NAVAL LODGE PLEASES GUESTS

"WHATEVER'S RIGHT" IS NOW STATE LODGE SLOGAN

Visitors Gave Unstinted Praise to Local Lodge for Excellent Entertainment Provided.

Wednesday morning, August 10th, opened bright and pleasant, save for a heavy fog that hung over the waters of the bay, and Port Angeles people stood ready and expectant with open hands and generous hearts to welcome and receive the throng of strangers who came to tarry within the gates of our city during the three days of the annual meeting of the State Association of Elks. For days the work of preparation had gone on and everything was in readiness when the Iroquois arrived, about 2 p. m., with the first delegation of visiting Elks, their wives and friends.

Front street presented a gala appearance, decorated in holiday attire, purple and white, the colors of the Order of Elks, predominating, above all being the stars and stripes. The preparation for turning night into day on Front street was also elaborate, wires being strung on both sides of the street from Oak to Lincoln and on Laurel from First street to the Morse dock, on which were strung incandescent electric lights, also of purple and white.

The three hotels, the opera house front, the Aldwell Block, and the local Elks' lodge room building were, perhaps, the most elaborately decorated buildings in town, showing the handiwork of an imported expert trimmer. The interior of the Elks lodge room and the assembly hall of the opera house, where the State Association of Elks business meetings were held, were also very tastily and beautifully decorated.

Among the most attractive and elaborate window decorations was the "Niche in the Hall of Fame" at the R. D. Willson Hdw. Co.'s store. where a large elk carrying an immense pair of antlers poked his head into the draped window of purple and white, with a large jardiniere of purple and white asters occupying the center of the widow, the design originating with Mrs. Willson. Novel clocks, made of tin pans, nails being used for the figures on the dials, jack knives for weights and watches for pendulums, hung on either side of the window. Above were the letters B. P. O. E., constructed of brass padlocks and keys on a purple background.

All three of the drug stores made a specialty of window decoration. In one of Nailor's windows was an ideal mountain scene with hills and dale, made of ferns, grasses and evergreens. On a high eminence overlooking a cool, sparkling mountain stream, stood the sentinel elk while the herd quietly grazed in the valley below.

Mathewson's windows, artistically trimmed in the ever present purple and white, were made attractive with a fine display of novelties. Large jardineres, filled with immense bouquets of Shasta daisies graced each window.

Fisher's store was headquarters for Elks official souvenir badges and souvenir elk postal cards, his show windows being prettily arranged in a display of these articles.

The H. Gutenburg Hdw. & Fur. Co.'s windows were of especial interest. The windows were tastefully draped in purple and white with a large mounted elk head for a center piece, a stand of arms on one side, (the famous Winchester repeating rifle) a large hunting scene on the other, and in addition an artistic arrangement of cartridges, dog whistles and other sporting goods.

One of the most admired and attractive looking windows was Mrs. Jameson's. A large doll, beautifully gowned in purple satin was saluting a white goat, with the familiar slogan, "Welcome Bill." The background was a most artistic arrangement of purple and white drapery dotted over with touches of flowers.

P. J. Williams' window was a bower of matchless beauty and dazling richness with its array of sparkling gems, cut glass, sterling silverware, jardineres of fragrant Port Angeles roses and profusion of purple clematis blossoms.

The Phelps Dry Goods Store was tastefully draped on the outside in purple and white bunting, while a pretty display of millinery and fancy articles decorated the windows.

The Times Clothing Mart was in the most gorgeous gala attire. Flags floating from the top and sides of the building, and purple and white decorations of various styles made it one of the most attactive buildings on Front street.

John Hansen's Department Store, S. J. Lutz & Co.'s, E. W. Merrill & Co.'s, J. I. Kirschbergs, F. A. Stiles, E. E. Hopkins, Gray & Gray's, The Post Office, J. P. Jensen's Shoe Store, Mrs. M. E. Troy's Art Emporium, both of the bank buildings, Lange's Music House, Poole's Bakery and other buildings were all tastily and profusely draped in purple and white, each place of business presenting an attractive appearance. Port Angeles was proud of her decorations and of the manner in which she entertained the people.

STATE LODGE SESSION.

The business sessions of the State Association, held in the opera house Thursday, were presided over by President H. M. Fisher. Mayor Lewis gave the address of welcome. The following officers were elected: Thos. Shields, Ballard, president; J. H. Carter, Tacoma, first vice; Thos. Crogan, Seattle, second vice; Chas. Manning, Everett, third vice; R. L. Hodgdon, Seattle, secretary; R. G. Gamwell, Bellingham, treasurer; T. H. Hylen, Everett, chaplain; Geo. Russell, Seattle, sergeant-at-arms.

Bremerton, Ballard, Olympia and Centralia invited the state lodge to hold its next session with them, but no decision was reached, the matter being left to the trustees.

The popular slogan of Naval Lodge, "Whatever's Right," was adopted by the state association.

A resolution stating it to be "the sense of the convention that every lodge in the state investigate for itself the truth or falsity of the charges against the Detroit lodge and upon a finding that the reports be true, that each pass a resolution condemning in emphatic and positive language the action complained of" was introduced by Judge Lindsay of Seattle, who termed the action of the Detroit lodge when entertaining the grand lodge to be infamous. "The Elks are, if they are anything," said the Judge, "distinctly American and believe first in the protection of their homes, their wives and daughters. They love fun, but they want that fun to be such as to be enjoyed by all and the lodge room to be a place where we would not hesitate to take our women." Strenous objection was made to public discussion of the matter on the grounds of unfavorable advertising. Judge Lindsay said the Elks had already had the unfavorable advertising and it was time to set them right. The eesolution was adopted by unanimous vote.

The grand lodge is to be asked, by the state lodges of all western states, to select Portland, Oregon, as its next meeting place.

ELKS' BALL AND RECEPTION A GRAND SUCCESS.

The Elks' ball and reception was one of the most brilliant and successful affairs ever given in the city. The opera house presented a most attractive appearance with its bright lights and beautiful decorations, showing the handiwork of an artist. Everywhere was displayed the Elks' colors, intermingled with the red, white and blue, while the stage had the appearance of an evergreen bower, forming a pretty background for the musicians. Over the main entrance door was a small balcony, where a large Elk head, having each point of its antlers tipped with purple and white electric lights, overlooked the festive scene.

The ladies on the reception committee were all beautifully gowned and did their utmost to see that every one was introduced and made to feel at home, while the Angeles Elks were all devotion to their guests and certainly did their best to give everyone a royal good time.

Enthusiastic praise for our Angeles Band, which furnished the music, was heard on all sides and they were heartily encored, always responding graciously.

At exactly eleven o'clock the band struck up the Elk song, "Auld Lang Syne," and in memory of the departed brothers the dancers all joined hands and circled round, keeping rythmic time to the music.

There was probably never so large a crowd of dancers on the opera house floor before, but everyone was good natured and apparently did not mind a little crowding. Many handsomely gowned women were there, also fine looking men, and as a society function it will probably never be eclipsed in our little city. Punch was served from the buffet all evening.

THE PARADE

The Annual Parade of the State Association, headed by W. B. Ritchie, as marshal of the day, and the Angeles Band, 24 musicians in blue uniforms, led by E. E. Day in gorgeous drum major attire, formed on Front street at 1:30 p m. Thursday, directly after the arrival of the Iroquois. The various delegations of Elks, in all kinds of fantastic gear, marched two abreast; they were followed by several autos carrying the Elk officials and the wives of prominent Elks. A large float drawn by oxen (in lieu of their antlered cousins) and carrying a dozen pretty young ladies, attracted considerable attention, as did also the stubborn "rocky" mountain goat which was hitched between the shafts of a small cart and propelled by a half dozen husky lads on the forward end of a hawser.

THE BARBECUE.

When the parade disbanded the crowd began moving toward Civic Park, where the big barbecue was held. The tables, with seating capacity for 268, were all neatly set in readiness and it was a well behaved if rather hungry crowd that gathered around the festive board and thoroughly enjoyed the fine roast beef, salmon and clams, topped off with as fine a cup of coffee as was ever made. Everything moved along like clockwork and too much cannot be said in praise of the committee who engineered so successfully the big undertaking. Over 2,000 people were fed, there being 1,000 pounds of roast meat, 600 pounds salmon (of which the big Tyees weighed over 60 lbs. each), 20 sacks of clams and 600 loaves of bread.

ELKS' MINSTRELS

The Elks' Minstrels presented by the Herd with the compliments of Lodge No. 92, Seattle, was one of the finest entertainments ever given in the city. The orchestra was from the Moore Theater and was certainly a grand treat. A number of new jokes were cracked by the end men, and several very good local hits were gotten off during the course of the evening. The soloists were all excellent, but Walter C. Wilson, in Spanish costume, carried the house with his rendition of Il Travatore and later, in Irish costume, Killarney. A professional bicyclist did some new and wonderful stunts, calling forth a storm of applause. The closing number was the singing of Auld Lang Syne by the entire company joined by the audience.

TACOMA WON THE CUP.

The handsome silver cup offered as a trophy by Naval Lodge, was won by the Tacoma team, which won over Seattle this morning by a score of 14 to 8. Angeles lost to Tacoma yesterday, the score being 5 to 7; Seattle won over Everett Wednesday.

The Masons kindly turned over their hall for the use of the Elks during the convention and it was certainly appreciated as a rest room for the visiting ladies. A committee composed of the wives of prominent Elks took charge of the hall and made it a point to see that everyone was made comfortable and at home; tea and wafers were served free during all three days of the convention.

A very happy conceit in souvenir badges was the design adopted by Naval Lodge, showing a bird's eye view of Port Angeles and harbor on a clam-shaped medal, with the name of the state association and date of meeting. The bars above gave name and number of local lodge, the motto "Whatever's Right" and the antlered head with clock. Each visiting Elk was presented with one.

Wright's Port Angeles Marine Band presented a fine appearance in their new uniforms, and furnished splendid music for the entertainment of the people throughout the three day's carnival. There is not a finer appearing body of musicians, nor a better drilled band, considering the length of time the boys have practiced, than Wright's Port Angeles Marine Band.

Peter Nelson of Forks was a county seat visitor the latter part of last week. He says that the West End is in a prosperous condition and is rapidly coming to the front; that the farmers are prosperous and happy and everything out that way altogether lovely. It is surely a treat to meet a tiller of the soil in so cheerful a mood as was Mr. Nelson when he called at this printery last Friday.

Minor Happenings of the Week

To celebrate the harvest and to promote a general good feeling among the residents of Clarke county, particularly the farmers and fruit growers, a number of harvest picnics will be held this month.

Gov. Norris of Montana, Gov. Brooks of Wyoming and Gov. Spry of Utah have written Gov. Hay indorsing Hay's plan for a conference of Northwestern executives at Salt Lake to discuss conservation and the naming of delegates to the national conservation congress

Harvey W. Scott, editor of the Portland Oregonian, died at Baltimore, Md., Sunday afternoon, following a surgical operation at Johns Hopkins hospital.

Los Angeles wants the 1911 national women's tennis tournament. It has been customary to hold the championships at Philadelphia.

A total gold coinage of 18,000 double eagles, a silver coinage embracing 424,000 half dollars and 20,000 quarters, with $30,600 in one-cent pieces, constituted the output of the mints of the United States during the last month. The total coinage was 3,522,000 pieces, with a valuation of $607,600.

On its own initiative, under the amended act regulating interstate commerce, the interstate commerce commission announces that it had instituted a proceeding against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company on account of that system's recent advance in commutation passenger rates.

As the joint gift of all the American republics, a gold medal has been awarded to Andrew Carnegie because of his prominence as a "benefactor of humanity" by the pan-American congress, now in session in Buenos Ayres.

The Bankers' Association of North Dakota estimates the wheat crop for that state at 22,000,000 bushels, against 94,000,000 bushels last year.

A department store in Brooklyn is to give away 250,000 catalpa trees. The only requirement will be that the applicant for one of the trees be a pupil in a public school of that borough. One tree for each pupil, each tree guaranteed to be one year old and from one foot to 15 inches high. The presentation is to be made on Arbor day, May 5, 1911.

NEW GAME REGULATIONS FOR ALASKA PUBLISHED

Washington, Aug. 8.—Game regulations for Alaska additional to those of August 1, 1908, and superseding those of March 6, 1909, have been issued by Willis L. Moore, acting secretary of agriculture, to be effective on August 15. These regulations relate only to game animals, the regulation of killing fur-bearing animals being in the department of commerce and labor, which issued its new regulations some time ago.

The new game regulations follow:

Regulation 1. Open season for Deer—The season for killing deer in 1910 in Southeastern Alaska shall end November 1, and thereafter the open season shall be limited to the period from August 15 to November 1, both inclusive.

Regulation 2. Limits—The number of deer killed by one person during the open season shall be limited to eight.

Regulation 3. Sale—After the close of the season of 1910 the sale of deer carcasses in Southeastern Alaska shall be suspended until 1912.

Regulation 4. Walrus—The season for killing walrus in Bering strait and in Bering sea, north of the mouth of the Kuskokwim river shall be limited to the period from May 10 to July 1, both inclusive. The killing of walrus in Bristol bay and at points on the coast of Bering sea south of the Kuskoquim river is hereby prohibited until 1912.

The regulations of March 6, 1909, relating to deer, are hereby revoked.

FOUR HOURS STEADY DENIAL BY HAMON

Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 6.—With Senator Thomas P. Gore reasserting his charges that he had been offered a bribe of $25,000 or $50,000 to influence his action in congress, and with Jake L. Hamon, accused by the senator of having offered the bribe, denying he had ever done any such thing, the investigation of the Oklahoma Indian lands by a committee of the house of representatives simmered down to a mass of denials.

For four hours Hamon, former chairman of the Oklahoma Republican state committee, entered a continous series of denials as to his alleged relation with what are known as the McMurray contracts, by which, according to Senator Gore, $3,000,000, or 10 per cent of $30,000,000 to be realized from the sale of Indian lands to a New York syndicate, was to be diverted from the Indians in the shape of "attorney's fees."

Washington State News Items

Bellingham newspaper men have organized a press club.

The new $35,000 building of the University branch of the Seattle public library has been formally opened.

According to government estimates the yield of winter wheat in this state this year will be 13,858,000 bushels.

Fall-sown wheat is yielding heavily in the Palouse country, the average being thirty-five bushels to the acre.

The Berlin Machine Works of Beloit, Wis., is arranging to erect a large plant in Seattle to handle its Western business.

The post office department has authorized the employment of an additional letter carrier at Vancouver, beginning August 16.

Harvest in the Palouse country is being delayed because of the shortage of harvest hands. Farmers scan the streets daily for men, offering high wages.

Gov. Hay has appointed Louis L. Gaingues, D. O., of Spokane, an osteopath, a member of the state board of medical examiners to succeed J. Clinton McFadden, term expired. The term is until May 1, 1912.

Ellensburg city council has decided to proceed with the construction of the southeast sewer system at a cost of $12,000. On account of protests by residents, unit bids will be asked. The council will build the northwest sewer. The cost of the main sewer is $13,325, of which the city will pay 25 per cent.

After completing the thirty-fifth year of its publication, the Independent, a weekly Republican paper at Vancouver, Wash., has been sold to Glen N. Ranck, owner of the Vancouver Chronicle, also Republican in politics. Mr. Ranck will consolidate the two papers under the name of the Independent-Chronicle.

ALIENS STAY ONLY BY GOVERNMENT PERMISSION

United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford at Seattle last week upheld the constitutionality of the amended federal immigration act passed at the last session of congress and ruled that all aliens engaged in immoral occupations are subject to deportation regardless of the length of time they have been residents of the United States. In giving this decision Judge Hanford denied the petition for a writ of habeas corpus made by Umi Yosnida, a Japanese woman arrested May 10 on a charge of being an alien engaged in an immoral occupation.

The woman's attorney maintained that congress had exceeded its authority in amending the immigration act so as to remove the time limit during which aliens might be deported and that the old law, which set a limit of three years, was still in force. The Yoshida woman, it was set forth, has lived in the United States six years and she had been here three years before she began an immoral life. She sought refuge under the terms of the three-year clause and demanded that she be released.

In his decision Judge Hanford said that all aliens reside here by permission of the government, and that congress has power to expel them with or without cause.

"In the law of 1907 there was termination of the time in which aliens might be arrested and deported," said the court. "The amendatory act of 1910 has made a change whereby aliens engaged in an immoral occupation, and all connected with it, are subject to deportation. The contention that the three-year clause is still in effect is not well taken. That clause was evidently so obnoxious to that law that its force is removed by necessary implication."

GREAT GRAPHITE BEDS SURVEYED IN ALASKA

Nome, Alaska, Aug. 6.—Ceylon's boasted importance as the main source of the world's supply of graphite is to be eclipsed by Alaska, claim responsible experts who have just finished a careful and thorough survey of the graphite beds at Salt Lake, in the Teller region.

The great value of the deposits was not determined until a few months ago. Then the owners interested capitalists, and for these experts have been making a detailed examination. General statements of what they found include the declaration that the deposits are the most extensive known to exist anywhere in the world and that the grade is equal to the best mined anywhere.

Immense returns from the development of the mines as expected, as natural conditions render it possible to mine and deliver the product at chief markets at a moderate cost. Costs of production in Ceylon impose a tax of $25 a ton by the time the ore is ready for shipment. The cost of mining the Salt Lake deposits, it is claimed, will not exceed $6 a ton.

BRING EDITOR'S BODY HOME FOR BURIAL

Baltimore, Aug. 9.—The body of Col. H. W. Scott, editor of the Portland Oregonian, Portland, Ore., who died here Sunday following a surgical operation, has started for the late home in Portland. It is accompanied by the widow and son, L. M. Scott.

MR. GORE MAKES HIS CHARGES

OKLAHOMA SENATOR TELLS COMMITTEE OF OFFERS TO BRIBE HIM.

Vice-President Named as One of Those Interested in McMurray Contracts—Three Millions in Attorney Fees at Stake—Vice-President Makes Denial.

Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 6.—What happened in the private office of United States Senator Thomas P. Gore at Washington on May 6 last formed the basis of sensational charges involving the names of Vice President Sherman, Senator Charles Curtiss, of Kansas; Congressman B. S. McGuire, of Oklahoma, and others, in a hearing before a special congressional investigating committee here yesterday.

During a conference held in that office, Senator Gore testified, he had been approached by Jake L. Hamon, former chairman of the Oklahoma territorial Republican committee and also former chairman of the Oklahoma state Republican committee, and said that he had been offered a bribe of $25,000 or $50,000 to remove certain legislation pending in congress so that $3,000,000 might be paid to J. F. McMurray, an attorney of McAlester, Okla., and his associates.

Heavy Attorneys' Fees.

The money was to represent "attorneys' fees" of 10 per cent on $30,000,000, which was to be secured from a New York syndicate for 450,000 acres of coal and asphalt land now owned by the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians in this state.

Vice President Sherman's name was mentioned by Mr. Hamon, Senator Gore testified, as being "interested" in the land deal to the extent of favoring the approval by congress of what are known as the McMurray contracts with the Indians.

What happened in another private room in Washington and also where, it was alleged, Hamon made more "overtures" was told by Congressman C. E. Creager, of the Third Oklahoma district. Congressman Creager supplemented the testimony of Senator Gore. He said that on last June 16 he had been invited by Hamon to meet him in a private room at the Occidental hotel in Washington.

Offered Good Pay.

Having gone there, Mr. Creager testified, he was informed he could have a "substantial interest" in the land deal if he would withdraw his opposition to the approval of the McMurray contracts by congress.

Among Senator Gore's assertions were the following:

That Hamon told him that a man "higher-up" in the government was interested in the approval of the contracts and therefore there was no reason why Senator Gore should not be; that when asked who was the man higher up, Hamon had replied the vice president.

That Hamon told him Senator Curtiss, of Kansas, was "interested" in the deal.

That Hamon told him Congressman McGuire of Oklahoma, was "interested" in the deal.

Department Man Named.

That Hamon told him an employe of the department of justice at Washington was "interested" in the deal; that he (Senator Gore) knew the name of the employe, but would not divulge his name or the name of his informant, especially because the latter would lose his position.

That former Senator Long, of Kansas, acting as counsel for McMurray, had gone to President Taft on April 28 to urge the approval of the contracts, but that the president had said: "It would take a good deal of argument to convince him that the amount of the fee asked by McMurray was justified."

Curtiss Denies Charge.

Senator Curtiss sent a telegram to the committee denying that he was in any way interested in the contracts and offering to appear before the committee. Chairman Burke said Senator Curtiss would be subpoenaed to testify.

Senator Gore explained he believed Vice President Sherman was favorable to the contracts and a short time later he introduced a resolution in the senate that would require further action of congress before the contracts could be approved.

Sherman Denies All.

Big Moose, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Vice President James S. Sherman has issued the following statement concerning the charges made by Senator Gore, at Muskogee:

"The story that comes to me about the charges made by Senator Gore at Muskogee is absolutely without the slightest shadow of foundation."

To Be Expected, Says Gore.

Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 6.—Senator Thomas P. Gore is not surprised at the denial made by Vice President Sherman of the charges made by the Oklahoma senator before the congressional committee which is investigating alleged attempted bribery in connection with the McMurray Indian contracts.

"Such denlals," said Gore, "as those of Sherman and Senator Curtiss are to be expected."

Jacob L. Hamon, whose name was brought into the story when Gore appeared before the investigating committee and told his story of the attempted bribery, has asked to be allowed to appear before the committee.

"I think I can square myself," said Hamon, as he asked to be summoned.

PRESIDENT TAFT DEDICATES STATELY PILGRIM SHAFT

Provincetown, Mass., Aug. 6.—No greater duty ever devolved on Provincetown's two criers, George Washburn Ready and Walter Smith, than their announcement of the coming of President Taft and the dedication of the granite shaft of Town Hill erected to the memory of the Pilgrim Fathers.

This old custom of crying important events through the streets remains intact in Provincetown.

The corner stone of the monument was laid August 7, 1907, by President Roosevelt. Its dedication by President Taft attracted a crowd that taxed to their limits the narrow streets of this old fishing town. A fine northwester was blowing straight across the bay from Beverly to Cape Cod and, running before the wind, the President's yacht Mayflower came flying across to be welcomed by a mighty array of the nation's naval power.

Sailors Throng Streets.

Preparations for receiving the crowd and the distinguished guests were completed and before the exercises the fleet sent ashore a couple of thousand of its sailors who formed along the streets, from the wharf where the President landed, to the grandstand.

The principal act of the dedication of the monument was the unveiling of a bronze tablet over the door facing the harbor, which was given by President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard. The town clock was striking nine when the Mayflower came around the little white beacon at the end of the long point and passed in between the lines of battleships.

Guns Fire Salute to Taft.

Eight of the great vessels were here to greet the President, the Connecticut, Michigan, Mississippi, Idaho, South Carolina, Louisiana, Kansas and New Hampshire. As the Mayflower headed in the first gun boomed from the flagship Connecticut, followed by twenty-one guns from all the ships. The sailors manned the rails and the entire ships' companies stood at attention.

The Mayflower dropped anchor at the head of the line at 9:30 o'clock, and President Taft immediately went on board the Connecticut, where he received the commanding officers of the fleet.

The reception on the Connecticut lasted for about half an hour and then the President started for shore.

WHEAT CROP PLACED BY EXPERT AT 70 PER CENT

From private reports received since threshing commenced in Eastern Washington, and which are now nearly complete from some districts, L. G. Patullo, manager of Balfour-Guthrie & Co., expressed the opinion that the wheat crop of the state will be 70 per cent of last year's bumper crop.

Mr. Pattullo stated that reports from many points are more encouraging than first reports indicated and that where almost total failure was reported, considerable grain has in many instances been harvested.

"Prices are still so high that exporting is out of the question at present, and naturally we think prices should come down, for it does not seem reasonable that all our wheat can be used in the domestic and California milling trade," said Mr. Pattullo.

Old crop bluestem was quoted on the Merchants' Exchange at 97 cents, but had there been any demand it is doubtful whether or not much wheat could have been purchased at that price. New bluestem was quoted at 90 cents.

WEEK'S BERRY SHIPMENTS BRING TOTAL OF $40,000

Puyallup, Aug. 6.—As a result of the big shipments of raspberries during the past week from the Puyallup and Sumner berry farms, the growers' association distributed $40,000 in returns for the week's work. About $30,000 of this goes to the growers as profits and payment for labor, while the $10,000 remaining covers the cost of cans, sugar and labor connected with the canning department. President W. H. Paulhamus, in commenting on this, said:

"This is the largest distribution of returns we have yet made for a single week. The total distribution for July will reach about $75,000. For a community of this size I think this is a great showing for one industry. It means much, for it goes to the class of people who will be most benefited by it. It also means for the farmers a little improvement about the place. Besides paying off the expenses, it will provide a new set of dishes, more furniture, an addition or porch to the house, or probably better provision for handling next year's crop."

The first carload of the canned product to leave the cannery this season was shipped to Chicago. The first carload of blackberries to be shipped out fresh this season went to Minnesota points.

Tacoma Judge Resigns.

Tacoma, Aug. 6.—Judge J. A. Shackleford will tender his official resignation from the superior court bench next week. The judge expresses himself as anxious to get out of the way before the time for filing for the general election has elapsed, in order to give others an opportunity to file for the position. Judge Shackleford will take up law offices here.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION HELD AT TACOMA---THE PLATFORM

The Republican state convention at Tacoma last week nominated for supreme court judges the present incumbents and adopted a platform. Following is the ticket named:

Four-year term—M. F. Gose, Asotin.

Six-year term—Frank H. Rudkin, Yakima.

Six-year term—E. N. Parker, Pierce.

Six-year term—George E. Morris, King.

Six-year term—Mark A. Fullerton, Whitman.

Platform.

The Republican party of the state of Washington, in convention assembled, declares its unqualified allegiance to the principles of the party, as enunciated in its various platforms of principles and as exemplified in the wise, patriotic, progressive and constructive work of the statesmen whose services the party has given to the country, such as Abraham Lincoln, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft.

The Republican party continues to be, as it has always been since its organization, the party of progress, of principles and achievements. To it belongs the credit for the enactment of the legislation of the past half century which has made this country the pride of its people and the object of the world's admiration.

Every American should be and every loyal Republican is justly proud of the matchless administration of William H. Taft, which has not only been thoroughly Republican and truly American, but has resulted in the enactment of more vital legislation in the interests of all the people than was ever accomplished before in the same period of time. The admission of Arizona and New Mexico into statehood at the earnest solicitation of a Republican president was an impartial and fearless discharge of a public duty. Among the notable achievements of the present administration may be mentioned the postal savings bank law, the enlargement of the powers of the interstate commerce commission, the creation of a court of commerce, the corporation tax, the tariff law, the law authorizing reciprocal treaties in relation to tariff, and the law providing for the creation of an impartial tariff commission to investigate and recommend such changes, if any, as may be found necessary in the enactment of laws pertaining to this subject. The record of President Taft not only justifies but demands the admiration and loyal support of every member of the great Republican party.

In the enactment into law of the president's legislative program he has had no more loyal or consistent supporters in congress than Senators Piles and Jones and Representatives Humphrey and McCredie, and they are therefore entitled to share in the glory of the president's achievements, and we condemn any effort made to harass or hinder the president in his great work of progress and his wise administration of the affairs of the nation by enemies within or without the party.

We believe in a sane and sensible policy of conservation of natural resources, therefore utilization without waste should be the governing principle. Monopoly of water power should be instantly suppressed, but the progress of our people should not be dwarfed by unreasonable and unjust withdrawals from public entry of the government domain. Common sense and progress should prevail over sentiment and hysteria. We believe that the interests of those states most affected should be first consulted. Therefore the interests of public land states whose deevlopment and progress are deeply concerned should prevail over the sentimentalists and alarmists of the East who have appointed themselves the conservators and guardians of the West. A wise and beneficent progress is better than a blind and unreasoning conservatism. We call attention to the fact that nearly a third of the landed area of this state is now in forest and Indian reserves, natural parks and other unsurveyed and unoccupied public lands withdrawn from entry. We believe that lands most suitable for agricultural purposes in the forest reserves should be restored to entry, that homes may be established and civilization extended wherever possible, and that the development of our mineral resources should be encouraged.

We commend the selection by President Taft as a member of his cabinet of that distinguished citizen of this state, Hon. Richard A. Ballinger, in whose judgment, wisdom, integrity and patriotism we have unbounded confidence.

We indorse the administration of Gov. M. E. Hay and the other state officers, as embodying a highly commendable example and display of enterprise, economy and efficiency.

We heartily indorse and commend the good work done by the state railroad and state tax commissions, and we favor the extension or scope of authority of one of these commissions so that supervision and control over public service corporations in the state may be had similar to that exercised by the public utilities commission of the state of New York. We favor the fullest publicity as to all public service corporations doing business in this state.

The principle of protection is an essential part of Republicanism. American markets should and must be preserved for American producers. The late revision of the tariff was made by a Republican congress in sympathy with this established Republican doctrine. The new tariff is, in our judgment, a practical fulfillment of the pledge of 1908. This law has substantially reduced the taxes on many of the necessaries of life; it raised them on nothing but luxuries. It has converted a deficit in the national revenues into a surplus. It has been placed on our statutes without disturbing the business of the country and causing a loss of employment to any laboring man. We believe in the revision of the tariff from time to time as conditions change. We believe that the wisdom of intrusting revision of the tariff to its friends has been fully justified by the Payne-Aldrich law.

We favor the passage of an employers' limited liability law, which shall lay the burden of accidents occurring in the industrial pursuits upon such industry and not upon the shoulders of the helpless victims of such accidents.

That in the new erection of public buildings in this state by the federal government that the representatives and senators in congress from this state are requested and urged to use every honorable effort to have sperified and used in all such public buildings materials from this state where readily available, whether from forest, mine, quarry, mill, factory or foundry.

That if in its wisdom the legislature of this state should see fit to authorize the erection and appropriation for any state buildings, that it would help home industry by providing that all material used in the erection of such buildings be from the state of Washington, where readily available. We have the materials; we have the mechanics, whose skill is equal to the best.

We favor the repeal of second choice provision of the present primary law.

While the resources and industries of the state of Washington are by nature divided east and west by the Cascade mountains (two-thirds of the population of the state residing on the west side), we commend the unselfish patriotism of its citizens in heretofore recognizing that both the East and West sides, by reason of their diverce interests, are entitled to representation in the United States senate. We congratulate the state, and especially the Eastern portion thereof, in the able representation which it now enjoys in the senate in the person of the Hon. Wesley L. Jones, and we would deplore any circumstance which might lead to his being superseded by another. We feel that precedence, fair dealing and a proper representation of all interests of the state calls for the choosing of the successor to the Hon. Samuel H. Piles from Western Washington.

PRINCESS MAY GOES ON SENTINEL ISLAND ROCKS

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 5.—The Canadian Pacific steamship Princess May, which left Skagway, Alaska, southbound, for Vancouver at 8 o'clock last night with eighty passengers and a crew of sixty-eight, struck the north reef of Sentinel island at 2 o'clock this morning in dark but not foggy weather and in a smooth sea, and sank two hours later.

All the passengers and their baggage were taken to the lighthouse on Sentinel island, whence they will be brought to Juneau tonight by steamers which have gone to their relief. The lightkeeper did everything in his power to make the castaways comfortable. None of the passengers or crew was injured.

The approach to Sentinel rock, at the southern end of Lynn canal, is one of the most perilous stretches of water in Alaska. A ship must clear rocky islands on both sides, the smallest variation from the course entailing disaster.

The walls of the canal are precipitous and the waterway deep and in many places narrow. Sentinel island, situated about four miles north and east of Shelter island, is the key to the narrow passageway by Shelter island. This passage is strewn with reefs and at some points is less than half a mile in width. Sentinel island is a jagged rock about 250 yards long and with long, toothlike reefs projecting at the north and south ends.

Pilot Richardson said that the Princess May struck the reef at 2 o'clock this morning.

"We were going at a twelve-knot speed," he said. "Owing to the haze which hung over the water it was difficult to see far ahead, and the rocks were not visible until we were almost upon them and it was too late to avoid a disaster. Every effort was made to keep the ship off the reef, but it struck and sank in two hours."

$150,000,000 GIVEN AS KLONDIKE GOLD OUTPUT

Dawson, Aug. 8.—The Yukon territory, that is to say, for the benefit of those not acquainted, the Canadian Yukon, has shipped to the outer world $150,000,000 in virgin gold. The greater part of this has been produced within fifty miles of Dawson, and perhaps 90 per cent within one hundred miles.

While some of the other camps of the North are falling off in output, the Klondike camp is increasing its yield. This is due to the fact that the Klondike placers on the creeks are not so deep that they cannot be dredged, and those on the benches can be worked by hydraulic. On many of the rivers the gold also can be recovered by dredging.

Secretary Howell Holds Over.

Olympia, Aug. 6.—Secretary of State Howell will hold office until 1912, under a decision of the supreme court, denying the mandate of Ben R. Fish to compel the secretary of state to accept filings for that office in the coming primaries. The court holds that a successor elected only at a general election can succeed Howell. Howell was appointed by Governor Hay to succeed Sam H. Nichols, resigned, and will serve out the full term to which Nichols was elected.

DRY FARM CONGRESS AT SPOKANE

FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING OF NATIONAL BODY OCCURS OCTOBER 3 TO 6.

Experts of International Reputation Will Discuss Legislation Favorable to Further Development of Dry Lands—Exhibits From Many Districts of Other Countries as Well as From United States.

Modern methods of tillage, conservation of moisture and the adaptation of crops to climate and soil will be featured at the fifth Dry Farming Congress in Spokane, October 3 to 6, when experts of international reputation will also discuss legislation favorable to the further development of dry lands, by establishing demonstration farms and experiment stations, and ways and means through which the unoccupied agricultural acreage of this and other countries may be made to successfully produce profitable crops.

Congressman F. W. Mondell of Wyoming, president of the organization, says in the official call issued on June 29, that some of the most distinguished men in America, including governors and ministers of Western states and provinces, will deliver addresses, also that agricultural colleges in the United States and international sections will be represented by experts in special lines of work. There will be exhibits of dry farmed products from many districts in the United States, Canada, Mexico and possibly Germany, Russia, Hungary, South Africa, Australia and Brazil at the International Exposition in connection with the congress, October 3 to 9.

Trophies and cash premiums of a total value of $3,500 will be awarded in competition free and open to the world. Professor Walter H. Olin of Colorado is superintendent of premiums an awards. Growers may also compete for $3,500 in cash prizes, offered by the Spokane Interstate Fair, by bringing double exhibits. The displays, comprising more than 5,000 entries, will be housed in the largest tent in America, to be erected on the fair grounds.

John T. Burns, secretary of the congress, announces that complimentary season admission tickets to the Interstate fair will be issued to all delegates outside of Spokane county. Among the attractions at the fair will be racing and general entertainment programs, aviation contests, sham battles and other spectacular features; also exhibits of livestock, poultry, grasses, grains, roots, fruits and flowers and farming appliances.

"This will be a congress devoted exclusively to agricultural matters," Mr. Burns added. "Live issues pertaining directly to the development of dry lands, including plans for a world-wide co-operative movement of general uplift, will be discussed from the platform and floor and the program promises to be one of the most interesting ever presented at a farming convention.

"The practical educational side of farming will be given prominence and several hours will be devoted to talks by experienced farmers, truck gardeners and orchardists. There will also be a number of institute sessions, under the direction of dry farm experts."

Governor Marion E. Hay of Washington and Mayor Nelson S. Pratt of Spokane will deliver addresses of welcome and these will be followed by responses and greetings from the various states and nations.

Besides its membership the congress is composed of the president and vice president of the United States, cabinet officials and members of congress, representatives of foreign nations interested in agriculture, ministers and secretaries of agriculture, governors of states, territories and ministers of provinces, officers and members of faculties of agricultural colleges and experimental stations, national, state and county agricultural associations and grange lodges, officers of the United States weather bureau, state land boards, state engineers, state boards of agriculture, conservation, livestock and horticultural associations, railroad companies, commercial bodies, county commissioners and mayors of cities and presidents of towns.

President Mondell announces in the official call that delegates may be appointed as follows:

Twenty by the governor of each state, territory or province.

Ten by the mayor of each city and commissioners of each county.

Five by each national and state agricultural, commercial, conservation and horticultural, forestry and livestock associations.

Four by each railroad or transportation company.

Two by each local livestock, county or local grange lodge or farmers' association, chamber of commerce, board of trade or other commercial body.

Officers of the congress are: President, F. W. Mondell, Newcastle, Wyo., American vice president, Frank C. Bowman, Idaho Falls, Idaho; Edward H. Webster, Manhattan, Kan., and H. B. Hening, Albuquerque, N. M.; secretary-treasurer, John T. Burns, Spokane.

EXPLOITATION TO BE MADE GENERAL

THREE CITIES OF NORTHWEST TO PROMOTE SOUTHWESTERN WASHINGTON.

Portland Plan Adopted by Conference at Hoquiam—Local Commercial Club Method of Advertising to Be Used by Tacoma and Seattle in Colonization Campaign Now On.

Hoquiam, Aug. 9.—Southwest Washington promises to be the theater in which three large cities of the Pacific Northwest will vie with each other as actors in promotion and development work, as the great concrete result of the convention of the Southwest Washington Development Association in Hoquiam.

Portland, Seattle and Tacoma delegations conferred with the association members and agreed upon the general lines of exploitation to be initiated. The methods of the Portland Commercial Club, as exemplified in the success of the Oregon Development League, advertising, co-operation with Oregon communities, formed the basis of the program.

Each of the big city delegations will return home pledged to secure for Southwest Washington similar advertising to that given Oregon by the Portland Commercial Club. Seattle and Tacoma were asked to advertise and aid in the colonization of the state of Washington in general, and Southwest Washington in particular. Portland was asked to broaden the scope of its colonization advertising, and publicity to include the country from Klickitat county to Grays Harbor.

"Western Washington is top-heavy in its city development," said W. B. Mack, lumber king of Aberdeen, in an address that struck the keynote of the session. "We haven't anywhere near the agricultural population to support our cities, large and small. In time this situation will become acute. When the setback comes, the cities will suffer and their loss will be the direct result of their failure to reclaim and colonize the vast areas of logged-off lands which can and should support a vast agricultural population. It is up to the three big cities, Portland, Seattle and Tacoma, to shoulder the responsibility for the agricultural development which will be their salvation."

N. B. Coffman, the Chehalis banker, dramatically warned the three cities of what would be the outcome of neglect of farm colonization.

Co-Operation Is Pledged.

"The Eastern farmer will not face the expense and hardship of hewing a home out of the brush and stumps," said he, "when he can find a location elsewhere in the Pacific Northwest free from these tremendous obstacles. The face of Western Washington must be transformed from a waste of stump land to an area of small farms and orchards, upon the produce of which our cities must rely for their permanent support."

With the issue put up to them squarely, the Portland, Tacoma and Seattle delegations through their spokesmen pledged definite co-operation.

On behalf of the promotion committee of the Portland Commercial Club, Manager Chapman outlined the plan already adopted for extending to Southwest Washington similar advertising help to that given to the commercial bodies throughout Oregon. Assistant Secretary W. B. Mears, of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, stated that, while his organization had not authorized him specifically to state detailed plans, he pledged Seattle to the so-called Portland program.

Seattle and Tacoma to Do Share.

"Portland's liberal attitude towards Southwestern Washington and the spirit of co-operation with the Puget Sound cities along Pacific Northwest development lines is highly to be commended," said Mr. Mears, "and it is up to Seattle to do its share as is Portland for this section."

President H. A. Rhodes of the Tacoma Commercial Club said: "Tacoma has already arranged to publish in its literature pictures and descriptive matter telling the story by counties of Southwestern Washington. We are proceeding much along the lines of the Portland Commercial Club in establishing a promotion bureau as part of our club work."

A climax of enthusiasm was reached at the banquet in the Grayport Hotel in the evening, when, amid tumultuous cheering, the overtures of Portland and her sister cities were received by the business men of Hoquiam. The tenor of the addresses delivered by Portland delegates is indicated by the toasts to which they responded: "The Pacific Northwest," W. A. Williams, Oregon delegate-at-large to the National Irrigation Congress; "Advertising Southwest Washington," C. C. Chapman, secretary Oregon Development League; "The Co-operative Spirit," William Bittle Wells, manager Harriman bureau of publicity; "Bringing National Conventions to the Pacific Northwest," Robert Tucker, delegate from the "live wire committee" of the Portland Commercial Club; "Grays Harbor," W. J. Henderson, credit manager Closset & Devers.

WANT TROOPS USED AS FIRE PATROL

REQUEST TO PRESIDENT AND WAR SECRETARY BY WESTERN PINE MEN.

Fire Losses in Western States in Past Sixty Days Estimated to Have Been Many Millions—Step Urged as a Means of Practical Conservation.

Olympia, Aug. 8.—Gov. Hay has wired President Taft:

"Timber interests in Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington request that I urge upon you the use of national troops in these four states to co-operate with the forest service in fighting forest fires, where a million dollars in property is being destroyed. The season is unusually dry and fires are raging in many localities. I indorse this request."

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 8.—President Taft, as commander-in-chief of the army, and Secretary of War Dickinson have been requested by the Western Pine Manufacturers' Association, of which J. P. McGoldrick of Spokane is president, acting in behalf of timber owners, lumbermen and settlers in the Northwestern and Pacific states, to station government troops in the national forest reservations from May 1 to September of each year, to the end that the timber resources of the United States may be saved from destruction.

"The fire losses in the forests in the Western states during the last sixty days will amount to at least $150,000,000," said George M. Cornwall of Portland, Ore., who presented a resolution embodying the foregoing at the semi-annual meeting of the association, "and it is likely that in addition millions of dollars' worth of timber will be destroyed during this and next month unless heavy rains come before the end of the dry season."

Statistics compiled by A. W. Cooper, secretary of the Western Pine Manufacturers' Association, show that fully 50 per cent of the standing timber in the United States is located in Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon and California, where fire patrols are maintained by lumbermen's associations and the state departments. These, however, are inadequate to cope with the fire element.

There exists a grave menace to standing timber in the national forests on account of fire," Mr. Cornwall said in discussing the use of troops in fire fighting and prevention, "and this carries with it heavy losses of life and valuable property.

"There are stationed at various posts in the United States thousands of disciplined men, known as government troops, who could be instructed in the methods of fire fighting and patrol duty in the various forests, not alone in the Northwestern and Pacific states, but throughout the country where forests exist.

"These forests require an adequate patrol, regularly established and maintained during the so-called dry season, from May to September. Forest fire fighting is a science and should be taught to the troops as part of the military tactics. Besides, no better employment could be found for the soldiers than to utilize them as protectors of life and property during the part of the year when men are most needed in the forests of the country.

"We are hopeful that the president of the United States and the secretary of war will look upon our request as a step in the direction of actual conservation of one of the country's chief resources, also that an order will be issued to send the nearest troops into the national forests, which, in several of the Northwestern states, are not unlike furnaces at the present time."

In the Lolo national forest in Western Montana and Eastern Idaho more than 600,000,000 feet of white and yellow pine timber is in the path of fires, and other districts in various parts of the Northwest are threatened. Representatives of timber companies returning to Spokane from Montana and Idaho say that the fire lines are from eight to ten miles in extent in numerous places.

PLAN BIG CORPORATION TO CULTIVATE LOGGED LANDS

Hoquiam, Aug. 8.—For the purpose of cultivating the logged-off lands of Southwest Washington and financing a giant corporation with a capital stock of $10,000,000, a committee of fifteen has been appointed by the Southwest Washington Development Association to formulate a plan to incorporate the company and make its report at the next quarterly meeting, which will be held in Goldendale in October of this year.

The plan, or idea, of this immense corporation was advanced by W. D. Mack, of Aberdeen, who outlined the plan.

Employers' Liability Report.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Compulsory employers' liability is contemplated in a revision of the Illinois laws covering workmen's accidents proposed by the Illinois employers' liability commission, as show in its tentative report just issued.

"So your wife wants to vote?" "Not exactly," replied Mr. Meekton. "She wants the opportunity of voting if she wishes. Then she will do as she likes about it."—Washington Star.

DUTCH ARCHITECTURE HONEST.

Houses of Holland Designed More for Service than for Show.

The architecture of Holland could be summed up in the one word, honest. Pretense is altogether lacking, but to many people this is far from being a fault. The influence of Germany has been greatly felt, owing, of course, to the close proximity of that country. The French feeling has also found its way into the Netherlands for the same reason; but the Italian influence has rarely been known, and its absence is always to be deprecated, says the Delineator.

The Dutch are a neat, thrifty people and their houses express to a marked degree many of their traits. In the cities and small towns, for instance, the trim rows of private dwellings are particularly attractive, though built primarily for comfort and devoid of much adornment.

While Dutch house exteriors may not invariably please the eye, it must be remembered that the Hollanders have greatly atoned for their lack of artistic feeling here by a splendid sense of interior decorating. Witness, for instance, their passion for delft, porcelain and other ceramics, and the uses to which they have put them in their schemes for interiors.

They cannot, then, be called a wholly inartistic people. Their homes, on the contrary, are worthy of the closest study; and the duplication of a Dutch house, inside and out, should prove a fascinating idea. A Dutch kitchen, for example, is always delightful; and the same feeling, carried through the entire house, would make something rarely distinctive in this country.

MEN OF ACTION.

In the rush for Alaskan gold men did not forget to be ready to help the unfortunate. The author of "Trailing and Camping in Alaska," A. M. Powell, narrates an incident that occurred at Valdez. The place was overcrowded with prospectors and miners, food was scarce and there was a good deal of sickness. Many had come over the glacier, and others had lost their lives in the attempt.

A dog team galloped up and stopped in front of the only pretense of a hotel at Valdez. The night was dark, as the northern winter nights always are when the moon is not shining. The dogs immediately lay down, almost exhausted from their long trip, and the two men were soon surrounded by inquiring friends. One of the two said:

"What do you think, fellows? Just this side of Saw-Mill Camp we passed a woman who was pulling a sled on which was her sick husband. We remonstrated against the undertaking of crossing the glacier, but she replied that they might as well die up there as anywhere else, as it meant certain death to stop. Our dogs could only pull our outfit, and there wasn't grub enough for all, so we were compelled to leave them. They will be at the last timber to-night, and if somebody doesn't go to their rescue, they will be dead by this time to-morrow."

A man stepped out from the crowd and said:

"I'll go for one. Now who else has a good dog team to splice in with mine?"

"I'm your huckleberry," announced another.

It was three o'clock in the morning before they had made their selection of dogs and were ready to start on that hazardous trip.

"There goes the best dog team in Alaska and driven by the best two men on earth!" exclaimed a man, as they turned a corner and were gone.

The trail was easily followed, and soon the nine miles of level were passed. The speed slackened only when they were ascending the summit, which they reached by eleven that morning.

Down, down the steep descent they plunged, and by one o'clock were off the glacier and skipping over level ground. The poor woman had pulled the sled until she was exhausted, and had sat down beside her husband. She was bidden to seat herself comfortably while they fastened the two sleds together. Soon they were bounding away at such a rapid rate of speed that the woman wept for joy. When they recrossed the summit the whole range was "smoking" and the wind was sending the fine snow along the crust.

"Twenty miles to town, and it can never catch us," said the driver.

Townsmen anxiously waited and watched the trail. As the team rushed up they were surrounded by eager, helping hands. They were saved by men, not of good intentions only, but by men of instant action."

Stage Fright.

"They tell me your husband has become one of the easiest and most graceful after dinner speakers in the city. I understand he has no end of engagements."

"Yes, and I have to sit up and give him a good dinner after every one of them."

"After every banquet?"

"Yes. When he knows they are going to call on him to speak he's always too scared to eat."—New York Journal.

Love's Market.

She—Harold, do you speculate?

Harold—Well, I'm engaged to you.—Life.

When a woman has a great deal of energy, the people always say, "What a pity her husband doesn't have some of it."

OFFICERS THINK MANY CHINESE ARE COMING IN

Portland, Ore., Aug 6.—That 30,000 Chinese are waiting in Canada for an opportunity to enter the United States, and that a fleet of 20 gasoline launches is employed regularly along Puget Sound in the smuggling of Chinese and opium into the United States is the belief of government officials who have recently made investigations.

Most of the contraband Chinese are landed in Canada as stowaways and later are transferred to the cannery towns along the Sound. As opportunity is presented, the Chinese are hurried south into Oregon and California. Through the use of light draft launches the skippers of the smuggling fleet are said to be immune from the operations of the revenue cutter which has been detailed to watch them, the government boat drawing 18 feet.

It is alleged that many of the Chinese now in Canada have paid the "head tax" demanded by that government and are being schooled for the time when they shall be apprehended in the United States and shall have to furnish an account of their presence before the courts.

MANY THOUSANDS CROSS CANADA LINE BOTH WAYS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Immigration from and emigration to Canada is the subject of a statement issued by the immigration bureau.

During the 12 months ending March 31, there were 74,912 arrivals of aliens and citizens from Canada for permanent residences in the United States against 61,517 during the previous 12 months.

In the same period there were 103,789 departures of aliens and citizens from the United States into Canada for permanent residence against 59,842 the previous twelve months.

Citizens arriving were not counted during the whole of 1909, and it is estimated that 15,000 arrived during the year. That number has been included in making up the total of 61,517.

Population of St. Paul.

Washington, Aug. 6—St. Paul, Minn., has a pouulation of 214,774, according to a bulletin just issued by the census bureau.

FEDERAL CENSUS FIGURES MIDDLE OF OCTOBER

Washington, Aug. 8.—It will be about the middle of October before the people of the United States learn their true number as revealed by the count of the thirteenth census. It is generally believed that the number will be about 90,000,000, and census officials are known to share this belief.

About 300 of the more than 1,800 clerks in the census office are compiling population figures only, while the others are working on other statistics. Contrary to the general opinion, all the counting of the people is done by hand, the tabulating machines being used only in classification as to race, sex and other conditions.

Enumeration figures will continue to be given day by day for the next two months or more, while the sociological and industrial figures will come later. All enumeration figures are counted from three to four times, and an investigation is orered if there is a suggestion of an error.

In two cities where evidence of fraud has been discovered, and in one, Great Falls, Mont., a prosecution has been undertaken for fraudulent enumeration.

The intention of Director Durand is to tabulate first the population of the large cities, after which the figures for the states will be given out as they are ascertained, the returns for all counties in the state being announced at the same time as the figures for the state.

Surveyors Complete Line.

White Salmon, Aug. 8.—Surveyors for the Mount Adams electric line have completed the running of the base line and have now started on the permanent survey, the survey that will accurately determine the cost of the road, which is awaited with much interest, for many real estate deals are tied up pending the report.

Need Forage for Canal Zone.

Seattle, Aug. 6.—The Isthmian canal commission has just called for bids on 675 tons of oats, 950 tons of hay and 75 tons of rice straw for use in the Panama canal zone. This is one of the first occasions that the canal commission has invited Seattle grain and hay men to submit bids on this business. The bids are to be opened August 12.

PRESIDENT AUTHORIZES USE OF TROOPS TO FIGHT FIRES

Washington, Aug. 9.—The president has fully authorized the use of troops to fight forest fires throughout the West as occasion arises.

The president was apprised of the danger that threatens the national woodlands in the West by telegrams from the Western Forestry and Conservation Association and from the Western Pine Manufacturers' Association. Both organizations requested that military forces be permitted to help save the timber. The president telegraphed blanket instructions permitting the use of the soldiers.

The danger that confronts the forests is said to be the most serious in the history of the forest service, and it is feared the amount may run into many millions.

Secretary Ballinger, who is in Seattle, telegraphed Acting Secretary of the Interior Pierce that serious forest fires are reported in the Flathead Indian reservation and the new Glacier National park in Montana.

Mr. Pierce immediately communicated with Clement S. Ucker, chief clerk of the interior department, who is in Glacier park on a tour of inspection, to adopt emergency measures to meet the situation. The forest service also has promised to co-operate with the interior department.

School Debts Growing.

Olympia, Aug. 8.—Pointing out that the district school debt in Washington has increased from $3.54 for each child of school age in 1890 to $33.86 in 1909 and other startling facts concerning mismanagement of school finances, H. B. Dewey, state school superintendent, has addressed a letter to all county superintendents urging that provision be made this year for paying off some of this debt, and also that high interest bonds and warrants now outstanding be refunded at lower interest rates.

Burglary Is Defined.

Olympia, Aug. 6.—In an official opinion to the prosecuting attorney of Kittitas county the attorney general rules that under the new criminal code any unlawful entry of a building is burglary and such entry in the night time is first degree burglary.

OFFICIAL PAPER

Published Every Friday at Port Angeles by The Webster Publishing Co.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1910

Vacant houses are becoming scarce in Port Angeles. They are being occupied by newcomers.

Candidates filing since our last issue are: Geo. Talbot for assessor, on Republican ticket; Fred Machenheimer, Sr., commissioner first district, Republican ticket; D. A. Christopher, on Republican ticket, and John Hallahan, on Democratic ticket, for assessor; E. E. Fisher for representative, Republican, and E. A. FitzHenry for County Engineer on Democratic ticket.

The Canadian Pacific steamship Princess May, which left Skagway, Alaska, southbound for Vancouver on August 4th, with eighty passengers and a crew of sixty-eight, struck a reef on Sentinel island and sunk within two hours. Passengers and crew were saved. The Princess May was well known in Angeles, having carried excursionists between this city and Victoria on more than one occasion.

Hon. D. S. Troy, of Chimacum, accompanied by a couple of other gentlemen, autoed to Angeles Thursday to attend the Elks' convention. Mr. Troy has filed as a candidate on the Democratic ticket for state senator from the district composed of Jefferson, Clallam and San Juan counties. The Irondale News, in speaking of Mr. Troy's candidacy says, that he will carry practically the entire vote of the steel city (his home precinct) at the coming election.

One often hears the inquiry, when are we to have the census figures? It has recently been announced from Washington that not before the middle of October will the true number of the people of the United States be revealed by the count of the thirteenth census. The intention is to tabulate first the large cities, after which the figures for the states will be given out as they are ascertained, the returns for all counties in the state being announced at the same time as the figures for the state. This work will extend for a period of two months or more. The sociological and industrial figures will come later.

The fight of the Anti-Saloon League and the opponents of the liquor business to pass a state wide prohibition amendment in Oregon and a county unit local option law in Washington, are proving an important phase of the political situation in these two Northwestern states. Both states now have local option, and there are many "dry" districts in each, both town and country elections resulting in many cases favorably to the Anti-Saloon League. In Washington the Anti-Saloon League is working hard to elect its friends to office, and party lines will fall loosely with many voters at the coming elections. The Republican convention failed to mention local option or the county unit in its platform, and it is not thought likely that the Democrats will, and it is more than likely that the Anti-Saloon workers will have to make their fight without the support of either party, but they are not discouraged and will do their best in any case.

The prohibition submission proposition in the general preliminary election held in Texas last month, received a majority of nearly 40,000 votes. The legislature next January will submit a prohibition amendment to the constitution for a vote of the people in 1911.

Charles Claypool of Olympia and Stanton Warburton of Tacoma, candidates for Congress on the Republican ticket before the September primaries, were here attending the State Association meeting of Elks, and, incidently, looking after their political fences among the attending delegates.

While at the State convention in Tacoma last week, A. A. Smith of the Tribune-Times announced that he desired to become a candidate for the joint senatorship of this district before the September primaries. After returning home, accompanied by G. M. Lauridsen, H. J. Bugge, K. O. Erickson, T. T. Aldwell, C. J. Farmer and W. B. Smith, a pilgrimage was made to Port Townsend in an effort to have William Bishop of Jefferson pull out of the race in favor of the Clallam county aspirant. Arriving at Port Townsend, a hasty meeting of local Republicans was called and the matter threshed out at great length.

From the Port Townsend Leader we glean that the proposition advanced by the Clallam gentlemen was to the effect that, inasmuch as Jefferson had had the senatorship for a number of years, being followed by San Juan for another four year term, that Clallam was entitled to the place at this time. It was suggested, in the light of a courtesy, that Mr. Bishop withdraw his candidacy. It was the sentiment of the gathering that, owing to the fact that the time for holding the primaries was but a short distance away, and William Bishop had been in the field for months, that no arrangement could be entered into whereby a choice that would be unanimous with Republicans in both counties can be made. Mr Bishop declared that all the friends whom he had consulted were opposed to such a move. He announced that he had received many letters and personal requests from Clallam Republicans, asking him to make the race, and up to the time he was informed at the late Republican convention that an effort was being made to secure his withdrawal from the ticket in favor of a Clallam man, had thought that his choice was practically unanimous in this county.

The Northwestern General Hospital at Irondale is one of the most modern and best equipped institutions of its kind in the entire Northwest. It is a handsome four story brick structure occupying the most sightly location in Irondale, commanding a beautiful view of Port Townsend Bay, the Olympic and Cascade mountains. It contains wards, single private rooms, and two and three rooms with private bath. Acute and chronic medical and surgical cases accepted for treatment.

Proceedings Board of Commissioners

Thursday, the 4th day of August, 1910, at 1:00 p. m.

The Board, being unable to meet at 9:00 a. m. pursuant to adjournment, met at 1:00 p.m., all members being present.

The minutes of July 5-6 were read and approved.

The Board granted the petition of George Kimball et als for county road, commencing at the south west corner of northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Sec. 18-30-4, running thence north and ending at the Burlingame Road.

The Engineer not having his plans and specifications ready for the construction of the Morse creek cut-off road and the bridge across the Dungeness river on the Burlingame road, the Board instructed the Auditor to re-advertise for bids on this work.

The Board approved the Saloon License Bond of Dan. T. Anderson for running a saloon at Dungeness, Wash.

The Board granted the petition of John Schutz et als for a county road, commencing at county road on section line of Sec. 28-27, Tp. 30, R. 12, running thence in a southerly direction and ending at the south boundary line of Township 30, Range 12.

The matter of the application for transportation of .... Jeter to the State Institution for Feebleminded, the Board finds that said child is of the age of....years, and resides with its father and mother at Forks, Clallam County, Wash.; that his name was duly reported to the County School Superintendent of Clallam County by the clerk of the School district at Forks, who made full report of such child to this board.

It further appearing to the satisfaction of the Board that it is a proper person to be sent to said institution and that its parents are unable to bear the expenses of sending said child, whereby it becomes the duty of the Board to send said child to said school.

It is therefore ordered that a warrant be drawn payable to the order of Geo. M. Jeter in the sum of $30, to be paid to him in full of all expenses incident to taking said child to said institution and placing him therein.

The matter of the application for transportation of Franklin A. Leete to the State Institution for Feebleminded, the Board finds that said child is of the age of seven years and resides with its mother in Port Angeles, Washington; that his name was duly reported to County School Superintendent of Clallam County by the clerk of the school district of Port Angeles, who made full report of such child to this board.

It further appearing to the satisfaction of the Board that it is a proper person to be sent to said institution and that the parents are unable to bear the expenses of sending said child, whereby it becomes our duty to send said child to said school.

It is therefore ordered that a warrant be drawn payable to the order of the mother, Thyra Leete, in the sum of $30, to be paid to her in full of all expenses incident to taking said child to said institution and placing him therein.

The Board eaxmined the following claims and ordered warrants drawn for the same upon the Current Expense fund:

Grandma and Grandpa Fisher are the happiest people in town since the arrival of their son Chas. Fisher, of Elgin, Ill., who has not been here for fourteen years. He is accompanied by his daughter Miss Elizabeth Fisher, who has never before seen her grandparents. Mr. Basche, also of Elgin, Ill., is a guest at the Fisher home. They all arrived Wednesday and expect to make a visit of several weeks.

On Thursday of last week Mrs. J. J. MacKechnie entertained eleven old ladies in honor of her mother, Mrs. Burdick. Eight were more than 70 years old and ten were widows. Dinner was served at 12:30 and such a dinner; everything good and enjoyed by all. Mrs. Kemp being the oldest lady present, received the prize, a match holder of crude copper from some mine in California furnished by Mr. Hooker. Strange to say, every lady present wanted to be the oldest. The afternoon was spent in talking over the days of long ago when the clatter of the loom and the hum of the spinning wheel was heard in nearly every home. The work for the afternoon was knitting, darning stockings and patchwork. Mr. Fulmer was called up in the afternoon and took the picture of the crowd including the hostess, Mrs. MacKechnie. I. Witness.

Uncle Sam Probes Third Degree System

WASHINGTON.—One of the investigating committees set in motion at the late session of congress that is expected to yield some interesting results is the subcommittee of five senators, members of the judiciary committee, who have been directed to investigate and report on the workings of the "third degree," as exemplified by federal officers in criminal prosecutions.

The investigation will take a wide range. One member of the committee will be sent to Oklahoma to learn what basis there is for the charge made by Gov. Haskell and his friends, that the prosecutions started against him under the Roosevelt administration were inspired by personal malice, and that the methods resorted to by the special agents of the government in their efforts to convict Haskell, were discreditable.

Another branch of the investigation will relate to some of the western prosecutions, especially those conducted by Robert Kay Devlin, as United States attorney for the Northern district of California. Devlin's nomination was hung up in the judiciary committee of the senate for a long time, on a complaint that he had persecuted Dr. Perrin, one of the defendants in certain land-fraud cases, who, after being indicted, was finally discharged for want of evidence.

A special agent of the department of justice sent out to investigate the charge made a written report that Dr. Perrin should never have been indicted; that improper methods were employed to bring about his indictment, and even after the government officers were aware that they could not make a case against Dr. Perrin, the indictment was allowed to hang over his head for many months, to his great personal detriment.

The methods of Francis J. Heney and Detective Burns may be inquired into, and it is not unlikely that some attention may be given to the charge made against the method of administering the criminal laws in Alaska, especially at Juneau, where the United States attorney and United States marshal were recently removed from office on the complaint of Gov. Walter E. Clark.

The resolution directing an investigation was offered by Senator Heyburn of Idaho, and was based upon reports in newspapers of the police methods employed in the Sayler murder case at Atlantic City. That case was not one with which the federal government had to do, but, in as much as the methods complained of may infringe the constitutional guarantees of the individual citizen, the committee feels that it has jurisdiction, and that case along with others complained of will be investigated.

"Corpse" Aroused by Noise, Runs Away

"THERE'S a dead man in that alley."

This exclamation by an excited colored man at Eleventh and E streets, in Washington, caused considerable consternation among pedestrians and loungers in that vicinity a few days ago. He pointed to a narrow alleyway on the north side of E street between Eleven and Twelfth streets, between two buildings.

Pretty soon the mouth of the little alley was blocked by curious people. A business man in the neighborhood who peered over the heads of the morbid crowd and saw a man stretched out full length, and apparently very ill or dead, in the alleyway, telephoned to the Emergency hospital for an ambulance. Other men ran hither and thither in search of a policeman.

"He may be drunk," suggested an old man as he gazed at the prostrate form.

"No," another man declared, "I reckon it is a case of heat prostration."

"I think he's just dreamin' about Jack Johnson's victory," said a third.

In the meantime the Emergency hospital ambulance with clanging gong arrived on the scene, and a policeman with perspiration streaming down his face rushed up to the mouth of the alley and was forcing his way through the crowd to get at the supposed dead man.

The noise aroused the "corpse." The prostrate figure slowly arose, disclosing the stalwart form of a negro.

He gazed in astonishment at the crowd that blocked up the entrance to the alley and saw the policeman and white-coated Emergency surgeon elbowing their way toward him. With a yawn and a stretch of his arms, the negro darted into the side door of a printing office, slamming the door behind him.

Investigation disclosed the fact that the negro has been employed at the printing establishment a number of years. He said he was tired and went out into the quiet, cool alleyway to take a nap during the lunch hour. That was all.

Sold MacVeagh Spoiled Vinegar; Fined

JAMES WILSON, secretary of agriculture, has been hot-footing it after a Chicago man who had the temerity to sell Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, a barrel of bogus vinegar. MacVeagh bought the vinegar believing it was the real thing, the kind that father used to make on the farm, fit to put on lettuce and pickle pigs' feet with and all that sort of thing.

The looks and smell of the stuff made him suspicious, and so he hallooed for the pure food inspectors to come and examine. They reported the alleged vinegar was in reality adulterated and artificially colored and misbranded. A criminal information was filed against the luckless storekeeper and he was taken into the United States court, accused of deceiving and misleading MacVeagh. The man pleaded guilty and was fined $25. He promised to be good.

A Buffalo milling concern has been fined for mixing ground corncobs with flour middlings. The same concern was also found guilty of putting ground corncobs in a "gluten" preparation. A lot of "raisins," shipped from California to Texas, was discovered to be in part a decomposed vegetable substance. A Chicago firm selling a "quick-rising" buckwheat flour has been fined for fraud in having sold in reality a mixture of wheat flour and buckwheat without any quick-rising properties.

Another Buffalo dealer was caught selling to Michigan folk a wonderful "hair tonic" which was advertised to cure headache and loss of hair and all sorts of thins. Analysis showed it contained 98.5 per cent. of alcohol and nothing to cure anything. The dealer was let off with a fine. A Michigan man was detected selling in large quantities a "hay fever cure" composed of 99.95 per cent. cocaine hydocloride. He was fined $100. Several lemon extracts and vanilla extract fakers have been recently caught and punished.

Government's O. K. on the Lowly Toad

A RECENT bulletin of the department of agriculture in Washington has taken up the case of the toad, dispelling the "host of vague and ludicrous fancies as to its venomous qualities. Its medicinal virtues, or most commonly, the hidden toadstone of priceless value."

Touching toads, says the bulletin, does not produce warts on the hands. The toad's breath does not cause convulsions in children, nor does a toad in a newly dug well insure a good and unfailing water supply, nor in a new made cellar will one bring prosperity to the household.

The Massachusetts experiment station has been investigating the habits, food and economic value of the toad, and the result establishes its claim to consideration and appreciation. First of all, as to the longevity of the toad, the investigators express the opinion that many toads reach an age of at least ten or fifteen years. They also believe it possible for the toad to live for a limited time without food, but doubt stories about toads being found in rocks and trees.

"The toad," says the pamphlet, "is a nocturnal animal, and ventures out during the day only when tempted by an abundance of food or when the air and moving insects, centipeds, etc. At is full of moisture. It eats only living night, soon after sundown, or even before on cool evenings. It emerges from its shelter and slowly hops about in search of food. Almost a regular beat is covered. In the country this includes forays along roadsides, into gardens and cultivated fields and wherever insect food is abundant and grass or other thick herbage does not prevent locomotion. In cities and suburban villages the lawns, walks and particularly the spots beneath electric lamps are favorite hunting grounds.

EARLY USE OF INK

FINE HAIR BRUSH FIRST METHOD OF APPLICATION.

Still in Use by Chinamen—The Day of the Quill—Steps That Marked Gradual Development of Steel Pan.

If you would like to witness the very oldest method of writing with fluid, you may do so by calling at the laundry. Nine-tenths of all the Chinese laundrymen in this country still mark up their accounts and keep all their books with a fine hair brush. While this is the oldest method of applying ink, the first writing was really done in stone with some sharp instrument. When we consider this primitive way of putting out thoughts and the general happenings of the day into written form, it is not surprising that so much of the history left us by our historic ancestors is incomplete. The rapidity with which we use our writing facilities of this day will mean much to future generations who may seek to know of us.

The longest step from antiquity to the modern was taken when the qualifications of the goose-quill for pens was discovered. At once the demand became so great for these in most parts of the civilized world that the raising not only of geese but ducks and crows in several of the countries of Europe became in itself a great pursuit. England alone shipped 30,000,000 quills for pens in a single year. The quills after being picked and sorted were given a hot sand bath and scraped to remove the outside skin. The barrels of the quills were afterward hardened in a solution made for the purpose and hung up to dry until they were sufficiently brittle to admit of the slit being made for the pen. Sometimes a pocketknife was used, and again a small penknife was used for this purpose.

About 85 years ago steel pens began to take the place of the quills. They had been invented a number of years before, but one improvement after another was found necessary before they could be brought into general use. At first the holder and pen were made all in one piece, but this, of course, made it necessary to throw away the holder every time the pen wore out. A pen without the holder that we today pay a penny for, cost as high as 50 cents in those days. And yet there is much more care and attention to the small details in the pen we use today than there was in the 50-cent ones of the early days of the industry.—American Boy.

Dark and Threatening.

Two baseball teams, which were made up of negro players, exhibited a great contest of the national game before a large crowd on the open lots at Twelfth and Porter streets, says the Philadelphia Times. The score stood 2 to 2 in the eighth inning. Two men were on bases, two players out, when the pitcher of one of the nines walloped the ball to midcenter. He sprinted around the bags as if in pursuit of a dozen chickens. The center fielder of the opposing team shot the ball with terrific speed toward the fourth station, and as the runner was about to cross the plate the catcher touched him with the horsehide. The negro umpire shouted at the top of his voice: "De runner am safe," and as the word "safe" died away the many spectators began to crowd around the umpire. "What's dat?" shouted one. "You done be blin'," yelled another, and a few other remarks followed. The man argued for a while, and when the entire mob was crowded around him the umpire's voice rang out in loud tones: "Game called on account of darkness!"

A Real Easy Boss.

"Well, whatta y' thinka that!" exclaimed the new stenographer, looking dazed.

"What's the matter?"

"Well, you see, I was out to a dance last night and stayed late. Of course I am horribly tired this morning, and I almost went to sleep over the dictation. I was terribly afraid the boss would notice it, and so he did. When he asked me what was the matter I was so scared that I told him the truth, and then I just knew I would be fired, but whatta y' think! He said, 'Well, just write half a dozen of the most important letters and then go home and take a nap.' I thought he was joking or that it was a new way of firing me, but he said he was in earnest: that he had been young once and that he thought I'd do better work the next day if I had a chance to rest up. You bet I will. But I never heard of a boss like him."

Complaints at Postoffice Window.

The patient clerks at the complaint window in the postoffice have some queer experiences, says the Kansas City Star. Uncle Sam in his benevolent way has given them one weapon of defense, the complaint blank. The wise clerk is polite and asks that the blank containing the grievance and other data for the postal inspectors be filled out. The writing of the complaint usually cools off the anger of the complainant. Not so was the experience of one of the clerks in the Federal building the other day.

"I've been waiting for a package of medicine I know was mailed to me a week ago," said a woman who appeared at the window.

"Too bad," said the suave clerk. "Please fill out this blank and tell in full the nature of your complaint."

"Well, if you must know, its biliousness," was the woman's reply.

LATE CHIEF JUSTICE

Melville W. Fuller Possessed Great Administrative Ability.

First to Stop Phonetic Spelling—Bad Land Titles in the District of Columbia Probed by Committee.

Washington.—The late chief justice of the Supreme court, Melville W. Fuller of Illinois, was regarded in Washington as an ideal man for presiding officer of that august bench. He attained his high position in spite of the fact that when President Cleveland appointed him he was only a practising lawyer of no great national reputation and had never held a judicial office. The skepticism which met his appointment was almost as universal as is now the judgment that Mr. Fuller ranked with his illustrious predecessors as a practical and hard-working man.

Originally holding to legal tenets which grew to be out of touch with modern thought, the late chief justice well illustrated the purpose of the bench by listening to the reasonable arguments of lawyers better versed at the outset than he, and before the end of his judicial career was found in the Supreme court record reversing the applied principles of law which he brought with him to Washington. By many astute lawyers this is regarded as one of the most striking examples of the largeness of the judicial mind of the late chief justice.

Combined with these judicial functions great administrative ability is required of the chief justice of the Supreme court. This quality Chief Justice Fuller possessed in great degree.

Few, if any, complaints have ever been made during his administration as presiding officer of the court that the wheels of justice of the highest tribunal of the land were turning too slowly or unevenly. Behind the outward manifestation of the courtly gentleman and his mild-mannered voice, which in recent years has been almost inaudible to those seated on the edge of the court room, was a tremendous force of character and a keen sense of justice and a capability for hard and persistent work wholly out of proportion with his years.

Justice Fuller never pretended to voice the opinions of any one but himself and had no liking for the limelight. His position in Washington made it possible for him to fix his social status where he willed. He had no liking whatever for anything smacking of ostentatious display. On and off the bench he was the personification of judicial dignity. He possessed a sense of humor which he employed quietly and with effect. The subjects of his conversation were full of substance, scholarly and profound and rich in wisdom.

It was Justice Fuller who practically settled the fate of the Roosevelt propaganda for phonetic spelling. At the time when congress was daily receiving messages from the White House spelled in the new form of orthography and when the house of representatives was trying to nerve itself to the point of putting a quietus on this new system Justice Fuller quietly squelched its use in the Supreme court. At that time the government printing office, under orders from President Roosevelt, was printing all documents for the executive departments, including the department of justice, in phonetic spelling. This included briefs which were submitted to the Supreme court. In a land case presented to the court Solicitor General Henry M. Hoyt offered one of these briefs. In glancing through it hastily Chief Justice Fuller espied a quotation from an opinion rendered by former Associate Justice Bradley, in which the word "through" was spelled "thru."

"Did I understand you to say that this purports to be a literal quotation from the opinion of Justice Bradley?" inquired the chief justice.

It was not necessary for him to say more. Mr. Hoyt realized from this inquiry that phonetic spelling would not be tolerated by the Supreme court, and that serious blunder had been made in changing the spelling used by a former member of that court. He promptly and quietly informed the court that there would be no repetition of the offense. That ended phonetic spelling in the third co-ordinate branch of the government, and shortly thereafter congress itself limited its use to correspondence between the executive departments.

With other members of the court, Justice Fuller had an abhorrence for those who used its decisions as a vehicle for making money on the stock market. Nothing was ever said on the subject in open court, but every obstacle was put in the way of such persons when opportunity offered. When the Consolidated Gas case from New York was decided it was an open secret that a lawyer who had a telephonic connection with a stock broker had made a good round sum of money out of it. When the company later petitioned for a rehearing before the court, the lawyer again was on hand prepared if possible to duplicate his former winning. He waited all day for the expected announcement, but it was not until he gave up his quest that he found that the decision had been given to the chief clerk of the court by Justice Fuller early in the day, and he in turn had quietly informed the newspaper men.

PROBE BAD LANDS TITLES.

A report recently made to congress by a commission appointed to examine land titles in the District of Columbia disclosed that many lots of land occupied by modern business houses and residences in the national capital are still owned by the government, notwithstanding the present tenants believe they have a clear title to the property. For example, the Washington Gaslight company occupies a whole square on Twenty-eighth street, which is claimed by the government. A paving company occupies a large tract of land near Rock creek to which the government lays claim. A triangular piece of land, now occupied by many residences, is according to the report, the property of the government.

This question of land titles in the national capital is not a new one. Two years ago congress created a commission to study it. The commission consisted of the attorney general, the secretary of war, Senator Scott of West Virginia; Representative Bartholdt of Missouri, and one of the district commissioners. The report reveals a horrible land tangle, which the courts will probably never be able to straighten out. The tangle is the outcome of the wild speculation in real estate that took place for a good many years after the capital was laid out.

The story, according to the lawyers who have conducted the investigation, is one of romance and disaster. James Greenleaf of Massachusetts, from whose family the poet Whittier took his middle name, was according to the story, laid before congress, the first and greatest of the three land operators whose names figure most in the early deeds. Greenleaf made the first contract to buy of the commissioners who distributed the parcels of land in possession of the United States. He was joined later by Robert Morris, the financier of the revolution, and by John Nicholson. All three before their death were in jail for debts growing out of their ventures in Washington land. What Morris made through his financial transactions during the dark days of the revolution he lost in Washington lands.

Private lands were acquired in Washington in the early days by a very simple process. The territory "not exceeding" ten miles square was ceded to the United States government by Maryland and Virginia and placed under the authority of three commissioners, appointed by the president. They or any two of them were required, under the direction of the president, to survey and by proper metes and bounds define and limit a district of territory, and the territory so defined was established as a permanent seat of the government of the United States. Power was given the commissioners to purchase or accept land on the eastern side of the Potomac, for the use of the United States, and the commissioners were further required to provide suitable buildings for the accommodation of congress, the president and public officers of the government of the United States. It was to raise money to erect the public buildings that the government planned to sell its land to private parties.

The report to congress relates that President Washington met with the original proprietors in Georgetown, March 29, 1791. As a result of this conference, an agreement was entered into which resulted in certain deeds of trust, under which the proprietors of the land conveyed their holdings in trust to Thomas Beall, son of George Beall, and John MacKall Gantt. In consideration of the sum of five shillings and the various trusts, each of the proprietors conveyed his land to be laid out into such streets, squares, parcels and lots as the president might approve for the purpose of the federal city. For the residue, the various parcels were to be fairly divided, one-half to go to the original proprietors of the land and the other half to the United States.

BATTLE WITH SHARK

FISHERMEN HAVE DESPERATE FIGHT WITH MAN-EATER.

Find Human Bones and Part of a Kodak in Stomach of Huge Fish After They Succeed in Getting It Ashore.

Seattle.—After a terrible struggle lasting seven hours, a gigantic shark, 36 feet long and estimated to weigh more than fifteen tons, was captured by the combined crews of the fishing boats Goodpartner and Pioneer II. between Port Angeles and Port Crescent recently.

The monster is believed to be the largest fish ever caught in these waters.

The Goodpartner and the Pioneer II., much battered and battlestrained, with half of the crews nursing more or less serious wounds, towed the mammoth carcass into Elliott bay. In spite of the 30-horsepower engine with which each is equipped it took the two boats 15 hours to get the big carcass down from Port Townsend.

When pulled to the surface the tail was seen to be full of splinters and blue paint as the result of the struggle to demolish the Goodpartner. The shark is 18 feet in circumference at its middle and about twelve feet around the head.

The huge triangular mouth on the under side is five feet across. The flukes of the powerful tail are six feet apart. The body is gray and covered with tiny spikes which make it feel like a file.

One result of the shark's capture is that the crew of the Goodpartner will never do any more Sunday fishing. Captain Dragich and five men were hard at work early on Sunday morning pulling up their big salmon net.

They had not pulled very much of it into the boat when the leviathan made its presence known by thumping the bottom of the Goodpartner with its tail. A minute later it appeared alongside and hit the Goodpartner amidships.

Luckily the shark had entangled its front fins and its head in the stout meshes of the net. Before it could tear itself free three thicknesses of the net were wound around it.

Then the struggle began. The six men on the Goodpartner worked desperately to keep the head of the big fish near the boat and the death-dealing tail away. Again and again it would rear its big hulk out of the water and smash in the sides of the cabin.

Olaf Larsen, the youngest member of the crew, had his arm broken. Captain Dragich was cut in the head and chest by flying glass.

The Pioneer II. came to the assistance of the desperate fishermen on the Goodpartner after about an hour of the conflict. They towed the fish and the boat to a sandy beach.

Tackle was fastened to a tree on the shore and the Pioneer's winch managed to pull the fighting fish into the shoal water. As the tide ebbed the shark was left high and dry and its struggles diminished.

At 1:00 p. m. Capt. George Saeher of the Pioneer II. got close enough to the fish to chop a hole in its throat with an ax. A couple of barrels of blood flowed out and the long struggle was over.

Besides the personal injuries suffered by the various members of the crew, a big net valued at $1,000 was destroyed.

When first examined the fish was believed to be a whale or basking shark, but when the belly was cut into after 15 minutes' work with an ax, bones were found which indicate that it is a man eater. The bones, from their size and weight, are believed to be human, although the largest fragment is only four inches long, making it difficult to decide.

Another unusual find in the stomach, which might be taken as an indication that the bones are really human, is a piece of aluminum, now in the possession of Captain Dragich. None of the fishermen could explain of what the thin curved plate of aluminum had originally been a part. As soon as they came ashore, however, it was identified as part of a folding kodak.

The leather which covered the aluminum frame and the wooden parts of the kodak had been eaten away by the powerful juices in the shark's stomach. When the deposit of grease was scraped from the plate the words "No. 3 Folding Pocket Kodak, Model A, Patented" were plain.

It is believed that perhaps the owner of the kodak can be traced through the maker of the camera, as there are other factory marks on it which may allow of its being identified.

Not Her Suit.

Enraged at the tailor who had promised to send her suit time and again without any intention of fulfilling that promise, the young woman set out to call for that suit herself. When she was half way up the street she met a young man with a box under his arm who looked very much like the apprentice she had seen at her tailor's shop. To save herself a possible unnecessary trip downtown she approached this man with a polite "Good morning," and said:

"You come from ——?"

"What?" said the man.

"Isn't that the suit for Miss Johnson?"

"No, it ain't; it's my own suit I'm carryin'."

She continued her trip downtown.—New York Sun.

PARIS ET LES PARISIENNES

PARIS.—Dresses for the Grande Guinzaine, dresses for our fittings, for seaside or Casino. Dress for anything and everything is the order of the day!

Madame la Parisienne is at the zenith of her "Fievre de Toilette," and she is up betimes to rush off to her tailor for the smart little costume which can no longer be called a "trotteur," considering that we can hardly walk in it, and to her coutoulier for those flower petal gauze frocks in which she realizes all the charm of her fragile personality!

As to the heads of the great houses, they are now rushing off for a brief holiday before that terrible period of "creation" which they subject themselves to during August and part of September.

It is in the silence and mystery of those closed doors that the new fashions are devoted—the Paris fashions to whose tune the world must dance—for centuries have gone to create the artists in dress whom Paris alone can boast of possessing.

The exhibition of Brussels and the coming exhibition of Buenos Ayres set many of the grandes maisons into a fever of anxiety.

Paquin's exhibition in Brussels is a marvel whose artistic beauty is due to the fertile brain of the genius who presides over the great house that bears her name.

I have spoken to Mme. Paquin, whose unseen presence is felt through every fiber of the firm's gigantic operations. To her is due the adorable mise-en-scene that gives such relief to the exhibition where familiar life-like scenes have the haunting charm of reality.

The lingerie of this house is far-famed, for it surpasses in beauty and artistic merit all that can be imagined—the empire nightgowns are so embellished with lace and embroidery that not one inch of the linen groundwork can be seen.

Mme. Paquin is really an artist in every sense of the word. She has a wonderful eye for scenic effects, as well as being gifted with a sense of detail which renders her creations quite perfect.

The "Lever de Madame" at the Brussels exhibition shows us how lingerie can be glorified. The dainty nightgowns and saut du lits are most fascinating and much encrusted with lace.

It is marvelous how natural wax women can be made to look, and the life size dolls are almost as natural as creatures of flesh and blood.

The wonderful "scenario" at the Brussels exhibition, with its background of golden yellow and its pink shades, is all Mme. Paquin's own designing.

I saw some dainty new trifles at Paquin's in the guise of cache corsets made entirely of lace and Soutiens gorges so dainty and light that they are a luxury for summer wear, as they take the place of corsets.

Nightgowns are ideally pretty with thin empire bodices frothed with tiny valenciennes lace, while the saut de lit and the peignoirs mark the transitions and transformations of the petted children of luxury, for one must be rich to indulge in such costly cobwebs of lace and linen!

We are reminded of England's mourning by many of the gowns seen at Paquin's, where the pretty "mannequins" parade the lofty flower laden rooms in the Rue de la Prix.

One exquisite model I noted was of gray—the faintest silver gray silk velvet with a silver embroidered skirt of filmy black tulle, over which was a curiously eastern looking second skirt which only reached either side of the skirt so that the dress moved like a Nautch girl's skirt with every gesture and pose of the wearer, forming a poetry of motion not easy to describe! The bodice veiled and unveiled in turn was a poem of glittering silver veiled in a vist of black tulle. Delightful, too, was a little frocklet of black, the skirt showing a veiled hem of white silk, whilst the upper part of the bodice lighted into the grayness of black and white.

For the country there were fascinating frocks of white pique with narrow skirts to which a detached front and back panel gave wonderful grace.

The coatlet had most incongruous loose revers of black satin, faced half way with cherry color or Chinese blue velvet, and blouse of supple silk muslin in the most distinctive hues looked as if they could be folded into a nutshell. What wonders an ordinary sized trunk will be made to contain this season!

We have grown weary of the broderie angiaise sunshades. They were hard and ungraceful at best; far more charming are the tiny marquise sunshades, absolutely useless in themselves, but decorative in the extreme, as they give scope for such pretty poses and attitudes!

There is very little to tell of in hats. We have taken a frantic fancy for sweet peas, which climb over our straw shapes in superb and expensive profusion, for the best of us are growing caddish, and we look to what costs money more than to things beautiful in themselves.

Gigantic poppies with drooping petals, two of which are sufficiently ample to trim a hat, are the latest development of the blooms of the Garden of Sleep.

Fruit is showing on some of the hats—impossible fruit, of course, apples the size of plums, and cherries of the same "calibre," and all the gamut of weeping plumes and distracted aigrettes that represent the power of gold!

The latest summer dresses of floral silk or soft pongee have quaint narrow skirts tied in at one side and trimmed with a deep band of glace insertion. The bodice forms a high draped corselet, and the yoke and sleeves cut en kimono are entirely of lace. This is a simple and girlish make of dress. The chiffon and lace wraps are most poetical.

A dainty and serviceable frock is the one sketched for our readers today. It is of blue green taffeta shot with black, the sides very lightly embroidered in black silk soutache with a suspicion of dull gold. It has a very deep sailor collar fashioned from wide black satin ribbon, with narrow inside collar of cream. The soft silk jabot is of ochre lace. The sash and sash ends are of black satin ribbon with tasseled ends. The sleeves have deep revers ornamented with gold buttons. The hat is of black varnished straw lined with blue-green straw and trimmed with shaded blue feathers.

SPIDER ON THE FACE VEIL

Latest Freakish Novelty for Woman's Adornment Which Has Been Offered by Paris.

The spider beauty spot veil is the latest novelty offered to women. Of course it originated in Paris. It is a copy of a spider in black chenille and is posed outside the veil. It is almost an inch and a half in diameter. The veil is worked in imitation of a spider's web.

The veils which have been popular this season so far have been disfiguring enough with their leaves, insects, birds, aeroplanes and scarlike conventional patterns as part of the mesh, but they all sink into insignificance beside the web veil with its spider adornment.

Nonroyal Headgear.

One of the attaches of the American embassy at London tells a story wherein Michael Joseph Barry, the poet, who was appointed a police magistrate in Dublin, was the principal figure.

There was brought before him an Irish-American, charged with suspicious conduct. The officer making the arrest stated, among other things, that the culprit was wearing a "Republican hat."

"Does your honor know what that means?" was the inquiry put to the court by the accused's lawyer.

"It may be," suggested Barry, "that it means a hat without a crown."—Harper's Weekly.

Feminine Trifles of Dress.

The clerical collars—the ones buttoning at the back—with shaped turnovers embroidered in white with a touch of color are among the popular trifles. Colored collars embroidered with white will acompany white waists for the morning. Of these the girls can simply not get enough. One of the triggest fixings for a shirtwaist is the Persian trimmed silk ascot or bow. The Persian is put on in any sort of a novel way—a slanting piece at the knot and another in one end, or the knot is all Persian and the ends are tipped with the same silk. There is no end to the schemes to which the style lends itself, but the combination of plain and figured silk is excellent.

GETTING RICH IN ONIONS.

Brownsville, Tex., Made Famous by Strong Legume.

It has been several years since Brownsville, Tex., became famous because part of a negro regiment was accused of shooting up the town, but C. C. Morton, who helps to supply water for the stock and vegetables and sugar cane they raise down there, says that the place has settled down to work and get rich; and they are shipping carloads of onions to New York every day.

"We irrigate down in our part of Texas in a different way from what they do in the west," said Mr. Morton, according to the New York Sun. "We pump the water out of the river. There are twenty-five plants on the Rio Grande, all put up during the last five years, and we are getting ready to put in a big enterprise that will extend into the third county from the coast and will cost $6,000,000 or $7,000,000. At present about 300,000 acres are under irrigation. The present method is to pump the water up to the top of the river bank and there it flows into canals, some of them as long as eighteen or twenty miles.

"The country about Brownsville was absolutely depopulated until about five years ago. Brownsville was 160 miles from a railroad. They are now building a combination railroad and traffic bridge across the Rio Grande at that place, and on May 1 it is expected that through trains will be run through from New Orleans to Mexico City. Brownsville ten years ago had a population of about 8,000, of whom 90 or 95 per cent were Mexicans. To-day the population is about 12,000, with fully a fourth of them Americans. The Mexicans furnish good labor at 50 cents a day.

"Every two weeks from 12,000 to 15,000 home seekers come into Texas, taking advantage of the cheap tickets offered, and we are getting a good many of them in the country around Brownsville. They plant sugar cane and alfalfa and all the truck crops. One specialty they have gone in for is green onions, which net them from $400 to $600 an acre. Last year about 3,000 carloads were raised. Not one onion was shipped from that country five years ago, and to-day the Bermuda onion is being driven out of the market. Bermuda does not ship here 25 per cent of what it did when Texas started in the onion business. They are getting the Texas product in New York now." Mr. Morton did not bring sample with him.

FARMING INSITE CITY LIMITS.

Tiny Plots in New York Are Rented Out to Truck Farmers.

To say that farming within the boundaries of the city of New York is a profitable occupation and that it is carried on professionally with a large degree of success might seem to some an extravagant assertion. Yet John R. Bowie of the soil division of the federal department of agriculture, a New York letter to the Christian Science Monitor says, has just issued a report on the farming possibilities of this city, showing comprehensively that the best agriculture in the country is not only possible here, but carried on to a remarkable degree.

Within the city boundaries unoccupied lots and unsubdivided tracts are rented out in small plots for market gardening and trucking purposes. The majority of the farms are of miniature size, some one-half or one-quarter of an acre or even only the size of a city lot. Under such cramped conditions it is necessary to do some crop moving and marketing during every month of the year. Even the midwinter season the farmer uses to market his root crops which have been stored waiting higher prices and the fruit picked during the autumn. With the dawn of spring the spinach and rhubarb start the crop and having been disposed of at the city market other crops follow in a steady stream.

The chief point in this intensive farming is to utilize every foot of ground to its best advantage. The onion and radish are good examples of how this is accomplished. As soon as the onion develops the slightest suspicion of a bulb it is pulled and bunched and those next it in size are given a better opportunity for growth and development. In this way not a single crop, but a continuous supply of onions and radishes is produced.

Baseball and Grandma.

I remember being on a Chicago street car, says Ellis Parker Butler, in Success Magazine, sitting beside a nice old lady in mourning, a year or so ago. She was nervous and kept glancing at me, and then glancing away again. It made me uncomfortable. I thought she took me for a pickpocket or some other bad man.

Finally she could contain herself no longer. She leaned over. "Excuse me," she said, "but have you heard yet how the Cubs' game came out?" I hadn't, and her face fell, but in a moment she saw a possible opportunity for consolation. "Well," she asked, "can you tell me who they are putting in the box to-day?" How was that for a gray-haired grandma? In Chicago they all talk baseball, from the cradle to the grave. Up to three o'clock in the afternoon no one talks about anything but the game of the day before. From three o'clock on the only subject is the game that is being played. The school child who can not add two apples plus three apples and make it five apples with any certainty of correctness can figure out the standing of the Chicago nines with one hand and a pencil that will make a mark only when it is held straight up and down.

When a man prolongs his handshakes with a modest girl it is apt to make her blush.

PASTURING PIGS ON CLOVER

Produces Cheapest Pork, When Used In Conjunction With Some Supplemental Feed.

Even at present prices it is essentially to our interests to produce pork as cheaply as possible. Simply because hogs are selling at record prices we cannot allow the cost of production to creep up alongside the increased selling price. It should ever be the aim of the hogman to have the hogs and the methods which will enable him to produce a pound of pork with the smallest outlay consistent with good gains.

It has always been our opinion that the cheapest pork can be produced on clover pasture, when it is used in conjunction with some supplemental feed, writes Clyde A. Waugh, in Michigan Farmer. Clover furnishes cheap protein, allows the hog to exist in what approaches his natural condition, keeps him fairly healthy, manures your field and saves a great deal of labor.

We have found that most of our profitable litters are those that are farrowed about the time the sows can be turned on pasture. It is an easy matter to take a roll of hog fencing, stick in a post every seven or eight rods, and to stretch up your fence. It can be done in half a day. Several litters of pigs can be run in a few acres.

After suckling a few weeks the sows can be reduced to a ration of a few ears of corn a day. Before this a few troughs can be placed so as to admit the pigs and keep out the sows, when the pigs can be given shorts and other feeds.

Handled in such a manner you have fair sized shoats when the new corn crop is ready to be fed. Then, a little green corn can be used to advantage. However, by the time the corn is ready, the shoats will stand quite a heavy feeding while on the clover. By so doing, the spring pigs can often be turned off after running behind steers on a very short feed which begins early in the fall. Two years ago we turned a bunch of shoats so raised, in a corn field with the older hogs. When the piece was hogged off part of the spring pigs went to market.
