FOURTEEN PERSONS KILLED IN MONDAY BATTLE IN IRELAND

SINN FEINERS CARRY ON BLOODY FIGHTING IN BELFAST CITY

(By Associated Press)

BELFAST, Ireland, Aug. 30.—Rioting was resumed today and is said to be the worst yet recorded. Up to 1 o'clock it was definitely known that fourteen persons had been killed, including one woman. The police finally fired into the crowd with the result that many rioters were hit and are being admitted into the hospitals suffering from bullet wounds.

WEEK-END BATTLE IN BELFAST IS BLOODY

BELFAST, Aug. 30.—Eight men dead is the toll of Saturday night's fighting in Belfast. In addition to the six men killed during the height of the battle, two of the wounded died today.

A feature of the rioting was the extent of the destruction of property by incendiarism. The fire brigade had an especially hard time during the night in fighting the flames. The work was rendered hideous by the constant rattle of machine guns. The Sinn Feiners were in strong force and appeared to be well supplied with arms and ammunition.

Belfast's Saturday night was the worst since what is popularly known as the battle of Kashmir road. Six were killed outright and nearly 40 wounded, many seriously. All the killed were young men, the victims of gunshot wounds.

Three attempts were made Sunday to burn the Independent Labor Party's hall. The building was seriously damaged.

The police charged crowds in the Grumlin road with their batons but order was not restored until troops arrived.

It is reported that an armored car fired on a crowd around a bonfire and that a boy was shot. Two constables are reported sent to hospitals.

In broad daylight, Sinn Feiners entered Ballry castle, county Antrim, barracks and decamped with all arms and ammunition. A well known republican called at the barracks and engaged the garrison sergeant and three constables in conversation, when a motor dashed up and five men, revolvers in hand, leaped out and ran past the party into the barracks. The police were too surprised to offer resistance.

The Sinn Fein notice posted near Newmarket railway station Cork, says that all military found outdoors after 9 p. m., will be severely dealt with.

SEQUIM OIL COMPANY GETS GOING AGAIN

Sometime ago the Sequim Gas & Oil company fell upon hard luck. The tools of the night driller got caught in the hole! They were drilling in hard formation without casing, keeping mud and water going to back up the sand which had been very troublesome, continually sifting into the hole and hampering the driller. A prolonged sucking sound warned the driller that the water had been allowed to get too low and a rush of sand completed his discomfiture by imprisoning his tools.

Everything was tried to yank those tools free. Every known method was tried that could be tried without the expenditure of a large sum of money. All ordinary methods were tried to extricate them unsuccessfully.

One very expensive but very sure method remained—to get a new string of six-inch casing which would run over the tools which have been secured by the fishing set and release them.

But where was the money coming from? It had to be procured from some other source than the footage contracts. This caused considerable delay, involving as it did meetings of the guarantors to decide on the course to pursue.

The course decided upon was for the guarantors to take up at once one million shares of stock which had been placed in the State Bank of Sequim as a bonus to be given the guarantors at one cent per share when oil was brought in, in proportion to their footage contracts, those of them who were unwilling or unable to do so, releasing their call on their proportion so that other stockholders might take it up and in this way give the treasury the $10,000 necessary for the operation.

This has now been accomplished and the money is coming in from those who have taken up their proportion and a letter has gone out to all the stockholders telling them that they have an opportunity to take as much or as little of this one cent stock as they care to for as long as it lasts. It is being taken up very rapidly.

B. F. Taylor, whose contract as fiscal agent for the company has expired and who took stock instead of money for his work, has given back 100,000 shares to be sold to meet this emergency. Jack Woods has done the same. Mr. Taylor remains as secretary treasurer of the company with headquarters in Seattle and is helping to place this stock in Seattle and in any other way he can.

At a meeting of the directors on Saturday last held in Port Angeles for the purpose of striking the name of the president, Herbert Bingham of Vancouver, B. C., off the board of directors owing to the fact that his large holdings in Texas and California demand all his attention and prevent his being able to attend to his interests here C. S. Stakemiller, well known merchant of this city, was chosen as a director and afterwards elected president to take the place left vacant by Mr. Bingham.

Fifteen hundred feet of steel casing will be necessary to free the tools and continue the work. As soon as it arrives work will be resumed in a hurry. All steel orders are away behind in delivery and this delay in filling orders has materially added to the holding up of the well at Sequim.

Major D. M. Mathieson has been employed as manager of the company and has moved to Sequim where it is understood he and Mrs. Mathieson will reside in the future. He is a conservative man, well versed in the affairs of the company and there is no doubt but that he is the right man in the right place. He has abundant faith in the enterprise, which he has demonstrated by a considerable investment.

Geo. F. Harley, member of the fish commission of this state, arrived from Okanogan county Friday night and left for the lakes Saturday morning to consult with H. Maurice Fisher. He was here for one day 30 years ago and was loud in his favorable comment on the progress made by the city. Mr. Harley made favorable comment on the present activities of the civic body in undertaking street improvements at this time, saying that it testified to the best kind of community spirit and real stability of the city.

FIVE MILLION IS AMOUNT OF G. O. P. FUND

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The republican campaign of 1920 will be carried on at a total expenditure of $5,000,000, according to testimony given before the senate committee investigating campaign funds today.

This statement was made by Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican National committee. He denied Governor Cox's statement that the fund amounted to $15,000,000 and had been underwritten by large financial interests.

FORGERY CHARGED AGAINST CANADIAN

(By Associated Press)

PORT TOWNSEND, Aug. 30.—The Burns' detective agency is trying to locate Edgar Ernest Heath, for four months a patient at the marine hospital in this city, who is accused of forging a Canadian government check cashed at a Bremerton bank. The check was drawn on a bank in Montreal, for the sum of $1,700, and Heath informed the bank at the time he presented it for payment that it represented the sum due him from the Canadian government as compensation for service. The officials who are now endeavoring to locate Heath say that the affair has all the earmarks of having been worked by a crook of first-class attainments, and they are of the opinion that Heath is an old hand at the game.

Heath was formerly in the Canadian army. He was given treatment at the marine hospital here for a brain affection, but the physicians in charge of the hospital say that this was not of a character to in anywise impair his sanity or thinking ability. Heath is 47 years of age, about 5 feet, 10 inches in height and of slender build. Ten days ago he left the hospital and the next those at the institution heard about him was when a Burns operator arrived here to take up the trail.

According to the story told, Heath presented his forged check to the Bremerton bank very soon after deserting from the hospital. He left part of the money on deposit and was given a cashier's check for the sum. He then returned to this city and presented the cashier's check to the First National bank here, and in return invested most of the money in A. B. A., or travelers' checks.

COL. HARTLEY OPENS FIGHT FOR GOVERNOR

(Special to Daily Herald)

SEATTLE, Aug. 30.—Fresh from a strenuous swim through the southwest, Col. Roland H. Hartley, candidate for the republican nomination for governor, arrived in Seattle this morning and will open his campaign here tonight in an address before the Ninth Ward Republican club in Fremont.

Speaking of his campaign generally Col. Hartley expressed the opinion that the republicans of the state are alive to the gravity of the present situation, and he said he had no fear of the final outcome, either in the primaries or in the November election. The republicans of the state, he believes, will approve the broad American principles upon which he has waged the campaign. Col. Hartley expressed his appreciation of the reception and respectful hearing accorded him everywhere and said his experience merely confirmed his belief that the American people are fundamentally all right. Col. Hartley and other candidates for the republican nomination for governor will this week enter upon a vigorous campaign in Seattle, the Everett candidate firing the opening gun tonight at Fremont.

BAD CONDITIONS AT MINSK SICKEN DELEGATES

WARSAW, Aug. 30.—A wireless from Minsk says members of the Polish armistice delegation and those who accompanied it are becoming ill because of the unsanitary conditions existing.

Among those who are sick is Maurice Pate, of Denver, member of the American relief administration. The message states that he is seriously ill.

The Russians are endeavoring to drive a wedge to sever the Polish front, according to an official statement. Violent fighting is reported north of Belzec, north of Lemberg, where the sopiet cavalry of Gen. Budenny is trying a new encircling movement against the city. An advanced soviet detachment has reached Tyszowiec. In the region of Bobrika, the Poles have repulsed repeated attacks intended as a drive against Lemberg. The Poles counter attacked at Sarniki, and smashed several soviet squadrons.

Further south Gen. Pawlenko's Ukrainian army has forced the Dniester river in an outflanking movement and is moving northward. There is weak contact with the enemy along the entire northern front from Graieve to Wlodowa on the Bug river.

THE IDEAL CITY COUNCIL.

It is not the form of city government that needs changing, but some of the councilmen composing the existing government body. Opportunity for accomplishing this is near at hand. Of course, many citizens will declare sadly that no good men can be induced to be candidates for the council. That is not true; neither is it true that men engaged in the retail business here, most of whom are very fully occupied with their own affairs, are the logical candidates for the city council. There is no one class of the citizenship that is especially entitled to run the city. The ideal council would be composed of representatives of all sections of the community—real representatives instead of ward politicians—and men of at least ordinary intelligence and ability.

In point of fact the Herald would as willingly support a first class housekeeper as a first class clothes-dealer for the job of councilman. Any woman who knows how to run her home will show up very well in the business of running the city. We are not at all sure that the housewives as a class are not entitled to such representation, if any class is entitled to it.

Some of the recent "games" of the Hallahan clique would have enjoyed short shift in the council chamber, if one or two of the councilmen had been honest-to-goodness housekeepers who knew how to wield a broom.

COMMISSION FORM AGITATION.

It is always a good plan, before going any further into consideration of any public movement, to inquire into its origin and the people responsible for it. When some time ago a petition for imposing the commission form of government on Port Angeles, with three highly paid official "dictators," in the place of the existing American form of government, the Herald inquired as to the originators of the movement and discovered, right at the bottom of the thing, those notable citizens, E. E. Nichols and E. K. McMichael.

Most of us know Mr. Nichols' political alignment and knowing it fight shy of any move in which he may indulge for the salvation of the public. Mr. McMichael suffers from a condition which may be termed chronic disgruntlement with everything that is. He wants it all changed. That is his privilege, but the probability is that if Mr. McMichael got his commission form of government, within a very short time he would be around declaring that the commissioners were crooked and the city, once again, was en route to the demnition bow-wows.

So far as the sponsors of the movement are concerned, therefore, we think it may be passed up without any great public loss.

DECISION WORRY

One of the favorite anti-worry axioms is that it doesn't do any good to worry about things because if they're past you can't change them anyway, and if they are future they may never happen.

A letter-friend objects to this cheerful state of mind.

The Worst of All Worries

"I've heard a lot of this 'don't worry because the hardest things to bear are the things that never come' talk," she says, "and I agree with it to a certain extent. But I don't think that does away with all worry. The worst kind of worries to me are the uncertainties whether I'm doing the right thing right now. Take illness, for instance. When the baby had pneumonia, I'd sit there wondering if I'd covered her up warm enough and not too warm. If she wasn't warm enough she'd catch more cold, and if she was too warm more cold that way. I'd put a blanket over her and then I'd worry for fear it was too much. I think that's the worst kind of worry, don't you, and I don't know any way to avoid it."

I can certainly agree that that kind of worry is the worst in two senses—the hardest on the nerves and the hardest to get rid of.

But as to agreeing that it cannot be avoided, that's another matter.

No Big Success Without Conquering It

It can be avoided, and I don't believe any man ever made a big success in business, or any woman a big success in her home life, without conquering it to large extent.

I suppose another name for this variety of worry might be decision-worry, for that is just what it is—an inability to make a decision and stick to it without nagging oneself about it.

The habit of making decisions easily is one of the most valuable habits in the world to cultivate. By easily I do not mean hurriedly nor thoughtlessly, but calmly, carefully, thoroughly and finally. Consider all the factors carefully, make your decision and then mentally walk away from it. If the factors in the case alter materially, of course that is reason for altering your decision, but otherwise do not rehearse or rehash.

Why It Was a Strain

I know a woman who was wearing herself out taking care of a semi-invalid mother. The doctor did not see why it should be such a strain and inquired into her methods. He found that the amateur nurse would wake up in the night and lie awake sometimes an hour wondering whether it would be better to stay away from the patient for fear of waking her, or to go into her room and give her some medicine. He told the nurse that she would unquestionably break down unless she could cure this habit, and that she must make up her mind at once what to do and stick to it.

Slowly but surely she managed to acquire this habit and lived to bless the doctor, since the conquest of the decision—worry in this one direction led to similar conquests in other directions. That is one of the wonderful things about all exercises in mind control—each victory makes the next easier. We gain the strength of the temptation we resist."

The Girl Who Smiled Through

By MARION RUBINGAM

SOME NEWS

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Alice Fairbanks has always won her way through life by her optimism. Her sunny nature has buoyed her up in the face of such circumstances as her father's death, her mother's invalidism, her need of money, her necessity for working hard. She has gone through all discouragements with a smile or hope. When she meets, falls in love with, becomes engaged to David Thorne, her cup of happiness is full of overflowing.

She sacrifices her trousseau to send for an orphaned cousin, Lois Kennedy. Lois gradually wins away David. Alice, fearing his love is weakening, frees him from the engagement. Lois becomes engaged to him, and leaves for the city.

Chapter 37

The saddest part—at least, the most pathetic part— of any great tragedy is, that things must go on as they did before and to the world in general it must appear as though nothing had happened.

Any woman who has experienced a great sorrow will tell you this. Her first-born child may lie dead in the room above, but she must go on into the kitchen, and decide whether there shall be fried or boiled potatoes for supper, and whether last night's roast shall be made into hash or stew! And if she is rich, which is not always a blessing, she has not even this diversion to take her mind, for a brief instant, from her trouble.

Alice came to bless her work, after a time. But the first few days she had an intense desire to get away from everything, in the vague hope that she could get away from herself.

"Won't you go away?" Mrs. Fairbanks said. Her gentle, impractical mind did not consider how it was to be done—she merely saw that Alice was restless, that there were circles under her clear gray-blue eyes, that she looked tired and ill.

"Oh how can I?" Alice answered, half irritably.

"I'm such a burden, when I should be a help! I'm no use to you at all, my dear." Mrs. Fairbanks did not say it in the voice which the sympathy-hunting woman uses. She stated it as a simple, sad fact.

Alice roused herself at once, and going over to her mother put her arms around her.

"Don't talk so, mother darling. What would I ever do without you? Now that I haven't David, I only have you. What would I do without your love and your sympathy?"

It was the nearest Alice had ever come to a sentimental remark. Deeply as they loved each other, there was little demonstrative affection between them. During the earlier and the worst part of her illness, Alice had waited on the little invalid as though she had been a baby. She had bathed her and combed her hair, sometimes had almost lifted her from the bed to a chair when the muscles were sore from lying down. But except for the perfunctory good morning and good evening kiss, and the conventional words of endearment, there was little demonstration of love.

"Besides," Alice said, her unconscious optimism coming out in her as she hunted about for the most cheerful aspect of the case, "you're so much better now than you were a few months ago. Do you remember how helpless you were even two years ago? Do you know that you are dressing yourself, all but combing your hair, every day now? I used to have to do all that."

"Yes, I am thankful of that," Mrs. Fairbanks said. "But I wish I could be of practical help to you."

Alice sat looking thoughtfully across the room.

"He hasn't gone yet," she remarked after a time.

There was no need to say who—David was always present in her heart.

"Do you mean you think he'll be tired of Lois, and won't go to the city after all?" Her mother asked it eagerly.

"Yes, I suppose I mean that," Alice responded. Then she began to talk about it, quite calmly, and rather impersonally. It was never any use to hide her real feelings from her mother; they had lived too intimately for that. And Mrs. Fairbanks had the invalid's supersensitiveness; she could guess the things Alice withheld from her.

"It's like this," Alice explained. "David is wrapped up heart and soul in the project of this Model Farm. You see they're already beginning to teach the theory of new and efficient farming to students, mostly young farmers who can be spared from their home in the slack season, the winter. David is doing some of that too. He can't leave, he won't. And Lois, much as she wants him, won't come down to the farm to live. I know her too well for that."

"I know. She could never be happy away from the city and the people and the lights and excitement,'" Mrs. Fairbanks nodded.

"David couldn't leave until spring, anyway, and by that time, perhaps his infatuation, if it is that, will be over. Perhaps Lois will have found someone else in town. She attracts them all, she's so pretty. If he really loves her, of course, the engagement will stand, and he will go to her. But I can't believe, somehow, that he can love her as much as that."

She sat for a moment, thinking, her face less sad than it had been for days. Then she picked up the little local paper. It had come an hour ago and was lying, unopened, on the table.

She unfolded it, glancing indifferently down the column of personals on the front page. A name caught her eye in one paragraph. She read "One of the faculty of the newly opened Model Farm has recently resigned and left for New York. Mr. David Thorne, well known in our social set, took the 2:15 train this afternoon. He said he did not plan on coming back."

Alice gave a little gasp—a sound of utter hopelessness.

AMERICA'S VOICE IN THE POLISH CRISIS

The American note on relations between Russia and Poland was received with favorable comment from the greater part of the American press, although not a few newspapers, notably those of republican inclinations, deplore what they consider further "meddling in European affairs.'"

The attitude of the United States, as defined in a note signed by Secretary Colby to the Italian ambassador is condensed by the Birmingham Age-Herald (Dem.) as follows: "Maintenance of the territorial integrity and political independence of Poland; opposition to the dismemberment of Russia; no recognition of the soviet government." The Seattle Post-Intelligencer (Ind. Rep.) expresses doubt as to the practical benefit of the note, but says that it "speaks for the nation," and adds emphatically, "No message more clear, unequivocal and to the point, none more thoroughly representative of American sentiment, has been sent abroad." The Chicago Daily News (Ind.) feels that the American attitude is "consistent, firm and reasonable," the Baltimore Sun (Ind. Dem.) calls the note "honest and straightforward," and the Brooklyn Eagle (Ind. Dem.) finds satisfaction in the promulgation of "a positive Russian policy."

The Providence Tribune (Ind.Dem.) observes that the policy "is at last clear and readily intelligible," while the New York World (Dem.) looks forward to the possibility that the American attitude will form the foundation for a "consistent Russian policy" by the allies. Practically all newspapers unite in giving their approval to the denunciation of the soviet government, which, the note declared, had been founded on brutal force, and was not representative of the Russian people. There is also unanimity of opinion on the expression of friendship for the Russian people.

The New York Tribune (Rep.) is one of a group of Republican newspapers, which feels that the American note establishes another period of "watchful waiting," similar to the policy maintained toward Mexico, and that it does not clear away the practical difficulties of dealing with the Russian situation. The Tribune observes, however, that "from the practical point of view" the note will "satisfy the country," and free the United States "from direct complicity in the bolshevist crime against civilization."

Commenting on the note's pledge to use "all available means" to insure the existence of a free and independent Poland, the Boston Transcript (Ind. Rep.) thinks the communication "has neglected to specify what the administration implies in the use of the words 'all available means!'" The Lafayette Journal Courier (Ind. Rep.) charges that "the Wilsonian theory of self determination is reiterated only to be later contradicted" through the refusal to recognize the independence of parts of Russia which have split off from the bolshevik administration. Another paper, the Daily Oklahoman (Dem.) feels that, although the Polish note is an "admirably written state paper," so far as "defeating bolshevism and resurrecting Poland are concerned, it is about as much good as trying to empty the ocean with a quart cup." Of what value, asks the paper, "is it to express sympathy for Poland and to register affection for the real Russian people, if that moral support cannot be transformed into aggressive deed?" This publication argues that the lack of force is caused by the failure of the United States to enter the league of nations. Other democratic newspapers suggest that if the United States had entered the league the Polish note would carry greater weight.

The Rocky Mountain News (Ind.) says that "if it were possible for the national administration under the league of nations to take an active part in the Polish-Russian crisis, and lay down the law and back it up, if necessary, with the economic and military strength of the nation, the message would receive serious consideration at Moscow."

CAPTIN COOKE FEES FINE NOW

"A few bottles of Tanlac made me feel just like a new man," said Capt. F. M. Cooke, 144 East Winifred St., St. Paul, Minn., for fifteen years a conductor on the Great Northern railroad and one of the most popular men of the system.

"For years," continued Capt. Cooke, "I had stomach trouble so bad that what little I did manage to eat would cause me to become terrible nauseated. Gas pressed up against my heart so I could hardly breathe, and I had terrific headaches that would last two or three weeks and nearly drive me wild. I would become so dizzy at times that I had to hold to something to keep from falling, and my nerves got in such shape I could sleep but very little. Every morning I felt dull and heavy and all run down.

"Nothing I tried did me any good, and I kept getting worse until a friend suggested that I try Tanlac. I followed his advice and to make a long story short, I never felt better in my life than I do now. I eat everything they set before me and nothing disagrees with me. Every symptom of all my troubles has left me completely and I feel ten years younger. Tanlac has certainly won my gratitude."

Tanlac is sold in Port Angeles by Owl Drug Co.; in Dungeness by Wm A. Monson; in Sequim by F. D. Babcock; in Blyn by W. B. Main: in Morse by W. F. Taylor, and in Forks by Geo W. Groffman, in Neah Bay by W. W. Washburn & Son, and in Carlsborg by W. E. Stevens.

Have Pains?

Aches and pains seem to be the lot of the ordinary mortal. However, these should be taken simply as nature's warning signals that some part of the human machine is out of order. It is a mistake to resign one's self to physical torture when the cause can be removed.

tone up weak, inactive, sluggish kidneys and help rid the blood of poisonness waste matter that causes aches and pains in arms and legs, backache, rheumatic pains, sore muscles, stiff or swollen joints.

One bottle of Foley Kidney Pills completely relieved me. The pains left my back. I recommend Foley Kidney Pills to my friends."
