FRIDAY, AUGUST 2, 1889.

The Commonwealth is sent this week to a large number of persons in Clallam County and elsewhere, in the hope that they will appreciate our motives and whether they agree with our views or not, will give us, by subscribing, a chance at least to make ourselves understood. To those who live in Clallam County, we would say, that your interests are our interests and that nothing so aids in building up a county as a live and aggressive newspaper and, to that end, in helping us you are helping yourselves.

It is reported that the water front syndicate of this place has sent G. V. Smith to Olympia to lobby in their interest. Our latest advises are to the effect that tide lands will be sold at auction to the highest bidder regardless of improvements made by the jumpers. So far so good, but the error is in selling them at all. There is a saving clause in the article which will leave the manner of disposing of them in the hands of the legislature and that body may not sell them.

It will be gratifying if the Constitutional convention can so far forego the desire to legislate as to leave all matters relating to taxation to the legislature. The simple clause—the legislature shall provide an equitable system of raising the revenues of the State by taxation—is sufficient. Woman suffrage and prohibition should also be left to the legislative department. A constitution which thwarts the will of the people in any particular should be voted down.

CIRCUIT JUDGES.

The proposed clause in the constitution relating to judges is not calculated to serve the best interests of the people. This county for instance is put into a circuit with four others making five in all under one judge. Under this plan we shall be able to have a term of court about once a year and be subject to endless expense and delays. The people of each county should have a judge, one-half of whose salary should be paid by the state, he to have a limited jurisdiction in civil cases and include criminal and probate business. This is the system in Nebraska and it works well. The people have a right to prompt service in civil cases and criminals or those charged with crime should not rot in jail awaiting the tardy action of a circuit judge.

INDIVIDUALISM AND THE SINGLE TAX.

Hitherto, when referred to by the press, all those seperate schools of reformers who sought the amelioration of the evils which affect mankind were classed in a general way as Socialists. Aggitation and consequent education has brought out more clearly the points of difference between these schools until it is now easy for those informed to classify them in respect to the methods which they severally propose. Such a classification is however to some extent arbitrary if we consider the individuals training under the various titles. For we find people professing to be Socialists who hold every possible shade of opinion on social matters, from anarchism to the single tax. So also with Anarchists. While the essence of that doctrine precludes the use of force in any form by the individual or the State, we find men professing to be Anarchists who advocate the use of force and preach the doctrines of restriction. And this is the form, unfortunately, under which anarchism is best known to the public.

As knowledge advances advocates of reform will align themselves by reference to the principles they hold regardless of the various names which occasion has invented.

For the purpose of this article we shall define socialism as that school of reformers who seek the regeneration of society by means of the nationalization of land and capital; who regard the individual as the child of the state and propose to make the state, through a system of officialism, the guardian of the individual to the extent of giving "to each according to his necessity and procuring from each in the form of effort, according to his abilities."

With the end sought—the bettering of individual and race conditions—we have full sympathy but believe the plan fundamentally wrong in its estimate of human nature. It ignores the basic principle that mankind seeks the gratification of its desires with the least expenditure of effort, and predicates its success upon the universal adoption of the idea of "All for each and each for all"—universal unselfishness. Practically, however, it is not essential that all should be unselfish but only the majority. If the minority are not satisfied they can emigrate. How intelligent people can pin their faith upon a regenerative scheme which depends for its success upon a set of officials void of selfishness to be chosen by an unselfish majority we are unable to see. But this is not the worst feature. The scheme necessitates the administration of affairs by the wisest men in the state, a thing to to a large degree impossible. The wisest men are seldom the most popular and it will be ages, if we judge by the past, before this condition will be reversed. The best we can expect at the hands of officialism is that its administration will be characterized by the average wisdom, and the average virtue. This is the condition today. The administration of governments generally are of as high a character as the average public virtue and wisdom demands.

The hope of the socialist lies in his belief that evolution will ultimately bring, by the operation of natural law, the end desired. We do not share in this belief. It is true that social organization, first made necessary by the reign of militancy, tends more and more toward socialism. But with the decline of militancy and the rise of industrialism, the chief force operating to further state control will be gone, and we may expect to see evolution of society go forward on new lines. Warfare defensive or aggressive necessitates strong governmental control, but as the necessity of war declines through the growth of commerce and of the knowledge of the interdependence of all nations, the strong government, necessitated by the reign of war, will give place to forms less and less despotic, forms under which the rights of the individual will tend to receive more general recognition. As the reign of war tends to sink the individual in and elevate the state, the reign of industrialism will give greater scope to individuality and subordinate state craft to it. Whatever may be the proper sphere of government under the militant regime, under the industrial regime it is limited to securing justice to the individual, any further interference with the actions of individuals being inconsistant with the proper idea of government, the greatest good to the greatest number.

Another thought demands attention. Suppose the idea of the Socialists in its purely mechanical or administrative sense to have been established in any state. What will be the effect upon individual life? With government officials to think for them; to exercise the functions of benevolence; to choose for them their amusements; to determine for them the methods of education—secular and ethical; to set the limits of the various kinds of manufactures; to exercise for them the thousand and one functions now left to the free play of human effort seeking the gratification of desire. What, we ask, will become of that individuality which characterizes the race? Shall we not see the decadence of many of the most sterling virtues?—thrift—invention—genius poetry—art—music—all of which have reached their present high development under competition? The incentive to labor is the gratification of desire and the desires which actuate effort vary as widly as the poles. Will we get as good results when all are compelled to eat soup from the same pot? That is what socialism means—what it offers to the race. Under it we should expect in time to reach the plane of China, where everybody is protected in their persuits to the extent of destroying competition. It is the result of mititancy carried to the fullest extreme. It would be a wet blanket to civilization.

CHRONICLES

In the First Year of the Reign of Benjamin the Republican.

1. Now it came to pass in those days that Andrew, who surname was Carnegie, stretched forth his hand to vex certain toilers in the Keystone state.

2. And he laid hold upon John, who was an artificer in steel rails, brother of all such as work in rolling mills and who pour out molten iron like water.

3. Now John was a protectionist, falsely so called.

4. And the same had aforetime at the command of the political captains of that land—

Marched in percessions and got up hooraws,
And trampled through the mud for the good of the cause,
And thought he was kinder fulfillin' the prophecies,
When 'twas only jest changing the holders of offices.

5. Nevertheless Andrew, a great captain of industry, was fain to cut off and reduce the wages of John, who was a typical toiler, the like of whom in that land numbered some millions.

6. Then it came to pass that John bowed down his head and wept and bewailed greatly. And his heart was heavy within him, and his soul was sore amazed.

7. And he called his wife Jane and his sons and his daughters, and they took counsel and lamented together.

8. Saying alas! now must we fall and perish, for behold, our means are cut off and our days are full of evil.

9. Surely great is protection, and Benjamin is his prophet! O that it were as in the former days, when we walked in strength of our youth, and the candle of prosperity shined upon our heads.

10. But now our days are darkened and our nights are heavy with weeping.

11. Then Jane answered and said, Surely great is protection and we are its product! Lo! these many years have we wrought in the iron mill and scorched in the blast of the fiery furnaces for a long generation.

12. Let us, I pray thee, arise and journey toward the setting of the sun; let us go to the soil whence we were taken, and find delight and sustenance in the earth which was our origin.

13. Surely I remember the green fields of my childhood, and the sunny hill-sides are ever before me.

14. And behold I have saved a measure of beans and a handful of barley; there shall we plant and gather in; we shall not sow and another eat, for behold the heavens are the Lord's, but the earth hath He given to the children of men.

15. And then answered Carnegie, the typical monopolist, (for it came to pass that he had been in hiding behind a pile of rails) and he lifted up his voice and said, Great is protection and I am its profits. Selah!

16. O vain woman! how long wilt thou darken words without knowledge, and utter speech without understanding.

17. Know that we have fenced in the earth and builded a wall and set bounds that none may pass over.

18. If thou sow seeds by the roadside the fowls of the air will come and devour it up and if thou plant by the highway the beasts shall destroy it.

19. Sow in the open fields and the tax gatherer shall waste thy bread and the lord of the fields shall devour thy substance.

20. I, indeed, have broken thee in pieces, but surely the landlords will grind thee to powder, Selah!

21. Notwithstanding Andrew the Caledonian was somewhat cast down, and his spirit was disquieted within him.

22. For Andrew was not wicked above all other men nor a sinner beyond all the dwellers in that country.

23. And he said to himself, Behold I will arise and utter my voice in the North American Review and declare words of wisdom throughout all the land.

24. Surely great is protection and Andrew is his product; wonderful is wisdom and Carnegie is her first born!

25. Special privilege is mighty, and landlordism is the basis of society and compasseth the earth.

26. And I believe in the dollar almighty, mover of heaven and earth, and in special privilege and land monopoly, source and foundation of power to purchase all marketable things.

27. I believe in holy self, a high protective tariff on what I wish to sell, free trade in labor, the survival of the richest and the life at the public cost. And all the people shall say amen.

28. Toil on, toil on, O poor worker! for the day of thy prosperity is at hand; the great captains of industry shall direct thy labors, and the saviors of society are to become stewards of thy reward.

29. For inspiration has at last come down from heaven; O toiler, see thou mistake it not for incantation come up from hell!

30. Great is inspiration, and Carnegie is her mouthpiece. So I come to do thy will, O Mammon; I bow down to thee and worship, O thou golden calf!

31. Yet am I moved with pity for thee, O toiler! I will put some of thine earnings into charitable works for thy good; thine and thy fellows.

32. I will surely found libraries and halls of music; schools of protection and soup houses shall stand hard by each other.

33. But the Time Spirit said: Thou fool this night an accounting of thy stewardship shall be required of thee.

34. Who made the a judge and an administrator over thy brother? Have I built the constitution of the moral universe upon charity or patterned the corner stone thereof after thy designing?

35. Where wast thou when I laid its foundations upon righteousness and established it forever on justice? Surely thou wast then born for thou art from of old and the number of thy years is very great.

36. Verily, wisdom shall die with thee and understanding shall perish at thy death.

37. And about those days arose certain of the sect called Georgeites, the same having not the fear of political captains before their eyes.

38. And moreover they said private ownership of the Creator's land is all wrong, being at the same time false economy and a sin against God.

39. And the same agreed not with the political captains, only in part, and they had many followers, but not all openly at first, for fear of the captains of politics and the captains of industry, and some even for fear of ecclesiastical and theological captains.

40. Howbeit certain of them met often together in halls and in tents and under every green tree.

41. But the newspapers and able editors mostly, at first, held their peace, waiting to see where unto this thing would grow.

42. And so it came to pass that many of the toilers also waited inquiring diligently one of another if any of the rulers or the protectionists had believed on the doctrine.

43. And many in those days, because of their toil were ignorant, but Henry, whose surname was George, spake often and earnestly unto the people.

44. And some answered what will this babbler say? Other some he seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods.

45. Others said, am I my brother's keeper? and passed to and fro, noisy and shouting, with dust and great commotion but going no whither.

46. And some were stupified by rum and tobacco and led captive by ungodly lust, so that they cared for none of these things, and went merrily down to eternal death.

47. And there were devoted women not a few who knew the laws of heredity, and so raised up sons and daughters full of divine pity and born reformers from the first.

48. And there arose certain wise men of the east, able and scholarly withal, who being "born in Boston needed no second birth."

49. And it was given them from on high speedily to see that the fair promised land of such as see visions and dream dreams could never be conquered and held, or even reached, save by the utter extinction and overthrow of landlordism as then known.

50. Now the rest of the acts of Andrew and of Benjamin, and of the political and the theological captains may not some of them be found written in book Humbug, known and read of all men?

51. Hundreds of men have been thrown out of work and the rest had their wages reduced. Surely great is protection and these are its results.

52. Employers go to congress and say "you must protect us because we pay so much higher wages than are paid in other countries," and then they turn around and say to the workman, "Your wages are high because we have protection." Verily, verily, great is Humbug, and ye are fed upon it. A. V. Brown, Jersey City, June 5, '89, in Standard

Cincinnati, July 19.—A fierce rainstorm accompanied by thunder and lightning, swept over this city early this morning. It flooded the Miami Canal, broke its banks and worked great havoc in the vicinity of York street and Central avenue, causing a loss of about $50,000. Several families were driven from their homes while the blinding storm was raging The firms sustaining the greater loss are Metz & Co., icedealers, and Maescher, pork-packer.

Speaking of the probability that some of the new States, in framing their constitutions, will leave it at the discretion of the Legislature to extend suffrage to women, the New York Press says: "There is every reason why the constitutions of all the new States should be elastic on this point. Women know more about training children than men do, and much good has been done by giving them votes in elections for school directors. Women own real estate and pay taxes on it, and the tendency of legislation is to increase their rights in property matters. The theory that such rights are protected by the use of the ballot certainly requires that a new constitution should contain nothing that will stand in the way of legalizing the voting of women whenever it may become expedient and otherwise practicable to do so. Women should at least be allowed to vote at local elections as soon as they desire to exercise such a privilege.

NEW YORK LETTER.

The Lost Air-ship—A new Music Hall—The Great Exhibition.

New York, July 22, 1889.—Drifted out to sea and lost! That is the fate, as far as can be learned, of the intrepid aeronaut, Prof. Hogan, and the curious air-ship which Prof. Campbell had invented and which he expected would revolutionize aerial navigation. Several attempts have been made during the last few months to test the power of the novel air-ship, but no ascension was made until last Tuesday morning, when the balloon was inflated in the outskirts of Brooklyn, and, with Prof. Hogan in the car, started on a voyage from which, in all probability, it will never return. Its steering apparatus broke loose immediately after the start, and the aeronaut must have lost all control of the ship at the outset. A few hours afterwards the balloon was seen heading out to sea with its passenger sitting in the stern of the car; and then no tidings came until the pilot of an incoming steamer reported that he had seen the air-ship far out at sea, skimming along without an occupant until the balloon finally broke loose from the car and sailed off in the clouds, while the car sank in the ocean. What has become of Prof. Hogan, who had previously made over 400 voyages and who was regarded as the foremost aeronaut in world, no one knows. But that he met a frightful death can hardly be doubted, and thus ends another chapter in the history of aerial navigation, and thus another life is added to the long list of those given in the attempt to rule the air. The air-ship, which consisted of an oval shaped balloon connected with a large car, cost $2,500, and Prof. Campbell says he will build another at once.

A NEW MUSIC HALL.

The well-merited complaint that there is no proper music hall in this city will soon have no excuse for existence. A building has at last been completed which it is thought will suit the requirements in every particular. It is situated on the corner of Madison Avenue and 59th Street, and is being fitted up in an elegant manner. It will accommodate 3,000 persons, 1,800 of whom will be seated on the ground floor. The hall will be decorated in the French Renaissance style, and it is believed will have no equal in New York. It was built by Mr. John D. Crimmins, the well-known contractor, and will be dedicated by Theodore Thomas, who will begin a series of concerts there on Sept. 1.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION.

At the request of Mayor Grant a meeting will be held at the City Hall, on Tuesday, the 27th, at [illegible] preparing for the great fair of 1892. Nearly all the prominent people in the city are invited, and the meeting will be a most enthusiastic one. Everyone, including the newspapers, agrees that the fair must be held in New York City. We have never had a world's fair yet, and it is about time that we had one. The nearest approach to such a fair was the Crystal Palace Exhibition, in 1853. By the time 1892 comes around, there will be nearly forty years of an interval, and our friends who have not visited us since then will have an opportunity to see how much we have grown. No definite plans can yet be agreed upon, but the enthusiasm shown by everyone makes success of the biggest kind a certainty. But with all our enthusiasm and advantages I am of the opinion that we have no time to waste if we are to have our house in order by 1892.—Edwin Arlington.

THE PROPER USE FOR BULLION.

A specie basis was the leading hobby of the old party leaders a few years ago. They called it "honest money" while legal tender paper was "rags." But the experience of the world had demonstrated that a specie basis was fallacious in theory and impossible in practice, and financial reformers made the fight on this line and drove the gold bags to the wall.

The test case was made before the U. S. Supreme court, and the decision was that goverment had a right to create a legal tender paper money in times of peace as well as war. The act of 1878 requiring greenbacks to be paid out as soon as redeemed took the fangs out of the resumption act, by making paper money interchangable with gold. This was a grand victory for labor and business, but it has not been utilized, as under party management monopoly always selects the candidate for congress, and hence the people are not represented in the halls of legislation.

But the burden of debt imposed upon the people, already far beyond their ability to pay under the present debt creating system, will sooner or later force remedial legislation on the question of finance, The debt paying medium must be increased in proportion to the demand, or the burden of debt will crush out the last vestage of industrial independence.

But as long as the world is wedded to gold, we will have use for our precious metals. This country produces vast quanties of bullion. Experience has demonstrated that we do not need it in order to effect domestic exchanges. It is valuable, as bullion, to pay balances in our foreign trade, and might be used to purchase and transport to this country the actual wealth created by the labor of the old world. For this purpose, the most useful one to which it can be applied, it is not necessary that it should be coined. This, for the purposes of foreign trade, is a useless expense, and paper money is a much better medium for the transaction of domestic business.

As a commodity, to be used in exchange with countries which make it the exclusive debt paying medium, gold and silver may be regarded as amongst the most valuable products of the United States. As a basis for money specie is a delusion. Our foreign trade is the only reasonable excuse for its being used at all and this is only a small fraction of the business of the country and in this it is only needed as bullion to pay balances. But as an article for export is would be the source of untold millions of wealth.

RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by the Advocates of Equal Suffrage in Conference at Olympia, Washington Territory, July 3 1889.

The friends and advocates of equal suffrage and equal rights, assembled at Olympia, W. T. to consider what action should be taken in view of the assembling of a convention to form a constitution for the State of Washington, respectfully invite the attention of the people of the Territory and of our countrymen everywhere to the following resolutions adopted at a meeting of delegates and representatives from various parts of the Territory, held at Olympia, July 3, 1889.

Whereas, three successive Legislative Assemblies of the Territory of Washington have enacted laws conferring the right of suffrage upon women, which laws have received the approval of the successive Governors, and have been sanctioned and endorsed by all political parties, as well as by the people generally of the Territory:

Therefore, resolved, That it is the sentiment of this meeting, and as we believe, of the people of the Territory, that the elective franchise should not be denied to any citizen on account of sex; that Liberty, Justice and Equal Rights should be accorded alike to all citizens, male and female, and that a provision to that effect should be embodied in the Constitution of the State of Washington:

Resolved, That, so long as more than twenty thousand of American citizens in the Territory of Washington are disfranchised by a single judicial decision in defiance of the Legislative will and the Organic Act of the Territory, we enter our emphatic protest against any proposition to submit the determination of their rights to a vote of the "qualified electors" of the Territory, composed in part of patrons of the prize-ring, wife-beaters, tramps, bummers and drunkards. We regard such a proposition as only adding insult to injury, and shall at all times treat it with the contempt which it deserves.

Resolved, That the decision rendered by three of our Territorial Judges, declaring the Woman Suffrage Act null and void, is without a precedent in the history of judicial decisions, and is a wanton outrage upon the rights of American citizens. That said decision is in direct conflict with the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Pratt vs. Ramsey et al. decided in 1884.

Whereas, the recent Act of Congress, providing for the admission of four Territories into the Union, declares that the Constitutions to be formed shall be "republican in form" and "not repugnant to the principles of the Declaration of Independence" and,

Whereas, it is one of the principles of the Declaration of Independence that all governments "derive their just powers from the consent of the governed,"

Resolved, That any Constitution which does not recognize and embody that fundamental principle, is not "republican in form," and is "repugnant to the principles of the Declaration of Independence," and in contravention of the aforesaid Act of Congress.

Resolved, That the object and purposes of the authors of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States will not be accomplished until every American citizen has entered into the inheritance of equal Liberty, equal Justice and equal Rights.

Resolved, That we respectfully insist and demand that the existing law regulating the property rights of husband and wife, commonly known as the "Community Law," be allowed to remain upon the Statutes of the Territory where it has been since 1869, until the same shall be repealed or amended by the Legislature of the State of Washington.

A Few Questions Well Stated.

The Carpenter: The workingman's labor is the only product he has to offer the public as a purchasable commodity, and, according to all the laws of trade he should be allowed to fix a price for it, and if in doing so he organizes a union, or an assembly, or a lodge, he is only following the example of his more wealthy fellow-citizen who joins an exchange or a board of trade or a coal combination to fix a price for the necessaries of life. It is all very well to say that a man has the to buy where he can buy cheapest, and to sell where he can to his greatest profit. Does that rule apply in all the walks of life? Have not the many combines and trusts closed out all competition and virtually forced the worker to organize and fix a standard price for his labor, and to see that none but members of his guild are employed at the same work as himself? Can any man say, should he be taken ill, that he will have for his medical attendants two physicians, one from each of the leading schools? Try it, and see if one will not refuse to work because the other is not a member of the same school—workmen call it a union, and the public recognizes and acknowledges the right in the one case, but, in the other, where labor, or, as the term goes, unprofessional man asserts the right, he is denounced as an enemy to society.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Sch, American Range took a full of load of lath to Seattle Wednesday from the Colony's mill.

About sixteen people came from Dungeness to attend the Base Ball boys dance at the East End Opera House, Saturday.

Contractor Williams has purchased a lot on the hill and intends to build a residence and move his family here in the near future.

A flower festival will be held on the evening of Aug. 16th, at the Congregational church in this place. We invite the earnest cooperation as all lovers of flowers. Louis Williams Com.

Dr. R. Morse from Nova Scotia, came last week to visit his relatives in this place. He is very much taken with this locality and now intends to settle up his affairs in the province and locate here permanently.

Three hundred thousand shingles were on the wharf to go by Str. Idaho to Seattle, but though the steamer could have taken them, the Captain, for some unaccountable reason refused to put them aboard.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the "Stearns Wind Mill Co" in another column. It is warranted to be the best and most durable mill made. They want a reliable agent here and offer good inducements to the right man.

The Evangel took over 200 M shingles Tuesday from the Port Angeles Mill and Lumber Co. to Campbell and Atkinson Seattle. The Diamond A brand from this company brings ten cents more per thousand than any other shingle in the Seattle market.

If the party who took the ax from the wood-shed in the rear of this office is through with it he will confer a favor by replacing it. It is not because we want to use it so bad but we like to see it lying in restful innocence in its accustomed place. Don't you see?

The Idaho brought a large amount of freight to this place Monday, including the rest of the machinery for the Port Angeles mill and Lumber Co's. cedar mill. This mill will be running in about 30 days when cedar lumber will be added to the other Angeles productions.

Geo. V. Smith went on last trip of Evangel, to Olympia to interview the Constitutional Convention on the water front and county court business. Mr. Smith is, we understand, in favor of selling the water front to squatters thereon. He also favors the retention of the Probate court in Clallam Co. dispensed terms as a Superior Court should be established.

Two men came on the Evangel Tuesday who represent twenty families in Nebraska. They cruised out the Pyscht country but owing to the large holdings of non-residents could find no advantageous locations. They went Wednesday into the bunch grass country and Elwha valley and intend to give it a thorough examination. If suitable locations can be found they will engage in stock raising on a large scale.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post office address. Respectfully,

The Quillayute Road.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of Port Angeles was held in the afternoon of July 27th, to take action in regard to opening a road through the county to Quillayute.

F. McGill was chosen chairman and D. McInnis, Secretary.

After the chairman announced the purpose of the meeting, the Secretary presented the petition given below.

Brief speeches were made by Messrs. Lull, McInnis, Levy, Hinckley, Vail, Klanning, Ayers, Baldwin of Lyle river, Lewis and others. Dr. A. B. Lull urged the necessity of the road and spoke of practicability of a route to cross the Elwha near the mouth of Little River which he himself had examined. McInnis said the importance of the measure to the county could not be over estimated and favored the bonding of the county for the purpose to the full limit required. Levy, Hinckley and Capt. Ayers spoke of the urgency of the measure and favored the bonds. Dr. Vail opposed the issue of bonds which would fasten a debt on children yet unborn and preferred to see the work proceed only as fast as money could be raised by tax. It was answered by Mr. Klanning in a humorous speech which caused much merriment. He said if the present generation cleared the farms the children unborn could well afford to pay for the road.

Dr. Lewis said the bonding of the county under existing circumstances for a permanent improvement was eminently proper. The road would increase the value of all land along the route and much of this land was unsurveyed or otherwise exempt from tax. To raise the money now would compel the few present tax-payers to pay for benefits conferred on all future comers. It was well to postpone the payment of the principal till such time as the larger part of the land of the county was subject to taxation. It was enough for the pioneers to pay the interest. He moved that the sentiment of the petition be adopted as the sense of the meeting which was carried unanimously:

The following is the petition which is being numerously signed

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of Clallam County:

We, the undersigned, citizens of Clallam County, respectfully call your attention to the unaccessability of the lower part of our county owing to the lack of roads. The great Quillayute valley, a rigion capable of sustaining a large population is without means of communication with the outside world by wagon road or any means, whereby the thrifty farmers of that rich section can get their produce to tide water, thereby retarding its settlement and development.

Therefore, following the example of other counties in the Territory, we pray your Honorable board that advantage be taken of the power conferred on you by act of Legislature and that you borrow money, as much as in your judgment may seem necessary, said money to be used to construct a good wagon road from the town of Port Angeles to the Quillayute valley by the nearest practicable route, and that the county bond her credit for that purpose. This road we look upon as a matter of vital importance to our whole county, and firmly believe that in less than 20 years two-thirds of the money borrowed will be returned to the county Treasury from the increased values of the land through which said road will pass and reach. We therefore further pray your Honorable Board to take immediate action by appointing viewers to view out a road to the said Quillayute valley and take whatever further action in the matter which in your judgment may seem necessary.

70 signers.

A man with a proud name of Jim Blaine dreamt that one night in his travels he struck Hell, and wishing to see some of his old friends he asked permission to enter, which was readily granted. One of the sub devils showed him around and after passing through the head center in which he saw the hottest roasting and scorching, they entered the yards in which there were a number of dry kilns and as Jim could not understand what they were intended for he was told that they were chuck full of farmers who voted for protection and were so confounded green that they wouldn't burn until dried.—Jeffersonian.

THE EXTINCTION OF THE BISON.

Dr. Carver, the Great Shot, Talks About It—Some Breezy Stories.

As the Indians hunted them, the race of bison would probably have lasted forever, but about 1866 the white men turned their attention to the shaggy monsters of the plains. Large eastern firms organized hunting parties and paid the shooters $2.50 for each bison where he lay dead on the plains. I then went to southern Nebraska and became a professional hunter. The bison consisted of two large divisions, the one living in the south and the other in the north. Their only common feeding ground was along the Republican river and its branches in Nebraska. The Indians were well aware of that fact, and hostile tribes have had many a fight for that territory. It was not until 1873 that the government put an end to this by sending the Pawnees south and the Sioux to their nothern reservations. Prior to that time we had to do all of our hunting at the risk of being scalped at any time.

Our favorite gun was an army model of the Springfield rifle, 45 caliber and loaded with ninety grains of powder. The whites patterned after the Indians and hunted on horseback. Having wagons to haul our game, we did not care to "circle" them as the Indians did. When a herd was located we would mount our best horses and as quietly as possible approach the herd from the leeward side. As soon as they saw us the fun would begin. Although of a low build, the bison will make a very interesting race with a horse for ten miles. We would press up on the right flank of the herd and ride so close to the animals that our guns would touch the side when fired. The most deadly shot was to fire quartering through the lungs so that the animal would bleed to death. In this way we would follow the herd as long as our horses could stand it. On one of these runs I killed 113 bison, none of which were more than 100 yards apart. In riding back an awful sight was presented to the eye. The trail was marked by dead and dying animals. An occasional big bull would have a broken back so that he could not get up on his fore legs, and nothing could look more furious than his shaking head, with coal black eyes glaring in a death stare from his shaggy front. We received our pay for the animals dead on the plains, and wagons followed us up, quartered the animals and shipped the saddle and tallow to eastern markets.

About 1871 the hide hunting began. Prior to this time little or no attention was paid to the skins, but when the demand for them created a high price the meat was allowed to rot on the plains, and this magnificent race was extinguished simply that extravagant tastes might be satisfied. With the improvements in firearms an entirely different mode of hunting was adopted. The Springfield army gun was superseded by a Sharp 50 caliber and loaded with 110 grains of powder. The hunter used his horse only in finding a herd. This done we would go to the leeward side so that the scent of the powder and report would not reach the animals, and find a suitable shelter about 1,000 yards distant from them. I have killed them at a distance of a mile. Hunting in this way we had to be very particular, and watch the herd closely. Like a herd of cattle, the bison are always on the go and are apt to walk out of rifle range in a short time. In moving, however, they always have a leader and the trick was to kill any one that started to lead the others off. By thus killing the leaders, we could often shoot for an hour from behind one clump of grass, and when they had moved out of range, the "skinners" would come up, cut the hide in the ordinary way for skinning, tie the animal's head to a stake, hitch a team of horses to the hide, and jerk it off. No one will ever know what immense numbers of bison were killed by these hide hunters, but to my certain knowledge 3,000,000 hides were shipped from the Frenchman river in one winter. The hide hunters, by a system of fires, kept the bison from the streams until many of them perished and thousands of others were easily killed. At the close of that winter a man could go along the banks of the Frenchman for fifty miles by simply jumping from the carcass of one bison to that of another. Considering facts of this kind, it is not surprising that a small, tame herd and a few old circus animals represent the great herds which, less than a quarter of a century ago, blackened miles of prairie as a thunder cloud darkens the sky.—Inter Ocean in The Kansas City Times.

DAFFODILS.

I sang of these bright flowers, you know,
When I was young, long years ago,
And how you praised the song!
Then softly stroked my hair a-down,
And whispered of the poet's crown
That should be mine ere long.

I sang to please you, as the flowers
Were pulled to grace your birthday hours,
That came with coming spring;
I was so happy, for your love
Filled earth below and heaven above—
I could not choose but sing.

I was so happy; and today,
Though God hath parted far away
Your unknown life from mine,
A sense of peace my bosom fills
And lo! I bring fair daffodils,
Beloved, for a sign.

A sign of love that tires not yet,
That would not, if it could, forget;
Of love by love made brave;
For I can bear your flowers to bring,
And bear to hear the thrushes sing,
Here, by your quiet grave.

And I can bear to turn away,
To leave you sleeping day by day,
What time my task goes on;
The task I shared with you so long,
The work for which love makes me strong,
Though all its joy be gone!

Oh! vanished far from sight and touch,
My heart leaned on your heart too much,
As by your side I crept;
My head was sheltered by your breast,
You toiled and thought while I took rest,
You wakened while I slept.

The way was long, the world was hard,
All fortune's gates were golden barred.
Alas! we had no key;
God closed in love those tired eyes,
Death gave life's work its crown and prize,
And parted you and me!

Awhile—ah, workmate, not very long!—
I sing my simple, saddened song,
And learn my lesson plain.
I yearly bring your daffodils,
Till far beyond the eternal hills
We meet—nor part again!
—All the Year Round.

He Saved Himself Gracefully.

In a family residing in South End is a bright little one who is the life of the house. Whenever any one in the household does a thing which does not please him he retaliates by saying: "I don't love you." He had said this once or twice to his fond grandmother, and his father rebuked him for it by saying: "If you ever speak to your grandma again in that way, I shall be obliged to punish you." A few nights later the family were at supper and the watchful grandmother removed from the boy's plate something which she did not think he should eat. He regarded her sullenly for a moment, and then blurted out: "I don't love you, grandma." His father glanced at him from across the table as much as to say: "I'll settle with you after supper, young man," and the little fellow immediately saw the necessity of squaring himself with his paternal parent, so he quickly added, "as much as I love Jesus." Then he explained himself by saying: "Of course, I don't love any of you as much as I love Jesus." It is needless to say that he was not punished.—Boston Advertiser.

Steam Engine Against Devil Fish.

A few days ago, at the end of the Naples wharf, a forty foot pile of about one foot diameter was loosely tied with 100 feet of cable. The hands suddenly noticed the cable running from the coil, and before any one could secure it, both pile and cable went running rapidly to sea. A devil fish had got entangled in the cable. Boats were at once secured and started in pursuit, and after a two mile race they captured the line and log, the monster having become loosened, which fact accounts for them being able to overtake it. When we consider that this species of ray attains a weight of 3,000 to 5,000 pounds, and strength to correspond, this is not astonishing.

Some months ago the passengers of of the Fearless harpooned one of these fish steamers near San Carlos bay, and after towing the steamer for some time, the engine being reversed and pulling against him, they were compelled to cut the line to prevent being carried on the Sannibel bar.—Fort Meyers Press.

Surmounting a Baptismal Difficulty.

A puddler went the other day to get his child christened.

"What name," asked the parson, "shall I call the child?"

"Thoo can caal the kid owt thoo likes," said the father.

"Well," replied the parson, "I think Benjamin is a very nice name."

"Varry weel," says the father "caal 'un Benjamin."

The puddler came out of the church with his wife and child, highly delighted with the name, when a thought struck him. Rushing back into the church, and overtaking the parson walking down the aisle, he exclaimed:

"Hey, Mister, the young squeaker's a lass."

The parson was at a loss what to do under the circumstances. However, he put an "a" at the end of the name, and they call the child Benjamina.—London Rare Bits.

Our Constitution.

Among the propositions to come before the constitutional convention of the new state of Washington some are very important and desirable. Others are worthy of prompt rejection. To the latter class belongs the plan of making all officials elective. In small communities this is well enough, but in larger ones it is impossible for voters to discriminate. All legislative officers should be elected; but executive officers, responsible chief officials excepted, should be appointed. To the former class belong the propositions for secret voting, minority representation, the submission of important laws to popular vote, the taxation of unused land the same as that of equal value which is in use, the reservation of school lands for the benefit of the school fund, the prohibition of private detective agencies, a guarantee of peaceable assemblage, and an expeditious method of amending the constitution. All constitutions ought to be subject to easy amendment; but better even than that would be a clause requiring a constitutional convention to meet every twenty-one years, in obedience to Jefferson's idea that every generation should legislate for itself. The most important of the propositions however are those which aim to hold the school lands as common property, and to tax land according to its value irrespective of its use. The first reserves to the state the growing rent of the lands it already owns, while the second lays a firm foundation for the ultimate adoption of the single tax, and in the meantime discourages the cornering of land.—Standard.

ALL wealth is created by labor. Money is created by law. The value of the wealth created by the labor of this country exceeds $600,000,000,000 per annum. It is safe to say that less than $600,000,000 in money is in actual circulation, exchanging this wealth or less then one dollar in money to ten dollars in wealth. Hence we are compelled to use credit instead of cash. Under this system we have burdened ourselves with a public and private debt of not less than $30,000,000,000, on which we pay an average of six per cent, or $1,800,000,000 per annum. All we receive in return is the privilege of using $600,000,000 of money, to exchange the $6,000,000,000, worth of wealth created by our labor. If the people are the law making power would it not be a wise policy for us to create a system of finance under which the volume of money would be equal to the demands of business so that we could substitute cash for our present credit system and get out of debt?

Newspaper postage is one cent per pound for any distance. One hundred pounds of newspapers are carried from New York to San Francisco for one dollar. These papers must be handled very repeatedly. With such practical illustrations of cheap transportation before the people, is it not strange that they begin to inquire why the railroads should charge a passenger three cents per mile, while they carry one hundred pounds of papers across the continent for one dollar.

UNLESS the church of Jesus Christ rises up and proves herself the friend of the people as well as the friend of God. and in sympathy the great masses, who, with their families at their backs, are fighting this battle for bread, the church as at present organized will become a defunct organization, and Christ will go down to the beach and invite twelve plain, honest fishermen to come into an apostleship of a new dispensation of righteousness manward and Godward. The time must come when all classes of people shall have equal rights in the great struggle to get a livelihood—Talmage.

Bill Nye's Brother.

Frank M. Nye, the assistant county attorney, has long been suspected and watched by people about the court house with all the intentness that detectives shadow a suspected criminal. In this case, however, the circumstances are a little different. Mr. Nye is watched on the strength of the wit and humor that has made his brother "Bill" so famous, in the hope that some spark of ancestral wit may spontaneously be emitted from him also. But nary a spark. If any humor has ever proceeded from Frank M. Nye while he is conducting a prosecution then no one has heard it. In that respect, therefore, so far as relationship is concerned, he might as well be the brother of Tom, Dick or Hary, instead of "Bill." Frank Nye, however, has his popular qualities, if serious, and he can make an effective address to a jury.—St. Paul Pioneer Press
