$60,000 ROAD CONTRACTS LET

Board Saved $15,000 by Re-advertising for Bids on Morse-to-Seibert's-Creek Road.

Road contracts aggregating close on to $60,000 were let by the county commissioners on Saturday, including permanent highway at Sequim, Morse creek road east four miles, and entire new approaches to the new Elwha bridge, which also contemplates considerable new roadway.

The following bids were received by the board:

Approaches to Elwha bridge;

Dave Govan, $21,600; Cotton, Day & Critchfield, $23,900; Sloane Bros., $22,400. These bids also carry a line of extras, aggregating $600 to $1,000. The bid of Dave Govan was accepted as the lowest and best, his total for the estimated work being $22,065.

Morse creek to Seibert's creek, four and a fraction miles:

Sloane Bros., $20,396.70; Pt. Angeles Construction Co., $22,900; Carl Gylling, $29,750; Fitzgerald, Myers & Myers, $25,567. These bids all carry extras, aggregating $1,790 to $3,000. The bid of Sloane Bros. was accepted at a total estimate of $22,186 or about $4,000 less than the next highest bidder. Sloane Bros. are up sound bidders.

The county board had this matter before them at the last session, when the lowest bid submitted aggregated close to $40,000. New bids were called, and a resurvey ordered. The new survey does not lengthen the road up the east bank of Morse creek, but takes the road farther from the railway, giving it a slight southern turn after leaving the bridge before turning northward up the hill. The board feels they have saved $15,000 to $18,000 by re-advertising.

Permanent highway road at Sequim:

Fitzgerald, Myers & Myers, $12,439.52; Port Angeles Construction Co., $17,750; D. T. Daniels, $13,777.44; Ferch & Gass, $15,448.06. Contract awarded the former with extras for culverts, Fitzgerald & Myers bid being some $1,300 lower than the next higher bid of Daniels.

Altogether the board is much pleased with the contracts and bids submitted.

BAD BRUSH FIRES ON LOGGED-OFF LANDS

One Near Crescent Logging Camp Gave Men Much Trouble Last Week.

The exceedingly dry weather of the last few weeks has kept the Crescent Logging Camp busy putting out small blazes that seemed to spring up from no cause. On the night of July 30, one of these small fires, which had apparently been extinguished satisfactorily, smoldered in the dry and rotten logs until it developed into a good-sized blaze. About 3 a. m. it had attained such a size that the camp was called out to fight it down. Thursday morning, after lying quiet, it again sprang up, and fanned by the wind, it spread rapidly through dried brush and old stumps until it had covered a large portion of the logged-off land. All day and night men were detailed off to keep the fire from spreading into the green timber and from burning the bridges of the company's tracks. Working strenuously and doing without sleep, the men managed to save the bridges and all the equipment with the exception of one saw, at the same time succeeding in confining the fire within the logged-off tracts.

Saturday morning the two fire wardens appeared on the scene to assist, but at this time their help was scarcely needed as everything was well under control. The smoke from the burning brush and small trees led people at a distance to imagine that a much larger fire was raging than was actually the case. Work in the woods which was interrupted for a short time is now going one again in full force.

Another fire has been burning near the Little River Logging Company's Camp this week.

WORLD'S MORTAR BOOM RECORD BROKEN AT WORDEN.

Two Hits Out of Seven Shots at Blind Target Nine Miles Distant in Discovery Bay.

Secretary of War Daniels and Major Gen. Wood, who are making a tour of the coast inspecting forts and fortifications, were exceedingly enthusiastic over the exceptional skill shown by the gunners at Worden in a little exhibition practice Tuesday afternoon.

The targets, triangular with a 12-foot base, were being towed at a goodly speed over in Discovery Bay, nine miles away and out of sight behind a long point of land. Yet two of the seven booms, hurled more than three miles in the air, lighted within fifty feet of the target. Either of the shots would have destryoed a war vessel. "It was the most remarkable work I have ever seen," exclaimed Garrison, and it was no mere fulsome flattery, for the world's record had just been broken.

ELWHA RANCHERS TO PLANT LOGANS

Fifty Acres Pledged So Far, with More to Follow. In Line for Rapid Development.

Another long step toward the development of the fruit growing possibilities of this section was taken this week, when Ed Halberg, owner of 265 acres and Walter Goodwin, owner of 160 acres of lower Elwha bottom lands, engaged C. N. Noyes, of Seattle, to assist them in the sale of their lands in small tracts of five or ten acres each to prospective settlers and berry raisers.

As a preliminary step, the gentlemen have been circulating an agreement among the owners of property in the valley by which each rancher is to pledge himself to plant one or more acres to loganberries and other small fruits by the close of the present year. Some eighteen or twenty have already signed up.

There is no question whatever as to the success of the fruit growing venture once a sufficient number can be induced to plant the vines. While some little acreage has already been devoted to the loganberry in this vicinity, notably by McDonald, Guthrie and Gale, the movement has needed some organized company having an enthusiastic man at its head, to get the ranchers lined up and brought into an effective organization. Over a hundred of those in the small farming communities tributary to Angeles have, expressed themselves as favorable to taking up the new industry and doubtless all of them would so do, once assured of concerted action.

The sale of these and adjacent lands to actual settlers for intensive farming will put the Elwha valley and Dry creek region, one of the most desirable locations on the peninsula, in line for rapid improvement and development.

THE AGREEMENT,

We, the undersigned, residents of the Elwha Valley, hereby mutually agree with each other to plant in logan berries or other small fruit before December 31 1913, the amount of land set opposite our names:

Walter Goodwin	5 Acres
Charles N. Noyes	3 Acres
Edwin A. Halberg	5 Acres
Clyde Goodwin	3 Acres
J. C. McDonald	3 Acres
C. Lundquist	2 Acres
John Delaney	1 Acre
Ralph W. Sisson	5 Acres
H. Singhose	2 Acres
A. A. Gould	1½ Acres
N. W. Sturdevant	5 Acres
H. Goodwin	5 Acres
John Leonard	5 Acres
Earl Goodwin	5 Acres

PRIVATE WATER SYSTEM AT PRESSED BRICK WORKS

J. Krumrie, of the Port Angeles Pressed Brick Co., is still further improving the plant by the addition of a private water system from Ennis creek, elevating the water to the plateau with one of the largest sized rams. The plant will cost something like $1,500, and will enable them to make brick throughout the year.

EARLING SAYS ITS THE MILWAUKEE

Seattle Times Quotes Earling as Making First Official Statement Regarding New Road.

By May 1, 1914, if not before, the new Olympic Peninsula line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway will be completed from Port Angeles to the vast timber belt thirty-odd miles west of that city and will be in position to deliver to the Puget Sound Mills & Timber company's immense new plant at Port Angeles 350,000 feet of logs each day. The terminus of the new Milwaukee line on tide water at its east end has not been determined, and may be at Oak Bay or some other point in that vicinity.

East of Port Angeles the line will strike a point on the shore of Lake Crescent where a temporary Western terminus will be established. When the line will be projected to traverse the peninsula to the westward, reaching the Ozette Lake country and the Pacific Ocean is a matter to be settled in the future.

President A. J. Earling, of the Milwaukee system summarized the work of his company in the rich Olympic Peninsula as outlined in the foregoing, when to The Times, of Seattle, he gave the first official statement of the plans of his company touching the development of northwestern Washington. The work is being prosecuted vigorously by the Erickson Construction Company and the building of the first real railroad in the Olympic Peninsula country by a transcontinental system, to the residents of that section is a matter of the greatest importance.

President Earling more than a year ago personally visited the peninsula country, traveling from Port Townsend to Port Angeles and thence to Lake Crescent and Sol Duc Hot Springs, on the Sol Duc river. He has repeatedly declared his appreciation of the tremendous value of the untouched and undeveloped natural resources of the country back of Port Angeles.

The president of the Milwaukee system said today at the company's general offices in the White building that his present visit to the coast is merely a matter of routine business. He repeated the prophecies of other Milwaukee officials concerning the bumper cereal crops of the Dakotas, Montana and Washington in the various grain growing districts tapped by the system.

He said: "There are plenty of reasons why times should be good and the farmers of the Pacific Northwest are in an especially fortunate condition owing to the big crops."

Vice-President H. R. Williams, C. A. Goodnow, assistant to the president: G. P. Earling, son of the president of the Milwaukee, and F. Houseman of New York are in the Earling party.

A FOUR ROLLER IRONER.

Heavy Machinery Necessary to Meet Demands at Angeles Steam Laundry.

Mr. Woolley of the Port Angeles Steam Laundry is having installed this week a four-roller Hagan flat work ironing machine. It is possible with this ironer for two girls to feed into the machine one hundred and twenty feet of sheets per minute and two girls to fold the same from the opposite sides, whereas the old single roller machine would require six times the length of time for the same work. For all smaller articles three girls will be required to properly feed the machine. More work can be accomplished on the new machinery in two hours than by the old machine in twenty four hours.

Mr. Woolley says that his laundry business has increased so rapidly during the past six months that the installing of up-to-date machinery became imperative.

The Gate City Machine Shop has been repairing the big bell bouy recently brought up from Cape Flattery by the lighthouse tender, another bell having been anchored at that point.

READY TO CONSTRUCT FISH HATCHERY AT LAKE

Will Be Located on Barnes Creek and Most Modern in the State of Washington.

Deputy Fish Commissioner Sherwood of Bellingham, arrived in Angeles Tuesday. He went out to Lake Crescent with a surveyor to arrange the construction of the hatchery and also dwelling house for the superintendent's residence on Barnes' creek. It is proposed to make this hatchery the best in the state and the dwelling house will be up-to-date in every detail. It is to be 28x54 feet and the two buildings will cost about $5,000, leaving $2,000 for maintainance as the state appropriation was $7,000. Mr. Sherwood is to be superintendent of construction.

The mayor and clerk being out of the city and only 4 councilmen in attendance Tuesday evening, only minor matters were considered.

CEMENT BROUGHT ON CAR FERRY

Ahead of Schedule on Work at Olympic Power Co.'s Dam. Everything Going Smoothly.

The first railway car barge, the Port Blakely, ever seen in Port Angeles bay, was tied up at the City Dock this week, while five Great Northern cars containing a shipment of special cement for use under water were unloaded and a return shipment of shingles taken on.

Several teams were put to work hauling the cement to the Olympic Power Co.'s dam and the big mixer started up Wednesday. The sheet piling and caisson work is well under way, having been kept up night and day. In fact, the officials say that work is going on more rapidly and smoothly than at any time in the progress of that undertaking, so that they are actually ahead of their schedule, which would indicate completion on time or even at an earlier date.

RESERVE TIMBER TO BE SOLD.

Seventy Million Feet Tributary to the Little River Logging Co.'s Railroad.

Supervisor R. L. Fromme, of the Olympic national forest, has announced the proposed sale of approximately 70,000,000 feet board measure of standing timber in the national forest about six miles back from Port Angeles on the watersheds of Little river and Ennis creek.

The timber involved may be logged under one railroad construction, says Supervisor Fromme. It consists of 47,460,000 board feet of live and dead Douglas fir, 7,210,000 board feet of live and dead Western red cedar, 15,560,000 board feet of Western hemlock, 220,000 board feet of Amabilis fir and 286,000 linear feet of Western red cedar poles. The timber is divided into two compartments of 20,000,000 and 50,000,000 feet each, the minimum stumpage prices in the two being respectively: Douglas fir, $165 and $1.80 per thousand feet; red cedar, $2 and $2.50 per thousand feet for hemlock and Amabilis fir. Supervisor Fromme estimates that $112,000 will go into the United States treasury as the result of these sales, and that $28,000 of this amount will be returned to the state for school and road purposes.—P. I.

Judge Ralston was here briefly Wednesday, attending to a few court matters. In company with Mr. Dayton, head of the I. O. O. F. of the state, he left for Forks and the west coast. It is their intention to walk through to Moclips, the northwestern terminus of the Northern Pacific on the borders of the Quiniault reservation. This will practically be the only vacation Judge Ralston will have this year, he having to take up a jury term in Townsend August 19. Court will convene here again September 8.

BOYS CAMPING AT PIRATES' COVE

Supervisor Anderson Giving Them Advantages of Y.M.C.A. Summer Camp.

The ice cream social given at the Lincoln Heights school on Tuesday evening by the parents and friends interested in the Play Ground Association, brought out a large crowd and everybody had a good time. Early in the evening Supervisor Anderson played with the children on the grounds and gave some demonstrations to show the parents something of the work he was endeavoring to do for the benefit of the boys and girls. The enthusiasm and interest taken by the parents and children on both Lincoln Heights and Pine Hill has been very gratifying and encouraging to the officers of the Play Ground Association and splendid results are anticipated for next summer's work. Now that the bridges have united the different sections of the city, so long separated, it very much simplifies the problem of getting together on all civic and social movements for the betterment of our little city.

It was pleasing to note how many from the east side of town attended the social Tuesday evening and the committee reports twenty-four dollars cleared above expenses, as all the cakes, berries and part of the ice cream were donated. This money will be turned into the general fund and will be greatly appreciated as the money has been coming in to the treasury rather slowly and expenses have been a little more than at first anticipated, as it has been found necessary to hire an assistant at both playgrounds. Mr. Anderson left Wednesday morning with a party of seventeen boys to walk out to Lake Crescent, where they will camp at Pirate's Cove for about ten days. They expect to do some mountain climbing, fishing and rowing and will also take a hike to the Sol Duc Springs. It is while on these short camping trips that Mr. Anderson expects to do the most lasting good for the boys, by giving them talks and getting near to them on important matters of life and morals in which most boys are apt to get too little training at home and school. His object is not only to instill a love of nature and clean outdoor sports in the hearts of the boys, but to also instill a love of fair play, one to the other, and to create higher ideals of life spiritually, morally and physically. If he succeeds in doing this with only two or three boys, who will not say the time and money was well spent? During Mr. Anderson's absence Miss Lorena Ester will have charge of the Lincoln Heights play ground; so during her hours parents may feel perfectly safe in letting their little girls and boys go to the grounds. On Mr. Anderson's return Miss Ester will act as his assistant until school opens. During the warm weather of the past few weeks the boys have immensely enjoyed the swimming pool up Valley street and Mr. Anderson has taken some of the smaller children wading down at the beach. The Play Ground Association needs your assistance and encouragement, so if you have not already donated your dollar for membership fees, see some of the officers at once and become a member. Your children are welcome at the grounds whether you are a member or not, but being one entitles you to a vote and voice in all the proceedings of the association. Miss Gertrude Willson will have charge of the Central school pla y grounds until Mr. Anderson returns, and special attention will be given all the little folks who come during her hours.

PUTTING IN HYDRAULIC PRESS.

Messrs. Mackenheimer are putting a 150-ton hydraulic press in the Gate City Machine Shop this week, which will enable them to take wheels off shafts and do easily a whole lot of work that has been difficult heretofore. A foundation will have to be put in under the machine as it is very heavy, one casting alone weighing 5,000 pounds.

The new Ford prices, $635 for a 1914 Touring car and $585 for a torpedo runabout, are most attractive and will doubtless result in increased sales of this popular automobile.

ONE AND A HALF LIGHTS TO THE FRONT FOOT.

Hall & Winter Have Installed Best Plant in City in Morganroth's New House.

With 35 globes, 17 switches and electric iron circuit in a house 26 feet square, there can be no doubt that Chris Morganroth's new cottage at Eleventh and Oak will have the most complete lighting system of any in Port Angeles. And the workmanship is pointed to with pride by Hall & Winter, who have just completed it in accordance with the Seattle architect's plans, who also provided a hot water heating system and other features, making it up-to-date in all respects.

The new Filion residence on Lincoln Heights, Fulmer's undertaking parlors, DeSwarte's new office, have also been wired by Hall & Winter since completing their contract at the Olympic Hotel. Next week they go to Sequim to equip the new Babcock store building. Their work is evidently meeting with approval from every customer.

First it was the tariff bill, then the currency bill, now the greatest of all is Bill Bryan's living bill.

It is a waste of time these days for any man or set of men, no matter how powerful, to advocate any form of government which gets very far away from the people, its source of authority.

Ambassador Page remarked the other day that the United States is dominated by English, Irish and Scotch blood. He should try to run for office in Minnesota and get the proper correction applied to his ideas.

The young son of the late John Jacob Astor proposes to build a home for children who are weakened by sickness or lack of proper care, as a testimonial to his father. This is eminently fitting for John Jacob Astor died a death that is worthy of memorial. He stood back when the Titanic went down that the women and children might be saved by the life boats. He went to death that others might live. His action was a credit to American manhood.

An increase in the valuation of standing timber in Chehalis county of about $10,000,000 will be the result of the action taken by the board of equalization unless the decision is reversed by later consideration. The board decided to cite every owner of timber land in the county to appear and show cause why the valuation should not be increased. It means an increase of about $1,500,000 in the value of the holdings held by the Weyerhauser Timber company and will aggregate an increase of $10,000,000 in the timber values of the entire county.

James Hood, delegate from Aberdeen to the Grand Lodge B. P. O. E. in session in Rochester, N. Y., last month, says it is doubtful if the Elks will ever hold another meeting east of the Mississippi. The delegates found the contrast between the Portland meeting of last year and the Rochester meeting this year so great that they opposed to Eastern sessions in the future. The next meeting will be at Denver, and he thinks that Seattle is almost sure to capture the 1915 convention. The Easterners want to come west, says Mr. Hood in addition, they like the brand of entertainment meted out in the West and the spirit of good fellowship that goes with it.

THE RIGHTS OF THE PUBLIC.

The doctrine of private property was carried to such absurd lengths, especially in England and the United States, that if there had been any practicable means of sequestrating the atmosphere, legislation long ago would have vested title to the air in private owners. By Michigan law, ownership of the bank of a navigable river carries title to the bed of the stream out to the middle thread. Thus a waterpower corporation owning a strip of land twenty-five hundred feet long by a hundred feet wide, bordering the American side of St. Mary's River, claimed in effect a property right in the river itself, and demanded three and a half million dollars' compensation when Congress ousted it in the interests of navigation.

The United States Supreme Court in a recent decision fully admits the private owner's technical title to the bed of the river, but refuses to allow any damages whatever, because Congress not only has alsolute control over navigable waters for the purpose of navigation, but is the sole judge of what the purposes of navigation require. Thus the private owner's technical title to the bed of the stream is of no avail when Congress declares that certain things shall or shall not be done in the interests of navigation.

It makes no difference whether the interests of navigation actually require what Congress says they do or not. Congress is the sole judge and the courts cannot interfere. The private owner, with his technical title to the riverbed, is in the position of one who holds the deed to a lot but has no voice whatever in its disposition.

The decision strengthens the Government in its effort to control waterpowers. It also illustrates the growing opinion that the public—as well as private individuals—may have property rights.—Saturday Post.

Senator Bryan stated last Saturday that his request to congress to appropriate $100,000 for bringing destitute Americans out of Merico had no connection with any policy the Administration may evolve in dealing with the Mexican situation.

"The statements aiming to put a scare-head construction on the request for this appropriation are entirely without excuse, and can not be explained on any theory consistent with interest in the public welfare," said Bryan. "In furnishing aid to any indigent person desiring to leave Mexico, this government is simply doing what it does at any time when American lives are in danger by insurrection and there is no reason why anybody should attempt to misconstrue it."

Secretary Bryan's request was generally interpreted as one step in the Administration's plan for dealing with the Mexican problems.

Far from being regarded as a preliminary to intervention — which President Wilson has told his friends on various occasions as being out of the question—the request for funds is really thought to be the forerunner of a policy of non-interference. From the first the president has believed that in crises in turbulent republics the single solicitude of the American Government should be the protection of lives and property.

A Minnesota marriage has been perfected under bond. The father of the groom pledges a $700 farm that his son will not loaf, gamble, drink or play pool; and the father of the bride putting a cash bond to equal value of the farm that the young lady will make a modest wife, will not gossip, run around with other men and will cook to her husband's satisfaction. That looks like keeping the peace. And the idea is valuable. It carries out the well established commercial principal of " satisfaction or your money back." Why not? It ought to be hard sailing hereafter for unguaranteed brides and grooms.—Aberdeen World.

What is the use of sneering at the lemon? You can generally tell whether it is good by the looks, and that is more than any one can do with a melon.

HOLLANDERS MUST EMIGRATE.

Will Come to Pacific Northwest in Great Numbers When Canal Is Opened.

L. A. Dobbelsteen, of Bois-le-Duc, Holland, and Father C. M. Aken, of Whitefish, Montana, are making arrangements for the arrival of Holland farmers, who, they declare, will come in large numbers to the Pacific Northwest with the opening of the Panama canal.

Discussing the plans for colonization, Father Van Aken said:

"Holland people must emigrate.

"The country has one person to the acre as against seventeen for Washington to the square mile. Holland is worked so hard in agriculture that only the rocks escape cultivation. If the Holland farmer can get a plow into his land he will plant the seed by hand, one seed at a time, for with him there can be no waste. The burden of taxation is increasingly heavy and there is nothing for him to do but to come to America.

"We have no special colony in mind at this time,but our people are coming in great numbers as soon as the Panama Canal is opened and we are arranging to make the entrance to America easy for them. We have a colony around Kimberly, Wis. Our first duty is to install our people in paper mills, where the men work for six months or a year to earn their way and pick up a smattering of English. Then they move out at once to the farms and new arrivals take their place in the mills.

"We have determined to locate a colony on the North Pacific coast. We expect to place our men in the lumber mills in lieu of paper mills and later to install them on farms which they may select as best suited to their tastes. The people of Holland settled on cut-over, or logged-off lands of Wisconsin because they could buy the land cheap, and they want this kind of land in Washington. Those who know the industrious, frugal nature of the Hollander will be pleased to learn that they are going to settle in large numbers."

GOOD ROADS AID EDUCATION.

Charles H. Davis, president of the National Highway association, made an excellent point in favor of highway improvement in an address before the Society of Promotion of En gineering Education at Minneapolis. Mr. Davis maintained that good roads were a most important factor in the matter of good schools and further that good roads would more than pay their cost by increasing the value of the farm lands of the country. He said: "The value of the farm lands and buildings in the United States is $35,000,000,000. Two million miles of improved highways will increase the value of the lands $10,000,000,000, or about one-third of their present value." Good roads pay for themselves by increased values, the saving of time and decreased transportation expenses. This is a fact that has long been conceded. Mr. Davis' point that good roads foster education is new and is well taken.

An apparently inspired statement in regard to the British government's decision not to take part in the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco appeared August 2 in Westminister Gazette, drawn forth by the caustic comment of the American press cabled from America.

The statement earnestly avers that Great Britain's refusal to participate has no diplomatic significance and is based purely on commercial grounds. The Gazette says:

"We do not mix up our diplomatic negotiations and our business in the way suggested. Americans may be easy in their minds that our refusal on this occasion has no other reasons behind it than those of expense and the impossibility of getting together a worthy collection at a place so distant as San Francisco. We hope and expect that any diplomatic differences we have with the American Government about the Panama Canal will be settled long before 1915 when the exposition is to be held."

It was developed in police court at St. Paul that the porters on the Pullman sleeping cars average about $60 per month from tips and the company guages the wages according to the tips. Of course the tips are more on some runs than others. By a recent report of the Pullman company they had 6,229 cars in operation with a porter to each car. If the tips average $60 per month a car it shows that the public in the course of a year pays out $4,484,880, or about four per cent on the stock of the company. The public is always an easy victim when you know how to work it right.

Men are sometimes tempted by the devil but they are not as a rule the busy ones.

NEWSPAPER COMPLAINS.

Wearies of Endless Stream Wanting Something for Nothing.

Now is the season of our discontent. So—on this particular point—are other seasons. We have company in all the other newspapers in this glorious land.

A newspaper's great staple is its advertising space. Without it, and the receipts it brings, there would be no newspapers. Yet this important fact never seems to reduce the long line of well-meaning people who stream into every sanctum every day asking that this staple be parceled out to them free.

Of course they don't ask for the space of the advertising columns. What they want is the news columns. And they want it to print the advance announcements that divers strawberry festivals, music recitals, rummage sales, amateur theatrical performances, organization suppers, dances and numerous other things will be given for money, the receipts to be devoted to some worthy cause. The point lies in the money. The newspaper publication is of no value to them save as it attracts money—barring, of course, such satisfaction as it may afford the publishers to contribute to a movement of which they approve.

We have no doubt that many people are asked to give and do give freely to these many causes. The newspaper is usually expected to contribute automatically. Moreover, the newspaper is only a human institution. It cannot give to everything and still pay its bills, and it cannot select a list of favored beneficiaries without doing injustice to others which may be equally deserving. This is a feature which seldom appeals to the people who would not think of asking for free musicians, free theatres, free strawberries or any other commodity necessary to their admirable ventures, but who expect to be given the newspaper's stock in trade as a matter of course.

We offer the foregoing as a matter of explanation of attitude as much as a hint to those good people who are coming in here from now until the end of time to raise their eyebrows when the sad truths are set before them.—Hartford Times.

Whom We Help.

When some people are asked to do something for this town they seem to think they are asked to do something for somebody else.

Well, they are. But they can't do something for somebody else without doing something for themselves also.

The school taxes you pay help educate other men's children. But other men help educate yours.

Other people are doing things for you all the time. If other men hesitated you would suffer.

Since the beginning men have lived in communities. Why? So they could help each other.

The more we help each other the more we get good out of the community.

Help. That gives you the right to make the other fellow help also.

DID YOU EVER NOTICE?

When a hen lays an egg there is a hell of a noise.

The hen advertises. Hence a demand for hens' eggs instead of ducks'.

THE PURSE SEINER AND THE SOCKEYE

By William Slavens McNutt.

A picturesque and industrially interesting feature of the great quadrennial big sockeye salmon run which occurs once in every four years in Puget Sound Waters, is the purse seiner. Eighteen years ago there were but a few of them on the Sound, operating in rude forty foot skiffs oared by a crew of eight men. This summer on the salmon banks in the Straits of San Juan De Fuca there were between 250 and 300 schooners, averaging fifty feet in length and of an average valuation of $4,500.

The crews work on shares and some of the stories of quick earnings told me while I was on the banks this summer during the run recall tales of the Alaska gold fields.

The members of the crew of the high boat at the big run four years ago made over $1,300 apiece for the season lasting less than two months! It is not an unusual thing for a crew during the big run to make one haul worth $700 to $800. At the longest the haul will not take more than two hours.

The purse seiners are Austrians for the most part, with a sprinkling of Italians and a few Scandinavians. A large proportion of them are newly arrived laborers, speaking little English and when one realized that their average individual earnings at any other work could not be above two dollars a day, it is easy to imagine what the big run means to them.

Their earnings this year will probably not be as great as they were four years ago for the reason that the banks are overcrowded with seine boats. I have stood on the point at Kanaka Bay on the southwestern shore of San Juan Island and counted more than two hundred boats up and down the shore line, They carry nets from fifteen to eighteen feet in length and the confusion resultant when that many boats carrying nets of that length attempt to operate on a sma'l surface of water where the salmon happen to be thickest may be imagined. Great as the run is, except at its very height, there are not enough fish to fill the great maws of all those nets spread up and down the banks for a distance of ten of twelve miles and out into the straits for three or four miles.

However, on Sunday, August 3rd, one seine boat carrying a crew of seven men took eight thousand fish in one haul. It was estimated that three thousand more escaped over the corks. The fish were selling at fifteen cents each so that one haul brought $1200 to be divided equally between seven men after the boat and gear were paid their allotted four shares. The members of the crew made out of that one haul $100 each. The haul was made in the morning and the boat, after unloading on the cannery tender, went out again. At this writing she has not returned. If it should have made another catch she will have broken a record.

While these boats are owned by the captain, many if not most of them, are built by money loaned by the canneries. The traps sometimes make great catches and then again they get nothing at all. Men will know all about the minds of women long before they will be able to forecast the course of the fish. If the fish strike in where the traps are located—well and good. If they don't—and they don't as often as they do—the trap loses. And the cannery, which must get the fish during the short time they are running in the Sound, also loses if dependent on that trap. But the purse seiner is not under the handicap of immobility. He carries his trap on the stern of his boat and if the fish don't run where he is, he cranks up his engine and goes where they are. For the reason of their surety of a catch the purse seiners have been encouraged by the canneries and aided in building more and better boats until this year the banks are overcrowded and the fishermen mourn for the good old days when there was room for all.

Each man of every crew brings to the banks with him his barrel of wine. Some of the men live aboard the boat and many tent ashore at Kanaka Bay, where there is a veritable canvas city during the short season of the big run. The purse seiner's Sunday begins at four o'clock Sunday morning. When the fish are running and everyone is making big money, this is the time of much joy and more wine ashore. The fishermen gather on the beach, sing their native songs, dance, drink, stage wrestling bouts and cockfights and hold big carnival generally. Be it said to the credit of these newcomers to our shores that in all the time I spent among them at Kanaka Bay, I saw not one fight and the only horrible example of bestial drunkenness was furnished by a nondescript beach comber who made me feel like changing my name by claiming he was Irish.

LOGANBERRY HAS VERY GREAT POSSIBILITY

Juice Especially Good for Jelly or as a Beverage.

Loganberry growers who have very limited markets and those whose crops are in danger from continuous wet weather, will be interested in methods of preserving and storing as outlined by Professor C. I. Lewis, head of the division of Horticulture at the Oregon Agricultural College. Professor Lewis thinks that most of this year's crop will be evaporated, and therein lies a great danger. If the product is carameled and charred as has happened in the past, it is hard and unpalatable and will cause a disliking for dried loganberries, thus limiting the demand. It is just as necessary, he tells us, to select the fruit carefully for evaporating as it is to be careful in drying. Unripe berries should be thrown out and only good fruit used. The berries should then be graded, not on size as in prunes, but on quality.

As to home and local use the professor says: "We should try to increase the home consumption of the loganberry by calling attention to its possibilities. Either canned or evaporated it is good for pies and sauces. Its jelly is hard to beat. Equal parts of loganberry juice and apple juice mixed and boiled down the following winter are said to make excellent jelly of fine flavor and consistency. The juice should be used more largely by confectioners and housewives. Generally where a family puts up one crate of it this year they will put up four or five crates of it the following years. As a beverage it is fast growing in popularity and may be prepared easily as follows: Place the berries in a dish with just enough water to cover the bottom of the dish to keep the berries from burning. Heat the berries, stirring occasionally with a wooden spoon or paddle but do not let them boil. Take from the stove, strain through jelly bag, mix juice with one-third its measure of sugar, return to stove, and again heat to boiling point only. Seal at once in fruit jars or bottles. For drinking, this syrup should be diluted with four or five times its measure of water. It is a splendid beverage to take with meals and the children find it a great treat. The time will probably come when entire train loads of berries will be grown solely for juice purposes.

"Of course the berries should be gathered close when rains are frequent, but even though berries become mouldy, there is no need to throw them away. Mould is merely a vegetable growth as truly as lettuce, and unless the berry is decaying, it will still make, even though mouldy, a good product in either juices or jells."

Professor Lewis proved his point by handing a sample of juice to several persons, which was pronounced excelent. He then informed them that it was made from mouldy berries.—Aberdeen World.

A gold rush to the newly found fields in the Shushanna district in Alaska has started from Seattle and is almost as great as that of the old Klondike days in 1897. The Seattle steamship offices are daily thronged with would-be prospectors and old-time Alaskans who have again fallen victims to the gold fever. Thousands of dollars worth of supplies are being purchased and the freights accommodations of the ships sailing north taxed to their limit. When the first news of the new strike was sent out there was much incredulity, but since then verifying reports have been received and the stampede to the north began. Greater even than the rush from Seattle is that from the various other camps of Alaska, particularly from those districts where drought has brought a halt to mining.

THE UNITED STATES SENATORSHIP

Is An Extra Session of the Legislature Imparative to Settle the Matter of Direct Election?

Governor Lister is not going to call a special session of the legislature unless he is forced to do so. In view of what transpired at the last session of the legislature we hardly blame him, but political expediency may interpose and compel him to change his mind, says the Megaphone in commenting on the subject. The election of a United States senator to succeed Wesley L. Jones will be the big fight next year, and the people will be eager to name the man in an open contest, and unless congress makes some provision for the election of senators in states where the legislatures adjourned prior to the ratification of the amendment to the federal constitution providing for direct election of senators, the only way the people of Washington can elect their senator is to have a statute written covering the point, and this would necessitate a special session. As a matter of fact the last two senators elected in this state were the people's choice, although the legislature had to ratify that choice. Both Jones and Poindexter were elected by legislatures pledged to support the party choice for senator, and no man in either branch of the legislature ignored the voice of the party he represented. It will be recalled that the candidates for the legislature were required to file a statement with their declarations of candidacy to the effect that they would support the party choice for senator, and any candidate who failed to file such declaration was summarily dealt with at the polls. Instead of electing the party choice in future the people's choice will be elected, but Jones and Poindexter were the choice of the people, regardless of party.

In a letter addressed to members of the Washington delegation in congress, Gov. Lister urges action by the congress now in session. After reviewing the facts that the direct election amendment to the United States constitution had not been ratified when the Weshington legislature adjourned, he says:

"I presume a great many other states are in exactly the same condition as is the state of Washington, each desiring not to be under the necessity of calling a special session of the legislature for the purpose of making it possible to elect United States senators by a direct vote of the people in 1914, without the necessity of calling a special session, and in this I believe the great majority of the people of the state agree.

"I do not know whether it will be possible for congress to pass a law doing away with the necessity of calling a special session. It might be, however, that a law could be passed providing for the election of the next senators in states where action has not already been taken, along lines followed and under the same conditions that now control the election of congressmen.

"I am writing this letter in the hope that it will be possible for the members of congress from our state to work with the membership from other states in like position, and if possible, formulate some method obviating the necessity of a special session.

"I feel, I can assure you, if anything can be done it will meet with the approval of the great majority of the people in our state, and I presume the same condition exists in other states."

Governor Ernest Lister has also sent personal letters to Speaker Champ Clark and Senator Kern, urging their co-operation.

Senator W. L. Jones, who is to be a candidate to succeed himself next year, introduced a bill of this character in the senate soon after the special session convened. Later he stated that he doubted whether or not congressional action could be procured or whether it would be effective if had. Senator Jones at that time stated he believed an extra legislative session would be required, as the state and not congress have control of election machinery of this kind. The constitutional amendment itself imposes upon the states the duty of providing for the formal election machinery.—Saturday Review.

COURT HOUSE NOTES.

All who were not figuring on purchasing some left overs, or denied claims, will rejoice with the claimants on the customs house reserve just south of the city on receiving all they claimed. Only four lots remain to be sold, these lying in the gulch, and for which nobody put in an application.

Under the ruling these could possibly have been purchased by the Brants, who cleared them, and have used them for some years. In the hearings, and it is said in the law governing the taking of these lots, there was and is nothing said about residence. But those who claimed in good faith on January 1, 1910, had the preference right, and those who claimed more than one, two or three lots, get away with it because at the time they set up their claim the land was not divided into lots and no limits placed thereon.

The losers in the deal are those who were unfortunate enough to have their holdings catch the eye of the visiting officials and taken for government purposes, undesirable as some may be. It is now probable a movement will be started to get the government to seek a more desirable location.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis warns the public that no less than five hundred fradulent "cures" for consumption have found victims in this country within the past few years, at a profit of fully $50,000,000 to the exploiters. The association makes it plain that no specific cure for tuberculosis has been discovered, except the well-tried method of fresh air, rest and good food.—Youths' Companion.

LOGANS AND THE FRUIT DRIER

J. J. McDonald of Salem, Oregon, Writes "Better Fruit" of His Experiences.

This is a very busy time for us who are in the loganberry business, with the stringing of wires, setting poles and getting ready to take up plants and put canes on the wires, which I always leave down until spring, feeling safer from frosts and freezing as was the case about four years ago. Nearly all those who put their canes up in the fall lost their crop that season. My vines or canes lay on the ground just as we left them after taking off the old canes after the picking season and were protected from the cold and freezing that happened that winter, but which may not occur again for some time. However, by mine being left down I got a crop of over four and a half tons per acre of green fruit, giving me over three tons of the dried product. That year I sold for twenty-two and one-half cents per pound. I have never sold for less than that price. Last year I sold for twenty-five cents and some for twenty-six cents. Last year the canneries paid four cents for all they bought, which, I think, is a price that should be an inducement to all who have small tracts of land to set out to loganberries as well as other small fruits, such as strawberries, raspberries, etc. Now, as I stated that four cents per pound green is a good price, or even three and one-half cents, which I think will be about what they will pay this year from what I can learn so far, but even at three and one half cents per pound, figuring four and one-half to five and one-half tons per acre, one can readily see that it is a profitable crop to grow.

Now as to drying. I have always dried my berries regardless of what the price green has been for more than one season. First, if they are dried I do not have to put them on the market at any time to save them—they will keep. If anything happens with the cannery that they are overstocked for a day or more the green berries will have to be dumped out, as they mold very soon in crates. A second reason for drying is that the loganberry does not get the flavor or sugar in it until it is ripe, and then is when it weighs most and when the canneries want them. I figure that it almost pays for the drying by the extra weight from the time most of them pick for the cannery and up to the time we pick for drying. They should be thoroughly ripe for drying, but not so ripe that they begin to get soft. I have been drying loganberries for four years and have never lost one crate of berries in that time. We began drying in what is known as the "Stack Drier." We were unfortunate the first year. Our drier burned down during the prune drying season. We had saved our berry crop and about half of the prune crop. After the fire I began looking at different evaporators to find, if possible, something more economical in the way of fuel and labor. By spending some time looking over the different kinds of driers I found one in Polk county that I thought came the nearest my idea for both prunes and loganberries. I decided the long tunnel was the thing I wanted. We had to have a drier by the first of July for the berry crop. Several of my neighbors tried to discourage me in the long-tunnel drier, telling me we could not get the draft, but I went on and built a four tunnel, the tunnels being 34 feet long, holding 120 trays, each ten trays high and twelve trays long. My trays are 31 by 27 inches, but that is a matter of choice. They can make the tunnels for any size tray they want. I put my trays in the tunnel the long way of the tray and crosswise of the tunnel so as to get twelve in the length of the tunnel and ten high. They can be twelve or fourteen high if one likes, but we do not like lifting too high, and I think 120 to the tunnel with four tunnels, making 460 trays, leaving twenty-eight inches for finish at the lower end of the tunnel, is very convenient. This space can also be utilized for keeping up all dobies in prune drying, and for any extra stuff one wants to dry when the tunnels are all full. In those extra cells we dry pears, apples, beans, cherries, corn or anything that we want to dry, not interfering with the regular tunnels at all, and that makes room for 508 trays, which I figure that two men on the shift can handle and do right. In the prune season we average through the season about one and one-quarter tons every twenty-four hours, which I figure is enough for four men, two to the shift. We have never yet been able to get enough loganberries to run steady twenty-four hours, usually keeping them up by running daytime, sometimes keeping up the heat for fourteen or fifteen hours, then letting it go down until morning. If we had the berries to run full all the season, two shifts, we could handle twenty to twenty-five acres of berries, or 120 to 125 tons of green berries, twenty-five tons dried. There are about twenty-five driers within one mile of me, most of them stack driers. Some of the parties who advised me not to build the tunnel drier have since built exactly like mine and wonld not go back to the stack drier. I dry prunes with three-quarters of a cord of wood per ton of dried fruit. I dry loganberries with one and one-half cords of wood to the ton of dried product. If the tunnel driers are built right one saves in fuel and it is much more convenient to handle the fruit. If one has lots of fruit to dry they can just as easily have more tunnels. Since I built my drier we have built several more in the country like it, and none of them would change back to the stack drier. I have mine so arranged that we can use one tunnel if starting when the fruit is just beginning to get ripe, or if we want to slacken up to save what is ready to dry. As the fruit comes on we open up another tunnel and so on. We figure for prunes about 30 to 32 hours, heat at 175 degrees. For loganberries about 24 to 26 hours, heat 150 to 160 degrees.

Last year the loganberry growers, what few of them are in the business, were undecided as to what best to do with the crop. The canneries got anxious for loganberries and started out to buy them for three and one-half cents, but could not get what they wanted so raised the price to four cents.. They went to the biggest growers north of Salem and contracted all they could get. I have been drying all the berries south of Salem for four years. They came to me and tried to buy mine green. If I sold green there would be no drying in this section, as they would take all the berries. I could not see any way to keep up or spread the market for dried berries unless some of us dried, so I refused the price and dried mine, also for about fifteen different people, from a few crates up to six and seven tons green. Last year I dried in green weight 37 or 38 tons, a little over seven tons of dried fruit, which was distributed over different parts of the country. I will dry again this year, whatever the price may be green. Four cents green will figure out about twenty-five cents for the dried, so it pays to dry as well on the same amount of ground. Five tons per acre at three and one-half cents green per pound would be $350 per acre; then, if figuring one-half for expenses, leaves $175 per acre net. What can beat it? At three and one-half cents green—we will say that we dry them at twenty cents per pound—five tons green or one ton dried per acre, at $400 per ton, would be $400 per acre, so I figure it out that it is good profit to raise loganberries and to dry them. One other thing which will help to keep up the loganberry industry is the juice, which in the near future will be used extensively and be far ahead of grape juice. The only thing is to get the loganberry introduced. In every part of this country where they have grown loganberries more are wanted each year. We must spread the markets, as there are a great many acres put out each year. Last year I sold 24,000 or 25,000 plants and this year I have orders for 40,000, some going to Washington, up on the Sound, and some to Los Angeles. The 40,000 plants that I have orders for is not a sprinkling of the plants that have been sold this winter from other places around Salem. As the loganberry industry grows the market must be broadened. There are so few parts where the loganberry can be grown successfully that it does not look to me that it will be overdone.

HALE AND HEARTY AT EIGHTY YEARS

George H. Gale was guest of honor last Sunday, August 3rd at a surprise picnic dinner, given in honor of his eightieth birthday at Tillicum camp at the mouth of Morse creek, where Mrs. David Zent and her sister-in-law, Mrs. McMasters, acted as most charming hostesses. About twenty-five of Mr. Gale's old friends and neighbors came with well-filled baskets and a sumptuous four-course dinner was served amid much talk and merriment. Mrs. Benton Embree of Seattle, daughter of Mr. Gale, and her son, Harold, were also honor guests. Mr. Gale, upon being questioned as to the burden of the eighty years which he apparently carries so lightly, produced the following poem:

COUNTING THE YEARS!

To An Old Settler On His Eightieth Birthday, August Third, Nineteen Thirteen.

By the Poet Philosopher.

The years shouldn't count when we're stating our age,
For some men are young when they're gray,
And others are old 'ere they've journeyed a stage
In this world and its wonderful way.

I know a young graybeard, who ought to be dead,
If YEARS laid a man by the heels,
But he cheerfully sings as he stands on his head,
"A man's just as old as he feels."

The years do not age us so badly in truth,
It's worry that makes the blood cold,
The man who is blessed with the spirit of youth
Is young when two hundred years old.

The graybeard I wot of, he laughs and he yells,
And dances Virginia reels,
And always and ever his roundelay swells,
"A man's just as old as he feels.

No man should admit that his days are near told,
Or talk of the past with a sob;
No man should admit that he's growing too old;
To eat summer corn from the cob.

The graybeard I speak of, he's slicker than grease,
He cheers up the world with his "spiels,"
He says, (and his words suggest comfort and peace,)
"A man's just as old as he feels."

I know a young man who is thirty or less,
In years, but he's old as the hills,
He goes around looking for grief and distress,
And talks by the day of his ills.

The graybeard,—God bless him,—is younger than that,
He ne'er at the wailing place kneels,
He chortles, while kicking a hole through his hat,
"A man's just as old as he feels."

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

The state supreme court has ruled that the state university is not entitled to recover the 315 acres of university land on Chambers Creek, in Pierce County, sold for a small consideration in 1903, by the State Land Commissioner to Henry Bucey. This reverses the decision of the Pierce county superior court. The decision states that the land commission had the power to dispose of the land in controversy, that the sale does not come within the prohibition of the constitution and that, while its sale was an irregularity, it was purchased for value and in good faith and cannot therefore be recovered by the state. This concludes the legislation over the lands in question, which were sold for $3500, but are now worth at least $200,000. The property was claimed by the board of regents of the state university.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered reductions in freight rates which will cost the companies at least $26,000,000 annually, reducting their revenue about 16 per cent. Besides this many reforms in the conduct of the business were ordered. The new ruling is scheduled to go into effect on October 15, though the express companies say they cannot comply by that time. The present graduated scale of parcel rates is modified by the decision. The country is divided into 950 blocks, averaging 250 square miles each. Where there were formerly 900,000 different rates, they are now reduced to 650,000. The commission believe that the new system points the way to the solution of the freight rate problem.

The state highway commission, following a personal inspection of the route by Governor Lister, has decided that the Pacific Highway, which is to run through Lewis county, will run from Chehalis through Winlock, Napavine and Vader to Olequa. The decision in the matter was unanimous.

That newspapers have a right to decline advertising which they deem objectionable, even if it is submitted to them under a yearly contract, was established finally as the result of decision of the United States district court at St. Paul last week.

With the idea of making the apple the most popular food on the market, the Northwest Fruit Exchange has adopted resolutions calling on its affiliated organizations, which represent about 1,000,000 boxes of this fruit, to enter into an advertising campaign this season. In order to raise the money it is proposed that shippers put a stamp costing one cent on each box shipped and then the proceeds will be used for a world-wide advertising campaign.

Tommy—Father, what is the difference between vision and sight?

Tommy's Father—Well, my son, you can flatter a girl by calling her a vision, but don't call her a sight.

HER MOTHER HAD A REASON TO OFFER

A Port Angeles young lady, who dressed a la mode, recently complained to her "maw" that George was not coming around like he used to, and asked what she supposed the reason was. The loving mother said she would tell her daughter a story, and possibly from it she might gather a "reason." This was her story:

"One evening a young man called to see his girl and she happened to be in the bath. Mother told her to slip on something and come down. Immediately the young lady 'slipped' on a piece of soap and landed in the sitting room below in a condition which prevented her young man from offering any assistance whatever.

"Some weeks later the daughter asked her mother what she thought the reason George had not called for quite some time.

"Mother, with a wink in her other eye, replied, 'Perhaps George has been seeing too much of you, lately—possibly that's why."
