MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE

Address by Rev. Fulmer on Monument Building, the Evidences of Achievement.

Memorial Day, Friday, May 30, 1913, was a perfect day. All nature seemed to smile and everybody wanted to be out of doors and take in the sunshine, cooling breezes and other good things. As usual, the day was observed by our people. Many of the business houses were closed and decorated with flags. The business world and our citizens generally, rested in honor of the memory of the nation's dead, and the causes and results which gave birth to this national holiday.

In the forenoon, members of Pacific Post G. A. R., W. R. C. and a few others visited Ocean View Cemetery, where the usual ritual of the Grand Army was observed and the graves of old soldiers reposing there beautifully decorated with flowers and flags. The graves of thirty-four veterans of the Civil War, three of the Spanish-American War and one of the Mexican War were remembered and their mounds strewn with flowers. The list is as follows:

Plat, Division I, Ocean View Cemetery.

Edwin Phelps, Edwin Bryant, D. P. Quinn, E. P. Fitterling, C. Barnarde, A. D. Maxfield, J. G. Banks, Frank Anderson, Thos. H. Bradley, G. W. Decker, W. L. Church, Edward Hoare, John P. Collins, J. K. Hutchinson, J. C. Fields, Henry Boyd, Mennasse Swank, Henry W. Jenkins, C. W. Harding.

Ocean View, City Plat.

Mexican War Veteran, George A. Corgan, Spanish-American War Veterans, William Kellet, W. Jellis, Aut. Ellis.

Members of Pacific Post, Buried Elsewhere.

G. Zoulon, C. Mortensen, Wm. H. Graves, H. H .Morrison, A. J. Link, J. H. Helmer, B. W. Johnson, B. W. J. H. Helmer, B. W. Johnson, Wm. Kelley, Ephriam Eckley.

On the return from the cemetery, at the noon hour, the impressive and pretty ceremony of strewing flowers upon the waters of Port Angeles Bay in memory of those who fought by sea instead of land, was performed by ladies of the Relief Corps, the United States Revenue Cutter, Snohomish, gracefully riding the waters of the bay, firing a salute.

Meanwhile, at the close of these exercises, members of the Post and Corps and others repaired to Lincoln Memorial Hall, G. A. R., where an excellent dinner was served.

The regular public memorial services took place in the Auditorium of the high school building at 2:30 p. m. The platform was decorated with flags, bunting and a profusion of flowers and ferns. Near the right center of the platform stood the monument to the unknown dead, beautifully entwined with vines and fragrant flowers. The effect, although solemn, was very pleasing.

Post Commander D. L. Mitchell called the assembly to order, reading from the Grand Army ritual.

Invocation by Rev. Stephen Smith.

Music was furnished by a special choir, led by Mrs. Smith at the piano. Patriotic selections were sung, Mrs. Minnie Troy singing "Battle Hymn of the Republic" very beautifully.

Reading of G. A. R. orders by Adjutant Doty of Pacific Post. Mr. Doty also read Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Rev. C. E. Fulmer delivered the address and was listened to with much interest and pleasure by those present. The chief thought of the eloquent speaker was Monument Building. We summarize very briefly as follows:

Today this nation pays honor to the memory of her defenders. The strongest emphasis in speaking is "pause." Business, schools and our people pause today to consider history. Men who made history, their wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts, who cheered their deeds, go to the cemetery today with flowers to re-dedicate the monuments to the nation's dead.

Monuments are evidence of achievement, erected by the successors of those who accomplished something, because of deeds done. Without Sumpter to Appomattox, this day would mean little. You, with those sleeping made this day possible. Your deeds of valor, and of those gone before, builded the monuments that dot our country.

We as a people, we build our own monuments, we should see to it that they are builded in honor and in glory.

The speaker said that it was not for him to try to outline the nistory of the Civil War; you know its cause,

FRANCIS STREET CONTRACT LET

Majority of Councilmen Favor the Long Established Pope & Blackwood Levels.

The city council believes the new low grades too low as is evidenced by the vote taken Tuesday night, and it is probable that the next move will be to put them back to the old Pope & Blackwood levels, which have stood the test of the last twenty years and which Mr. Barkhoff stated were good.

The ball was started on this most important question by the report of the ordinance committe recommending the passage of the grade ordinance with certain changes, namely, that the grade of Railroad avenue at Oak be changed from 18 to 15 feet above datum, or 3 feet above high tide; that the grade of Front street at Valley be changed from 18 feet to 15, at Laurel from 17 to 18, at Lincoln from 23 to 30, that First street grade at Lincoln be changed from 50 to 45 feet above datum.

Fisher moved that the changes in the proposed ordinance as recommended by the committee be adopted. This was somewhat tacitly agreed to.

Fisher then moved, seconded by Dustman, that the ordinance as amended be adopted, and the fireworks began.

Myers rose to state that while he was favorable to an establishment of the grades of the city at a point where they can be definitely fixed, he wanted to avoid any further mistakes. He did not know at this time that these proposed grades would be satisfactory.

Dustman asked the city attorney if the damages accruing to D. W. Morse in the event the grades are changed would come out of the assessment district or the city at large. The attorney answered, out of the assessment district.

Mr. Elliott thought a change of grades every few months would tend to frighten capital. There was no dissatisfaction for months after the last grade was fixed, at least none expressed and several were on the point of building when another change was threatened. If the property on Front street could not stand for the expense of the grades as established, he would be willing to meet them half way upon the advice of an honest competent engineer, but he did not intend to be a party to present plan.

Swanson asked the engineer what these grades would mean to the rest of the city, particularly to the hill property south of the business section. The engineer replied that with a fifty-foot cut through the face of the bluff, the rise could be made from First street to Fifth street on a 6 per cent grade. This opened the eyes of some of the council.

Myers stated that he wanted to act conscientiously in this matter, that he had no fish to fry, and asked, how about these deep cuts? Front street was looking out for themselves, how about the less valuable property having to conform to the low grades on the flat? He could hardly support the proposition at this time.

Roll call being announced on the adoption of the resolution; Fisher and Dustman voted for adoption and Myers, Elliott, Swanson and Rogers,

SCHOOL SYSTEM A CLOSE CORPORATION

Leading Educators Quitting in Disgust and Taking Up More Congenial Professions.

The following article taken from the Aberdeen World and written by County School Superintendent McKillip of Chehalis county, voices the sentiment of many of the prominent educators today and we hope it will be carefully and thoughtfully perused by all interested patrons of the public school. Every month some of our best magazines devote considerable space to this subject of the defects in our present school system, but this article seems to come a little nearer home and portrays conditions which we have all seen in our own schools of Port Angeles. The fault lies not alone with teachers and instructors, they are compelled to cater to the present school system and to the wishes, largely, of the parents. The ambition of many of these fond parents is to see their children graduated from high school at as early an age as possible and regardless of whether they are qualified or not.

We all take pride in seeing our schools turn out large graduating classes and all are anxious to keep their boys and girls in school, but let us remember the main thing, after all, is proficiency. The business and professional world today is not in search of graduates, but of capable, wide-awake men and women, who have learned in school the lesson of digging and "doing well whatever you do, without a thought of fame." We are sorry to note that the present school system is driving from the field today many of our best teachers and educators, but we hope that the wide publicity at the present time will bring about a material change for the better. Let us remember that the future stability and strength of our government depends on the kind of citizens we are sending out into the world today from our public schools. Let us see that they are well grounded in all those qualities that make for good citizenship., In connection with this article, Profession Herbsman's address to the graduating class of 1912, comes forcibly to our minds for he expressed very much the same ideas.

"That the education system of this state is a close corporation and contemptible; that to win success in educational work one must be deceitful and that a large porportion of the vast sums raised for education purposes is wasted and worse than wasted, are only a few of the charges made by Superintendent McKillip of Chehalis county. He said:

"'I am nearing the close of my terms and I shall never teach again. I am thoroughly disgusted. I believe the only way to bring about a reformation is through publicity, and I believe it is the duty of the press to take this matter up—inform themselves and give publicity that will bring about reformation.

"'How is our money wasted? From the top to the bottom. For instance, our state superintendent has made a ruling that after next September any pupil passing or graduating from the Eighth grade schools must be able to pass in agriculture, manual training or domestic science. Yet, consider; our teachers are not compelled to know how to teach those subjects. The pupil must be able to pass on a subject the teacher may know nothing about!

"'I am not decrying the subjects. I would require the teaching of these in an elementary way. I tried years ago to get the legislature to include agriculture in the course of study prescribed by law. Instead they included music!

"'Nature work, fertilizing soils, should be included in the elementary training of a child.

"'Our schools are not efficient. I mean all our schools—the whole system. The people are getting the worst of it. Do you know that in the seventeen years of my work in this country, I have never known a high school to fail to pass a pupil? What a wonderful record, if it is an honest one. It isn't a matter of what they know—it is a matter of how to pass them.

"'Here is a thing that is done in many schools. I know personally that it was done in one high school in this county this year. Some time before the close of the year the pupils were given a list of some twenty subjects and were told to prepare in them, for examination would be along those lines. Any dunce should have been able to pass when they knew what the examination was to be. But no. Several of them didn't stand high enough then, so a day was spent hunting up questions they could answer. All passed—passed with honors.

"'There is a waste of the money raised by taxation for educational purposes. But that isn't the worst—an everlasting and irreparable injury has been done to those boys and girls who were passed.

"'The whole system is wrong. We start out with 200 pupils in the lowest grades. Our whole effort is to prepare them for the high school, yet probably not over 25 of them will ever enter high school or at least graduate from it. Yet the high

PLAY GROUND ASSOCIATION

Organization Perfected; Special Instructor to Be Engaged tor the Summer Months.

A meeting fraught with more than ordinary interest to the citizens of Port Angeles was that held in the Auditorium of the high school Monday evening, with Prof. Geisness as chairman, to perfect and adopt plans for a permanent organization to be known as the Port Angeles Playground Association. The meeting was well attended by the men vitally interested in the youth of our city, but it was rather a disappointment to find so few mothers in attendance; we suppose the prevalence of so much illness amongst the children of our city will partly explain their absence.

At a former meeting, Mr. Thomasson was made chairman of a committee to draw up a constitution or plan of organization. Before presenting this constitution for adoption, Mr. Thomasson gave a talk, explaining the object of such an organization and the great good that had resulted from similar ones all over the country. Short talks, heartily endorsing this movement and pledging their earnest support, were given by Mr. Failor, Father Erkins, Dr. McGillivray and others. The constitution, as presented by Mr. Thomasson, was unanimously adopted and election of officers was the next move.

In each case the secretary pro tem was instructed to cast the unanimous vote of the association for the candidate. Mr. Thomasson was elected president; Mrs. Jessie Webster, vice-president; A. J. Cosser, secretary; Dr. Hyde, treasurer. The following eleven citizens were chosen to act as executive board: Dr. McGillivray, Wm. Graham, Willis Mathewson, Judge Cochran, Frank Dustman, Harry Stiles, Ed Shields, Mr. Ulstrom, Mesdames T. T. Aldwell, J. C. Hanson and J. E. Beam.

A meeting of the executive committee and officers was appointed for Thursday evening in the Commercial Club room.

A considerable sum of money has already been pledged for this movement and we hope so worthy an undertaking will meet with the generous support of the public. Mr. Thomasson, the president, is a comparative newcomer, but is an enthusiast on the future greatness and prosperity of Port Angeles. He has had wide experience in Y. M. C. A. work and boys and young men are his hobby. In fact, he reckons them among the valuable assets of Port Angeles and thinks a little money and effort expended in their behalf would bring in as profitable returns as the same amount expended on right-of-ways, street grading, etc. Anything that helps to make our boys and girls good and honest citizens, and teaches them lessons of fair play, is a move in the right direction. No more ideal location for a city play ground could be desired than that surrounding the new Central school. The school board have expended about all they can afford in getting the grounds in shape and it will be the work of the association to purchase proper equipment and hire a capable man for the summer months, at least, to supervise and instruct the children at their play. Mr. Failor has donated to the library for use

OLD YEOMAN, CHIEFTAIN

A True Character of Pioneer Days, Head of the Clallams, and a Friend of the Whites.

(By Mary G. Morse.)

The history of the Olympic Peninsula is fraught with many thrilling incidents not unmixed with much romance and adventure, and, in the panorama of the past, the Indian, himself a fit subject for thought and pen, stands out in bold relief against all paler lights.

As a sturdy oak whose roots hug fast its native soil and from whose branches the cooling shadows fall to thwart the noonday sun, so by his dauntless courage and magnanimous heart, would I liken Yeoman, cheiftain of the tribe of Clallam Indians.

In the sixties there were two tribes of Indians which inhabited Clallam county; the Makahs, who lived for the most part in the Western end, claiming Neah Bay as their headquarters, and the Clallams, who dwelt in the Eastern part, having for their meeting place what is now known as the East End, near the present city of Port Angeles.

A bitter animosity had existed between the rival tribes, which, it is said, was occasioned by the boundary of their lands. Be this as it may, the spirit of long standing hate had not ameliorated as the years went on. Many an upturned canoe had been seen, borne by the waves, to be dashed on the rocks of Cape Flattery or battered by the surf on the shores of Ediz Hook light house, but, as to the hapless occupant of one such bark, the Straits of Juan de Fuca tell no tales.

At the time of our story the Clallam Indians were enjoying a Potlatch, which with them, was equivalent to a season of out-door sports and general merriment. By way of interpolation I may say that the Potlatch was an annual event in which every member of the tribe was expected to participate. Accordingly, the old East End grounds were gaily dotted with tents and the shores lined with many bright-colored canoes, for the Indian, true to his nomadic nature, loves expedition and is at once interested in anything which savors of pageantry. Free to follow his own untutored fancies, his savage soul delights itself in all the pleasures and pursuits so dear to the heart of primitive man, but as civilization encroaches upon his little horizon and the steady march of progress sweeps down to stifle his wild desires, then it is that a cloud, black as midnight, blots out his light of hope, and so all mirth has died within him.

But, to return to our story, the last day of the Potlatch had arrived and a few of the visiting Indians had already laded their canoes and gone away. Gifts had been exchanged, in accordance with their custom and fond klahowyas were waived to Old Chief Yoeman, as he sat on the beach, like King Canute of old, and bathed his feet in the cool sea brine. No one had noticed a little black speck which moved swiftly on the water toward the curve of Ediz Hook Spit.

It was getting late in the afternoon and some of the squaws were beginning to prepare the evening meal, when suddenly a harsh, triumphant screech broke upon the air, and looking toward the West the Clallam Indians beheld with consternation a host of Makah canoes, colored black with war paint, glide swiftly into Angeles Bay and on toward their camping ground. As they drew near it was evident that every canoe was filled with warriors, whose bows glistened wickedly in the sunshine.

Calling their women and children together, the Clallams frantically drove them into the woods to remain in hiding, and then stationed themselves, utterly defenceless, to meet the enemy.

With hideous yells, which seemed, as it were, to rend the mountain tops, the Makahs anchored in front of the potlatch grounds, arranging their canoes in diamond shape.

At this time there were not many white settlers in Clallam county and those who were brave enough to remain there were largely at the mercy of the Indians. Small wonder then it is that the few pioneers living near Port Angeles should convene to watch from a geodly distance the outcome of this meeting, fearing, as they did, that any hostilities might involve themselves. Indeed, it is from their narration of this incident that we have an authentic account concerning it.

Brandishing his bow and arrow above his head, Tonkawa, chief of the Makahs, arose in his boat. Turning toward his braves, he pointed with a disdainful gesture to the terror stricken Clallams and bade his warriors prepare for battle. A moment of death-like silence prevailed, and then,—"Mamook kopet!" It was the voice of old Chief Yeoman. Stepping boldly to the water's edge he dropped his long, red blanket upon the beach, and, tressing up his under garment to his knees, waded out near the canoe of the Makah chieftain. Surprised at his audacity, the latter turned toward him as the old man began to speak in the plaintive accents of the Chinook jargon.

MASS MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

Commercial Club Asks Citizens to Attend and Discuss Matter of Street Grades.

At the regular meeting of the Commercial Club on Wednesday evening a large and enthusiastic crowd was present. It was, in fact, the largest gathering of a similar character that has assembled in several months.

From the outset things moved with a snap that indicated extraordinary interest. Several questions were taken up and discussed, chief of which was the matter of street grades which now seem to be of absorbing interest. After lengthy and earnest debate upon the subject, it was determined to call a mass meeting of the citizens, to which the council was invited, for Monday night, June 9th, in the Opera House, where the matter will be thoroughly threshed out for the purpose of arriving at some satisfactory and intelligent solution thereof. Among other topics of public concern, that of the lease of Ediz Hook from the United States government for manufacturing sites, was taken up. The chair appointed a committee of three, with Mr. M. J. Carrigan as chairman, to open correspondence with the proper authorities at Washington for the accomplishment, if possible, of this purpose which would practically settle the question of cheap locations for manufacturing institutions.

The pressing need of street sprinkling in the business district was also introduced, and a committee appointed to look into the matter and devise ways and means for abating the dust nuisance.

Many other subjects relating to the public good were taken up. Everybody is cordially invited to attend the regular meetings on Wednesday night of each week.

LOGGING AT LITTLE RIVER.

New 100-Foot Bridge Across North Fork of the Stream.

The new bridge, 100 feet high, which the Little River Railroad has been building across the north fork of Little river, was ironed this week and the company, which has pretty well cleaned off the timber adjacent to Tumwater creek, will shortly be logging on the former stream. A new camp is being built at the Coleman school house, near the crest of the divide. Logging is underway at present in the gulch of the north fork. The Little River company will acquire from the government 90,000,000 feet of timber in the Little River and Ennis creek districts.

DROWNED IN BAY.

Three fishermen, Groth, Reddick, and Pulsifer, of the fishing boat Mary Ann, picked up the body of a man Wednesday morning on the beach this side of Francis street. From papers in his pocket he was identified as Charles Gustave Nelson, a Swede. Some six weeks ago he disappeared while going down to the steamer in an intoxicated condition and it was feared he had been drowned. Besides a gold watch there was several dollars in his pocket.

school is the goal instead of a thorough grounding in the things that the grades should educate in.

"'In the high school the process is repeated. The whole effort is to prepare the boys and girls for the university. Very few of them will ever enter the university, but that is our whole aim. Our high schools are accredited and we must pass the pupils on, as many of them as we can. What matters it whether they can read, write or figure? They passed the eighth grade work and we must fit them for the higher step. We graduate them on up. There is the same process.

"'Here is an example. I had a letter from a teacher who wanted to know if we had a vacancy as an English teacher in any of our high schools. She had had a year or two in normal training and a year in the state university. She misspelled 'vacancy.'

"'I have or had another letter from an Illinois man who wanted a principalship. He has a degree from one of the larger universities. We counted seventeen or eighteen mistakes in spelling, punctuation and grammar, marked them and returned him his letter. One if his words was 'together.'

"'A few years ago an Aberdeen high school graduate came here for a teacher's examination. She could not possibly pass the examination. In history she failed entirely—got a zero—and she failed in every subject. Failing thus to get a school she went to Bellingham and took a year in the normal, when she was sent out with a life certificate to teach school.

"'There is much complaint about the wages we pay our teachers, and it is true that a good teacher, and it it is true that a good teacher never gets paid for his or her work., But hosts of them side-step teaching and try to please the directors and parents. That is a part of the system—to please. Be pleasant and agreeable and what matter if you don't know anything, you may win to the highest position in teaching.

"'Even the morals of our schools suffer from this pernicious system or lack of system. That is a topic all in itself and if everything else was all right should be taken up in all earnestness.

"'We must say to the university, 'hands off; this is our high school;' and we must make it an institution of learning. We must say to the high school 'hands off, this our grade school, and it has a duty to the taxpayers and pupils.' When the grade school has actually graduated a pupil—taught him all that it is intended to teach him—is time enough for the high school, and so on up. What we want are teachers who will teach the pupils what they are employed to teach them, rather than make an effort to pass them up to somebody else. The foundation is the material thing, not the ornament on the cupola."' its battles, sufferings and privations for four long years. Today we have one flag — a nation undivided — a flag with 47 stars; a flag that is first among the nations in power, influence and wealth. Yes, monuments to known and unknown survivors, erected by their bravery and true patriotism. We gather today to say that monuments of stone are not enough. We will remember their hardships and trials and recite anew their deeds of heroism. We need to rebuild monuments. The re-union at Gettysburg will help to do this.

An eminent statesman was asked: "How long will Christianity last?" "As long as the Sacrament of our Lord's supper is observed," he replied. The observance of the Lord's supper is a monument for all Christiandom. How long will our nation last? As long as these history teaching days are kept in true spirit. But what value in this day or these flowers, if the lessons taught here today are not learned by our children. This is one of the problems that we should remember. It is not our words that will be remembered, not our hopes, but our deeds.

"Fading away like the stars of the morning,
Losing their lights in the glorious sun;
So let me steal away, gently and lovingly;
Only remembered by what I have done."

C V. Savidge, state land commissioner, in the fulfillment of his promise to give the widest possible publicity to the affairs of his office, made in the campaign, is sending out to each paper in the state a monthy statement of the affairs of his office. While in itself the purpose to make public this part of the affairs of the state is highly commendable, the program laid out will accomplish great good. It will not only give information on a subject that practically all voters know little about, but it will tend to create interest in public affairs that does not now exist.

The case will probably be heard at the June jury term.

Tuesday the final transfer of the property of the Angeles Brewing & Malting Co. was made to the Angeles Brewing Co.

Florida is talking of dividing itself into two states, California thinks it could make more of a hullabaloo if it was divided, Chicago wants to be cut off from the rest of Illinois and New York City, or Tammany Hall, has always agitated this at times. Why not carry it still further and set off Clallam county into a principality and then some of the Port Angeles fellows who are trying to run the Front street grade to suit themselves, might rule supreme.

The order that candidates for postoffices must stand a civil service examination need not alarm any of the faithful. In the first place it refers entirely to the democrats and republicans have nothing to do with it except to watch. If a man can prove that he is a good democrat, and best of all an original Wilson man, the rest will come as easy as feeding husks to the hungry.

June first the new law went into effect regulating the weight of a loaf of bread. On and after that date a loaf of bread must weigh a pound, a double loaf two pounds. It was claimed that light weight bread, affording a larger profit, was demanded by city grocers, hence the law. The legislators can regulate the weight of a loaf of bread, but can they regulate the price?

Agriculture is to be a part of the studies of the eighth grade pupils of the puplic schools of Aberdeen and of Chehalis county the coming year. At a meeting of the State Board of Education held in Spokane some time ago, a resolution was passed, making the study of agriculture a part of the work of the eighth grade, with credits the same as in other work.

Mount Baker looms up in all its granduer these bright June days. There is no more inspiring sight from the Olympic peninsula than the silvery sheen on Mt. Baker, eighty miles away, on a bright June afternon.

Balm of Gilead has been put on the free list by the democratic tariff bill.

Colonel Roosevelt was not intoxicated; he has been exonorated from the charge. George H. Newett, the Michigan editor who accused Roosevelt of drunkeness and was being sued for libel in the sum of $10,000, seeing that he was going to lose, retracted his statements on the witness stand, saying that he had been misinformed; that an injustice had been done the Colonel in the publication of the article and that he deeply regretted it. Mr. Newett admitted, however, that he was anxious for the defeat of Roosevelt and therefore published the reports from hearsay evidence. Colonel Roosevelt, true to his past record of manliness, thereupon asked the judge to order a verdict for nominal damages and was given six cents. Colonel Roosevelt has always shown himself to be higher and broader than his defamers.

Weyerhauser is a foxy old lumber king. With the tariff removed he can cut his vast timber holdings in Canada—where the stumpage and labor is cheaper, and let his U. S. timber grow in value. This is the reason why he is for removal of the the tariff. When Weyerhauser's timber holdings were confined to Wisconsin he was a tariff advocate. But now he sees great advantage to himself and associates in letting in his Canada lumber free. The cheap labor in the sawmills across the line, where Japs, Chinese and Hindus are the principal laborers, would afford Weyerhauser an opportunity to add to his already countless millions at the expense of holders of American timber exclusively. — Quilcene Megaphone.

It is expected that before the end of the week the United States Senate committee on territories will have recommended a bill for government construction of an Alaskan railroad from tidewater to the interior. In line with and following this action it is probable that Senator Chamberlain's bill authorizing a $35,000,000 government bond issue to build the road will also be recommended for passage. The general belief is that if these bills pass Congress there will immediately begin the greatest rush for Alaska that the northern territory has ever experienced.

President Wilson says that he does not expect a reduction in the cost of living to immediately follow the tariff bill. There are a great many who agree with the honorable gentleman.

THE BRIGHT SPOTS.

No man knows his strength or his weakness till occasion proves it. If there be some thoughts and actions of his life from the memory of which a man shrinks with shame, surely there are some which he may be proud to own and remember—forgiven injuries, conquered temptations (now and then) and difficulties vanquished by endurance.

CHAPTER XX.
The Big Life.

ONE day John Dunmeade stood before the people of his state a lonely figure, almost forgotten amid the tumult of discussion that raged over the respective merits of Sherrod and Jenkins. On the next a few heads turned questioningly toward him, a few newspapers began darkly to hint that his candidacy might be more formidable than had been supposed. The exigencies of the party case, it seemed, demanded that Jerry Brent be met with a candidate of equal or greater fitness, and neither Jenkins nor Sherrod was entirely palatable to the people. Other molders of opinion followed suit. Soon a small host of them were shrieking that John Dunmeade must be nominated. The times required it, the people demanded it, no one else could beat Jerry Brent. In short, if these members of the press were to be believed, the party was in danger of defeat and had experienced a timely conviction of sin. Within a few days half the newspapers of the state were loudly trumpeting that Dunmeade's services to his party must be rewarded; the other half laboriously denying that service had been rendered and sneeringly pointing to the late primaries in Benton county as evidence of his popular weakness.

No one suspected a prompter. The people, so insistently told that they demanded the choice of the young reformer, began to believe it. A surprising number suddenly discovered that they "had always been for Dunmeade anyway;" they were exceedingly proud of the fact. The thing was contagious. Gradual, but swift as the rising Chinook, it swept over the state, a flood of enthusiasm. Part of it was genuine. Far down in their hearts, beneath the calloused crust, the moral sluggishness that hated change, lay a germinating civic consciousness implanted by the very man who had become a hero overnight. The politicians—all but a few—were astounded. Supporters of Jenkins and Sherrod alike were profoundly alarmed..

Two days before the convention the Hon. G. Washington Jenkins bowed to the storm.

"I yield," he said, "to a spontaneous demand of the people."

"Sentiment," declared Murchell solemnly, "has crystallized. Dunmeade's the man." He explained that this decision had been reached by him in view of the evident wish of the people, and he added truthfully that he had not seen nor discussed the approaching convention with John Dunmeade. The Murchell men in the organization whooped with delight.

The day before the convention the delegates began to gather at the capital. In parlor A of the State hotel sat Murchell and in parlor B of the Lochinvar sat Sherrod, playing against each other for votes. Between them fluttered the delegates and those who had delegates to sell, like hungry summer flies. But they found—the little fellows at least—no honey pot at Murchell's end; no scandal must mar the nomination of Dunmeade. (As for the captains of tens and captains of hundreds, that is another matter, into which we may not intrude.)

In crowded streets and sweltering, smoke clouded lobbies excitement ran high. The Dunmeade rallying ground, the only quiet spot in the capital, contrasted significantly with the nervous atmosphere of the Sherrod headquarters. Such contentment with the situation could not be feigned! It was infectious; it spread out among the delegates who had pledged themselves to vote for Dunmeade and nullified the frantic efforts of Parrott (nominally managing Sherrod's campaign) to start a stampede; it kept the neutrals wavering.

And over the scene of conflict hovered a formless one, unseen, unheard, unfelt, as spirits always are, waiting but for the crucial moment to swoop down and decide the issue.

Came a lull in the battle, an hour toward morning, when the delegates had retired to allotted cots or halves of beds or, more often, to woo fortune over some table of chance, when the reeking lobbies were depopulated and the headquarters of the generals were deserted by all but their respective staffs and the yawning reporters.

There was a knock on Murchell's door and Greene, leader in Plumville, admitted a messenger, him who once before had lured Murchell from his retreat on an errand, if not of mercy, at least of salvation. Paine went to him and whispered his message. Murchell shook his head.

"Tell him," he said aloud, "if he wants to see me he'll have to come here."

Paine whispered a protest.

"Tell him," Murchell cut him short, "John Heath will meet him here."

The messenger started, looked hastily around at the others and grinned in sickly fashion. But he departed immediately, leaving the men in the room to wonder what charm lay in the unfamiliar name of John Heath.

In less than five minutes, rumor outrunning the fact, the hotel was alive. Sherrod had asked for a conference with Murchell.

Murchell men smiled triumphantly when they saw Parrott and Sherrod, wearing an air of confidence not wholly convincing, emerge from the elevator and make their way along the corridor to parlor A.

Sherrod and Parrott entered, carefully closing the door behind them to the intense disappointment of the delegates outside. Parrott went jauntily up to Murchell and shook hands.

"Well," he grinned, "we've been having a fine little shindy, eh?" This for the reporters.

"Glad," grunted Murchell, "you're enjoying it." There was a laugh, in which Parrott did not join.

The senator waved his hand, and all but Greene left the room, reluctant, but obedient.

"See here," said Sherrod. "Can't we get together? You've got to admit that we've got you beaten."

"If you think the delegates you've been buying will stick you're mistaken, Sherrod. I've sold you more than fifty myself."

"I don't believe it," snapped Sherrod. "Quit bluffing and get down to cases. You know you can't beat us in the convention. You aren't trying to. You started all this racket over Dunmeade just to work up a sentiment that will make it harder for me to beat Brent. You're so anxious to get even," he exclaimed bitterly, "that you don't see you're in danger of stirring up a revolution. What will you take to quit?"

"The revolution has started, Sherrod. And you'll never beat Brent."

"Won't I? We'll attend to that when the time comes."

"Because," Murchell continued calmly, "you won't be nominated." He turned to the governor. "Parrott, how much have you paid Sherrod to support you for senator?"

"Nothing," lied Parrott, albeit with evident uneasiness.

"Then you're lucky," Murchell commented. "Dan Hasland paid him $200,000 for the same promise."

"That's a lie," Sherrod declared hotly.

"Greene," commanded Murchell, "call Hasland in, will you? He's in the room next to mine. That is, if Parrott and Sherrod think it necessary?" He turned inquiringly toward them.

"I guess," Sherrod growled, "Parrott knows I'll not go back on him."

"Does he?" Murchell inquired dryly. "Look at him!"

And, indeed, Parrott's face just then showed anything but implicit confidence in the good faith of his leader.

"You needn't go, Greene. And," Murchell added, "I may announce right here that Hasland will succeed me as senator."

"Doesn't that depend," sneered Sherrod, "on who controls the legislature?"

"We'll control it."

Greene could have hugged himself with delight as he saw Parrott visibly perturbed and Sherrod struggling to repress the rising, passionate hate and fear of the man before him. Greene had been a gambler and he felt a profound reverence for the man whose nerve in so big a game showed no tremor.

A long pause was broken by Parrott anxiously. "Senator, what have you got up your sleeve?"

"Sherrod's withdrawal."

"Who is going to make me withdraw?" Sherrod sneered again.

"Didn't Paine give you my message? John Heath!"

"Who," demanded Parrott, "is John Heath?"

Murchell pointed to Sherrod's face, which had suddenly turned pale. "He is a gentleman of whom Sherrod is very much afraid. Parrott, did you ever hear why I came to the capital last March? I came because I heard Sherrod here was drunk and threatening to throw himself into the river. I found out why—he had embezzled $900,000 of state moneys. We fixed the matter up temporarily." He paused, straightened up in his chair, eyed Sherrod for a moment and went on quietly: "If your name goes before the convention, I will take the floor and tell all about that transaction. I don't think you will be nominated. And, if you are, I'm quite sure you won't be elected. Do you withdraw?"

"I do not!"

"Very well." Murchell rose to indicate that the conference was at an end.

"Come on, Parrott." Sherrod wheeled and marched toward the door. But Parrott did not follow. Instead, he dropped weakly into a chair, his glance shifting uncertainly from Murchell to the departing Sherrod and back again.

Sherrod's hand was already on the doorknob when he noticed Parrott's defection. He stopped, looking back.

"Come along," he repeated impatiently.

"I think," said Parrott slowly, "I'll stay here. I've had one gold brick too many."

"What!" Sherrod turned sharply and strode over to the vacillating governor. "You booby! Scared by a cheap bluff like that! Do you think he means it? He daren't use it. Here, I'll prove it to you." He whirled to face Murchell, pointing. "There is the door. Bill Murchell, and on the other side of it a half dozen reporters. Don't wait for the convention. Call 'em in. Make good your bluff, if you dare!"

For a moment the senator looked intently at the ugly, passionate face.

"Call them in, Greene," he said quietly.

Greene went to the door, opened it and beckoned to the reporters. They filed into the parlor promptly. Murchell turned to them.

"Gentlemen, I want to dictate a statement." Notebooks were flashed forth and pencils poised. But Murchell did not continue, and the reporters did not look at him. Their eyes were riveted on Sherrod, upon whose face had fallen a look of unbelieving wonderment. The wonderment became fear. Beads of sweat stood out on his forehead. He shook visibly. The defiant attitude suddenly dissolved.

"Make good your bluff if you dare."

"Perhaps," said Murchell grimly, "Mr. Sherrod would prefer to make this statement himself."

There was an instant of painful silence. Sherrod's mouth worked as though he were trying to speak. But no sound fell.

Parrott came to his relief. "Gentlemen," he said solemnly, "Mr. Sherrod has withdrawn his candidacy."

"In favor of Dunmeade," supplemented Greene.

The reporters looked inquiringly at Senator Murchell.

He nodded. "That's the statement."

Without a single backward glance he went out of the room. Greene and the reporters followed him, leaving Sherrod and Parrott alone to get what comfort they could out of their plight and to settle certain accounts, a scene upon which we considerately draw the curtain.

* * * * * * *

A man around whom a battle had been fought leaned on a rail fence, gazing off at the undulating line where the azure of sky curved down to meet the green of hills. He had been there most of the afternoon, in flight from the kindly but obtrusive interest of his neighbors.

A state was acclaiming him, and he was not uplifted. He had read the news of the morning and knew that at that very hour several hundred of his fellow citizens in convention assembled were naming him to a high honor, and he took no joy in it. For the acclamation was but the schooled chorus of a tractable stage mob. And the victory was not for him, nor for the principle he had served, but for a man whom he had condemned, for an institution he believed to be wrong. He was big enough—or small enough if you prefer—to resent being catapulted into power by the strength of another's arm, and he was honest enough to hate the means he knew must have been used. He could not exult. The advancement had come too late. The fiery eagerness of youth was gone.

He longed not for a sword, but for peace—the peace of the hills, of the growing things, of the commonplace from which once he had fled.

A sound, strange for that hour and place, slowly pierced his abstraction. He raised his head, startled, listening. It was the courthouse bell. Another joined in, and another, until all the bells of the town were ringing. The iron choral was for him!

He walked slowly on.

As he rounded the foot of the knob, he heard another sound rising to mingle with the clamor of the bells—cheering voices. He had a strong desire to turn back and flee to some hiding place in the hills, but he forced himself to march forward.

At the northernmost edge of the town he perceived a rapidly limping figure. It was Jeremy Applegate.

"Heard you came out this way," Jeremy gasped, "an' I wanted to be first to tell you. Nominated by acclamation at 3:45 this afternoon! I hain't felt so good since Appomattox." John, beholding the tears shining in honest Jeremy's eyes, felt the moisture rise to his own. His heart leaped sharply; it was something to receive, even if one has not earned, such loyalty!

Down Main street came a team drawing a double seated spring wagon. From the wagon descended a silent trio whose handclasp eloquently told what awkward lips could not phrase.

"Druv into town to git the news of the convention," 'Ri explained. "They said ye'd gone out the pike, so we druv out to fetch ye in. They're waitin' for ye, consider'ble excited."

"They've found out," said Dan Criswell dryly, "all at oncet that ye're a great man."

" 'Low I damned the Amurrican people a mite too soon," confessed Sykes, which caused Cranshawe and Criswell to laugh.

"Git in," commanded 'Ri. "Come right along, Jeremy."

They all climbed into the wagon, John with lips compressed as if he faced an ordeal. And indeed he did. 'Ri was quick to perceive what Jeremy in the hysteria of his joy had overlooked. His great, hairy hand fell on John's knee in a tight grip.

"I want to say something while I got the chancet. I guess there's more to this than appears to be. But I have faith in ye, John Dunmeade. I have faith that ye'll govern this state in the fear of God and the love of your fellow men."

"Whatever ye do," supplemented Sykes, "I'll believe that."

"An' so long as we got faith in ye ye needn't lose faith in yourself," Criswell concluded.

John did not answer. He was past speaking just then and later when his townsfolk acclaimed him.

At home took place a wonder. Judge Dunmeade, almost forgetting the judicial dignity, slapped John on the back and exclaimed: "My son, this is a happy hour. I always knew you would make your mark."

At which Miss Roberta sniffed. But when she tried to convey her felicitations her tongue refused the unaccustomed office, and she broke away to prepare a supper that should do justice to the occasion.

That evening Benton county made holiday, with torches and bonfires and fireworks. John made a speech at his home—not much of a speech, it is true, but his audience was not hypercritical. It lasted just three minutes. Then the band began to play "America." For a little a deep hush fell. Then some one—later identified as a one legged, hysterically happy old soldier—began to sing in a cracked, quavering voice. Something that passed beyond mere jubilation stirred. With one accord the crowd lifted up its voice and sang, "My country, 'tis of thee"—

The solemn, stately measures died away. A young woman under a tree at the edge of the crowd discovered unashamed tears coursing down her cheeks. A last cheer was given, and the famous celebration passed into history.

At his window John Dunmeade looked with troubled eyes up into the silent, starry night. It was ungenerous perhaps, but he could not help thinking of the lean years of defeat and discouragement. And he wondered. Was the hymn still ringing in his ears the voice of an abiding passion—or hysteria?

THE CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

No Action Taken on Petition of Two Hundred Citizens for Taking of Special Census.

The city council meeting Tuesday night was well attended as usual. All members, too, were present, except Mr. Rogers, who is attending the Odd Fellows convention at Walla Walla.

Ordinance for the improvement of Third street to theSampson tract was adopted by unanimous vote and the work ordered done.

Contract for the completion of the Francis street work was entered into and approved by the council.

Request of Fire Chief Gallagher for 500 feet additional hose at 80c a foot was allowed, and clerk directed to purchase same.

A communication was read from Chas. T. Tucker, purchaser of the Goldwater property at Front and Lincoln streets. Therein he stated that he was ready to construct a modern concrete building of two or three stories as soon as he receives assurance absolute that a feasible grade is established on Front street, one that can be financed and completed at once. He also called attention to the absence of a fire limits ordinance and recommended that action along this line be taken at an early date. Referred.

Request of the Commercial Club that Inland Navigation Company be requested to place float at Laurel dock, was referred to clerk to take up with the steamboat company.

Light committee recommended the purchase of 24 new light meters, two of a special size. Clerk was directed to procure same.

Petition was read, signed by two hundred residents, asking that a census of the city be at once taken to ascertain the population of the city, with a view to calling an election for the adoption of the commission form of government. Coming at this time, caused Mr. Elliott to remark: "It seems they are after our jobs." He promptly moved that the petition be indefinitely postponed. Seconded by Wilcox and lost on tie vote, Fisher, Dustman and Swanson voting no. Dustman then moved that petition be referred to clerk for checking, lost by same vote. Under the law it seems to be up to the council whether they go to the expense of taking the census or not. If the last federal or state census should show 2500 inhabitants, a petition to call an election for the adoption of the commission form of government must be acted upon by the mayor issuing a proclamation, calling an election within 60 days. If voters decide for organization under the act another election for choosing a mayor and two other commissioners is called in an additional 60 days, the mayor to act as Commissioner of Public Safety, the other two as Commissioner of Accounts and Finances and of Streets and Pubsalary of $500 per annum and the others $250 each. The board has the powers of the present council and all meetings, general and special, must be open to the public. All other officers of the city are re-appointed by the commissioners. Either may be recalled after six months of service.

Resolution for the improvement of Railroad avenue by grading same full width, was taken up and protests heard. Practically the same protest filed at the last hearing of this improvement was made. This was signed by a considerable number of property owners on the hill who denied that any special benefits accrued to them by reason of the improvement and therefore declared the assessment against them illegal and unauthorized. The protest was referred to the clerk for checking.

Mr. Elliott then moved that rules be suspended and that council take up consideration of ordinance. Carried. An ordinance was read directing that the work be done. This was, upon motion of Elliott, placed upon its first and second reading and referred to the city attorney, ordinance committee and engineer.

Its early appearance caused Fisher to ask who had ordered the bringing in of the ordinance. City attorney replied, nobody, just prepared it in advance to save a week's time.

Clerk reported that this was the night of hearing on proposed improvements east of Francis street, but that neither he nor the engineer were prepared through the voluminous amount of work to report on the nineteen districts. Engineer stated that he would need at least two weeks longer and clerk that he would need two weeks after engineer reported. Dustman moved that that clerk and engineer be directed to bring in report in two weeks and that they be authorized to employ needed assistance. This carried and was applauded by the district sponsors present.

Fisher moved that in consideration of large property owners' request, that city attorney be directed to bring in an ordinance fixing the grades of Railroad avenue, Front and First streets as recommended by Mr. Barkhoff in his report. Seconded Dustman. Mr. Elliott wanted to known why; we have just turned down that ordinance. Motion failed, Elliott, Wilcox and Myers voting no.

Dustman called attention to a considerable amount of equipment along Francis street in the way of the new contractors and moved that clerk be directed to notify proper parties to remove same. Carried.

THE LEE'S CREEK CUT-OFF.

At Lee's creek, three miles east of Angeles, Contractor Critchfield is putting in a very substantial pile bridge, having the heavy work already nearly half done. The new bridge is just a few feet below the old, which is about on its last legs. A straight stretch of roadway on the same level grade has been slashed and burned, cutting out the curve east of the old bridge. The completion of this improvement will make the road from Morse creek to the eastern city limits one of the best in the county, in great contrast to conditions extant but a few years ago.

TAXES EIGHTY PER CENT PAID.

County Treasurer C. L. Babcock reports that the county's 1912 taxes, due this year, have been paid to the extent of over eighty per cent. The collections of 1912 taxes during the month of May totalled $55,935.16. One other county in the state is claiming the distinction of having collected over 80 per cent of its entire 1912 taxes, so Clallam will have to divide the honors.

DREAM JINGLES

(With Apologies to the Real Poets.)

You parents of the little tads
And growing girls and larger lads,
What do you do to help them see,
Only things which from guile are free?
The youngsters like the photo-play,
And it does them good in every way:
If it teaches a moral sound and good
And teaches the lesson that it should.

But, then, on the other hand,
They are just as quick to understand
The play or picture that is shown,
That lacks a mile in moral tone.
We frankly ask you, do you know
That your child gets at picture shows
Something better for every dime
Then bloodshed violence and crime?

If you send them to our show
You quickly answer that you know
For we no picture run nor will
That wrong idea can instill.

FLAG DAY TOMORROW SATURDAY, JUNE 14TH

(From page 1.)

My country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died;
Land of the Pilgrim's pride;
From every mountain side
Let Freedom ring.

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees,
Sweet freedom's song;
Let mortal tongues awake;
Let all that breathe partake;
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

Our father's God! to Thee,
Author of Liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God our King.

All fraternal and other organizations in the city, school children and the public generally are urgently requested to take part in the public observance of the day.

Let us all join in honoring the natal day of our national emblem. Such observance and recognition will nourish in the minds of all the greatness of our nation, inculcate noble citizenship, the principles of civil liberty and be an object lesson to the rising generation. Fling Old Glory to the breeze, displaying it from every flagstaff, public building and home in the city in recognition of this memorable day.

THE MASS MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

A meeting of the citizens of the city called for Monday night at the Opera House for the purpose of considering the grade question was well attended, but in a way proved a farce, in that the method of proceedure had all been arranged in advance and before those present realized what was up had turned the whole matter over to a committee previously named.

The meeting opened with a statement by the chairman of the committee, Dr. McGillivray, to the effect that the grade as established was prohibitive and would cost to construct from Francis street to Pine $120,000 or to Oak $80,000, whereas the grade under the alternate plan would cost but $24,000. All preferred the high grade, but the impossibility of doing anything at this time under the big expense necessary made them favorable to the alternate proposed by Mr. Barkhoff as a way out. We started out with the idea that we were a city and find that we are only a village. City engineer had met with the committee and had given his opinion that the alternate grade provided drainage, but would permit of no cellars. He thought the council wanted to get action on the grade question, but wanted to be advised as to the sentiment of the citizens regarding same.

Mr. Brumfield arose and stated that he did not know that a committee had been named to handle the question, that it was obvious that the question required close study and that desultory discussion cannot settle the matter. He suggested that no further action be taken at this time. He moved that it is the sense of his meeting that the improvement contemplated shall be proceeded with and that the committee be continued to act in conjunction with the council.

The motion carried by a somewhat tacit vote, seemingly before the meeting realized what had been done.

The question then received a very free discussion without coming to any agreement or clearing the matter up in any way.

THE EIGHTH GRADE EXERCISES

The eighth grade exercises this year were rather of a private nature, owing to the prevalence of the measles epidemic. The invitations included only the parents and grandparents of the pupils and the program was arranged in their honor. The recitations and songs all alluded to home and home ties, and "mother" was given a prominent place in all. All the numbers on the program were good and the bright, happy faces of the graduates reflected the pleasure they felt in being able to entertain those to whom they were bound by the closest ties. The girls from Central School all looked very sweet in the simple white dresses they had made themselves, under the patient supervision of Miss Watson. The boys deserve especial mention for the part they took in the musical numbers. All of them joined heartily in the singing, which was particularly pleasing to the audience and to Miss Thomas, the musical instructor. The boys also took their part well in "The Man Without a Country"and seemed to appreciate the beautiful truth set forth in the story.

The parents all expressed themselves as well pleased with the successful ending of the year's work, and the faithful service given by the teachers. There were thirty-three eighth grade graduates in the city and quite a lengthy list from the country. Eight of these came in and received their diplomas with the Angeles graduatess.

THE GRADUATION EXERCISES

Address by Prof. Klemme Well Received. Short Farewell Talk by Superintendent Geisness

The graduating class of 1913 was proud to be the first class to hold its exercises in the handsome auditorium of the new high schol building. The stage was beautifully decorated in the class colors, yellow and green, and pansies, the class flower, were used in profusion. The class motto—B2—was conspiciously placed on the wall at the back of the stage. The class was one of the largest, if not the largest, ever graduated from the school and they made a fine appearance on the stage. Their part in the exercises was the singing of three class songs which were very enjoyable.

The address of the evening was given by Professor Klemme of the Ellensburg Normal, whose subject was "Grip, Grit and Gumption." After a few words of greeting and congratulations to the class, he launched into his interesting subject and gave a most excellent address. While the subject chosen was a serious one, he worked into his talk many apt and humorous stories, which kept the audience laughing a good share of the time.

The message he desired to leave with the young people was that they might get a strong grip on whatever they were going to undertake, remembering that a thing "well begun is half done." Then to have the grit and determination to carry it to a successful issue; the third essential in securing success being Gumption, common sense and tact.

The invocation and benediction were pronounced by Rev. Smith of the Congregational church. Professor Geisness made a short farewell address as this is his last year as city superintendent and instructor and also presented the diplomas to the twelve graduates. He expressed himself as having enjoyed his six years of school work in our city, where his relations with school board, teachers and pupils had been so pleasant, and he was especially proud of the many successful young men and women he had graduated from the Port Angeles High School. The names of the graduates are: Helen Laurens, valedictorian; Anna Hooker, salutatorian; Ross MacKechnie, Evelyn Sheldon, John Lotzgesell, Leah Babcock, Lillian McLeod, Chas. Foster, Irene Wood, Edna Land, Haldora Andresen, Clark Davis.

A quantity of late correspondence and local matter was crowded out this week. The second, third, sixth and seventh pages are printed Thursday morning, The amount we can set is not necessarily limited—we put up eleven columns yesterday—but when we get more local matter set than will go in the remaining four pages there is no use in setting more. There is always sufficient room for home news unless it reaches us too late.

Mrs. A. A. Richardson was operated on at the Port Townsend sanitarium Wednesday morning, having her left arm amputated. This had to be done to keep blood poisoning from going all through her system. She recovered nicely from the operation and slight hopes off her ultimate recovery are now entertained. Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson and Alta Gibson returned from Townsend Thursday after being with their mother most of the week.

A special "Ralley" service will be held at the Methodist church Sunday morning. An effort is being made to secure a full membership and friends of the church. There will be the reception of new members at this service. The choir will sing an anthem and Frank McCarty and wife will sing a duet. A cordial welcome is extended to everybody.

AGRICULTURAL CONTEST WORK.

While on a hurried tour of the various county seats in the Sound counties, Calvin C. Thomason, field organizer of agricultural and industrial contest work under State Superintendent Josephine Preston, called at Port Angeles Saturday. All the counties of the state are being organized on the community center plan. Each two-roomed school or school in a small town is made the center for social and educational work for the surrounding smaller districts and the principal made the supervisory principal. Spelling bees, declamatory contests, agricultural school fairs, etc., are held annually at these centers. In this way it is planned to get a statewide movement looking toward greater efficiency and co-operation in school activities. There are four or five suitable centers in Clallam county for a beginning in this line of work. The state office anticipates a creditable little exhibit from this county at the state fair in Spokane in October.

THE ALUMNI BALL.

The Port Angeles High School Alumni Association gave a grand ball at I. O. O. F Hall, lower floor, Saturday night, as its entertainment to the graduates, members and friends. The hall was beautifully decorated in the graduation class colors and music furnished by the Campbell-Jensen orchestra of 6 pieces. Punch was served by two young ladies to all comers. A big crowd was present and closing time came all too early. The new members were duly initiated during the evening, being compelled to march around the hall additionally clad in grotesque hats and bonnets fearfully and wonderfully made.

Mr. Brower of Blue Mountain is still helping Mr. Fossett clear land.

The O'Brien family and Mrs. Fossett went up to Emerys one day last week to purchase the needed supplies; such as needles, pins, thread, stationery, apron gingham and numerous other small articles that Cecil has for sale.

On June 5, Mrs. Robert Winters was hostess to the F. L. C. There were nine members and one visitor present. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Fossett, president; Mrs. Lottie Winters, secretary; Mrs. Theresa Winters, treasurer.

BLYN.

Mrs. McKinney and children returned last Sunday from Whidby Island, where they spent a very pleasant three weeks' visit with relatives.

At the Sunday school all old officers were unanimously continued in office. The list is as follows: Superintendent, Geo. Gedelman; secretary, Frank Wood; treasurer, Mike Zaccardo; Dencie Gedelman, pianist.

Florence Reyes of district 32 and John Ford successfully passed state examination for eighth grade and received their diplomas last week.

Mike Zaccardo, who has the contract for moving the hall, has commenced operations. Work was not so far advanced but what the hall could be used Saturday night and a goodly number enjoyed dancing after three weeks of abstainance. The music was by Ray Hamilton, violinist; Mrs. McKinney accompanied him on the piano.

People of Blyn are anxiously awaiting the allotment of the reserve timber. Mr. Spearing, manager of the Sequim Logging Company, is one bidder and we hear that Mr. Earles is another.

Mr. Spearing hires those living here—getting outside help only when necessary to make out his crew. Complaints by the employees are almost unknown, so naturally we hope for Mr. Spearing's success.

Mr. Rueben McKinney and son, Earl, have invested in an auto, making four automobiles in all. Louie Jacobsen, the blacksmith at the Sequim having brought one in last week.

Mr. Main is happy in the return of his three daughters, who are home to spend their vacation on the farm.

DE FUCA.

Mr. Carl Laurens of Port Angeles and his family are to be permanent residents here. He has moved some of his furniture to the Troy place, where he will live for the present. It is Mr. Laurens intention to build a fine residence on his farm.

This district has been most fortunate in securing Miss Helen Laurens as teacher for the term, beginning in September.

Mr. Hebisen and his assistant are cutting wood for Mr. Agnew and the school district.

Miss Lillie Burgess is the most popular young lady out here, in fact she is the only one. So popular has she become that her friends won't even let her walk when she goes to visit her neighbors. There are autos, buggies and even wheel barrows at her disposal. It is a regular thing of late to hear the prolonged whistle and the "honk honk" of a certain car. ("I should worry.")

Viola Stewart of Blue Mountain is visiting with Mrs. J. A. Reeve. Mrs. Joe Pellerin was also a visitor at "The Breakers" Sunday.

Mr. Willis Chambers and Miss Chambers spent Tuesday evening at Fernwood. This young lady, by the way, is getting pretty handy with the steering wheel of her dad's auto. She is fast becoming an expert chauffeur.

EDEN

Carl Everette, who has been sick for two weeks, is not so much improved as his friends would wish. The trouble seems much like sunstroke. It was probably received while he was helping shingle their barn. His father and sister Jeanette came down from the Olympic Hot Springs Wednesday to help care for him.

The Epperson children and Elmer Bradshaw, who have been sick with the measles, are now nicely recovered.

Mr. Swede has moved his family from Elwha to Mr. Bradshaw's place, so that they may be near his work.

The Rain or Shine Literary and Debating Society met at Eden school last Saturday night. The program consisted of music, declamation, debate, and singing. Attendance was good.

Miss Josephine Donahoe spent Sunday at home.

The Eden Valley school, Miss Laurie Drumb teacher, closes a successful term on June 13th. Miss Drumb will return to her home in Grand Rapids, Wis.

Mr. Chas. Larson is on the list of jurors and spends part of his time in Port Angeles.

Word has been received here that Mr. Jack Thompson of this place, who has been gone for some time on a visit to his old home in Finland, made only a three days' stay in that country. As he was not a full citizen of U. S. he thought it unwise to remain longer within reach of the Czar's arm. Mr. Thompson is on his way home.

The beauty of the bill is that not one cent of the taxpayers' money will be spent by the commission, the new municipality being absolutely self-supporting after being initiated.

The bill is House Bill No. 651, or Chapter 155 of the Last Session Laws. It provides for the organization of agricultural development districts. Special elections may be called by the county commissioners or upon the petition of 10 per cent of the electors of the county or district. Such district may be enlarged or dimished by the commissioners. Commissioners are elected as county commissioners from same districts if possible, one every year for three year terms. (A synopsis of the law will be given next week.)

Sequim has taken up the work with a view of having an agricultural development district formed to take in the whole county and Mr. Sprague, who was present, stated that Sequim desired the cooperation of the entire county.

It was moved that a committee of five be named with power to enlarge as may be found advisable. The chair asked for suggestion and named K. O. Erickson, chairman; Thos. Geisness, J. L. Aldwell, A. J. Cosser, W. S. Pearce. Cosser was selected by the committe as secretary.

A hearty vote of thanks was then given Mr. Murphine.

AGITATION LIKELY TO CAUSE SERIOUS TROUBLE

Great excitement prevailed on the dock Wednesday, when shortly before the Sol Duc pulled out a number of citizens arrived, escorting, rather forcibly, the I. W. W. leader, who has been inciting the strikes at our various camps. A ticket was purchased for him and he was put aboard the boat and instructed that he would receive a warm reception if he showed up around Port Angeles again. Hardly had this excitement subsided when another man was escorted down and given his walking papers, with instructions not to return.

These two men were the same who were thrown into the bay at Earles mill last week, but evidently their ardor was not cooled for they have been stirring up trouble ever since. They visited the railroad camp Tuesday night and Wednesday morning about thirty of the laborers quit. This was too much for the citizens of Port Angeles and at an indignation meeting, held by courtesy of the Commercial Club in their rooms, a committee of ten was appointed to see that a stop was put to the agitation.

Fred Wright, one of the deported men, came back from Dungeness and spoke from the soap box rostrum at Front and Laurel later Wednesday night, others also speaking.
