FORTY MILES THRU THE FOREST RESERVE

Clallam Bay Press Protests Against Scheme —Would Connect Straits Country Instead.

We are glad to see the Commercial Club and the citizens of Port Angeles taking an active interest in getting a road from the county seat to the west end of the county. It is an indication that the people of the chief city of our county are waking up to the importance of having all parts of Clallam county accessible by road to the county seat. The west end has been neglected long enough. It is high time some move was made to put a highway clear through from Sequim Bay, at the east end, to Lapush on the ocean beach, at the extreme west end.

But we question the wisdom of running either a county road, or the state road, from "Lake Crescent west to Sappho." To do this means to build a road through forty miles of forest reserve belonging to the United States government.

Why should the county of Clallam or the state of Washington build forty miles of road through a forest reserve? We might as well run the road through forty miles of desert.

Why not work together to have the state road come along the county road we already have, to tide water at Pysht and along the shore of the straits to Port Crescent. Our county is spending thousands of dollars now on the road between Sappho and the straits. Why not continue along the shore of the straits? The country all along the straits between Pysht and Port Crescent is not a forest reserve. It is not a desert. It is not forty miles of road construction.

On the contrary the land along the straits when logged-off is fine agricultural land; it is good for stock raising, dairying, fruit raising, gardening. It will be logged-off after a while and the land sold in small tracts to men who will cultivate it. It will make hundreds of small farms, hundred of homes along the straits all tributary to Port Angeles and all in a straight line west of Port Angeles, the line of least resistance for the railroad, steam, or electric.

How about the forty mile route through the forest reserve, "Lake Crescent west to Sappho?"

Port Angeles expects to get the trade of the Forks and Quillayute country. Will it get this trade when the railroad reaches Quillayute from Grays Harbor. Will not about all of that trade go south on the railroad? Will not a town grow up in the Quillayute country drawing its supplies from the big cities reached by the railroad?

Where does Port Angeles "get off" then with its forty miles of road through a forest resrve?

Will the legislature of the state of Washington appropriate money to build forty miles of road through a forest reserve belonging to the United States government that will practically benefit nobody but the forest rangers? We want a road to Port Angeles but we want it where it will do the most good to everybody. We want the state road to supplement and help out our county road work; not to work at cross purposes with it. We want to open up the straits country where the soil is good and easy to get at. We want to cooperate with Port Angeles citizens if we can, but we do not want to waste thousands of dollars building and keeping up a highway through a forest reserve.

From Pysht to Port Crescent means the shortest link of road to connect the west end with Port Angeles. It can be built by the state in the shortest time. It can be built by the state at the least expense. It will run through the richest territory. It is on a straight line west from the county seat and will carry the telegraph and telephone lines to Cape Flattery. It is in territory naturally tributary to Angeles; territory that can never be made into a forest or any other reserve but which will be logged-off and ripen into cultivated fields and gardens such as we see in the Dungeness and Sequim communities, which not so long ago were in a wilderness, uninhabited and unimproved.

ASKS ASSISTANCE FOR PROPOSED REFORM

Pool Selling Should Be Included with the Other Forms of Prohibited Gambling.

Ole Hanson, representative-elect from the 43rd district, is asking that all the commercial, religious, and other societies in each neighborhood pass the following or similar resolutions favoring the passage of his Anti Race Track Gambling Bill to be introduced and passed at the next session of the legislature:

"Whereas, Race track gambling, book making, pool selling, etc., are a menace to public morals and their influences are injurious and demoralizing to the entire community, and

"Whereas, This coming year, a great World's Fair is to be held in Seattle which will bring to our state thousands of visitors, composed of this country's best men and women, and

"Whereas, If the Meadows Race Track, situated near Seattle, is allowed to continue to run a gambling hell, the reputation of our state will be irreparably injured,

"Therefore be it resolved, that we petition the next Legislature of this state to enact into a law Ole Hanson's Anti-Race Gambling Bill, making race track gambling, pool selling, etc., a felony, the bill to take effect at once.

"Resolved, that we especially request the members of the Legislature from this district to use their best efforts to make this bill a law.

"Resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to them."

Concerning the business of pool selling at the races, for the suppression of which the heavy penalty of from one to three years is provided, the Rainier Valley Record says:

"No form of gambling is so insidious and disastrous as race track gambling or pool selling. Young men and women are attracted to it and become habitues of the track and betting booths who would never think of entering a gambling house for the purpose of playing any of the games of chance there.

"The race track and the book maker are hedged about by an air of semi-respectability that seem to protect the patron, but which in reality help all the faster to lead to ruin. The racing season of Seattle for the last three years has left behind it one black trail of embezzlement, and suicide of a number of victims.

"With all other forms of gambling forbidden by law in this state, there is no reason why pool selling at the races should be protected. In fact, judged by the harm it causes, it is the one form of gambling above all others that should be expressly legislated out of existence. The old cry that racing is an aid to the improvement of the live stock of the country has long since been exploded. Racing of horses in itself is a grand sport, but if it has come to the point where horse racing cannot be indulged in excepting attended by pool selling with its train of disaster resulting in lost honor, manhood and even life itself, then it is high time that it should be forever abandoned."

The surveying crew of the Port Angeles Railway and Terminal Company, which has been working in this section all summer and in the city for the past month or so under the direction of W. P. Kempf, left on Tuesday for Spokane where they have been called suddenly for a month's work that seems to be more important than the work here at present. The party will return here in February according to present plans, and have left practically all of their outfit here.

CONTRACTORS OUTFITS NOW ON THE GROUND

Bids to Be Opened Thursday, 24th; Several Constructing Engineering Crews at Aberdeen.

John D. Isaacs, Jr., head of the constructing engineering force of the Union Pacific at Aberdeen, said on Friday last:

"When construction work begins on the Grays Harbor branch of the Union Pacific road it will not be at Centralia nor the Aberdeen end nor at Hoquiam, or at any one other point, but the work will be started at probably twenty different points along the right-of-way. There are six crews here now and more may come, and when the contract is let, which will probably be immediately after the bids are opened December 24, it is the understanding that the Grays Harbor branch will be made an example of great railroad enterprise and spirit.

Special Christmas services were held at the Congregational Church Sunday night, which were well attended. Among the features of the program were special music by the choir, an original Christmas poem by Mrs. Stephen Smith, readings by Miss Ball and Mr. Cosser, and a short special talk by the pastor, Mr. Smith. Christmas tree exercises were held Wednesday night by the Sunday School, each scholar being supplied with a bag of candy, an orange and a little present. The program consisted of recitations by a number of the little folks and by some of the older girls, a song by a class of girls, Christmas songs by the school, and other Christmas features. The platform decorations constituted a room with an open fireplace and brick chimney, with storm-beaten windows, and two well filled trees. About the building were the mottoes in large letters, "Glory to God in the Highest" and "On Earth Peace and Good Will" with evergreen borders. Santa Claus was present with long flowing beard and made happy the hearts of the little ones with his kindly attentions and generous gifts.

FOOT BALL GAME A TIE NEITHER SIDE SCORED

High School Boys Surprise Spectators by Putting Up the Real Article.

One of the most interesting and exciting athletic contests ever held in Angeles was witnessed last Saturday when the local High School met the Townsend team in the first game of foot ball ever played in Angeles. Spectators were surprised to see the article of foot ball put up by our boys after so short practice. Of course we all expected that Townsend would play a good game. The boys from Townsend have played the game for years, and the soldier boys give the H. S. team excellent practice, and they did put up a good game. The teams were quite evenly matched although the home boys showed up a little stronger in some respects than the visiting team. Our line held better and our back field was heavier though no swifter than the opponents.

Our boys are well satisfied with results, considering that foot ball practice began late this fall and the only men who had played the game before were Supt. Geisness and Burns Thorpe. Mr. Geisness has helped the boys out as much as possible though, of course, his time has been very limited because of his work. Burns Thorpe has been captain and to his energy and push the success of the team is chiefly due. The team as a whole played a good game and it would be difficult to say who made the best showing. Burns Thorpe, Leland Beam and Donald McInnes were conspicuous for advancing the ball and the line did excellent work with Duane Allen at center. The game was a friendly one and the officials, Mr. Hill of Townsend and Mr. Carlisle of Angeles did very satisfactory work. The local team will now disband and the members of the team are expected to turn the energy which they have displayed on their studies. After seeing the game we are rather of the opinion that the claims made for the game by enthusiasts are well founded. In the game the boys learn self control, are trained in rapid thinking and acting and see for themselves the importance of treating an opponent fair.

The following was the line up:

Duane Allen, center.
Clyde Sewell, r. guard.
Fred Farmer, l. guard.
James Lotzgesell, r. tackle.
Tom Thorpe, l. tackle.
Chester Hutchinson, r. end.
Roy Getchell, l. end.
Burns Thorpe, quarter back.
Leland Beam, full back.
Donald McInnes, r. half. back.
Ralph Peters, l. half back.

Warren Woodcock and Ross McKechnie, substitutes.

ACTION BEING TAKEN TO CONSERVE WATER POWERS

Washington, Dec. 22.—Practically the first steps toward a more judicious use of the water powers of the country, in line with the policy of President Roosevelt to conserve the natrual resources of the country are now being taken by the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce in the preparation of a bill to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters.

Preliminary consideration of the matter has developed the fact that there is a strong opposition in congress to the government's levying a tax on the water powers of navigable rivers.

Subsequent to the veto last spring of the Rainey project, the interstate and foreign commerce committee of the house appointed a sub-committee to investigate the program of new legislation in regard to the regulation of dams across navigable waters. During the summer the sub-committee went into various phases of the matter, and Chairman Stevens, of Minnesota, is now ready to explain to the full committee the recommendations of the subcommittee. This will be the first matter considered after the return of the committee from Panmaa.

All the recommendations of the president in regard to the improvements and regulations of dams are agreed to by the sub-committee except the regulation that a tax be imposed. The subcommittee will urge that the full committee recommend to the house that the present laws be so amended that the secretary of war may fix charges for the privilege of constructing a dam.

The committee also has accepted the recommendation of the president that there be a specific time limitation upon the permits and has fixed ninety-nine years as the limit. This is done with a view of the public keeping control of the waterways and of the government retaining the right to eventually remove a dam should it become an obstruction under changed conditions.

WEALTH FOR FARMERS

SECRETARY WILSON'S ANNUAL HAS INTERESTING INFORMATION.

Review of the Progress of Agriculture in the United States During the Past Twelve Years. Production Last Year Above the Average.

Washington, Dec. 19.—After twelve years of service as head of the department, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, in his twelfth annual report, renders a comprehensive account of his stewardship and presents a review of the progress of agriculture in the United States during this period. Concerning the farm production of 1908, he says that the farmer has created wealth by billions. Production has been above the average of recent years with few exceptions; and, while some prices have fallen, others have risen.

The value of all farm products of 1908 reaches the most extraordinary total in the nation's history—$7,778,000,000. This is about four times the value of the products of the mines. The farmer contributes 87 per cent of the raw materials used in those industries which depend mostly or considerably upon agricultural materials, and these industries use 42 per cent of all materials used in all industries.

The gain in value of farm products in 1908 over 1907 is $200,000,000, and would have been much larger had not the prices of cotton and hay been low.

Progress of Decade

During the last ten years the wealth production on the farms has been above $60,000,000,000

Greatest of all crops is Indian corn, whose production this year is 2,643,000,000 bushels. The value of this crop is $1,915,000,000. This wealth, grown out of the soil in four months of rain, sunshine and some drought, is enough to cancel the existing interest bearing debt of the United States and to pay for the Panama canal and fifty battleships. This crop is worth this year nearly as much as the great crops of cotton, hay and wheat combined.

The greatest hay crop in histocry has been gathered this year, 68,000,000 tons, or 12 per cent above the average for the preceding five years. Its price averages $2 a ton less than it was a year ago, but still the farm value of the crop is $621,000,000, or 6 per cent above the five-year average.

Wheat is 1½ per cent above the five-year average in production and 23 per cent above in total value. The 600,000,000 bushels of this crop are estimated to be worth $560,000,000 to the farmers.

Although the oat crop suffered from drouth, the value is $321,000,000 for 789,000,000 bushels.

Cereals Product

All the cereals produced aggregate 4,329,000,000 bushels, a total that has been exceeded three times, but the value reaches $2,694,000,000, or more than $300,000,000 above that of 1907, and exceeds still more the totals of former years. Compared with the preceding five years, the value is higher by 32 per cent.

Unfavorable weather made the potato crop only 275,000,000 bushels, or 5 per cent below the five-year average, although the value, $190,000,000, is 18 per cent above the average and was never equaled by any former crop.

The exports of agricultural products in the fiscal year 1908 were valued at $1,017,000,000, an amount greater than any year except 1907.

The imports of agricultural products in 1908 were valued at $540,000,000 in the countries from which exported, a reduction of $87,000,000 below the value of 1907.

The secretary concludes his review of 1908 with these words: "The farmer had many reasons for his Thanksgiving in 1908, as he did in recent years. He has reaped as well as sowed. He has obtained more of the means with which to improve his farm, to increase his capital, to become a more generous consumer of the goods of other producers, and to add to the things that count for a better liing and a more pleasant life"

One of the subjects to whch the secretary of agrculture is givng special attention is the so-called "dry land farming." In the west are millions of acres of fertile soil so situated that they can never be irrgated. If farmed at all, these lands must be planted drouth-resistant crops and cultivated according to the best moisture-conserving methods.

Dry Land Farming

The forage value of cactus has been fully demonstrated and the details of its cultivation are now being worked out. Special attention is given to drouth-resistant cereals. As a result of the first year's work a number of varieties have been found which outyielded the ordinary sorts by 20 to 40 per cent.

The freight hauled to railroads over wagon roads exceeds 250,000,000 tons a year, not including the immense tonnage hauled to wharves and docks for shipment by water. With an average cost of at least 23 cents per ton per mile and an average haul of nine miles, the resultant sum representing annual cost of wagon transportation passes the half billion dollar mark.

National Forests

The number of national forests is now 182, and the total area 168,000,000 acres. At $2 per thousand feet, the stumpage in these forests is worth $800,000,000. These forests now contain one-fifth of the standing merchantable timber in the country. Nine new bird reservations were created by executive order. These are located off the coasts of Florida, Louisiana, Oregon and Washington.

POPULAR VOTE CAST IN LAST NATIONAL ELECTION

NewY ork, Dec. 19.—The total popular vote of the presidenthial candidates at the last national election was made known during the week in an official form by the filing of the last of the official vote, that of Michigan. Thet total shows the following votes cast:

Taft, Republican, 7,637,678.
Bryan, Democrat, 6,393,182.
Debs, Socialist, 448,471.
Chafin, Prohibitionist, 241,262.
Hisgen, Independence, 83,186.
Watson, Populist, 33,871.
Gilhaus, Socialist Labor, 15,421.
Total for all candidaest, 14,852,239.

Increase Is Large

This grand total exceeds by 1,341,531 the total number of the votes cast in the presidential election of 1904, when the grand total was 13,510,708.

Compared with that election, the candidates of the Republican and Democratic and Socialist parties increased their vote this year. The reverse is true of the candidates of the Prohibition, Populist and Socialist Labor parties. The Independence party did not figure in the presidential election four years ago.

The biggest difference in a party vote is shown in an increase for Bryan of 1,315,211 over the total vote cast in 1904 for Alton B. Parker, the Democratic candidate. Taft received 14,190 votes more than were polled for President Roosevelt in 1904, and Debs ran 46,188 ahead of his predecessor on the Socialist ticket.

Populist Loss Heavy

The heaviest loss is shown by the populist party, which, with the same candidates, registered 83,312 votes less this year than in 1904, when their total was 117,183. The Prohibition candidate, Chafin, ran 17,284 votes behind the 1904 mark of his party, and Gilhaus, the Socialist Labor candidate, received only about 50 perc ent of the vote given Corrigan in the previous prescidential race.

U. S. GOVERNMENT BREEDS STANDARD AMERICAN HORSE

Washington, Dec. 22.—For four years the federal government has been at work trying to improve the American harness horse, and good results have been obtained at the two breeding stations, one in Colorado and one in Vermont. Such a thing as a standard breed of American horses has never been recognized, but at present a standard carriage horse is being produced in which the government experts hope to preserve the main desirable qualities of speed, endurance and good conformation.

It has been recognized for many years that the United States produced good horses, but imported stock was regarded as the basis of them all and little or no attention was paid to such a thing as a standard American breed. A few years ago attention began to be directed to the fact that the blue ribbon animals in most of the shows were very largely from American stock. Further observations led to the recognition of the fact that the Morgan horse was being neglected and the characteristics which had made it so valuable in the past were being obliterated by constant and injudicious crosses with other strains.

The department of agriculture resolved at once to rescue this typical American strain, and hence it was that one of the breeding stations was located in Vermont, the native state of old Justin Morgan, the progenitor of the line, and here his descendants exist today. The Morgan line has been the victim, to a great extent, to the modern desire for speed, and the effect of saddle horse blood in producing the present day carriage horse has not been altogether desirable. These effects it is the purpose of the department of agriculture to breed out.

The farmers of the two states in which the stations have been established are displaying an interest in the work, and the state governments contribute to the expense.

It is expected that the work will be taken up in other states and that in the course of a few years the government will have stables equal to those of any of the governments of the old world.

WASHINGTON APPLES WIN THIRD AT THE IOWA SHOW

Council Bluffs, Ia., Dec. 21.—Iowa received first in the awards on state exhibits at the National Horticultural congress. Second place was given to Idaho, third to Washington, fourth to Utah, and fifth to Maryland. Awards on county displays were as follows:

Canyon county, Idaho, first; Chelan county, Washington, second; Iowa county, Iowa, third; Polk county, Iowa, fourth.

In the numerous awards on plate displays, B. M. Chapman, of Wenatchee, Wash., and J. A. Carr, of Council, Idaho, were among those who carried off honors.

"Uncle Joe" Coming

Seattle, Dec. 19.—According to advices received from Washington, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, speaker of the national house of representatives, will attend the opening exercises of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition on June 1.

AN INQUIRY ORDERED

SENATE VOTES TO INVESTIGATE CRITICISMS BY PRESIDENT.

Words in Annual Message Resented by Upper House of Congress. Senator Bailey Urges Stronger Resolution on Grounds That Words Were Wanton.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The senate decided definitely to enter upon an investigation relative to the portion of the annual message of the president which criticizes the action of congress in prohibiting the detail of secret servicce men to duty in other departments.

The resolution directing the inquiry has been in contemplation ever since the message was received on Tuesday of last week. It was decided that Senator Aldrich should stand sponsor for the measure, and the Rhode Island senator presented a resolution authorizing the inquiry, which was adopted without division and thus was the inquiry decided upon. The resolution as adopted follows:

"Resolved, That that portion of the annual message of the president relating to the secret service is hereby referred to the committee on resolutions, who are instructed to inquire whether the legislation referred to in the message has impaired the efficiency or sufficiency of the force employed in the secret service; and such committee are further directed to ascertatin what persons other than those included in the secret service were paid from the public treasury for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1908, for services in connection with the enforcement of the laws or for work in the detection or investigation of possible crimes or criminal acts or violation of the law, including all special attorneys, special agents, inspectors or other employes of any department of the government, or any branch of the public service, and also some information as to all persons whose employment was authorized by indefinite or general appropriations; the informaion to contain the names of all persons so employed or paid, their previous occupation, the nature of the work in which they were engaged, by whom they were appointed, and upon whose suggestion or recommendation; the inquiry, however, not to include ocffiers appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, or officers specifically provided by law, or laborers appointed as such and actually engaged in employment as laborers."

May Call Witnesses.

The resolution further authorizes the committee on appropriations to subpoena witnesses and examine them under oath, and further to report what action, if any, in the judgment of the committee, the senate should take in the matter.

Mr. Bailey objected to the resolution because it did not direct the committee to inquire into "very gross and wanton" words of the president's message.

"So far as I am concerned," he said, "no action should be taken on that resolution until that point is covered. Either congress is the most infamous body that ever assembled in any country of the world, or it will take some notice of this most wanton and gross insult ever given any body in the world."

Mr. Aldrich insisted that the resolution provide for just what Mr. Bailey advocated Mr. Hale declared the resolution was sufficiently strongly worded to permit the committee to make the kind of report required by Mr. Bailey.

"I would like to inquire from the senator from Maine," interposed Mr. Tillman "whether he thinks the senate has been insulted."

Mr. Hiale insisted that every one has his own opinion on that subject, and any one was able to form an opinion as was he.

Mr. Tilman insisted that according to the president's message congress is composed of a lot of "rascals and scoundrels who belong in the penitentiary' Senator Newlands declared that the question at issue was whether the secret service had been used to investigate congressmen in the pursuance of their legislative duties or was only to detect fraud in the duties devolving upon the executive departments.

Mr. Newlands said he was not attempting to apologize for the president, but wanted to have the senate avoid any hasty or improper language.

The resoluiton was passed without a roll call.

PHILANDER C. KNOX TO BE NEXT SECRETARY OF STATE

Washington, Dec. 21.—The office of secretary of state in President Taft's cabinet has been offered to Philander C. Knox, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Knox has signified his acceptance.

The appointment was not offered to any other man, although it was well known that Mr. Taft would have been glad to have Elihu Root retain his place as premier of the cabinet.

In urging Senator Knox to accept the state portfolio, the president-elect simply followed the determination to secure for the conduct of foreign affairs a distinguished lawyer, experienced in administrative affairs, and a statesman upon whose counsel he can rely at the cabinet table.

NO DUTY ON LUMBER

CHAIRMAN PAYNE OF OPINION TARIFF WILL COME OFF.

Practically Whole Committee Said to Agree With Him—Tariff May Also Come Off Farming Implements—Plea for a Coal Duty Comes from Wyoming.

Washington, Dec. 19.—During the examination of Southern lumber manufacturers before the ways and means committee today, Chairman Payne made it very apparent that he is strongly in favor of admitting foreign lumber to American markets free of duty. Mr. Payne has given intimations to this effect heretofore, but never so pointedly as today, when he undertook to lecture a Southern lumberman for asking protection on his product, when he persists in voting the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Payne laid down the doctrine that states that want the benefit of Republican policies, notably protection, should give their support to the Republican party and not continually go Democratic. Only one member of the ways and means committee seems favorable to the retention of the duty on lumber.

"Can you manufacture cheaper than the English and French manufacturers?" asked Mr. Crumpacker, of Indiana.

"I think we can, from the fact that we sell our goods in those countries. We have improved methods in all lines of manufacture in this country, which benefit us in the manufacture of our goods."

Not Affected by Steel Tariff

"You haven't suffered any as a result of the tariff on steel and iron ore?" inquired Mr. Crumpacker.

"I can't see how the tariff can be held responisble for the fluctuation in the prices of steel and iron. It is due to the demand and supply."

The witness said that American manuafcturers of agricultural implements are obliged to pay the maximum tariff in France, while British manufacturers enjoy the benefits of the minimum tariff.

Mr. Metcalf diasgreed with the testimony of H. E. Miles, of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the complaints of several manufacturers of agricultural implements that the cost of materials entering into the manufacture of their products had increased.

Would Open Foreign Markets

Mr. Metcalf declared himself in favor of taking off the tariff on farming implements, saiyng that this would open up the American market to foreign manufacturers, the American manufacturer thereby increasing his export trade, the business being put on an equal basis. He made this suggestion with the proviso that, if any foreign country does not give America the benefit of its lowest tariff, a duty of 20 per cent should be imposed on the agricultural implements from that country.

Representative McKinley, of California, filed a communication from a grower of hops declaring that an increase of 50 per cent in the duty on hops will not reduce the amount of revenue which the government secures from the present importation of hops.

Plea to Retain Coal Duty

Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, speaking in the interest of the coal mining interests of Wyoming, asked that the duty on coal be kept where it is, saiyng that the Rocky mountain miners could not compete with the Canadian coal producers without reducing wages, if the tariff is reduced.

LANE THINKS GOVERNMENT SHOULD CONTROL RAILROADS

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Federal control over the capialtization of railroads and an extension of the powers of the interstate commerce commission were urged by Commissioner Franklin K. Lane in an address here. Declaring that federal control was bound to come, Mr. Lane said:

"I would have every railroad board of directors which issues stocks or bonds record in its minutes the precise purpose for which the securities are issued. Then I would hold the board for all time to a compliance with that purpose. Then if we find that $1,000,000 has been raised for equipment and spent upon Wall street for speculative purposes the directors should be held criminally liable The interstate commerce commission has developed on the part of the railroads a serious respect for the law."

SIXTY-TWO PER CENT PASS TEACHERS EXAMINATION

Olympia, Dec. 21—The work of the November examination of teachers has been completed in the office of the superintendent of public instruction. There were 1,058 applicaitons for certificates forwarded to this office by the several county superintendents of the state. Of the number 855 wrote for certificates, and of these, 532 were successful; 69 certificates were issued upon the accredited papers; 54 permanent first grade certicfiates were issued, and 37 certificates were renewed, making a total of 692 certificates issued at this examination.

NATION IN A FERMENT

NEW GOVERNMENT ORGANIZED AT VENEZUELAN CAPITAL.

Vice President Gomez Casts Out Old Cabinet to Head Off Revolution---Crisis Forces Regent to Act or Forfeit His Office---Castro's Message Farewell.

Port of Spain, Dec. 22.—Vice President J. Vincento Gomez, to whom Gen. Cipriano Catstro handed over the presidency on his departure for Europe, has established a new government in Venezuela. He has replaced the old ministry with a new body of men, who represent various factions in the state, and who have figured prominently in various ways in the country's political history.

Not only has Dr. Jose de Jesus Paul disappeared from the councils of the nation, but Dr. Baldo, who is now traveling in Castro's suite abroad, has also been removed from his official position as minister of education. Gen. Diego Ferren, the minister of war, has been superseded by Gen. Redulo Olivares, who took a prominent part in crushing the revolution six years ago.

Secret advices from Caracas, where the strictest censorship is observed, indicate that the whole of Venezuela has been in a ferment ever since President Castro sailed, and that the crisis was reached a few days ago, when it became necessary for Acting President Gomez to take decisive steps.

The revolutionary factions played a prominent part in the demonstrations against the absent president. These were temporarily checked by a show of force, and later the revolutionary influence, that threatened to sweep the country, was overcome in a measure by promises that could not be held long in abeyance.

Move Not Unexpected

The establishment of a new government in Venezuela has been expected daily, and it is probable that it was the outcome of the demands which began almost the day that Castro sailed for Europe.

Before leaving, Castro, in proclaiming Vice President Gomes his temporary successor, said to the nation:

"Surround him and lend your cooperation in the fulfillment of his mission as if it were myself, and you will have done your duty."

In the same proclamation President Castro gave utterance to what might be taken as a farewell message:

"The Venezuelan nation is already on the road to true prosperity and greatness, because of the strict fulfillment of obligations and the condition of the revenues and because of the state of peace which we enjoy and which it is your duty to maintain, that my work may endure."

On December 1 the people of Caracas arose against Castro. They tore down the statues and pictures of the president and burned them in the public places; they wrecked buildings and applied the torch, sweeping through the city and gathering strength with each new act of violence.

Hand of Gomez Forced

Gomez was far from secure. It was brought forcibly home to him that he must either withdraw from that office or cast aside those of Castro's ministers who were still trying to force the Castro rule upon the people. Apparently he chose the latter course. He first declared the country in a state of defense, thereby securing control of the army, and then appointed new cabinet.

On several other occasions when Castro has turned over the government to Vice President Gomez, it was freely predicted that Gomez would succeed Castro as president of the republic. He had many supporters in the anti-Castro camp, chief of those in favor of his candidacy being Gen. Arando, the former minister of war, who worked earnestly to place Gomez in power.

PULITZER TO SEE CANAL

Will Investigate, Arriving About Same Time as Taft.

Newport News, Va., Dec. 21—Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the New York World accompanied by a party of friends and several staff writers, arrived off Old Point Comfort Saturday in Mr. Pulitzer's yacht Liberty. It is said that he is on his way to Panama to investigate conditions prevailing in the canal zone, and possibly to secure evidence in connction with the purchase of the canal property by the government.

According to inmormation obtained at Old Point the yacht will make the trip by easy stages, the publisher desiring to reach Panama about the same time set for the arrival there of Mr. Taft.

Mr. Pulitzer's trip is of special interest on account of the attitude of Pre ident Roosevelt in demanding that congress have Mr. Pulitzer and other publishers prosecuted for criminal libel for publishing articles attacking the administration in connection with the canal purchase.

CANDY NOT BAD FOR TEETH.

A Dentist on Development and Maintenance of Good Teeth.

In his lecture at the Harvard Medical School, Dr. Charles A. Brackett made it plain that eating confectionery is not particularly conducive to decay. He said that the evil of candy eating on the teeth is much exaggerated, a reasonable amount of sugar being needed in the system for production of heat, especially in cold weather and for hard working people. He commended the action of Queen Victoria in sending large quantities of chocolate to her soldiers in remote places, thereby affording them an element of diet that they needed.

That the teeth that last the longest are necessarily harder than those that decay soonest, he said, does not necessarily follow, and the reverse is often true, the real reason for decay of the teeth being acids in the mouth caused by debris of food that may rest there and become fermented by the micro-organisms that are always in the mouth.

Acids thus created, he said, disintegrate lime salts, and they attack and cause the hardest teeth to decay, if they can but find entrance to the body of the tooth, by means of some natural fissure in the enamel, which is often found in teeth of the very best quality. Hence, he argued, the only sure prevention of decay is the most perfect cleanliness of the mouth, particularly at night, when the opportunity for the microbes to carry on their disintegrating work is much longer than between meals in the daytime.

Dr. Brackett commended an idea of a Philadelphia dentist who takes a contract to preserve the teeth of his patients, charging them a nominal sum to keep their teeth clean by means of a monthly scouring with pumice. So salutary is that simple treatment in their preservation that he voluntarily engages to repair without extra charge any evidences of decay that appear from time to time during his care of the teeth.—Boston Transcript.

Legal Information

In an action for mental suffering caused by the nondelivery of a telegraph message, the law of the place which the contract was made, and in which a part of it was performed, was held to govern, in the case of Johnson vs. W. U. Tel. Co. (Sup. Ct. N. Car.), 57 Southeastern Reporter, 122.

No injunction will lie to restrain the transfer of property of one church to another, where they have formed a union. In the case of Mack vs. Kime, 58 Southeastern Reporter, 184, the Georgia Supreme Court held that, although property rights were involved, they rested upon questions of faith and religious tenets, a decision of which by the highest ecclesiastical tribunal would be held to be conclusive.

The liability of bank officers assigning notes to the bank in lieu of bad debts was considered in State Bank of Pittsburg vs. Kirk, 65 Atlantic Reporter, 932. The bank became insolvent, and the receiver brought an action to recover on the notes. Defendant set up, among other defenses, want of consideration, but the Pennsylvania Supreme Court held that defendant could not now escape liability on the ground that there was no consideration for the notes at their inception.

That ever recurring question, whether recovery may be had under an insurance policy for deaths by suicide, was again adjudicated upon in Davis vs. Supreme Council Royal Arcanum, 81 Northeastern Reporter, 294. Plaintiff contended that insured could not deprive the beneficiary of his rights by misconduct after the issuance of the policy, but the Massachusetts Supreme Court held that the original contract impliedly excepted suicide as a cause of loss, notwithstanding no mention of it was made in the certificate.

In Sopher vs. State, 81 Northeastern Reporter, 913, the trial court held that a liquor license under the Indiana License Law did not authorize the sale of intoxicating liquors for the reason that the State license law was unconstitutional, such traffic being dangerous and hurtful to society. The Indiana Supreme Court reversed this decision, holding that under the common law any person had a right, without license, to sell intoxicants, and that it was a means of livelihood which any one was free to follow.

Random Knowledge.

To substitute acquired common sense, knowledge and reflection for the cruder and tardier processes of learning by hard personal experiences and mistakes, is, of course, the object of all education. In "From Sail to Steam" Capt. A. T. Mahan says that a student reciting, and confronted suddenly with some question or step in a demonstration, which he has failed to master, or upon which he has not reflected, is apt to feel that the practical thing to do is not to admit ignorance; to trust to luck and answer at random.

Such a one, writes Capt. Mahan, explaining a drawing of a bridge to my father, an instructor for many years at West Point, was asked by him what was represented by certain lines, showing the up-stream part of a pier. Not knowing, he replied:

"That is a hole to catch the ice in."

"Imagine," said my father, in telling me the story, "catching all the ice from above in holes in the piers."

A little common sense exercised first, not afterwards, is the prescription against leaping before you look.

YOUNG FOLKS

Jolly Game for the Lawn.

Did you ever play "Flop?"

Well, if not, try it. You will find it one of the jolliest little games you ever participated in. Invite your friends—about a dozen of them—to spend an hour with you on the lawn. Place chairs, one for each guest, in a circle, allowing the backs to be outside, thus letting the guests face the inside of the ring. Have all the guests but one take the seats; the unseated guest —boy or girl—will be asked to take up his or her position inside the circle. When all is in readiness the game is begun by the hostess crying "Flop!" whereupon each seated guest "flops" to the chair to his right, the boy or girl in the center trying to take possession of the vacant chair during the movement. On account of the confusion which follows upon the signal "Flop," the standing one is at a disadvantage, for he cannot see the chair which is to be left vacant one time in half a dozen. The "flopping" continues till he or she is seated, however, and then the boy or girl at his or her right takes the center of the circle and the game begins again.

PLAYING "FLOP."

Everybody Limps.

Do you limp as you walk? Perhaps you think you do not, but a physiologist says that you do; at least, he says that nearly everybody limps a little, because nearly everybody's left leg is shorter than the right. In a large majority of cases the limp is so slight as to be imperceptible, but it is there, all the same. A child's legs, at its birth, are shorter than its arms. The leg bones lengthen chiefly by additions to their ends, caused by the continual formation and ossification of cartilege there during the period of growth. If one of these cartilege caps be injured it may make the leg shorter; or if one of them be stimulated by inflammation, it may make the leg longer. The cartilege caps are constantly stimulated in young people by active exercise, and thus they grow rapidly. If an equal amount of exercise were taken by each leg, the growth would be equal, and one leg would never be shorter than the other. But this is practically impossible, and that is why nearly everybody limps—a little. That reminds the editor that a tailor once told him, as the result of his measuring experience of forty years, that nearly every man has one shoulder a little higher than the other. If you will watch men on the street, you will find this more perceptible than the limp.—Chicago News.

Experiments.

Will had come home from college for a few days, and as it was a rainy day he called his small sister into the library.

"Nothing doing to-day, Bess," he said. "Don't you want me to play with you?"

"You wouldn't care for any of the sit-still games, like dolls and things," complained Bess.

Will thought for a moment. "No, I haven't played dolls since my freshman year in college," he said. "I think I'm rather too old for that now. But once, when I was sick, I got a lot of comfort out of just fussing round with things, and I learned to do some experiments—at least I called them that —and I'll show some of them to you now. First run and get me a silver tablespoon and some string, and I'll teach you how to ring the 'Bells of Cologne.'"

When Bessie had brought them to her brother he took the spoon, tied the thread round the lower part of the handle, and wound the long ends round Bessie's forefingers.

"Now, just put your fingers tight in your ears," he said. "Then stand off and hit the bowl of the spool against the table."

The little girl did as she was told, and her face lighted up with the happiest, most surprised smile! Anyone in the room would have seen only a little girl knocking a spoon with a jingling-jangling noise. but in her ears sounded long, glorious peals of silver bells, each note different, and more beautiful, she thought.

"Do you hear it, Will?" she cried. "Do you hear it, too? Oh, isn't it lovely!"

Her brother smiled. No, I can't hear what you do," he said. You see, that's what they call an experiment in sound. The sound-waves run up from the bowl of the spoon all along the string into your ears."

For a long while Bessie rang the "Bells of Cologne;" then Will showed her how a drop of mercury could be separated into a hundred parts, and yet join together in a round, shining drop that ran round and round the saucer, "just like a quick little silver bug," Bessie said.

"I like experiments, Will," said Bessie. "Don't you know any more?"

'Not any I could do now," said her brother. 'But some time, if you'll soak a piece of shoe thread all night in very, very salt water. and then dry it out, I'll tie a ring to one end of it, and the other end I'll fasten round the electric fixture. Then I'll light it, and let it burn all the way down, and still the ring won't fall."

"Why won't it, Will?" demanded his sister.

"Well, just because the salt crystals are so placed that they are strong enough to bear the weight even when the thread is nothing but ashes. That's all I can tell you now. You'll have to wait until you take a course in chemistry and physics before you really understand."

"And when I get to college I'm going to," said Bessie, as she ran back to ring again her new-found Bells of Cologne.—Youth's Companion.

Logical Spelling.

Here is a clever little take-off on one of the peculiarities of our language:

A queer kind of teaching is taught,
When for catched we are made to say caught;
Then the egg isn't hatched, it is haught;
The coat isn't patched, it is paught;
The horses are not matched, they are maught;
The door isn't latched, it is laught;
The book wasn't snatched, it was snaught;
The roof wasn't thatched, it was thaught;
And the cat never scratched, but she scraught.

ELIGIBLE FOR OFFICE.

The gaze which Mrs. Compton bent upon her husband was a combination of pity and disappointment which only long experience enabled him to support with calmness. "Why, Henry," she said, gently, "we don't refuse to invite women to join our club without some good reason. We have heard this new Mrs. Holland is a gossip, and we don't wish that element in the club."

"Of course not," Mr. Compton assented, gravely; "but what makes you think she's any—why do you believe she's a gossip?"

"It has come very directly to a number of us," said Mrs. Compton, with dignity. "Mrs. Lovett visited near the Hollands' own home, and she says that there was nothing going on in the neighborhood that Mrs. Holland didn't know—her friends told her so."

"Mrs. Lovett says that three or four times during her visit if she asked a question about somebody she met and her friends didn't know, they would say, 'We'll run over and ask Mrs. Holland. She'll be sure to know; she knows everything!'

"Just think, Henry, what a reputation to have in one's native town!"

"Very sad, indeed," said Mr. Compton.

"However," and Mrs. Compton's expression lightened, "Mrs. Lovett says she thinks her friends told her that Mrs. Holland was left an orphan, brought up by an old uncle. She's going to write to make sure. Of course, if that is the case, and the poor thing never had any careful bringing up, why——"

"That alters everything," said Mr. Compton, heartily. "I can see that. I expect to hear she's in line for your presidency after a year or two."

"Henry!" cried Mrs. Compton. "If anybody could ever tell what you'll say next!"

A Good-Wish Rose.

"A clever idea was carried out at a recent 'shower' for a bride-to-be," says Woman's Home Companion. "In the invitation each guest was requested to send in, prior to the party, a wish for the bride. The hostess made a beautiful large whitepaper rose, and before putting it together she wrote on each petal a wish and the name of the wisher. As is usual in most cases, some of the guests forgot to send in a wish, but brought one with them, and others wrote them after they arrived. For this purpose a large paper rosebud had been made, into which the wishes were slipped, and the bud twisted up again. The guest of honor was charmed with the rose and rosebud, and said that she should always keep it as a pleasant reminder of her friends, whom she was soon to leave for a new home in a distant city."

CURIOUS HOTEL CUSTOMS.

Cuss Words a Penny Each at an Edinburg Hotel.

A curious custom prevails at an Edinburgh hotel. Whenever a customer is heard to swear he is required to place a penny in a box on the bar counter. It is not a matter for surprise, says Tit-Bits, that the landlord hears much less bal language than some of his fellow publicans in the capital of Scotland.

The following is a quaint idea for providing funds for picnics and social evenings. It is carried on with much success at an Ashton-on-Mersey inn: A "knocking club" is connected with the inn, and when a customer calls for refreshment he is expected to knock on the table or counter before drinking. If he fails to do this he is fined one penny. Anyone who wrongfully accuses another of breaking this unique rule is also fined. The money thus obtained provides funds for many enjoyable outings and pleasant evenings during the course of the year.

At another hotel, known as the Old Hundred, customers are allowed only one drink. If one is not sufficient to quench their thirst, they are obliged to go out of the hotel and take a walk before they are allowed to have another.

Till recently the proprietor of an old-time hotel in Warwickshire used to invite all his customers to accompany him and his wife to the service at the parish church on Sunday mornings, which was situated on the opposite side of the road, the house being closed while they were away. On returning, each customer was invited to partake of refreshments offered by the hospitable landlord free of charge.

Visitors to a certain hotel in Aberdeenshire who wear brown boots must remember to keep them in their room overnight. Otherwise the boots will be blacked, regardless of the original color of the same. In one of the rooms of a Dumfries public house is an old armchair which is said to have been frequently used by the poet Burns. All who sit in this chair are expected to treat everyone who is in the room at the time, and often the immortal memory of the famous Scottish national poet is drunk.

A small hotel in Wales until quite recently was used by the Catholics as a place of worship on Sundays, and the police court proceedings were held on the premises during the week.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL !

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him: Yes, and let him know
That you love him ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow;
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead ?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go;
Leave them; trust the Harvest giver,
He will make each seed to grow.
So, until life's happy end,
You shall never lack a friend.

J. H. BROWN.

THE CHRISTMAS-TIDE.

Once more the glad Christmas-tide is with us, and the spirit of love and good-will which animates all the world at this joyous season is subtly pervading the atmosphere everywhere. No more inspiring thoughts upon the birth of our Saviour—the greatest gift mankind has ever known—were ever penned than this, from Colliers:

"'Christ's every act,' said the patriot Mazzini to the working men of Italy, 'was the visible symbol of the faith He spoke. . . . Be you such and you will conquer. . . . Preach virtue, sacrifice, and love; and be yourselves virtuous, loving, and ready for self-sacrifice. Speak your thoughts boldly, and bravely name your wants; but without anger and without threats.' At this holiday, when our inspirations are carried to that hour in which the Prince of Peace was born, to that hour which 'no trumpet blast profaned,' we forget our calculations and affairs and ponder the happiness of man. The mind and the emotions are alike extended. 'I have always thought of Christmas time,' said Charles Dickens, 'as a good time; a kind, forgiving, pleasant time; a time when men and women seem by one consent to open their hearts freely.' It is a time which turns us from the moment to eternity: from ambition to sympathy; from controversy to brotherhood. The day, caroling the greatest single influence known to history, bespeaks the birth of dreams and powers, dreams and powers by which the world moves toward the end of soul-hunger and body's pain. As we see the children breathless before the wonder-laden bough, we are as mystified as they, as far transported, for we have a Christmas vision also; we also hold a magic light, and feel how wonderful is being, how beautiful is love.'"

Highly significant of the growth of shipping on these waters is the announcement that the Puget Sound Navigation Company has determined to build a turbine passenger steamer of the speed of 21 knots. The Navigation Company is evidently preparing for a large passenger traffic during the coming season of the A.-Y.-P. Exposition.

IS HAY DISQUALIFIED ?

The filing by lieutenant governor-elect Hay and others of their election expenses, in which are included monies paid newspapers for publishing, prior to the primary election, announcements of candidacy, is causing no end of discussion in the newspapers of the state. Because these men, Mr. Cosgrove, Mr. Mead, Mr. Hay and others paid newspapers for advertising at the late primary they are said to be disqualified from office.

As the Aberdeen World correctly says, the direct primary law, in its newspaper provisions, is an absurdity. It provides, in essence, that a candidate may not pay for newspaper advertising and then proclaims that he can if such advertising is marked "paid advertisement." The situation, as is plain, is anomalous. The Attorney General of State has held that payment by a candidate for use of advertising columns provided such columns were marked "paid advertisement" is entirely in accordance with law. On that showing many candidates in the state, both county and state, paid for newspaper advertising.

Upon this question, attorneys differ. Many construe the law to mean that a candidate may pay for advertising, provided the same is marked paid; but that "inspired" articles, purporting to represent the policy of the paper, but actually paid for by candidates, are barred. Others hold that a candidate who paid for any advertising to further his cause violated the specific terms of the law.

Attorney Sheeks of Aberdeen, who is regarded as an excellent constitutional lawyer, gives as his opinion that every candidate for office who used the newspapers to influence voters violated the law and have made themselves liable under its provisions and are not entitled to take office. He is also of the opinion that the particular part of the law which relates to the matter of advertising is constitutional and that the courts will so hold.

Should the Supreme Court hold that any advertising, though nothing but a simple announcement of candidacy, by a candidate during a primary campaign, disqualifies that candidate from office, should he be elected, then several of the officers-elect of Clallam county are not qualified, and some new means of continuing government will have to be devised.

Whether there is really anything to the discussion or not, the fact remains that the law ought to be so amended as to remove doubt on this matter—that all temptations to avoid its provisions be removed. However, the whole thing is probably a tempest in a teapot and will amount to nothing.

Encouraging reports come from Paso Robles, Cal., to the effect that Governor-elect Cosgrove is improving and his friends feel confident that he will be well enough to leave there for Olympia before many weeks, thus putting a quietus upon the unseemly discussion in the newspapers of who is to be the future governor of the state.

The local post office force has had its hands full all week, handling more mail and more Christmas packages than ever before in the history of the office. Additional force has been employed, and the extra business has been handled expeditiously and quite satisfactorily to all concerned.

TWO PAPERS FOR PRICE OF ONE

Sunday Post-Intelligencer and the Olympic-Leader combined, will be sent one year to any address for $2.50. Regular rate is $2.50 a year for the Sunday P.-I. alone—a paper from 60 to 80 pages. Daily P.-I. is $6.00 a year. The Olympic-Leader and the daily one year for $6.00. The Twice-a-week P.-I. has been consolidated with the Daily and Sunday.

"If the weather is going to continue like this," said John Burns last Monday, "I don't know but that I'm willing to be married to it. When my wife left Cody the potatoes had frozen in the ground and they were having zero weather, not very cold at that. The finest thing about this place is the absence of wind; it seems marvelous that we never had even a light breeze when those two severe storms swept up the Sound a few days ago."

"This is the first time I've ever lived in a place," said Rev. J. M. Hixon, also a recent arrival in Angeles, in reply, "where one didn't hear the 'creak, creak, creak' of every footstep as he walked along the street. I think I'm going to like it." And the writer glanced up to the snow and crags, then showing thru a rift in the clouds that hung over Mt. Angeles, and thought of the snow shovel and coal hod, "back in Iowa," and wondered that a man who had once spent a winter in this country could ever return to the regions of 40 below and 110 above.

An alarm of fire stirred the community Saturday night about 9 o'clock as an alarm from the business section generally does, owing to the feeling that if a fire gets started in this section it all goes. As usual however, fortune favored us and the town still stands. The fire was at the Globe Hotel, one of the curtains in the front catching fire and lighting up the street for a short time. It seems that an enamoured lover sought in various abodes his lost love, and finally, believing her to be in a room off the parlor at the Globe, proceeded to investigate. He couldn't get in at the door, so he went to the piazza and raised the window. It was dark within, he struck a match, with the result the curtain caught and he was quite severely burned. The culprit was arrested and on Monday was arraigned before Justice Fields, after spending two nights in the jail. He was fined one dollar and costs amounting to $7.65, and agreed to pay the damages of the fire, in amount $25.00.

The reception held by Mrs. Peter Grubb at the Hotel parlors Friday afternoon was a delightful affair and very largely attended. The parlors were beautifully decorated, green and gold being the prevailing colors, with large boquets of immense white chrysanthemums and holly. Mrs. Grubb was assisted in receiving by Mesdames Payne and A. A. Smith; her daughter, Mrs. Remp, who was to have received with her, was called away by telegram and was unable to return Friday. Very dainty refreshments were served, the tea table being presided over by Mrs. T. T. Aldwell, assisted by Mrs. Elmer Fisher. Vocal solos by Mesdames Mead, Troy and Day, with Mrs. Payne accompanist, added to the afternoon's enjoyment.

If You Love Your Wife

Make life easy and pleasant for her. Is her home all you can make it? Will "fancy stuff" please her as much as some of the beautiful and substantial things she so much desires?

A few suggestions:

That new Rug your wife has wanted so long for the parlor or bedroom — we've some beauties.

A Morris Chair—solid comfort, will be enjoyed and appreciated for years.

A Sewing Chair, a Folding Table, a Carpet Sweeper— has she all the many household conveniences that make work easy?

A Kitchen Cabinet, a Kitchen Cupboard—has she them?

Surely she's not using an old, burned-out stove? Buy her a Range, and she may rise up and call you blessed.

A Couch, a Brass Bedstead, a Library Table, an Ostermoor Mattress, a Sideboard, a Dining Table, and there are dozens of smaller inexpensive articles that would prove just the thing.

Carving Sets, Silverware, Chafing Dishes, Fine China. There's no end to the suggestions we could make from our large and varied stock.

We have DOLL CABS, DOLL CRADLES, DOLL BEDS, DOLL CHAIRS (Mission), DOLL CHAIRS (Painted), DOLL FOLDING TABLES, SETS OF DISHES, SHOOFLY ROCKING HORSES, ETC., ETC. VIM HAND CARS, WABASH COASTERS EXPRESS WAGONS, WHEEL BARROWS, AIR GUNS, ETC.

" THE HOUSE OF QUALITY "

The Women's Parliamentary Club met in very pleasant social session at the home of Mrs. John C. Hansen last Saturday afternoon, the occasion being a farewell reception tendered to Mesdames E. J. Nailor and O. M. Sheppard.

The rooms were prettily decorated in the Christmas colors, red and green. In the dining room especially, the color scheme was beautifully carried out Streamers of red and green were festooned from the corners of the ceiling to the chandelier in the center, while beside each plate was placed a bit of Christmas greenery tied with red ribbon, suggestive of the good cheer of the Christmas tide.

After a short time spent in social chat, Mrs. Smith entertained the guests with a unique guessing contest. As a result, Mrs. Hopkins captured the first prize, while the booby fell to Mrs. Nailor.

After the contest the ladies were ready for the dainty refreshments which are always in evidence when the Club congregates. The time spent at the table was enlivened by the comical anecdotes and incidents related by each guest in turn.

Before the ladies left the table the President of the club, on behalf of the members, presented each guest of honor with a handsome silver meat fork. When the ladies addressed had responded, all retired to the parlor, where, after joining hands and singing "Auld Lang Syne," the afternoon's pleasure came to an end. *

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR

The present and past management of the Pacific Store Company wishes you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

This store will close for good on the evening of the 31st of this month, unless we can induce someone to continue the business.

There is room in Port Angeles for another good live dry goods merchant. If any of you desire to go into business, here is a good opportunity.

Remember everything must be sold by the end of this month. You can buy the stock at a great sacrifice.

Thanking you one and all for your liberal patronage and good will,
Very truly yours,

LADY ATTENDANTS

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

What Is Poor Man to Do.

In office, store and stifling factory air,
In laundry, kitchen, restaurant, everywhere,
The female toiler works and ofttimes slaves;
And many thousands to untimely graves
Are pushed by competition's fierce, relentless pace.

The timid female of our mother's placid day
To Amazonian restlessness gives way;
"L" train and Subway bear a rush-hour throng
Of petticoated workers pushing men along—
Maid, wife and widow entered in the gruelling race.

Short-sighted males, with profit as their aim,
Hire women cheaply to advance their game;
And by their action, their descendants rob—
For each three working women destroy one man's job.

Exercise Not for Women.

A famous physician of late has been calmly pointing out to women the foolishness of physical exercise as a means of resting the mind. He says emphatically that the old theory is is all nonsense—that the mind cannot rest when the body is tired. He says that the practice of taking a long walk at a fast trot when one has done a hard day's work is entirely the wrong thing to do. In his words, "It adds one fatigue to another." He does not believe in strenuous exercise for mentally overworked people.

Another belief of his will cause more excitement and discussion than any other. "Women," he says, "who do not indulge in physical exercise live longer than men." He does not think women need exercise. This is a daring statement to make in the middle of a generation that is absolutely given over to the exercise fad. He is not alone in this belief, however, for a number of women who have gone to rack and ruin through physical exercise agree with his theory. Too many women have become useless burdens through over-exercising for this statement to be entirely denied. The theory that athletics gave grace to a woman has been discarded and there is quite a good deal of support given in high quarters to the new theory that heavy exercise unfits a woman for living her life.

The doctor says that plenty of fresh air day and night and one hour's walk is enough for any woman. Regarding the subject of the annual vacation for women the doctor says: "Nine out of ten women feel worse after a vacation than when they started and are unable to resume work properly. A woman does not need a long rest, but a great number of short ones. It is better to rest four separate half hours a day than to go like mad through the week and rest sixteen hours on Sunday. It is better to divide the twelve months of work into stated half holidays rather than take two months after ten months of exhaustion."

DAME FASHIONS DECREES

Sleeves cannot grow any smaller.

All the latest coats are directoire.

Millinery wings are larger than ever.

Long lines characterize every garment.

The big pillow muff supersedes all others.

In belts proper elastic will be the most popular.

Not for years has parted hair been so fashionable.

The one-piece dresses lead all others in popularity.

The neck outline of bodices is likely to grow higher.

Padded pipings with soutache are leading decorations.

Only the skimpiest of petticoats are allowed with long skirts.

Cozy little fur coats are to be ideal wear for youngsters.

New skirts are generally plain, while bodices are highly ornate.

Green tulle is used in big bows at the neck or some place on the hat.

There is no abatement of the rage for taupe color and amethyst shades.

The Psyche knot is now much in vogue and looks well with the new turban.

Fur wraps for evening wear are cut three-cornered like the old-fashioned shawl.

Skirts are to be no longer, but we are likely to see a new outline on the train.

The coats that belong to dressy suits or those worn with elaborate gowns are very long.

When Is a Woman Old?

A Chicago young women's club has drawn the line against women over 40 years of age, on the theory that a woman past 40 is no longer to be classed as young. Naturally there is a vigorous protest, and many of the members threaten to resign. Of course there is no disgrace in old age—rather honor in it. Age is one of the very few things over which we have no control whatever, and for which we are neither to be blamed nor credited. Old age is honorable because it is the result of long right living. The vicious, the careless and the slothful never attain it.

It is by right living, by obedient observance of the laws of nature, that we not only live to be old but seem to be younger than we really are. It is just as much a matter of pride for one to look and feel like 40 at 60 as it is for one to be hale at 90. Though there is no disgrace in growing old, there is decided inconvenience in it, economically, physically and socially. The woman who feels 40 naturally does not like to be classified and associated with women who feel 60. If she is bright and young in spirit she wants to continue to be so regarded by bright and young people. Vanity really has very little part in it. The woman's happiness and her sympathetic relationship with the young and vigorous depend on it. She has a right to insist that she be taken at the age she feels and shows.

For Conversation Party.

Twelve good topics that will be amusing as well as entertaining are here given:

Should women vote?
What would you do with a million dollars?
How to keep house on $10 a week.
How to be happy though married.
How to be happy though single.
Is a college education necessary?
What was your most thrilling experience?
Tell the best joke ever played on you.
Should the girls propose?
What is your favorite hobby?
What trip would you rather take?
Who is your favorite novelist?

Secret of Nervous Balance.

Rev. Samuel McComb has written a few rules to guide a woman in keeping her nervous balance. Here they are:

Cultivate sound, health-creating emotion—love, joy, peace, faith and hope.

Allow yourself sufficient time in which to do your work. Hold in reserve a surplus stock of nervous energy by keeping within the limit of your organization.

Do one thing at a time. Prepare yourself in good season for sleep. Trust in the infinite goodness of God, who loves every creature He has made.

The Laced Overskirt.

A designer has brought out a new thing in the way of tunics. It is cut circular, is a trifle high waisted and instead of having a box plait down the side it is slashed open, finished with a two-inch hem at the edge, and is then laced from side to side through silk-covered eyelets. Silk or velvet ribbon is used.

The Correct Time for Bathing.

The morning is the best time for a cold-water bath, a tepid one morning or night, but a hot-water bath should be taken just before retiring, inasmuch as it is relaxing. Never bathe just after a hearty meal. Bathe regularly every day.

The Soul Reader.

According to a new oracle, human beings are divided into two distinct categories, the free individual and the collective type. The free individual bears the inprint of absolute value; the collective type is indelibly marked with the signs of relative value. It is chiefly through the eyes, the mirrors of the soul, that a new occultist reads the depths of our inner natures. If the eye is luminous, the mind is full of light; if the eye is troubled, vague or dull, the individual is somber and shadowy. The clear, transparent and profound eye reveals the genius of the sower or the charmer; the hard and cold eye shows the power of the dominator, of the director or the vanquisher.

Effective Evening Gown.

Use Soda in Dishwashing.

Washing soda can make dishwashing easier. Sprinkle one teaspoonful in the roasting pan, put in plenty of water, and let boil a few minutes. Even the corners will be found to be free from grease. Covers, frying pans, bread tins, can be cleaned by boiling for a few minutes in this solution. Silver, too, can be cleaned by boiling it a minute or two in a weak solution of washing soda. Rinse in clean, hot water and wipe with soft cloth or chamois.

Have Inviting Hall.

Many persons think that because a hall is merely an entrance, or passage, it may be bare and unfurnished. On the other hand, the hall is the entrance to the home, and may be considered as offering the hospitality of the house. If so regarded, it should be cheerful and inviting, even though in city houses there is little opportunity for a display of taste and skill. At least it is always possible to secure a warm, hospitable color.

Rubber-soled Shoes.

Women who are good walkers and who do not fear the roads or pavements in any kind of weather, have rubber soles put on their walking shoes. This also prevents fatigue, as rubber is lighter to walk in than the ordinary heavy rubber sole. Rubber caps are also added to heels to make walking easier. They are said to prevent a constant vibration to the spine.

Cleanliness Is Necessary.

The scalp, like the rest of the body, to be kept healthy, must be kept clean. Shampoo your hair once every two weeks if it is inclined to be oily, and about once a month if it is the least bit dry.

IMPROVED LABOR CONDITIONS.

By Vice President Fairbanks.

C. W. FAIRBANKS.

There has been during the past few years a very noticeable improvement in labor conditions. This has been due in a large degree to the perfection and influence of labor organizations and to the cooperation of many thousands who have believed that the improvement of the conditions of labor was a matter of the very first importance to the great body of our citizenship. Such gratifying improvement is due to a wide discussion of labor's interests and to the education of the people as to its condition and as to its real and just needs.

In the earlier days those who advocated an improvement of the conditions of labor and sought to enact laws for its protection were regarded by many as agitators, as encroaching upon certain vested or natural rights of employers. Much progress has been made since then. The reforms which have been effected and which are now generally regarded as just, the improvement of conditions in many hazardous undertakings for the protection of the persons and lives of operatives, the improvement of insanitary conditions which surround many places of labor and other improvements are proof of the wisdom of organized effort and of discussion.

SCOPE OF MAN'S WORK.

By Prof. Kenyon L. Butterfield.

The sharp distinction sometimes drawn between vocational studies and culture studies is already being modified. Some time it may be obliterated. Probably we shall have a new definition of culture. At any rate, vocation hereafter is to be glorified not only for what it contributes to national and individual prosperity, but for its educational possibilities. Vocation is not merely technique. It is not merely breadwinning. At its best it is a form of social service in which the whole man is engaged. It relates itself to most of the individual demands for growth and even more vitallly to the social demands of family and of state and of civil society. Hence we shall discover a way of making vocational training also a liberal training. Agriculture is to be amply recognized in the schools. If agriculture, properly defined and taught, is efficient educational material, both city and country boy may profit by it, the one because he will reach a knowledge of and a sympathy with nature not easily secured in any other way, the other because he is utilizing his environment—physical, industrial and social—as a means of education.

"PINK TEA" DIPLOMACY.

By Spencer Eddy, U. S. Minister to Argentina.

The old conception placed on diplomacy by Americans is fast disappearing. It has not been so many years back since the impression prevailed that a diplomatic post was nothing more than a medium through which our country maintained its social entente cordiale with other nations. And this interpretation of the functions of the office was held also by the men in the service themselves. But men of pink tea proclivities are no longer wanted in the service.

A school for instruction for those who wish to enter the service, conducted on the lines of some institution like West Point or Annapolis, would raise the standard of American diplomatists still further. It is impossible for a youngster to jump into the field and compete with older heads, but with three years of hard training in such a school he would be fully qualified for the work cut out.

LACK OF POLICE SUPERVISION.

By President Eliot of Harvard.

PRESIDENT ELIOT.

In no other civilized country of the world is there such absence of effective police supervision as in the United States. One must say that there is none in country districts and that in urban districts it is ordinarily ineffective. Even well-known members of the criminal class are under no effectual control, and by merely changing from time to time their field of operations often succeed in preying on the community for years. The law has no strong arm.

THE DAISY-FIELD.

Man looked upon the sky by night,
And loved its tender azure, bright
With many a softly beaming light;
And sang his Maker's praises.

"The sun declares Thee in Thy dread;
But from the stars Thy peace is shed:
Would that by day they comforted!"
God heard; and made the daisies.

All in a firmament of green
Their golden orbs now float, serene,
Twinkling with rays of silvery sheen,
To comfort him who gazes.

Back Home

When Alzora Dunn had shaken the dust of Brattleville from her feet—literally, for it was a hot, dry summer—and departed for Chicago, Gus Mitchell of course had been at the railroad station to see her off.

Brattleville boasted only 700 inhabitants and the celluloid collar was still regarded with favor in its society circles. Around his celluloid collar Gus wore a narrow black string tie with crumpled ends and there was a photograph button of Alzora in the lapel of his coat. He also had abalone shell cuff links. In spite of this he had a good, square jaw and a look in his eyes that a woman could trust. He had a heroic smile on his face as he crushed Alzora's fingers at parting.

"You're sure, Zory?" he asked, a trifle tremulously. "There isn't any hope for me? You don't care?"

For an instant Alzora Dunn, her yellow hair shining in the sun, her pretty, frivolous face pink with the excitement of her departure, felt a sudden qualm. Ever since she could remember Gus had tagged around after her. Of course she liked him—but marry him, never!

Of late she had felt that she was born to shine in higher circles. The letters of a girl friend who had gone to Chicago and was a clerk in the store where a position now awaited Alzora had caused her to look at Brattleville with scornful eyes. She shuddered to think that she might still be stupidly measuring ribbons in Gus Mitchell's father's general store had it not been for Carrie's letters.

When Alzora spoke to Gus at parting it was as from a great height, bending down to one in a lowly rut, one for whom she had a friendly, pitying regard.

"No, Gus,' she said. "I like you and all that—but I don't love you!"

The train whistled long as it spun across the bridge. As Gus Mitchell stood watching it with a lump in his throat he thought of Alzora at picnics, at parties, in his buggy, laughing up at him. He had felt she cared for him and it came hard.

Alzora rarely thought of Gus the first few weeks in Chicago. The newness, the excitement, the rush dominated her entirely, and underneath ran the current of expectation. Hadn't a girl at the white goods counter upstairs married only the previous week a traveling man who made $2,000 a year. There were six in Alzora's family and never had her father's income exceeded $900. Only two—and $1,000 each to spend! Not that Alzora was distinctly mercenary, but such things were like fairy tales to her.

It was not long before the floorwalker in her department began finding that the best vantage point for him was near Alzora's counter. At first it made her nervous, for the girls stood rather in awe of him. Then her coquetry asserted itself when she found nine times out of ten that if she looked up he was looking at her.

"Gee. Hatton's struck, isn't he?" Carrie said to her at last. "Never noticed a girl before—too stuck-up for us! He can't keep his eyes off you!"

Alzora blushed. Hatton was very tall and stiff, like a clothier's dummy, and wore marvelous collars and wonderful neckties. No one would ever connect the idea of abalone shell cuff links with him. One knew by instinct that he wore links of plain gold. He had beautiful pink finger nails. He looked like the heroes in the paper novels Alzora had read as a school girl, and when it came about that he got introduced and called upon her she was very happy.

She remembered Gus only as belonging to some far-off hazy existence that made her shudder to recall, because it grated on her nerves. Mr. Hatton always said "one" does so-and-so instead of "you" no matter how many times it occurred in a sentence, and he called Alzora "dear child." He took her to the theater once a week and brought her candy.

HE HAD BEAUTIFUL PINK FINGER NAILS.

"You're a perfect wonder," Carrie told her, enviously. "It's because you're so pretty! Copping out a swell one like that the first thing! Wouldn't he howl at Gus? Ah, my! Think of Gus and Mr. Hatton!"

Alzora laughed, but she felt ashamed of herself because she remembered that look in Gus' eyes, but she dreamed roseate dreams as to what she would do when she was Mrs. Hatton. It meant a six-room flat at least and a girl and a new tailor suit twice a year and gloves to match, always.

When Gus wrote she put his letters aside and neglected to answer them. She could think of nothing to say.

It was quite by accident one day that Alzora went into the stockroom just before closing time and across the room saw Mr. Hatton seize a small boy in overalls who had stumbled against him. He shook the boy violently, cuffed his ears and swore at him, then in his hurry stumbled over a box and swore some more. His face was black and ugly. He flushed as he met Alzora and then his countenance cleared magically. He was suave, polite and majestic as usual when he spoke to her.

"Are you going to be at home this evening?" he asked. His very presence dared her to remember him as he had been two minutes before.

"No, I—I shan't be home to-night," Alzora heard herself stammering as she turned and fled.

She felt of a sudden very homesick and afraid and disillusioned. What would it be to have one's husband look at one that way when he was annoyed—or speak that way?

For a long time Alzora sat in the dark at her window thinking that night and then she turned up the gas and, getting out Gus' letters, sat down and answered them. It was almost as good as talking to him.—Chicago Daily News.

INDIA'S HIDDEN WEALTH.

Effort Will Be Made to Invest Millions Now in Concealment.

Some hundreds of millions of British capital have been invested in Indian railways, but the Hindoos themselves have not been buyers of railway stocks and bonds, says the Baltimore Sun. The money for the development of their natural resources has come from abroad, with the result that the annual interest payments have to be made abroad. It would be much better for these interest payments to be made at home, and it is now proposed to draw for future loans upon the vast stores of gold and silver known to be hoarded by the natives.

An official commission, charged with the task of considering the whole question of Indian railway finance, has recently reported that the annual capital expenditure of the government in the construction of railways should be increased from $50,000,000 to $62,500,000. "No definite limit," says the report, "can be assigned to the amount that can be remuneratively devoted to the development and expansion of the Indian railway system." An Indian official accordingly urges that an effort be made to enlist native capital in the government's remunerative enterprises.

It is estimated that $1,500,000,000 in gold and perhaps as much in silver is hidden away in the Hindoo stocking. Vast quantities of the precious metals are known to be kept in the form of personal ornaments. From time immemorial India has been a reservoir into which the precious metals have flowed from all quarters of the globe, only to disappear from statistics. Could the idle wealth be drawn upon, the effect on the industrial and commercial life of the country would be very great.

It is, therefore, a matter of concern to try to turn India's dormant capital to active use. It may be impossible to do it. The oriental mind views everything in a way incomprehensible to westerners. But if only a tithe of the concealed hoards of India were vitalized, a new aspect might be given to the conditions of life in England's great eastern empire.

If you give a boy a red wagon, don't give to yourself at the same time the right to criticise him for what he does with it.

THE NAUGHTY GOAT.

Although our grandfathers and perhaps their grandfathers before them, were amused by trained animals of one kind or another, it is only recently that goats have been "educated" for exhibition purposes. Horses, dogs, lions and monkeys have been performing their tricks in public for at least a couple of centuries, but the trained goat, says a successful modern trainer, is a present day product. He is not hard to train, but is often difficult to manage in front of an audience.

As in the case of all trained animals the feats that look so remarkable on the stage are really things that a goat does naturally in a different environment. The same balancing power that enables a goat to stand on a sharp-pointed rock enables it to stand on the top of a bottle, and the same agility that helps it to leap from one rock to another helps it to leap through a paper-covered hoop or over rows of chairs. The trainer patiently teaches a goat to balance, jump, stand on its hind legs, and so forth, at certain definite signals, rewards it with a lump of sugar when it is obedient, and whips it when it is obstinate. The result, after a long period of patient labor, is a goat that can be expected to do tricks in public provided the trainer can keep control of it.

But what makes the goat hard to manage in public is something that seems like a sense of humor combined with remarkable intelligence.

The goat learns that its trainer does not like to whip it at any time, because a trained goat is too valuable to be mistreated. But more than that, it discovers that the trainer will not whip a goat in public. The audience would invariably side with the goat. So the moment the goat gets in front of the audience it is likely to turn disobedient Feats performed readily enough at rehearsal it will try to dodge during the performance, and instead of staying quietly in its place when not performing, it will now and then plague the trainer by trying to run away from the stage and get back to the stable.

There are often minor changes in the performance of a troupe of trained goats that are quite unsuspected by the audience.

Sometimes a goat gets so unmanageable that the trainer has to enlist the sympathy of the spectators by explaining matters. There was a trained goat once that became day by day more and more unreliable, until there came a performance when the educated animal refused to do anything whatever. The trainer was in despair, and the goat apparently laughing at him. The goat had to be disciplined. The man knew it must be disciplined there and then, or it would become utterly worthless, and the training would have to begin all over again. He turned to the audience.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "here I've got a very bad goat. I don't want to punish him. You don't want me to punish him, and he knows it. Goats are like children. If they're not punished just when they misbehave it's no use punishing them afterwards. With your permission, I'm going to give this fellow one good touch of the whip and make a well behaved goat of him."

He held up a hoop for the goat to jump through. The goat merely looked at it and then at the audience. The trainer swung his whip and the lash curled sharply round the goat's hind quarters. With an expression of surprise and disgust the animal jumped through the hoop.

"Thank you, ladies and gentlemen," said the trainer. "Now that goat'll believe that an audience is always on my side and I shall not have any more trouble with him."—Youth's Companion.

Long Men Wanted.

The records in the war department in Washington are as a rule very dry, but occasionally an entry is found that is humorous.

An officer of engineers in charge of the construction of a road that was to be built through a swamp, being energetic himself and used to surmounting obstacles, was surprised when one of his young lieutenants whom he had ordered to take twenty men and enter the swamp said that he could not do it—the mud was too deep. The colonel ordered him to try. He did so and returned with his men covered with mud.

"Colonel, the mud is over my men's heads. I can't do it."

The colonel insisted and told him to make a requisition for anything that was necessary for a safe passage. The lieutenant made his requisition in writing and on the spot. It was as follows:

"I want twenty men eighteen feet long to cross a swamp fifteen feet deep."—Harper's Weekly.

Irish Economy.

"Begorra," said Patsy, "Oi couldn't pay me five shillin's foine and Oi had to go to jail for six days."

"An' how much did yez spend to get drunk?" asked Mike, rather sarcastically.

"Oh, about five shillin's."

"Yez fool, if yez had not spent yez five shillin's for drink yez'd had yer five shillin's to pay yer foine wid."—Everybody's.

INFLUENCE OF A BAD WATCH.

Peculiar Psychological Idea Over Which One Rich Man Is Studying.

Does the theory that one person influences, subconsciously, other persons extend to inanimate objects and subjects, and will a watch of irregular habits influence the character of the person wearing it and contaminate that person? is the psychological idea over which M. W. Mather, millionaire, is studying, according to the San Francisco Call.

Mather owns a silver watch that he found somewhere and retained, although of practically no value; perhaps it cost $10. Mather also has to employ a bookkeeper to keep track of his income—that is, he has had several bookkeepers, but not at the same time. Each bookkeeper has come well recommended and possessed of exemplary habits. When the first bookkeeper who figures in this story took the position he had no watch, so Mather loaned him the silver watch that had been lying in the safe.

The watch had distinctly bad habits—it would not keep track of the time correctly. Pretty soon Mather began to hear reports about his bookkeeper which, while entertaining, were not edifying. If such a thing were possible, he was outdoing the watch in irregularity, and consequently was allowed to resign, and another man was given the place.

The newcomer was a man of great promise and as a mark of his confidence Mather allowed him to carry the watch. One day this bookkeeper failed to appear on the scene and an examination of his accounts gave a key to the reason. The investigation that followed proved that he had been sowing a large and fruitful crop of wild cereals. Then came bookkeeper No. 3 and in his case it was the same story as with No. 1 and No. 2 and he had to go.

"I have another bookkeeper," said Mather yesterday, "but the watch is where he cannot possibly get it and so long as he is in my employ he is not going to get it. I amagine that some time in its past the watch belonged to a wild, ungovernable individual who imparted his character and his power for evil to the timepiece."

The State of North Carolina is one of the most notable in the Union for the production of gems, particularly diamonds, emeralds, rubies, aquamarines, beryls, hiddenite, rhodolite, amethysts and remarkable rock crystals. These gems have been found mainly in the course of mining operations, although a few systematic searches for them have been made and two companies are now engaged exclusively in such work.

A British lieutenant in the Second Battalion Lincolnshire Regiment, who was lately called "Leo Quintus Tollemache-Tollemache de Orellana Plantagenet Tollemache-Tollemache," gave notice a short time ago by means of advertisement that he has renounced the names of Quintus Tollemache-Tollemache Plantagenet Tollemache, and intends henceforth upon all occasions and at all times to sign and use and be called and known by the name of Leo de Orellana Tollemache only.

Count von Zeppelin, the aeronaut, was born in 1838, and devoted what are for most men the best years of life to military service. Retiring in 1880 with the rank of general, he turned with a boyish enthusiasm to the pursuit of his hobby, aerial navigation. To the solution of the problem which had baffled the investigators of two centuries he sacrificed his fortune, with little apparent progress toward the goal. Poverty spurred him to greater exertion. In 1892 he made a successful balloon journey from Berne to Lucerne, but his work was lightly esteemed until 1900, when the surprising success of the first dirigible caused a genuine sensation. Since that time his progress has been easier.

As long ago as 1795 a Leipsic house published a German novel illustrated by something closely resembling a Roentgen picture. The story tells of the Countess Abillinia, who gave her heart to the knight Gibello. The knightly lover was thoughtless enough to kill his lady love's father, her affection turned to hatred, she vowed to kill him. In a dream she saw the man who had fascinated her, and she stood, ready to slay him, when suddenly the form changed, and before her stood a grinning skeleton saying, "I have already been punished." This scene is illustrated in the old book, and the picture is not unlike a Roentgen photograph. When it was published no one probably would have believed that science within a comparatively short time would make it possible to produce this picture, which the author's imagination invented.

Probably no reader has the least idea what is the total amount of imprisonment to which offenders in this country are sentenced every year. The figures are remarkable. In round numbers 950 people receive sentences of 4,200 years' penal servitude and 195,000 people receive sentences of 16,600 years' imprisonment. That is a total of 20,800 years. What a dreadful loss this is to the country! Not only have all these people to be fed, clothed, housed, guarded, but they are practically idle—or, at least, their work is of little value. The great majority of them are in the prime of working life, aged from 20 to 60.

$10.00 for an Experience

We will pay for original recipes from your experience with Electric Floating Soap.

In the busy days of the housewife many little cleaning problems come up which are made easy by the use of Electric Floating Soap. We know of scores of them; we want to know of more. We want you to tell us in not more than 150 words about cleaning work you have found Electric Floating Soap especially good for. It can be a time-saving way you have found washing woodwork, or glassware, or fabrics—no idea will be excluded because of its simplicity.

We will pay for every recipe received.

For the best one we will pay $10.00 in cash; for the second best $5.00; and for the next ten best, $1.00 each. To others we will send a useful premium—a beautiful picture ready for framing.

There are no strings to this offer; no "ifs" or "maybes," and no limit to the number of recipes that may be submitted by any one person. The only condition is that we want the information to be from actual experience with the soap, so send with each recipe five wrappers from Electric Floating Soap.

This offer closes Jan. 15th, 1909, and awards will be made Feb. 1st.

Charlotte Russe Filling.

Beat the white of one egg until dry, add one-half cup powdered sugar gradually. Beat one cup of double cream, add one teaspoonful extract orange or vanilla or two tablespoonfuls claret and beat until it sticks to the bottom of the dish, then fold in the egg and sugar. Chill before using for a filling. This recipe gives plenty to fill a three-pint mold.

Apple Desert.

Bake two layers of cake of two eggs, one-quarter cup of butter, one-half cup sugar, one-quarter cup milk, one teaspoon baking powder, sifted with enough flour to make a thin batter, flavor with vanilla. Put some stewed apples between the layers and some on top, covered with whipped cream; garnish with stewed prunes; let stand for two hours before serving.

John Morrisey, Administrator of the Estate of Adam Weidinger, Deceased, and John Cain, Trustee, plaintiffs, vs. Wm. A. Lange and Minna Lange, husband and wife, Minni Lange and C. A. Muench, defendants.

Under and by virtue of a Writ of Execution issued out of and under the seal of the Superior Court of the State of Washington, holding terms at Port Angeles, in and for said county, on the 15th day of December, A. D., 1908, upon a judgment rendered in said court on the 14th day of December, A. D., 1908, in avor of John Morrisey, Administrator of the Estate of Adam Weidinger, deceased, et al., and against William A. Lange and Minna Lange, husband and wife, for the sum of Twenty-six Hundred and Thirty and 25-100 Dollars, together with attorney's fees, interest, costs and increased costs, and to me directed and delivered, commanding me to sell the following described property to satisfy said judgment, to-wit:

The northeast quarter of the northeast quarter [NE¼ of NE¼] the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter [SE¼ of SE¼ of NE¼] and the north half of the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter [N½ of SE¼ of NE¼] of Section twenty-one [21]; the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter [SE¼ of SW¼ of NW¼], and the west half of the southwest of the northwest quarter [W½ of SW¼ of NW¼] of Section twenty two [22], in Township thirty [30] North, Range Six [6] West of the Willamette Meridian, in Clallam County, Washington, containing one hundred [100] acres according to government survey.

Now Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That on Saturday, the 16th day of January, A. D. 1909, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, I will sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said judgment, together with attorney's fees, interest, costs and increased costs, in all amounting to the sum of $2,655 90.

Said sale will take place at the front door of the court house in Port Angeles, in said county and state, and will be at public auction, for cash in hand to the highest and best bidder.
