and lived on faith and twigs.

Now I tell you what it is neighbors if you or I are ever permitted to see the Roll of Honor kept by the Master above, we will find the names of heaps of folks written there who were strangers to fame when they lived here below.

As I was about to remark, one hundred and thirteen years ago to-day was the first 4th of July and we have been having them right along ever since. Let them come! I repeat it sir:

LET THEM COME.

Hopes to see a Single Tax State.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 11, 1889.

MR. EDITOR:

A stranger left your paper in my office to-day. I was delighted when I read the head lines. As I want to see you again I send 50 cts. for a short subscription. I am 70 years old, but I begin to hope that I may live to see one state at least adopt the "Single Tax" principles. For National prosperity and Justice, abolish All Taxes on incomes, and personal property; and upon everything produced by human labor. Tax nothing but land values, "The Land is God's equal gift to Mankind."

To show you what we are doing here I enclose the following announcement which will be printed and sent out next week.

Yours truly,
DR. HENRY S. CHASE,
904 Olive St., St Louis.

THE BENTON SCHOOL OF SOCIAL SCIENCE will begin its 2nd term on Saturday June 20th, at 3½ p. m. Sharp at "Comfort College," session 3½ to 5 p. m.

The relations of Land, Capital and Labor will be studied and their true values determined. And this problem will be solved:

Why is there ever increasing poverty with ever increasing wealth? The remedy will be shown.

Henry S. Chase, St Louis. Mo

You are cordially invited. "We are striving to make it possible for men to live as Christ told them to."

IN general terms, all progress, except that which benefits the whole people, is not only valueless, but harmful to a nation. It is but the building of nefarious system which, when once established, requires long years of exertion to destroy. The people have learned this. For this reason they are arising to combat the advancement of every new system of a like character and so vigorously denouncing those already existing. Craftsman.

THIS is what might be called the reconstructive age. Every indication strengthens the assertion. The foundation of our Government is sound enough, but the structure erected thereon is beginning to topple In the course of structure one part of the plans was made unimportant. Justice has been set aside, and it was the most important part of the structure. This vital defect makes the necessity of rebuilding more evident every hour Shall we soon begin reconstructing in earnest? Ex.

Looking Forward

There is a difference as wide as the antipodes between social theories in which State direction is all in all, and individuality sunk in regimentation, and that in which the sovereignty of the individual is predicated and increased freedom seen to lead to higher order. If one has been called, and I think rightly, "Looking Backward," the other might well be termed "Looking Forward."

The word anarchy in general acceptation seems to be regarded as identical with revolution by force. It is in vain that thoughtful students of Proudhon and Herbert Spencer insist that their ideal aim bases order on liberty, mean the triumph of industrialism over militancy, the realization of the highest perfection of social progress in the autonomy and happiness of each social unit, and the completion of that logic of events which has slowly raised man to intellectual, religious, and political freedom, and is now claiming economic emancipation; in vain that peace is predicated as the sole requisite condition for an emancipated industrial life, for the question of forcible resistance to invasion upon individual rights will ever arise in interrogative form. Permit me to briefly state the fundamental principles of Anarchy and in what light intelligent Anarchists regard the question of force. My long connection with what is called "the revolutionary school," I think, enables me to speak intelligently upon this subject. And while our few of your readers may agree with me, the fact that they are your readers assures me of an intelligent and, I trust, respectful hearing.

Anarchy, the absence of coercive government, is but another term for what Herbert Spencer calls "voluntary co-operation" in contradistinction from the State, or "compulsory co-operation." Its aim being the emancipation of man, and progress having nearly limited this field to economic relations, its fundamental principles necessarily are couched in economic propositions. These may be stated in two propositions in which are included all minor ones: free land, free money.

Free land is an expression often used without clear definition. All rights being personal, there can be no such thing as collective right. The right of the individual is as independent of majority coercion as of priestly or kingly control. Land, not being a product of labor, as Single-taxers admit, belongs to us; but here we divide, for if no one has a natural right to monopolize that on which man's life depends, a simple majority have no such right; in fact, it is as much of a fiction as the "divine right" claimed by the individual ruler, and rests on the same basis. But titles resting upon occupancy and use in the absence of legislation, it is objected, will lead to strife. On the contrary, common wants make common security. Precisely as freedom obtains does den and ever call out supply and the very conditions of equal opportunities necessitate co-operation and increasing solidarity. While the sovereignity of the individual recognizes the right of secession for each, social administration would remain, and common interests bring amicable adjustments.

Free money can never be the offspring of paternal (governmental) creation. The question of exchange is no more difficult to solve in a free community than is insurance. The demand would exist and again supply would follow the lines of least resistence by voluntary associations on mutual banks, and clearing houses would adjust bills of exchange between widely separated localities. In a word, it would be, to use Proudhon's terse expressions, "republicanizing the bill of exchange." When every product of labor could serve as the basis of the medium of exchange, and perfect competition reduce rates to the cost limit, interest would disappear and its sequence—profits.

If this, then, be the whole gospel of Anarchy, why talk of force or allude to that dread word—"dynamite." If men were the shapers of human destiny, if thought alone ruled actions, such talk would be worse than foliy. But the writer, not belonging to the non-resistent school of Anarchy, believes with August Spies that "we are the birds of the coming storm." Beecher once said: "There is a good deal of human nature in man," and one of its characteristics is resistance to injustice. In every age ideas have led to every reform, but injustice being rooted in vested interests, sooner or later ideas formed in the brain find expression in muscles. The philosophical student of history knows it is useless to bewail the fact. Injustice ever finds its Nemesis there.

Gunpowder has rendered countless millions wretched, but in destroying chivalry and feudalism it paved the way for industrial progress, and to-day is gladly recognized as one of the chief factors in furthering civilization. It has replaced the mail-clad knight with the artisan as the true type of progressive evolution. Not that we love force, yet in spite of all regret that it must come, "the logic of events" still proclaims as of old, that where unjust conditions are rooted in institutions, sanctioned by coercive legislation, in spite of "the better way" of idealists, the Nemesis of force invariably comes with its terrific explosion to clarify the social atmosphere. True, the muscles moved may be under the guidance of ignorance and passion, but the "providence that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may" the general consensus of human endeavor blindly struggling towards the light, is a spirit ever dominant in the strife. In all such struggles we build wiser than the wisest of us know, and the immortality of humanity will not be endangered by the new agent of civilization—dynamite. We do not preach force, nor are we such poor students of history as to bewail the inevitable. Victims of force, doomed to hourly live under its regime, not from us comes its laudation, but in fore-telling it we recognize unhesitatingly that "we are the birds of the coming storm."—Dyer D. Lum, Blythebourne, N. Y.

Something About Chinese Gastronomy.

Canton is of about the size of Paris or New York, and it is one of the best places to study Chinese gastronomy. The restaurants here have bird's nest soup at $5 a plate, and I bought a rat which was salted, dressed and dried yesterday for five cents. I doubt not the price was five times too high, for the rat was the smallest on the string which was in the butcher shop. It lies before me as I write. It measures a foot from nose to tail, and it looks a little bit like a piece of dried pork. It has been skinned even to the tail. Its legs are cut off, and the liver and heart are pressed inside of it. It smells like salt meat, and it looks as though it would make the center of a good sandwich. I intend to send it to the Gridiron or Clover club as a sample of Chinese gastronomy.

In this same shop I saw cooked cats, and I visited yesterday a cat and dog meat restaurant. Carcasses of small dogs which looked not unlike clean sucking pigs hung from hooks about a low dark room, and these, in most instances, had a tuft of hair left on the tip of the tail. This hair was black, for black dog's meat is worth more than that of a yellow dog, and black cat's flesh costs here ten cents a plate. Just below these dogs, and next to the street, were two clay bowls filled with burning charcoal, and upon these was stewing the flesh of dogs and cats. In little cages on the floor were a number of live cats ready to be killed and cooked to order, and I saw this afternoon a peddler showing a cat to a woman in one of the narrow streets of Canton. The woman was examining the cat's teeth in order to know its age, and she felt of its body as though it were a rabbit. There were about a dozen Chinamen dining in this dog and cat restaurant, and a good dinner costs on an average fifteen cents.

The Chinese fruits are especially fine, and they have oranges, bananas, plums, pears and persimmons which would make your mouth water. Canton sends thousands of dollars of sweetmeats to America yearly, and their preserved ginger is sought for by the gastronomes of the world. The Chinese themselves are great eaters. Cook shops for the rich and poor are found everywhere, and a big Chinese dinner sometimes has 100 courses. Mr. Denby, the American minister at Peking, when received by the viceroy at Canton, was given a dinner of sixty-five courses, and he smacks his lips when he discourses upon the delicacy of shark's fins and bird's nest soup.—Frank G. Carpenter.

Did He Find the Tillamook Treasure?

In the early days of Oregon, when the Hudson Bay company controlled the commercial business of the northwest coast, with headquarters at Vancouver and a branch store at Oregon City, Thomas McKay, son of a Hudson Bay man by a Red river Indian woman, who subsequently became the wife of the philanthropic Dr. McLoughlin, went over to the Tillamook country on a trapping expedition as a servant of the above named company. In his wanderings up and down the coast range he found an aged Indian woman of the Tillamoo tribe, who told him that she witnessed the coming ashore of the Spaniards, whom tradition credits with burying a chest of treasure at the mouth of the Nehalem river. The woman informed Mc Kay minutely as to the place the treasure was buried, and at his importunity went with him and pointed out the place she had described.

It was a rule of the H. B. company that anything captured by a servant of the company became at once the property of the company, and the officials of that then all powerful corporation, learning that McKay had been prospecting for the said treasure, arrested him and subjected him to a rigid examination to make him disclose what he knew about it. To all their questions and threats McKay returned but one answer: "I did not find any treasure."

McKay afterward settled on French Prairie, and some years later built a saw mill on Butte Creek, on the present site of Scott's mills, where he herded a large drove of Spanish cattle. He sold many of his cattle to the immigrants for beef, but he is credited with a big heart, and early settlers say he gave away much more than he sold. Many persons believe that McKay found the Tillamook treasure, as he always had plenty of money and spent it lavishly.—Portland Oregonian.

Fight Between a Mink and an Eel.

A battle between a mink and an eel was witnessed in the stream below the pumping station one day last week. The mink had the eel by the back of the head, but the eel wound himself around the mink and rolled him around in the water until he let go, and the fight was a draw.—Gardiner Home Journal.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

J. M. Grant and E. G. Morse are each building a two story dwelling on the hill.

Tillman and Andreson are boring wells for Nottage, N. R. Smith and E. G. Morse this week. The wells will range from 17 to 23 feet in depth.

Rev. A. H. Howells will preach next Sunday evening on the basis of Christian Faith and the relation of thereto.

No letter mail Thursday. The Evangel brought the Dungeness mail sack, leaving the Angeles sack at that place. This is the second time the sacks have got mixed.—Just twice too often.

The steamship Michigan will be put on the Portland Puget Sound route instead of the City of Topeka as formerly reported. She is expected in early next week on her initial trip. She is about the same size as the Str. Idaho.

Mr. Woolery, who has been looking over the Sound for a site for a large saw mill, was here last week. He was very favorably impressed and expects to return next week to negotiate for a site. Should he locate here he will have a tug of his own and will build a mill second to none in size on the Sound.

The Proposed Road to Quillayute.

A meeting is to be held in Port Angeles July 27th for the purpose of agitating the building of a road from this place to Quillayute.

Many are in favor of running it down the straits and crossing over from Pysht. That would be a mistake in more ways than one.

What is needed for the Quillayuters is as direct a road as possible consequently going via. Pysht would make it too long to be of benefit to the former people. Another thing to be borne in mind is that two residents of Michigan own some 14,000 acres of land at Pysht. This land is withheld from use and will be for many years. The road would pass for miles through this tract, and there would be no settles there to keep it open. Consequently the road would be of little benefit to the people at large and would but raise the value of non-residents alone.

By going up the Elwah a new country would be opened up and opportunities would be furnished for settlers to take up places. The Elwha route will settle the country, and in a few years the extra taxes will pay the indebtedness.

To the memory of Mrs. M. M. Hickox at the journey to higher life, by Louis Williams.
Port Angeles, 1889.

What stillness does pervade this house;
N,ere a sound from lips that closed forever.
Darkness, night has sett its seal
O're this form, can none reveal
Where her spirit took his flight?
Thus the anguish questions most aghast,
To realms above her spirit passed.
Dear friends, don't shed the cheer
Of sorrow, no! of fear
A flower to bring fruit of choicest kind
Transplanted by the universal mind
Though grown on earth
To bring its woerth
Must ripen in a fairer clime than this.
The universal law of prudence is,
O Glorious gift, immortal life,
To go and ripen seeds we plant
To harvest in a better land.
So fragrant, varied as extold
The goodness ripened we behold
A love, that tender brust's aside
All errors meet and opens wide
The gates, to let the wanderer in.
Through "welcome" they are opening
Their hearts and through them flows,
That love that fills all space with throbbing.
To realms where friend and foe unite
Where virtue, wisdom, love is might
It's there you've gone, receive the prise
That's given to all, to pure and wise,
To this world with all its passing splendor
You've given your parting word, your sweet farewell.
In rhyme and prose did'st ever render
The echo's of that pleasant dell
The brook, the field, the forest tall,
The birds the starry heavens, all
Contribute to your song.
Those waves are rolling on and on
That song of love you knew so well,
Whose echo's bring you back ere long
To minister as angels do,
To all that seek the light so true
The fare that far above is ruling
While we're on earth in dreams are strolling
That Love and Wisdom, Truth divine
So all enchanting to make it thine,
The friends in the sphere of the blesst
Have called thee dear sister to rest,
To realms where the weary has lost
All the turmoil of earths fighting host,
You gather the lorels you've won,
Mid the strive for the good you have done.
You've seperate from error
Like shaf from the wheat,
Your harvest is ripe
Go sister you'll meet
All the good you have sown
While walking on earth
A hundred-fold greets you
Grown, ripened your woerth.
To that world full of splendor
You need not fear venture
For prepared is the way
Whether sad, whether gay
Through your kindness you've spread,
All the good things you had
You will leave for above
For in visions I see
That grand caravan move
That hails greeting to thee
Farewell then dear sister to etherial hights
Go lesson to anthems,
That will quicken thy flights
Go sister, go join that inumerable throng
They are waiting to carry you safly along,
To where the light is ever shining
And worldly errors are declining
Where every sephyr wispers harmony and peace
It is there we meet!
It is there we kiss.

Your petitioners, residents of the Territory, representing the producing part of our citizens, respectfully demand that the following provisions be made in the constitution which you are to frame, and submit to the people for ratification:

Second—The selection of all servants of the people by the elective method. No appointing power to be vested in any of our state or municipal officers.

Third—Minority representation.

Fourth—When one-third of the members of the legislature shall demand the submission of a law to a popular vote it shall be so submitted.

Fifth—Enabling municipal government to own and control such industries and public conveniences as the people may choose to own or control.

Sixth—Taxation of land held from use equally as high as land used.

Seventh—The reservation of our tide lands, school lands and all lands ceded to the state by the United States forever, the same to be treated so as to insure the highest possible perpetual income of the state and schools.

Eighth—Prohibiting the operation of all private detective agencies No arrests to be made or law to be enforced by other than constitutionally qualified officers.

Ninth—A clause providing that the right of the people to peacably assemble to discuss measures for their mutual benefit, or to ask for a redress of grivances, shall not be infringed upon or curtailed.

Tenth—Providing for annual sessions of the legislature. And no restrictions to be placed on length of session.

Eleventh—An expeditious method of amending the organic law, so as to make it conform to changing conditions.

And your petitioners further pray, that in your deliberations you will constantly bear in mind that a true republic can only be based on the equality of its citizens, and that the great producing classes have a right to be protected against the non-producers and drones of society.

Pheasant Poaching.

This is always beset with difficulty, and the pheasant poacher is usually a desperate character. Many method can be successfully employed, for the pheasant is rather a stupid bird. Owing to their wandering proclivity, it by no means follows that the man who rears the pheasants will have the privilege of shooting them. At the time of the falling of the beech and oaken mast the poacher watches as closely by the covert side as the keeper himself. The former knows perfectly well that the birds feed in the morning, that they dust themselves in the turnip fields at noon, and that they ramble through the woods in the afternoon. He, better than any one else, knows the coppice to which the wandered birds have gone and in which trees they will roost. Is he slow to use his knowledge? At dark he passes over the land, and lights a bit of brimstone beneath the roosting birds. The powerful fumes soon overpower them and they come flapping down one by one. This method has the advantage of silence, and if the night be still need not be detected. Away from the covert time is no object, and the poacher who is content with a brace of birds at a time usually gets the most in the end. The poacher knows that no bird is more pugnacious than the pheasant, and out of this trait he makes capital. He takes a trained game cock under his arm, fitted with spurs, the latter as sharp as needles. Upon the former's crowing, one or more cock pheasants immediately respond and advance to meet the adversary. A single blow suffices to lay low the pride of the pheasant, and in this way half a dozen birds may often be taken, while the poacher's representative remains unhurt.—The Gentleman's Magazine.

How He Lost the Cane.

"I was out on the West Side Monday night to a progressive heart party," remarked a young attorney yesterday. "Ever been to a progressive heart party? No? Well, just take my advice and send regrets to one if you are invited. You'll feel better the next morning. Now, I thought I knew how to play hearts when I went to this party, as I had the best sort of training. Learned to play it with men who slide their hats over their eyes and hold their cards up under their eyebrows—fellows who play as though their lives depended upon the game. So, you see, I felt pretty easy. I drew the last table, and started in by winning a game with a good partner. I moved up a table, and there I had a partner who made things pleasant for me by leading the ace of hearts at the start. When I raked in the four big hearts she looked at me and timidly inquired, 'Was that right?' I had to smile and tell her it was. Have you ever smiled when there was murder in your heart? It's awful hard. It was my luck to strike that woman for a partner five times during the evening, and she kicked a big hole in my otherwise good record, knocking me out of the buckhorn cane, which was the first prize, and which I had a dead cinch on had it not been for her. And I had to look pleasant through it all, too. I wonder where that woman will go when she dies?"—Chicago Herald.

A Silver Wagon Road.

"You may talk about nickel plated railroads," said vice president L. T. Stanley of Walnut street, "but what do you think of a solid silver wagon road? The Horseshoe mine, in Colorado, has one, although when it was built they didn't know it would pan out that way. They had to have a road from their mine, a distance of three miles, over which heavy loads were to be drawn. They took the rock that had been taken from the shafts they were sinking, and which lay around in the way, and macadamized the road all the way through. The wagons passing over the road ground the rock down. One day they had a heavy rainstorm, and when things got dry again after the rain wind blew the dust off the road, and all through the road bed, every which way, they could see big streaks of silver. Well, maybe they didn't collar on to the rest of that loose rock that lay around those shafts! They sent away a lot of it to be assayed, and when the report came back they found that their road bed was worth $200 a ton. It was a little expensive to drive over, but they had to have the road, and they've got it yet, if their mines have held out."—Philadelphia Press.

The Manufacture of Celluloid.

Most celluloid is made in France. A roll of paper is slowly unwound and at the same time is saturated with a mixture of five parts of sulphuric and two parts of nitric acid, which falls upon the paper in fine spray. This changes the cellulose of the paper into pyroxyline or gun cotton. The excess of the acid having been expelled by pressure, the paper is washed with plenty of water until all traces of acid have been removed. It is then reduced to pulp and passes on to the bleaching trough. It is this gun cotton which gives it its explosive nature. Most of the water having been got rid of by means of a strainer, it is mixed with from 20 to 40 per cent. of its weight in camphor; a second mixture and grinding follows. This pulp is spread out in thin slabs, which are squeezed in a hydraulic press until they are as dry as chips. Then they are rolled in heated rollers and come out in elastic sheets. They are from that point worked up into almost every conceivable form.—New York Telegram.

Universities of Argentine.

The two Argentine universities under the patronage of the government are among the best in South America, and rank with Yale and Harvard in curriculum and standard of education. The public school system also is under the patronage of the government, under a compulsory education law, and includes all grades from the kindergarten to the normal school. There are thirty colleges and normal schools for the higher education of men and women in the republic, and 2,726 public schools.—Boston Transcript.

The townsite of Port Angeles was selected in 1863 by the Secretary of the Interior under Sec. 2380 of the U. S. statutes, which provide that "The President is authorized to rererve from the public lands, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, townsites on the shores of harbors, at the junction of rivers, important portages or any natural or prospective centers of population." The reports from the officers appointed for the purpose of selecting a favorable site for a port of entry, recommended Port Angeles. Salman P. Chase was then Secretary of the Treasury and through his influence was the law quoted above, approved by President Lincoln, and the townsite plan put in force, by the selection of Port Angeles not only as a government townsite, but as the proper place for a Military and Naval Reserve. The site extends east and west six and a half miles and averages about a mile in depth back from the water front, and contains about 4160 acres.

About 680 acres of this body was surveyed into urban and suburban lots. The former are in city blocks 500x300 feet, divided into 20 lots, 50x140 feet with an alley extending east and west 20 feet wide. The suburban lots contain ten acres each, excepting those on the east side of the townsite which are fractional, some containing more and some less than ten acres.

The Military and Naval Reserve lies west of the platted part of the townsite, fronts partly on the bay and partly on the Straits, and contains about 460 acres,

This leaves a large body of land immediately south of the Military Reserve and the urban and suburban lots, unplatted, and of about 3,000 acres in extent.

How soon this land will be platted and offered for sale is a question for the President or the Secretary of the Interior to decide. But that it will be offered at no distant day is beyond doubt, and to give people of moderate means an opportunity of pooling their mites and permitting a fund to accumulate so that a portion of this townsite may be purchased, and owned by them is the object of the recent organization known as the "Port Angeles Land Company."

The rules of this company provide that any one may become a member by subscribing his name. or authorizing it to be done paying a fee of one dollar into the incidental fund, and at least one dollar per month the first of each month after joining, into the permanent fund.

The Permanent Fund is never to be used except for the express purpose of purchasing lands of the townsite, and must be so held as to be subject to a call for that purpose at a moments warning.

If the money paid into the incidental fund is not sufficient to meet the necessary expenses, the trustees, who manage the affairs of the company, may levy a special assessment of not to exceed 25 cents any one month, for that purpose. But as the officers serve without pay until the final accounting, and then shall receive what is alloted them in lands by a vote of the members, the expenses will be very light, and in all probabilities not exceed the fees paid into the Incidental fund. No other inducements are offered than the advantage gained by uniting with many others in purchasing these lands in ten acre lots and afterwards subdividing them into city lots, and dividing these among those who contribute the money, at actual cost, and in proportion to the amount contributed. It is not expected that the well-to-do will contribute much to this fund. It is designed, rather, for the ordinary workingman, whose income is limited, who alone could do but little towards getting a foot-hold in our townsite. To him it will be the same as getting land on the installment plan, for press it as we may it will be over a year before these lands can be placed on the market.

But no one will be barred. Rich and poor will be served alike. The treasurer of the company is one of the substancial men of the place. He does not expect any pay for his services, and gladly assists in the work of benefitting those who are struggling to better their condition.

All are governed by the following rules:

1. Any person may join this association who signs his or her name hereto or authorizes the same to be done and agrees to pay a fee of one dollar, and at least one dollar per month on the first day of each month after joining until such time as the Port Angeles reserve is offered for sale.

2. The incidental expenses of this association shall be paid from the fees and special assessments received from the joining members.

3. The trustees shall serve without pay until such time as the purpose for which this organization is formed, is consumated and then receive in allottments of town lots or otherwise such compensation as a majority of the subscribers hereto shall by vote determine.

4. All moneys received for the permanent fund, shall remain in the hands of the treasurer until such time as the Interior Department shall offer the lands of the unsold portions of the Port Angeles townsite for sale, and shall be held subject to call at any moment for the purpose of purchasing said lands or so much thereof as the fund will permit of being purchased, and for this purpose and no other shall said fund be appropriated.

5. After said lands shall have been purchased, they shall be subdivided in convenient form, appraised as nearly as possible at actual cost value, and divided by lot among the undersigned in proportion to the amount contributed by each to the permanent fund.

6. If it should happen that no lands can be purchased on account of a change in the laws, then all moneys paid by the undersigned above the fee and such assessments as shall from time be levied, (which shall in no case exceed 25 cents at any one time) shall be repaid the members thereof.

7. Printed reports of the finances of the association shall be mailed to each of the undersigned on the 10th of each month for the month preceding.

8. If a vacancy occurs at any time in the board of trustees, the two remaining members shall have power to fill it.

9. If any change be made in the above rules, the same shall not be valid until submitted in printed form and approved by two-thirds of the members hereof.

10. Assessments to procure a fund for incidental expenses only, not to exceed 25 cents for each member any one month may be made by the trustees only when the admission fee of one dollar shall fail to provide for the actual necessary expenses of the association.
