NEW BARKHOFF GRADE FAVORED

Geo. H. Skinner Wants City to Give Him Rights to Certain Valuable Streets Near Brewery.

Little work in connection with the grading of the streets of the city was taken up at Tuesday's council meeting for the reason that hearing on some of the streets is set for later dates and the necessary data was not at hand to intelligently take up the o'hers. The feature of the evening's work was possibly the reading of an application for a ferry slip railway franchise on Cedar and Third streets.

The committee appointed to see the county commissioners relative to the opening of 8th street, reported that the commissioners had agreed to advance $736 on this work, this amount being 15 per cent of the amount collected on the road and bridge fund within the city limits, and to which the city is legally entitled.

The city attorney recommended the adoption of the new Barkhoff grade on Front , First and Second, from Francis to Cedar and upon motion of Fisher the city engineer was directed to draft the necessary preliminary profiles that Mr. Barkhoff might fix the definite lines and grades on these streets.

The city attorney reported that the city had the power to condemn a right-of-way for Third street through the Sampson Donation Claim. Mr. Elliott moved that the attorney be directed to draft ordinance preliminary to opening said street. Carried.

The committee named to confer with Mr. Morse relative to damages in case of another change of grade, reported no progress, except that Mr. Morse expects to hold the city for any damages which may accrue by reason of the change.

A petition was read from a number of light consumers asking that the lights be turned on earlier, but finds that they will either have to be turned off earlier in morning if started earlier in the evening or that additional help would have to be secured. Moved by Dustman, seconded Rogers that the request of petitioners be granted.

Request of the Erickson Construction Company for permit to blast out stumps within city limits was granted upon usual safeguards being complied with.

L. G. McBurney was given permit to store gasoline in Martin building on City Dock.

Mr. Dustman also brought to attention of council the request of H. C. Miller for survey of road to connect with new cemetery road, petitioner agreeing to do all the work. He moved that the engineer be directed to ascertain probable cost of such work. Carried.

Bill of Engineer Barkhoff, $55.50 for special services, was, with other bills, read and referred to committee for approval.

Mr. Dustman stated that A. L. Johnson has the contract furnishing several hundred cords of brush for the Earles breakwater at the head of the bay and desired permission to leave loaded wagons of brush to the side of Front street at the foot of the hill when occasion warranted same. Permission was granted, provided said wagons are left so as not to obstruct the street and are not left indefinitely. Mr. Elliott promised to watch.

E. P. Fisher had complained to Mr. Dustman that the contractors had blocked Tumwater valley so that the tenant in the Crosier place, for which he is agent, had threatened to move unless same could be opened to traffic. Engineer stated that he thought roadway could be easily made available and matter was referred to engineer to take up with contractors.

Mr. Rogers brought up question of repairing sidewalk at foot of Tumwater hill. Street superintendent stated that there was no use fixing same as long as parties were allowed to throw timbers on same and smash all improvements. This brought up old question as to maintaining walk across private property. Myers advanced that getting the walks established up Tumwater street, where city will have control over them. Referred to superintendent.

H. D. Bishop, who has been acting marshal since the resignation of Policeman Sullivan, was named by the mayor for the permanent city marshal and his appointment was con-

FITZ HENRY SURVEYOR-GENERAL

Prominent Clallam County Democrat Slated to Succeed E.P. Kingsbury.

The Seattle Times of Tuesday announces that E. A. FitzHenry of Port Angeles, has been slated for the receivership. That James E. Dailey, of Olympia, who was a candidate for the position, has been notified that FitzHenry to be named surveyor-general for this state to succeed E. P. Kingsbury, whose term expired early in the year. Mr. FitzHenry's Port Angeles friends will be pleased to learn of his good fortune. He has been a faithful adherant of the democratic faith and is entitled to some of the crumbs that fall from the master's table. The office is worth $4,000 a year.

Mr. FitzHenry, who arrived home Wednesday, informs the Olympic-Leader that he is in receipt of a letter and also a telegram from Washington assuring him of the appointment, which will shortly be sent to the senate.

We understand that the duties of the office require that Mr. FitzHenry shall reside in Olympia. This will mean that Port Angeles is to lose one of its best and most popular families, which all our people will regret. Mr. FitzHenry, however, says that his family will remain here during the present year at least.

COMMERCIAL CLUB IN NEW QUARTERS

Meetings Will Be Held Every Wednesday Hereafter. Mayor Mead Will Have Desk.

The Commercial Club has moved into its new quarters over the Potlatch Billiard Room on Front street, opposite the post office.

The room has been newly papered and painted; the furniture has been installed and everything is now in readiness for the transaction of business.

The hall presents an attractive appearance, and will be open at all times. Secretary Pearce will be pleased to furnish any information of public interest to all who may ask it and will be unsparing in his efforts to promote the welfare of the city through his medium.

Regular meetings will be held on each Wednesday night at eight o'clock and it is hoped that all members of the Club and the public in general will attend. Much benefit to the town will come from these meetings. Matters of public concern will be taken up and discussed and ways and means devised for the city's material development.

Mayor Mead will nave his office in the Commercial Club room, where he will transact pertaining to his office.

ANGELES ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO.

Howard Fisher, who returned from Neah Bay last week, announces his intention of engaging in the electrical supply business. The new firm to be located on Oak, south of Chester Baker's, will be known as the Angeles Electric Supply Co., Herman Fisher being the other member of the firm. Howard says they will carry a large stock of fixtures, do wiring, and a general electrical business.

THE LAST WEEK

The County Treasurer wishes to notify all taxpayers that taxes become delinquent on the 1st of June and that those who wish to take advantage of the half payments should see him before next Saturday, preferably as early in the week as possible.

Judge Ralston will arrive Wednesday next to hear a number of cases, including the condemnation suits against F. A. Jensen and Jas. Sanford. The time for the completion of the transfer on the sale of the Brewery has been extended from the 20th to the 28th, provided an additional payment of $10,000 was made before the 20th.

INTER-COUNTY TRACK MEET

MacKechnie High Point Winner, Leading in Broad and High Jumps; Some Runner Too.

Of the inter-county school athletic meet held at Port Townsend Saturday, the Leader says that McKechnie, a husky Angeles lad, was high point winner of the meet, although Esterbrook of Townsend was only one point behind. MacKechnie annexed 22 of his team's total, while Esterbrook scored 21. MacKechnie starred in the field events, with Esterbrook high liner in the sprints. The latter was last in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and 220 hurdles, second in the 50-yard dash and second in the broad jump. MacKechnie won the broad and high jumps and discus throw, was second in the shot put and 440-yard dash and third in the 220-yard hurdles. The meet was a great success from every standpoint except, perhaps, that of attendance. There was a good sprinkling of out-of-town people in the crowd, who attended the meet to enthuse the youngsters from their home communities. The winners of the different events were as follows:

CLASS A.

100-yard dash—Won by Easterbrook; Ewing of Sequim second; Starrett of Townsend third. Time, 10 3-5.

1-mile run—Won by Hosner of Townsend; Bork, Angeles, second. 6 min., 4½ sec.

220-yard hurdles—Won by Esterbrook; Starrett second; MacKechnie third. 30 1-5 sec.

50-yard dash — Won by Davis of Angeles; Easterbrook second; Ewing of Sequim third. Time 6 1-5.

220-yard dash — Won by Esterbrook; O'Brien of Sequim second; Kirner of Sequim third. 24 1-5.

110-yard hurdle — Won by Starrett; Hosner second; 18 1-5.

440-yard dash — Won by Davis; MacKechnie second; Shibles of Irondale third. Time 58.

Half-mile run—Won by Hosner; Lockhart second; Nelson of Angeles third. 2:29 3-5.

FIELD EVENTS

High jump—Won by MacKechnie; O'Brien of Sequim second; Kirner third. 5 feet, 1 inch.

Shot put— Won by Moore; MacKechnie second; Seavey third. 34 feet, 11 inches.

Pole vault—Won by Brown of Sequim; O'Brien second; Hill third. 8 feet, 2 inches.

Discus throw—Won by MacKechnie; Moore second; Seavey third. 75 feet, 5 inches.

Running broad jump—Won by MacKechnie; Easterbrook second; Fitzgerald third. 19 feet.

Half-mile relay race—Won by Townsend; time 1:46 3-5.

BE PATRIOTIC AND GET BUSY

Mayor Requests Every Citizen to See that Yards and Alleys Are Put in Apple-pie Order.

In anticipation of the large number of homeseekers, investors and tourists who will visit Port Angeles in the next few months, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Commercial Club, in conjunction with Mayor Mead and the City Council have agreed on Saturday, May 31st, as Clean-up Day for Port Angeles.

Get patriotic and get busy. Clean up all the trash in and around your residence and lots and help to make Port Angeles a place of beauty. Refuse in boxes and cans will be removed by the city's wagons.

The railroad has placed Port Angeles on the map for tourists and if you want to attract others here, build up the city, increase realty prices and sell your holdings, or part of them, CLEAN UP !

Remember, Saturday, May 31st, is CLEAN-UP DAY.

The new brick yard at White creek bridge is about complete and work will shortly be commenced on the lrst kiln of brick. A water flume has been run to the place from a spring further up the road and a large tank built.

Messrs. Critchfield and Cotter have begun work on their contract for the building of a bridge and road connecting the Lee and Morse creek roads.

NEW PLANT NOT NECESSARY

100 Kilowatt Generator Will Give Sufficient Light for Present Without Overloading.

A happy solution of the light question in Port Angeles seems to have been made during the week. The committee to whom was referred the matter of purchasing the plant offered by Gray and Barrish to tide the city over the next six months had about concluded to report adversely to the purchase of second hand machinery, (and doubtless will so do) when Engineer Jas. Gibson came to the rescue with the declaration that all that is the matter at the plant at this time is the smallness of the generator, which is a 60-kilowatt machine. Mr. Gibson tells the committee now that if a 100-kilowatt generator is put in at a cost of probably $500 we can have considerable more light without carrying a 25 per cent overload during the early evening. According to Mr. Gibson and the committee the present engine is capable of operating a generator of this size, also the boiler, which fact strikes a happy cord in the minds of those who have been tussleing with this problem for some weeks past. Then if the city finds it preferable to change from a wood to an oil burner, it is thought that considerable cost and labor can be saved in this way, giving the city practically 60 per cent more light at about the same cost as at present and this at an expense of not to exceed $100. or nothing, as the additional revenues of the light would pay for the change and give the city additional street light to boot without cost. The city would, too, have an emergency plant on hand in the event that power is finally had from the power company and is at any time needed.

The solution seems so rosy that one is inclined to think there must be some string to it.

UNUSUAL ACTIVITY AT FORTS

Townsend Leader Prints War Scare Story of Artillerymen Getting Ready for Japs.

"Since Governor Johnson of California announced to the authorities at the national capital that he intended signing the anti-alien bill passed by the legislature of that state, considerable activity has been displayed at the three forts in this vicinity," says the Townsend Leader. "The unusual activity which followed immediately the signing of the bill, which is objectionable to Japan, is significant, and indicates that the United States is losing no time in making such preparations as it can on short notice for any emergency which might arise in case the action taken by California should cause a break in the friendly relations existing between the United States and Japan.

"Japan has been carrying a chip on its shoulder ever since the Russian war, which established their reputation as a fighting nation. Many of the most astute statesmen believe that war between the United States and Japan is bound to come some day for the reason that Japan feels that she needs some of the territory now under the American flag to provide for her increasing population.

"While no intimation has been given out at the forts in the Puget Sound district that they are being placed on a war footing, it is known that within the past few days the artillerymen have been busy loading every shell in the ammunition vaults. This is the first time such conditions have prevailed since the forts have been manned."

H. W. Starrett, manager of the Sunset Boat and Engine Works, left Seattle yesterday for Sol Duc with an eighty-horse power standard engine for installation in Michael Earles' new Lake Cresent excursion boat. The new excursion boat, which was launched last week, has accommodations for 120 passengers and is one of the finest craft of her type in this section of the country. Lee & Brinton, local architecs, were designers of the new craft.—Seattle Times.

SATURDAY, MAY THE 31ST

Man Whose Premises Haven't Been Cleaned Up by 31st Will Be Slated as a Lazy Citizen.

The chairmen of the various districts for Cleaning-up Day met at the library room Thursday afternoon and planned out their work. It is hoped everyone in the districts will respond to the call for assistance and help make their district the neatest and cleanest in town. If you don't care to attend the picnic dinner yourself, make something good for the youngsters who are working and help to enourage them. Keep in mind the thistles and get everyone dug out of your district. Now is the time before they grow larger and begin to scatter the seed to make a bigger crop for next year. Start in now; getting your old cans and bottles picked up and as many as can are requested to put them into gunny sacks so they can be easily loaded onto the wagons.

These are the districts and chairmen thereof:

Tumwater—Mrs. Cochran.

Pine Hill—Mrs. Johnson.

West of Valley to East of Oak.

From First to south of Fourth—Mrs. T. T. Aldwell.

From Fourth to south of Ninth—Mrs. T. F. Trumbull.

PLAY PLEASED EVERYONE

Little Entertainment Given by Ladies of St. Andrew's Guild Staged Very Satisfactorily.

Not for a good many blue moons—and green ones too, for that matter—has any amateur play been staged and launched so successfully as "Thank Goodness the Table is Spread," which was offered the public last Tuesday night at the Parish Hall. From the moment it began to the very last word that was spoken, the play ran on in a most professional style, and frequent were the ripples of laughter that were heard throughout the hall at the humor of the playlet.

Too much credit can be given to none of the players, for it is no little task to make preparations for an affair of this kind.

As Marjorie Weeks so markedly showed her ability in the O'Donnell benefit that was given here recently, so was it displayed last Tuesday evening as the wife of Howard Campbell, (but not in real life of course), and Campbell made a very good hubby. Talbot portrayed the part of the father of Miss Weeks, while Miss Mathieu, her mother, acted cleverly.

The mention of Miss Delabarre and Leo Marymont—devoted maid and butler—must not be overlooked, for they deserve credit along with the rest.

After the performance a solo was rendered by Mrs. Troy, and the floor was cleared for dancing. Jensen's Orchestra was engaged and the music was up to the standard, of course.

The ladies of St. Andrews Guild realized well on the little entertainment.

DISAPPEARED FROM HOME

Angeles Citizen, Unable to Sleep, Leaves House for a Walk and Does Not Return.

F. W. Amos left his home Tuesday morning about two o'clock to take a walk, not being able to sleep, and has not been heard from since. Mrs. Amos fears he has wandered off into the country and lost his way. Mr. Amos, who is about 65 years of age, came here with Mrs. Amos from Victoria several months ago and took up their residence in the Lou Smith home at Fifth and Peabody. He has purchased considerable realty here and has been dabbling in real estate since his arrival. Both being pleased with Port Angeles, Mr. Amos has nearly completed at 8th and Cherry streets a neat bungalow to which the family expected shortly to remove. Several weeks ago Mr. Amos was noticed to be acting rather queerly, and it is supposed in one of these moods he has wandered off.

Mr. Amos is described as being of heavy build, 5 ft. 9 in. in height, gray-blue eyes, quite bald, with iron-gray hair and whiskers, closely cropped, tatto mark on left arm; wore light colored undervest and drawers, flannelette striped nightshirt, khaki pants, grayish striped tweed coat, dark wool knit socks, tan slippers, blue-gray tweed cap.

A PLAYGROUND ASSOCIATION

Temporary Organization Effected and $80 Pledged to Get Work Started Next Month.

The Brotherhood of the Congregational church held its last meeting before vacation Monday night. About forty of the members were present. Rev. Rice and Rev. Erkins, pastors of the Episcopalian and Catholic churches, Miss Watson, Miss Burroughs, Mr. Failor and Davis were present as guests of the club.

Dinner was served by the following ladies of "The Aid," Mesdames Stoval, Hanson, Isbell, Wright, Cochran and Miss McClure, assisted by Misses Gilmore, Tillman, Hoare, Knoff and others. With such a committee the expected happened, which was one of the best dinners yet provided for the Brother hood.

Mr. Beall, director of the play grounds of Victoria, was the speaker of the evening. His address was thoughtful, clear and full of suggestions. He made such a good impression upon his audience that they started in at once to raise funds to secure some one to direct the play and sports of the children and young people during the summer vacation. It took less than ten minutes to raise eighty dollars to start the enterprise.

After the Brotherhood had adjourned a temporary organization of a play ground association was effected.

The new organization is to meet at the Auditorium of the High School in two weeks to effect a permanent organization. This, in the minds of some, is one of the most important moves that has yet been made in the city.

EARLES IS INDIGNANT.

Game Warden Pike on Thursday of last week placed Michael Earles under arrest for allowing the wash from his mil at the Sol Duc Hot Springs to flow into the Solduck river, carrying some sawdust and refuse into the river. He was brought before Prosecutor Cochran and it was should be called into the case. The decided that the fish commissioner commissioners agreed to come at an early date.

Earles holds that he would be the last one to do anything detrimental to fish of any description in the Solduck river and is therefore somewhat indignant over the arrest.

Decoration Day exercises at the high school auditorium next Friday afternoon.

It is rumored that the I. W. W.'s attempted to organize in this city last Sunday.

We take a good deal of pride in our educational system, our common schools, etc., yet in some respects, Germany is far ahead of us. Over there they have what is known as the continuation school system, which takes a boy at the age of fourteen or fifteen, as soon as he finishes the elementary school, and prepares him for some particular branch of trade or business. The work of the vocational schools is shown in the industrial efficiency and social progress of German consuls in the principal cities of the German Empire. In Madgebury, the boys are assisted in getting situations by the school authorities, but while they are at work they have to attend the continuation schools. There are classes for almost everything, such as bakers, butchers, barbers, waiters, painters, decorators, blacksmiths, printers and so on through to the end. Every boy has to choose which line of work he wants to take up and having once decided is obliged to make himself proficient. In most of the cities the employers are compelled to excuse their employes for the lesson hours, without loss of pay. The employers also pay the tuition fees, which are very low.

What a vast difference it would make to some of the boys in this land of ours if some such system were adopted by our public schools.

The Ilwaco Tribune took occasion to make a temperate criticism of the character of the Saturday night dances being held in that town and intimated that they could be improved upon. Immediately a reader raises the old cry that the editor is knocking his town. Some people have a strange idea of what the province of a newspaper is. When some evil is utterly defenseless it is an old trick to call the editor a knocker. The Tribune, like every local paper, is full of boosts of its own town and no newspaper is worthy of the name which don't have the courage to call attention to evils which can be corrected. Your best friend is not the man who flatters you, but the one who mixes with his praise some honest, frank criticism. The same rule applies to a newspaper. It isn't knocking but is boosting in the best sense to urge the correction of local abuses.—South Bend Journal.

MEMORIAL DAY ANNOUNCEMENT

Exercises Will Be Held in H. S. Auditorium, Sunday, 25th, and Friday, 30th.

The G. A. R. and W. R. C. have secured the High School Auditorium for Memorial exercises this year, both Memorial Sunday, May 25th and Memorial Day, May 30th.

The Sunday service will be held in the Auditorium at 2:30 p. m., sermon by Rev. M. B. Phillips, of the First M. E. church. It is hoped that all the churches with their pastors and all citizens will attend and take part in this service.

Memorial Day exercises, Friday, May 30th, will be held in the Auditorium at 2:30 p. m. and all fraternal orders, city officers and citizens generally are most cordially invited. We especially invite the teachers to attend and bring as many of their pupils as possible, as for several pupils as possible, as for several years last past, but few of them have come to us, now we are going to them. The Memorial address will be delivered by Rev. C. E. Fulmer. The G. A. R., W. R. C., and as many others as desire to do so, will form parade at Grand Army Hall, corner of Lincoln and Fifth streets and march to the Auditorium.

THE PRESIDENT'S REASONS.

Here are the reasons President Wilson gave why wool should be free of duty:

Because it goes onto the back of every man, woman and child, rich and poor.

Because it is now arbitrarily and unreasonably protected to the extent of 60 per cent.

Because it has been a protection nurtured industry for years and yet has not kept pace with foreign competition and inroads.

Because the wool growing industry is rapidly declining. The president said the production had steadily and rapidly been decreasing despite its high protection.

Because the wool industry in a few years will be practically extinct or of little relative importance due to the breaking up of western grazing ranges and the general decline in the industry.

Here are the reasons President Wilson gave why sugar should be on the free list:

Because it goes into the stomach of every man, woman and child.

Because, nurtured with high tariffs as an infant industry it is, or should be able to face any foreign competition.

Because, primarily, it is a necessity of life—not a luxury.

CROPS FOR LOGGED-OFF LANDS.

State College, Pullman, Wash.

Crops that are best to grow in the early stages of development in handling the logged-off lands of Western Washington should accomplish the double purpose of bringing some revenue, and of building up the soil. The soil of practically all the logged-off lands of Western Washington very badly needs to be built up in fertility. One of the best crops for this purpose is red clover. It seems to do well at the outset; will furnish the best of feed for dairy stock and will build up the soil faster than will any other crop that can be seeded. Red clover may be seeded in the spring on well prepared land, preferably without a nurse crop; or, it may be seeded in September with rye, being cut the following spring for hay, or green feed, coming early enough to permit the clover to make a good growth.

Of the single season crops, Canada field peas or common vetches both do very well and will furnish good feed for cattle and will build up the land at the same time, though these crops do not fill the soil with roots as abundantly as does red clover. Field peas should be seeded in the spring as early as possible on well prepared land, sowing at the rate of about two bushels of peas per acre. Where a grain drill can be used, it is preferable to sow the peas with the drill, seeding three or four inches deep.

Of the salable crops, potatoes seem to do very well for a first crop. Garden beans do only fairly well. Cabbages do fairly well. Most of the other crops ordinarily grown do very poorly the first year after breaking up the soil. Berries, including strawberries, raspberries and loganberries all seem to do well on logged-off lands, but I believe time is gained by giving the soil a year or two of good tillage and the proper crop treatment before setting out the more permanent crops. To get the best results from the land, I believe it desirable to maintain a dairy, both for the sake of utilizing the green feed that will be produced and for the manure that is much needed on the soil.

Proceedings of Board of Clallam County Commissioners

Monday, May 12, 1913, at 9:00 a. m.

The Board met pursuant to adjournment, all members being present.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The Board decided to reinsure the County Poor Farm buildings only to the amount of $4150.00, they being previously insured in the sum of $8000.00.

At 2:30 o'clock p. m., the Board proceeded to open bids as called for first opening the bids on the Forks-Quillayute Road:

J. R. Smith's bid—$5170.00 for clearing, grubbing and grading and unit prices as follows: Graveling, 64 cents per yard; 12-inch culvert, $1.25 per foot; 18-inch culvert, $1.50 per foot and 24-inch culvert, $1.90 per foot.

Nels Nelson's bid—$5760.00 for clearing, grubbing and grading; gravelling, 69 cents per yd.; 12-inch culvert, $1.30 per foot; 18-inch culvert, $1.50 per foot; 18-inch culvert, vert, $1.50 per foot; 24-inch culvert, $2.10 per foot.

Theo. H. Klahn and Louis Hahn's bid—$8000:00 for clearing, grubbing and grading; gravelling, 97 cents per yard, 12-inch culvert, $1.50 per foot, 18-inch culvert, $1.60 per foot and 24-inch culvert, $2.00 per foot.

The Board considering the bid of J. R. Smith the lowest and best bid received, awarded him the contract.

Bids on the Burnt Mountain Road were then opened and found to be all upon unit system, and were figured by the County Engineer as follows:

Nels Nelson's bid, $24,056.04.
Wm. Martell's bid, $24,807.20.
Govan & Co.'s bid, $27,500.00.
Peter Olson's bid, $32,725.25.

The bid of Nels Nelson being considered the lowest and best, the Board awarded them the contract.

Bids on the Lee's Creek Improvement were then opened and being on the unit system were figured by the engineer as follows:

Critchfield & Cotton's bid, $4356.-40.
P. J. Woods' bid, $4382.86.
Young & Denio's bid, $7659.96.

The bid of Critchfield & Cotton's being considered the lowest and best, the board awarded them the contract.

Bids on the Elwha Bridge were then opened and found as follows:

R. E. Mieth's bid—$20,990.00, extra concrete in end and center piers, $10.00 and $15.00 per yard, respectivey.

ELK STILL TO BE SEEN ALONG OLYMPIC TRAIL

H. B. Herrick was in from the Elwha Saturday, able to limp around a little with the aid of a cane, having sprained an ankle about two months ago. Mr. Herrick says that he has been quite busy lately, delivering wire along the trail to the Olympic Hot Springs. The government Forest Service, under the direction of Chris. Morganroth, is extending a telephone line from Ennis creek around this side of the base of Mt. Angeles to the Elwha and on to the hot springs. The forest service line is also being extended up the Elwha river from the Humes' place to Elkhorn, a total distance of about thirty miles from Angeles. Mr. Herrick reports that he runs across a band of Elk on almost every trip to the hot springs. A little later in the season the Elk will go higher up in the mountains and will be seldom seen on the trail to the springs.

FAIRVIEW.

The motion picture show given by Mr. Deeringer, of Sequim, was enjoyed by all who were able to see it.

Miss Marie Broughton was a guest at the Chamber's home last Saturday.

Mr. Henry Reiz and brother, Adam, visited at the O. Winters' home on Sunday. Henry Reiz is just from Mexico and can tell some very interesting things.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Jackson and Miss Bertie Stilwell of Blue Mountain and Willie Wooding of De Fuca came down and helped Charlie Cary celebrate his birthday Sunday.

Mrs. Harbaugh an daughter, Emma, went out to the S. & P. Mill this week to visit with Mrs. McCumber.

Mr. Land killed a pig last week that weighed three hundred and seventy-nine (379) pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerber of the Elwha country were guests at the Sutter home from Saturday until Sunday.

F. Hebisen went over to Blue Mountain one day last week.

The piece of red clover that lies near the road on the Page farm shows what can be grown on the upland in this country. It is certainly a fine piece and has the rich dark green color that good clover ought to have.

BACCAULAUREATE SERVICES.

Union Baccaulaureate services in honor of the high school graduating class will be held at the high school Auditorium, Sunday, June 1, at 8 p. m. Rev. Phillips of the Methodist church has been invited to deliver the address. The puplic is cordially invited to attend.

PEOPLE ABOUT TOWN

Lewis Cays spent Saturday in the city.

Chas. Snecal of Port Crescent was a business visitor Saturday.

The Olympic-Leader does the best job printing. Give us a trial.

While Angeles is recuperating from measles, Dungeness is being scourged with mumps.

The Delabarre family went out to the lakes Saturday, returning the middle of the week.

Clean-up day will be a good time to get the children interested in digging up thistle plants.

Mrs. Cook, of Seattle, arrived today to visit her sisters, Mrs. H. M. Fisher and Mrs. Frank Fisher and Mrs. Davis.

Miss Alice Coleman and Miss Hazel Hooker, who are teaching near Dungeness, came in Friday to attend the Senior Ball.

We are closing out our line of Brass Goods at half price. Come in and see for yourself. Schaible & Hutchinson, Jewelers.

Mrs. T. F. Trumbull spent the week and at the Gierin ranch near Sequim. She brought home quantities of beautiful rhododendrons, which they gathered on the road to Port Townsend.

Mrs. I. W. Hall went to Port Townsend Tuesday to spend a few days with her mother, Mrs. Mary Trumbull. She will visit in Seattle also before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lotzgesell drove down in their auto Sunday from Dungeness and attended morning services at the Methodist church and Memorial services at the school house in the afternoon.

John Kinshella and Louis Chappelle were convicted of drunkedness in the justice court Friday and Kinshella was given 30 days and Chappelle 10. They were sent to the poor farm to work the time out, the court refusing to accept a fine.

Word has been received by friends and relatives here to the effect that Mrs. Josephine Harlow has been discharged from the Western Washington Asylum at Steilacoom as fully recovered. This will be good news to the young lady's many friends here.

The Senior Ball, as usual, was the society event of the school year. It was given Friday evening in the new I. O. O. F. hall, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Excellent music was furnished by the band and a splendid crowd was in attendance.

Deputy Sheriff Garfield Davis was called to Sequim Friday to look up the default of a young resident of that section who in an hour of foolishness cashed checks to the amount of $1,000 and skipped to Alaska. He will undoubtedly be apprehended sooner or later.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dickinson spent part of last week in Dungeness. On Saturday Mrs. Dickinson returned to Port Angeles to make preparations to take Mr. Dickinson to the mountains for some weeks, so he has been very ill for several months.

Miss Gertrude Hickok entertained about fifty young people Tuesday evening at Haning hall to celebrate her sixteenth birthday anniversary The company consisted mostly of the members of her Sunday school class and of her grade at school and each and every one spent a most delightful evening.

Mr. Burkhart has nearly completed a three-room summer cottage on his place on Lake Crescent. The cottage is located on the point, this side of Mrs. Littleton's. near the fine grove of cedar trees—a most beautiful spot. The cottage will be modern in all its appointments. Mr. Burkhart plans on building a modern home on the place later in the season, when the cottage will be used for servants' quarters.

A long needed improvement to the court room at the county court house was had this week, when the room was completely renovated with paint, paper and varnish. And at a cost of but $30. We need a new court house. This need not be taken to mean that we need any $200,000 structure. A building like the high school would be serviceable for fifty years and a business palace for most of that time. Under the new law it is legal for the city and county to build together. Why not?

At a meeting of citizens at Keeler & Mortland's office Wednesday evening it was decided to commence action relative to the forming of a logged-off land improvement district, comprising the whole of Clallam county. A committee will confer with citizens of Port Angeles and other parts of the county and arrange for placing before the people a petition calling for an election on the matter. Those present were enthusiastic over the project, considering it a winning proposition from all standpoints, with everything to gain and nothing to lose. The matter was clearly set forth in J. M. Grant's letter in last issue of the Press and met with such approval as to warrant taking immediate action for organization.—Sequim Press.

Keep Your Eye on Francis Street

The grading of Francis Street to be immediately completed to the waterfront, also the large brick hotel at Third and Francis street will be open to the public by August 1st. All streets to be graded between Francis and Ennis street and the Boulevard and the Waterfront, making a mileage of at least 12 to 15 miles. Other improvements announced later.

THE DOINGS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

MT. PLEASANT

Mrs. Emile Dietsch returned home from Angeles last Friday.

Mrs. Draper and daughter Nellie returned home Sunday. Nellie has improved in health a great deal in the past week.

Mrs. Roy McClinton and children of Seattle arrived Monday at the home of Oscar Lee for a few days' visit.

Miss Sophia Benson arrived Saturday to take charge of the household affairs at the home of Mr. Fredericks during Mrs. Fredericks' convalescence.

Miss Sadie Dietsh came home Tuesday to enjoy a visit before returning to take up her duties at the Home Bakery.

Mrs. L. T. Haynes, accompanied by her grandsons, visited at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. McLaughlin, last Thursday.

We understand Mr. Lester has sold his mill to parties from Victoria, who will take charge the 1st of June.

DE FUCA

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Critchfield, with their little son, and their daughter Mrs. Meredith with her husband and two children, visited with the Woodings Sunday.

Irene Peterson of Dungeness spent part of her vacation with Mrs. J. A. Reeve, of "The Breakers."

Mr. Burgess and his family came out in their auto to visit Mr. Agnew Sunday and also to look at the crops.

A party from here took in the moving picture show and dance in the Fairview school house Saturday evening. The pictures were fine, especially the slide which illustrated a fireplace with the words written on it "There will be no fire in this fireplace tonight." Anyone who does not understand this, please ask Clarence.

Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald, Lillie Burgess and Tom Sarsfield drove down to Blyn on Sunday to get a few rhododendrons.

Mr. MacDonald has finished a very successful hatching season. The big incubator will now take a rest until next February.

There will be a dance in the DeFuca school house Saturday night, May 31st. We always have good times at these dances. Ladies are requested to please bring refreshments.

Lillie Burgess of Angeles is a guest of the Woodings.

Quileute Indians Play First Game of Baseball in 1913.

The Quileute Indian baseball club played its first game of base ball this year at their play grounds, situated about one-half mile from the village. The opposing nine, composed of the Indian Day School, were on a war path, as was evidenced by the number of runs they made. Ernest Abi, once the wonder of wilderness baseball, was on the mound for the school team, while Guy Hobucket, his own cousin, placed himself on the receiving end. The score was 13 to 7 in favor of the school team.

After the game, as it has always been the custom of the players, they all took a ride in a boat to cross the slough and when they were about half way across, the boat began to sink. The nine who rode the boat were the defeated tossers and sinking with the boat added to their misfortunes of the day. This happened on the 23rd day of May.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS.

The school children, and presumably the teachers, are delighted to think that vacation is so near at hand.

Mesdames McKee, Hickok and Cloukie of the Pine Hill Literary Club ladies, crossed the Tumwater bridge Wednesday morning, where Mrs. L. C. Fleming and Mrs. D. Fleming, Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Hall met them and accompanied them back to the Pine Hill side.

Mrs. Solf invites the public to meet with the Ladies Aid at her residence next Wednesday.

The Filion mill men presented Roy LaFlower and wife with a beautiful set of silverware and table linen.

Everybody come to the I. O. O. F. hall, Saturday night to the benefit given for Mrs. Walby, who has been unable to work for several months, and thus assist a worthy and long-time resident of Port Angeles.

Mrs. Martin Doyle was down town Tuesday; the first since her return from the hospital.

Mrs. Geo. Ristine expects to go to Seattle this week to visit her sister.

Mr. Morgan, who is visiting here from California, has gone to the Sol Duc Springs to take treatment for rheumatism.

Miss Jennie McCloud's school closed last Friday and her friends are pleased to have her home again.

O. D. Burgman came home from Neah Bay Thursday to visit a few days.

BLYN.

Mr. Fernandus of Pysht, a brother of Mrs. Jas. Zeman came down in his launch last week. A very pleasant surprise to relatives here.

Mr. McClain was called to California by the death of his wife's mother.

Mrs. Lonsbury, who is with her mother, Mrs. Ed Severn, is able to be up again, after quite a severe illness.

It is said that the Palo Alta mill starts up next week.

The Sunday school is in a flourishing condition. More would attend if the hour of convening was a little earlier. The camp cook is inexorable—he, who is not there at meal time, goes hungry.

Wednesday, May 21, about fifteen of Miss Mabel Delaney's lady friends surprised (?) her with a linen shower. Some little bird carried the news to Mabel and she had the house very prettily decorated with the state flower and pink ribbons. The design extending from the ceiling, ended in a center piece upon the table, where a dainty luncheon was served. In the center piece, the rhododendrons clustered about a large red heart.

They had a jolly time; one lady remarking that she had never crowded so much laughter into such a short space of time.

May Miss Mabel's married life pass as merrily.

Friday the delivery team of the Bugge Mercantile Co., soliciting orders at Blyn, ran away, ditching the boys and breaking thingsup generally. The horses were caught at Johnson's creek, one down, tangled in the harness, the other dragging him. The boys were met farther along, walking, but somewhat dazed.

The Erickson house is under way.

The Hamiltons, three families from Port Williams, took advantage of the beautiful weather and came to Blyn for an outing. They expected to surprise Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Ray Hamilton's mother, and take her to the picnic grounds for dinner. The telephone told this time.

Autos went flying thru here galore last Sunday and came back decked as for a flower parade.

Mr. Severn took a load to Seqium Saturday evening and one to Townsend Sunday.

Ralph Craig was kept busy by joyriders Sunday.

Mr. Philip Gedelman and family returned from Seattle Wednesday, where he has been detained on business for some time.

Vol Mitchell was handing out cigars Sunday—So the rumored wedding must have taken place. Vol has chosen well. May their future be a happy one, is the wish of their friends.

DUNGENESS.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Pettitt and Mrs. M. B. Cassidy returned Friday morning from Seattle.

Mrs. Amanda Peterson and Mrs. Mel Horne were passengers from Port Townsend Friday morning.

Mr. Cook has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wansborough.

Mr. Edwin Pettit returned Saturday morning from Seattle.

The school picnic was held this year at Ward's bridge. All report a good time.

Mr. E. N. Feroe returned Saturday afternoon to his home in Seattle.

Mrs. T. Clark is a visitor at Mrs. W. K. Clark's in Port Angeles for a few days.

The Ladies Club gave an entertainment and dance Saturday evening, which was well attended and a good sum was realized.

Miss Ruth Borst of Sequim was a visitor at Clark's the last of the week, returning home Monday.

Mr. R. H. Lundgren went to Port Angeles Monday morning.

The Jolly Entertainers stopped here Monday morning on their way to play in Sequim in the evening.

A crowd went to Sequim Monday evening to take in the entertainment.

Mrs. Wm. Monson is on the sick list.

Mrs. J. Wilder, Mrs. Peterson and daughter, Irene, Mrs. J. Hall and daughter, Henrietta, went overland Sunday to Port Townsend.

Mr. Hiller, who has been visiting Mr. C. F. Seal, left Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. James Dicks sister, Mrs. Morrison, came Sunday morning.

FOR OUR DEAD—MAY 30.

I.
Flowers for our dead!
The delicate wild roses faintly red,
The valley lily bells as purely white
As shines their honor in the vernal light,
All blooms that be
As fragrant as their fadeless memory,
By tender hands entwined and garlanded,
Flowers for our dead!

II.
Praise for our dead!
For those that followed and for those that led,
Whether they felt death's burning accolade
When brothers drew the fratricidal blade
Or closed undaunted eyes
Beneath the Cuban or Philippine skies,
While waves our brave bright banner overhead
Praise for our dead!

III.
Love for our dead!
O hearts that droop and mourn, be comforted!
The darksome path through the abyss of pain,
The final hour of travail not in vain,
For Freedom's morning smile
Broadens across the seas from isle to isle.
By reverent lips let this fond word be said—
Love for our dead!

F. A. MacDonald of the Fernwood Poultry Farm was an Angeles visitor Wednesday. Mr. MacDonald is well pleased with the result of his efforts the past hatching season, and says that it pays to advertise. He claims that he "picked up over $200 that he did not look for" as a result of advertising young chicks for sale in the three county papers. He sold just 1988 young chicks. Six thousand one hundred chicks were hatched during the season. Of this number, Mr. MacDonald has over twenty-five hundred still on hand—quite a respectable brood. The capacity of his incubators is 3,000 eggs. This sounds large, but Mr. MacDonald contemplates enlarging them before another season.

HE HAS IT!

Mr. FitzHenry received a wire yesterday notifying him of his appointment as surveyor general.

HIS RISE TO POWER

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER,
Author of
"The Man Higher Up"

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Honey Pot.

JOHN DUNMEADE had thought that anticipation would rob defeat of its sting. Not until the event, until Benton county, his own neighbors, had repudiated him could he measure the hurt. There was one thing which he would do—deep down within him was the unworded resolve that it should be his valedictory.

"There's something," he told Haig, a week after the primaries, "that has been haunting me."

And he told the other what Sheehan had said concerning the bank.

"Well, what business is it of yours? You aren't the guardian of the public morals. Even if you want to be, the people have just clearly declared that they don't. Keep out of what isn't your affairs."

"But I'm still district attorney."

"All right. If anything happens or any one makes official information before the end of your term, prosecute."

"But I understand my duty to include uncovering crime as well as prosecuting what others expose. I'll ask Blake to let me go over the books."

"He won't let you, of course. There'd be a crash."

"I think he will," said John thoughtfully, "if nothing is wrong. Especially when he understands that, if he doesn't, I'll subpoena him with the books before the grand jury. If there's nothing wrong, there will be no crash. But I have friends who have money and stock in the bank. And if our political bank history is repeating itself they and the public have the right to know it."

"John," Haig argued earnestly, "don't you do it. Haven't you had enough? What's the use of making more trouble and enemies for yourself?"

"I know," John said patiently. "I've gone over all that. This is my last crusade. But it goes through. Because, if there's anything amiss, now is the time for it to come out, while it can help Jerry Brent."

"Great Scott! Have you still faith in the people? Don't you know what they'll do, if you uncover anything? Just sniff daintily around and then walk off to vote for Sherrod or Jenkins or whoever the gangs nominate. I think it very possible that things aren't straight at the bank. But I like you and I like Warren Blake—he's a good friend of yours, too—and I don't want to see him in trouble. Besides," he grinned, "none of my money is deposited in the bank."

"Is that all you have to offer for the defense? If it is—are you coming along to help me or not?"

"I suppose," Haig grumbled, "I'll have to. You need a guardian angel."

So it happened that at a critical time in the fortunes of the bank and its officers John and Haig set out on their mission. They chose an hour early in the evening, after supper. They tried the bank first. It would be closed, but within, as all New Chelsea knew, Warren Blake was apt to be found faithfully at the work that never seemed to end.

The dark green window shades had been closely pulled down, but a glimmering around the edges showed that a light was burning within. Blake might have been expecting them, so promptly was the door thrown open when they rapped. Surprise, however, was depicted on his face when he beheld the visitors.

"Good evening, gentlemen. Can I do something for you?"

"We'd like to have a little talk with you, Warren," said John. "It concerns the bank."

"The bank?"

Suddenly Warren by some strange intuition knew, as he had known that the market would sag, what this untimely visit portended. He felt the blood leave his face and rush to his heart. His hands and feet became icy cold. He stared stupidly at the visitors, as though his faculties were benumbed.

"I—I'm pretty busy tonight," he said. "Can't you put it off until Monday?"

"I think we'd better talk it over now, Warren," John answered.

The sense of shock seemed to pass away. The cashier threw the door wider open to admit them. "Come in," he said quietly. They entered, and he closed and locked the door behind them. Then he straightened up, all composure, to face them.

"I'll have to ask you to be brief. I'm preparing some papers for Senator Murchell and Mr. Hampden, and they'll be here soon."

"I'll come right to the point," John answered. "Warren, I want to see the books of the bank. I've heard that you are carrying a good deal of worthless political paper and that the bank is in danger. I want to verify or disprove that."

"That's absurd. The bank is perfectly safe. And, of course, we can't let you see the books. You aren't even a stockholder and have no interest in them."

"Warren," said Haig hastily, putting his hand on the cashier's shoulder, "I beg you to do as he asks. We're here in a wholly friendly way. And, of course, the bank is sound. You can rely on Dunmeade and me to do absolutely nothing, in that case, to harm it."

Warren shook his head. "You ought to know that it is out of the question."

"Then," said John regretfully, "I'll have to subpoena you to appear with the books before the grand jury on Monday." He drew forth two documents, one of which he gave to Blake.

"I suggest that you wait and explain your errand to Murchell and Hampden. They will be here soon. Just take chairs in the cage. While we're waiting I'll finish my work," said Blake.

He ushered them into the cage, found chairs, offered cigars and, politely excusing himself, retired into the cashier's office and settled himself at the desk. For a few minutes he worked, with a speed that was not nervous haste, transcribing figures from the book before him and adding up columns. Then he wrote a few lines and carefully blotted them.

This done, he seemed to have come to the end of his work. But he did not return to John and Haig. He seemed to have lost consciousness of their proximity. The pen fell from his fingers. His folded hands rested passively on the desk. He sat motionless, staring straight ahead into nothingness. Under the gaslight his face showed very white. A heavy, uncanny silence descended upon the three men.

There came a rap at the door.

As though he had been waiting for just that, Warren rose, went to the door and admitted the new visitors. They were Hampden and Murchell. Hampden was the first to notice the presence of John and Haig.

"What are they doing here?" he demanded suspiciously.

"Come back into the office and we'll explain," Warren answered. "You come, too," he nodded to the men within the cage.

The five men gathered in the little office. No one sat down or offered to shake hands. Warren broke the silence calmly.

"Dunmeade wants to examine the books."

"Well, he can't do it," Hampden said quickly.

"So I told him," Warren continued. "And he followed the request up by serving me with a subpoena to appear with the books before the grand jury."

"Why are you doing this?" Murchell demanded of John.

"Because I have information that the bank is carrying worthless political paper and is rotten. I have it from one who has helped manipulate such paper—from one, in fact, whose notes, supposed to be uncollectable, the bank is now trying to collect."

"And on general suspicion you would take an action that might ruin the soundest bank in the country?"

"Not on general suspicion," John returned. "But on absolute knowledge. There!" He pointed to Blake's face.

"And there!" Haig's dry, shrill voice was like the crack of a whip as he aimed a long, lean forefinger at Hampden. The latter recoiled as from a blow.

Murchell did not look at Blake or Hampden. From under wrinkled brows his eyes were boring deep into John's, seeking to test the strength of the latter's determination. He saw only one way out; boldly he took it.

"You can see the books. Now?"

"We may as well begin now. It will take some time, I suppose."

Hampden, vainly trying to regain an appearance of composure, tremblingly sat down. For a minute Warren said nothing. When he did speak it was in a low, lifeless voice.

"I can save you the trouble. The statement I have been preparing for Senator Murchell contains what you want, I think. This is it." He pointed to the papers lying on his desk.

Slowly, mechanically, as one walking in sleep, he gathered up the books on the desk and carried them from the office to the vault. John saw Warren put the books in their places, then fumble around in a corner of the shelf. Warren seemed to feel his presence, for, hand still resting on the shelf, he turned to face John. Then the hand, grasping a black, shining thing, leaped from the shelf to his head. John's cry and the shot rang out together.

For an instant the body swayed, then crumpled in a heap on the floor.

Four stunned men, held in a horrible fascination, knelt by the ghastly thing, dumbly watching the struggle of that which is called life to free itself from its prison of flesh. Of these men, three of them, each in anguish, was calling himself murderer.

For nearly an hour—an eternity—shaken to the very center of their beings, they kept the death watch. There was a shiver that passed over the whole body—then stillness.

Haig was the first to recover himself. He caught John by the arm and drew him away. "Come back here." He drew John into the office and forced him to sit down. "And you two, come."

Murchell seemed to come out of his daze. He touched Hampden, who followed him docilely and fell into a chair.

"I seem to be the only one with a trace of sanity left. And I," said Haig grimly, mopping his brow with a shaking hand, "I am pretty far gone. God, I didn't know it could be so awful! But we've got to decide whether we'll let this—how and why it happened—come out. By some miracle nobody seems to have heard. If the luck holds we may be able to keep it quiet." He looked at Murchell.

But a great change seemed to have come over the politician during the racking hour. His face was ashen; he looked old as he never had before. All the firm self reliance, the habit of domination, justified through so many crises, seemed to have broken down in the presence of sudden, violent death. He shook his head in a hopeless negative.

"There's no use trying," he said wearily, "if you go ahead with this investigation." He turned to John. "It's for you to decide. If this is kept quiet and you don't go on I can save the bank—maybe. But if you do go on there'll be a great scandal and I can do nothing. And—you've got to understand the situation—you'll have to prosecute Hampden here."

John did not answer. He was staring at the face of Warren Blake.

Haig mopped his forehead again. "Let's get out of here," he muttered nervously. "If I stay much longer with—that—I'll be a gibbering idiot."

He took the dead cashier's keys from the desk, turned out the light and went to the door. The others followed.

They forgot to close the vault. But it was well guarded.

New Chelsea had been long asleep, the streets emptied, when Haig and Murchell, accompanied by the doctor and undertaker—stockholders in the bank and frightened into secrecy—drove a roundabout course by side streets and alleys to the rear door of the bank. Like thieves, they entered and carried what lay there out to the carriage. Then they drove away, praying that no untimely passerby had chanced to observe them.

But the luck held.

Later still, with another picture—a little, faded old woman become in an instant a foolishly smiling child—burnt into their memories, Haig and Murchell emerged from the home of Warren Blake. Haig stopped, looking up.

"I wonder what John Dunmeade is going through just now? I can see the end. The good have no luck. There's a curse on the man responsible for this night. Old man, do you say amen? You and I will have to discuss the matter of payment."

Through a night that seemed endless a man fought a battle old as sin itself. He had sought the solitude of the fields in a blind, vain wish to escape the issue and the thing that filled his eyes. He had come so near to greatness. And now, at an hour when he seemed most to need stimulus and support, he was brought face to face with the temptation to desert. It was one thing in a moment of disheartenment to cry, as he had cried to himself, "I have come to the end." It was far different when opportunity had come to revive a sinking cause to stay his hand. He knew he had but to reach out to disclose, not an Excalibur rising out of the waters to lend invincibility to him who would wield it, but a new prod for a calloused people, one fact the more to add to the knowledge, whose cumulative power in the end would—must—carry the people forward, upward.

It was Hampden, Katherine and John Dunmeade against the people.

And what did he owe the people, the calloused fools whose knowledge, if not complete, was yet full enough to show them whither they were going and whither they must turn, but who trudged contentedly on, indifferent to all but the present profit, thinking only of self, repudiating and sneering at those who offered honest service and counsel? The balance was all against them and in his favor. Let some one else now take up the task to which John Dunmeade had been unequal!

He saw Stephen Hampden cowering, a suddenly broken, fear palsied man, before the death agony, looking with a kind of wistfulness on the dying man's face, as though in Warren Blake's example he saw a way out of the tangle. A troop of miserable, pitiable figures marched before him—Slayton, Brown, Parsons, Sheehan, Blake—men whom he had punished, whose lives he had shattered or taken in his crusade—to what end? Their places had been taken by other men of like kind, the world no better, no wiser, so far as he could see. Behind the troop marched a regiment of men and women, his neighbors, whose little savings would be lost, did the bank fail through his disclosures, but might be preserved if Murchell's promise to intervene was kept. Was there not more virtue in mercy than in punishment?

For long, in the fear of the man who knows himself weakening, he refused to face the crucial fact. But he had to come to it—to her—at last. He saw her as he had last seen her, the rose in bloom, a strong woman refined and softened by some heart process of which he knew nothing. If he went forward he must cloud the splendor and beauty of her womanhood with disgrace and suffering. He revolted against the thought—why must she, innocent, and at his hand, be made to suffer the penalty that others had earned? Could he strike the blow? It made no difference that she had flouted him for unworthy things. As once before nothing that she could say had added to the temptation that lay in her very existence, so now nothing that she had done could take from the fact of his love. For it lived. He could find through the years in unceasing work an anodyne to deaden the ache, but on this Mount Olivet it lived again, a throbbing passion that submerged all things else. He had not the strength of God, he told himself. He could not be so merciless to her, to himself.

He fled homeward in the waning light and prayed feverishly for daylight.

By his window, as once he had watched a dawn of promise, he saw it come, but without promise. At last, the battle ended, too tired to seek his bed, he fell asleep in the chair.

ing the cost of the Lincoln street sewer system at $61,633. This is only approximate as the final grades south of Eighth street are not now available. The matter was referred to the street committee and engineer pending the securing of the necessary profiles by the engineer.

The city engineer was directed to expend $100 in securing additional profiles of the territory south of Eighth and between Valley and Eunice.

Petition from Commercial Club in executive session asking that new alternate grades be adopted was read.

Engineer Filion submitted an additional estimate for payment of the Eighth street bridge contractors in the sum of $5332.90, which was allowed. This gives the contractors to date something over two-thirds of their contract.

Resolution No. 6, for the improvement of Third street to the Sampson Donation Claim, was taken up for hearing. There being no objections thereto the city attorney was directed, upon motion of Fisher, to bring in ordinance directing that the work be done. The engineer's estimate of the cost of this improvement is $15,000, and the assessed valuation of the district included is $29,550.

Proposals for finishing the work on Francis street were opened. There were two bids. Johnson & Leonard for 45 cents per yard and $400 for other work, total $7051.45 and U. G. Critchfield, total of $7,840.50.

The engineer reported that there was a discrepancy in the estimate of the work which would reduce the bids 3000 yards, thus bringing the payment within the original contract, with some unpaid bills to be later provided for by the bonding house, after all facts are known.

Myers wanted all bids rejected as too high. Elliott, upon suggestion of clerk, moved that consideration be laid over for one week; carried.

But one bid, that of the Olympic-Leader, to do the city printing was submitted. Fifty cents per inch per insertion for all work paid by city. Printing at Commercial rates. Accepted.

The clerk reported that it was impossible for the clerk and engineer to get ready to report on resolution No. 5 and two weeks further time was granted. This is for the improvement of the 19 streets in the east end of the city and comprises a voluminous amount of work.

Johnson & Leonard were granted permission to plow south side of Front street for skidway in hauling brush, provided they put street in as good or better shape when through.

Bond of City Marshal Harry Bishop was approved.

Barkhoff bill for 13 1-2 days at $25 per day was held up and brought out considerable discussion. Upon motion of Myers, went over for one week.

MICHAEL SULLIVAN

Michael Sullivan passed away early Saturday morning, after a short illness from pneumonia. Mr. Sullivan was born in Ireland, moved to Amerira in 1884, settling in New York City. He came west in 1904, locating in Butte, Montana. In 1907 he came to Port Angeles, where he has since made his home. Mr. Sullivan was a good citizen and a true friend. He was appointed city marshal a few months ago, but resigned when compelled to give up its duties on account of sickness. He was a member of the Catholic church and of the local order of Moose. He leaves a wife and two boys, aged 13 and 14 years, to morn the loss of a kind husband and indulgent father. The body was taken to Butte, Mont. for interment.

TRAGIC DEATH OF W. S. McLAUGHLIN

Believed to Have Been Warming Dynamite in Kitchen when the Stuff Exploded.

The announcement of the tragic death of Mr. W. S. McLaughlin last Friday afternoon came as a sudden shock to all of his friends. Mr. McLaughlin has been putting in a crop on his ranch near Morse creek this spring, and had been staying on the place for the past ten days. It is supposed that he was "thawing out" some dynamite in the kitchen stove, preparatory to blasting stumps, when an explosion occurred, blowing out two sides and the roof off the kitchen lean-to to the house. Mr. McLaughlin's lifeless body was found about thirty feet distant. Neighbors, hearing the explosion, hurried to the scene, but life was extinct when they arrived. R. D. McLaughlin says he is sure his father crawled to the place where he was found after the accident and was not blown out of the building by the explosion. In substantiation of this theory Ray found clots of blood on the wood in the shed and on the ground leading to where the body of his father lay. Mr. McLaughlin was alone at the time and the mystery surrounding the immediate cause of the dreadful accident will never be known. His right leg was broken and he sustained a terrible wound in his left side, a piece of stone penetrating almost to his lungs.

Mr. McLaughlin was sixty-six years of age. He was born in New Brunswick; resided in the states of Maine and California, and came to Angeles in April, 1887, where he has since made his home. He pre-empted the place where he met his death, having received a patent from the government.

Mr. McLaughlin was a quiet, unassuming man of the strictest integrity, honored and respected by all who knew him. He leaves an aged wife and four children to mourn his death: R. D. McLaughlin and Mrs. J. M. Gillispie of this city; Mrs. R. C. Warner of Twin Rivers, this county, and Mrs. Geo. R. Bright of Riffle, Wash.

SCHOOL ART EXHIBIT.

Eighth Grade Pupils Made and Exhibited Their Own Graduating Dresses.

The art exhibit at Central school Friday afternoon and evening was very gratifying to the many visitors who inspected the work. The rooms were all made more attractive by many bouquets of bright, sweet-smelling flowers, while the walls were covered with the drawings, paintings and other work of the pupils. Almost every grade has one or more pupils showing some real talent as an artist. Some kind of sewing or embroidery work was exhibited even in the primary grades and the work of these mere babes is truly surprising. Miss Watson's eighth grade girl graduates have all made their own graduating dresses this year, under her supervision, and had them on exhibition Friday. Miss Watson is surely worthy of much praise for the infinite pains and trouble she has taken with her pupils and their exhibit was a testimonial to her efficiency and ability as a teacher. Particularly worthy of mention was the exhibit from Miss Maud Wilson's grades on Lincoln Heights. Some exceptionally fine drawings were exhibited, a number of them were views from the school room windows and this included some very fine drawings of Judge Cochran's residence. They had very nice needle work also, some of which had been done by boys. This year has been rather a difficult one for both teachers and pupils on account of moving into the new building and the sickness and enforced vacation this spring; so all things considered, the exhibit was a very creditable one indeed. But next year we will look for bigger things, with the increased facilities the new building affords for manual training and domestic science.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

"I Am Not Afraid of the Gospel of Christ," will be the subject at the Congregational church Sunday morning, June 1. The church will be closed Sunday night to take part in the Baccalureate service at the Auditorium of the high school. The closing of the Sunday school on account of measles will necessitate the postponing of Children's Day for one or two weeks.

$100 REWARD.

Mrs. Amos offers a reward of one hundred dollars for the return of her husband in any condition whatever.

PLAY GROUND ASSOCIATION

Meeting Will Be Held Monday Evening, June 2, 8 o'clock, High School Auditorium.

There will be a meeting of the Port Angeles Play Ground Association at the high school Auditorium on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

The purpose of the meeting will be to adopt a constitution and bylaws, elect officers and determine on a definite policy for the summer months. While the initial steps were taken following a meeting of the Brotherhood two weeks ago, only a time of meeting to consider a constitution and a committee to get the necessary information were decided upon.

The Play Ground Association of North America, is an indenominational movement. Public spirited citizens, both ladies and gentlemen of all denominations and of no denomination, are welcome. This is an effort to provide some equipment for a centrally located playground and to secure supervision of the boys and girls at play. The movement is in the right direction. Good, clean sport and physical exercise are essential to future good citizenship.

Come and show your interest in this important undertaking.

JAS. SANFORD ALLOWED $1650.

Expert Witnesses Valued Sequim Land at From $200 to $320 Per Acre.

The case of the Seattle, Port Angeles & Lake Crescent Railway vs. Jas. Sanford, et als, was heard before the court Wednesday, a large number of witnesses being examined on both sides. The lands in question comprised 35 acres, one and one-half miles west of the center of Sequim, near the Dungeness river, of which the railroad takes 7.60 acres on south line, 100 feet in width, 3300 feet in length. The railroad's witnesses, Messrs J. A. Adams, P. S. Govan, R. F. Taylor and J. J. Backer, found the cleared land taken of value of $200 per acre and the wild land $50 per acre, with probable damages to improved 5 acres of about $50, totaling value of land taken at $900 for cleared land, and something over $200 for uncleared 3 acres and damages.

For the respondents, C. L. Haggard, Chas. McDougall, F. W. Mandau, W. N. Echt, C. F. Seal and B. W. Helmer, fixed value of cleared land at $300 to $320 per acre, the other lands at $50 to $100 per acre. Damages for the whole taken were estimated by witnesses at from $2000 to $4000 and that growing crops, of oats, potatoes and clover on 4 acres are destroyed.

Opening argument was made by J. W. Lindsay, followed by A. W. Buddress for respondents; and C. S. Shank closed for petitioner. The case being submitted, the court found for the respondents in the sum of $1650.

COMMERCIAL CLUB IN NEW QUARTERS

The Commercial Club held its first regular meeting in the new quarters in the second story of the McChesney building in front of the post office Wednesday evening. A good attendance was present and all expressed themselves as highly pleased with the new hall, which has been thoroughly renovated, presenting an attractive appearance. New lights have been installed and the room is brilliantly illuminated—a feature which will appeal to all who visit the meetings.

Several matters of public interest were taken up and discussed at considerable length and committees were appointed to make investigations and report on same at the next regular meeting.

A great deal of work affecting the welfare and development of the city now devolves upon the Club in view of the fact that unprecedented activity is taking place and is in prospect for Port Angeles in the near future. The officers of the club are taking up all matters coming under their jurisdiction in a thoroughly systematic manner and will labor unremittingly for the accomplishment of results beneficial to the community.

Regular meetings will be held every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock and all members and the public are requested to attend.

A vote of thanks was tendered by the Club to the proprietors of the Potlatch billiard parlors for a box of fine cigars in honor of the first meeting in the club room.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The art exhibit by the school was very good and showed some of the excellent work of the pupils during the year. The girls' sewing was especially good and they deserve much encouragement.

The Senior Ball was certainly the social success of the year. Everyone enjoyed a most pleasant evening. The hall was decorated in the class colors, green and gold, and each class in the high school was represented by a cozy corner. Delightful punch was served by Edna Land and Lucy MacKechnie. The marine band furnished excellent dancing music and the Seniors are well satisfied with the results of their entertainment.

Everyone had a jolly time at the picnic Friday. The boys and girls contested in races and throwing and a baseball game was played.

The last game of the high school schedule, the game with Townsend, will be played here today. We beat them before and they will try hard to win and have revenge. The teams are as follows:

ANGELES		TOWNSEND
Foster	c	Baker
MacKechnie	1st	Larson
Mitchell	2nd	Lockhart
Bork	s. s.	Klassell
Woodcock	3rd	Olson
Dodge	l. f.	Leslie

PEOPLE ABOUT TOWN

Judge McClinton is down from Seattle this week attending to business matters.

Mrs. John Cain was hostess to the Fortnightly Bridge Club on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Eacrett, who have been residing on Dry Creek, have moved to town.

Father Albert Erkins returned Wednesday from a several days' absence in Seattle.

Miss Margaret Fitzgerald returned Thursday morning from a three weeks' visit in Seattle.

T. F. Trumbull is attending to business matters in Seattle and Olympia this week, going up Monday night.

There was a large attendance at the Tennis Club dance Thursday evening and everybody had a good time.

Mrs. J. G. Jeffrey is looking forward to a visit from her mother, Mrs. Mary J. Mook, of Yakima, who is expected Sunday.

D. W. Higgins is over from Victoria again this week. Mr. Higgins contemplates spending most of the summer in Angeles.

Now is the time to wage war on the thistles. It will be interesting to see what part of the city shows the most civic pride in this matter.

Mrs. Robert W. Jackson and daughter, Leslie, left on the Sol Duc yesterday for Seattle, where at Providence Hospital a sister is very ill.

On account of Memorial Day the Port Angeles Reading Club will postpone its meeting one week, when Mrs. W. B. Webster will be hostess.

Sam Chatterton, the popular clerk at Kirshberg's, has been home sick all week, which has caused some delay in getting the new store arranged for an opening.

Dr. and Mrs. F. T. Hyde have been enjoying a visit the past week from Mrs. Hyde's brother, Donald A. Adams of Boston, who leaves on tonight's boat.

Instead of giving the usual public program this year, the eighth grade will give a reception and program to their parents and grand parents on Thursday evening at the high school Auditorium.

During June, July and August the Moose will meet on the second and last Mondays of the month. A light lunch will be served each time, as there will be candidates for initiation at practically every meeting.

Mrs. Lewis of Port Angeles, who recently bought the large house belonging to Mrs. C. B. Randall, has been visiting this week with Miss Jessie Mason and arranging matters regarding her property.—Bremerton News.

Mrs. Anna McKee accompanied her sister, who has recently come here from the East, to Port Townsend Wednesday to enter the sanitarium. Mrs. McKee will visit Ed. Nailor's people at Chimacum before returning.

A baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fisher at the E. E. Fisher home Monday evening, May 26th. It is hard to tell who are the most rejoiceful, the parents, grandparents, or the hale and hearty great-grandparents. We extend congratulations.

Jas. Gibson returned Monday from a week's attendance at the bedside of his mother at the Port Townsend Sanitorium. He reports that Mrs. Richardson is some improved in appearance, but that the physicians give little hope of her ultimate recovery. He will visit at intervals.

Miss Leslie Jackson and Miss Cora Wolverton were hostesses at a box party Wednesday evening at the Dream theatre. Later the guests were taken by auto to the home of Miss Cora, where a dainty three-course luncheon was served. Mrs. Robert W. Jackson chaperoned the young people and assisted Mrs. Wolverton in serving.

Sunday, June1, Rev. C. R. McMillen will preach at the Lincoln Heights church after Sunday school and in the evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. McMillen is a Presbyterian minister from Seattle and came to us well recommended and will remain in town for a few days. Don't forget the date and bring your friends.

To the male citizens Saturday. Don't leave all the cleaning up to the woman and children, but display a little enthusiasm and energy yourselves. Out door exercise is the best kind of a tonic and appetizer.

Miss Sadie Robertson and Miss Lucy Bonker will entertain a number of their young lady friends at cards, Saturday evening, at the home of the former.

THE · REUNION

A · Memorial · Day · Incident

By James A Edgerton

Copyright 1913 By American Press Association

HELLO, there, comrade! Thought I'd come
To one more camp before
I'm mustered out and pitch my tent
Upon the other shore.
What was your regiment? Mine was
The Fifth Ohio. We
Fought with old Grant, you know, and marched
With Sherman to the sea.

What's that you say? You fought with Grant
And marched with Sherman too?
Yes, I'm Bill Jones of Company K,
But who the deuce are you?
Do I remember Mission Ridge?
I ought to; but, old scout,
My eyes must be a trifle dim—
I can't quite make you out.

You're who—Bob Henry? Not old Bob?
By hokey! But you are!
You derned old ornery sea cook! Say,
Bob Henry, put her thar!
Where have you been? I hain't seen you
Since back in sixty-six.
I thought you looked familiar, but
My old eyes play me tricks.

Well, this IS a reunion, Bob.
I lost all track of you.
I thought you must be dead. What's that?
You thought that I was too?
Well, we are lively dead ones, Bob.
They'd find that out, you bet,
If Uncle Sam should call on us.
We've some fights in us yet.

Come on; let's talk it over, Bob.
It kind of seems us two
Should have a heap of things to say
That are long overdue.
I think that it will take a week
To get my system free.
We'll fight again with Grant and march
With Sherman to the sea.

The "General's" Picnic

"GOIN' into town, Mir'um?"

"Not today, gin'ral. Was there anything special?"

"No; only I thought if you was goin' to the postoffice—but 'tain't no matter."

"Not today, gin'ral; some other time."

She did not turn to look at him, but she seemed to see him just the same—his white hair blowing under his battered, wide rimmed hat, his bent figure shabbily dressed in a faded suit of blue.

"I wish he'd get his letter and his pension, poor old gin'ral!" she murmured. "The general" was only a nickname, and most of the people at the poor farm said he was "cracked in the head" and that the things he talked about were "only his notions."

The general was not looking for a letter that evening. For once he had forgotten the postoffice in the unwonted pleasure of a newspaper to read.

"Just think, Mir'um, they've been havin' an old soldiers' picnic over to Jacksonville! There was an excursion in the cars to a place where they had a big dinner, and there was military bands and speeches—all about the battles they'd been in."

The loud clanging of a bell at the house announced that the evening meal was ready, and the light suddenly faded from the old man's face as he walked away. The dimming of his eyes, the droop of his shoulders, as he turned from her touched Miriam, and there flashed into her brain a thought so startling that she seized the first leisure minute to consider it. What if they should have an old soldier's picnic of their own—she and the general?

Oh, it was a wonderful plan! Miriam could scarcely sleep for thinking of it, and by morning she was ready to communicate it to her old friend.

It is doubtful if any European tour, "personally conducted" or otherwise, ever gave such satisfaction as did this little trip. They tried singing "Hail Columbia" and "John Brown" and derived a great deal of satisfaction, if not much melody, from the attempt. The little girl from a nearby farmhouse ran down and brought them some lemonade, and altogether it was a day crowded with pleasure.

But it was just at the close of the day that disaster came. They had lingered as long as they dared, and then when they started back to the station the feverish hurry of inexperienced travelers seized them.

A carriage with a party of gentlemen turned down a crossroad just as they approached the station, but the general, intent only on the train that was drawing up to the platform, saw nothing else and pushed forward. There was a warning cry, a shout to the horses, a groan.

"Oh, he's killed, he's killed, and now I can't never take him back!" sobbed Miriam.

But the general was not dead. One of the gentlemen, a physician, speedily assured himself of that.

"I do not believe he is dangerously hurt," he said after a swift examination, "but there is a fractured bone in the leg, and with that and the wound in his head he ought not to be moved if he can be cared for near by. Where does he live?"

All eyes turned upon Miriam, and the simple story of where they belonged and how they had won their day's pleasure was told between pitiful catchings of her breath as she tried to restrain her tears.

The station keeper suggested that the people at the farm near the grove had a comfortable house and had plenty of room and might be willing to care for the invalid until he should be able to travel.

"We will see that they are well paid for it," said the leader of the party, who instructed the volunteer messenger, and word was soon sent that the mistress of the house was willing if Miriam would stay to assist her.

So the general was gently removed to a pretty, roomy chamber, his wounds dressed, and he began to mend from the first day.

The doctor made regular visits, and the gentleman whom the others addressed as "governor" came occasionally and meanwhile used that intangible but powerful thing called influence to set certain forces at work in Washington. The long delayed papers were speedily found and attended to, and one day, when the general had nearly recovered, the governor brought out a long envelope.

"Here's your pension, my friend—$12 a month while you live and the neat little sum of $1,100 for arrears."

"'Leven hundred dollars in a lump, Mir'um, and $12 every month as long as I live!" murmured the general. "I'll never go back to the poor farm, an' if I can just find some place to live, kinder like this"—

"You can stay right on in these rooms that you like so well," said the farmer's wife, kind hearted, but wily also—"that is, if your daughter will live here, too, and help with the work. She can earn her own keep, and I'll pay her fair wages besides."

Miriam had been called his daughter many times during his illness, but now that he might possibly have something to bequeath her the word caught the old man's fancy, and by the aid of his friend, the governor, Miriam was legally adopted. — Ruth Cady in Forward.
