RUSSO-POLISH SITUATION IS CAUSING GRAVE ALARM IN EUROPE

LLOYD GEORGE WARNS SOVIET ENVOYS OF SUSPICIONS AROUSED

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Aug. 5.—In official circles here, both British and foreign undisguished anxiety is felt over the Russo-Polish situation. One of the British officials said today:

"The situation, from a European standpoint, is as grave as it was in 1914."

A wireless from Moscow asserts that the Rumainians are concentrating forces on the Russo-Rumainian frontier.

Statements by extremist newspapers here today that Great Britain is threatening to declare war if the Bolsheviki cross the Polish borders are not confirmed. In military quarters the view is taken that the principal weapon of the allies would be the blockade and that the Poles would be given supplies if possible to stiffen their resistance.

Berlin reports received here indicate that the soviet troops are within 30 miles of the outer defenses of Warsaw.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Leo Kameneff, president of the Moscow Soviet, who is here on a mission to open up trade relations with Great Britain, is reported to have sent a message to the soviet government asking that Russia accept the original British proposals for a settlement between Russia and Poland.

In the house of commons today, reporting on a conference held last night with the soviet envoys, Premier Lloyd George said that he and Bonar Law had informed Karafin and Kemeneff that only an immediate conclusion of an armistice of fair terms between Russia and Poland would remove the suspicion that Russia's announced desire for peace was not sincere. The terms, he added, must show respect for the independence of Poland.

This decision was reached after an all day sitting of the council of defense and the allied mission.

It is probable the Polish delegation will depart for Minsk Thursday.

ANOTHER MEETING PLANNED.

WARSAW, August 5.—The Polish government has replied to the Russian soviet government, agreeing to meet representatives of the Bolsheviki at Minsk as soon as is feasible.

POLAND'S "MARNE" CROSSED.

PARIS, Aug. 5. — Bolshevik forces apparently have scored a great military victory over the Poles, who are reported to have been forced to abandon the Bug River line and possibly will be compelled to relinquish Warsaw.

According to latest reports, the Polish army for the time being has gone to pieces and the Bolshevik columns, advancing in accordance with approved German technique, are enveloping Warsaw from the north and the east.

The Bug river line, Poland's Marne, has gone almost without a fight, compelling the Poles to make a rapid retreat and shorten their front which some military experts believe will be likely to bring the Poles to the Vistula and San Rivers and involve abandonment of half the country to the invaders.

Candidates Are Running On The Home Stretch

(By the Contest Manager.)

Nine short days and the Herald's widely famed prize campaign comes to a dramatic close. All through this vicinity the contestants are seething with the hustle of preparation, for the final campaign is assuming its logical place as the one affair of importance—all their friends are with one accord ,determined to help their favorites fight valiantly through to victory. Excitement is keyed to the highest pitch.

Riding on the waves of this wonderful demonstration of public enthusiasm are the ambitious candidates who are exerting vigorous efforts to capture the prizes. From every point of the compass is gathering the storm of votes that will be showered upon the election headquarters on the closing days. Never was such a fine array of prizes presented; never was there such a tremendous battle waged to win them.

Accentuating the importance of the last few days is the new and final vote offer and schedule which is now in effect. It's the last chance and remains in effect until Saturday night. Study the new scale carefully. It is one sure way to victory and an automobile. Present indications point to a hair's breadth finish and it seems that the prizes will be won by only a small bargain.

As no candidate can be certain of victory, there is abundant speculation as to the final outcome. This last vote offer will decide. It is only those who rise to the occasion and maintain a stiff upper lip, brushing aside every obstacle that may arise, that have the best chances of winning. It seems to be unanimous, this perseverence that is characteristic of candidates, and this last big vote schedule will undoubtedly witness the most spirited battle that has ever taken place in this section.

All the Herald's territory is being raked thoroughly as with a fine-tooth comb, and the abundance of subscriptions coming forth are sending the vote totals to big figures.

Fresh vitality is what it behooves every candidate to henceforth put into his or her work. The last few days of this campaign during which the new and last big vote offer and schedule is operative, will be the deciding factor in establishing the winners. The race is too close to bank on any possibilities, and there are too many people interested in each candidate to insure any one else an easy victory. Overconfidence loses one a battle. Relaxation at this stage of the campaign is suicidial to success. Determination to win, in connection with relentless activity in vote-getting will make a contestant a winner. The wise candidate proceeds to get every vote she can, and does not falter at obstacles. There is no time to hesitate. What is intended to be done, MUST BE DONE NOW! To temporize is to let some other candidate sweep ahead and claim the prize that would have been yours.

In conclusion, let it be stated that the time of all times has its inception today. The date of the close of the campaign, Saturday, Aug. 14—looms big on the horizon, and every tick of the clock brings it nearer. Read again the new vote offer and schedule in effect till Saturday night, August 7. It is the eleventh hour chance to make a whirlwind finish to victory and an automobile.

BADLY WOUNDED YANK SUFFERS MUCH IN RUSSIA

(By Associated Press)

VIBORG, Finland, Aug. 5.—After seventeen months in Soviet Russia, where he was twice wounded and captured by the Bolsheviki on the Archangel front March 1, 1919, Corporal Arthur Prince of the 339th United States infantry arrived at the Finnish frontier yesterday. On the train with Prince, whose home is Detroit, came 300 French Danish and Swedish refugees from Russia, who are being expatriated.

Prince was one of four Americans sent out on this train by the Moscow, authorities. Among them were two correspondents, who crossed Russia from Vladivostok and Mrs. Emile Sarmen, of New York, a refugee from Samora. Thirty other Americans who have gathered at Moscow are awaiting permission of the Soviet authorities to leave, all anxious for the American government to take steps to obtain their release.

In tattered clothing and worn shoes given him by Americans in Moscow, a cripple from his wounds and a broken leg improperly treated, convalescing from a kidney disease and suffering from loss of weight as a result of 14 months of scant diet in Russian hospitals, Prince has entered for a two weeks stay at the quarantine camp on the Finnish border. After that he will report to the American consulate in Helsingfors for communication with American army authorities as to where he is to report for duty.

No American knew of his presence in Russia until more than a year later when Prince recovered sufficiently to go to the Bolshevik foreign office and ask how to get home. When Americans in Moscow learned of his presence they cared for him until permission was received for him to start for the border.

From Kotlas Prince was removed by hospital train to Kostroma, in middle Russia, where he underwent seven months of intense suffering and three operations necessitated by the attempts of surgeons to treat his broken leg, the tendons of which had become taut as a result of improper attention.

On September 28 Prince was discharged from the hospital and sent as a prisoner to the Tula concentration camp, composed of anti-Bolshevik prisoners. Here after ten days his wounds suppurated afresh, necessitating his again going into a hospital. There he remained a month when he was transferred to Moscow, 120 miles north.

At Moscow Prince says he experienced the worst sufferings of his stay in Russia. The hospital was heated only 2 hours daily; there were untrained nurses and only a few doctors and also a shortage of medicines. Food conditions were bad. Through the friendship of an English Bolshevik soldier, who had been wounded, Prince learned of an international hospital maintained by Hungarians, where conditions were reported better.

Permission was obtained for his transfer but in three weeks hospital authorities had not been able to furnish transportation for his across Moscow. Finally the Englishman, whose wounds did not prevent him from walking, went to the hospital officials and told them he had a revolver and five bullets in it, and that he would kill four Russians and then himself.

NEW YORK, August 5.—While 175 patrons of the Lenox Turkish bath house were sleeping in the early hours of the morning, five robbers who held up the bath-house attendants escaped with $10,000 worth of money and valuables in the lockers belonging to the sleepers.

The men are held in the county jail.

PANAMA CANAL EARNS PROFIT

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 5. — Traffic through the Panama Canal for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, made a new record, according to official reports received here from the Canal Zone.

The number of commercial vessels making the transit was 2,478, with an aggregate tonnage of 8,545,000. They contributed more than $8,500,000 in tolls and other charges. As all expenses of maintenance and operation did not exceed $6,650,000 there was a handsome surplus—nearly five times as large as any previous surplus.

I. W. W. CONTROL GIVEN DENIAL

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Harley P. Christensen, presidential nominee of the Farmer-Labor party, today issued a statement denying that the new party is controlled by the Industrial Workers of the World, as was charged by two of the party leaders in Salt Lake City yesterday, when they quit the party.

MEXICAN COMMANDER ASSASSINATED ON STREET.

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 5.—Capt. L. L. Copeda, commanding the Mexican Federal armed yacht Tecate, patroling Lower California waters, was killed on the streets of Ensenda yesterday, according to reports received here, when a party of Cantu soldiers fired a volley into his back.

TRAIN BANDITS MAY BE CAUGHT IN B. C. PASS

(By Associated Press)

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Aug. 5. — Mounted police patrols are out in the Crow's Nest Pass section, on the border of Alberta and British Columbia, today guarding against the escape of the bandits who held up the Canadian Pacific train recently near Sentinel, Alberta.

The bandits are believed to be in hiding in the pass and making an effort to reach the Flathead Valley from which they might find an outlet to cross the border into the United States.

MISSOURI GIVES PRO-LEAGUE MAN LEAD IN RACE

(By Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5.—With the gubernatorial nominations virtually decide on both republican and democratic tickets, according to incomplete, unofficial returns from Tuesday's primary, political interest is centering on the race between senatorial candidates.

Returns are coming in slowly but a tabulation by the Globe Democrat, from approximately 2,000 precincts, including St. Louis shows Breckenridge Long, former third assistant secretary of state and advocate of the league of nations, leading for the democratic nomination with 39,839, former Federal Judge Henry S. Priest, who made the race on the anti-league and wet platform, second with 32,109, and Chas. M. Hay, pro-league and dry, 25,903.

The race for the republican nomination apparently lies between Senator Selden P. Spencer and Dwight F. Davis. The Globe Democrat tabulation places Davis in the lead with 54,452; Spencer second, 53,692; L. Minnis, third, 14,683.

The status of the aspirants for governor, apparently, is unchanged and indications are that Arthur M. Hyde, and John Atkinson, both of whom campaigned on dry platforms, are the republican and democratic nominees, respectively.

Mrs. Earl Goodwin is expected down from Seattle this evening after spending a week there, where she went to attend a friend's wedding.

PROTEGE OF CLIQUE OF COUNCILMEN ALSO PUNCHES TIME CLOCK

We are drawing near to a show down with the little clique of councilmen who tried to get rid of Mayor Pegram by trumped-up charges, so that they might control city affairs!

George Hixon, illegally appointed city electrician by the votes of Councilman Hooker, Hallahan, Filion, Van Brunt and Acting Mayor Henson, all along, has been drawing down salary of $175 a month from a local industrial concern. He punches the time clock there morning and evening and merely pretends to be a city official, in order to advance the mysterious interests of all or some of the councilmen named above, and to get $175 a month on the side from the taxpayers of the city for duties he is not performing.

He has drawn one pay check, signed by Acting Mayor Henson and approved by Councilman Hallahan as chairman of thte finance committee—and chairman also of the electric light committee—of the council. Councilmen Hallahan, Hooker and the others, it is declared, have full knowledge that, while pretending to be an employe of the city and claiming full time pay, $175 a month, Hixon has actually been working for another company.

Hixon has made several efforts to get pay from the city but it is understood that the mayor declined to sign the warrant on the ground that the appointment of Hixon by the council was illegal and because of the knowledge of Hixon's employment elsewhere. Hixon has not relinquished his claim and the plan presumably was to let this claim accumulate against the city until a more opportune time for collection while Hixon maintained himself comfortably on the pay check of the industrial concern.

While all those on the city council connected with the Hixon intrigues are presumed to have known right along that he was employed by a local mill, confirmation of the report was obtained by Mayor Pegram and City Attorney King for the first time today when they called on the management of the company for the purpose of investigating the story.

It is considered likely that action will be taken by the mayor to dismiss Hixon from an office which probably he has never legally held, and that the chairman of the light and finance committees of the council will be removed from his committee assignments.

"It is a clear case of conspiracy to defraud the city of Port Angeles," said Mayor Pegram, "and all those who connived at it are to blame. When the taxpayers of the city pay a sufficient salary to an official occupying a responsible position, they are entitled to his full services. The matter will be fully investigated and the proper action taken."

With practically no gasoline availabel in the city from Wednesday morning until next Saturday, when a tanker is expected to arrive, local automobile men are decidedly incensed and they are keeping the wires hot planning to import gas on their own account from some other state. Nobody can understand why Port Angeles should be discriminated against. Travelers from other parts of the state say that within reason there is gas for everybody along the highways.

WHO IS TO BE BOSS?

Studying the attitude of organized employers and organized employes from the outside, one may come to the conclusion that the real issue always is: who is to be boss? There is a middle course, but it appeals only to a conservative few on either side of the controversy. There are idealists, watching on the fringe of the fight, who believe that there need not be a boss at all—democracy in industry and so forth. But in practical working conditions the ideal has not yet been developed. Hence the fight still rages, and enthusiasts on either side can attach any high-sounding names they like to it. Only the issue is still: who shall be boss?

Over in Russia where they stood the social fabric on its head by way of insuring "something different," we see developing theoretical autocracy of workers, although in point of fact said workers are completely bossed by a little coterie of "intellectuals" who keep the boys in line by sending them to fight with empty stomachs, with a land of comparative plenty ahead of them. It is said the Bolsheviki armies, hungry for breakfast or supper, as the case may be, fight like the devil to gain "territory" where there is a better chance for three square meals a day than in the truly Bolshevik land that lies behind them. They are after the Poles' larders right now and seem to be getting there fast.

In point of fact the Bloshevik regime can only exist so long as it can keep on fighting. The only people assured of some sort of a livelihood, outside of the official circles at Moscow and in other big cities are the soldiers. But while it is going along, we can study the example of how it works when the boss is many-headed and a white collar is a death warrant. It does not work at all. It is like our late lamented Third Party. Everyone talks at once; there is a vast confusion of voices and no one gets anywhere. It is a wild-eyed dream that can't come true because it is an attempt to change human nature by edict.

The boss can be regulated and made to behave himself, but he cannot be abolished in the present stage of human development.

CONSERVED ALASKA.

Secretary of the Interior Payne puts his finger on the sore spot of Alaska:

"There are too many things 'reserved.' One almost thinks of 'verboten' in Germany. Conservation in the States is most desirable, but what Alaska needs is more men and women and less governmental regulations."

Never was a truer word spoken of that region of unbounded resources and potentalities. From the best of motives Alaska has been over-conserved and constricted. Her development has been fettered lest somebody should get rich in the process. Not thus did the great States of the West grow up. They almost paid a bounty on energy—a free field and free play; and let the pioneer become a "plutocrat" if he could. They prospered because they invited an active and ambitious population. Alaska has been for years the most beruled, belawed, beregulated of countries. Wealth immense, population scanty, development arrested or straggling. Such is the result of fanatical "conservation." Wasn't it Drysdale in "Tom Brown at Oxford" who explained when caught, in a vinous moment burying the college plate, that he was "providing for posterity?"

An error in yesterday's advertisement of the meetings of Col. Hartley, one of the Republican, gubernatorial candidates, said the same was paid for by the Clallam County Republican Committee. It would have been more accurate to have said "a" republican committee. Of course the county central committee is not aiding the primary campaigns of any candidate while it is friendly to all. Col. Hartley made a very good impression in his addresses here, judging by comment heard.

"Prohibition is a fine thing," said Judge Gary—but then the judge was headed for France.—New Haven Register.

They are still busy hurling peace at Germany.—Buffalo News.

FRONT PORCH OR REAR PLATFORM?

Will historical precedent or political expediency dictate Republican campaign methods this year? Already the American press has begun to discuss the relative merits of front porch and read platform.

As far as historical precedent goes the front porch seems more powerful than the stump as a vote-getting institution, as many writers point out. The Wichita Eagle (Ind.) believes that, on this score, it "augurs success for Harding." The McKinley-Bryan campaign is cited, the defeat of Winfield Scott by Franklin Pearce in 1852, Lincoln's victory over Douglas, Grant's victory over Greeley, and Cleveland's silent fishing trip as against the brilliant but unsuccessful oratory of Blaine:

"The trouble with a speaking and writing candidate," says the Eagle, "is that he talks too much. Almost anything a candidate says or writes can be used against him, while the candidate who says nothing can be suspected of many things, but convicted of nothing."

The Janesville Gazette (Rep.) adds practical argument to historical precedent:

"A presidential candidate could not reach with the sound of his voice ten per cent of his voters. He can reach them all through the newspapers—speak to 100,000,000 people every day from his front porch and interest more people than both Mr. Cox and Mr. Roosevelt in playing the Bryan ballyhoo to the idly curious."

In this way, says the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Argus-Leader (Rep.), the people will receive much more specific information and again "his utterances are free from rowdy interruptions which so often mar political gatherings in public places."

This reasoning, however, based on the record made in past campaigns, especially McKinley's, the Chicago Daily News (Ind.) considers false, for then "the issues were so sharply drawn that the voter could argue them himself." Stumping is a "more democratic method," too, and "for getting one's candidacy before the people the front porch is not to be compared with the rear-platform." Says the Mobile Register (Dem.):

"Senator Harding . . . has adopted the stay-at-home policy, confining himself to the front porch, which he likens to a 'listening-post' but which has a disadvantage of being at a distance from the firing line. He hears what comes to him and that is all."

It would not "startle" nor displease the Cleveland News (Rep.) if the porch were abandoned by Senator Harding:

"To convince Americans from Passamaquoddy Bay to Puget Sound that he is the proper next President it should be only necessary to let them see how he looks, acts and talks."

The Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch (Ind. Dem.) and the Youngstown Vindicator (Dem.) both feel assured, as the former puts it, that the Republicans cannot afford "to conduct a more or less passive campaign with their candidate sitting quietly on his front porch in Marion, Ohio;" for, says the Vindicator, "facing a spirited battle instead of the easy campaign they had anticipated they are now forced to adopt more vigorous tactics."

The Anaconda Standard (Dem.) also believes that the Republicans will be forced to "come down off the porch" and if Senator Harding "sticks to it, the impression will deepen that prudential considerations deter him from coming into the open and taking his chances with a mixed crowd. The crowd cheers but also heckles."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DO YOU BEGIN YOUR DAYS RIGHT?

"Every day is a fresh beginning Every morn is the world made new."
—Susan Coolidge.

Sometimes we think it is a nuisance that we have to sleep away a third of our lives.

If we only didn't have to go to bed, we could get so much more done, we say.

But after all, even if we were not so constituted as to need sleep for the purpose of renewing our strength of mind and body, wouldn't it be rather dreadful to have the days go on, one after another, with no break, no chance to make, every 24 hours—that blessed "fresh beginning."

The older I grow, the more I am coming to realize the importance of making that fresh beginning a good beginning."

It is told of a certain French count that he had his valet wake ihm every morning by saying, "Remember that you have great things to do today."

Important First Moments.

Of course most of us lack a valet or the opportunity to do great things. But if we could train our minds to wake on a happy key note, if we could teach ourselves to think of the pleasantest things in our lives in those first few waking moments, we could thus affect the flavor of the whole day.

The conduct of the breakfast table too, has a disproportionate influence on the day. Never argue at the breakfast table, never bring up there any domestic problems or any subjects over which unpleasantness is likely to develop, if you can help it.

Avoid a Keynote of Hurry.

Allow time for breakfast. A hurried breakfast means that you begin the day on a keynote of hurry and very likely to continue it on the same note, with the result that you expend more energy and do less than if you were not harassed by a sense of hurry.

The male of the species, who between breakfast and work has an interval often pleasantly occupied with meeting friends who travel on the same trolley or perusing his newspaper, has a great advantage over the female who rises from the breakfast table to confront the morning disorder of the house and all the clamoring details of housework.

I think, when she can do it, the woman will gain in the end by treating herself to a short interval such as her husband enjoys. Especially when for any reason the day has not begun auspiciously, a few minutes' rest with the morning paper or a magazine, or wiht her flowers in the sunshine, will help straighten the day out.

And the Patron Saint of Housewives Go With You.

But of one thing you must beware—and that is not to let this interval be prolonged beyond the few minutes allotted to it. Dawdling in the morning is as fatal as hurry. And don't spend it just sitting at the breakfast table, or in the living room dreading the work that is to be done. That simply means that you do the work twice. Free yourself, in so far as you can, from the whole business, and then go back to it refreshed. Then spend a few minutes more in wise planning and then go at it—and the saint of housewives (if there isn't one, there ought to be) go with you.

The Girl Who Smiled Through

By MARION RUBINGAM

CHAPTER 16.

Alice came flying up the steps of the porch, her cheeks scarlet from running, and her hair half down from her hurried trip.

"I have been having the best time," she cried as she kissed hr mother. "I went over to see Peppito, she is feeling much better, and they had a christening next door and the whole neighborhood turned out for it."

"You're so late," said Mrs. Fairbanks gently. "Better not try to do any work as David is coming you know, and you're to go to Clara's party this evening."

"Think of anyone giving a party for me," sighed Alice, happily. "Never mind, I've plenty of time. Dear me, I wish I'd bought that silk dress— but my blue gingham with the ruffles will have to do. Oh yes, this christening, Mother. I wanted to tell you. They had cake with green icing and Christmas tree balls over it for decoration, and about 10 kinds of cheese, and huge loaves a block long and the baby wore a dress made of a lace curtain, with red ribbons—"

"My dear," Mrs. Fairbanks interrupted, "you must tell me again. Go and shampoo your hair, so it will look soft—did you buy yourself a hair net and a new pair of gloves?"

"Gracious, I forgot. And I'll shampoo my hair tomorrow, it will have to do as it is. I was so excited over the christening and the fun Peppito was having. She liked David, you know, and was so glad I was going to marry him—" Alice hurried out of the room, and presently her voice came to her mother from the garden. She was singing again, a snatch of a church hymn, sung almost in ragtime tempo.

Ten minutes later she came back with her arms full of vegetables and several eggs in her apron.

"Now, this corn had to be pulled tonight, it would have started getting tough tomorrow," she defended herself. "I'm going to cut it off the cob now and cook it while I'm combing my hair. We'll have some for supper and the rest I'll can while it is tender."

Mrs. Fairbanks raised her voice in protest, but gave it up. She walked painfully to the kitchenand herself cut the juicy kernels of corn free of the cobs, heaping them like so many pears on the table, while Alice went hastily about her preparations for dinner.

"I'd much rather have bread and milk," she did say finally. But Alice merely kissed her and went on cooking the meal.

David was to come at 7:30 — for parties in Farmington were early affairs. Alice came out to the porch to meet him, and behind the screen of the climbing roses, he kissed her.

"How wonderful you look in those white flannels and nice new white shoes," Alice commented. "I do like those blue Norfolk coats with white flannel trousers. Gracious, you outshine me."

Her remark was unfortunate, for it made David, unconsciously, look at her more closely. Alice colored a little and laughed.

"I ought to have a new dress for my party, but I haven't," she said. "I expect you think I never wear anything but this old blue one."

"You look sweet no matter what you wear." David said it loyally, and took her hands. He raised first one and then the other to his lips, while Alice felt suddenly almost weak. It was so wonderful to be loved like this.

David perched himself in his favorite place, the porch rail, and held Alice's hands. And that, too, was unfortunate, since he was looking at them while he held them. Alice had spent a morning washing clothes in strong sudsy water—and, as any woman knows, this plays havoc with the hands. Following this, she had spent an afternoon digging in her beloved garden, and her hands, already dried from the soapy water, had taken sunburn and stain that could not be removed except with days of care — which Alice was not likely to give.

Besides this, two finger nails were broken, and all were stained from work; a kitten belonging to Peppito had clawed her, adding raw looking welts to her hands and wrists, and she had cut one finger. Slowly, almost impersonally, David looked at her. She had not had time to press her dress, it was mussed; her hair, hastily done, was not becoming. Her skin looked shiny from a hurried washing with too much soap. Yet in spite of this, Alice was pretty.

But David frowned.

"You know, honey," he said gently, "I don't think they'd care if we were half an hour late. My mother used to use cold cream to make her hands soft—why don't you go upstairs and fix up a little?"

"I have never owned cold cream," Alice said it almost proudly.

"It's nothing to boast of," David was almost angry.

"But, my dear, if you love me really, you wouldn't notice these trifling externals," and Alice put her offending hands behind her.

"I do love you, and that's why I want you to be the prettiest and the best groomed girl there tonight. Grooming doesn't mean expensive dressing. I can't quite tell what you it means."

"It means hours spent fussing over yourself," Alice said it almost spitefully, tears of vexation in her eyes. She was angry and hurt—she did not want to go to her own party. It was not until David kissed her and apologized that she felt better—and even then, a little of the hurt stayed with her.

Tomorrow—Lois.

Among the gratifying results of wearing glasses, the correction of crossed eyes is one of the most apparent and beneficial. When taken in time, a careful examination, together with the proper lenses will have a three-fold result in nearly every case, putting off the correction only adds to the less possibility of their being straightened. BRAKE ON BANK CREDITS HARMLESS SAYS WILLIAMS

(By Associated Press)

WASHINTON, D. C., August 5. — Asserting that while the application by the federal reserve bank of brakes on credit has had a jarring effect "on some nervous systems," Jonn S. Williams, comprtoller of the currency said today that general business conditions afforded abundant reasons for "confidence and encouragement in the future."

Action of the federal reserve banks in depriving non-essentials and luxuries from the use of credit was said by Mr. Williams to have had a beneficial effect. Reports to him show a marked tendency toward liquidation, he said, adding that he believed the credit restrictions were responsible for declines in prices.

"Those inclined to pessimistic views as to our financial situation," Mr. Williams continued, " probably do not know or do not appreciate the immensely significant fact that our federal reserve banks have an unused lending power of $750,000,000.

RIGHT OF NEWSPAPERS UPHELD BY JUDGE.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The press "is the lever that moves the world as no other earthly power could move it" said Supreme Court Justice Fawcett, in Brooklyn today, when he continued the preliminary injunction granted in favor of a Brooklyn newspaper, restraining Mayor Hylan from banning a representative of the paper, with whom he had a difference, from the board of estimates chamber.

"The press should not be hampered while in the lawful pursuits of gathering news, or interfered with while honestly disseminating really important information for its readers," the justice ruled.

U. S. CHAMBER FOR OPEN SHOP IN INDUSTRY

(By Associated Press)

WASHINTON, D. C., August 5. — By an overwhelming referendum vote, made public today, members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States adopted a platform on industrial relations which declares for the right of "open shop" operation of industry and for making labor organizations legally responsible "to others for their conduct and that of their agents."

The members held that strikes in public utilities should be forbidden by law, and that tribunals should be set up with power to fix wages and working conditions for employes of utilities.

The industrial relations platform submitted to the referendum of the constituent bodies of the chambers in twelve sections, upon each of which a separate vote was cast, was drawn up after President Wilson's first industrial conference last fall.

Leading provisions of the platform include declarations that limitation of commodity output by either employe or employer to create an artificial scarcity constitutes an injury to society; that an "adequate means" should be provided for adjustment of industrial relations and disputes; that employer and employe have a mutual interest in the "successful conduct of and full development of their particular industrial establishment," recognition of which and cooperation upon which "constitutes the true basis of sound industrial relations;" that municipal, state or national government employes have the right to be heard as to their occupation, and its requirements, but no right to enter "combination to prevent or impair the operation of government," and that "all men possess the equal right to associate voluntarily for the accomplishment of lawful purposes by lawful means."

Most of the separate platform propositions were accepted by votes of nearly 1700 to two or three against.

How the commission will handle the problem of tickets purchased before the new fares are made operative for use after their effective date is being worked out, it was said.

SMALL BATTLE FOUGHT IN COUNTY LIMERICK.

DUBLIN, Aug. 3.—Details of a fight which assumed the dimensions of a small battle at Bruree, county Limerick, are given in a statement issued today by general headquarters. Fifty armed men ambushed a patrol of military cyclists, an officer and five men. One was seriosuly wounded, but because of the attacking party's fire his comrades could not assist him.

The raiders seized the wounded man's rifle and used his body as cover. This prevented the soldiers from firing effectively and the struggle lasted half an hour before they could drag the wounded man to a cottage. Surrounding the cottage, the raiders poured in a heavy fire. The soldiers' ammunition ran short and one, disguised as a civilian, ran for reinforcements, at the arrival of which the raiders fled. A schoolboy was killed and a man mortally wounded.
