PORT ANGELES OLYMPIC LEADER

VOL. 30. NO. 6. PORT ANGELES, CLALLAM COUNTY, WASHINGTON, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1914. $1.00 EER YEAR.

ENTITLED TO GREAT CREDIT

Council's Committee Has Cleared Away Difficulties in Connection with Third Street.

There were only five members of the city council present at Tuesday night's session, occasioned by the vacancy, and the death of the mother of one of the members. Considerable important business was transacted.

Grade Ordinances Passed.

The ordinance committee reported back to the council with the recommendation that they do pass, the ordinances establishing the grades of C street and of the portions of streets lying east of Francis and north of Fifth. Adopted.

Railroad Pays Half the Cost of Opening Third Street.

Special committee named to confer with the railroad company in relation to the cost of opening Third street thru the Sampson tract reported that the railroad had agreed to pay 50 per cent of the cost, and to accept a franchise down the middle of the street. Arrangements have also been made with the property owners whereby they agree to sell to the city a 70 foot street at $1200 per acre, the entire street across tracts A, B, C, and D taking approx. 1¾ acres, deed to be placed in escrow. The mayor thought the committee was entitled to a great deal of credit for the manner in which they handled this matter. The report was signed by Shields and Fisher and was adopted by unanimous vote. Clerk directed to write Mr. Shank of the railroad company that proposition is accepted by city and to send down its portion of costs.

$1400 Buick Hose Truck Ordered.

Special committeeman Bigelow in behalf of his committee recommended that a Buick truck be purchased for the fire department as per specifications filed with the committee at a cost of $1,400, $500 to be paid by subscription of fire boys. Recommendation adopted.

Street Supt. reported special sidewalk costs against Eighth street property, and upon motion of Shields clerk was directed to certify same to treasurer with assessment and collection. Supt. also reported cost of sidewalks abutting vicinity of block 261; referred.

City Attorney Smith reported having met with Attorney Thorgrimson, special counsel in re damages to D. W. Morse by reason of grading of Front street and raising of his building. He presented an ordinance drafted by Mr. Thorgrimson authorizing condemnation proceedings, this being considered by him as the best way out.

Ordinance Raising Salaries.

The attorney also submitted by request of council ordinance amending salary ordinance, raising the policeman's salary to $75 per month, the electrician to $100, and councilmen at $5 per day only when acting as a Board of Equalization. The ord. was read twice and referred.

Estimates on Street Improvement in Center of City.

The city engineer submitted the following estimates for the improvement of streets as asked for by council last week as a preliminary to street work if found practicable. The estimates are rough, and the assessment valuations for the year 1913:

First street, Oak to Tumwater, estimated cost $15,000; assessed valuation $28,750.

econd, Cherry to A, Est. cost 00; val. $23,345.

al estimated cost of improve- $185,000; assessed valuations 35.

Police Justice Davis' report showed fines collected for January $40 and several working out fines in jail.

Dr. Lewis on Status of Reserve Lots.

Doctor Lewis appeared before council in behalf of the settlers on the reserve lots, stating that inasmuch as there were several new members he thought it incumbent upon him to give council the exact present status of the matter at this time. He had been accused of being selfish in the matter and he confessed somewhat to this and added that he also had friends on the reserve whom he had an interest in and that he was interested enough in the city to want the city to get its property and the other on the assessment rolls. His recent trip to Washington had put a new phase on the situation to government officials as he had pointed out to them the law under which the settlers had vested rights, and which they had not known of, they confessing to him that they did not know there was any such law, and that all rulings of past years had been erroneous because of that fact. The squatters could take their case into the courts and win out, but law

THE PARENTS-TEACHERS MEETING

Question of Backward Pupils Bro't Out Interesting Discussion of Probable Causes.

The Parents-Teachers Association meeting was held in the auditorium last Monday evening and proved a most interesting session, being also well attended. The parents are all taking an active interest in the meetings and it is gratifying to note that there are just about as many fathers present as mothers. As the meeting was called a week earlier than scheduled time on account of Opie Reid's lecture coming on the regular meeting night, no definite program had been prepared and Professor White submitted an outline on the board which furnished the evening's program. This outline gave the ages children should be in the different grades up to the High School, and also stated the number in school who were either ahead or behind their scheduled grade, also the number who were in the "just right" grade. It was quite surprising to note the number behind their grades, tho' Professor White said it was not so to him as it averaged up much better than the general run of schools and there was a good percentage ahead of their grades. He first explained why from an economical standpoint it was a bad condition to have so many pupils going over the work three and even four and five times. One can readily see that the time and money it is costing the public to keep these backward children in school rightfully belongs to other pupils who have to be deprived of benefits and advantages they otherwise might enjoy. This particular subject bro't up no argument, as the facts stated by Professor White were self-evident. But what explanations can one offer why so many pupils are behind grade? Prof. White stated the reasons given by the various teachers in the different grades. A certain per cent they considered caused by inattendance, others by either physical or mental defects, while still others was caused by indifference.

S. E. Stakemiller tho't that the indifference or lack of interest might be largely overcome by the introduction of vocational training in the schools, citing as an example a school in the East with which he was familiar and in which similar conditions had been wonderfully improved by the interest aroused through the introduction of vocational training. He tho't most of the boys and girls naturally bright enough if conditions could be arranged to fit their particular cases, and today there is a great effort being made, not so much to make the boy and girl fit the school, as the school to fit the needs of the boys and girls. Dr. Hyde said the subject had bro't up his particular hobby—medical inspection of schools—and he gave a very instructive and practical talk along these lines. He tho't that the average boy and girl was bright enough to keep up with their grades under normal conditions

ROAD TO COST $10,000 THE MILE

Cut to Be Made Along Rock Bluffs which Hang Over Edge of Solduck at Big Bend.

The Board of Commissioners in session this week awarded a number of contracts on road work. Ferch & Gass were awarded the most difficult piece, a mile and a half of the Beaver Lake Crescent road which is mostly rock work. Their bid was $32,000.

Six bids were received for graveling the nine miles of road from Morse creek east. The two under consideration were for 93 and 94½ cts. a yard respectively and it will take time to study out which would be the cheaper on account of the different specifications. Arthur Cays and a Mr. McKee were the bidders.

The engineer's estimate of work done on the permanent highway between Sequim and Dungeness amounted to $858.25 for January.

The auditor was instructed to call for bids on the following contract work: Bear Creek Bridge near Beaver; three and a half miles of Beaver Lake Crescent road, and two and a half miles beginning at northwest corner of Sequim townsite and running toward Blyn.

Board adopted resolution declaring Brownrigg & Denio in default on their contract for clearing near Lake Crescent and instructed auditor to so notify the bonding company and ask them to complete work.

The salary of Mr. Getchell, superintendent of Westphal Home, was increased to $100.

The following road supervisors were appointed: District No. 1, F. J. Ward; No. 2, Jos. Pearson; No. 3, Nels Nelson; No. 4, Cliff Wilson of Forks.

Board approved plat of Townsite of Forks.

CLAIMS FIRST VICTIM

Sailor Climbs Tower and Touches Wire of Olympic Power Co.

F. F. Brandt, a seaman from the cruiser Milwaukee, at the Puget Sound naval station, has been the first victim of the Olympic Power company's high tension transmission line. Brandt, in company with several other sailors, on Sunday strolled from Bremerton, following the route of the power company's line until the high tower was reached about two miles from the navy yard city. Brandt, in a spirit of bravado, declared he could climb to the top of the lofty tower. When he reached the top he threw his arms over the wires which were carrying 66,000 volts. Instantly, in a burst of flame and smoke, his charred body was hurled to the ground. The body was burned beyond recognition. Brandt was a youngster, 18 years of age.—Townsend Leader.

LOCOMOTIVE AND RAILS COMING

President Erickson of the Seattle, Port Angeles & Lake Crescent was in the city Wednesday and Thursday on business and reported that the contract for the Elwha bridge and the trestle east of the mill have been let and that contracts will be let the first of the week for the bridges on west to the Lyre river. Engineer Donovan reports that eight car loads of rails have been shipped and that they wil soon have a locomotive here for work. He expects that by May 15th trains will be running from Angeles west to the Lyre river. The laying of rails will be started at the beginning of the grade near the Little River Railroad dock and the logging railroad will be pressed into service in connection with the work.

CITY HAS ADDITIONAL CAUSE FOR REJOICING

Poindexter Bill Providing for a Ninety-nine Year Lease of Base of Ediz Hook to City for Free Factory Sites Now Certain to Be Passed by House within Few Days.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5, 1914.

J. Lloyd Aldwell,

IMPROVING OPERA HOUSE

The opera house management is having extensive improvements made in the interior of the building, fitting it up as a first class picture show and vaudeville house. The old stairway in the outside hall leading to the gallery has been torn out and a new one put inside the opera house. The gallery has been greatly enlarged and is to be fitted up so as to make it the most desirable part of the house in which to sit. Jack Woods is doing the work and it is to be ready for the big celebration next Thursday.

Mr. Thomson, late manager of the Star Theater, has sold out to the Davidson Brothers, who intend to make a number of improvements in the building. Besides a new front, opera chairs are to replace the present seats and a number of other changes are contemplated.

Another car ferry barge carrying a dozen cars loaded with machinery for the Earles mill, arrived yesterday.

GETTING READY FOR SLUICING

Contractor Kuppler began work this week getting the Meyerding property in shape to start sluicing the big mound of dirt down into the back of the lot and the alley. The contract calls for the building to be completed in seventy days.

The Olympic-Leader is in receipt of an especially fine "Big Red Apple" put up in an individual box, from the Yakima Commercial Club. As an announcement of "Apple Day," together with circulars describing the valley as well as the city of North Yakima was included, it made a novel and attractive advertisement.

C. A. Hansen and Howard Wilson were arrested by Game Warden Pike for illegal fishing with nets in the Hoko river, and fined, the former $10 and costs and the latter $20 and costs by Justice Davis.

Its a safe bet there will be no more roasts in Campbell & Peters' Joke on Contractor Erickson.

A BIG DAY IN PORT ANGELES

"Every Part of State Should Congratulate Peninsula on Completion of Enterprise."

"February twelfth, anniversary of Lincoln's birth, will be a big day in Port Angeles and throughout the Olympic Peninsula. It will mark the completion of the Olympic Power Company's great project on the Elwha river," said yesterday's Seattle Times in an editorial which came as the direct result of Secretary Pearce's visit to that city this week.

"Port Angeles has labored long, through many discouragements, to bring about the event now so near completion. It is entitled to bold a great celebration, in which Seattle, Tacoma, and other centers will take part.

The Olympic Peninsula admittedly is one of the most fertile sections of the state, abounding in natural resources.

The forthcoming celebration is most significant. A Port Angeles booster, during a recent visit to Seattle, painted a most interesting picture of present conditions and future prospects in this important tributary section of the Queen City:

"Port Angeles and the Olympic Peninsula are enjoying a prouounced business revival, not only as a result of the completion of the power plant, but by reason of the coming of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, the building of great sawmills, shingle mills and other industrial factors, all of which contribute to the general wave of prosperity now pervading this section."

Events in that section of the state should move on hasty feet in the next five years. The fact that three railroad lines have already made surveys northward from Grays Harbor illustrates the expectation of transportation agencies that an era of development is in immediate prospect.

Just as soon as friendly congressional action has unlocked the stores of capital to American railroads, work should be commenced on one or possibly all of these lines.

The immense timber and other resources of the Peninsula will furnish the desired tonnage. The question is merely one of supply and demand for these articles and of financial facilities for the transportation companies.

Consequently the Port Angeles celebration not only will commemorate one important event already accomplished but will herald the coming of that other and more important development which the future holds in store.

The new project means that the region will soon enter upon the development that has long been promised and long withheld. The country now has power, and it will soon have adequate transportation — the two elements that make for progress.

It is therefore fit that every part of the state should congraulate Port Angeles and the Peninsula upon the completion of an enterprise meaning so much to the people of that part of Washington."

COSTS $200 FOR TAXES WANTS BETTER ROADS

Wm. H. Schmith, one of the pioneer ranchers of eastern Clallam county, was in town Wednesday paying his taxes. Mr. Schmith came to this country in 1877, when to reach Seattle from the present site of the Hotel Washington one had to go down onto the beach and wait for low tide, taking a day's time as like as not. He is the last rancher out on his road south of Port Williams and says that while he paid $200 to the county treasurer for taxes Wednesday, he don't believe there has been as much as that spent on his road by the county in all the years he has lived there. The last two miles of road he put in himself, hiring men with scrapers. Mr. Schmith says that not a great while ago the county paid a man and team $5 a day to fill chuck holes on the road, but instead of hauling gravel the man merely used the team to ride from hole to hole, filling them with clay shovelled from the roadside, and really making the road worse than ever.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

Olympia, February 3.—Agitation for the slaughter of all reactors of the tuberculin test for cattle reveals that the present law, which has been considered an adequate protection since its passage, does not meet the demands of the present day packers or consumers.

"If immediate slaughter is demanded of all the reactors," said Dr. H.T. Graves, state veterinarian recently, "the law should contain some provision allowing the owner reimbursement and not compel him to suffer practical loss. The department will ask the next legislature for this and for a stronger inspection law."

As it stands now, a strong measure of protection is afforded by the indefinite quarantine provision, because the owner cannot dispose of any infected cattle in quarantine without notifying the department; but to protect himself from a total loss, the cattle owner can be putting the new new born calves upon uninfected milk, in a short time replenish his herd and suffer no great loss."

This is the disposition of the vast majority of cattlemen in this state, and it is a well known fact that some of the cleanest herds in the state have been replenished and cleaned out in this way.

Tuberculosis is not considered hereditary. Pure bred cattle with care, even though infected, can be made to net the owner vastly more than the three cents per pound his meat will bring him if it passes the post mortem examination of the $6 allowed by the packers for the condemned carcass.

The enormous amount of berries wasted in this state last year and previous years bids fair to be turned into a commercial asset, if the efforts of the state department of agriculture materialize as expected.

Inquiries have been received by the department from different parts of the country as to the possibility of getting pure fruit juices in this market. A recent ruling of the federal pure food commission prohibiting artificial compounds has sent the syrup manufacturers scurrying into the fruit markets to secure pure fruit syrups.

Assistant Commissioner T. O. Morrison of the department points out that thousands of dollars worth of berries were wasted in counties such as Pend Oreille and Vashon Island because the transportation element in the price made them worthless as a commercial commodity. These same berries, he avers, could have been put in a barrel with sugar and preserved for fruit juices will bring a nice profit later when sold for soda fountain use.

This market he claims has been hitherto closed because almost all of the fruit syrups served were chemical adulterations. He goes so far as to say he believes the syrup of such commercial value that money could be borrowed from the banks to finance the picking and preserving of such fruits.

With 17 organizations now formed for the purpose of fighting fire blight in the Yakima valley, Assistant Commissioner T. O. Morrison of the division of horticulture will go to North Yakima this week to assist in the organization of others. There are prospects of 10 more being formed in the near future and it is the hope of the horticultural division to be able to cover Yakima county with at least 25 such societies to take the place of the large number of assistant inspectors who have been at work.

The state tax commission has issued a set of instructions to county assessors, in an effort to secure uniformity and have the assessments this year as equitable as possible.

Some county assessors, it developed at the recent convention of assessors, had not been listing any cattle or horses less han one year old when found, because the state law makes no specific provision for animals under yearlings. The tax commission asks the assessors to consider the approximate age of the animal on March 1, and to rate animals from nine to 20 months of age as yearlings, but with some distinction as to the exact age. For instance, if the county in question assessed yearlings at $20, an animal nine months old should be assessed at $15 and if 15 months old at 25.

The tax commission has announced that it will recognize the old schedule of hearing the county assessors and railroads this year, hearing the railroad representatives first so that the county assessors may have the advantage of the railroad testimony before making their own statement.

In conclusion the commission states:

"The county assessors of the state can do much to create public sentiment in favor of a constitutional amendment to enable us to get away from the general property tax system. We invite cooperation in spreading the gospel of tax reform thruout this state."

State Bank Examiner W. E. Hanson has announced that his department will rule that state banks are entitled to come under the new national currency plan. An amendment to the banking laws provides that no state bank should subscribe to the stock of another "banking corporation" but eminent lawyers and bankers agree with Examiner Hanson in the belief that this prohibition should not prevent the state banks from subscribing to the stock of one of the regional reserve banks.

With the state banks allowed to come under the act, which most of them are anxious to take advantage of, prospects for securing one of the regional banks for the Northwest, probably for Seattle, are brightened considerably. When the hearing was held at Seattle last week it was feared that with only the national banks subscribing for regional bank stock, the $4,000,000 subscription necessary could not be secured. The subscriptions of the state banks, however, are now expected to make up the difference.

Practically every big employer in the State of Washington has united with the Employers' Association of Washington for the purpose of making a fight to introduce the open shop in the manufacturing establishments of Washington. The big struggle is now on in Seattle. Mr. Gompers, it is stated, pulled off the meeting of the American Federation of Labor in Seattle for the purpose of launching a campaign for the closed shop in the city. The employers have now united and are getting the support of practically every employer in the state. They declare that if Seattle is made a closed shop town it will in a few years find itself in the same industrial condition as San Francisco, where under the closed shop the industries have fallen in the past few years from 4500 in number to 1398, and the number of employes from 45,000 to 14,000. The employers further declare that Mr. Gompers in his proposed attempt to organize the lumber and shingle mills into a closed shop proposition will kill the industry if he is successful. The lumbermen are uniting with the employers to prevent the unionizing of the mills and factories. Thus far the Seattle employers are conceded to have the best of it in their fight against the closed shop.

Dr. Eugene R. Kelley, of Seattle, has just been re-elected state commissioner of health by the State Board of Health. After his two years of service in this capacity, the members of the board took occasion to commend heartily Dr. Kelley's work in behalf of increasingly better health conditions in the state. Dr. Kelley announces that he will at once retire from private practice and give his whole time to his work as commissioner. Prof. E. J. McCaustland, of the State University, was re-elected president of the board. He is also to act as consulting sanitary engineer of the board. A regulation was adopted to the effect that hereafter no case of typhoid fever or para typhoid shall be transported from the jurisdiction of another health officer without first notifying the state health commissioner, who in turn will notify the health officer of the county or city within whose jurisdiction the person suffering with the disease is to be moved.

suits with the government are lengthy and costly, and unless the officials of the Interior Department can be prevailed upon to correct the error it is possible that a new bill correcting the error be passed by congress and in this he had the assurance of Congressman Johnson and Senators Poindexter and Jones that they would do all in their power to restore the rights of the original settlers to them.

Henry Daniels granted release on lots 8 and 9, block 237.

Dann Bros., owners of Dann's Park across Boulevard from head of Francis street ask privilege of clearing Francis street from Ninth to Broadway without cost to city or property owners. Granted.

Property owners of vicinity petitioned for a sidewalk on Francis St. between Fourth and Sixth. Petitioners agreed to lay walk. Referred.

Request of property owners that water on Albert be continued down Albert in its natural course was granted.

Judgment of Superior Court in favor of Chas. George and against city was read. City attorney said he would move to have judgment set aside and matter was referred to him.

The agreement passed last week by council amending the Olympic Power Co.'s franchise to permit measuring on low side instead of high side did not suit Mr. Aldwell who had had inserted some terms which council did not understand. Upon motion of Fisher the agreement went over to allow council to get acquainted with the new phraseology.

Ordinance for East End District.

Engineer Filion submitted plans and specifications for the improvement of the east end district, to supplement the standard specifications. The special committee named to go over the standard specifications recommended their adoption with a clause added that local workmen and local materials be given the preference where practical. Fleming wanted to bar employment agencies furnishing jobs also, but the attorney stated this could not be done. The specifications were adopted after a recess to consider same, and an ordinance directing that the work be done was introduced by Shields, read twice, and referred.

13 Ballots, and No Election.

Fisher then moved that another effort be made to elect a councilman from the Third ward by ballot.

Three ballots were taken, showing two for Finch, two for Leonard, and one for Andreson, when Bigelow moved that the matter be laid over for one week. Lost 3 to 2. The 4th and 5th ballots dropped Leonard and substitited VanBrunt; the 6th gave Andresen two votes and the 7th three with Finch holding his two clear thru to the 12th. The council agreed to lay the matter over after the 13th ballot.

Fleming brought up question of better fire protection for Sixth ward. City would soon have a cart that would not be used; if this is stationed on Lincoln Heights a place will be provided by residents and a volunteer department organized to care for same. He though another hydrant should be put in in vicinity of 11th and C streets. Rfd. to fire wardens.

Bigelow called attention to election of new treasurer who would keep his office at city hall and the necessity of providing a suitable place for him. Rfd. to a special committee: Bigelow, Fisher, and Fleming.

P. F. Harley was then sworn in by Mayor White, his bond having previously been approved.

Shields asked in behalf of Contractor Kuppler that permission be granted to remove the sidewalk to the street and that a portion of the street be fenced in while contractor is putting up new concrete building adjoining the Willson Hardware. Granted.

The mayor called attention to the cramped condition of the engineer's office and the necessity for more light; rfd. to com. in charge of Treas. office.

Mayor White also called attention to need of a buzzer at Front and Laurel as an auxiliary to red light to apprize marshal of calls awaiting him. During days and when marshal is off street the light is not readily seen. Rfd. to light com.

Depositary bond Cit. Nat. Bank to city treasurer was read ano approved

Bids for poles were opened and read as follows:

	65 ft.	40 ft.
A. Jacobson	$5.00	$6.50
Geo. Race	3.25	4.25
Joe Subic	10c linear foot
J. A. Martin	9½c lineal foot
Hartt Bros.	10 and 11c lineal foot

The bid of J. A. Martin was accepted as being about $7 lower than that of Geo. Race. Poles to be delivered at 9th and Race.

Attorney was directed to bring in ordinance for issuance of Local Impt. bonds for Third St. Impt.

Shields stated that much complaint had come to him of late to effect that it was impossible to get even a small job except thru an employment agency. He moved that city attorney bring in ordinance fixing the license of employment agencies in city at $250. Carried.

Sub-division plats of Suburban Block 145 to 144 were passed up to council for approval. This addition is platted by T. T. Aldwell & Co. and has been hanging fire for some months. The engineer stated that on the face of them they complied with his idea, but he could not be expected to approve of them and guarantee them without a field examination. To his knowledge there is a shortage of land in some of the blocks west of M street to extent of 100 feet. City had started out to make these additions conform to city streets, and may possibly have to condemn to do so. He was directed to make field examinations of plats and report, council refusing to approve without his approval.

Shields and Bigelow brought up four instances of where parties in valley were assessed for bridges connecting the hills. Rfd. to street com.

but there were many of them handicapped with weak eyes, defective hearing, diseased tonsils, adnoids or decayed teeth and that he considered medical inspection by a competent, conscientious physician, working under a salary and systematic management, an absolute necessity to the welfare of any schools in a town the size of Angeles. His remarks were greeted with hearty applause showing that "them air" were the sentiments of many of the parents at least, and we hope our school board will soon be able to make arrangements for proper medical inspection, as it being rapidly introduced into all schools of this size thrucut the state and we want to be in the front ranks of progressiveness.

Some time was then given to the discussion of a systematic calisthenics in the school. After being freely discussed by the parents, Miss Brown, H. S. teacher, and Miss Wiggins, third grade teacher, were called on for an expression of opinion and both spoke very emphatically on the subject, urging the need of these exercises, especially of the deep breathing, contending that the outdoor play and games were fine but did not develop or overcome the weak spots or tendencies of many of the pupils. Five minutes devoted to deep breathing in rooms with windows in rooms with the windows and doors thrown wide open would be of inestimable value to both teachers and pupils and put both in better working condition mentally and physically. A resolution to the effect that some system of calesthenics be adopted by our schools as soon as possible and put into daily practice was offered by Mr. Frank Fisher and carried without opposition.

And now while we parents are urging greater efficiency in the schools and offering suggestions of what we would like to see done by the teachers, let us see to it that we also do our part. Growing boys and girls cannot do good work in school if they do not get sufficient sleep; see to it that during school days their evenings are spent at home. Interest yourself in their studies and lend what assistance you can if it only be that of encouragement. Get them up in time in the morning to see that they have a warm nourishing breakfast and go to school neat and clean. Much of the bad air of the school room comes from unclean pupils—a bath is a luxury all can afford in this country and remember the old adage "cleanliness is next to godliness." Last but not least do not keep your children out of school for trifling excuses. It is neither fair to them nor to the other members of the class and as we are all expected to make more or less of a sacrifice for our children, let us do it willingly to give them the advantages of a good education. If there is the right system in the home, children should be able to help materially with the home work mornings, evenings and Saturdays, instead of keeping them out school days to work.

These meetings of parents and teachers are bound to be productive of great good as they bring up questions that set us all to thinking. They will also tend to make the parents visit the schools oftener and become more interested in the work their children are doing.

The next meeting will be held the second Monday in March. What subject would you like to have discussed ?

In honor of Robert Gould's birthday anniversary, John Cain, Jr., entertained a large party of young people at his home Wednesday evening. A delightful time is reported.

Some of the farmers living on the by-roads seem to think that their roads get in bad shape and need fixing sometimes, but of course they don't pay any taxes of any kind so how can they expect it. Even if they did pay taxes, of course the money would have to all go on the main roads where the autos travel the most. That's a sure thing. Its the man with the auto that it trying to make homes in the timber and build up the country and of course they need good roads. Oh, well, may be after a while we will all be county commissioners, then we won't use by-roads either, so there.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Whitney have sold out and are ready to go to Oregon but the baby has been quite sick and has kept them here for a few days.

J. L. Keeler walked in and resumed the management of the Hotel Sinclair last Saturday. Mr. Swanson moved' into Frank Doran's home. He does not intend to leave Sequim and it is reported that he will build a hotel here in the near future.

R. R. Canfield went to Seattle on business Saturday.

C. L. Haggard and Wm. Withers have been busy clearing the river with dynamite, blasting the big trees and logs in the jams.

Walter Grant is clearing his ten acres 1¼ miles west of town, getting it ready for the plow.

Charley McDougall is doing some clearing this winter.

Austin Smith's new and up to date paint store looks fine with its glass front. Austin says he will soon be ready to move in.

A good many are getting their spring plowing done.

Quite a number on Sequim are cutting down their apple orchards saving only enough for home use.

The Rowan and Anderson's railroad camp will move to Sequim in about two weeks if the weather does not get too bad.

The Sequim Creamery's well is now down 265 feet and they are still in sand. E. F. Geirin and Thad Wagoner were inspecting H. J. Priest's well with the view of putting in a pump to supply the creamery with water until their well is finished; there is about thirty feet of water in Hugh's well.

WEST END NEWS

(Intended for last week.)

About four inches of snow fell out here last wek and indications are that more will follow. Everybody regrets that the hunting season for deer is closed as there would be good deer hunting.

A party of young folks spent a very pleasant evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rainey of Sappho one day last week.

H. B. Siefert returned from Seattle last week with a four horse team and outfit to be used in hauling material for the Washington Oil Works. These will open again as soon as the weather will permit and the roads open for traffic. The recent snow makes it difficult to cross the Burnt Mountains on the way to Clallam Bay.

Albin Wahlgreen has been laid up for the last ten days with an attack of rheumatism. He is improving under the care of Dr. Koenig.

Miss Score returned to her home at Clallam Bay after spending several weeks in Port Angeles.

Joel Oberg is spending a week at Forks visiting with relatives and friends.

A letter received this week from Mrs. H. A. Falk, written at Los Angeles, tells of the dreadful rains they had been having that week, making it impossible to cross the streets in some places. They had spent a week at Colton in the orange belt and had enjoyed to the fullest picking and eating the oranges and olives. They had spent two weeks sight-seeing in Los Angeles and were expecting to go to San Diego and back by the way of Redondo and Long Beach. It has been a delightful trip for both Mr. and Mrs. Falk, but just the same we think Angeles will look pretty good to them.

Some of our business men were quite agitated this week over the project of some Seattle men who were here selling stock for a co-operative store which is to be opened in Seattle. If our citizens want a store of this kind, let us have it in our own town where all may reap the benefits. How can we expect to build up Port Angeles if we invest our capital elsewhere and send all our money out of town. Just apply the golden rule and do unto others as you would be done by.

SYNOPSIS.

Kirk Anthony, son of a rich man, with college friends, gets into a fracas in a New York resort. A detective is hurt. Jefferson Locke insinuates himself into the college men's party.

Locke, aided by Kirk's friend Higgins, who thinks it a joke, drugs Kirk and puts him aboard a ship bound for Colon. Kirk is on the passenger list as Locke.

Kirk wins the capital prize, $15,000, in the lottery. He and Runnels make plans for advancement. The Cortlandts, having turned from the older Alfarez, intend to make Senor Garavel, a banker, president of Panama.

"Broke" and without baggage, aboard the ship Kirk makes the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Cortlandt.

Cortlandt is in the American diplomatic service and is going to Panama on a mission. In Colon Kirk, as the son of a big railroad man, is taken up by Weeks, American consul.

CHAPTER VI.

The Reward of Merit.

SOON after Kirk's second return to the park the concert ended, the crowd melted away, and he found himself occupying a bench with a negro of about the same age as himself. For perhaps an hour the two sat there hearkening to the dying noises of the city; then Kirk, unable to endure the monotony longer, turned sharply on his companion and said:

"Why don't you go home?"

"Oh, boss, I got no home!"

Kirk reflected that he had found not only the right place, but also fitting company for his vigil.

"What does a person do in that case?" he asked.

"Oh, he goes to work, sar!"

"For the night, I mean. Are you going to stay here until morning?"

"Yes, sar, if the policeman will h'admit of it."

The fellow's dialect was so strange that Kirk inquired, "Where did you come from?"

"Jamaica, sar. I was barn on the narth coast of the h'island, sar."

"Did you just arrive here?"

"Oh, Lard, no! I 'ave been a liver here for two year. Sometimes I labor on the docks, again in the h'office. Lahst week lose I my position, and today my room h'also. Landladies is bad females, sar, very common."

"Well, it seems we're in the same boat this beautiful evening. I have no place to sleep, either."

"Oh, chot me true, mon."

"I am chatting you true. I'm an outcast of fortune like yourself."

"Such talk! You make I laugh this house. Praise God, you h'appear like a gentleman."

"I trust this little experience will not permanently affect my social standing. By the way, what is your name?"

"H'Allan."

"Hallan?"

"No, sar—h'Allan."

"Is that your first or last name?"

"Both, sar—h'Allan h'Allan."

"Mr. Allan Allan, you're unusually dark for a Scotchman," said Kirk gravely. "Now, speaking as one gentleman to another, do you happen to know where we can get a hand-out"

"'And-out?" inquired the puzzled negro.

"Yes; a lunch. Can't you lead me to a banana vine or a breadfruit bakery? I'm starving. I must get something into my stomach—it's as flat as a wet envelope."

The Jamaican rose, saying: "Step this way, please. I know the place where a very good female is. Per'aps she will make us a present."

"How far is it?"

"Oh, not too far," Allan replied optimistically, and Kirk hopefully followed him.

But at the opposite side of the square they were halted by a sudden commotion which drove all thoughts of food out of their minds. From a building across the street issued a bugle call, upon which an indescribable confusion broke forth. Men began running to and fro; a voice in authority shouted orders, each of which was the signal for another bugle call. Through the wide open doors the Panamanians could be heard, scurrying around a hose cart, apparently in search of clothes.

"Oh, look, boss!" Allan cried quickly. "There must be a 'fagration."

"It's a Spiggoty hose company, as I live. Come on!"

Already a glare could be seen above the crowded portion of the city, and the two set off in that direction at a run, leaving the bugle sounding in the rear and the gallant firemen still wrestling with their uniforms. They had nearly reached the fire when around a corner back of them, with frightful speed and clangor, came a modern automobile fire truck, clinging to which was a swarm of little brown men in red shirts and helmets. Without a pause the Yankee machine whizzed on up the street, its gong clanging, its occupants holding on for dear life, the peaceful inhabitants of Colon fleeing from its path.

Kirk and his guide fell in behind and jogged to the scene of the conflagration.

A three storied building was already half gutted. Out of its windows roared long, fiery tongues. The structure snapped and volleyed a chorus to the sullen monotone of destruction. The street was littered with the household belongings of the neighborhood. On all sides was a bedlam which the arrival of the firemen only augmented. The fire captains shouted orders to the buglers, the buglers blew feebly upon their horns, the companies deployed in obedience to the buglers. Then everybody waited for further directions.

Again the trumpet sounded, whereupon each fireman began to interfere with his neighbor. A series of quarrels arose as couplings were made or broken. Then, after an interminable delay, water began to flow as if by a miracle; but, except in rare instances, it failed to reach the flames. A ladder truck, drawn by another excited company, now rumbled upon the scene, its arrival adding to the general disorder. Meanwhile the steady trade wind fanned the blaze to ever growing proportions.

"Why the devil don't they get closer?" Kirk inquired of his Jamaican companion.

"Oh, Lard, my God, it is too 'ot, sar, greatly too 'ot! It would take a stout 'eart to do such a thing."

"Nonsense! They'll never put it out this way. Hey!" Kirk attracted the attention of a nearby nozzleman. "Walk up to it. It won't bite you." But the valiant fire fighter held stubbornly to his post, while the stream he directed continued to describe a graceful curve and spatter upon the sidewalk in front of the burning building. "You're spoiling that old woman's bed," Anthony warned him, at which a policeman with drawn club forced him back as if resentful of criticism.

For perhaps ten minutes there was no further change in the situation. Then a great shout arose as it was seen that the roof of an adjoining building had burst into flame. At this the fanfare of trumpets sounded again. Firemen rushed down the street, dragging a line of hose and drenching the onlookers. But, despite their hurry, they halted too soon, and their stream just failed to reach the blazing roof. By now the heat had grown really intense, and the more hardy heroes in the vanguard retreated to less trying positions. The voice of the crowd had arisen to a roar rivaling that of the flames.

Kirk pointed to the nearest fireman. "If he'd get up under that wall he could save the roof and be out of the heat. I can't stand this. Let's give him a hand, Allan."

"Very well, sar."

"Here! Help me get a kink in this hose. There! Now you hold it until you feel me pull." Kirk forced his way out through the crowd to find the fireman holding the nozzle, from which a feeble stream was dribbling, and mechanically directing it at the fire. Kirk laid hold of the canvas and, with a heave, dragged it along with its rightful guardian ten feet forward. But there had been no bugle blown order for this, and the uniformed man pulled backward with all his might, chattering at Kirk in Spanish.

"Well, then, let go." Anthony shook the Panamannikin loose, then ran forward across the street until he brought up at the end of the slack and felt the hose behind him writhe and swell as Allan released his hold. The next instant the negro was at his side, and the two found themselves half blistered by the heat that rolled out upon them. But the newly ignited roof was within range, and the stream they played upon it made the shingles fly.

The fireman they had despoiled began to drag at the hose from a safe distance, but when Kirk made as if to turn the nozzle upon him he scampered away amid the jeers of the crowd. A few moments later the American felt a hand upon his arm and saw an angry policeman who was evidently ordering him back. Behind him stood the excited nozzleman with two companions.

"He says you should return the 'ose where you found it," Allan translated.

"Leave us alone," Kirk replied. "You fellows help the others. We'll attend to this." More rapid words and gesticulations followed, in the midst of which a dapper young man in a uniform somewhat more impressive than the others dashed up, flung himself upon Anthony and endeavored to wrench the hose from his hands. Meanwhile he uttered epithets in broken English which the other had no difficulty in understanding. Kirk promptly turned the nozzle upon him, and the full force of Colon's water pressure struck him squarely in the stomach, doubling him up like the kick of a mule. Down the newcomer went, then half rolled, half slid across the street as the stream continued to play upon him.

"I guess they'll keep away now," laughed Kirk, as he turned back to his self appointed task.

But an instant later a half dozen policemen advanced in a businesslike manner, and their leader announced, "Come, you are under arrest!"

"Pinched—what for? We're doing a lot of good here."

"Come, queeck!"

"Oh, Lard, my God!" Allan mumbled. "I shall die and kill myself!"

"They won't do anything to us," Kirk assured him. "I've been pinched lots of times. We'll have to quit, though, and that's a pity. It was just getting good."

He surrendered the hose to a fireman, who promptly retreated with it to a discreet position, then followed his captors, who were now buzzing like bees.

"Don't get excited," he said to Allan, noting his frightened look. "They'll turn us loose all right."

But a moment after they were clear of the town he was surprised to see that the negro's captors had snapped "come alongs" upon him in spite of his repeated promises to go quietly. These handcuffs, Kirk saw, were of the type used upon desperate criminals, consisting of chains fitted with handles so contrived that a mere twist of the officer's hand would cut the prisoner's flesh to the bone. The men on each side of the Jamaican twisted stoutly, forcing the black boy to cry out in pain. He hung back, protesting:

"All right, sar, I'll come. I'll come."

But again they tightened their instruments of torture and their victim began to struggle. At this an evil faced man in blue struck him brutally upon the head with his club, then upon the shoulders, as if to silence his groans. The boy flung up his manacled hands to shield himself, and the light from a street lamp showed blood flowing where the chains had cut. The whole proceeding was so unprovoked, so sickening in its cruelty, that Kirk flew into a fury and, disregarding his own captors, leaped forward before the policeman could strike a third time. He swung his fist and the man with the club hurtled across the street as if shot from a bow, then lay still in the gutter. With another blow he felled one of the handcuff men, but at the same time other hands grasped at him and he was forced to lay about vigorously on all sides.

They rushed him with the ferocity of mad dogs, and he knocked them spinning, one after another. A whistle blew shrilly, other uniforms came running, more whistles piped and almost before he realized it he found himself in the center of a pack of lean faced brown men who were struggling to pull him down and striking at him with their clubs. With a sudden wild thrill he realized that this was no ordinary street fight; this was deadly; he must beat off these fellows or be killed. But, as fast as he cleared them away, others appeared as if by magic, until a dozen or more were swarming upon him like hungry ants. Time and again they dragged him off his feet, only to have him shake them loose. But he was felled at last, and a moment later, with head reeling and wits flickering, he was dragged to his knees by handcuffs like those on Allan's wrists. The pain as the chains bit into his flesh brought him to his feet despite the blows and kicks that were rained upon him, crying hoarsely:

"Let me go, confound you! Let me go!"

But a wrench at the gyves took the fight out of him, for he felt that the bones in his wrists must surely be crushed. One side of his head was strangely big and numb. A warm stream trickled down his cheek, but he had no time to think of his condition for his assailants fell upon him with fresh fury and he reeled about, striving to shield himself. Every movement, however, was construed as resistance, and his punishment continued, until at last he must have fainted from pain or had his wits scattered by a blow on the head, for when he recovered consciousness he found himself in a filthy, ill lighted room, flung upon a wooden platform that ran along the wall, evidently serving as a bed. Near him Allan was huddled, his black face distorted with pain and ashen with apprehension.

"Where are we?" queried Anthony as he took in the surroundings.

"This is the prison, sar."

"Gee! I'm sick." Kirk lay back upon the platform and closed his eyes. "Did they hurt you much?"

"Oh, yes. Very considerably."

"Sorry I got you into it, Allan. I never thought they'd be so cranky." Again he groaned. "I want a drink."

"Let me get it. Those Spiggoties will not give it to you."

Allan went to the door and called to the guard. An instant later he returned with a tin cup.

"I guess they knocked me out," Kirk said dazedly. "I never was hit like that before—and jailed! Say! We must get out of here. Call the chief or the man in charge, will you? I can't speak the language."

"Please, sar, if you h'anger them they will beat us again."

"Beat! Not here?"

"Oh yes. They might kill us."

"They wouldn't do that!"

"A white man they killed lahst h'autumn, and several of my people have passed away in this prison. Nobody can 'ear nothing. Nobody knows what 'appens 'ere."

"Oh, well, they wouldn't dare touch us—I'm an American citizen. I'll notify the consul."

Roused at the mere suggestion, Kirk staggered to the door and shouted lustily. A sergeant appeared with the command to be quiet.

"Let me out of here!" loudly demanded the prisoner. "I want the chief, or the alcalde, or somebody in charge. I want to know what I'm booked for. I want to telephone—telephone, don't you understand—and arrange bail. Quick, now!"

But the officer merely frowned at him, obviously threatening a resort to force if this outburst did not cease at once. Then he went away. An hour passed, and he did not return. Then another hour followed, and Anthony, who had now begun to feel the effect of his drubbing more keenly, renewed his clamor, with the result that a half dozen policemen appeared. From their demeanor it looked as though they were really bent upon mischief, but Kirk soon saw that an official had come in answer to his call. He felt less reassured when he perceived that the person in uniform who now stepped forward was the same upon whom he had turned the hose earlier in the evening.

ATHLETIC CLUB HAS TWO FIRES

Fire alarms both Sunday and Monday mornings between three and four o'clock startled the light sleepers and put fear into the hearts of many who are living in constant dread of a fire in the business district. Both fires were in the same building, in the upper rooms over the old Olympic theater, owned by Willson & Short and rented to the Angeles Athletic Club for a smoking and meeting room. We understand the boys were deeply interested in a game of auction bridge and had rather a hot fire; it is not known whether the roof caught from flying sparks or a defective flue. But little damage was done Sunday morning, but there was quite a blaze Monday when Harry Fredericks and wife, living next door, were awakened by the continuous barking of their dog. They turned in an alarm and the firemen were soon on duty and once more succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Considerable damage was done to the building but Mr. Short tells us it will be repaired in good shape at once.

Purchaser can secure lease at low rate of rental of the two story building adjoining, now used by us for office and storage purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ahlvers were given a most happy surprise by their many German friends in the city Saturday evening. They gathered at his home on Eighth street near Peabody to the number of about fifty and celebrated the recent marriage of Mr. Ahlvers in true German style. There were all kinds of good things to eat and drink and everybody was merry and joyful.

Mr. McCartey's Bible Class of the M. E. Sunday school was very pleasantly entertained last Friday evening at the Epworth League's social hall by Comittee No. 3. After a most enjoyable musical and literary program very delicious refreshments were served and everybody had a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Babcock have recently moved here from Oakes, N. Dak., and are living on Fourth and Race. Mr. Babcock is a contractor and well known by the Walton Bros. as he hails from the same place.

Mr. Coffey, the new jeweler, has rented the Huddleson bungalow on Pine Hill.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS MADE

Exercises of the Day at the Opera House at 2:00 p.m. Banquet and Ball in Evening.

Final arrangements for the celebration of the completion of the Olympic Power Company's hydro-electric plant on February 12th, have been practically completed by the executive committee.

The exercises of the day will begin at the opera house at 2:00 p.m. where the principal speeches of the invited guests will be delivered, among whom in all probability will be Covernor Lister, together with a stereopticon exhibition of Olympic peninsula views by Asahel Curtis of Seattle. (There will be no admittance fee in the afternoon.)

The local G. A. R. Post has also been invited and will attend the exercises at the opera house.

The banquet, at the Olympic Hotel, will begin at six o'clock p.m. The usual after dinner speaking will of course take place after the meal has been served. The one dollar fee for the banquet will admit all holders of tickets to the dance at the opera house in the evening; all others will be charged 75 cts. for the dance.

The necessity of purchasing tickets at once to the banquet is urged upon everybody, for the number will be limited; it is also proposed to seat the entire crowd at one time in the spacious lobby, obviating the confusion that would otherwise arise. As another reason for buying tickets promptly, the hotel management will have to be notified at least three days in advance, so that they may be in position to provide accommodations for the crowd.

It is assumed naturally that Port Angeles will be on hand, and will do herself proud on this great occasion. It is seldom that any city has the opportunity to place itself so conspicuously in the limelight as will Port Angeles on February 12th. The eyes of the world are focussed upon us and as a matter of civic pride, to say nothing of selfish motives, we should spare not energy or effort to demonstrate to the public that we are keenly alert to a momentous situation.

Tickets are on sale at all the drug stores, Harrington's and Shields' cigar stores, the banks and other business houses. Don't delay, buy your tickets NOW!

Gus Coleman, a well known mill wright and carpenter, employed at the Earles Mill, dropped dead from heart trouble while at his work Friday afternoon. Funeral services were conducted by the Fraternal Order of Elks from the Fulmer Undertaking Parlors Monday morning and interment was in Ocean View cemetery. Besides a widow, formerly Mrs. Charles Such, Mr. Coleman leaves several children in the East. He was about 63 years of age.

MRS. MARY SOULEN

Mrs. Mary Soulen, mother of Frank Dustman, passed away last Monday evening, February 2nd. She had been poorly for some time so her death was not altogether unexpected. Besides her son Frank, she leaves one son in Ohio and one in Pennsylvania. Funeral services were held at the M. E. church Thursday at twelve, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Phillips, and burial was in Ocean View cemetery.

The many beautiful floral offerings testified to the high regard in which deceased was held.

Mrs. Mary Soulen was born in Stark county, Ohio, March 16, 1836, where she lived until 1878, then moving to Ottawa, Kansas, where she lived for five years. After returning to Ohio for a short time, she moved out west to San Francisco and lived there about five years. In 1889 she came to Port Townsend and later to Port Angeles, where she remained until her death February 2nd, 1914, aged 77 years.

In her early life she united with the German Reformed Church. She became a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Port Angeles on Feb. 9, 1896, and remained a faithful member till she heard the call to come up higher, "Well done, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

We desire to express our appreciation and gratitude to the many kind friends and neighbors who extended assistance and sympathy in our bereavement.

Wednesday Wilson W. Loveless, postmaster of Ozette, appeared in court charged with assault in second degree upon the person of Anders Nylund, also of Ozette. He confessed to beating Nylund, but alleged that it was after he was attacked and in defending himself, not being able to get away. There were no witnesses. The defendant agreed to plead guilty to the lesser charge of assault in the third degree and because of the lack of testimony and evidence of good citizenship of defendant this was accepted by the prosecutor and Court, and he was assessed the costs and given a suspended sentence of 90 days pending good behavior.
