Recreation Use In Olympic National Forest--

Recreation use highlights on the Solihook District were announced this week by District Ranger Dale L. Robinson of the Olympic National Forest.

During the calendar year of 1963 over 19,000 persons visited forest areas for recreational purposes. The largest number of visitors were hunters and fishermen who accounted for over 14,000 visits.

Recreation use is an integral part of multiple use management of national forest lands. It is the most personalized use of these lands because of the direct association between them and the using public. Recreation is and has always been an important use of national forest lands. The Forest Service has over 50 years of experience in recreation use management. One of the major expenses connected with recreational use of national forest lands is the cleanup of campgrounds and roadside litter and debris. Much of this expense could be eliminated with thoughtful disposal of litter and debris by the forest user into campground or roadside litter barrels.

Vandalism in 1963 amounted to one roadside directional sign destroyed by shotgun blasts at close range and some destruction of campground facilities. Cost of replacement and repairs was nearly $10,000.

The coming year will show many major improvements in your recreational facilities on this district. Such as additional campground facilities at Klakoway Campground on Highway 101 near Sander Work Center and pioneer construction of a new campground named Klakoway which is located on the banks of the South Fork Calawah River, off the Skukum Road Number 206, near the Calawah Work Center construction will be completed in future years.

The dictionary is the only place where success comes before work.

Razor Clam Digging Popular Pastime

Digging for razor clams during 1963 was again one of the state's most popular outdoor pastimes, with an estimated 70,000 persons using clam rakes taking nearly 7 million clams during the year. The total take was only slightly less than that of 1962, when a 24-clam daily limit was in effect, compared to 18 per day in 1963.

A survey of the 1963 razor clam season, recently completed by the Department of Fisheries, said today.

A survey of the 1963 razor clam season, recently completed by the Department of Fisheries, said today.

Fish biologist Herb Tegeborg, revealed also that clam digging was higher than at any other time. Of the 12,000,000 clams dug, more than two million—nearly 18 per cent—were washed, left on the beach with shells broken or high and dry where they could not dig down to continue the search.

Tegeborg said that the general low-average abundance condition now evident at nearly all beaches along the coast is the result of a poor reproduction experience in 1962 and 1963 is strong evidence that steps should be taken to keep the catch potential in balance with production. It is noted, he said, that the present need for regulation adjustments may be caused primarily to excessive wastage.

1963 Commercial Season - - -

The commercial razor clam season in 1963 was a short one. Clam bed availability was excellent and the season from the Copalis River to the Moplis River. A good average dig of 31 pounds was reported on fish receiving docks. Average clam size was 4.5 inches, compared to 4.2 inches in 1962, but larger than in either 1960 or 1961. Clams averaged 4.13 to the pound and total take was nearly one million clams. Commercial digger boats sales totaled 1,071 and in addition many Indians dug during the season.

The most concentrated commercial digging was noted between Copalis Rocks and Boone Creek (Iron Springs), while digging effort was less than half that expected between the Copalis River and Copalis Rocks, due partly to access difficulty. An estimated 50,000 pounds were retained for personal use by commercially licensed diggers and 168,000 pounds were sold. Of the latter, 52 per cent went for crab bait, 26 per cent was cleaned for the fresh market and 20 per cent was canned. An estimated 48,000 pounds were shipped to Oregon and California, mostly for crab bait. The average price paid, diggers was 18¢ cents per pound.

Tourist Campaign Picks Up Added Impetus

The 1964 campaign to attract more tourists to the state of Washington picks up added impetus this week with the appearance of the state public relations staff and state public relations staff and state public relations staff.

On Jan. 31, the Tourist Promotion Development will open exhibits at two nine-day travel shows and will take part in two travel seminars.

The 1964 campaign is keyed to the theme "This Is the Year to Visit Washington." This year marks Washington's Diamond Jubilee Anniversary—the 75th year of statehood.

Ed R. Knightringer, manager of the Tourist Promotion Division, will be in charge of the state booth at Pacific's Annual Book, Sport, and Vacation Show, and also will participate in A.A.A. touring consultants, all company travel consultants and travel writers in Detroit and Chicago.

Knightringer will be assisted by Mrs. Arthur H. Dunn, Seattle, a member of the Governor's Tourist Advisory Committee, and Robert H. Hart, Tacoma, state promoter for the State Department of Game.

The same type of assignment will be made in cooperation with the Pacific Northwest Travel Association, the State of Washington will be represented at the Kansas City Sports and Travel Show, which also opens Jan. 31.

Through the end of April the state's tourist promotion displays as a part of P.N.T.A. state will be additionally represented in travel shows in Milwaukee, Chicago, Minneapolis, and Dallas.

"Thousands of thousands of spectators go 'vacation shopping' at these travel shows, and they are the 'personal market places' for talking Washington travel to those prospects," Knightringer said. At such shows the state staff hands out considerable quantities of literature about state, regions, and resort areas in the state.

Spartans Win Over Bulldogs 65-51

Ron Woody's 27 points sparked the Forks Spartans to a 65-51 win over the North Mason Bulldogs in an Olympic League game played at Forks Friday night.

Woody connected on 10 field goals and earned 7 out of 12 at the foul line for his total.

The win was the first for the Spartans in league play and gives them a 1-3 record. The Bulldogs are winless in three starts.

Forks got off to an early 18-10 lead, only to have North Mason come back and take a 25-23 halftime edge.

The Spartans then put together a good offensive show and applied the pressure on defense to spurt ahead to a 45-33 third quarter lead and piled up 20 more points in the final stanza for the victory.

Bob Westworth did a great job on the boards and helped to lead the Spartans. Forks wasn't red hot as a team, shooting a meager 26 per cent, but they hit 18 for 30 at the foul line.

North Mason shot 23 per cent, but they only hit 7 of 20 at the foul line. The Bulldogs were led by Miller's 21 points.

OLSON RIG COMPANY ESTABLISHES AGENCY

Arnold Bergstrom of Dunsloar, Burt & Upholstery cleaners has been selected as an agent of the Olson Rig Company for the Olympic Peninsula.

Arnold says that many owners of Olson Rigs classify their as "virtually indestructible." Also, that this company is unique as it offers rugs and carpeting in a range of 15 standard widths and 32 colors in solids, tweeds, or patterns. They will also weave rugs to fit almost any room and all but one of those are reversible.

Although it has been customary in the past for customers to send in their old wood to be made into new rugs, this is no longer necessary. In order to be of better service to their customers, the Olson Company is establishing dealers throughout the country so customers may see actual samples right in their homes.

The West End Old Timers Club meets Friday, Jan. 31, at 8 p.m. Dues are now payable.
