Off Eddie's Hook

by Fownden Flore

This is the day of the four-letter dialogue and the use of one syllable words to cover any number of conversations. We tore our hair about the word "meaningful" a while ago as one that threatened to knock the bottom out of the dictionary market.

And now the the four letter word and the matching of a number together is threatened by the five-letter word that is used by graduates from the silent movies, who are having language problems. So eager are even those of high degree, doctors of this and that, to appear the really down-to-earth person that they, too, refer to almost anything as the "thing".

So we are doing our "thing" for the week which is to say that we hope the day will return when the cultivated persons will again reserve the language of street and field for highly informal conversations.

The formal use of language which should govern nearly all public utterances should abhor the use of four or even five letter words singly or hitched together.

The practice of euphemism is the sign of the cultivated person, who can switch from the language of the street to the formal conversation of the platform. The language of the moment often indicates a lazy person who has not contrived to respect the minds of little children who should grow up with ability to employ any number of words to describe a sunset or prove a point.

Above all the language of the gutter should not be wafted into our living rooms where we have little children who can use words of more than one syllable with more telling effect than even the most astute university student who shouts his four letter invectives like a street corner Charlie McCarthy on the knee of a visual and audible reporter.

Toastmasters Club Installs New Officers During Ladies Night

Toastmasters Club number 25 held its installation of officers Tuesday evening, July 1 at Birney's according to S. H. Morse, club correspondent. It was ladies night and the club had as special guests, Don Anderson, newly elected District Governor and Herm Suess, newly elected secretary-treasurer of the district.

Jerry Hendricks, toastmaster, introduced Don Nailor, topicmaster; timer John Adams and evaluator Ray Morgan. Each toastmaster spoke briefly on a topic and some were quite funny.

Following the topic session, Toastmaster Hendricks introduced Herm Suess, district secretary-treasurer, who spoke briefly. Then the newly elected District Governor Don Anderson in an impressive manner installed officers for the ensuing six months:

President Robert Kennedy, Educational vice president George Wood, Administrative vice president John Adams, secretary Terry Peterson, treasurer Alan Russell and sergeant at arms Walt Fuller.

The district governor described duties and responsibilities of each of the offices and said the progress of the club rests upon attitudes and programs planned.

New president Robert Kennedy spoke on the club achievement program and urged the club to set standards of performance.

Past president Ray Morgan was presented a past president's pin by president Kennedy. Ray Morgan said it was an honor to serve the club and he appreciated the knowledge of parliamentary law he had learned.

Past District Governor Paul Conner was introduced and complimented the Port Angeles Club for winning several awards at the District 32 convention at Port Orchard. He presented from Toastmasters International the award won for membership building by the club.

District Governor Don Anderson closed the meeting with a challenge for each member to secure a member and emphasized the value of the management training program to assist members at their work. He said enthusiasm is necessary to insure success.

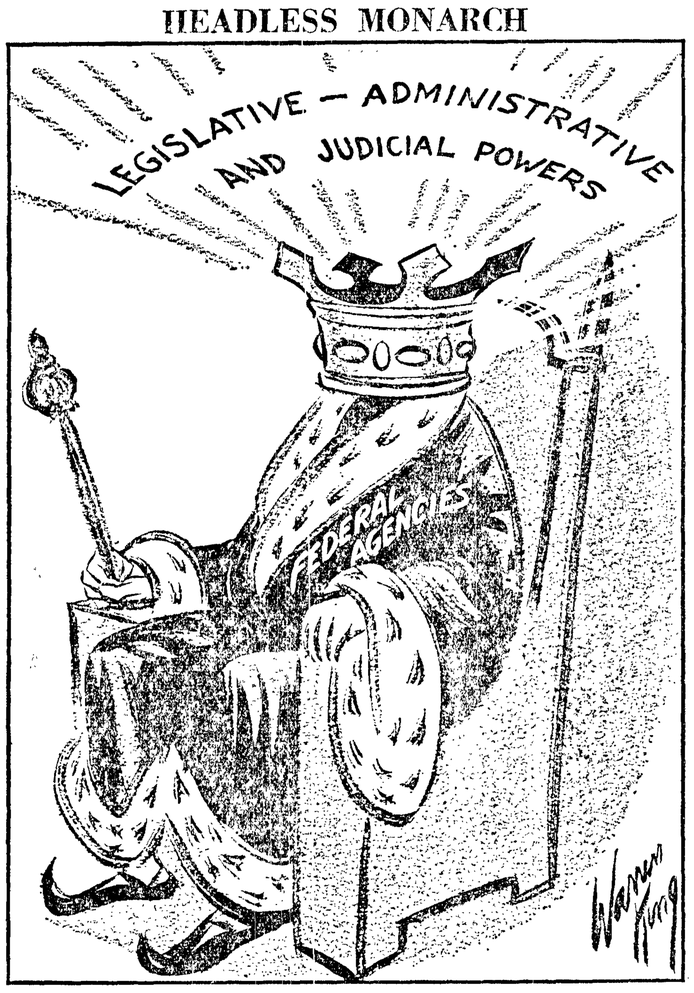
HEADLESS MONARCH



RESTRAINT NEEDED

Members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association have been urged by ANPA President William F. Schmick Publisher of the Baltimore Sun papers, to battle the "headless fourth branch of government"—the so-called independent agencies.

The influence of the Federal regulatory agencies, whose "proliferation seems to have no end," has "grown beyond comprehension," he explained. Examples of the "fourth branch" are National Labor Relations Board, Federal Communications Commission, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and Federal Trade Commission. There are 60 or more such agencies, large and small.

He added, "The organization of these agencies challenges the most fundamental concept of our governmental system—the separation of powers. The challenge comes because they possess a combination of legislative, executive, and judicial authority, a circular kingdom of power and glory."

He stated that the failure of Congress to spell out its intent exactly has permitted a usurpation of power by the regulatory agencies and a dangerous point of view has been allowed to develop. This point of view sees the administrative agency free to originate its own policies regardless of congressional intent.

The proper task of government regulation is to be fair, expeditious, impartial and consistent within the laws enacted by the Congress. Congress should insist on the retention of all legislative powers and the complete compliance by regulatory agencies of the policies defined in the legislation.

Kiwanians Hear Story Of Parole System in Washington State

by S. H. Morse, Correspondent

Walt Buzard, temporary program chairman, introduced John Rarity, probation officer in the city, who spoke to the Kiwanis meeting on July 1 on the subject of the offender and the work of the parole board and officer.

The speaker said if the offender is rehabilitated society is protected. Greater use is made of probation and shorter terms. Rarity reviewed the procedure of sentencing offenders and also the work of the various institutions dealing with these sentenced by the court.

The correctional institution at Shelton is where some offenders are sent to be screened and a study by various trained personnel made of the problems. The speaker told of the work of the probation and parole board and the setting of maximum and minimum sentences and stressed three principal rules for those parolled:

1. Report to parole officer; 2. Secure employment; 3. Maintain residence in the state. If circumstances warrant it, the parole board may establish additional restrictions as to drinking habits and association with others who are a detriment to the parolee.

S. T. Carlson had as his guest Robert Smith, San Francisco Office of the National Park Service. John Newson's guest was Tom Church Atlanta, Georgia. Clay Wolverton, former fire chief and long time member of the club, was the guest of S. H. Morse. Dick McLean had his daughter Holly as a guest and Bruce House had his two daughters, Cindy and Michele.

The monthly board meeting of the club will be July 11 at noon at Birney's. An interclub meeting is planned July 8 with an evening event at the Saanich B. C. club. Those interested may contact Richard Miller.

Al Williams Named District Commander At War One Conventios

Al Williams, long active in veterans' affairs in Clallam County was installed Commander of District One of Washington department of the Veterans of World War One during the 16th annual state convention held on the Whitman College campus in Walla Walla. Joe Lonn was installed department chaplain and Mrs. Lonn was appointed head of the state committee on hospital and community activities.

The ladies auxiliary of the Port Angeles post won first place in the placing and handling of publicity and second in the acceptance of radio releases.

Others who attended the convention from Port Angeles were Messrs. and Mmes. Lee Struble, Donald Powell, Donnell Bailey, Ed York, Ernest Roth, George Mogan and Mrs. Williams.

The Lonns and Mr. Wolverton spent an evening with Raymond Stickler, formerly of Port Angeles when he was with the Olympic National Park crew. Stickler is now custodian of the Whitman Monument near Walla Walla.

The Lonns report that the Monument is well maintained and is one of the most visited spots in eastern Washington. They were especially charmed by the campus and buildings at Whitman.

"The college is a credit to the community, state and nation," they agreed. "The courtesies extended by everyone will be long remembered."

VISITORS

Guests at the Lester Hulse home over the weekend were her brother and wife, Capt. and Mrs. Clifton Getchell of Woodburn, Oregon. They arrived Saturday and left Tuesday.

Jesse Ring ices Unqualified Praise of Oddfellows Committees

Visiting delegates to the annual sessions of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, Grand Lodge and Affiliated branches of Washington and Alaska were unanimous in their praise of the conduct of the 150th Anniversary celebration of Oddfellows. So states Jesse O. Ringer, Convention Committee Chairman.

The attendance was remarkable and the precision with which the sessions and programs were run off was the talk of the presiding officers. Next year's sessions will be conducted in Spokane.

"The success of our convention can be attributed in large measure to the wholehearted hospitality of each and every member of the community. Everything went off without a hitch to mar the orderly procedure of the planned program."

The people of Port Angeles have a right to be very proud of their role as "perfect hosts."

Mrs. C. B. Peterson of Sequim was elected Grand Warder of the Rebecca Assembly which puts her in line for the presidency. About nine hundred persons were in attendance.

Congressman Lloyd Meeds announced the appointment of Leonard Saari as his Administrative Assistant in Washington, D. C. Saari will assume the new duties as the Congressman's chief aid on July 1.

"Len's broad experience in government and public affairs at both the local and federal level make him particularly well qualified for this post," Meeds said.

For three years Saari was Legislative Assistant to Rep. Brock Adams of the Seventh District and was Public Relations Director for the Aero-Merchanics Union for more than five years. He also served as editor of the Aero-Mechanics weekly newspaper.

CLALLAM COUNTY

Garden of the Olympics!
God-favored Eden of the Charmed Northwest!
The wonderland where climate energizes man
To build the culture of a ruling, conquering race;
Where forest, pasture, mine and sea all yield
Enough to satisfy the wants that make men strong;
Where men are bent on making Nature slave
And man the lord of Nature's realm.

Garden of the Olympics!
The scene of rushing rivers, creeks and streams
That leap from dizzy heights in roaring cataracts—
Fleet messengers dispatched by snow-capped peaks
To carry greetings to their kin, the sea—
The river Hoh, the Quillayute, the Dungeness, the Bogachiel,
Where salmon spawn, and steelhead swiftly run,
And vicious trout strike lightning-like the fly.
They make a sportsman's paradise.

Garden of the Olympics!
The land that Nature blessed with colorful lakes
So picturesquely framed with stately mountain peaks;
Where gracious hosts delight to entertain,
Where guests may worship and commune with Nature
at her best.
There's Crescent Lake, and Sutherland, and also Lake Ozette,
And many a lake in highland vales
That are only reached by mountain trails
Through giant forests rich in splendour.

Garden of the Olympics!
The home of towns that crown its rolling hills,
And nestle in its valleys, great reservoirs
Of untapped opportunities that lure
Such men as love to conquer, work and live,
Such men as harness roaring, raging waterfalls,
And make them do the work that ancients did with countless slaves.
There's Elwha, Forks and Ramapo,
There's Pysht and Sequim and Clallam Bay,
And Angeles, the Port of Destiny.
