PORT ANGELES OLYMPIC LEADER

VOL. 29, NO. 52. PORT ANGELES, CLALLAM COUNTY, WASHINGTON, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1913. $1.00 EER YEAR.

POWER FRANCHISE PASSED BY COUNCIL

City Recognized It Had Best Contract that Could Possibly Be Obtained.

At the session of the city council Tuesday night the Olympic Power Company's franchise ordinance was adopted by unanimous vote and the juice from the Elwha plant ordered turned on the city line just as soon as the light committee and the city electrician shall say that the substation is ready to receive same. It is possible that by the time this gets to our readers the juice will be on.

All the members of the council were present except Myers and an harmonious session was held.

After miscellaneous communications were read the council got down to the consideration of the franchise ordinance granting to the Olympic Power Company a 25-year franchise to erect and maintain within the city an electric distribution system. This had been fixed up to some extent by the committee of the whole which met last Friday with Electrician Godfrey and was ready for final adoption when brought up at the regular session. The clause providing that the city may by resolution permit the power company to furnish light was fixed up in more definite language Another amendment was that the actual power factor must reach an efficiency of 85 per cent, otherwise the deficiency shall be made up by adding to the peak load supply in kilowatts.

Dustman moved the final adoption of the ordinance and the roll call proceeded without argument. Elliott, however, rose to announce that he would support the ordinance for the reason that the company had spent about a million and half dollars in plant, and his experience with the Public Utilities commission was that they would allow the company at least 5 per cent on the investment, which doubtless would cost the city 5 cents per hour instead of 2 cents. He preferred to have city own its own public utilities but as he could get no support on this question he had to take the next best. The ordinance passed by unanimous vote.

The public utilities regulation ordinance passed at the last session was returned to the council by the mayor for the stated reason that it did not include railways and utilities. The ordinance was again placed upon its first and second readings and referred to include these and will doubtless come up again for final passage next time.

Elliott inquired regarding the ordinance for condemnation of lands in Sampson tract for extension of Third street. Mayor announced that the committee did not think it policy to report ordinance at this time.

Ordinance committee returned assessment roll ordinance for Third street improvement now complete with recommendation that same do pass. The ordinance was adopted upon motion of Dustman.

City Clerk read an answer from Representative LaFollette agreeing to work for the passage of the bill in the house for the lease of the Ediz Hook spit to the city. He also stated that like replies had been received from all the state representatives at Washington.

The city electrician recommended the purchase of 50 meters, 200 [illegible]nds of No. 10 wire, 200 [illegible]nds W. P. wire and 500 pounds [illegible] cable. The recommendation was adopted.

Dustman here inquired from the city electrician how the substation was progressing and was informed that while there was six barrels of oil short which should be purchased at once and charged to Chase Eng. Co., yet the station can be used at any time temporarily without the oil. The matter of connecting up with the Olympic Power Company high tension system was left to the discretion of the electrician and the light committee with power to act.

An application was read from the Seattle, Port Angeles & Lake Crescent Railway for permission to use the unoccupied portion of A street [illegible] store quantities of material now expected and for which no room is at present available. Company agreed to vacate said street whenever ordered to do so by council. Granted.

A resolution was presented by the city attorney and introduced by Wilcox granting the privilege to the Inland Navigation Company to construct a warehouse north of the garage on Laurel street and 12 feet distant from the west side of the present wharf, said warehouse to be used for freight and baggage only and to be connected with wharf by a 12-foot roadway, same to continue only until further order of council. Dustman moved its adoption. Fleming objected to giving corporation any privileges without pay. The resolution was adopted by vote of 5 to 1, Fleming voting no.

Elliott called attention to statement that the city was not authorized to sell power within the city and asked the attorney's opinion. Mr. Smith stated that the city had the right and if it had not it could assume the right by the passage of an ordinance. The matter was simply one of regulation and an ordinance would doubtless be necessary along these lines under the new conditions. Elliott thereupon moved that the city attorney bring in ordinance governing the distribution of power within the city limits. Carried.

A permit was granted J. O. Johnson to blast stumps on block 95.

City Treasurer-elect Wm. A. Langé asked permission to fix up at his own expense his place of business as city treasurer's office, agreeing to install fireproof safe for protection of books, which he thought would safeguard them more than at the city hall. He also called attention to fact that there is no room at city hall. Mayor thought matter should go up to new council. Dustman stated that salary was raised for purpose of having office at city hall. He was still of opinion that is where it should be located. Referred to Finance committee.

An affidavit was read from O. Kirby to the effect that he had deposited with A. A. Patterson for safe keeping checks of value of some $350 and had only been able to recover $102. Council took no action but later Councilman Fleming voted against the renewal of the Patterson license presumably for this reason, in part.

Clerk was directed to forward to Bureau of Labor inspection fee of $5.

Applications for licenses for Pizer and Wiseman, Clark Tavern and A. A. Patterson were read. Action came up first on the former. Dustman proposed that action go over to new council, who were really the proper ones to pass on the grants during their terms of office. Wilcox seconded the motion, and at first it carried, Swanson so voting. It was later stated, however, that the saloons would have to run for six days without a license or close as new council did not meet until January 6. Swanson did not understand this, he said; he voted to lay over because he thought new council should have power to act on these grants. Fisher thereupon moved to reconsider and the motion carried, Swanson voting for this and later for the granting of all other licenses. The application of A. A. Patterson failed, Dustman, Wilcox and Fleming voting no.

Fleming called attention to bad piece of road at Tenth and C streets and same was referred to street superintendent for report.

The street committee recommended the construction of a three-plank walk on Francis street between First and the new Olympic Hotel. Dustman stated that the walk would be temporary, that if city would furnish plank, residents would place same. It was so ordered.

The city engineer recommended the placing of permanent stone monuments on M and Eighteenth streets, to cost approximately $150. These are to tie up the ten acre blocks with the city streets. The work was ordered.

PRESIDENT SIGNS CURRENCY BILL

Believed New Law Will Prevent Future Panics and Restore Public Confidence.

The House adopted the conference report of the administration currency bill late Tuesday night by a vote of 298 to 60 and sent the report over to the Senate which had waited in session to receive it. It was passed and signed by the President the following day.

The new bill is one of the most far-reaching measures relating to finance that has been enacted for many years. The magnitude of the subject, the diversity of interests affected, and the length of the debates in both branches of congress has made it difficult for the ordinary observer to follow the changes and grasp the essentials of this highly technical measure in its important bearings on money, finance, banking and the entire range of fiscal subjects, public and private, which it affects.

CONTRACTOR BRINGS GRADING EQUIPMENT

Tucker and Phillips Have Arranged Excursion from Montana.

E. N. Eagle arrived from Fromberg, Montana, Tuesday, bringing with him twenty mules and six horses with the intention of engaging in contracting work. He was accompanied by three families and says other men from his home place will arrive later to work with him and make their homes here, Mr. Eagle having ascertained during a previous visit that Port Angeles is the coming town of the Sound.

Messrs. Tucker and Phillips, Mr. Eagle says, have succeeded in interesting a number of his old neighbors in this country and expect to bring out a special car of excursionists within a few days.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

On Sunday evening the choir gave a Christmas cantata, "The Shepherd King," to a crowded house with entire satisfaction. The leader, Miss Holt, and the choir seemed to be at their best and deserve much credit and the support of everyone for their untiring efforts.

Christmas eve was the scene of a beautiful service rendered by the Sunday school. The Climbers did lots of climbing to place the decorations in such an artistic manner, and the B's were kept busy in filling the sacks with their sweets. The program of the evening was of the best; it was in charge of Mrs. Dustman and Mrs. Baker. The evening service was brought to a close after candy and nuts with the many presents distributed by the superintendent, by Rev. C. E. Fulmer wishing all a merry Christmas, the school responding with a hearty response.

THE SEASON'S GREETINGS

The hour is rapidly approaching when Father Time will tuck the old year under his arm and tote him off to be duly recorded in the history of the ages and stowed away in a niche in the Hall of Fame.

The year 1913 has been mighty good to a great many of us, and on the other hand the new year holds forth bright promise for us all and we will receive him with open hands and hearts.

We wish the readers of the Olympic-Leader a happy journey between the next milestones of life; may every day that the new year brings be utilized as you would wish when it has passed forever.

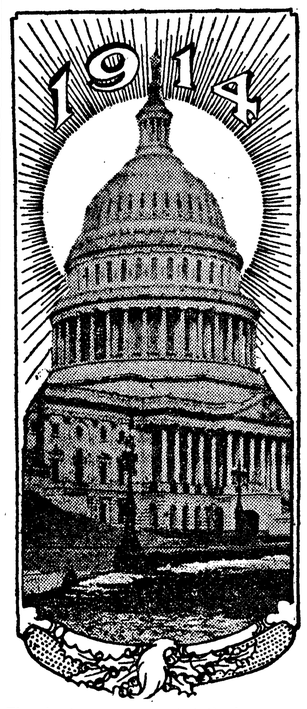
For the New Year



The short noon weeps that the hours are fleet
And hides the steps of the sun's bright feet,

But the moon laughs low in the midnight sky,
For she sees the sun's face from her throne on high.

Behind the blank of the vaporous seas
Gleam still, as of old, the Hesperides.

The bloom of the rose tree is withered and goes,
But a new flower sleeps in the root of the rose.

And spring shall come with a flute and a fire
And wake new passion and old desire.

The scarlet poppies shall flame and pass
Out of the clusters of cool young grass.

And the brook shall dance against warm green leaves
And the brown fields murmur with shocks and sheaves.

Out of the city that roars and cries
I send you a dream of delight of the eyes.

Out of the heart of the winter time
I send you a leaf from the young year's prime.

Out of the toil and the trouble of night
I send you a song of the dawn's delight.

For all things die to arise again,
Save pain and sorrow, the shadow of pain.

And beyond the reach of the rack and the rod
There remaineth a rest for the people of God. —Edmund Gosse.

BILL BOARD ADVERTISING.

A Safe Gauge of the Standing of a Community.

The feeling against bill board advertising is growing rapidly and is very pronounced in the better districts and among the more intelligent communities in the State. A safe gauge of the standing a community has may be found in the condition of its roads, the beautification of the roadsides and the amount of advertising on fences, trees, water tanks, etc.

In some instances country residents have gone so far as to telephone to business houses, whose advertising signs have been put on their fences to come and take them down as they have been there in violation of the state law, and besides they will not patronize any merchant who uses billboard advertising.

The law is clear and explicit regarding the the posting of signs, making it a misdemeanor to post signs on any state or county property — which of course includes trees, water troughs, tanks and frames—or upon private property without the owner's consent.

Beginning with the New Year, Frank Dustman will have charge of the first division of the Olympic Power Company's transmission line, embracing that part of the line from the power plant on the Elwha to Sequim on the eastern line of the county. Mr. Dustman's headquarters will be in Angeles. While the personal risk is greater with the Power Company than is that of lineman for the Angeles Telephone Company, the salary is also higher and the work much lighter. Mr. Dustman is always a live wire in whatever he undertakes and the O. P. Co. is fortunate in securing his services.

Collections of the state fish commissioner in the eight months of the present biennium have been approximately $85,000. Fines totalling $8,500 have been collected from fish trap owners and others convicted of violating the law. Indications are that the collections of the department for this biennium will greatly exceed the appropriation for the department, which is $130,000.

A sweeping declaration in favor of the principle of government ownership of telephone and telegraph lines and an assertion that the postal service now is self-sustaining for the first time since 1883, are features of the annual report of Postmaster General Burleson.

Concerning the acquisition of telephone and telegraph lines, Burleson says that he government has demonstrated its capacity to conduct public utilities, and, from his present information, he is inclined clearly to the taking over by the postoffice department of the telegraph lines, and, possibly, also, of the telephone lines.

The administration currency reform bill, proposing a revision of the finacial system of the United States and the creation of regional reserve banks to act as strengthening elements in the banking and financial world passed the senate Friday by a vote of 54 to 34.

Forces that had fought together for improvement and amendment of the measure to the last divided when the final vote came. Senator Hitchcock, who had led the opposition to the bill, returned to the Democratic ranks, and Senator Weeks, one of the leaders on the Republican side, with five other Republicans and Senator Poindexter (Progressive) voted for the passage of the measure.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

Business in the United States, on the whole, is not so good as it was early last March. Few shrewd observers at that time expected it would be. Steel mills were then running at full capacity—on orders received some months before. They are now running not much over half their capacity.

Railroad earnings of late have shown some falling off. Bank clearings the country over have been less than they were last year. Building operations show a decline. That there will be some further recession is quite probable.

It is important, however, to remember that this condition is practically worldwide—and so are the chief causes of it. The cause that by far overshadows all others is the scarcity of fluid capital—the world is simply hard up for cash. This cause developed out of conditions with which domestic politics had absolutely nothing to do; and England, France and Germany are as hard up as ourselves. Brazil, Canada and India are even more affected by the worldwide money pinch than the United States.

The art of politics consists partly in telling plausible lies. There is always a wordy effort to attribute the business condition of the country—whether good or bad—to political causes, though nine times out of ten politics has nothing to do with it either way. This is one of the times when it has not. Nothing that the Wilson administration has yet done has had any marked effect on business, either favorable or unfavorable. In all human probability the business situation would have been precisely what it is if Taft or Roosevelt had been elected in November, 1912.—Saturday Post.

The Caraboa incident at Washington, where our soldiers back from the Philippines banqueted to songs whose choruses went

ABOU BEN ADHEM.

Abou ben Adhem—may his tribe increase—
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold.

Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head
And, with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men."

The angel wrote and vanished. The next night
It came again, with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,
And, lo, Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

"TO ATTRACT, NOT TO AMAZE"

James A. Wood, a live publicity man, addressed the Portland Ad club and expressed there certain views to which we are wedded and about which we have chatted from time to time in this column, says the Tacoma Daily News. It was that our visitors as a rule pay more attention to our comfortable homes and their beautiful surroundings, and our parks and school buildings and churches than to skyscrapers and extensive mills. Flowers and trees tell a story of substantiality and contentment that is told by nothing else. Mr. Woods voiced the same sentiment when he said:

It seems to me that the keynote of effort for next year, for 1915, and for all the years to come may well be this: Let us strive to attract, rather than to amaze.

"To attract, rather than to amaze." Well, that's putting it the way we tried to put it, but lacked the epigrammatical knack. It all bears to the point that beautification is a thing upon which we must bear down upon hard for the next two years, beginning now. We want to convince our tourist friends that this is a place in which to make one's home, not a mere camping ground to be occupied until we make our fortunes with the intent of returning east.

Tourists soon get their fill of skyscrapers and big mills, for they are everywhere to be found. But nowhere on this earth is there a section whose benignant soil and atmosphere more kindly fosters beautiful flowers and a wealth of growing things. And those who encourage trees and flowers are good hearted, intelligent humans, with a culture of which any community may be proud.

Four women jurors—Mrs. Alva Graaf, Mrs. Isadora Ford, Mrs. Eliza Brandon and Mrs. Anna Wasson—who with eight others early in the morning of December 2 last found Theodore Pappas guilty of the charge of attempting to blackmail Nick Pantages, brother of Alexander Pantages, voted guilty because they wished to leave the jury room in order that Mrs. Wasson might retire for the night, according to their signed affidavits read to Judge J. T. Ronald in the criminal court this morning, says the Seattle Times of the 22nd.

Mrs. Wasson alleges she was ill and solicited the votes of the others in order that she might get to bed. Mrs. Mary Roderick, the baliff who had charge of the women on the jury, told the court that no one had complained of illness to her.

Judge Ronald mercilessly scored the action of the four women, characterizing it as the greatest blow that could possibly be given to the system of having women sit in judgment in a jury box.

"The trouble is there is no way of proving that these women were respecting their oath when they agreed upon the verdict or are doing it now," said the deputy prosecuting attorney. "The supreme court has held that you cannot go into the jury room for such evidence. There are certain laws that specifically state what constitutes misconduct upon the part of a jury, but this situation is not covered by them. I doubt very much if they can be punished."

CO-OPERATION THE ESSENTIAL NEED

Reasonable Prices Can Only Be Obtained by Cutting Out the Intermediate Profits.

OLYMPIA, Dec. 24.—Christmas day this year is made memorable in one way or another, for every one of the 5,000 wards of the state in its 11 institutions.

One of the most pathetic sights is at the state school for the blind. A special treat for the youngsters was provided this year by the board of control by the purchase of $30 worth of new records for the phonograph at the institution, and a grand concert was arranged for Christmas day. In spite of the fact that shining candles and glittering tinsel could not be seen by the children, a genuine Christmas tree was provided.

At the school for the deaf, of course, phonograph records could not be sent as a gift but the children there were able to appreciate the Christmas tree more fully.

At the soldiers' and veterans' home special pains were taken with arrangements for the Christmas dinners, turkeys, cranberries, oranges and other delicacies being provided as a variation to the usual fare. At the three hospitals for the insane the superintendents solicited from charitably inclined persons gifts of various kinds to be furnished those inmates who had no friends or relatives to remember them. Even at the state penitentiary at Walla Walla and at the reformatory at Monroe special arrangements were made for the celebration of Christmas day.

During the past week the board of control has been kept busy allowing requisitions for special Christmas supplies, sent in by the superintendent of every institution.

Co-operation, in which the farmers themselves must take the lead, is the essential need of agricultural America, the Washington rural credit commissioners, Senator Metcalf and Representative Black, declare in their final report to Governor Lister. In concluding their report, based on a thorough study of European methods, made last summer, the commissioners state:

"There are men who say that co-operation will not work in this country and point to failures as a proof. We are just beginning to learn the kindergarten principles of co-operation adn failures are due to this lack of knowledge of what true co-operation is.

"Co-operation cheapens and vastly betters supplies; increases returns and insures a certain market; strengthens human power and ability for productive labor. Milk, eggs, meat, fruit, grain bring better prices; fertilizer, feed, implements, seed, all agricultural necessities cost less. And further, indirect effects are diffusion of practical knowledge, remarkable educational capacity, stimulation of thought, teaching men to cultivate better, select the most profitable crop, to conserve the fertility of the soil, to improve grade, to turn produce to better account and to promote general well-being and community spirit. It means making farming profitable and easier, the creation of a high, prosperous, contented rural civilization, the vital need of our time.

"Co-operative credit, collective security are the basic principles of co-operation. Co-operative production, supply and distribution naturally and logically and necessarily follow. This is our first essential. We are going to have cooperative farm credit in this country and we are going to have federal and state legislation to make it easy and to safeguard it. And when this movement starts, it must be in the hands of the farmers themselves.

"Whatever rural credit or co-operative organizations may be provided by legislation, the farmers must take the initiative in their creation, must take their management, so that their success and the benefit for the entire state may be due to and belong to only the farmers themselves. This is the Irish idea and no country ever in the world's history made so much progress in agriculture in the betterment of the life and condition of the farmer, in a like period, as has Ireland, the result of the preaching and teaching and organization of co-operation by Horace Plunkett. It is no longer suffering Ireland, it is happy, prosperous Erin in the agricultural districts. On the continent government aid indubitably has retarded progress. It must be self help."

An almost forgotten law, enacted in 1905 and never before enforced, has been rescued from obscurity by the state tax commission and will be the means of enriching the permanent school fund by many thousands of dollars during the present biennium. The law makes it the duty of all cashiers of banks, trust companies, etc., to report to the secretary of state all accounts of depositors which have remained untouched for 10 years. The state is entitled to escheat such accounts if the depositors do not appear. All banks, trust companies and loan societies have been notified by the tax commission to prepare the statements required by law, though the law has been neglected for eight years. After notice has been given to depositors who may be living, by publication in newspapers in the vicinity of the banks, the commission will then proceed to escheat the acounts.

Arrangements are being made for a new test of the law passed in 1909, requiring inspection of all concentrated commercial feedstuffs and the affixing of a state revenue stamp to each package. The law was declared invalid soon after its passage on the ground that the director of the agricultural experiment station, who was required to enforce it, was not a state officer. Now the enforcement of the act has been made one of the duties of the state department of agriculture, which has served notice on manufacturers of feedstuffs that they will be expected to comply with the law's provisions. The attorney general's office is of the opinion that any defect that may have existed in the law has been remedied by making the commissioner of agriculture responsible for its enforcement.

The recent adoption by the cities of Portland, Ore., and Vancouver, B. C., of ordinances prohibiting the sale, in those cities, of milk, is causing dairymen of Clarke and Whatcom counties to apply to the state department of agriculture for inspection of their herds for clean bills of health.

"I wish every city in the state of Washington would adopt a similar ordinance," s tated Agricultural Commissioner J. H. Perkins. It is likely that the department will recommend a law requiring either the tuberculin test or pastuerization of all milk sold in the state.

A complete salmon hatchery, in operation where visitors may see the processes of hatching in all phases, will be a feature of the state exposition in San Francisco. This feature is among the important plans for the fisheries and game exhibit, as outlined by Elmer E. Johnston, executive commissioner for this state. The state will also operate an aquarium in which live specimens of Washington food and game fish will be shown.

To show his own faith in the honor system as applied to convicts, Governor Lister has established a branch camp at the executive mansion. For two months now all housework at the executive mansion has been performed by two former inmates of Walla Walla, who are being given a chance to earn enough money to make a new start in the world.

An analysis of the nativity of prisoners at Walla Walla penitentiary, made at the request of the immigration authorities, fails to bear out the general impression that a large proportion of convicts are aliens. Of a total of 846 prisoners, only 137 are of foreign birth. Of these 33 are Italians.

Gentlemen of the Northwest will continue to receive a big price for their cattle. The removal of the duty on meat is not going to reduce the cost to the consumer according to Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry. He has just returned from a trip to South America. He says the American beef trust has secured control of the foreign meat supply including that of Australia and Argentine, and that the foreign meat will not come to the United States at a decreased cost. It will be shipped by the trust to other countries, hence will not come in competition with American beef. Dr. Melvin says there is no hope at present for a reduction in our meat cost. On the contrary, he expects to see it increase. The cattle of the United States are diminishing each year while our population is on the increase. If the view of Dr. Melvin is correct and he is regarded as an authority all the cattle dealers of the Northwest have to do is to sit back and fix the price for their cattle and the butcher will have to pay his price or go without meat.

The department of agriculture has instituted a campaign to induce orchardists to do winter spraying, for moss diseases, lichens and scale, stating that most effective work can be done at this time of the year.

STATE BUREAU OF FARM DEVELOPMENT

Five Applications For County Agricultural Agents Received At Pullman.

Observations of the development of white Leghorn pullets at the poultry plant of Washington Experiment Station, reveal certain suggestive facts relative to the rate at which the birds reach maturity and begin to lay. Leghorns that were hatched in March and April, not forced, culled and allowed to come in naturally, produced from ten to thirty-three per cent layers in October. By November twenty-five to thirty-three per cent of them were laying. In December the layers ran from the latter percentage to fifty per cent. Pullets crowded in the latter part of February and March slumped in egg production in May. It was extremely difficult to get them to laying again for the summer. An abundance of green stuff fed in June and July helped along the egg production in August.

The majority of the hens that continued to lay through July, August and into September had been hatched early the preceding year, the obvious reason being that the early hatched chickens developed better and came into laying in a more vigorous condition than did the late hatches.

The heavy breeds laid fewer eggs during the setting and hatching season than did the Leghorns, being more "broody" than were the Leghorns and their laying being interrupted by trying to set. However, in late October, and even into November, many of the heavy birds had come into vigorous laying, whereas the Leghorns that had been laying so vigorously during the summer quit laying.

Five aplications for county agricultural agents have been received by Director I. D. Cardiff during the present month. Th y come from King, Cowlitz, San Juan, Okanogan, Douglas and Snohomish counties.

Mr. A. M. Richardson, an agricultural graduate of the State College, who has been teaching Agriculture in the Snohomish High School, has been appointed county agricultural agent of Douglas county. Director Cardiff at the present week is making a trip through Western Washington in the interests of the Bureau of Farm Development of the state. Under an agreement recently reached by Director Cardiff and Professor W. J. Spillman, of Washington, D. C., Byron Hunter has been apointed State Leader and in this capacity will have direct charge of the county agricultural agents of Washington. In this capacity he becomes Vice Director of the State Bureau of Farm Development. Mr. Hunter is one of the earlier agricultural graduates of the State College. Since his graduation, he has engaged in farm development work in Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho and one of two other western states. He is particularly in touch with Washington problems, and by the authorities at Washington, D. C., is regarded as one of the best trained crop experts in the country.

STATE DAIRYMEN MEET.

At the convention of State Dairymen, held in North Yakima last week, resolutions were adopted asking the legislature to increase to $500 or six months' imprisonment the penalty for misrepresentation of dairy products.

H. L. Blanchard of the Washington State Agricultural College, being thoroughly acquainted with Western Washington conditions through his many years' experience as a dairyman in Jefferson county, stated that from five to seven cows may be maintained to the acre in Washington.

E. B. Marks of North Yakima, was elected president; William Bishop of Chimacum, first vice; H. C. Davis, Granger, secretary.

CHRIS. KUPPLER'S HAS BEEN A BUSY LIFE.

Interesting Story in Pennsylvania Paper About One of Our New Citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kuppler are entertaining for a few days at their home on North Park avenue Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Kuppler, of Seattle, Wash., and this is their first visit to Meadville in 37 years. They are an interesting couple, and are meeting some interesting and well pleased old friends in Meadville. Mr. Kuppler is on the way home from a visit to Germany, principally to his old home in Wurttenberg. He went there a couple of months ago and arrived in New York on the return trip on the 12th. He went on to Chicago to meet Mrs. Kuppler and brought her on here for the present visit, which will terminate next Sunday or Monday, when they will return home to Seattle.

Mr. Kuppler lived in Meadville a good many years. He helped to build the Erie Railroad shops here and left this city in 1873, going first to South Bend, Ind., and in 1887 he went to Seattle, which has been his home since. He visited Meadville in 1876, and the next visit comes 37 years later.

Mr. Kuppler has had a busy life and has seen a good deal of adventure. He is a prominent contractor and builder of Seattle, where he has erected some of the largest buildings and other structures in the city. He was one of the very first men to visit the Klondike, going by way of the White Pass in 1897, and he built the first two bridges in that country. They are between Dawson and Lewistown, each a double span foot bridge, one about 300 feet long and the other 240, and they cost about $20,000. Everything was very high. One 20-penny spike cost 25 cents—but it also cost to walk over these bridges privately owned, and they paid for themselves the first six months, at 25 cents for crossing one way.

Mr. Kuppler is an interesting man to talk with and has a great fund of information. He has seen the great West in all its phases and knows Alaska, where at intervals covering a period of five or six years he has carried on large contracts. He is anxious to get back home, where he says he has a lot of work on hand. He is a big, rugged Westerner, pleasant and well informed, and he is finding the delight of a boy in meeting some of his old Meadville friends, and sorrow at learning how many have passed on since he was last here.

Prof. Smith, teacher at Forks, resigned his position as teacher in that school in order to accept a position up-Sound. We learn this with much regret, as Mr. Smith was thought of as an excellent teacher and leaves many friends in the West End, and his absence will be greatly felt by all.

Arthur Quay returned to the Lacy farm from a trip to Port Angeles, where he has been to visit his sister and other relatives.

John Schutz, Sr., shipped a consignment of turkeys up-Sound last Friday to be there in time for the Xmas markets.

The school in this district was closed last Friday for the Christmas holidays. The teacher, Miss Laurens, invited the parents and others to the school house. An entertaining program was furnished by the pupils. The school house was tastefully decorated with rose fruit and evergreens, the leaves of the Oregon grape making a fine substitute for holly.

Mrs. J. A. Reeves has gone to visit her daughter Mrs. McLeod of Hope, B. C.

James Wooding is home for the holidays.

W. Wooding, Jr., and his wife spent Sunday at home with the folks.

Messrs. Ekiss and Middleton of Angeles, were out looking over their property a few days ago.

Mr. Moon of Vancouver, B. C., was here becoming more intimately acquainted with his property. He expects to live here in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Laurens have gone to town for a few days. Everybody is so busy with their holiday work.

Mrs. Wooding and Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald attended the Christmas entertainment at the Macleay school house Tuesday evening. The program was excellent and well rendered. There was an abundance of "goodies" for young and old. A person driving along the road might think the district sparsely populated but a sight of the crowd in that school room would quickly dissipate any such illusion.

We are More Than Pleased

BETTY'S NEW YEAR'S PARTY

By MARJORIE HOPE

Copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.

BETTY was impatiently waiting for Jack to come home. He would love the hurt away and be sorry, too, and Jack's arms could make up for a good deal. They had not been married more than two years, and she was thinking— But, oh, there he was!

"Jack, I can't get my dress."

"Why not, sweetheart?"

"They won't give me any more credit. Oh, I am so tired of this poverty. I want lots of money. I want my dress so much. I begged them so hard to let me have it. I—I—th-think it's—s-s-so mean"— Choking back her sobs, she turned to Jack for comfort.

Jack pushed her away sharply. "Sometimes I think you haven't any pride. But, if you have none for yourself, for heaven's sake have some for me."

"But aren't you sorry, Jack?" She looked wistfully into the angry face of her husband. She wanted to be loved.

"Of course I am sorry—sorry that you made such a fool of yourself." With which speech he left the house.

* * * * * * *

Late that night, returning, he sought Betty, penitent and ashamed of himself. She was in their sitting room reading. Going up to her, he knelt down and put his arms around her, but she sprang up, cold and angry. "Oh, when you are ready to be nice I am to forget that when I wanted you to be so you had made other arrangements for your disposition for the evening."

"I FORBID YOU TO LEAVE THE HOUSE TONIGHT."

"Betty, I am awfully sorry. I was a cad. But do be a good little girl and kiss and forgive."

"Of course I will forgive you, but I don't want to be kissed, thank you just the same. You should show more discretion in the distribution of your kisses. You are a trifle too—what do they call it in the streets?—'slushy,' you know, Jack. Good night."

"Just a minute, Elizabeth. Since you consider that I am too 'slushy' with you I will thank you to let me know the next time you wish any demonstration of affection on the part of your husband. In the meantime I will refrain from troubling you."

Consequently in the ensuing months, although they kept up a semblance of good feeling, they were cold and extravagantly indifferent on the surface to each other's affairs. Jack was always too busy to take Betty to the few entertainments which their little town afforded and to which she wanted to go, so she had been thrown on the society of a friend of her husband's, Don Monroe, which condition her husband silently resented.

On New Year's eve Betty remarked at dinner:

"The Williamses are having a midnight supper tonight to watch the old year—such as it has been—out. The invitations came by phone this afternoon, hours 11 to 2."

"I am sorry I cannot take you"—

"Oh," she interrupted, "I have given up counting on you to do anything for me. Don is going to take me."

"Guess again, little girl of mine."

"What do you mean?" she cried, rising from the table. "Have you any particular objection to my having a good time? You certainly give that impression."

"I have a good many objections to your going out at midnight with a man who is not your husband, much as you might like him to be, and returning home in the early hours of the morning. You cannot go."

After reading two hours Betty placed a marker in her book and rose. Jack looked up.

"Where are you going?"

"To get dressed for the supper."

Her husband sprang up, flushing angrily. "I tell you you are not going out with Monroe tonight. Can I put it any clearer?"

"And suppose I won't stay home?"

"I'll make you stay."

"How, pray?"

"Oh, if necessary, I am strong."

"I understand. I suppose you could beat me into submission if"—

"Oh, Betty, Betty!" he cried, covering his face in horror that she should so have misunderstood him. "Oh, girlie, how could you?"

At his cry all the long pentup love in Betty was momentarily released, and, running up to him, she pulled his hands down.

"Betty is sorry she said that, Jack. She did not mean it. Please, please forgive her, will you?" But he did not kiss her, plead as her eyes did for the caress. This rebuff rather cooled her burst of affection, and she said, "But I am going, just the same."

Her husband laughed softly and, stooping, picked her up in his arms and, walking back to his chair, sat down with his burden and resumed his reading, holding her the while just tight enough to prevent her escape.

"Here you will remain until after the hour for your meeting with Monroe. By the way, what time were you to meet him and where?"

"Eleven-thirty at the corner," she replied quietly. To tell the honest truth, Betty seemed to like this method of prevention. While she would not have given in to his commands, she did not object to being forced to do so.

Suddenly the book fell to the floor, and Jack's hand that had been holding it gently tilted Betty's face back, and he caught the tears and the tenderness. Biting his lips to keep back the longing to kiss away the tears, he tightened his hold on her and with his head thrown back and away from her was soon in the Land of Nod, all forgetful of New Year's eve suppers and "eleven-thirty at the corner."

* * * * * * *

About a quarter to 12 Betty stood in their pretty little dining room, putting the finishing touches to a dainty supper set for two. Quite satisfied that everything was in order, she turned toward the sitting room, to encounter a pale face and frightened eyes.

Slowly taking in the sight before him and also the time, 11:45, his face flushed. "Forgive me, Betty," holding out his arms, into which she came. "I had a few nasty suspicions when I woke up alone."

"I wanted to get back to you before you woke up, dear. We are going to have our own New Year's eve supper, but before we do I want"—

Gathering her close into his arms, Jack kissed her tenderly and hungrily.

"That was it, Jack. And now," catching his hand and drawing him into the dining room, "this will be so much nicer than any old Williams affair."

THE FATHER'S DUTY.

The father should have a working knowledge of a boy's body, its physiology, the pathological conditions that from time to time arrive, and the relation of these both to mentality and morality. He should understand the effect of normal growth upon the boy's character development, particularly during the period of adolescence. He should be able to give instruction in sex hygiene, knowing just what to tell and how much and just when to tell it. He should understand the supreme worth of muscular co-ordination in relation to self control and how, through manual training, gymnastics and athletics, these are developed. Fathers should understand enough of psychology to discover whether their boys are motor or sensory minded, enough to know why it is that at a particular time the boy begins to think and act for himself, and why it is the youth so often questions all authority and darkening doubts so easily beset his soul. It should be the business of the father to acquaint himself with these facts, that he may intelligently and sympathetically guide and control his boy. Here is where even a little knowledge is a helpful, not a dangerous, thing.—Franklin Matthews.

THE ADVANTAGES OF LOGANBERRY CULTURE.

J. J. McDonald Tells Commercial Club of Experience of Salem Growers.

(By W. S. Pearce.)

Mr. J. J. McDonald, a former citizen of Port Angeles, but who has made his home for the last five years in Salem, Oregon, addressed the Commercial Club Wednesday evening at its regular meeting on the subject of Loganberry culture, which, according to his statements, is proving to be a highly lucrative occupation in the Willamette Valley.

When Mr. McDonald first went to Salem, there were, he said, some twenty or thirty acres planted to Loganberries, whereas, now, several hundred acres in the vicinity of the capital city are yielding handsome returns to the farmers and horticulturists.

So profitable has the cultivation of the Loganberry proven, and so rapidly has the demand grown for them, both canned and evaporated, that it has been difficult for the growers to supply plants to those who are anxious to embark in the industry.

Men of small means, whose capital will not permit them to engage in agriculture on an extensive scale, are rapidly acquiring a competence by devoting their energies to the propagation of this luscious fruit, and small tracts of land hitherto practically unproductive are pouring into the laps of the thrifty toiler profits beyond his most sanguine dreams, vis., $125 to $150 per acre.

It would appear that the market for the Loganberry is limited only by the ability of the growers to exploit the excellence of their product in new and uninvaded territory.

Mr. McDonald cited instances where the sales had increased from practically nothing five years ago to hundreds of tons of the berries in the central and eastern states.

The Loganberry, as Mr. McDonald stated to many in Port Angeles and Clallam county, is wonderfully prolific. The average yield in ordinary land is from four to five tons per acre, and the price obtained for them is so attractive as to encourage the small farmer to apply his best energies to its culture.

The ripe berries, according to Mr. McDonald, are marketed at from four to five cents the pound, while those evaporated sell for twenty-five cents the pound. The shrinkage in evaporation is about four-fifths and they will keep indefinitely in this state.

Several large canneries are in operation in Salem and throughout the Willamette Valley, and they experience no difficulty in marketing their entire output.

Alluding to the cost of an evaporator, Mr. McDonald stated that $1,200 would be required in its construction and that it would take care of the product of from sixteen to twenty acres.

Delicious wine and juice are made from the Loganberry, samples of which Mr. McDonald exhibited at the club, and it would be no matter of great surprise should the latter prove a formidable competitor to grape juice, if it does not ultimately, in a great measure, supplant it.

The people of Port Angeles and Clallam county may well profit by the experience of those in their sister state, for the soil and climate of the Puget Sound basin are even more admirably adapted to the growth of berries of every variety than are the soil and climate of Oregon.

Puyallup and Sumner, in the White River Valley, between Seattle and Tacoma, furnish graphic and indisputable evidence of the value of the berry crop in our own state. From a modest beginning only a few years ago, when hop raising ceased to yield a profit to the farmers in that section, berry growing, has reached mammoth proportions, and the Growers' Association, with headquarters at Puyallup, are shipping annually hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of crated, canned and evaporated berries to all parts of the United States. Plethoric bank accounts, fine homes and a highly prosperous community are powerful testimonials of the generous returns from this great and comparatively new industry.

In the light of these facts is it not reasonable to believe that the farmers and horticulturists of Clallam county will, in the near future, address themselves to the labor of developing to its highest point of perfection an enterprise so full of promise?

It is a matter which should command the serious attention of all who derive their subsistence from the tillage of the soil.

Canned salmon seized by the food inspectors of the department of agriculture as unfit for human consumption, is being turned over to the state fish hatcheries and fed to the young salmon.

The Madonna

By WALTON WILLIAMS
Copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.

WITH the painters of the middle ages the Madonna was the most popular subject. This was especially true of that supremely great school that flourished during the Italian renaissance period. In earlier Christian art the Virgin did not so largely figure. It was only with the council of Ephesus and its glorification of Mary as the "mother of God" and the development of the doctrine of the immaculate conception —not only as to the birth of Jesus, but as to that of Mary herself—that the ascendancy of the Virgin both in the church and in church art was established.

It was not till the wonderful renaissance era in Italy, the golden age of art, however, that the Madonna became the favorite theme of painters. The vogue started with Fra Angelico, Fra Bartolommeo and others of the first painters of the era and reached its height under Raphael. The three great figures of the renaissance period in art were Raphael himself, Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci. Angelo painted a few Madonnas, some of them unfinished, but they do not rank with most of his work. Da Vinci has one or two Madonnas that are up to his other great paintings. But it was Raphael of angelic face and character; Raphael, the prince of painters of all ages, whose Madonnas, both in number and quality, outrank those of any other painter, ancient or modern.

Raphael's "Sistine Madonna" is not only his own masterpiece, but by universal consent ranks as the greatest painting in the world. Only less famous than this is his "Madonna of the Chair," while his "La Jardiniere," "Madonna of the Finger" and many more are celebrated.

Raphael Sanzio or Santi was born in 1483 and died of a fever at Rome when thirty-seven. He was the son of a painter and studied at one time under Perugino. His first work to become famous was "The Coronation of the Virgin," which appeared in 1503. "The Marriage of the Virgin" was painted the next year, shortly after which Raphael went to live in Florence, where most of his Madonnas were finished. His fame had now become so great that he was called to Rome to decorate the Vatican. It was not till toward the end of his life that Raphael developed his own style and did his greatest work, the "Sistine Madonna" being his last great painting. He was also an architect and was appointed the chief architect of St. Peter's in Rome.

Another Madonna, a reproduction of which is here shown, is a detail of the painting by Hans Holbein the younger, known as the "Madonna of the Meyer Family." It represents the Virgin and the child Jesus being worshiped by Burgomaster Meyer, his two wives (one deceased) and some of his children. Just why Burgomaster Meyer, his two wives and children should be immortalized in this holy company is not apparent. The burgomaster paid for the picture. Members of the family are omitted in the reproduction.

There were two Hans Holbeins, father and son, both painters. The younger was practically a contemporary of Raphael, being born in Bavaria in 1497. One of his best known portraits is that of Erasmus. Several of his religious pictures are also celebrated.

TEN good resolutions standing in a line.
Our hero stepped upon a tack; then there were nine.

Nine good resolutions. Our hero stayed out late—
"A poor, sick friend," was his excuse—then there were eight.

Eight good resolutions, with a little leaven.
A poker party with the "boys;" then there were seven.

Seven good resolutions barely half alive.
"Oh, what's the use?" our hero asked; then there were five.

Five good resolutions battered, bruised and sore.
Our hero had to go to "lodge;" then there were four.

Four good resolutions as nervous as could be.
Our hero lighted a cigar; then there were three.

Three good resolutions wearing crape and rue.
Our hero shook the "bones" for beers; then there were two.

Two good resolutions. When the play was done,
A lobster supper served for two; then there was one.

One good resolution out for air and sun.
The water wagon ran away; then there was none.

Good Cheer.

HAVE you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not given for you alone.
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in heaven the deed appears.
Pass it on.

Good One Way.

For many years a man named Dutton was a popular conductor between Duluth and Two Harbors. A woman from Duluth purchased a ticket, a return ticket to Two Harbors, and then concluded to return by boat. Some months later she wished again to visit Two Harbors and presented the remaining half of her former ticket. Mr. Dutton looked at it for a full minute, then said, "I think this ticket is good for one transportation, madam, but you will have to ride backward."

Tenderness of Tenors.

No principal singer could sing every night in one week. Star tenors seldom sing more than twice in one week, and at rehearsals they sing for the most part in a falsetto, says the Manchester Guardian.

It is said that the great Tamagno used to take such care of his voice that he never even spoke during the day when he was singing at night. He carried on a conversation by means of a slate hung around his neck.

Some baritones, on the other hand, have been habitually careless about their voices, and Berlioz speaks of a splendid bass singer who tramped about the mountains in the snow all day with his throat exposed and sang magnificently the same night.

But in the wings at Covent Garden you may see Siegfried in shining armor with a woolen muffler round his throat.

Bismarck's "Mot."

As might be expected of a man of iron, Bismarck's wit was of the sledge hammer sort. In 1862, according to "Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III.," by Baron d'Ambes, he went to Paris as Prussian ambassador.

"I have never heard a German speak French as you do," complimented the emperor on the occasion of their first meeting.

"Thanks, sire," returned Bismarck. "I have never heard a Frenchman speak French as you do."

The emperor spoke with a perceptible German accent.

Beginning Early.

"Yes, sir," said the proud young father, "that baby of ours is going to be a successful politician. He'll be a great vote getter before he's of age."

"Why, he can't talk yet!"

"No, but he has started right in, trying to kick and shake hands at the same time."—Washington Star.

Positively Uncanny.

"There's something very queer about that woman," said the clerk. "I don't know what to make of her."

"Why?" the floorwalker asked.

"She was satisfied with the first piece of goods I showed her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Long Suit.

Bacon—How long have we been married, dear?

Mrs. Bacon—Three years, love.

"Is that all? I thought I'd been wearing this suit longer than that, dear."—Yonkers Statesman.

BEST BUTTER IN THE STATE.

George Van Kleffen, of Washington Harbor, returned from Seattle on Monday where he had been attending a session of the state buttermakers' association. He was awarded a prize of $25 for making the best butter in the state, which speaks pretty well for the H .J. Bugge creamery. The butter tested 96.5.—Sequim Press.

It is gratifying to know that while so many calls for charity were being made in other places Port Angeles seemed to have fewer than ever, proving a more prosperous condition than has existed in many years. The different civic and fraternal organizations endeavored to hunt up all who were in need and many homes were brightened and many little children made happy by the distribution of toys and all the requisites for a good Christmas dinner. The charitable work of the Elks lodge is especially worthy of mention.

There was a most joyous family gathering Christmas at the C. N. McLaughlin home at Mt. Pleasant. Besides their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Haynes, there was the Ray Haynes family and Mrs. Madge Nailor and two boys, and my, didn't the table groan with the load of good things to eat, but the groaning was transferred after dinner, we surmise from the way the good things disappeared.

J. J. McDonald succeeded in placing a fine order for dried Loganberries with a retail merchant at Victoria. Although the Canadian duty is 25 per cent ad valorem on dried fruits or nearly six cents per pound on Loganberries, the dealer was willing to take the chances and gave him an order. The Merrill Grocery Co. of this city will also handle this fruit.

Mrs. Mary Trumbull, Miss Anna Trumbull and Douglas Ballinger arrived Christmas morning from Seattle to spend the holidays with the Trumbulls, Websters and Halls.

Edwin Cochran, son of Judge and Mrs. J. E. Cochran, is a home visitor. Mr. Cochran is employed in a railway office in Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Phelps and son Reddick are home for the holidays.

KNOPH-LOTZGESELL NUPTIALS.

Both Bride and Groom Members of Pioneer Dungeness Families.

Frank B. Knoph and Bessie May Lotzgesell, daughter of County Commissioner and Mrs. Frank Lotzgesell, were married at the home of the bride's parents at high noon Thursday, December 17, 1913, in the presence of the immediate families and a few intimate friends. Rev. R. C. Johnson officiated.

Immediately following the wedding ceremony a sumptuous wedding dinner was served.

The home was beautifully decorated with ferns and ivy, the ceremony taking place under a large white Christmas bell. The bride was beautifully gowned in embroidered net over white messaline. The bridesmaid, Miss Mamie Knoph, a sister of the groom, was gowned in white organdy. Mr. Henry Lotzgasell, a brother of the bride, was best man. Miss Ruth Smith played the wedding march.

Both the young people were raised from childhood in Dungeness and are favorites with all.

The community extends to them its best wishes for a happy, prosperous married life. They left on the afternoon steamer for up-Sound cities, and upon their return they will reside at the home of the bride's parents until March 1st, when Mr. Knoph will take charge of his father's ranch.

The mild and pleasant December weather we have had during the present month reminds W. K. Clark of the winter of 1892-3, known as the hard winter by all the old settlers of this section. December, 1892, was much the same as the present month, with but little rain and no frosts to speak of. January 27, 1893, snow began falling and continued to fall until the streets of Angeles were covered to a depth of more than four feet on a level, traces of the snow remaining until March, and the mercury going down to about zero. When the walks and trails were shoveled out, the walls of the tunnel were above a man's head. Mr. Clark, John Hickok and Frank Fisher, intent upon seeing the mountains in the winter, were caught in the storm at the Herman Fisher cottage on Lake Sutherland and compelled to remain there some time. Luckily they had a supply of provisions. The snow continued falling there for ten days, and became ten to twelve feet in depth. That was some winter. Port Angeles has not seen the like of it in twenty years.

Some of the editors are predicting an off year in politics next year. It will be badly off for just one half of the candidates.

K FORWARD AND UPWARD.

tten by Walt Mason for the Boys at the Monroe University.

here never was a road so long it ...had an end; and if your're da-t, brave and strong, you'l reach goal, my friend. The clouds of erday are gone, with all the gloom they gave; look forward to tomorrow's dawn, with hearts serene and brave.

There never was a night so dark endless were its hours; the morning comes with singing lark, with sunshine and with flowers. And they who walk in the darkened ways, or who in sadness grope. And if the man whose feet have strayed from off the proper road, corrects the error he has made, and nobody bears his load, he'll find when rosy morning breaks, that men are kind and good; and they'll forget his past mistakes, and guide him from the wood.

There never was a sin so dark its color would not fade; we can remove the crimson mark our evil days have made; a high resolve to walk aright through ages has sufficed, depending largely on our might, and leaning some on Christ.

So let the past go plant its dead; a smiling future lies ahead, its portals open wide.

The high price of products is causing a great deal of talk concerning the possibilities of making money on the farm. We are told that farm life no longer presents the drudgery of the olden days, but that the modern agriculturist lives in comfort if not affluence. In proof of this fact, our attention is called to the motor truck with which the sons of toil bring their produce to market and the automobiles which they have for pleasure purposes. There is a certain amount of truth in this, but the fact remains that the successful farmer of today has to work hard and is systematically, like the farmers of old, if he makes any considerable amount of money, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. The department of agriculture at Washington reports that after the interest on the average mortgage of $1,715 is paid and the farm expenses are substracted from the income of the farm products, the average American farmer has $537.-00 at the end of the year. At first this looks ...

Military Ignorance.

"The late General F. D. Grant," said a Washington official, "was once complaining in my hearing about an ignorant officer. He likened this officer to a certain Private Cheney.

"'Where is Cheney? What the dickens has become of Private Cheney?'

"So, he declared, Cheney was sought for one whole afternoon, but no tidings of him turned up until a comrade finally said:

"'Cheney? Why, I saw Cheney about two hours ago. He was talking about going to get some guncotton to sew a button on his pants with, and that's the last that has been heard of him, I believe.'"

A Mystery of Paris.

One hundred thousand dollars was offered in 1894 for the recovery of an American schoolboy, Webster Conkling, who mysteriously disappeared in Paris. The boy, fifteen years old, was on his way to the St. Lazare railway station in Paris in company with one of his schoolmasters. The master lost sight of the boy for an instant and, turning around, found that he had disappeared as though the earth had swallowed him. Conkling's mother, a wealthy widow, began by offering $5.-000 for his recovery and then increased the reward to $100,000. The money was deposited at Munroe's bank in the Rue Scribe, but never found a claimant.

Ingratitude.

It was a very hot day, and a picnic ad been arranged by the United Socie-r of Lady Vegetarians. They were omfortably seated and waiting for the ettle to boil, when, horror of horrors, savage bull appeared on the scene! nmediately a wild rush was made for afety, while the raging creature ounded after one lady who unfortu-ately had a red parasol. By great ood fortune she nipped over the stile efore it could reach her. Then, re-aining her breath, she turned round. "Oh, you ungrateful creature!" she claimed. "Here have I been a vege-rian all my life. There's gratitude r you!"—London Answers.

Altitude and Temperature.

The lowest temperature yet found in e upper air is below zero 119 degrees , at an altitude of twelve miles, and is over Central Africa. At an altide of six and a half miles in different ations cold ceased to increase, and ationary temperature or a slight rise thermometer occurred. The highest ounding balloon so far is 18.9 miles nd highest kite 4.5 miles. It appears that at great heights some gas exists of great tenuity, and this name for it has been proposed, "geocoronium," to correspond to the corona around the sun. At a height of eighteen miles the air is one-seventy-sixth as dense as at sea level.—New York American.

The White Nights.

June is the month of the "white nights" in the far north. In Finland one can read a newspaper in the open air at midnight, and the sky is bright with a tender, gentle radiance. There is no break between the sunset and dawn, and the same rosy flush serves for both. Strictly speaking, summer in Finland is just one long day. The moment the first star glimmers in the south it is a sign that autumn is at hand. The long period of light exercises a marvelous effect upon vegetation, and the leaves of trees grow to an enormous size. The development of plant life is crowded into a few weeks, but it is none the less perfect for that.

"There's a young woman who makes little things count."

"How does she do it?"
