Governor Cox will come to Washington the first or second week in September for three speeches at Spokane, Tacoma and Seattle, while Franklin D. Roosevelt will arrive August 17 or 20 for speeches at Spokane, Walla Walla, Yakima, Ellensburg, Bellingham, Everett, Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia, Aberdeen and Centralia, with short talks at about thirty other Washington points. He also will come in September. Former national chairman Homer S. Cummings, will speak at Puyallup Fair, October 6, it was announced.

CIVIL STRIFE IS FORECAST

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, July 30.—The triumph of the proletariat involves a bloody revolution; that to achieve it in Great Britain, the workers must prepare for civil war, that the days is coming when Communism sweeping through Europe and enlisting the eastern nations in the movement, would meet Great Britain and America in mortal cosflict; are outstanding points in a long communication to the British Independent Labor party from the Third Internationale at Moscow, quoted by the London Times.

SPOKANE MAYOR IS DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE.

(By Associated Press)

SPOKANE, July 30. — Plans for a meeting next Saturday at which the prospective candidacy of Mayor Chas. A. Fleming for the democratic nomination for congress from the Fifth Washington district is to be boomed were made from the executive committee of the Young Men's Democratic club at a meeting today. Mayor Fleming, chosen city commissioner in a non-partisan election, has not yet announced his candidacy.

NEW RUMANIAN ENVOY.

LONDON, July 29.—Prince Antonio Bibesco has been appointed Rumanian minister to the United States, says the London Times.

Prince Antonio Bibesco is first minister of the Rumanian legation at London. He married Alice Asquith, daughter of H. H. Asquith, former British premier.

WHEAT TRADE DEMORALIZED

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 30.—Acute depression returned today to the wheat trade and a decline of 12c a bushel was witnessed. Scarcity of buyers rather than strength of selling power appeared to be the cause. Breaks in foreign rates, British Royal Commission having pulled out of the market until Monday, were all counted in among the bearish factors. Actually the pit contained less than two dozen brokers. There was no excitement. Talk at the side of the pit was largely on the financial difficulties likely to be encountered by would-be holders of grain.

HAS SIX HUSBANDS AND IS ALSO INSANE.

SPOKANE, July 30.—Mrs. Louise Frisbie, declared to have admitted to federal authorities that she has six living husbands, was committed to the Eastern Washington hospital for the insane at Medical Lake.

According to B. E. Cowan, federal immigration inspector here, efforts to deport Mrs. Frisbie to Canada, made since her arrest here seven months ago, have failed in view of the American citizenship of her second husband, who is regarded as her legal spouse.

Annual Picnic And Weekly Half-Holiday Sought By Merchants

The inauguration of an annual merchants picnic and of weekly half-holidays during the months of July and August was discussed at a Commercial Club luncheon at the Merchants hotel, with about twenty business men present, this afternoon. The plan for the annual picnic was approved, but soon the discussion veered to the weekly half-holiday and a committee will make the rounds of the shipping district forthwith and endeavor to get all the required signatures to an agreement to close at noon every Wednesday in the month of August, commencing August 4.

Other matters discussed at the gathering, which took the place of the regular club meeting, which was not held this month, were the county fair and the community hotel project. Secretary Will Taylor discussed the fair situation which is that at present writing there is no fund for the fair this year unless sufficient funds are collected for the new Clallam County Fair Association in time to provide for the local exhibition. All the county and city fair money is being expended upon the fair grounds at the city park so that it may be desirable to have the fair promoted and financed in the same manner as was the Fourth of July celebration. This matter will have to be further discussed before plans are made. The county commissioners, Mr. Taylor reported, were of the opinion that it might be as well to let the fair go this year and devote all the energies available towards establishing the fair association in readiness for next year's operations.

The plan of the association is to have dues of $10 for membership and $1 a year, entitling the holder to season tickets for the fair. Of the funds thus raised 70 per cent is to go towards permanent improvement of the fair grounds.

Ben Phillips introduced the subject of the financing of a hotel which was discussed, especially the question of how much might be raised locally.

WASHINGTON IS CURIOUS ABOUT OIL AGREEMENT

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 30. — An official statement by the state department today disclosed that representations have been made to the British government regarding its policy touching the exploitation of oil fields and the distribution of oil from mandate countries. The subject has been discussed informally between the department and Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador here, and the American embassy in London also is believed to have been gathering information.

The exchanges on the oil question are understood to have begun to take on a more formal character more than a month ago, and a note was addressed to the British government which was not in any sense a protest, but was rather intended to develop the intentions of the British in regard to the oil fields of Mesopotamia and perhaps some of the Balkan countries.

JUDGE BALE'S LECTURE IS BIG FEATURE

Yesterday brought to a close another successful day at the Big Top. Certainly Port Angeles citizens have enjoyed the educational offerings of the 1920 chautauqua to the full.

The feature of yesterday's gatherings was the lecture by Judge Fred G. Bale, the juvenile judge who has the welfare of the growing citizens of America very much at heart. To some conservative people some of the judge's sentiments may appear radical, but he is far from being that. Progressive he is. Progress, sane and safe progress in better ways of handling young people, in his wide experience, the thing that is necessary. For decades the old system has been inadequate to save the nation's greatest asset, its youth. Judge Bale's words gave rise to thought which will no doubt bring much betterment as the wiser minds of the communities in which he speaks seize hold of and assimilate the thoughts he engenders.

The bright entertainment furnished by the Parnells was greatly enjoyed. Emory Parnell's baritone solos were delightful while Mrs. Parnell's girl and boy selections were finely humorous.

Tonight everyone is looking forward to "An Evening in the South Seas."

ALLIES INQUIRE U. S. ATTITUDE

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 30. — Informal inquiries have been addressed to the United States by diplomatic representatives of the allies to ascertain this government's willingness to enter into the proposed peace conference with Soviet Russia.

No formal invitation, however, it was said today at the state department, has been received from France or Great Britain. France is known to be particularly desirous of the participation of the United States in a conference with the Bolsheviki on account of the assumed strength of the opposition to recognition of the soviet government in this country.

OPERATORS AND MINERS MEETING

(By Associated Press)

SEATTE, July 30.—A wage scale committee representing the Washington Coal Operator's association and the Washington State district of the United Mine Workers of America, met in joint session this afternoon to receive reports from subcommittees that have been working for several days on a draft of the proposed new working agreement between the two organizations and the government on producing mines in the state and fixing wage and working conditions of more than 5000 men.

When the committees went into session it was announced that the subcommittees had reached an agreement on all points in dispute and that the prospects were good for a ratification of the subcommittees report.

The wage scale of the proposed new agreement will, it was indicated, give the miners of this state a moderate increase over their present wage scale. The agreement, it is understood, will run the same length of time as the national agreemetn.

Editorial

COMPETITION.

With J. H. Peter, James Stewart and W. S. Pearce all in the race for justice of the peace and ex-officio city police judge, we have before us an opportunity for some real competition. We have not yet recovered from our surprise at the candidacy of Mr. Stewart. Why this able attorney-at-law should descend from his professional seclusion into the rough and tumble sphere of politics, passes our understanding. He certainly cannot need the salary. Perhaps fame is the goal —or perhaps it is sport? One can keep on conjecturing in a circle of bewilderment.

People can make fun of the office of police judge if they will. They are not the people who do business with him. And as for the whisky ring, members of that joyful fraternity regard the office either with veneration and affection or with envy, malice and all uncharitableness.

OIL CONTROL.

With the governments of Great Britain and France going into a new "oil combine" in fields in various parts of the world the United States has sent protests to London and Paris. However, the present attitude of the Republican congress in matters of foreign politics will not give much weight to the protests. America, say the leaders of the senate, is not much interested outside of the boundaries of this continent and South America. So Standard Oil will face a new competitor in world markets. The fact that there is a shortage in America, however, would seem to indicate that Mr. John D. Rockefeller should not worry much about his export business.

SOURCES OF CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

Mr. McAdoo announces that a close watch will be kept upon the Republican campaign financing in order to see that the presidency is not "bought." Probably the Republicans will keep an equally close watch upon the Democratic financiers.

Of course there have been stories of a very large campaign fund for the Republican party this year. Certainly there was lots of loose change around in the presidential primaries. But these represented investments in individuals.

If the two parties run true to form, both will have available considerable funds for campaigning and each party's officials can easily watch the other's sources of supply. There is a good reason, because the bulk of both the campaign funds usually comes from that select spot where the money is—Wall Street. In fact the same people subscribe to both funds with a fine impartiality. Whichever party wins the financiers have friends at court.

Too much attention need not be given to campaign talk about campaign funds. It's a bluff.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

Debs probably hopes there is no truth in that Salvation Army slogan: "A man may be down, but he is never out."—Greenville S. C. Piedmont.

A free-born American citizen is a man who does not want the government to squander his money, because he prefers to spend it extravagantly and wastefully himself. — Houston Post.

POLAND AT HER RED FRONTIER.

The defeat of the Poles by the soviet armies, which has resulted in negotiations now being handled through London, is considered by a large number of American editorial writers the most important event that has taken place since Armistice Day. The majortiy of newspapers, while they still reflect sympathy for the Polish people, are inclined to feel that their defeat was the just reward of a war of conquest. But many blame the Allies for encouraging the Poles without properly supporting them. Some regard the present situation critical since with the buffer-state down, Western Europe may be left at the mercy of Bolshevism. Some, on the other hand, consider that Poland needs all of Western Europe's help in what they believe to be her just struggle against the Red menace.

"Poland's failure," says the St. Louis Star (Ind.), "will be a good thing for the world provided the Russians show a real desire for peace." Since the former invaded 200 miles of Russian territory with the hope of annexation, "they deserve to be beaten," and, as the Louisville Post (Ind.) puts it, they have "come back from old Russia into Poland in a chastened and penitent frame of mind," and will behave if the Allies protect them from invasion. "Paying the price for a war of conquest" is the Rocky Mountain News' (Ind.) description of the defeat and though the situation is "desperate for Poland and threatening for Western Europe" it is simply a result of the bungling of the Russian problem on the part of the Allies. They let the "imperialists" have their way, the Wichita Eagle (Ind.) points out, invade and burn Russian cities and now that they are driven back the Allies are unable to do anything but send a "bristling warning" to Russia. Perhaps it was not only their own leaders who misled Poland, suggests the Boston Gloge (Ind.):

"Pity for the sufferings of the Polish people in their hour of defeat turns an inquiring eye on the powerful neighbors of hers who, while ostensibly sponsoring her liberation, have used one border state after another in half-hearted attempts to subdue Russia, with a long list of failures and disasters of which Poland is the latest, and it is to be hoped the last, victim."

The Charleston Post (Ind. Dem.) considers that the Allies "should have summairly restrained" the Poles in their "campaign of aggression" and the Chicago Post (Ind.) believes that "Poland should have remained within her proper frontiers." Whatever were the motives, says the Baltimore News (Ind.), "which inspired the Poles' rash adventure it has been, as it deserved to be, a failure."

The Boston Transcript (Ind. Rep.) is one of those who see nothing but right and justice in the Polish campaign, for she has been "the chief bulwark" to protect Europe from the reds, "and Poland must continue her mission as the Eastern outpost of civilization even though outside aid is necessary to fulfill that mission." The view is reflected in the Portland (Me.) Express and Advertiser (Rep.), which believes that Poland, "with her own government scarcely established found herself forced to meet the hordes of the Russians."

Faith that "Poland will not be deserted," is expressed by the Utica Press (Ind.) If Lenine does not yield to the terms of the Allies, it thinks that "united European action may rid the continent for once and all" of the Red menace which has been indeed the whole desire of the Poles."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A CHANCE OF A LIFETIME.

I was telling the Authorman a few weeks ago of the exceedingly indifferent service I had received in a shop once noted for its excellent service.

The clerk had handed out the article I asked for with a take-it-or-leave-it-don't-give-a-continental air. Then she had stood with her back to me fixing her hair while I examined it. When I asked her if she had a darker blue she said: "No, madam," without turning around; and when I asked if she had anything less expensive, she turned around, gave me a supercillious stare, and said, "No indeed. The next ones that come in will be at least $3 more."

"I suppose it can't be helped," said the Authorman. "There is such a labor shortage that they are sure of their jobs and such a shortage of goods that they know they can sell things without trying."

Then he added reflectively "But isn't it a great chance for a clerk who wants to make a reputation?"

Wouldn't the Clerk Who Tried to Please Stand Out?

"Wouldn't a clerk who tried just as hard as ever to please, stand out against a background of that sort of thing like white against black? And when the time comes (as it surely will) when jobs aren't easy to hold down, think of the friends she'll have."

An interesting point of view, don't you think ?

And doesn't your experience bear it out?

Shopping is nowhere near such a pleasant adventure these days as it used to be.

In the first place, simple little jobs take so much longer. Suppose on your list are half a dozen such tiresome little items as some more embroidery cotton, some pearl buttons of a certain shape, and an extra saucepan of a certain size. In the old days these would have taken a half hour at most and left you time to look for your new frock. In these days they may take you three times as long and leave you no time to eat the frosting on your shopping cake.

Twenty Minutes to Buy a Tie.

First, many of the departments are insufficiently manned. (Between an undermanned department and a cumbersome system, it took me 20 minutes to buy a 20 cent teapot tile.)

Secondly, stocks are so short that you may have to go to half a dozen places for the simplest things. (The Authorman thought it was very extraordinary that it took me so long to do so little until he tried to buy special kind of screws one day. Since then he has understood better.)

Provision for Future.

And thirdly, one is handicapped by indifferent service.

But when, in the midst of all these annoyances, you come upon a clerk who really wants to please, who is not supercillious, and who even smiles at you now and then; isn't she going to make a deep and lasting impression on you?

I do not think any clerk who thus makes provision for the future (and it begins to look as if it were not such a distant future) will ever regret it.

PLEASANT PLANS.
CHAPTER XI

It is always hard for youth to feel deeply any sorrow that is not very personal. Sympathetic as Alice normally was, she found it hard to feel any grief for her aunt.

"It's Mother I am sorry for," she told her faithful friend Clara, when she met her that afternoon in a little store nearby. "She hasn't seen her sister for about 20 years, and of course, I never have. At least, I don't remember her, so I can't be awfully upset."

"Your mother takes it hard though?" Clara asked.

"Yes, but you see it makes her feel so old and useless. If it had been anyone else, even a casual friend, it would have been the same. Old people take death much harder than the young ones, I think," philosophized Alice as she gathered up her purchases.

"Well, Happy Lady, you don't look as though you ever had a sorrow in your life, or ever expected to have one," Clara smiled at her affectionately as she quoted the children's name for Alice.

"I never expect to," said Alice. Then as the two of them went out the store and turned together up the sunny street, she felt a sudden desire to confide her wonderful news to her friend.

But would David mind? It was sweet to have it as a secret for a little while—but of course, telling Clara was almost like talking to oneself! So arguing, she decided to talk. Only it was hard to begin. "Did—do you like David Thorne?" she asked, by way of working around to it.

"Why—yes. What makes you ask?" Her tone made Alice turn to look at Clara, and in amazement she saw that Clara was blushing furiously—quite like a school girl being teased about a new beau.

This made it embarrissing. Alice did not know how to go on.

"He—likes you," she stammered out making matters forse.

"Does he? Did he say so?" Clara turned to her eagerly.

"Yes, of course he said so. He said he thought you were very clever and pretty, which you are." Alice was afraid to go on now. She hated to hurt Clara's feelings. So they walked on in silence till the corner where Claar turned off to her own house. Then she turned to Alice impulsively.

"You know, I'm perfectly crazy about David—Mr. Thorne. He hasn't said anything to make me feel so, he has been awfully nice, as he is to everyone. But he's so—so different from other men about here."

"He comes from the city and from college, and he has travelled a lot and his mother was brought up in a very prominent family in England. So he's had more time and more chances to learn nice manners than our town boys."

"How do you know all this?" Clara asked.

"Oh, he told me." And this was as near a confession as Alice could get. How dreadful, she thought, if Clara had fallen in love with him too! How dreadful if David flirted with her, or encouraged her!

But this idea did not stay in her mind a moment. She knew David was too fine not to play fair.

He came that evening as soon as their simple supper had been cleared away.

"There's a traveling road show in town," he announced. Do you want to go? I've tickets for the three of us. We could take your mother in thta carriage of mine—I hire it by the week ,you know."

"What fun it would be!" Alice answered joyously. She rarely had an opportunity to indulge in even the few amusements that Farmington afforded. But Mrs. Fairbanks was feeling too ill to want to go, so it was Alice and David who went, secretly glad to be alone.

"Of course, it's badly done," Alice remarked during an intermission. "It doesn't seem so to me, because I've never seen anything better—only the road shows and the movies. But you must find it stupid."

"No, I like it. And I like being with you," he answered simply. Alice laughed happily.

"But you have seen the great actors and heard operas—in how many cities?" she demanded.

"Oh several. New York, and Paris and London. I saw the Passion Play at Oberammergau when I was quite young, and I have traveled a bit in most of our big American cities too."

"It's nice of you not to make fun of us then," she said.

"Why should I? I had to come to Farmington to find the dearest girl in the world," he whispered, while she blushed with pleasure. "Besides my work will keep me here years. Then we will go see some of the other places.' '

"There's the sweetest lady in England, I want you to meet. She's the Honorable Vera Huntleigh. She is about 60 years old and she has been a second mother to me. When we go over to see her, we'll 'do' Europe too if you like. I've really not been about so much—"

It was all like a happy dream to Alice, she wanted no awakening.

THREE OLD SOLDIERS GIVE ALL THE FACTS

Heroes of '60 Want Public to Know How Much Good Tanlac Has Done at Old Soldiers' Home.

So many of the old 'Vets' out at the Soldiers' Home in Leavenworth have been benefitted lately by Tanlac that they decided the fact ought to be made public.

The call for volunteers to report the matter was quickly answered by J. F. Johnson and C. H. Ostrander, each seventy-four years of age, and David M. Cain, who is now m his eightieth year.

Their statements, which were received at the Tanlac offices a few days ago, all seem to have been signed with a steady hand and tell in no uncertain terms of the remarkable results these old heroes of the Sixties have obtained from the master medicine.

David M. Cain, Corporal of Company L, Ward 1, the older of the trio, says: "I have lived a long time and have had lots of experience with medicines, but I have never come across the equal of Tanlac. It has not only rid me of a case of nervous indigestion of eight years standing, but I have actually gained sixteen pounds in weight by taking it. Before taking Tanlac I had no appetite and what little I did eat would sour on my stomach and I would swell up with gas until I could hardly breathe. My heart would palpitate at a terrible rate and I also had raging headaches, and often got so dizzy I could scarcely stand on my feet. I had pains all through my body and was so weak it was difficult for me to get around at all.

"But Tanlac has done away with all my miserable feelings and put me in better shape than I have been for eight or ten years. I can eat just anything I want and my appetite is a caution. And sleep, why, I just sleep like a log every night, feel good and strong, and have more energy than I have had in years. I have recommended Tanlac to many of my comrades, who have also taken it with fine results. It certainly is the right medicine for old folks."

"At the time I began taking Tanlac," said J. F. Johnson, "I couldn't eat or sleep to do much good and just felt miserable all the time. I suffered from indigestion, dizziness, pains in my back, and about all my strength had left me. I had just about come to the conclusion that I would never be well again, but I am now in better physical shape than I have been for a long time. In fact, I don't think I ever felt much better, even when I was a young man, than I do since taking Tanlac."

C. H. Ostrander says: "I believe I had about all the miserable feelings anybody with indigestion can have, and I was so weak and nervous I could hardly drag around. I had been battling with this condition for three years and was ready to give up the fight. But by the help of Tanlac I am now feeling fine.

"I'd like to tell all the soldiers everywhere how Tanlac is helping us here in Leavenworth."

Tanlac is sold in Port Angeles by Owl Drug Co.; in Dungeness by Wm A. Monson; in Sequim by F. D. Babcock; in Blyn by W. B. Main; in Morse by W. F. Taylor, and in Forks by Geo. W. Groffman, and in Neah Bay by W. W. Washburn & Son.
