NEW MOVEMENT FOR GOOD ROADS

Enthusiastic Meetings in Neighboring Counties Result in Strong Organizations.

Both Jefferson and Skagit counties have, within the past few days, joined the movement for a state wide organization for good roads. At Mt. Vernon, says the Courier, a large and enthusiastic crowd gathered and organized the Skagit County Good Roads Assn. Among the many expressions of opinion given at the meeting, we quote the following:

Frank Fretwell, secretary of the Pacific Highway Association, made a few brief remarks outlining the purpose and the plans of that organization. The object of the association was not only the building of and maintaining of a highway from the Mexican to the British Columbian border but obtaining of better roads throughout the entire Pacific coast. It must be remembered that in Washington the cities pay road taxes besides paying exclusively for all their own streets and public improvements. It is not so in Oregon.

S, S. Gay of Sedro-Wooly: The United States is behind nearly every other country in the matter of roads. The system here seems to be to repair them in the summer and let them go all winter, letting the ruts take care of themselves.

P. Halloran, of Edison: I am always interested in the building and maintaining of good roads; but in our enthusiasm we must remember that much has already been accomplished. I do not like to hear people say that nothing has been done and that we are doing nothing. That is a mistake and cannot do any real good. As a matter of fact, when you consider what we had but a few years ago and what the road builder encountered in opening up highways, we have accomplished wonders. But that is no reason that we cannot do better; that would only be natural in the march of progress and through an organization of this kind we will be able to bring about big improvements.

Alfred Polson, county commissioner: From my experience a commissioner wants to keep still when it comes to the discussion of roads. There is generally a mistaken idea as to the power of commissioners; it is supposed they can build any kind of a road they choose. It must be remembered they have a certain amount of money to spend for road purposes and that demands come from all over the county for some portion of it.

I have a proposition I want to make to the people of this valley. Set aside a day for road building or road repair. Get every body out. Take ten or fifteen miles, appoint a supervisor, designate the men for the various duties and see what you will accomplish. Take a day in May or June. It would be more in the nature of a holiday and it would advertise Skagit County all over the country. This would be the first county to try this scheme on the coast. The women turn out and furnish the lunch.

Warren Shea: "I'll hire a team any day to help out on that stunt.

Sam Ball: "I believe a special road day to be the proper thing.

H. B. Peck: "Such a scheme ought to work and everybody should help.

On motion it was decided to organize, and a constitution and bylaws were adopted.

BOOSTING QUEETS OIL COUNTRY

Everything Points to Activity in the Sale of Townsite Lots and Oil Stocks this Spring.

Olympia, Friday, Jan. 19.—Immense deposits of high quality oil have been discovered in the Sweetwater and Queets River districts on the west slope of the Olympics by agents of the Standard Oil Company, who for years have been conducting an extensive series of borings and prospecting work. That company has quietly picked up title to a large acreage of lands containing the oil and this discovery is said to be largely responsible for the recent activity of the company in preparing for immense storage plants at a large number of points on the Sound and at Grays Harbor.

This is the report brought here today by prominent timber owners who have large interests in the Olympic Peninsula. One of their employes, who in the past was an experienced oil man, says he had opportunity at the Seattle office of the Standard Oil to inspect some of the samples; that the oil is of parafine base, the highest quality known. The California oils are said to be all of asphalt base and not so valuable.

For many years past oil prospects have been reported in this district, which lies between the Olympics and the ocean, in Southwestern Jefferson County. Remoteness of the district from transportation and the fact that it is barred by the Quinault Indian reservation to the south and the forest reserve to the east has has kept all but a few people out. The Harriman line, some months ago, surveyed a railroad through the district as part of its proposed extension of the O.W. R. and N. north through the Olympic Peninsula from Shelton.

Originally constructed as a logging railway, it has lately been standardized and for more than a year has been pushed forward many miles toward the district and reservation as fast as men and money can do the work. That as high as $75,000 per mile has been spent on part of this latter construction shows the line is not intended as merely a temporary logging road.

THE SOCIALIST LECTURE

The Socialist lecture Monday evening brought out a full house again, 300 being in attendance. Mr. N. A. Richardson proved to be a very forceful, interesting, and convincing speaker. He has made almost a life study of the circumstances and institutions which have led up to Socialism and is thoroughly conversant with the subject. It is claimed that we cannot get a better summing up and understanding of the principles of Socialism than from a booklet he has published, and which he had on sale Monday evening. No one could hear Mr. Richardson and doubt for a moment his earnestness and sincerity and his plain simple language and reasoning could be understood by a child. To many he was not as pleasing or entertaining a speaker as Eugene Wood, but in the humble opinion of the writer he was more forceful and convincing, leaving with his audience much more food for thought.

James T. Harahan, former president of Illinois Central, was killed in a train wreck on this same road, near Kinmundy, Ill., January 22nd. Three other prominent railroad men were with him in his private car and met their death also.

APRIL WEATHER SINCE NOVEMBER

While the East is Having Most Severe Winter in a Generation, 'Tis Early Spring on the Sound.

While the East looks forward to respite from the terrific temperatures and murderous blizzards that have made life a torment there for two weeks, the Pacific Northwest already rejoices in the balmy breezes of the chinook and the reviving sunshine, while southern California sweltered at 86 degrees and went swimming in the ocean.

Not for a generation have such conditions prevailed east of the Rockies to the Atlantic and almost from Canada to Mexico as have cursed the interior and the Atlantic slope this winter. Temperatures of 50 degrees below zero have been reported, hundreds of localities have seen the mercury register zero, storms have buried the country in ice and snow, and suffering, sickness, shortage of fuel and food and death itself have followed in their wake. The poor have undergone a distress comparable to that depicted by Dante in his vision of the lowest hell —Spokane Review.

Weather conditions in this, the extreme northern limits of the great state of Washington have been even better than in the Inland Empire. True, we had quite a touch of winter and freezing weather during the last days of November, but since then our weather has been unusually mild even for this mild climate, with but little frost and not nearly as much rainfall as usual. Even now the water in the mountain streams and rivulets are rushing torrents, caused from the snow melting on the mountains. The opening buds on rose bushes and other shrubs are beginning to appear, and primroses, pansies and other early flowers are in bloom in sheltered localities. Why anyone can be content to remain on the blizzard swept prairies of the middle west is a mystery, when the Pacific Northwest offers such boundless opportunities both in climate and industrial pursuits.

According to the report of the federal bureau of statistics, exports from the United States in 1911 exceeded the total for any preceding year. Imports exceeded in value the total of any preceeding year except 1910, and the excess of exports over imports reached a total value of $559,441,280, the largest excess since 1908, when we had a balance of $636,000,000 in our favor.

The Seattle P.-I. further suggests that it is difficult to find in a showing of this character any indication of economic depression in this country. Prophets of gloom must go beyond the record for such arguments as they may wish to advance. The cold facts are against them.

Pupils of the Portland city schools will soon be engaged in gardening contests, vacant lots being used by the children to try their hands at raising vegetables, poultry, &c. The different schools are expected to take part in an exhibition of their products which will be awarded prizes for excellence. The school board has been interested in the project.

Are you aware of the fact that there is quite a revival of activities in real estate in and around Port Angeles? Such is the fact. There have been several good sales of acreage in this vicinity recently, and town lots are being held at quite an advance in price. The owner of a couple of lots on Fifth and Francis, with no improvements save a small "shack," only last week refused $1250 for them, and two vacant lots in the same neighborhood sold for $1100 cash.

SALOON LICENSES RAISED TO $1,200

Latest Development Will Cut Big Figure in Local Option Contest This Next Fall.

The following resolution was introduced by Councilman Dustman and adopted:

Be it resolved by the City Council of Port Angeles, State of Washington, in open and regular session this 23rd day of January, 1912, that from and after the 1st day of January, 1913, that all the keepers of saloons within the city of Port Angeles be required by ordinance to pay a license of $1200.00 per annum therefor, and that from and after that date all private boxes, private entrance-ways, music, tables, and chairs be by ordinance prohibited in all saloons within the city, and that they be by proper ordinance prohibited from remaining open between the hours of 10 o'clock p. m. and and 8 o'clock a. m. of each and every week day and that the city attorney be and is hereby authorized and instructed to prepare and submit to this council an ordinance in keeping with this resolution within two keeks.

Vote on adoption was as follows:

Myers, Dustman, Elliott, Stiles, aye; Gardner, no; O'Brien not voting. Fisher absent.

William McMillen and Reuben Jacobs were granted permission to use city hose in washing mud accumulations off Front street, from Lincoln to Oak.

The city clerk and city treasurer were ordered to cancel a number of old city warrants, on account of not having been called for within the six year limit as provided by law.

Upon recommendation of Light Committee the clerk was instructed to notify Olympic Power Company that city's central and power station be located where present plant now stands.

City Engineer Gehrke, towhom was referred the matter of the Power Co.'s pole line with reference to private property lines, submitted his report. On motion, city clerk was instructed to notify Olympic Power Company, that its poles trespass on private property, and power company was directed to remove all of said poles.

An adjourned meeting of city council was appointed for Thursday night to meet with representatives of Power Co., to discuss the question in regard to reduction of price per kilowatt, and exclusive right to supply power up to 20 k. w., etc.

TAKING A LOOK AROUND

As indicating the number of transient people in our city the present winter, Mr. Wooley of the Angeles steam laundry says that his business will average fully $25 per week larger than last winter, and that this largely increased business comes almost entirely from strangers—from people who visit the laundry but twice, when they bring their soiled linen and when they come after their laundry.

BOSANKO & M'MICHAEL

Bosanko & McMichael have opened a real estate office in the Bosanko building adjoining the post office on the east, where they have pleasant quarters. The initial business of the new real estate firm was the sale last week of five acres of the Willcughby 10-farm, long known as the John Williams place. C. E. Pardoe was the purchaser. Mr. McMichael is an old resident of Port Angeles, well known, and the new firm will no doubt do a good business from the start.

THE NEED OF IMPROVEMENT

Never before in the history of Port Angeles has a new year opened with better prospects for substantial growth and improvement than has 1912. But whether or not these prospects are realized depends much on the people of Port Angeles—the owners of vacant lots. Port Angeles cannot grow unless there are more modern houses built for more good families who want to locate here, and more modern stores established to supply their needs. Port Angeles has had too many vacant lot booms in the past and not enough building booms to attract new residents.

The remedy is to build and the people who must build are the people who own the vacant property. Port Angeles cannot grow and turn all the new comers away for lack of comfortable houses in which to live. Too much Port Angeles property has been sold to non resident speculators. And what is more, we have too many speculators in Port Angeles owning vacant property they do not improve. More people here at home ought to wake up and see that they are helping to shrink the value of their own property by waiting for somebody else to make the improvements. No city on earth was ever built except by the the spirit of its home people.

Many of our merchants and other business institutions are now occupying quarters that are not only inadequate to their needs but are unsightly and discreditable to a city of the size and importance of Port Angeles.

There has been much talk about street improvements of late, and many if not all the proposed improvements are badly needed. But while plans are being made to improve the streets, property owners ought not to lose sight of the need of other improvements. True, we have a few fine business blocks, business blocks that stand as a lasting monument to the enterprise, businese sagacity and patriotism of their founders, and several fine new residences have recently been built and a number of others are at the present time in course of construction throughout the city, but the building record is out of proportion to the demands sure to come if Port Angeles is to increase in population in 1912 anywhere near the mark set by some of our most loyal and best informed citizens. The time to build is now.

We understand that a large majority of the bar of Clallam county, irrespective of party affiliations, have united in an effort to induce attorney A. R. Coleman of Port Townsend to become a candidate before the coming primaries for the office of Judge of the Superior Court for the district composed of Clallam, Jefferson and Island counties.

THE SUGAR TRUST'S JOKER

LaFollette's Magazine prints the following article showing the little joker in the sugar schedule, and proving how the refineries control the market:

"Eight words, 'Not above No. 16 Dutch Standard in color,'" conceal the joker which costs the American consumers of sugar $50,000,000 annually.

The Dutch Standard originated in Holland several hundred years ago and consisted of twenty glass bottles graded in color from the darkest, No. 1, to the lightest, No. 20. The tariff duties on sugar above No. 16 are practically prohibitive. The joke keeps out of the country the light colored sugar from No. 1 to 20. It compels the sugar maker in Cuba to send to the United States only dark sugar which the American family will not buy. Before the sugar is put on the American market it must go to a refinery to be 'whitened.'

The sugar trust owns or controls the sugar refineries. Since it is, in the main, the only purchaser, it can fix the price of the imported dark sugar from Cuba. Since it is, in the main, the only producer of the granulated sugar, it can fix the price of sugar to the American consumer. It gets the 'Profit of Privilege' coming and going The refining or 'whitening' of the dark sugar which is from 96 to 97 per cent pure, is an insignificant part of the process of sugar making. The Joker gives the monopoly to the owners of the refineries. The sugar trust, not satisfied with levying upon the American consumer an annual tribute of $50,000,000, not satisfied with plundering Cuba, not content with absorbing the beet sugar industry, has, by false weighing and bribery at the custom houses, descended to the level of a common thief and corruptor of government officials. Shall this trust criminal, already convicted by the courts, continue its profits and menace of privileges?

The remedy is simple and direct: Strike out the Joker Dutch No. 16—"and adopt the polariscope test which will determine exactly and scientifically the purity of sugar. Then base the duties on the sugar according to what it is."

CASE HAS CAUSED COMMENT

The Port Townsend Leader and the Irondale News have recently censured Judge Still in their columns, for, as these papers put it, reversing himself in an Irondale divorce case. The Leader, among other things, says: The judge rendered a verdict for the plaintiff wife after he had announced a decision to the contrary in open court when the case was tried sometime ago, but the decision was not made a matter of record. That the judge, in changing his former decision, announced that he had talked with a carpenter at Coupeville who had verified the evidence submitted at the trial. To this the Leader further suggests that it is always supposed that trials are decided on the evidence submitted in court, rather than on street gossip. "The decision was the result of a motion by the attorney representing Mrs Shultz. Judge Still, after listening to the motion, announced that he would find for the plaintiff, instead of adhering to the original decision for defendant. The entire process surrounding the matter is one of the most singular that ever attended the trial of a divorce suit in Jefferson county, and although practically every person who knows anything about the circumstances is firmly of the opinion that Mrs. Shultz is entitled to a legal separation from her husband, considerable surprise has been expressed at the roundabout way taken by the judge in doing plain justice to a deserving lady who was unfortunately burdened with a worthless husband."

Southeast Washington, not to be outdone by the southwestern part of the state, is organizing a development league. Preliminary steps have been taken and at a later meeting at Pasco permanent organization will be effected. Counties of the Columbia River Basin will be represented in the new league quite generally. It is the intention of the organizers to take up river improvements, irrigation matters, good roads and similar problems with which that section of the Northwest has to deal. The new organization starts off with every prospect of success.

INSPECTION BY SPECIALISTS

Port Townsend is the first city in Washington to establish a thoroughly efficient system of medical inspection in its schools, according to Dr. Stevenson Smith, assistant professor of orthogenics in the University of Washington, who visited that city last week.

"Superintendent French, who was graduated from the University of Washington last year, has been the leading spirit in the movement," said Dr. Smith. "Although there are only 600 school children, all the physicians in the city, ten in number, have given gratis their services for the work In no other place is there a corps of inspectors proportionately so large to the school population.

"Even Seattle, with its splendid system, imposes more than fifty times as many upon the care of one doctor. Port Townsend, although it has but 2,500 population, has specialists in eye, ear, nose, and throat work, and all of these have volunteered their support to the child welfare movement.

"The school board has shown farsightedness, and this is all the more noteworthy because of the tardiness of other cities in the Northwest in perfecting the work.—University of Washington News Letter.

THE EAST END

From the Press.

The school district north of here known as the Taylor district will some time this summer consolidate with the Sequim district and a wagon will be used to carry the children to school and take them home.

Owing to the withdrawal of the Sunday steamer, no evening services can be held in the Episcopal church here. Rev. Charles Rice now holds both morning and evening services in St. Andrews church in Port Angeles.

President Green of the Inland Navigation Co. stated to a delegation of Sequim citizens who called upon him at Dungeness Thursday that the present Whatcom schedule was only for ninety days and then would be changed back to the old schedule except that the Sunday boat would be cut out; it would be daily except Sunday.

The new public school building will be ready for occupancy on Monday of next week; of the two old buildings one will be torn down and the other, the larger of the two, will be kept for gymnasium and probably will be used as an extra school building for manual training and the teaching of domestic science, two new branches which the board of directors hope to introduce here next year.

RAILWAYS IN JAPAN.

They Sell Station Tickets to Those Who Want to Meet Friends.

Railway station platforms in Japan, as in England and Europe, are level with the car steps. The station master is quite a dignified official, has a uniform and carries a sword on special occasions. The uniform consists of the ordinary regulation blue, with gilt buttons and gold braid and a bright scarlet band around his cap. He is rather a showy individual when he gets it on, and as he walks along the platform things move. When there is a celebrated dignitary passing through, such as the emperor or a member of parliament, he buckles on his sword.

About 130 pounds of free baggage is allowed on each first class ticket, and baggage will be delivered by station porters within a radius of four miles at 2½ cents a piece. Trains are in charge of a guard. Tickets are punched when passengers pass through the wicket on the platform and given up when passing out at destination. All tickets are good for stopovers at most stations within the limits of expiration date, all that is necessary being to show your ticket to the collector at the wicket and pass out.

Special platform tickets are issued at 1 cent each to accommodate those coming with or to meet friends. In that way they take advantage, in a financial sense at least, of the feelings of the people, which in Japan lead them to appear in large numbers when their friends leave or when they wish to welcome some one coming. It is my own recollection that when I left Kure, the naval station, homeward bound, upward of a hundred appeared and lined up on the platform to say goodby in their best English. It is considered a mark of very great disrespect in Japan not to go to the station to see your friends off.—

Resolution,

Whereas, The City Council deem it necessary for the safety and protection of the inhabitants of the City of Port Angeles, that no wire capable of transmitting more than 2500 volts shall be permitted within the limits of the city, except upon the Boulevard, Washington and Front street from Washington street on the west to the southern limits of the city Now Therefore, Be It

Resolved, That the transmission of more than 2500 volts of electricity, through or over or upon any wire within the limits of the City of Port Angeles, except over or upon the streets here inbefore mentioned is hereby prohibited, and, Be It

Resolved, That this Resolution be published in the official newspaper of the city

Passed by the City Council, this 16th day of January, 1912.

Approved by me this 24th day of January, 1912

Made Them Rhyme.

Moore, the Irish poet, was once at a dinner, and opposite to him sat a Mr. Reach, whose name Moore had seen in print but had never heard pronounced. The poet addressed him politely as "Mr. Reach."

"My name is Re-ack, sir!" said Mr. Reach indignantly.

"Indeed!" replied Moore. "Well, Mr. Re-ack, will you kindly pass me a pe-ack?"

Told Him Twice.

The English tourist in Scotland, if he has not gone through a previous course of instruction in northern polemics, is apt to find himself handicapped when entering into conversation, as shown by an amusing anecdote in a Glasgow paper.

An English tourist going along the Trongate encountered a crowd of the street accident type. Obeying the universal impulse, he joined it and put the usual question, "What's the matter here?"

A carter took his pipe out of his mouth for greater clearness of speech and said, "Flaflafflarry."

"I beg your pardon."

"Flaflafflarry."

"I'm very sorry," the Englishman said meekly, "but I don't understand what has happened."

The carter's neighbor turned angrily toward the inquirer "Man, yer a thick heid. A'm shair he's telt ye twice that a fella fell aff a lorry."

Taking a Mean Advantage.

A Burr Oak man woke up the other night to find his wife going through his pants pocket, where he kept his money. When he asked her what she was after she stammered and said she was "sewing on a button that had appeared to be missing." And what di the mean old son of Adam do but get right out of bed and find two button on his coat, three on his vest and thre on his underclothes that were just about ready to drop off and sit there and make the woman sew 'em on, remarking all the time upon the thoughtfulness of such a loving little woman who would crawl out of bed just to see that her husband's clothes were in good repair.—Kansas City Journal.

State Superintendent of Franchise and State Treasurer Will Visit Port Angeles Next Week.

WILL SPEAK SATURDAY

Mrs. S. L. W. Clark, National and State Superintendent of Franchise, and Mrs. Mary E. Wade, State Treasurer of W. C. T. U., will arrive in Angeles on Friday, the 9th inst. Saturday, at 2:30, Mrs. Clark will address the ladies at the Commercial Club rooms. A question box will be the closing feature of the afternoon. Please bring any question on laws concerning women that you care to have answered or discussed

Sunday, the 11th, Mrs. Clark will fill the pulpit at the church in the morning and a union service will be held in the evening at the church, Mrs. Clark speaking, assisted by Mrs. Wade. Special music at both services. The public generally is cordially invited to all of these services.

Mrs. Wade expects to drill a class for a Silver Medal Contest about the 16th.

The W.C. T. U. met with Mrs. Kate Elliott Thursday afternoon. A very profitable session was held.

DISTRIBUTED IN SCHOOLS

Through the courtesy of Supt. Geisness and teachers, the State law relating to the sale of liquors and cigarettes to minors, gambling by minors, etc., has been placed into the homes of the city. Now, fathers and mothers, if this law is not enforced, who is to blame? And if it should be enforced and your boy should be caught evading the law, who would be to blame? Our boys and girls are studying and are being taught the evil effects of narcotics and tobacco on the system, how a continual indulgence saps the very life and brain power of the individual, and now that the state legislature has passed this law in order to help the parents protect the boys and girls, we trust that all concerned will do their part.

Rather a grim bit of evidence concerning liquor selling is furnised by a manufacturer. Seeking in a certain neighborhood for a new situation for his plant, he announced at the start that he would consider only those towns that license the sale of liquor, and would pledge themselves to do so. The reason he gave that in no-license communities he found it impossible to get the necessary women and girl laborers. In such communities, women do not have to go out to work; their husbands or fathers supported them.—Youths' Comp'n.

"BURLINGTON GOES DRY"

The city of Burlington, which twice voted wet in local option elections during the past two years, elected at Tuesday's election four councilmen, who are pledged to vote against granting any saloon licenses in that city. Burlington only has five councilmen, and three of the new members are two-year officials, so there is no possibility of the town being "wet" even though it votes "wet" next fall. Early next month Burlington will go into the increasing list of "dry" towns.

For many months conditions in that town have been reported as exceedingly disgusting. Saturday night orgies, caused principally by visitors from Bellingham and surrounding places, have simply disgusted the people there, and the result as above noted is but another instance of the saloon becoming too rotten for even an ordinary tolerant community.

BLIND PIGS

The liquor traffic is loud in its claims that "dry" territory abounds in blind pigs or places where liquor is sold in violation of law, and that license stops all that and puts the violator out of business.

History proves to the contrary, however, and furnishes evidence that as a rule there are about four times as many blind pigs in "wet" territory as in "dry." Seattle has 329 licensed saloons, although the charter only allows 315, but there is no dearth of blind pigs.

Recently, in forty-two days work, one deputy in the sheriff's office raided fifteen such places, eleven in the city and four in King county, and he is just getting acquainted with the situation. The liquor was confiscated and destroyed and the violators placed under arrest Examination of the records shows that this activity on the part of the sheriff's office cost King county $360, and that there was paid into the county treasurers fund from fines paid in these cases $1,760.

WHO SHOULD FAVOR THE SALOON.

Not the business man; for it it takes money from his business and it makes many of his customers poor pay.

Not the employer of labor; for drink is the greatest cause of inefficiency among workingmen. A factory that has drinking men on its pay roll is at a decided disadvantage.

Not the workingman; for if he patronizes it, it decreases his ability as a wage-earner, takes money that should be spent for comfort and welfare of his family, and injures him mentally, morally and every other way.

Not the taxpayer; for the saloon increases its burdens by its addition to the criminal, dependent and defective lists he must support. No saloon ever paid, or can pay, enough to compensate for the evil it does.

Not the head of a family; for the interests of his family and the work of the saloon are antagonistic.

No church member; for the worst enemy the church has is the saloons. No man who is truly a Christian can conscientiously vote for an institution that debauches humanity and ruins both body and soul. "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God." If no drunkard can inherit the kingdom, the man who votes for the saloons votes to send some men to hell; for the saloons make drunkards.

No member of any fraternal society that excludes saloon keepers and bartenders; for the same reason that bars them from membership in these orders makes their business undesirable in a community. These orders aim to be character builders. The saloon is a character destroyer.

Look at the finished product of the saloon—the blear-eyed bloat who is the wreck of a man— and ask yourself if you ought to vote for a thing that ruins more lives than any other agency, turns men into beasts and sends their souls to hell. —Uhrichsville Chronicle.

THE CIGARETTE LAW.

CHAPTER 133.
(S. S. B. 105.)

An Act amending section 193, and repealing section 284 of chapter 249, Session Laws of 1909, entitled, "An act relating to crimes and punishments and the rights and custody of persons accused or convicted of crime, and repealing certain acts," approved March 22, 1909.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Washington:

Section 1. That section 193 of an act entitled "An act relating to crimes and punishments and the rights and custody of persons accused or convicted of crime, and repealing certain acts," approved March 22, 1909, be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows: Sec. 193. Keepers of Concert Saloons, etc.

Every person who—

(1) Shall admit to or allow to remain in any concert saloon, or in any place owned, kept, or managed by him where intoxicating liquors are sold; given away or disposed of—except a restaurant or dining room, any person under the age of twenty-one years; or,

(2) Shall admit to, or allow to remain in any dance house, public pool or billiard hall, or in any place of entertainment injurious to health or morals, owned, kept or managed by him, any person under the age of twenty-one years; or,

(3) Shall suffer or permit any person to play any game of skill or chance, in any such place, or in any place adjacent thereto, or to be or remain therein, or admit or allow to remain in any reputed house of prostitution or assignation, or in any place where opium, or any preparation thereof, is smoked, or where any narcotic drug is used, any person under the age of twenty-one years; or,

(4) Shall sell or give, or permit to be sold, or given to any person under the age of twenty-one years any intoxicating liquor, cigar, cigarette, cigarette paper or wrapper, or tobacco in any form; or,

(5) Shall sell, or give, or permit to be sold or given to any person under the age of eighteen years, any revolver, pistol, or toy pistol;

Shall be guilty of a gross misdemeanor.

It shall be no defense to a prosecution for a violation of this section that the person acted, or was believed by the defendant to act, as agent or representative of another.

Any person under the age of twenty-one years who shall purchase, or shall have in his or her possession, any intoxicating liquor, cigar, cigarette, cigarette paper or wrapper, or tobacco in any form, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Section 2. That section 284, chapter 249, Session Laws, 1909, be and the same is hereby repealed.

Passed by the Senate February 28, 1911.

Passed by the House March 3, 1911.

Approved by the Governor March 20, 1911.

The penalty for a misdemeanor as defined in the Criminal Code passed by the legislature in 1909 is imprisonment in the county jail for not more than 90 days or a fine of not more than $250.

The penalty for gross misdemeanor is imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or a fine of not more than $1,000 or both.

A Heavy Jolt.

Reply to Tribune Times by D. O'Brien.

My, My, but that lecture of Richardson's must have given the editor of the Tribune-Times a heavy jolt, to cause him to open that bill of wrath against the Socialist. Now when a man feels he is in a fair way to become a millionaire, and then have some gol darn Socialist come along and spoil his great expectations, it is enough to make one mad. So having a paper of at least one hundred subscribers, think what a power he will have to smash the Socialist.

Of course, the editor of the Tribune-Times has a right to behave in a false idiotic system, if he wants to, and when another differs with him and he cannot answer his argument in reason and logic, why he can call him a horse thief and that will settle him once and for all.

In a few more years, the Socialist will be in power in this government, as it is inevitable. Some of these days a great strife will occur that will paralize some great industry, and the people, almost in one accord, will demand that the government take control. The rest will be easy. Then the government will have papers of its own and editors of the caliber of the Tribune-Times, who use vituperation instead of scientific logic, will be accorded a position as printer's devil or have to go and scratch dirt with the chickens. For they will not be allowed to befoul the papers with dirt and filth. But I don't know as we really should blame such editors; they are products of a rotten system, a system that prostitutes all that is noble and holy in humanity. There is a divine law that everything shall reveal its soul in its face. Every man is known by his life, every tree by its fruit, and every principle by its results. Social systems as well as trees reveal themselves in the results they bear. In this twentieth century, men have began to realise that a system that causes turmoil and war must cease and one of justice and virtue must reign if we are to have peace, happiness, love, and all the attributes that go to make life worth the living.

Beyond the Judge's Control.

"The courtroom has its fun as well as its tragedy," once observed William Travers Jerome. "Sometimes the humor is not as appreciable to the principal actors as to an outsider, as in the case I once attended in a New England court where a slander trial was on.

"OLD WOMAN, SHUT UP!"

"The principal witness was an impetuous old Irishwoman. She talked so fast that the judge was unable to follow her testimony, especially as it was delivered in the broadest of brogues. In vain he attempted to stop her.

"'Stop, stop!' he cried, rapping sharply on his desk. But the torrent of words continued as before. 'Old woman, shut up!' he shouted in exasperation, but to no avail. The old lady was determined to have her say Finally the unhappy judge threw down his pen and yelled to the lawyer:

"'There, Mr. Murdock! You set her a-going. Now stop her!'"—Lippincott's

Love Much.

Love much. Earth has enough of bitter in it
Cast sweets into its cup whene'er you can
No heart so hard but love at last may win it
Love is the grand primeval quest of man
All hate is foreign to the first great plan.

Love much. Men's souls contract with cold suspicion.
Shine on them with warm love and they expand
'Tis love, not creeds, that from a low condition
Leads mankind up to heights supreme and grand.
Oh, that the world could see and understand!

His Ambition.

Acton Davies, the dramatic critic, tells a story of Oliver Herford, the humorist. Herford never had a serious thought in his life.

"TELL ME ABOUT IT."

"Herford sat next to a soulful poetess at dinner one night," Davies relates, "and that dreamy one turned her sad eyes upon him. 'Have you no other ambition, Mr. Herford,' she demanded, 'than to force people to degrade themselves by laughter?' Yes. Herford had an ambition—a whale of an ambition. Some day he hoped to gratify it. The woman rested her elbows on the table and propped her face in her long, sad hands and glowed into Mr. Herford's eyes. 'Oh, Mr. Herford,' she said—'Oliver, tell me about it.'

"'I want to throw an egg into an electric fan,' said Herford simply."

A Salute Returned.

It was the last music lesson before the Christmas holidays, and the children had been thinking more about the coming festivities than about their studies, so it had been rather unsatisfactory.

"Well, children," said the supervisor as he was about to leave, "I wish you all a merry Christmas, and I hope that when you return after the holidays you will have more music in your heads than you have today."

Without a moment's hesitation came the reply from forty little urchins, "The same to you, Mr. Browning."

Let Him Into a Secret.

A prominent member of the London Stock Exchange was a man who enjoyed his wine and always took great care of it when he happened to pick up a choice vintage. While living in a fashionable quarter of the west end he chanced to buy a large cask of very fine old port, which he placed at the extreme end of his cellar, and to make perfectly sure that it should not be touched he had a wall built across the cellar and so closed it in.

It was about a year or two later that one evening he accepted an invitation to dine with his next door neighbor when the latter brought out some very fine old port. Several glasses having been drunk, the man of stocks and shares asked his host where he could get some port like it.

"Well, old fellow," returned the other, "I will let you into a secret. I was having some alterations made in my cellar lately when we discovered that some old fool who lived in this house before me had built a wall round a large cask of port and forgotten all about it. This is some of it, but I am afraid there isn't much left."

His Losses.

A prominent Washington official was lunching at the Metropolitan club when he saw one of his society friends sitting near by and looking gloomy and disconsolate.

"What's the matter, Sam?" called out the official.

"Nothing much," sighed the saddened Sam, "only I took too much to drink yesterday. I lost a pair of glasses, a cane, a raincoat and a reputation."—Washington Star.

HIS CODE MESSAGE.

It Wasn't Quite So Mysterious as He Intended It to Be.

The frequency with which revolutions occur in Latin American lands makes them "anybody's game," and as a result of this many persons without experience either in conspiracy or battle are likely at any moment to find themselves conspirators and warriors. One of these novices at the gentle art of "revoluting" is the hero of the tale which follows, a favorite in a certain South American republic.

The novice in question, having suddenly acquired a violent distaste for the president of his native land, rushed away from home in a great rage and enlisted in the revolutionary ranks. The next thing he knew he was detailed to raise troops in a certain district.

It was explained to him that he must envelop all his acts in dark secrecy. In order the better to accomplish this the revolutionary commander told the novice that whenever he felt called upon to pen a dispatch he must couch it in the terms of a code, so that government officers might not guess the meaning of any dispatch if it fell into their hands.

The novice promised to follow instructions to the letter. A few weeks later he had collected a force of soldiers and desired to acquaint revolutionary headquarters with the fact. Taking his copy of the code from his pocket, he duly noted that "cow" was the code word for soldier and "cigar" the one for rifle.

He sat down and wrote a dispatch. It fell into the enemy's hands. It was conceived in these cryptic terms:

"I have the honor to report that I have 200 cows and 150 cigars, but the cows have no shoes and the cigars no bayonets."—New York Times.

A Good Work.

Edith was light hearted and merry over everything. Nothing appealed to her seriously. So one day her mother decided to invite a very serious young parson to dinner, and he was placed next the light hearted girl. Everything went well until she asked him:

"You speak of everybody having a mission. What is yours?"

"My mission," said the parson, "is to save young men."

"Good," replied the girl. "I'm glad to meet you. I wish you'd save one for me."

Two Wedding Texts.

John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, "the signer," married two sisters, the daughters of a noted Methodist divine in Connecticut. John Quincy was a favorite with the old people, and Mary's choice was approved by them. So when the banns were published the parent said, "Mary, if you will furnish the text I will preach you a wedding sermon." She was equal to the task and gave the text, "Mary hath chosen the good part, which shall not be taken from her." Needless to say that justice was done to the occasion and the text.

Not so with Margaret, who in the meanwhile was receiving the attentions of her John in a very inexpensive way, as far as her parents were concerned, for it is said that "he never crossed his legs under their festive board." So, when the banns were published she said to her father: "Father, you preached a wedding sermon for Mary. Cannot you preach one for me?" He at first demurred, but at last consented and called for the text, when Margaret, who was equal to the occasion, said, "And John came, neither eating nor drinking, and yet ye say he hath a devil."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Gave Him Due Credit.

Sir James Scarlett, the great English lawyer, when practicing at the bar had to examine a witness whose evidence promised to be damaging unless he could be previously confused. The only vulnerable point of the man was said to be his self esteem.

"I HAM," REPLIED MR. TOMPKINS.

The witness, a portly, overdressed person, went into the box, and Scarlett took him in hand.

"Mr. John Tompkins, I believe?"

"Yes."

"You are a stockholder?"

"I ham," replied Mr. Tompkins, with a pronounced cockney accent.

Scarlett regarded him attentively for a few moments and then said dryly, "And a very large, well dressed ham you are, sir."

The shout of laughter which followed completely disconcerted Mr. Tompkins, and the lawyer's point was gained.

"The Trust Busters?"

She is going to tell us how the "Trust Busters" didn't bust the trusts.

Don't miss this number. It will certainly be rich.

MOSES WAS THERE.

And He Was Imposing In Person and Resonant In Voice.

In the old days, when it was customary to celebrate the Fourth of July by a public reading of the Declaration of Independence, followed by an oration, Squire Moses, a lawyer of imposing person and impressively resonant voice, was always an ornament of the occasion in his native town. If the orator was a distinguished stranger the squire read the Declaration; when somebody else read the Declaration the squire was the orator.

One year when the gathering was to be held in a church he went over, tradition relates, at twilight the day before to practice his speech. Entering by a back door, he ascended the old fashioned high pulpit unobserved by the old scrubwoman at work on all fours in the main aisle, so that when far above, his deep voice suddenly boomed across the silence she reared to her knees with a startled:

"Lawk-a-massy on us! Who's there?"

"Don't be alarmed, my good woman," said the squire condescendingly. "It's only Moses."

Far from being reassured, she scrambled to her feet and started to bolt, nor was she induced to remain by hearing the voice shouting behind her:

"Stay and listen! Stay and listen! I'm Moses."

Rushing down the church steps, she screamed to the passersby: "Moses has come! Moses has come!" Nor would she be convinced until some of them, rather timorously, had ventured in, only to find that the impressive presence in the dimness was no apparitional lawgiver, but a mere lawyer in the flesh.

Even then she was heard to mutter resentfully: "The voice of a prophet, and him no more than a squire! The ways of Providence are past our feeble understanding." - Youth's Companion.

Two Ways.

Wouldst thou be wretched? 'Tis an easy way.
Think but of self, and self alone, all day—
Think of thy pain, thy grief, thy loss, thy care.
All thou hast to do or feel or bear.
Think of thy good, thy pleasure or thy gain
Think only of thyself. 'Twill not be vain

Wouldst thou be happy? Take an easy way
Think of those round thee—live for them all day
Think of their pain, their loss, their grief, their care.
All that they have to do or feel or bear.
Think of their pleasure, of their good, their gain
Think of those round thee. It will not be vain

Can't Beat the Lawyers.

On the occasion of a football match in England between a number of military officers and a team of lawyers the former had prepared a splendid lunch for the visitors before the game. Both teams did thorough justice to the lunch, and, the legal gentlemen going in strong for champagne and cigars, the officers anticipated an easy victory. On looking toward the football ground, however, after lunch the officers espied a remarkably fresh looking lot of giants kicking the ball about and in amazement asked the guests who the strangers were. "Oh," replied one of them, finishing his last glass of champagne, "those are our playing team. We are only the lunching team, you know."

Wanted a Consultation.

So supreme was the leadership of Senator Aldrich over a host of political followers and personal friends that many a vote was cast this way or that or the other for the sole reason that "Nels says so." Some one was recalling this fact in the senate lobby when another of the little group remarked:

"That's the exact truth. I speak from personal feeling. I trusted Aldrich's judgment implicity, and I don't know that it ever led me wrong." Then, as he contemplatively flicked the ashes off his cigar, he went on: "Did I ever tell you about a funny dream I had? I thought I was dead, and St. Peter was putting the usual questions at me before adding my name to his heavenly census. At last he figured out I was O. K. and told me to go ahead in, but I hesitated. 'Why, what's wrong?' says he. 'Most folks are in a hurry when I give em the word.' 'Well,' says I, 'I dare say it's all right, but I do wish I could have a couple of words with Aldrich before taking so important a step.'"

Hidden Eyes on Watch

Rascals Foiled In Attempt to Ruin a Bank Cashier

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Fifteen years ago or more, when I was a schoolboy, there was a classmate of mine named Cora Perry, a pale, pretty girl with big violet eyes, who could make people turn around by looking at the backs of their heads. I could do it, too, but my chief distinction was as a subject in this experiment and not as an operator. I was always peculiarly susceptible to a glance.

Cora had been dead many years, poor girl, and I had not thought of her in a long time when upon a certain evening her image came before me with startling distinctness. It was on the occasion of a visit to New York, and I was sitting alone before a cheerful fire in the bachelor apartments of Cora's cousin, Carleton Perry.

I wondered what had made me think of my gentle schoolmate, and thus I became aware that for some minutes I had been afflicted with a peculiar uneasiness and had several times looked over my shoulder. My sensations were precisely the same as in the old days when Cora had been practicing her innocent magic upon me.

Was it possible that somebody was looking at the back of my head? The queer idea took hold of me strongly enough to make me examine the apartment with considerable thoroughness.

Was there anything in the situation to justify my suspicion? This is how it stood: About a month ago I had written to Carleton Perry telling him that I should probably be in New York on Nov. 15. I had received a not very prompt reply, a nervous looking scrawl, of which the chief part ran thus:

"Mighty glad you're coming, but can't you make it earlier? Try to get here by the 7th. There's something unusual. I'll tell you about it when I see you. Answer to my rooms."

And he gave me the address. I had replied that I would do as he desired, and upon Nov. 7 I arrived at the bank where Perry was employed as assistant cashier. At the bank I was informed that Perry was out of town upon some business for the institution. He had left word that I was to go to his rooms and make myself at home until he came.

The rooms were in a studio building, not expensive as rents run in New York, yet I had not expected to find him so well situated. He was only twenty-five, and, though I understood that he had shown extraordinary aptitude for the banking business, I could not fancy him to be strong enough yet to exact much money for his services. Moreover, he had a sister partly dependent upon him. She was a student at Wellesley.

The janitor of the building—a man with chestnut eyes that looked sideways and reminded me of a vicious horse—seemed to be expecting me, and he produced a latchkey upon the mention of my name.

"OH, HOW YOU FRIGHTENED ME!"

It had been my intention to go out and have a look at the illuminated city, but the mystery indoors was too alluring. There was something wrong with that room, and when I came to think of it, I perceived a queerness in the general situation. It was unnatural that Perry should not have left a scrap of writing for me, that he should have trusted entirely to verbal messages. Coupling this with his own statement about "something unusual," I obtained a basis for genuine suspicion. The people at the bank had been a little overcordial. A man whom I judged to be the president had come out of an inner room and flashed an X ray glance at me. Even the horse eyed janitor at the apartments had seemed to view me with a certain relishing curiosity, as if I were on my way to the gallows.

Doubtless, I should never have thought of these matters except for the peculiar sensation of being spied upon.

From the beginning I had veiled my investigations so that if there were a watcher, he could not know that I was looking for him.

I sat in the chair for half an hour until I began to be very drowsy, for my sleep had been scanty on the previous night in the train, and finally I must have fallen into a doze, for I did not hear the opening of the door. My first definite impression was of light. The fire had blazed up. Some bits of paper were burning on the top of it, and in the glow there stood the figure of a girl.

The bits of paper burned to blackness, and the visitor naturally vanished. So did everything else, but the effect upon me was much the same as if she alone had disappeared. A visual image of the illuminated side of her face seemed to linger in the air after all else was gone. An instant later I had touched the electric button, and the girl had sprung into view again, a more substantial figure.

The girl laid her hand upon her heart and leaned against the wall beside the mantel.

"Oh, how you frightened me!" she said.

I recognized my visitor as Carleton's sister, Evelyn, much changed in five years' time, her childish beauty amazingly perfected.

"You did not know that I was here, of course?" said I.

"No, but I am so glad."

"Carl is out of town, I am told."

"He is not," said she. "He's imprisoned. I don't know where, but in the city. I have just been released."

"Released!" I echoed. "Good heavens! What is all this?"

"It is something about the bank," said she. "I do not fully understand it. I have had only a few minutes' talk with Carl. You know that there is much trouble everywhere. Scandals are coming out, and people who have done dishonest things are frightened. Well, there was a politician, very powerful here, who borrowed large sums of money from the bank in an irregular way. This must be covered up, for if it comes out now it will make a frightful scandal, which will ruin the bank and all persons who have had a hand in this transaction. Carl says the president would either run away or kill himself."

"But Carl? He had nothing to do with it?"

"Nothing whatever, except that he knew of it. He could not prevent what was done. The bank people and this politician removed one of the bank's books or perhaps more than one and got an expert bookbinder, who took it to pieces and bound it again all in a night and with a new leaf in it. On that leaf is a fraudulent record of the politician's account. The real one is no longer there."

"Destroyed?"

"They thought so. But the bookbinder was as big a rascal as any of the others. He tricked them and saved the page containing the true account or enough of it to be proof of what was done. He went to Carl with this and proposed a plan of blackmail. Carl throttled the fellow and took the paper away from him, but before he could make up his mind what to do with it he discovered that there was a plot to ruin him.

"It seems that in spite of what they have done there is a shortage of money which cannot be covered up except by accusing some one of stealing it. Carl learned that he was to be accused. This was last Saturday. I had come to town that morning to be with him over Sunday. He had telegraphed me to come. I was at a boarding house where I have sometimes stayed before. He telephoned me to come down to the bank, and when I got there he told me as much of the story as I am telling you.

"He said that he had learned through a friend in the bank that he was to be arrested that day, but that the matter would be kept quiet through the politician's influence. Carl gave me the leaf from the ledger, saying that it was his only safety and that it would be taken from him if he were arrested. He told me to bring it here and hide it, and I did so."

"Here!" I cried. "But they would certainly search this place. Why didn't he take it to his lawyer?"

"He knows none whom he dares trust. He was waiting for you. He had provided a hiding place here."

"You came here?"

"Yes, and hid the paper. As I was leaving I was arrested."

"For heaven's sake, on what charge?"

"They said I was a witness and must go to the district attorney's office. They took me somewhere, and a man came in and looked at me and went out. Then I was taken to the house of detention for witnesses. I have been there ever since."

"You were released this evening?"

"Yes; they merely took me to the door and let me go."

"Then the document must be here now," said I. "They have failed to find it."

"I will look and see whether it is here."

"Wait," said I and laid a hand upon her arm.

For some minutes I stood close beside her, and we spoke in whispers. Then I stepped to the electric button and put out the lights. The room was as dark as the grave. I could not see Evelyn nor hear her until she spoke aloud, saying, "I have it."

I turned on the lights. Evelyn was standing by the table with a sealed envelope in her hands. She gave it to me, and I put it into my pocket.

"They will hardly dare to try any tricks with me," said I. "It was known that your brother gave you the document, and that you came here. You were arrested in order that you might be searched. As you did not have the document, they knew that it must be here. You were held as long as they had any hope of finding it. Then you were released that you might come here and betray the hiding place. For this room is under constant observation. Well, the precious document is safe now," and I tapped my pocket. "Remain here while I confer with a lawyer whom I happen to know. He lives not far away. I'll be back in an hour. Meanwhile you'll be perfectly safe."

I opened the door. The man with the horse's eyes stood outside.

"Ah, the janitor," said I.

He came in and shut the door.

"I'm posing as the janitor for your benefit," said he. "In reality I'm a police detective, and at present I represent parties that it's unnecessary to name. A pal of mine whose head is behind that baseboard while the most of his body is in the room below, saw that young lady give you a certain paper." (He pointed to the lower part of the partition between the two rooms. There was a peephole to each undoubtedly.) "I'll trouble you for it," he continued, and with amazing suddenness drew a revolver.

"Under compulsion," said I, and gave him the sealed envelope. He opened it and took out a blank sheet of paper.

"Sold," said he, and without another word he restored the revolver to his pocket and left the room.

This trick I had outlined to Evelyn while we whispered together. It had been my intention to go out and walk about merely to see what would happen. I had expected to be arrested on some form of illegal capias merely to give a color of authority for searching me.

Meanwhile the precious document reposed safely in the large ball on top of one of the brass andirons.

There came a sound of trampling feet in the hall. I sprang to my traveling bag and got out a revolver. There was a knock on the door. A key turned in the lock, and Carleton Perry entered, followed by several men, among whom I recognized the man whom I had seen at the bank and rightly judged to be the president.

Perry greeted his sister with a tenderness which for a moment veiled the wrath that I could see blazing in every fiber of him.

"Duncan," said he, turning to me, "I have come here in company with these"— He hesitated for a word and finally said "gentlemen" in a tone that I have never heard equaled. Even the high politician winced. "I have come," he continued, "to make some sort of terms. I am going to do it, not because I am afraid of them, but because any exposure at this time will inevitably close the bank's doors and bring ruin to good and honorable men who are our customers."

"The bank is perfectly solvent," said the president smoothly.

"That's right," said Perry. "It is, so far as I know. If I am permitted to have an unofficial bank examiner of my acquaintance go in there tomorrow and if he says that all is right and every penny has been made good I'm willing to resign and get out and say nothing. But it must be fixed so that my reputation cannot suffer."

"That looks reasonable," said the president with an agreeable smile, as if we were discussing the most ordinary transaction in finance.

Well, it was compounding a felony which is rather bad business for an honest country lawyer, but we arranged the matter on that basis, after Carleton had returned from taking Evelyn to her lodgings.

"But this puts you out of a job," said I to Perry when all was over and the others gone.

"Hang the job," said he. "I'm in half a dozen things. I've been making money hand over fist. That's why they tried to pose me as a thief, because I looked too prosperous. I tell you what, Duncan, you stay here and be my legal adviser, and I'll make your fortune. And, by the way, what do you think of my little sister? Hasn't she bloomed like a rose?"

I looked at him in silence till I had a curious illusion that Evelyn's image had blotted him out and was sitting in his place.

"Carl," said I, "if there's a chance for me, I'll stay here with you."

"Bully!" he cried, and we shook hands across the table.

HOW TO CARE FOR PLANTS.

Water Is Essential, but It Should Be Used Carefully.

Water is both food and drink to plant life and should be given intelligently—that is, when the plant needs it. There can be no hard and fast rule laid down as to how often or how much water to give a plant, for conditions vary. Evaporation may be much greater at one time than at another. The best rule to follow for nearly all plants, except ferns, is to give a thorough drenching and then allow the surface soil to become dry before watering thoroughly again. Ferns require more water than most plants, and the earth should never be allowed to become entirely dry.

Never water with very cold water. Temper the water before pouring it on to the plants so as not to chill them. In growing plants in the house one must try to carry out as far as possible the conditions of a greenhouse—warm, moist air—and for this reason a kettle of water should remain at all times on the radiator, register or stove to keep the air moist. And it is not amiss to say that this is a good sanitary precaution even if there are no plants in the room, for most of our steam and furnace heated city houses and apartments are kept far too hot and dry for health.

Dust is an enemy to plant life. Plants breathe through their leaves. Therefore it is necessary to keep them free from dust. At least once a week and oftener if the room is very warm or dusty the plants should be put in the bathtub on their side and gently sprinkled with a bath spray.

Remember that rain never falls upon plant life at the temperature and force it comes from a city hydrant. Therefore give them a gentle shower, but see that all parts of the leaves are thoroughly washed. It is also a good idea to spray the plants daily with a hand atomizer. If this is not accessible a whiskbroom dipped in water and shaken over the plants answers the same purpose and may even take the place of the bath spray if used vigorously and thoroughly.

Never water a plant with the sun shining upon it or put it in the sunshine while the leaves are wet. The best time for watering is early in the morning or about sundown.

Some plants need watering twice a day, but most plants require wetting but once a day and under certain conditions not more than once in two or three days. It is best to judge by the conditions of the soil.

A little household ammonia, well diluted, a teaspoonful of ammonia to a half pint of water, poured on the earth about once a month is beneficial, but remember it is only to be put on the soil and not on the leaves.

HOW TO COOK RICE.

Plenty of Water Should Be Used to Get Best Results.

In order that rice when cooked should be snowy white, with every grain separate, it must first be thoroughly washed after picking it clean from every foreign substance, washing through three or four cold, clear waters and rubbing the grains well between the hands to remove all the dust and discoloration.

When well cleaned it must be put over the fire in a quart of boiling water to each cup of rice, adding a teaspoonful of salt to the water. The water must be boiling when the rice is put into it, as the boiling of the water will toss the grains of rice, separating them and preventing their clinging together.

Shake the vessel occasionally until the grains begin to soften, but after this do not touch the rice, but continue the boiling until it swells and appears to thicken. Then take off the cover, pour off any water there is and set the vessel in the oven in order that the dry heat may swell the grains, leaving it for about ten minutes, but by no means until the grains brown.

Then take out of the oven, let stand a few minutes and turn out into a dish. Every grain should stand apart, beautifully white, soft and perfectly dry.

How to Make Squash Pudding.

A delicious way of using summer squash is in the form of a pudding or pie to be made as follows: Press some boiled summer squash through a potato ricer, and to one cupful and three-quarters add an egg yolk, half a cupful of sugar, a liberal half teaspoonful of mace, a liberal half teaspoonful of ginger, grated nutmeg to flavor and a tiny pinch of salt. Beat to a smooth mass and fill a small baking dish just big enough for two. When cold serve with cream. A little butter spread over the top makes the thin crust which forms a nicer brown. This pudding may, if preferred, be baked in custard cups or used as a pie filling, making something that is very similar to a pumpkin pie.

How to Keep Butter Sweet.

If you buy butter enough for a week or two, put it in a stone jar, press it down with a potato masher, take a handful of salt and sprinkle over the top of the butter, then pour in a cup or two of water. It will keep sweet, no matter how warm the weather is, so long as it is covered with this salt water. It will not make the butter salty. When needed take up enough for the table at a time.

How to Clean Wall Paper.

To remove grease stains on wall paper put a piece of blotting paper over the stain and iron with a hot flatiron. The grease will be absorbed into the blotting paper, leaving the wall clean.

thus settling this vexed controversy.

The matter of the proposed improvement of Francis street occupied the attention of the council Tuesday evening. Numerous objections were filed by property owners against the assessment roll, and, after much discussion, further hearing was postponed for one week. Upon motion, the mayor appointed a committee of three, together with the city attorney, to investigate objections. Such committee consists of Councilmen Elliott, Myers and Fisher.

City Clerk was instructed to advertise for bids for the erection and installation of a substation for the purpose of housing the transformers. Specifications require that the station be of re-inforced concrete; building to be of sufficient size to accommodate two constant current transformers with necessary switch board panel. The proposed location of station to be on the Boulevard, near Cherry, or on Ninth, near Cherry street, as council may decide. Contractor to figure on giving local labor preference.

Probable cost of station, $7000.

TWO WEEKS IN PRACTICAL FARMING

Specialists at Experimental Station, Puyallup, Will Give Short Course February 12-24. Stock, Feeds, Fruit, Poultry.

Leading stress will be placed upon instruction and demonstrations in dairy practice at the two weeks' short course at Puyallup, which runs from February 12th to 24th, inclusive.

One serious problem is that of forage for cows. Land is valuable and its value will continue to increase. Kale yields from twenty to thirty tons per acre, and contains usually about two and half per cent of protein. The actual feeding value is probably five or six dollars. An interesting feature of the Puyallup school will be a comparison of the feeding value of different feeds—kale, clover, alfalfa, and others Professor George Severance, superintendant of the station at Puyallup, is a speciaist in the matter of forage crops.

Another interesting topic will be the question of silos andsilage—the kind of silos to build, discussions of cost; what crops are most adapted to silage in the western counties, and their relative values. Experiments which have been carried on under the supervision of Mr. H. W Sparks, who has a number of demonstration farms located in western Washington, indicate that certain kinds of corn can be acclimated to Western Washington conditions.

For the past two years seed has been sent to Mrs. Jessie Gregg of Adna, Lewis county. Last fall the ten acres of silo corn filled a one hundred ton silo. The average yield of the tract was about twelve tons per acre. This was grown on a loamy soil—the Chehalis river bottom. The corn is there used in a four year rotation—corn following clover, the clover sod being turned under; and corn on the clover sod.

Corn is of course the most satisfactory ensilage crop we have. It contains nearly a balanced ration in itself, and, as a rule, gives the largest yield of nutrients per acre, of any crop. It also siloes better than any other crop, if it can be secured in a mature condition. The corn problem in Western Washington at present is to secure a variety whichwill mature before fall sets in.

Other forage crops can be siloed, however, for instance, peas and oats, or clover. The first crop of the latter is usually put in the silo on account of the weather being such that it often cannot be harvested for hay.

Problems relating to the construction of silos will be taken up, particularly these having to do with cost. Silos have been built in the Puget Sound region for from eighty to ninety dollars, that is wooden ones; the cement silos are built for from $200 to $225 and up.

A very important division of the work of the Puyallup school will relate to breeding from the standpoint of making a better producing animal. Under ordinary conditions, a cow that produces less than three hundred pounds butter fat in a year would not be considered a profitable cow. From such an animal the gross receipts will usually amount to about $140, valuing the manure at $25 per year. To offset this the feed and labor and interest on investment, etc. incurs an expense of about $152 per cow per year. Figures on this conservative basis, a three hundred pound cow would not be a profitable investment.

One who keeps close tab on the butter situation states that within the past few weeks thousands of tons of this commodity, bought during the summer of 1910 and held through the disastrous slump which came a few months later, have been put on the market at prices ranging from 28 to 30 cents or about 8 cents below the price paid for western extras.

That the average flock of hens do not have the dust bath privileges that they would like is plainly indicated in the avidity with which they will get on to a pile of ashes or pick out a dry spot of mellow earth in some sheltered spot most any time during the winter months. This dust bath is one luxury the hens should not be denied, is easily provided and will do much toward keeping them free from vermin.

President Taft helped stow away a fifty dollar prize pie that was presented to him by a lady friend eighty-four years old. This is how it was made: Two pints of apples cut in squares, half a pound of sugar, a pint of water and a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg. The crust of this prize winning culinary creation was made of two pounds of flour, a pound of butter and half a pound of lard. Do you notice that shortening?

That there is still a good sized nigger in the wood pile somewhere in the transit of apples between producer and consumer is shown in the prices paid growers in central and eastern states for apples the past season—in some cases as low as 37 cents a bushel—and the price now being paid by the chap who eats 'em—from 3 to 5 cents apiece. Any one who will locate this Ethiopian and chase him out of the wood pile will confer a favor on his fellows.

While the usual time for using the King road drag is just following rains during the open weather of the spring, summer or fall, there is no time when better work can be done with one of these drags than during pleasant winter weather when there is no snow on the ground and when the surface of the dirt roads has been softened and mellowed by warm weather. Especially is such work with the road drag to be urged when the roads froze up rough and rutty.

"AMERICA'S FINEST FLOURING MILLS"

WHY? Blend Flour

STRAIGHT Eastern Hard Wheat flour has its uses. So has straight Soft Wheat flour. But to get results from the hard wheat flour, it must be thoroughly kneaded. The housewife finds this too arduous. Furthermore, we're living in a labor-saving age. Yet, Eastern Hard Wheat flour has desirable qualities that cannot be overlooked in the production of the best breadstuff. Bakers realize this, for invariably they combine flours themselves, made of Eastern Hard Wheat and Western Soft Wheat—that is to say: BLEND Them.

But the two must not be mixed haphazardly, as the superiority of combination depends wholly on a proper balance. Before offering the public their product, the FISHER FLOURING MILLS COMPANY made exhaustive tests to determine the exact proportions of each flour required to produce the blend of highest efficiency.

The formula finally adopted, in actual baking competition with all other well-known brands on the market today, has repeatedly demonstrated its excellence. You get this scientific combination in buying

Fisher's Blend Flour

AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT.

Governor West of Oregon is sponsor for an experiment in the employment of convicts in permanent road building in the state that is not only unique, but commendable, both from the standpoint of the welfare of the convicts employed and the building of permanent highways at a minimum cost The men—there are some thirty of them in the group referred to—are what the governor calls his "honor squad" and have been hired out to the contractor having in charge the building of the state highway to the famous Crater lake, in the southern part of the state. Their camp has been placed in a picturesque spot on the Rogue river, and here the men are today laboring contentedly and healthfully, with no one to look after them but the overseer who is superintending the work. The men are comfortably housed, well fed and receive 25 cents a day besides for the labor. The plan seems to offer a happy solution of the "bad man-good roads problem" and is deserving of the carefulest investigation by those who are interested not only in building permanent highways at a minimum cost, but, what is even more important, redeeming and fitting for citizenship the myriads at present confined in prisons, at once a source of heavy expense and usually a menace to society when released.

SOME CORNHUSKING.

Each fall as corn picking time rolls around much interest is shown in the husking records made in different parts of the corn belt. Within the past few weeks all previous records have gone a-glimmering. The last week in November a grueling husking contest was pulled off near Percival, in Fremont, the southwest county of Iowa. The contestants were Bert Van Houten, a resident of the county, and Earl Neely of Nebraska City, Neb. Spice was added to the contest owing to the fact that Van Houten had a short time before defeated Neely in a husking match and the further fact that each had wagered $500 that he could defeat the other. At the end of ten hours Neely had to his credit 231 bushels and fifty pounds of corn, while Van Houten had husked in the same period 230 bushels and thirty pounds. But if reports are correct these performances were put in the shade by Claude Wilson of Silver City, in Fremont county, who, without a pacemaker, husked 251 bushels and thirty-nine pounds of corn in ten hours, all ears thrown over the wagon being picked up and the corn being as free from husks as average corn. When one takes into account that seventy-five or eighty bushels is considered a very good day's work it can be the better appreciated what the above records mean.

ANOTHER SERVICE.

Birds, the little friends to which mankind is already heavily in debt for song and destruction of insect pests, are being put to a new and interesting use which it is believed will still further safeguard human life. Experiments which have been conducted by the federal department of mines show that birds, especially the canary, will droop or succumb almost immediately when introduced into a mine in which foul gases have been produced as the result of an explosion, while a healthy man may not feel the effects of the foul air for about eight minutes. The birds are to be used by those engaged in rescue work in mines, the birds being kept in cages and watched closely. If the birds are noticed drooping the rescuers take warning and either retrace their steps or put on their oxygen helmets.

HOME CURED BACON.

Those who relish home cured bacon will be interested in the following recipe: After the butchering all of the animal heat should be allowed to get out of the meat, and for best results it should not be allowed to freeze Each piece to be cured should be rubbed with salt and allowed to drain overnight. All should then be packed in a clean barrel or large stone jar, the thicker pieces at the bottom. For each 100 pounds of meat there should be weighed out eight pounds of salt, two pounds of sugar and one ounce of saltpeter. This should be dissolved in four gallons of water and poured over the meat cold. The meat should then be weighted with a stone to keep it under the brine. In from five to seven weeks, depending upon the size of the pieces, the meat may be hung up and smoked.

COSTLY CARELESSNESS.

In the raising of hogs all too often the value of an excellent ration is largely or entirely offset by improper quarters. Especially is this true as regards the winter care of brood sows A farmer with whom the writer was talking the other day in speaking of his past season's operations mentioned losing practically all his little pigs last spring, and in discussing this loss it developed that the trouble was not due to feeding the sows an improperly balanced (largely corn) ration, but to the fact that the shelter provided for the sows left them exposed to the dampness and cold, caused them to pile up, and dead little pigs were the result.

THISTLE EXPERT WANTED.

Directors of the Kansas experiment station are looking for some one to establish a thistle scholarship- that is, an endowment sufficient to pay the expenses of a student who shall devote a good share of his time to a study of the Russian thistle and, if possible, breed the spines off the plant.

A level headed poultryman whose premises the writer passed the other day solved the question of green food for his flock the past season by sowing the greater portion of the yard to rape This was allowed to get a good start before the poultry was turned in, and as a result the flock has had an abundance of the finest kind of green food since, and it will be good well into winter The plan is a simple one and well worth a trial.

In a paragraph in this department a week or two ago referring to the fellows on the wet and low land having harvested bumper crops on such lands as a result of the dry seasons attention was called to the fact that tiling the land would produce the same condition of soil and give the same results Through a typographical error the word "tilling" was used, which changed the meaning and sense of the paragraph completely.

There is no natural enemy of the rat that is more relentless than the weasel, which now and then visits one's premises, and a mighty interesting little animal it is. At this season of the year weasels are a light mouse color on the back, with an undercolor nearly white. They have very slender bodies and can easily traverse the runways of the rats. Weasels are as fond of poultry as of rats, and this operates against them on premises where poultry is kept. Where such is not the case, however, they may be encouraged with a bit of raw beef or fruit and will become quite tame.

In all sections where the cottontail holds forth the warfare against it should be renewed with vigor every fall. This is a job in which that active boy should have a hand, and he may use both traps and a ferret to good advantage. The steel and several types of box traps give good results, as does also the wire noose trap suspended from strong brush just above its runway. The wire should be pliable and the loose end made into a slip noose into which the rabbit unwittingly sticks its head. The ferret should always be used with a stout cord or chain, so that it can be pulled from a burrow in which it has cornered and killed a rabbit. Very often if the cord is not attached the ferret will remain in the hole for a day or two, feasting on its prey.

One of the best words uttered at the national conservation congress recently held at Kansas City was spoken by the president of the association, Mr Henry Wallace, when he said that from the time the rich lands of the country were received from the government as homesteads by present owners or their ancestors by blood or title, they have been robbed through a mining and selling of their stores of fertility in the shape of raw, unfinished crops. He insisted that if our marvelously fertile soil is not to become entirely depleted, rational methods of handling the soil that will conserve its fertility must be adopted similar to those which enable the English farmer to raise more bushels of wheat per acre today than did his ancestors on the same land hundreds of years ago

Chateaubriand's Early Struggles.

A new discovery has been made about Chateaubriand—nothing less than that he once sold stockings on commission. It was in 1790, when he was still an officer in the royal service. He had a debt of honor, amounting to £200. He wrote to a distant relative, one La Morandais, who manufactured stockings in Switzerland, appealing for help on the ground that he must either pay that debt or blow his brains out. La Morandais, instead of sending him money, sent him 169 dozen pairs of stockings, offering him a liberal commission if he would sell them among his distinguished friends. He gratefully accepted the offer and succeeded in disposing of the merchandise. There is reason to believe that he managed to plant a good deal of it on the stores department of his own regiment.—Westminster Gazette.

Dr. Holmes' Wit.

One of the best repartees ever credited to a habitual maker of happy phrases was that made by the beloved "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" on a certain social occasion.

Going to dine with a Boston neighbor, Dr. Holmes was met by her with an apology:

"I could not get another man. We are four women, and you will have to take us all in."

"Forewarned is fourarmed," he said with a bow.

Flies and Filth.

The fly is born in, lives and thrives upon filth. If no filth is allowed to accumulate in a house or its neighborhood it will not be troubled by flies, for they do not ordinarily stray far from their breeding places and their sources of food In a thoroughly clean neighborhood they cannot live in the face of screens preventing their access to food and to the absence of manure heaps and other receptacles for filth in which to deposit their eggs.—Survey.

Helping Things Along.

"The family in the next flat has three phonographs and four boys with toy express wagons," said Mr Growcher's wife. "What on earth shall we do?"

"Send for the piano tuner and ask him how much he'll take to work by the day."—Washington Star.

TWO CIDER TESTS.

The First One Was Rather More Convincing Than the Second.

In all glorious New Jersey it is generally admitted there is no cider to equal that of Farmer Marshall. But he is notable for other things besides It is said that he would very much rather receive than give in short, that he is a stingy old rascal.

Young Peterson had heard of this, but he was a young man who had considerable faith in his own powers of passing on the gentle hint, and to some sportive companions he had boasted that he would get a drink of cider out of the old man without actually asking for it. As such a thing had never been known to happen in living memory, there were plenty of takers, and the next day Peterson drove over.

"Morning, father," said he. "Fine orchard you have here."

"Aye," said the farmer.

"They tell me, too, that you have a very fine press."

"Aye. 'Tis the best in all Jersey."

"Pretty good cider you get, I suppose, eh? But I dare say I've tasted better"

"Not in your born days, Tom"—this to his son—"get an' draw a mug o' cider"

The luscious beverage was brought, and with a smile of triumph young Peterson held forth his hand to take it.

But the farmer's hand got there first. He drained the mug and then handed it to the visitor.

"There!" he remarked "If you think you've ever met the like of that cider just smell the mug!"

A Comical Comparison.

You know how it is when a man grows fat and rolls of fat at the back of his neck are sort of piled one above the other until stopped by the base of his skull. Well, a man with the rear of his neck disposed that way was sitting at the theater one evening in a seat just in front of one who isn't reverent.

The latter contemplated the exuberant layers of flesh surmounting the fat man's collar. Then, pointing to them, he remarked, sotto voce, to the companion beside him:

"Look at the plate of buckwheat cakes!"—New York Times.

A Spoiled Banquet.

An ambassador in Washington had arranged—the date happened to be Halloween—to give a dinner party to a body of traveling Siamese noblemen. Halloween duly arrived, the dinner was duly prepared, but none of the guests turned up. The ambassador was beside himself.

"A RATHER SUPERIOR LOT, SIR."

Finally, at 8:30, when all the food was about spoiled, he sent for his butler, a new and rather green hand.

"Wilkinson," he said, "is it possible that none of my guests have arrived?"

"Not one of 'em, sir," the butler answered. "This here ringin' of the bell ye may have heard, sir, has been the work of a cursed lot of Halloween masqueraders, all blackened up and dressed in yallers and reds and silks and satins, fit to kill—a rather superior lot, sir. They come in motors mostly. But of course, in view of the dinner party, sir, I turned 'em away, for all their protests, in short order."—Washington Star.

Where the Money Went.

Mark Twain used to tell a story of two rich unmarried women who were attacked by scruples on the occasion of Sarah Bernhardt's visit to their town They had always longed to see the great French actress, but the price of the tickets, $25 each, seemed to them a wicked extravagance. After talking it over they decided not to go, but instead to give the $50 to a poor couple of their acquaintance. The recipients went straight away and bought two tickets to see the divine Sarah.

His Compliment.

There was a young minister in Scotland who thought he was very eloquent and who was very ambitious. The young minister asked the old minister to come and hear him preach, and he preached a magnificent sermon When they returned to the vestry he waited expectantly for some compliment from the old minister, which did not come. The old minister sat with beetling brows, looking at him—those beetling brows for which Dundee and its neighborhood are famous At last the old minister did break silence and said, "Ah, mon, ye must be a proud mon the day to hae got rid of a that weary, windy, wastefu' trash aff yer stomach."

A MIGHTY MEAN TRICK.

It Made the Green City Chap Madder Than a Wet Hen.

Former Sheriff Billy Davis of Bartholomew county told the following story to illustrate the driving force of the little black bumblebee, the bane of the existence of the small country boy and the summer boarder:

"We had on our farm one summer a young man from the city who had a horror of being stung by a bumblebee. He had been told that if he were attacked he should see to it that his head and face were protected, as the bees would sting his face all out of shape and if lodged in his hair would sit and sting until they were tired.

"He was with us in the clover field one day, where the bees were unusually thick. We were 'doddering' the hay, or piling it in small piles against an approaching rain, and were pretty close to the mower. As the city chap was stalking along between piles the mower tore up the nest of some of those little black bumblebees, and they made for the youngster from town. Some one shouted, and the threatened victim made for a newly piled 'dodder' of hay. In he went headforemost until his head and shoulders were covered.

"But the bees didn't care about the head and shoulders particularly. There was a wriggling mass, it looked alive and they went to it, and what they did to the exposed part of that city chap was a-plenty. A muffled yell from the interior of the dodder followed, and hay went scattering in all directions. The city chap arose to his feet madder than a wet hen.

"'I may be from the city and green,' he shouted, 'but I think it is a mighty mean trick to scare a fellow like that and then when he is trying to make himself safe stick him with a pitchfork. I can lick the man who did it.'"—Indianapolis News.

HE WAS THE PASTOR.

And That Kept Him From Giving the Other Man the Address.

Will Townsley of the Great Bend Tribune tells this story of a versatile minister in western Kansas, who is also postmaster, runs the only general store in the town, is president of the only bank in the place and is also a practicing lawyer:

On one occasion a traveling salesman sold the town merchant a lot of jewelry. When it came it was not as represented and was returned to the house, which, however, undertook to collect the bill. First the wholesale house drew a sight draft on the merchant through the bank, which was returned unhonored. Then a letter was addressed to the postmaster inquiring about the financial standing of the merchant. The postmaster reported the merchant all O. K. Finally the account was sent for collection addressed to the leading lawyer.

Then the minister took his pen in hand and wrote as follows: "The undersigned is the merchant on whom you attempted to palm off your worthless goods; the undersigned is president and owner of the bank to which you sent your sight draft; the undersigned is the postmaster to whom you wrote, and the undersigned is the lawyer whose services you sought to obtain for your nefarious business. And if the undersigned were not also the pastor of the church at this place he would tell you where to go."—Kansas City Star.

Went Him One Better.

Philander Chase Knox was a diplomat long before he became secretary of state. A good many years ago he and ex-President Harrison represented a group of big railroads in the middle west in an extremely important case, which they won. Two months later they met in New York.

"Well,' said Harrison with some pride, "I charged those railroads $25,000—and got it!"

"I congratulate you," said Knox quietly. "I charged them $125,000. I also got it."—New York Tribune.

Old High Finance.

Frenzied finance is not exclusively a habit of recent years. At the Riggs National bank in Washington, says the Popular Magazine, there is carefully guarded a proof of the foregoing assertion.

Regarding the proof there is told this story:

One winter morning Henry Clay, finding himself in need of money, went to the Riggs bank and asked for the loan of $250 on his personal note. He was told that, while his credit was perfectly good, it was the inflexible rule of the bank to require an indorser.

The great statesman hunted up Daniel Webster and asked him to indorse the note.

"With pleasure," said Webster. "But I need some money myself. Why not make your note for $500, and you and I will split it?"

This they did. And today the note is in the Riggs bank—unpaid.

Chinese Humor.

In his book on "China and the Chinese" Dr. Giles gives a specimen of Chinese humor which, if the source were not known, might well be mistaken for American humor

There is a Chinese story which tells how a very stingy man took a paltry sum of money to an artist—payment is always exacted in advance—and asked him to paint his portrait. The artist at once complied with the request, but when the portrait was finished nothing was visible save the back of the sitter's head.

"What does this mean?" cried the sitter indignantly.

"Well," replied the artist, "I thought a man who paid so little as you paid wouldn't care to show his face."

RENE SAVED BY SNOHOMISH

The power boat Rene, which has been used for some time as an oil distributing vessel by the Union Oil Company of Seattle, making regular trips to Port Angeles, went ashore and sunk on Dungeness spit Thursday night of last week, being badly damaged.

The Rene, in heavy seas off Dungeness, shifted her cargo, which carried away her deck house and 100 drums of oil. A few hours later she was driven ashore near Dungeness light.

Lieut Wolf of the life-saving tug Snohomish went to the rescue of the Rene, righted and pumped her out. On the way to Seattle the little vessel turned turtle, was again righted and safely brought to Seattle by the Snohomish.

As a result of the disaster some of our local merchants were short on illuminating oil for a time.

COMPLETELY SWAMPED

The west crossing over Peabody at the junction of Front street, is a daisy as a "swimming hole" but of no value for the purpose for which intended, during the rainy season. The crossing is below the street level and the hole fills with water and soft mud after every rain. This crossing is used by more people, or would be if passable—by our public school children, by children attending the Sunday schools and by worshipers at the Methodist and Congregational churches—than any other crossing in the city. Of course as soon as their attention is called to it the matter will be looked after by the proper authorities. If it can't be raised, bridge it until the rains are over.

As predicted by his friends, Governor Hay has announced the appointment of Mr. M. J. Carrigan, of Seattle, as a member of the state board of tax commissioners, to succeed T. A. Parish, resigned. The new appointment is effective February 1. Mr. Carrigan's many Port Angeles friends will rejoice over his good fortune, fully aware that "Little Mike" will make good wherever put.

About People of Local Interest

The Bridge Club of Sunrise Hill entertained their husbands Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Luppen. Cards entertained the guests for some time, when, much to the consternation of the ladies as well as their husbands, they were requested to gather together all their belongings and "follow the leader." They were led to Mrs. F. A. Jensen's, where delicious refreshments were served and a short musical and literary program was given, to which Mrs. Stovel, Mrs. Kirchberg, and Miss Angie Ritchie contributed. The highest score at cards was made by J. C. Hansen, who was duly rewarded, and Mr. Kirschberg was given the consolation. All enjoyed a very delightful evening.

The body of Clarence Bracken, a little boy ten years of age, was bro't here for burial Monday. He was accidentally run over by an auto in Seattle and killed. His father and mother were former residents of Angeles, and the boy's remains were brought here to be laid at rest beside the grave of his father in Ocean View Cemetery. The boy's mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Auriol, and Mrs. Auriol's mother accompanied the remains to Angeles. The floral offerings were exceptional in beauty and profusion.

Little Miss Irene Mitchell celebrated her fourth birthday anniversary Wednesday afternoon by entertaining a number of her little friends and their mammas. All spent a very enjoyable afternoon and Irene was made happy by many pretty remembrances from her little playmates, with the wish that she might spend many more as enjoyable birthdays

The Freshmen's Frolic at Parish Hall Saturday night was a very pleasant affair. All members of the High School, the teachers and some outside guests were in attendance and helped to make the occasion a most joyous one. Games of various kinds and dancing were indulged in and most excellent refreshments served.

The High School Basket Ball Team, tho rather badly beaten at Townsend last Saturday night, report a splendid time with the most courteous and kindly treatment from the High School boys of Townsend.

PERTINENT POST CARD

Socialists Distribute One Which Attracts Much Attention.

To advertise the fourth number of the Socialist Lyceum course members of that party are distributing a post card which may be said to contain about as much food for thought as was ever put on a piece of paper the same size. In fact, the thought gormands do not usually seek intellectual banquets on post cards!

The text of this particular post card is by Arthur Brooks Barber,

ANNA E. MALEY

the well known Socialist lecturer, who says:

Citizen, when you see a package labeled Fragile, and Handle With Care, and Use No Hooks, and ThisSide Up, and that sort of thing, you seem to get the impression that the contents of that package are in some way delicate.

Now, if that package is labeled Slam It, and Drop It Hard, and Kick It, and Dance On It and if the government has been paying men big salaries to break it up, and if, after everybody in America has had a crack at it for twenty years it still has not a scratch, and not a dent, aren't you about ready to stop and ask whether there is any use of trying to bust it?

The Socialists think that any thing able to stand all this wear must have something good in it, and they don't want the trusts busted. They say, "Let's own 'em!"

The Socialist's view of the trust question will be set forth in a lecture on "The Trust Buster," by Anna Agnes Maley at the opera house, Monday, February 5th. All those who heard Comrad Maley when she spoke here last fall, know that the subject will be ably presented.

"God almighty never made a board of directors good enough to control the homes and families of American citizens."

Without an act of congress, the court, by its 'rule of reason,' and its weapon, the injunction, has all at once created itself into a legislature, an interstate commerce commission and a supreme court, combined in one."

"Whoever has been conspicuous in any movement— municipal, state or nation—that man has been marked and proclaimed dangerous."

"Honest, unselfish, patriotic effort to awaken the public to an appreciation of the dangers threatened has been announced as the work of the demagogue and self-seeker."—LaFollette.

F. A. McDonald, who is going into the poultry business near Dungeness, was an Angeles visitor Thursday. He added his name to the rapidly increasing subscription list of the Olympic-Leader that he might keep himself "properly informed on railroad matters and other news."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Addie Thomas, primary teacher at Central, has been sick for some time but is now reported rapidly recovering. Miss Hazel Murray, a senior in High School, who holds a second grade certificate, has had charge of the primary room in the absence of Miss Thomas.

The Seniors are at work on a play which they plan to give some time during the latter part of the school year. The date has not yet been fixed.

At the last teachers examination held in Clallam County two of the senior class of the High School successfully passed and received certifiates to teach, Hazel Murray and Mae Webster. It is not a bad showing for the High School that students pass the state teachers examination.

The management of the entertainment course reports the last number of the course is to be given February 12th. J. C. Herbsman, a University man and an entertainer of rare ability, to judge by reports from towns where he has been heard, will be the attraction Mr. Herbsman while billed as a lecturer gives a good deal of his time to reading and the interpretation of high class literature. No one should miss the opportunity to hear him.

The attendance in school during the past month has been unusually good. The average for the year is higher than previous records show for a good while back. While that is due no doubt, to a great extent to the exceptionally fine weather, it also indicates the right kind of a school spirit among the patrons of the school.

The High School boys met defeat at the hands of Townsend last Saturday night. It will be remembered that at a previous game in Angeles between the Townsend and the Angeles teams the latter won by a good score. The Townsend team is expected here February 24th to decide which is entitled to the championship.

The following basket ball games are scheduled by the High School, all to be played in A. A. A. hall:

Auburn vs. Angeles, Feb. 10.
Kent vs. Angeles, Feb. 17.
Townsend vs. Angeles, Feb. 24.

It is to be hoped that the people of the town who like to see clean sport and are interested in athletics will turn out to these games.

The Philomathea Literary Society are planning a public program to be given in the near future.

The date will be definitely announced next week.

Many of the ladies of the town may be interested in the instruction in sewing that is given in the schools. We believe that considering the facilities some very good work is done in those classes and would be pleased to have patrons of the school come and inspect the work. The following are the periods:

Eighth grade, Miss Watson Monday 10:45. Seventh grade, Mrs. Wentworth, Tuesday 10:45. Sixth grade, Boyd Edgar, Wednesday 10:45.

On Lincoln Heights

Mrs. Minnie Richardson entertained the W. L. C. January 26th. Twenty-two members and one visitor present. Mrs. LaFlower sang "Rock me to Sleep, Mother," accompanied by Mrs. Hattie Thompson on the piano. Mrs. Minnie Fuller gave an original poem, "Our Club." Mrs. Daisy Fleming sang a pretty little song, accompanied by Mrs. LaFlower, which called forth an encore, to which they responded with one both pleasing and comical. Mrs. Thompson read a reply to Rudyard Kipling's poem, "The Female of the Species."

Mr. Chamberlain is slowly recovering from his severe illness.

Mr. and Mrs. James Higgins of Irondale came down last Saturday to visit their parents and other relatives.

Mr. Phil. Meredith and family are occupying the residence recently built on 8th street by Mr. Peterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Ester, also Mr. Mathews and son Emerson, are out on their ranches this week.

It is time to begin to think about garden making. Christopher & Leland can supply you with everything in the line of garden tools, wheelbarrows, etc.

MR. CRAIG HAS PASSED AWAY

David White Craig was born in Redfield, Mass., April 21st, 1849, and passed away in Port Angeles February 1st, 1912, at 12:30 a. m. His living relatives are his widow, Mrs. Craig, one son, Dr. Daniel H. Craig of Boston, a sister, Mrs. Mary Sherbourne of Redfield, Mass, and another, Mrs. Georgina Lawrence of Waverly, Mass.

Mr. Craig suffered a stroke of paralysis a few years ago from which he had never recovered, tho able to be about most of the time. They have spent the past few winters in California and only returned from there Monday of this week. Mr. Craig had another severe stroke while down south, which weakened him so badly both mentally and physically that it was decided best to return home. He was taken to the General Hospital under the care of Dr. McGillivray and a physician who accompanied them from San Francisco. He grew rapidly worse and never rallied from a severe stroke he had at 7:30 Wednesday morning, but passed peacefully away in sleep.

Deceased was a member of the orders of Knights Templars and Odd Fellows. He came to Port Angeles with his wife in 1900 and has resided here almost continuously since, where he had a host of friends. He had a most hospitable and kindly nature and was never happier than when he and his estimable wife were doing the honors of host and hostess to a large circle of friends, who were always warmly welcomed at their pleasant home.

The funeral will be a private one at the family residence on 7th and Francis streets, Saturday, February 3rd, at 2 o'clock, to which all friends are invited. The remains will be taken to Seattle for cremation. The sympathy of the whole community goes out to Mrs. Craig in her sorrow and grief.

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING

The 11th annual meeting of the members and friends of the Congregational church was held Wednesday evening in the church and drew out a large attendance of both sexes. After all business matters had been attended to, such as listening to reports from the different departments of the church organizations, election of new officers, etc., a very pleasing musical program was rendered. The remainder of the evening was spent in a social manner and light refreshments were served. The reports of the various committees on church work were most encouraging and the year that has past has been the most successful in many ways that the church has ever known. Great credit is due the ladies of the church who have worked so faithfully and untiringly, as well as to the pastor and his estimable family, who have never been found wanting, but who have used all their strength and energy for the upbuilding of the church.

The interior of the church now has a very homey and attractive appearance and all are welcome who enter there. Mrs. Conrad Luppen will have charge of the Sunday schools for the coming year, and no doubt will be instrumental in arousing new spirit and enthusiasm.

Clarence Darrow, counsel for the McNamaras, has been indicted for attempting to bribe jurymen during the progress of of the famous case.

"The great issue before the Americanpeople today is the control of their own government."—LaFollette.

Clever Idea.

At the services one Sunday morning in a church for the colored folks of a Mississippi town there was observed one dusky youngster accompanying his grandparents and sitting as wise as a young owl throughout the long sermon.

At the close of the service somebody congratulated the grandfather upon the excellence of the child's behavior.

The grandfather smiled significantly. "Dat boy is always well threatened befo' he goes in de church."—Judge.
