ASSESSMENTS CONFIRMED

Contractors Must Begin Work Within 15 Days. Lincoln Heights Takes New Start.

Ordinances confirming assessments and assessment rolls in Improvement Districts Nos. 11 and 12, and providing for the improvement of C street were passed at the Council meeting Tuesday evening. The contractors now have 15 days in which to get to work.

Resolutions were introduced providing for the improvement of 8th street from M to C and of K street from 3rd North to 16th; hearing was set for April 7th. Similar resolutions were introduced some weeks ago but laid on the shelf pending the raising of funds guaranteeing cost of preliminary work.

Complaint had been made that Mr. Fred Bishop was making a practice of driving his automobile along the sidewalks that run up the slopes of the foothills back of town, and the council giving him a hearing, he stated that the mud was over the hubs, making the street impassible, and besides, there was not a person in the block who could be harmed in any way by his using the sidewalk. He extended an invitation to the members of the council, singly or collectively, to take a joy ride with him up Oak street and learn the true conditions for themselves.

Street Superintendent Wm. Graham verified Mr. Bishop's statements, adding that in an unguarded moment he had yielded to Bishop's blandishments and accepted an invitation to participate in his little rope-riding stunt. He was so badly scared by the time he reached Bishop's house that he could hardly get his breath to say anything, and he had only just gotten over it. He was convinced not many cars could have gotten away with it, and what was more, he recommended that the road be repaired at a cost of $35 and it was so ordered.

Mr. Graham is easily the most popular man in town today, with the automobile fraternity at least, and the council has set an example that it will have to follow in the future, or risk its collective neck in the effort to show why improvements should not be made.

Mayor White appointed C. H. Lundell to the position of general superintendent of the electric light system; no action taken.

Clerk instructed to order 2000 lbs. of wire, purchase of the same having been recommended by City Electrician Church.

Complaint having been made concerning stagnant pool at First and Lincoln, where drain is stopped up, street committee was instructed to examine and report.

Police Judge J. M. Davis reported the collection of $32.00 in fines during the month of February.

Clerk instructed to draw warrant in favor of State Industrial Insurance Commission for $131.08, the amount due from the city.

Puyser & Weismann having sold the Eagle Bar to C. F. Swanson, application for change in license was granted.

B. G. Wilcox took the oath of office as councilman-elect from the 2nd ward.

Attorney was instructed to bring in an ordinance cancelling all wharf franchises, where no use has been made of the grants, also to report as to what streets have been reserved for municipal wharfage purposes.

Special committee reported having arranged for the second floor of the Morse Block for municipal purposes, for either two or four weeks, at $100 per month.

Adjustment of insurance reported at $959.04 on city hall building and $600 on the contents. Company to repair building to amount, and if there be any over to return same to the city.

NEW DRUGGIST HERE SUNDAY

Willis Mathewson expects the new druggist, Mr. Porter, who is to have charge of the Olympic Hotel drug store, to be here Sunday and the store will be opened up for business as soon as the new soda fountain arrives.

REV. RICE HAS RESIGNED PULPIT AT ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. Rice of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, announced last Sunday from the pulpit that he had decided to accept a call to another church and would be leaving here soon. An Eastern man is expected to fill his place.

We regret to see Rev. Rice and his estimable wife leave Port Angeles for they are exceptional people and have endeared themselves in the hearts of many by their unselfish devotion to the Church and its needs and their gentle kindness to all.

They go to Eureka, Utah.

PORT ANGELES HAS A REXALL STORE

Every important city and town in the United States has a Rexall Store, where the popular Rexall Remedies are to be had. In the future Port Angeles will be classed among these important cities as Beetle & Simmonds, the druggists, have installed a stock of the Rexall goods, and expect to carry the complete line before the close of the year. There are now over 7,000 Rexall stores in the world and the Rexall Remedies have become synonomous with the purest and best in the drug line. Their guarantee is money back if not satisfactory.

LAST RAILROAD SUITS SETTLED

Trial of Ex-Mayor Mead and Others for Deporting Fred Wright Comes Off Today.

The Superior Court convened Monday, the first day being taken up with minor matters, and the rest of the week occupied with jury matters.

A sale of real estate was ordered in the matter of the estate of Edgar O. Rex, an incompetent.

Mrs. J. E. Walton was appointed Guardian of Margie, Lester, Florence and Phyllis Walton, minors, and bonds fixed at $2800.

Will of Henry L. Boyd was admitted to probate upon evidence of witnesses thereto. Mrs. Albertson, daughter, is named as executrix.

In supplementary proceedings to Judgment in Kitsap county in case of Missouri Fidelity & Casuality Co. vs. Henry Ferguson and C. F. Neal, the Court found that defendants had no property whatever subject to execution.

State vs. Frederick Kruger.

Tuesday morning the jury case of the State vs. Frederick Kruger was taken up. This cause was brought by prosecutor upon the marriage of defendant to Mrs. Beach, who was at the time the legal wife of Herbert Beach. On the trial defendant did not deny his marriage to Mrs. Beach, but alleged that she had told him she was not Beach's legal wife, and that he married her in good faith with no thought of doing wrong. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty as charged. The penalty on this charge is not to exceed three years in penitentiary.

Jury Disagreed in State vs. Hall, Dickerman and Bodin.

Tuesday afternoon the case of the State vs. Earl Hall, Oliver Dickerman and R. A. Bodin was heard. An order was entered dismissing case as to Bodin, and defense asked that Hall be tried separately. Plaintiff's evidence was to effect that Thos. Christensen was on the afternoon of Dec. 4th robbed of some $60 or $70 in the Old Crow saloon. Dickerman on the stand confessed he took the money from Christensen. Some one behind him said "Here, give it to me" and knowing friends of Christensen were trying to get the money for preservation to Christensen, he handed it back, and did not know who got it. Later Hall gave him $20 which he sought to put away when he was arrested. Complaining witness was too intoxicated to know much as to what happened and the half dozen other witnesses examined by plaintiff added little to Dickerman's testimony. Defendant was the

Has Nothing on the Hula, which Requires Small Floor Space and Develops Digestive Organs

March 3rd, 1914.

My Dear Editor:

The writer and his wife are about to cast off the lines and return to the native heath. This will be my last letter to friends at home as I hope soon to meet them and in person tell them of my modest adventures in the Paradise of the Pacific. There may not be much to tell, for I believe I have covered a wide scope of topics in my correspondence, including ethnology and race suicide.

One of my Angeles friends wrote me the other day and inquired if I had seen the night-butterflies of the Hawaiian Islands and the rare orchid that Baron Rothschild paid two thousand dollars for; to this I must reply in the negative. There are but few butterflies to be seen in the daytime and I do not go out much at night, at least I do not look at the butterflies at so late an hour. As to the orchid, I have seen a famous collection of this much-talked-of flower at Mr. S. M. Damon's magnificent estate "Moanalua" but I cannot say that I paid any attention to the various species.

Moanalua is a private estate of 8 to 9,000 acres, part of which is leased and the income devoted to the upkeep of a public park. The owner, a public spirited man, maintains it for the benefit of the public, which enjoys an unrestricted admission to one of the most beautiful places I ever saw in my life. Here is every known tropical plant and the owner keeps experts in distant lands adding to the collection. The horticultural gardens are taken care of by a corps of gardeners and the landscaping is simply "a dream." One part of the park is characteristically Nipponese with its five story granite lanterns (goju no too), its gateways, arched bridges, stones of measured tread, which direct ones steps across streams, its tea-gardens and tea-houses, the most of which has been shipped here directly from Japan. The public is invited by the generous owner to enjoy all of it and no "keep-off-the-grass" signs are to be seen anywhere on the premises.

Should the visitor care to step inside the tea-house and inspect its furnishings and a costly collection of kimonas, the Japanese lady in charge will call your attention to a sign, "Visitors must remove their shoes," an injunction easily enough complied with by the Japanese, who simply kick their slippers off, but in the case of the fashionable Occidental ladies, who prilgrimage to this favored spot, the rule has a deterrent effect. It is amusing to watch a party of tourists arriving at the tea-house; invariably the male members of the party will sit down on the threshold and pull off their foot gear while the ladies will prefer to inspect the flower beds awaiting the return of their escorts. After a brief lapse of time a woman's curiosity gets the better of her complaisance; she will ask for a button hook, take a pull at the narrow skirt, and then proceed to remove the dainty shoes. The floor of the tea-house is of the costliest imported woods and in Japan the custom is not to use coverings of any kind, hence the precaution. On Saturday afternoon the owner himself receives the visitors and invites them to inspect a house rich in art treasures of all kinds. Refreshments are served and the guests are seated while being waited upon by pretty maidens in Oriental costumes.

There is one topic, which I perhaps should touch on briefly; it absorbs the interest of visitors greatly and may be dwelt upon by a few of your readers. It is the Hawaiian language, which is mostly spoken by the natives here; in fact, it is surprising how few among the various alien nationalities here can understand and talk the English language. The Hawaiian language is very much in evidence here and forced on your attention in many ways; it is spoken fluently with a gutteral sound resembling in a way the language of the Indian. At first the many odd names of streets, places and persons

JACK WOOD HAS CONTRACT

Lewis, Wiley & Morse have sublet the Railroad Avenue portion of the street improvement contract to Jack Woods, as the work is of a different character, being mostly trestle building. Mr. Woods will get at the work at once as upon its completion depends the early beginning of railroad work east from Laurel street.

Earles big mill is fast nearing completion and will be in operation by April first if all goes well. Tuesday evening a shrill whistle rent the air when they were doing a little trying out, while installing some of the machinery, and it sure will be a powerful one when operated with plenty of steam.

Lange's building on Front street, occupied by him for a number of years with his music store, has been partitioned and remodeled and one-half rented for a restaurant and the other for a dry goods store.

Ex-Mayor Geo. F. Cotterill of Seattle will address the Congregational Brotherhood Monday evening next on "The Benefits Accruing to Puget Sound by the Opening of the Panama Canal."

Bricklaying commenced Wednesday noon on the Myerding building and it is expected the walls will be up by the first of the week.

ATTEMPTED TO BURN THE TOWN

Evidence Shows Someone Was Making Desperate Effort to Obtain Stake from Insurance.

Following close upon the heels of the fire in the City Hall Friday morning, which, it is now believed, was set with the intention of rendering the fire department helpless, came two other attempts to burn up the city.

Had the marshal been three minutes later in making an arrest and starting for the city jail, there is no question but that the fire hose and equipment could not have been saved. Without the hose, the fire started Friday evening in a rear room of Dr. Hyde's office, in the Levy building in the exact center of town, would have taken out every building. Within a few minutes after being discovered by Ed Shields on his way home, the fire had made such headway that it could not have been extinguished by means of chemicals and there would have been nothing for it but to stand on the hill and watch the town burn.

The second alarm which came almost before the boys had turned the water off at the Hyde fire, was caused by the pouring of a dense smoke from the windows of the bowling alley, across from the Angeles Hotel. Here was found a self evident plant, a five gallon can of gasoline, with punctured top, surrounded by a mass of burning excelsior, the can which was carried out by McDonnell, being already nearly too hot to hold. A fire had also been started near the front of the building, and there is evidence to show that attempts have been made previously.

From circumstantial evidence secured—and there appears to be a considerable quantity of it—Sheriff Gallagher and Deputy Davis felt warranted in arresting the proprietor of the old bowling alley, Jack Burkeston, and charging him with the crime. Burkston has had a preliminary hearing and his bond set at $2000 by Judge Ralston.

CANDY FACTORY THE LATEST

A candy factory is the newest thing in mercantile circles in Angeles, or at least it will be tomorrow morning when the doors are thrown open. Peter McGoff, a long-time resident of Lincoln Heights, is the proprietor. He has rented the Mrs. Goldwater building, Front and Lincoln, bought a complete equipment and put it in charge of an experienced candy manufacturer. Four people have been working in the factory all week in an effort to get a complete line ready for the opening day. Mr. Goff will also make ice cream of the better kind.

CITY HOLDS EMPTY SACK

Council Turns Down Franchise, Securing Absolutely No Possible Advantage Thereby.

The application of Mr. C. J. Farmer for the Angeles Telephone Company, an organization of home men, for an extension of franchise was turned down by the City Council Tuesday evening.

The matter first came up on report of Chairman of the Committe Bigelow, to whom the franchise had been referred. In a mumbling and apparently shamefaced manner Mr. Bigelow stated his objections, which as near as could be inferred were that thirty years was too long a time for the grant, that the percentage payable to the city should be based upon the gross receipts, and that the company was tied down to nothing in particular.

Mr. Farmer being present when the franchise came up for final action, was given a hearing and in a straightforward manly way told of his desires and plans regarding the improvement of the system.

"Twelve years ago last Saturday," said Mr. Farmer, "I landed in Port Angeles. There have been many changes in that time. My first investment was in the cannery, then defunct. It being necessary to have a means of communication with the local telegraph offices, we ran a line between them and our offices, thus installing the first telephones in the county.

"Subsequently, in October, a number of us applied for a 20-year franchise, which was granted and still has eight years to run. Our lines have been extended all over the city, and it is a large townsite, and we have also given Angeles communication to the east and west, as well as up the mountain roads.

"In twelve years there has never been a cent of dividends; every dollar we have earned has gone back into the business in response to constant demands for extensions. We feel we have given the people a good service for a country line.

"The city is now taking on cosmopolitan airs, making it necessary to spend a lot of money. In the telephone business we must anticipate the growth of the town; we must build at least five years into the future. In Port Angeles this is quite a problem, one on which we all differ. One man says we will have 20,000 in five years, and the next person scouts the idea, saying 10,000 is nearer the mark.

"One cannot get a large amount of money for a public utility corporation unless he can show a reasonable profit. One cannot get money to build a system that will be five years in advance of the demands of the town, with a franchise that has only eight years to run.

"The franchise is reasonable; we have taken a great deal of pains in drafting it. In Bremerton they granted us a franchise identical in every point. Bremerton is a live, wide-awake city and they had a number of very bright men on the council who picked the franchise to pieces and could find no reasonable fault with it.

"The present franchise," said Mr. Farmer, "provides that the city shall receive an average of 1½ per cent of the gross receipts. The cost of operation, superintendent, linemen, exchange girls, and maintenance, takes 50 per cent of the gross receipts. A tax on the gross receipts is a tax on the labor, which is neither right nor just. A tax of 3 per cent on the net receipts will amount to the same thing in the end. Under the provisions of the ordinance the books are always open to inspection and the ordinance especially provides for arbitration if the city is not satisfied in any manner.

"As to the question of a provision for right to purchase, the city cannot own and operate the outside lines; it would not be practicable, feasible nor legal for city to purchase system. To take over the central exchange and lines within the heart of the system, leaving the company with the detatched mountain lines, would be like taking the meat out of a watermelon and leaving the company the rind.

"We have made all arrangements for the improvement of the system. We have plans for a two story brick veneer building on Fourth and Laurel, 32 by 60, that will be a credit to the town. The new system will require four car loads of aerial cable, taking the place of the multitude of wires along the streets. The improvements will cost 35, or 40,000, and in order to borrow that amount we must have a fair franchise.

"We have been building the system out of the earnings and it has been a slow process. The earnings have not enabled us to keep abreast of the development of the town. We have four and five families on a line. We have run all the lines into the exchange that are possible; an increase in population means a constantly increasing number of patrons on each wire. It was a good country system, but the town has grown beyond it. We cannot wait for the earnings to put in a multiple system if we are to have efficient service. As it is, it will take ninety days to get the cable made and all summer to install the system."

City Attorney Smith endorsed Mr. Farmer's statements that City would have no legal right to purchase entire system. Councilman Fisher said that every citizen knows Mr. Farmer to be a man absolutely fair and square who would do just as he agreed. The proposed system would be equal to that of any city and it must keep pace thereafter as a matter of business. Mr. Shields said he was in favor of municipal ownership as a matter of principle, but we must first own our water plant. Mr Farmer could give us a big city system and was willing to do it if we would make it possible for him to sell bonds, Mr. Dustman paid Mr. Farmer a high tribute and asked that he be given a square deal as one of our own citizens in whom we have every confidence. Mr. Fleming was willing to give more time, but not 3o years, and he wanted percentage based upon entire receipts. Mr. Wilcox could see no reason why the franchise

$6,800 TO RAISE MORSE BLOCK

Judgment is to Be Had for Amount and New District Made to Secure $2,800 of Sum.

Bids received by the City Council and D. W. Morse for raising the Morse Block, ranging from $6,500 submitted by Olsen & Nicholson, to $13,000, were considered at several meetings this week, the Council finally rejecting all bids and agreeing with Mr. Morse to settle the matter on a basis of $6,500, with an extra allowance of $300 as salary for superintendence. A judgment is to be had in the Superior Court for that amount. An allowance of $4,000 had been made for the work in the original estimate for the entire improvement, and it will be necessary to create a new district in order to collect the remaining $2,800.

WANT MONEY SPENT ONLY ON A PERMANENT ROAD

Ole Klaboe and Peter Deppiese, pioneers of the West End, were here the latter part of last week, meeting with the board of county commissioners in special session, Mr. Clark of the third district not being present, discussing the question of road work in the third district. These gentlemen claim that there should be no more road work in their district without a survey, and then only along sectional lines, where it could be permanent, and that there is no authority for the transfer of road funds from one district to another. Messrs. Klaboe and Deppiese say that they are asking for nothing unreasonable, that all they want is fair play and everyone is entitled to that simply overwhelms a newcomer and he throws up the sponge, determined not to bother with the language during a brief stay on the islands, but slowly he gets at least partly interested, and endeavors to catch the meaning of, and to learn a few of the words and phrases so much in vogue, as for instance, the word "porch" is never used here but its Hawaiian substitute "lanai." Likewise this is the case with "luau" for a feast or banquet, "aloha" for greeting friends or bidding them good bye, "Malikini" is used for a stranger and "Kamaaina" for a resident. In designating the seaward side of a place the Hawaiian word "makai" is used, and the land side is called "mauka." The aforesaid terms and several others are simply incorporated into the English language as spoken on the Hawaiian Islands and a stranger has no alternative but to get used to their application. Mastering these initial steps, his eardrums are meanwhile incessantly bombarded with the names of the principal places, car lines, etc., like: Waikiki, Kapiolani, Waialae, Kalihi, Pawaa and their familiarity is automatically doing its work without any effort on his part. Arriving at this stage, he engages in conversation some educated Hawaiian and brings in the subject of their language. From this source he learns that the Hawaiian language is composed of twelve letters, five of which are vowels, namely: a, e, h, i, k, l, m. n, o, p, u, w. It is short enough but to make up for its brevity it strikes me that they do a lot of unnecessary repeating in the composition of words, some of these latter are a mile long, while but few enjoy the distinction of being words of few letters. The adoption of the Hawaiian language would be a handicap to the "lady of many words" as the reader will readily see, for instance, the name of one of their fishes is "Humuhumunukunukeapuaa." As a consequence of the limited alphabet, they cannot avoid an endless repetition of letters in their words, which are bewildering and tedious to a foreigner.

Last Sunday we took a ride on the railroad following the picturesque coastline meandering the mountain ranges and I attempted to follow the route on the map; here are some of the names of the principal points we saw, that is, of those in the K class: Kawaihapai, Kalauaa, both stations, Mouna Kaala (4030 ft.) highest elevation in the coast range; we further saw Kanaha Cave and the barking sands, the Kahuku sugar plantation. The names of the principal points marking the contour of the coast line of the island to the west and north are: Kaena Pt., Kahuku Pt., Kahana and Koko Pts., and so on. I am informed that their language is expressive and that a name conveys to the hearer a description of the subject. Lilliuokalani, the name of the ex-queen, means "Lily of the Heavens" and "Ainahau," the name of her beautiful retreat on the Waikiki beach, means the land of ice, so designated for its cool and shady retreats.

The name of a little lady friend of mine is "Laolanikahikoloa" and was she not such a darling my attachment would soon cease and I would bother no further on account of her name, but she is "a dream," if that term will cover the description of a little dark-brown complected fairy of fourteen with a pair of eyes that remind me of one of those liquid pools among the banana trees on the queen's estate "Ainahau" when the moonbeams find their way through the dense foliage. However, no description is adequate of doing the subject justice and for the benefit of your readers I have invited the living model to visit me when she has finished her education and thus give my home town a chance to admire a direct lineal descendant of the former Hawaiian chiefs. If she comes we will call her by the Hawaiian name on Sundays and holidays, only, when we have plenty of time, and on week days we will simply call her "Anna" as she is called in school. The family we got acquainted with on a visit to the Royal Mausoleum where the remains of the deceased members of the two dynasties, the "Kamehamehas and the Kalakauas, are interred. The girl's grandfather is the trusted caretaker of the mausoleum with its grounds, and on the day of our visit the children were visiting the old homestead. We were invited in and very hospitably treated by these people; since then we have visited with the girls' family at their home. The mother is a Hawaiian lady with the royal blood in her veins, while her husband is of German descent; he is not permitted to enter the sacred precincts of the mausoleum, a privilege granted to no other but persons of royal descent in accordance with the sacred rules of the ancient tabu.

Since early history of the Polynesian race the "tabu" system was the effective club by which the masses of the people were governed and held in leash. It was the religion as promulgated by the kahinas (priests) and answered its purpose as well, and better, than the "damnation" gospel as espoused by our clergy in former centuries. The tabu covered a multitude of "dont's" and there were but few things left for a commoner that he dared to do without punishment. If a commoner crossed the shadow of a king or high chief he was instantly put to death, nor did he dare to remain standing in the presence of his ruler. A chief had trusted servants to look after the dishes he ate of and a trustee of rank to guard his spittoon. The penalty for anybody to touch royal spittle was instant execution, and so on. The restrictions which the tabu put on the people's acts and their lives were many fold, and the provisions of this sacred code were increased to suit the wishes of the kahinas and chiefs.

The girl's mother is a cultured lady and I go to her for my information on Hawaii and Hawaiians, thus giving my readers first hand knowledge. I brought to her a calabash, which I had purchased from an old native at the mission, and she pronounced it the genuine article, for, as her mother had taught her, a hand made calabash will balance itself bottom down, if forced out of position, while a machine made one will turn over on the side.

The craze for souvenirs, which is at fever heat here in Honolulu, makes it well nigh impossible for a tourist of limited means to enjoy the possession of a real calabash, and nothing which I can think of typifies old Hawaii more than this wooden bowl, out of which the people ate their national dish, Poi, which is the product of the taro root after it is cooked. In the days of old the Hawaiian men were constantly employed in pounding poi with a rounded oblong stone, as it was, and still is, the staple food of the Hawaiians. There are several factories in the city, where the dish is prepared by machinery and it is served in the restaurants and on the steamers. Poi is eaten from the bowl by the Hawaiians with their fingers, or rather finger, as it is the custom to use only one finger; two fingers are permissible, but the use of three fingers is bad table manners. I have watched the Hawaiians eating their favored dish in first class hotels and they eat the poi from the bowl with a teaspoon, but they insert the spoon into their mouth with the bottom side of the bowl up and from habit they use the spoon like it was one of their fingers. I have tasted the stuff, but cannot say I am fond of it. It is served like mush and is eaten by malihinis with milk and sugar.

In the days of old all food was eaten out of calabashes, wooden bowls; these were dug out with primitive tools. For this purpose the trunks of the Kow and the Milo trees were used; these trees are almost extinct and the great supply of calabashes manufactured for the tourists are made of Koa wood. I was very fortunate in getting a calabash at a reasonable price, as the curiosity dealers ask as high as two hundred dollars for dilapidated old bowls. The one I procured is supposed to be 90 years old and the battered, plugged old thing looks it. The lady who inspected my purchase brought forth a very large calabash, an heirloom, which has passed down in the family through several generations, originally owned by Kamehameha, the Fourth.

Probably I had better draw my letter to a close as the reader tires of this subject. On my return I shall be pleased to write further on such things, if desired, but no doubt my fellow citizens are too much occupied with the intricacies of the tango to give any heed to ancient Polynesian history, and probably when I get home I shall find myself a victim to the prevalent epidemic. The introduction of the tango is a long stride forward, and it enables our commonwealth to take her position among her progressive sister cities. No doubt tango was the missing link; it has placed my home town in the front rank of advanced communities.

I have seen the tango danced by a swell couple from San Francisco; it was carnival night in front of the palace, and it followed the Hula dance. I considered the two exhibitions as the "Alpha and Omega" in dancing, being as it was the latest dance of the "Four Hundred" in contrast to the dance of the cannibals before the time Captain Cook discovered the islands. The tango is all right, it meets with my approval, but the Hula has as good a claim to my OK. Both dances are commendable, in my estimation, and the criticism depends upon the angle of viewpoint of the observer. The dancer may be at fault and not the dance.

The Hula which I saw was danced by eight buxom Kanaka lassies, and it received the greatest ovation by the crowd during the evening, and there were executed some fine national dances in costume by dainty Japanese Geisa girls as well as expert dancers of other nations.

The queen was present; she was evidently much pleased to see the national dance of her youth once more, for the Hawaiian race and the Hula as well is fast disappearing. At the close of the dance I saw the old retainer, who beat the drum, ascend the capitol steps and bending his knee kiss the royal hand as was his custom in days of the monarchy.

A Hawaiian lady in front of me evidently felt a bit nettled at the thunderous applause which her favorite dance received by the audience, for I heard her say that "the Hula was not any worse than the rag." The lady was right. In the days of Kamehameha the Great, I presume that the dance was prescribed as a part of their religious and also of their court ceremonials and it is only since the advent of the white race that the Hawaiian national dance has been put on a level with the rag. The Hula has its advantages; it requires but small floor space for its execution, and, should society ever take favorably to Hula many osteopaths will necessarily pull in their shingles, for fashionable ladies will then be lithe of form and their digestive organs will work like a chronometer.

At the open air ball everybody was ragging and I tried it myself so as not to look conspicuous, but somehow I cannot catch the step, and it looks so easy.

Good night!

Yours truly,
J. P. CHRISTENSEN.

JEOPARDIZES BIG TIMBER SALES

Oil Land Speculations Not Believed for Best Interests in Development of the Country.

Speculation in the extensive location of oil claims on heavily timbered areas within the Hoh, Bogachiel, and Catawah watersheds in Jefferson county, is, according to Forest Supervisor Fromme, beginning to interfere with the working up of large and important timber sales. An application for more than two billion feet under a twenty-year cutting contract was received by Supervisor Fromme nearly a year ago from the Erickson Construction company, which is building the new peninsula line. Considerable interest in the probability of such a timber sale has been shown by the president and attorney of the construction company and prominent officials of the Milwaukee railroad company, as evidenced by several conferences with Supervisor Fromme, a field trip through the Hoh country with District Ranger Morganroth and correspondence with the Portland and Washington offices. A contemplative sale of such magnitude in largely unsurveyed country, according to Mr. Fromme, requires a full season's surveying, mapping and cruising by a crew of at least twelve men, particularly when part of the land has an apparent value for agriculture and a careful soil survey is advisable, as is the case with much of the Hoh river valley. Tentative plans for doing this field work during the present season have been in preparation for the past few months and until the late oil claim excitement Supervisor Fromme has felt confident of securing the necessary authorization and funds for going ahead without delay. The fact, however, that the county records of Clallam, Jefferson, and Chehalis show approximately 250 locations involving nearly 2,000 claims, or nearly 40,000 acres within the Olympic National Forest as having been recorded within the past three or four months, much of which covers heavy timber within the proposed sale area, may prevent favorable action on these plans. The forest service policy is to encourage prospecting and mining in every practicable way but it is felt by the service that the hurried, indiscriminate, wholesale "slipping" of oil claim filings over extensive areas of national forest land does not encourage legitimate mining or development, particularly when the records indicate the typical promoter interest of one or two men. The careful investigation of oil seepages and other indications, the supervisor states, is greatly to be desired by the general public as well as by the few who might be most financially benefitted in case of success, but the "easy money" inducement offered through the loose construction of the mining laws to the speculator is greatly to be deplored. Such a fellow may plaster section after section with oil claim notices, because it costs nothing and without any consideration of the real intent of the law or of the supposed financial obligation of $100 per year per claim as assessment work.

The fact that the county records already show the recordings of one locator in particular to amount to over two hundred claims which the strict enforcement of the mining laws would demand $100 per claim per year in assessment work easily demonstrates the purely speculative feature involved, and is a striking example of how antagonistic to fair play and early real development present mining laws may become in the prospecting for oil or coal, as compared with a practical and liberal government mining system. It is said a knowledge of the country shows conclusively that many claims as recorded are wholly irrespective of topography and without the least possibility of oil discovery.

The case in point on the proposed Hoh, Bogachiel and Calawa timber sale area is that the new railroad cannot afford to extend its line into the west side country without assurance of the sale of national forest timber, and such a promise at this time is beginning to appear dubious, because of the natural abuse of the mining laws as applied to oil land locations. Early possible development of a new and immensely rich territory appears likely to be blocked, declares the supervisor, at the expense of the best interests of the public for the financial aggrandizement of a few.—Townsend Leader.

Colored Slides Showing Locks, Fortifications, Workmen, People and Scenery of Panama.

Under the auspices of the high school, Mr. L. G. Brasfield will give an illustrated lecture on the Panama canal in the school auditorium on Tuesday evening, March 24th. He has fine hand colored slides showing the locks, fortifications, workmen, people and scenery of Panama.

This is not one of the regular lecture course numbers; but the school got an opportunity to put it on, with a liberal percentage of the receipts. The money realized from it will be turned over to the high school athletic association and used for improving the grounds at the new Central School.

This lecture is of real educational value. Everyone should turn out and hear and see it, and by so doing help the school to get some much needed improvements.

DUNGENESS LIGHT WILL BE IMPROVED

C. E. Sherman, expert machinist of Washington, D. C., is installing new occulting mechanism at the Dungeness lighthouse. This mechanism will give a characteristic 2 seconds dark, 2 seconds light, repeating; or the light will disappear three 2-second periods every 30 seconds.

It is a new and radical departure in such apparatus, due to the fact that when the light is eclipsed it will be totally dark. After this apparatus is installed the Dungeness light will be the most modern on Puget Sound waters. The improved light will go into commission March 15th. Mr. Sherman will also install a pneumatic water system while at the station.—Press.

ANOTHER BANK FOR SEQUIM

Moncrieffe Cameron, a Seattle attorney, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday making arrangements to open a savings bank at Sequim, with capital stock of $10,000, divided into shares of the par value of $100 each. Most of the stock has been taken and some arrangements made for the purchase of the Sequim Trading Co.'s furniture building, on the corner of Sequim and Washington avenues. The bank will probably open up next month.

The Forty Year Test

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world-wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will undersand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers.

COUNTY SUPT.'S OFFICE

At the recent school election Dungeness voted to purchase one and two-fifths acres additional school grounds. This is certainly a move in the right direction.

Teachers are still inquiring as to the time and place of holding Institute: The Institute will convene in Port Angeles April 6-10 (Central School). Monday, April 6 from 9 to 10 a.m. will be given to enrollment. On the four successive days the hour from 9 to 10 a.m. will be given to sectional work in charge of principals and teachers as follows:

Tuesday: High School, in charge of Prin. Robert Gilmore; Gram. and Intermediate, Miss Maud Wilson; Primary, Miss Clarice Palmer; Industrial, Mr. M. A. Regnier.

Wednesday: High School, Miss Elsie Meeks; Gram. and Inter., MissEda G. Lizee; Primary, Miss EuniceStakemiller; Industrial, Mr. Paul Davis.

Thursday: High School, Miss Sarah Brown; Gram. and Inter., Mr. A. S. Foster; Primary, Miss Tonah Moore; Industrial, Mrs. Ida Mason.

Friday: High School, Prin. J. S. Mantle; Gram. and Interm., Mr. Geo. Aldrich; Primary, Supt. Edith Delanty; Industrial, Supt. Geo. Zent.

The work of the sections will probably be, to a great extent in the nature of a "round table." It is suggested that matters of special interest that may arise in sectional meetings be brought to general assembly and there further discussed during period of general discussion. General assembly will open at ten each day.

The time is drawing near for the preliminary spelling contests. We hope that every district as far as possible may have a representative here.

An event of special importance at Institute will be the reception given by the Ladies Auxiliary of Port Angeles to the instructors and teachers of Institute on the evening of Tuesday, April 7th.

In anticipation of the availibility of the military appropriation of $100,000 designated for expenditure at Fort Warden, plans and specifications for the various improvements are now in coure of preparation. Bids will be asked for and contracts et for a large part of the work, which means a great to mechanics and laborers of Port Townsend. The Portage Canal, which is to be built at an estimated cost of $65,000, is expected to be completed this summer and with the resuming of work at Irondale, Port Townsend is looking forward to a year of unusual prosperity.

We understand that Ole Klaboe of Clallam will be a candidate, at the coming fall primaries for the commissionership nomination from his, the third, district. Mr. Klaboe is one of the pioneer residents of the West End, a successful rancher, a man of good common sense and wide experience, and would represent his district with credit to himself and all concerned.

CHRISTOPHERSON'S

NEWS OF THE COUNTY

WEST END NEWS

The Louis Klahn family are rejoicing over the arrival ot a new girl at their home, born last week. All parties are doing well.

We are looking forward to an early spring this year. And it will be welcome to many of us as the feed supply for cattle is getting low and poor prospects of getting any shipped in on account of the condition of the roads.

C. J. Schneider spent last Saturday and Sunday on his homestead on the Bear creek. He is at present working for Mr. Stoval.

Sloan Bros. have opened up their camp at the old Wisson place about three miles up from Bear creek and expect to go to work with their crew early next week. They have three and a half miles of the Beaver-Fairholme road to build which was let out in contract at the last meeting of the commissioners.

Clallam Bay is planning on celebrating Good Old St. Patrick's Day a few days later, namely Saturday., by a dance to be given in which prizes will be awarded to the best waltzers, to be decided by three competent judges, C. J. Schneider, Mrs. Chas. Welker, and Mrs. J. F. Rudisile. It is expected there will be quite a few competing for the prize.

The new road supervisors are hustling around to get the roads in order for the spring traffic, which is not such an easy job as one might imagine. There were tons of freight hauled over it all winter long and in places it is almost impassible with a heavy load.

It has been reported that a cougar is making its headquarters around Bear crek. Several of the people who own sheep in that section are anxious to have the animal gotten rid of before it does any damage to stock.

Fred Wittenborn, who spent last week in Port Angeles, returned to the West End and will resume his work for the county on this part of the Beaver-Fairholme road.

Fairservice's six miles of road on the Beaver-Fairholme road has been completed and it is generally agreed that a good job has been turned out.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Terwillegar spent last Thursday with John Schultz and family.

James Clark is spending a few days around Forks in the interest of the county.

Mrs. John A. Rainey left for Seattle last Monday to pay a two weeks' visit to her sister living in that city.

James Oberg returned from a three weeks' visit up sound and is now busy at his homestead on Bear creek.

DE FUCA

Mr. J. A. Reeve returned last week from a business trip to Seattle.

At the school meeting last Saturday, Mr. Wm. Richards was reelected for a term of three years. It was also decided to extend the school term for another month, making an eight months' term.

Mr. Burgess with a crew of men is camping in the old O'Brien house below "The Breakers," getting out piling for Mr. Reeve. The piles are being sent to Port Angeles.

Mr. James Wooding has gone to Washington Harbor with his cousin for a while.

The folks from Blue Mountain had a clam bake down at the beach last Sunday.

DeFuca was well represented at the dance at Fairview and all report a very enjoyable time. Those who walked said the walking was fine (?).

Mr. Edwin Champion was a caller at "Fernwood" Sunday.

Minna Laurens has been quite sick the past week but is better now.

Mr. Harvey Rowan, who worked here last fall on the railroad, is also working at Reeve's with his team.

Miss Helen Laurens spent Saturday and Sunday with Miss Chambers at Fairview.

FORKS

Word has been received here from the Washington Oil Company that they have 2000 feet of 6 inch casing on the road and that Manager Burns will be here to resume operations at once and keep on until oil is struck. We sincerely hope so.

Mrs. George Palmer, who has been very sick, and on whom Dr. Koenig performed o very difficult operation, is pronounced out of danger. Every one here has a good word to say for Dr. Koenig now.

Mrs. Ackerly is doing very well. She is doing her own work now and no one ever even thought that she would ever be able to do anything like work any more.

The Odd Fellows are going to move their hall back from the street to correspond with the other buildings. We will have a town here after awhile.

The electric light plant is here and Mr. Ross is here to install it. Next in order is a better water system.

The people here are talking of getting up a subscription to build our commissioner a monument alongside of the $10,000.00 monument that he has had the county build for himself at the south end of Quillayute Prairie. No wonder our taxes are high. This administration has been a "corker" on us poor fellows who have to milk the cows for our money. Two years ago we could keep the roads in repair and build some new roads too with about $5,000 per year, and now $40,000 and $50,000 don't hardly make a showing. If things keep on this way, some of us will have to let our places go for taxes.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

We are still having fine spring weather, but many are suffering with colds of a croupy nature.

Agnes, the eighteen months old daughter of Mike Doyle and wife, was taken suddenly and seriously ill Monday morning. The mother being sick also, the nurse could not care for all, and Dr. Taylor took the child to the hospital where it is reported as recovering.

Mrs. N. L. Harding spent from Saturday to Monday at her son Charley's whose child has been very sick.

Mr. and Mrs. Trill and Mr. and Mrs. Williams of Seattle spent a few days recently at O. D. Burgman's.

Geo. Ristine and wife, with their daughter Alice, were guests at E. B. Fleming's Sunday.

Frank Bartholomew made a business trip to Seattle last week, returning Monday.

Mesdames Riley and Bashline called on Mrs. Anna Ferguson, Monday. Mrs. Riley had never seen a flying shuttle loom in operation and thinks it a wonderful improvement on the old methd. It is really worth while to go to Mrs. Ferguson's and see the many nice articles she has woven.

Mr. Smiley, who has been residing on the Spit,engaged in fishing, has moved to the southwestern part of the Heights on 12th west of I, and erected a large tent. Having bought the lots he will make a permanent home; he is an electrician.

Mr. Wood, who came to this locality from California about three months ago, had his leg severely hurt by getting mixed with a rolling log and will probably be unable to work for some weeks. Another case where a man can't afford to be idle.

Mrs. Emma Breckenridge of the Blue Mountain district, spent a few days in town visiting her new great granddaughter at Phil Meredith's, friends and daughters in other parts of the city, also out in Eden Valley. We are told she and her husband are thinking of coming back to their old home to live and we assure them they will be warmly welcomed.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jackson was very sick a few days, but is getting well now, which is some good mixed with the bad, which has been the lot of the family some months. Henry was kicked on the leg by a horse about the middle of October, since which he has suffered severely. He has had loose bones removed several times and only recently could do any work. Then Mr. Merrill employed him to drive a team. He lives on the Heights and rides a wheel to where the team is kept. As riding on the sidewalk was less painful to his sore limb, he followed the example of many others who disobey the ordinance against riding on sidewalks and was caught and fined, while many who are not crippled and who are more able to pay fines are not caught. One more case of taking from a man lawfully but unjustly. A humane official might have been blind to the transgression and not hurt his conscience.

EDEN VALLEY NOTES

Last Saturday evening the Eden and the Lincoln schools met at the Eden school house in Dist. 13 for a spelling match. The first half of the county contest list was used. As there were a number of lower grade pupils, there were a number of words missed on both sides. Eden won the general contest, but a representative of Lincoln school carried off the honors in the final spell down. Both schools will meet at Lincoln Dist. school next Saturday night to continue the spelling.

It is reported that some of our boys have gone to Oregon, land hunting.

Mr. Alec Clark is practicing with his new auto, preparatory to bringing it out when the new bridge is completed.

Mr. Frank Drum and crew of men are at work on the Eden Valley road and are doing some much needed work near the school house.

The Eden Valley school grounds have been cleared and leveled, and sowed to grass seed. The work was done by Waldemar Jensen and Orin Kelley and is a credit to the district.

Mr. R. M. Johnson has been spending some time in Seattle lately.

Robert Oxenford has been doing some stump blasting lately preparatory to clearing land. A donkey engine is to be used.

An initiative petition for state wide prohibition law is being circulated in this precinct.

March 17, 1914.

For all kinds of Seed Potatoes see the Port Angeles Commission Co.

HIGH SCHOOL

Mysterious notices, telling the Seniors to keep mum, were written on all the boards last week and everyone in that high school knew that something interesting was being planned. The Juniors, not wishing to be left out, sent two girls to hide in the closet and find out the Seniors' well laid plans. But to be on the safe side, they went to the manager of the Dream theater and told him that if the Seniors wanted a box for March 27, he should consider it engaged for the Juniors. Unfortunately, this plan failed and the Seniors enjoyed a very pleasant evening last Friday. After taking in the show, they went up to the chemistry laboratory where a delicious supper was served. The table was prettily decorated with flowers and crepe paper. This was one of the happiest events of their school year and we hope they will have many more such good times before they leave us.

A meeting was held by the athletic association Monday, and officers were elected according to the new constitution. James Hooker was made president and Georgia Hooker assistant treasurer. Fern Ulmer and Mr. Gilmore have proven very satisfactory as secretary and treasurer, so it was thought best to retain them for the rest of the year. Three representatives for the board of control were elected also, the choice falling to James Hooker, Percy Bork, and Harold Dodge.

A very exciting base ball game was played Friday between the Sophomores and Freshmen. For some time the latter held their own and it looked as if they would win. However, their opponents did not favor such an arrangement and played much better during the last part of the game. At the end of seven innings, the score stood 15 to 11 in favor of the Sophomores.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

General Satisfaction Expressed With Work of Industrial Insurance Commission the Past Year.

Olympia, March 18th — General satisfaction on the part of injured workmen with the acts of the present industrial insurance commission is indicated by the record from April 1, 1913, to March 1, 1914. During this time 11,462 claims for compensation were passed on by the commission.

Only 10 claimants appealed from final awards of the commission. Of this number five appeals are now pending in the courts, two cases were settled outside the court, the commission was sustained by the court in two cases and the court ordered the amount of compensation increased in one case.

Nineteen claimants have appealed from the decision of the commission rejecting the claims on the grounds that accident was not within the scope of the act or that injury was not due to some fortuitous event. Of this number 14 cases are pending in the superior or supreme courts, two have been settled outside of court, the court has sustained the commission in two cases and has ordered payment in one case.

Charges made by real estate promoters at Rochester that Public Service Commissioner Frank R. Spinning had been unduly influenced in his efforts to establish a union depot at Rochester failed utterly, when at a hearing held at Rochester Governor Lister and Assistant Attorney General Carey conducted an investigation and called upon the complainants to submit proofs of their charges. The hearing developed that both the N. P. and the Milwaukee maintain separate stations at that little town,and that the revenue derived from business there by the combined roads would hardly justify the employment of a single agent. The complainants admitted that they had not one scintilla of evidence, and that their criticism of the commissioner was due to a resentment because the establishment of a union depot might influence adversely the value of some property of theirs. Governor Lister took occasion in an open order to emphasize the fact that baseless charges may be easily made against all public officials and that his exoneration could be taken as ground for an action for libel.

With the Panama expositions less than a year away, the artists and craftsmen of the country are working between times producing oddities and curiosities that they hope may win blue ribbons, medals, or gold coin. One oddity will be a rustic chair, which a manufacturer of rustic furniture in New Jersey is himself personally constructing, and which will be called "The Governor's Chair," and the other will be an inlaid table which is occupying the spare hours of a city fireman in Omaha, and will be called the "Governor's Table." The rustic manufacturer has asked each governor to furnish a piece of wood, with bark on, native to the governor's state, while the Omaha fireman asks for a block of hardwood from each state. In each block will be laid a silver plate bearing the signature of the governor giving the block.

Governor Lister has sent the New Jersey manufacturer a three-foot strip of Douglas fir and the Omaha man a block of Washington maple.

New forms have just been prepared by the public service commission for the annual reports of water, light, gas and electrical companies. The commission has also, in preparation for the first time, a form of annual reports to be made by the hundreds of telephone companies operating in the state.

J. J. Higgins of the pure food division of the department of agriculture has confiscated at Tacoma 54,000 cans of food shipped by the Campbell company, Campbell, N. J., and damaged in their trip around the Horn.

That the holder of a certificate of delinquency for unpaid taxes on state lands held under contract of sale will lose the amount invested in such certificate if he permits the contract from the state to be cancelled for non-payment is the substance of an opinion rendered by the state tax comission.

The law requires state lands to be assessed for general taxes as soon as a contract is issued. These lands are, in many instances, carried on tax rolls for several years, the tax allowed to become delinquent and certificate of delinquency issued for the same.

If default is made in the payments due the state, the contract is cancelled and the tax is no longer a lien upon the land. It has been the practice among some counties to refund to the certificate holder, the amount paid with interest under a statute providing that this may be done where, on account of any irregularity of the taxing officers, the certificate is void.

The tax commission holds that this refund is illegal because there is no irregularity of the taxing officers, the property having been assessed and the tax levied in accordance with the statute governing such cases. It is the opinion of the commission, however, that if the certificate can be foreclosed, the holder may, before cancellation of the contract by the state, foreclose his certificate, getting a tax deed and succeed to all the rights of the original purchaser, thus enabling him to make the remaining payments to the state and acquire deed to the lands.

Reduced express rates in the state of Washington, based on the "block system" principle, went into effect March 10 under order of the public service commission. Although the new rates previously ordered on interstate shipments by the interstate commerce commission resulted in some advances, as well as reductions, the Washington commission guarded against this by securing an agreement by the express companies that wherever existing rates on fish, fruit, vegetables, and other commodities were lower than those that would be established under the block system the lower rates should be kept in effect.

A final proof of the new state map to be published by the public service commission has been submitted by the publishers at Chicago, and, as the map wil go to press about the first ofApril, copies will be ready for distribution at Olympia about April 15th.

April 10 has be designated by Governor Lister as Arbor Day by official proclamation.

CHAPTER XII.

The Path That Led Nowhere.

WHEN "Senor Antonio" awoke the next morning he lay for an instant striving to recall what it was that had haunted his sleeping hours, what great event awaited him. Then as it rushed through his mind he leaped out of bed. This was tomorrow! But the afternoon was still a long way off, and he must be content to dream until the hour came.

It was the hottest part of the day when he set out, gun on arm, yet he never thought of the discomfort. After skirting the city he swung into the fine macadam road that had brought him home the night before, and much sooner than he expected he arrived at the litttle path that led into the forest. As upon the previous day, he broke into the glade before he suspected its presence. There was the tree from which she had called to him, yonder the bench where they had sat together.

Of course he was too early. He wanted to be in order not to miss an instant of her company, so he seated himself and dreamed about her. The minutes dragged, the jungle drowsed. An hour passed. Why didn't she come? A sudden apprehension overtook him, which grew and grew as the afternoon wore away.

It was a very miserable young man who wandered out through the fragrant path as the first evening shadows settled and bent his dejected steps toward the city. Evidently something had occurred to prevent her keeping her tryst, but he determined to return on the morrow and then if she did not come to follow that other path right up to her house, which must be near the pool. He would risk everything for a word with her. He wondered if she had stayed away purposely to test him, and the thought gave him a thrill. If so she would soon learn that he was in earnest. He resolved to go hunting earlier hereafter and give the whole day to it. Meanwhile he would make cautious inquiries.

It was considerably after dark when he reached the hotel, and his friends had dined, but he encountered Mr. Cortlandt later. If Edith's husband suspected anything of what had occurred a night or two ago his countenance gave no sign of it. For some reason or other Kirk had not been troubled in the slightest by the thought that Cortlandt might be told. He could not imagine Edith making him the confidant of her outraged feelings. Besides, would such a strangely impassive person resent any little indiscretion in which his wife might choose to indulge? Kirk did not know. The man was a puzzle to him.

Cortlandt's voice was thoroughly noncommittal as he inquired:

"Where have you been keeping yourself?"

"I've been hunting to kill time."

"By the way," continued the other, "your friend Allan has been besieging Edith imploring her to use her influence to get him a position. He has set his heart upon going to work with you."

"He is becoming a positive nuisance; I can't get rid of him."

"I never saw such hero worship."

"Oh, all niggers are hysterical."

"Let me give you a bit of advice, Anthony. Remember, there are no 'niggers' and 'whites' in this country—they are both about equal. The president of the republic is a black man, and a very good one too."

"That reminds me. I hear he is to be succeeded by the father of my friend, Alfarez."

Cortlandt hesitated. "General Alfarez is a candidate. He is a very strong man, but"—

"I am glad there is a 'but.'"

"It isn't settled, by any means. The successful candidate will need the support of our government."

"I suppose the Alfarez family is one of the first settlers—Mayflower stock?"

"Oh, worse than that. The name runs back to Balboa's time."

"What are some of the other leading families?" Kirk artfully inquired.

"There are a number. The Martinezes, the Moras, the Garavels—I couldn't name them all. They are very fine people too."

"Do you know the Chiquitas?"

Cortlandt's face relaxed in an involuntary smile.

"There is no such family. Who has been teaching you Spanish?"

"Really, isn't there?"

"'Chiquita' means 'very small,' 'little one,' 'little girl' or something like that. It's not a family name. It's a term of endearment usually. What made you take it for a proper name?"

"A—a little girl told me."

"Oh, naturally. All children are 'Chiquitas' or 'Chiquitos'—everything, in fact, that is a pet."

Kirk felt somewhat uncomfortable under the older man's gaze of quiet amusement.

"But these other families," he went on in some confusion, "I mean the ones like those you just mentioned, they sometimes intermarry with Americans, don't they?"

"No, not the better class. There have been a few instances, I believe, but for the most part they keep to themselves."

"How would a fellow set about meeting the nice people?"

"He wouldn't. He would probably live here indefinitely and never see the inside of a Panamanian house."

"But there must be some way," the young man exclaimed in desperation. "There must be dances, parties"—

"Of course, but Americans are not invited. The men are easy to get acquainted with, charming, courteous, gentlemanly, but I dare say you will leave Panama without so much as meeting their wives or sisters. But why this consuming curiosity? Has some senorita struck your fancy?"

In spite of his effort to appear unconcerned Kirk felt that he looked abominably self conscious. Without waiting for a reply Cortlandt continued to give him information as if he enjoyed it.

"I suppose one reason why so few Americans marry Panamanians is that our men like at least to get acquainted with their brides before marriage, and that is impossible in this country. A man never sees a girl alone, you know. When he calls to court her he wooes the whole famiy, who vote on him, so to speak."

Kirk suddenly realized to the full how egregious his request to call must have appeared to the Spanish girl. What a fool he had been, to be sure! For a moment he lost himself in a contemplation of the difficulties so unexpectedly presented. He was brought to himself by the words:

"Tomorrow you will go to work."

"What's that?" he broke forth in a panic. "I can't go to work tomorrow. I'm going hunting."

Cortlandt eyed him curiously.

"I didn't say tomorrow. I said Runnells phoned that he would be ready for you day after tomorrow. What is the matter with you? Have you lost your head over shooting, or don't you care to work?"

"Oh, neither!" he said hastily. "I merely misunderstood you. Of course the sooner the better."

"Yes, as you say, the sooner the better," said Cortlandt, with a shade of meaning. "Well, good night and good luck to you in your shooting."

It was with much less self assurance that Kirk set out again on the next morning, for this was his last day of grace, and he realized that unless he accomplished something definite it might be a considerable time before he could continue his quest. In view of what the girl had said regarding her engagement delays seemed particularly dangerous.

He haunted the vicinity of the meeting place all the morning, but no one came, and a heavy shower at midday drove him into the palm thatched hut for shelter. When it had passed he put an end to his indecision and boldly took the other path. At least he would find out where she lived and who she was. But once again he was disappointed. The trail led out through the grove to the rain drenched pasture, where it disappeared, and instead of one house he saw three, half hidden in foliage and all facing in the opposite direction. They stood upon the crest of a hill fronting the road, and he realized that the pool might be the bathing place for the inmates of one or all of them. He went to all three, but nowhere did he see the girl or the Barbadian woman; nowhere did he receive an intelligible answer to his questions.

Whether the girl had been playing with him or whether she had been prevented from keeping her word was of little moment now. He loved her, and he intended to have her.

He was detailed to ride No. 2, which left Panama at 6:35, returning on No. 7, which arrived at 7 p. m. For a few days he made the run in company with the train collector, whose position he was destined to fill, and, as the duties were by no means difficult, he quickly mastered them.

He was glad of his new found independence, moreover, for, though it did not cancel his obligation to the Cortlandts, it made him feel it less keenly. Certainly he could not complain of a lack of incident in his new life. On his first trip to Colon and back he had nine disputes and two fights and threw one man off—a record achievement, he was told, for a beginner.

A further diversion was furnished by Allan, who appeared early in the morning and all but assaulted the gateman, who refused to let him pass without a ticket. It took the entire station force to prevent him from starting for Colon as Kirk's guest. He considered it a matter of course that his friend should offer him the courtesies of the road, and he went away at last, woefully disappointed, but not discouraged.

On the evening of that eventful day, instead of returning to his new quarters, Kirk proceeded to walk the streets in search of a certain face. He strolled through the plazas; he idled in front of the most pretentious residences; he tramped wearily back and forth through dim lit, narrow streets, gazing up at windows and balconies, harkening for the tone of a voice or the sound of a girl's laughter. But he was without the slightest success, and it was very late when he finally retired, to dream, as usual, of Chiquita.

Several days passed, and he began to feel a little dull. He was making no progress in his quest, and he did feel the lack of congenial society. Then one evening there came a note from Edith Cortlandt briefly requesting him to come and see her.

Promptly at 8 o'clock he presented himself.

"I'm a laboring man now," he said as he stood before her, "and I usually hold my cap in my hand and shuffle my feet when talking to ladies. Pray excuse my embarrassment."

She did not respond to the lightness of his tone. Her glance seemed intended to warn him that she meant to be serious.

"I suppose you are wondering why I sent for you. I've discovered who Jefferson Locke is."

"No! Who is he?" Kirk was instantly all attention. He had almost forgotten Locke.

"His real name is Frank Wellar, and he is an absconder. He was a broker's clerk in St. Louis, and he made off with something like $80,000 in cash."

"Good heavens!" said Anthony. "How did you find out?"

"A bundle of New York papers. They came today."

"Where did they catch him?"

"They haven't caught him. He has disappeared completely. That's the strangest part of it. Your detective didn't die after all. But I can't understand why the police haven't discovered your whereabouts. You left New York openly under the name of Locke"—

"Perhaps it was so easy they overlooked it." He smiled ruefully. "I'd hate to be arrested just now when I'm getting to be such a good conductor."

"Don't worry about that until the time comes. I'll get you the papers later." He began to feel embarrassed. It seemed to be his fate to receive benefits at this woman's hand whether he willed it or not.

Chased by an Unfeeling Man With a Club.

"I must go now, but first I want to make you feel how grateful I am for your kindness and for your continued trust in me. I haven't deserved it, I know, but"— He turned as if to leave, but faced her again as he heard her pronounce his name. He was surprised to see that there were tears in her eyes.

"Kirk," she said, "you're an awfully good sort, and I can't stay angry with you."

"You're tremendously good," he answered, really touched. "I can't say anything except that I'll try to be worthy of your kindness."

She gave him a half distressed look, then smiled brightly.

"We won't talk of it any more," she said—"ever. Now do sit down and tell me what you have been doing all this time. How have you been getting along with your work?"

"All right, except one morning when I overslept."

In the days that followed he tried his very best to make good on his job. Every evening he had to himself he spent in search of the Spanish girl. Aside from his inability to find her and an occasional moment of misgiving at the thought of Frank Wellar, alias Jefferson Locke, Kirk had but one worry, and that was caused by Allan. Never a day passed that the worshipful black boy did not fairly hound him with his attentions; never a nightly journey down into the city that Allan did not either accompany him or, failing permission to do so, follow him at a safe distance. For a time Anthony rebelled at this espionage, but the constant effort of refusal grew tiresome after awhile, especially as the Jamaican did just as he pleased anyhow, and Kirk ended by letting him have his way.

He turned up regularly every day on Kirk's trains without money to pay his fare. Becoming really concerned lest he should be accused of withholding fare, Kirk spoke to Runnels about Allan, explaining fully, whereupon a watch was set, with the result that on the very next morning Allan was chased out of the railroad yards by an unfeeling man with a club. He was waiting when the train pulled in that evening, glued to the iron bars, his eyes showing as white in the gloom as his expansive grin of welcome.

For several days this procedure was repeated with variations until the dreadful threat of arrest put an end to it. Allan had conceived a wholesome respect for Spiggoty police, and for a few days thereafter Kirk was rid of him. Then one morning he reappeared as usual in one of the forward coaches and proudly, triumphantly, displayed a ticket, exclaiming:

"It is of no h'avail to prevent me, boss!"

"That ticket is good only to Corozal, the first station. You'll have to get off there." But when Corozal had been passed he found Allan still comfortably ensconced in his seat.

"Now, boss, we shall have fine visits today," the negro predicted warmly and Kirk did not have the heart to eject him.

At the other end of the line Allan repeated the process, and thereafter worked diligently to amass sufficient money to buy tickets from Panama to Corozal and from Colon to Mount Hope, relying with splendid faith upon his friend to protect him once he penetrated past the lynx eyed gateman.

Runnels accepted Kirk's explanation, and so far exceeded his authority as to make no objection. Allan, therefore, managed to spend about half his time in company with the object of his adoration.

Although the master of transportation never referred to his conversation with Kirk on the occasion of their trip through Culebra cut, he watched his new subordinate carefully, and he felt his instinctive liking for him increase It gave Runnels pleasure to see how he attended to his work once he had settled down to it.

Accordingly, it afforded him an unpleasant surprise when he received a printed letter from a St. Louis detective agency relative to one Frank Wellar, alias Jefferson Locke (last seen in New York city Nov. 25) and offering a substantial reward for information leading to his arrest. The communication reached Runnels through the usual channel, copies having been distributed to the heads of various departments. It was the description that caught his attention:

"White; age, twenty-eight years; occupation, clerk; eyes, bluish gray; hair, light, shading upon yellow; complexion, fair; height, six feet; weight, 190 pounds. No prominent scars or marks, so far as known, but very particular as to personal appearance and considered a good athlete, having been captain of U. of K. football team."

There was but one man in Runnels' department whose appearance tallied with all this. Nevertheless he held the letter on his desk and did nothing for a time except to question his new collector upon the first occasion. The result was not at all reassuring. A few days later, chancing to encounter John Weeks on his way across the isthmus, he recalled Kirk's mention of his first experience at Colon.

"Anthony? Oh, yes," wheezed the fat man. "I see you've got him at work. There's something about him I don't understand. Either he's on the level or he's got the nerve of a burglar."

"How so?"

"Well, I know he isn't what he claims to be. I have proof. He's no more Darwin K. Anthony's son than"—

"Darwin K. Anthony!" exclaimed the railroad man, in amazement. "Did he claim that?"

"He did, and he"— The speaker checked himself with admirable diplomatic caution. "Say, he's taught me one thing, and that is that it doesn't pay to butt into other people's business. I played him to lose, and he won, and I got into a fine mess over it. Alfarez lost his job for arresting him."

"You'll get your money. Anthony told me he'd square up on pay day."

Weeks snorted at this. "Why, I've got it already. I've been paid. Mrs. Cortlandt sent me her check." He winked one red eye in a manner that set Runnels to thinking deeply.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Port Angeles Stubs Her Toe On Her March Forward From Obscurity

We are indeed sorry that the City Council did not see fit to grant the franchise asked for by the telephone company, which in this particular instance is our friend Mr. Farmer, and when we say our friend we mean it. He is the same man who came here 12 years ago and invested good money in a defunct cannery and on account of that cannery being quite a way from the telegraph office he installed a telephone line which is the father of our present system. Now Mr. Farmer knows even better than we do that if Port Angeles is going ahead we need an up-to-date telephone system. Mr. Farmer is one of the men who believe Port Angeles is going ahead and is willing to spend his money according to his belief. If the old town had a few more men like him she would have grown faster in the past twenty years. The old saying, money makes the mare go, is true. We all know it takes money to make a city grow, and lots of it. Labor has to be paid and a corporation has a right to a profit on its investment. The telephone company has to have a chance to make a profit and a good many people here know the kind of man Mr. Farmer is and that all he wants is a reasonable profit.

It will take a good deal of money to install a system such as we need, and money does not grow on trees. To get this money Mr. Farmer has to have a franchise that will show the people with the money that the citizens of Port Angeles have confidence in Mr. Farmer and his telephone company, which means that the telephone company will be able to meet its obligations.

There is no doubt that the councilmen who voted against the granting of the franchise voted according to their lights, but since the Olympic Power Co. has given us electric light we think they ought to see a little better. We admit that 30 years seems to be a long time but we also know twelve years is a long time to invest money without any return. It is not like some of our lots which 12 years ago could have been bought for hundreds, where they are worth thousands now. We need a good system here and everything had been ordered to give us a good system equal to any city in the country, and I suppose Mr. Farmer felt that as Bremerton, where he was a comparative stranger, had so willingly granted him a 30-year franchise, that when he asked the same from his old home town, Port Angeles, he would not have any trouble getting it, but again you know the old saying, from those of whom we have a right to expect the most we get the least.

This does not mean any individual, but the town itself. So the order will probably be cancelled at least for the time being. But we don't want to wait; we want the improvements now; we have been on the waiting list too long as it is.

We have gone to a lot of trouble and expense to get the U. S. government to grant us a lease on the spit that nature so bountifully provided us with, but if we are going to treat every corporation or individual that wants to do business in our city like we have just treated our friend Mr. Farmer you might as well have saved your money and your time and let the government light house be the only thing that stands between us and the ships that pass us by.

He denied that he was in the saloon at the time; said that he gave no money to Dickerman, had none to give; alleged that he came in saloon just after scuffle and knew nothing of details. Jury took the case at 9:00 p.m., was out all night and reported in morning its inability to agree on a verdict. Jury was discharged, and Hall was released on former bond to appear later for a new trial. Dickerman has practically plead guilty, but no disposition of his case has yet been had.

The Condemnation Suits.

Wednesday the first of the three condemnation suits was heard. Upon suggestion of Railway counsel being agreed to all jurors spent morning in charge of sheriff viewing all premises under controversy.

At 1:00 p.m. a jury was impaneled to hear the case of Railway vs. P. J. Wold and Albert Johnson, involving the right-of-way across Lots 8 and 9, block 13, and lot 6, block 15, N. R. Smith's Subd., located on beach near Ennis creek. A number of witnesses for each side were heard, Railway witnesses testifying property was worth $125 to $350, while Respondent's witnesses fixed the value for industrial purposes at from $1500 to $3000, alleging that it was bought for a ship building plant. The jury allowed $375 for the part of the lots taken by the R.R. Co. This case involved a night session also.

The other two cases were settled next day while a jury was being empaneled and judgment was fixed by mutual consent in favor of P. J. Woods et als for $4100 for lands at mouth of Ennis creek. In the case of Ry. vs. Terminal Land Co., for right-of-way in same locality, blocks 12 N. R. Smith's Subd. and 12 tidelands were eliminated and $250 damages allowed for crossing a number of lots in Block 8.

Burkeston Plead Not Guilty.

Thursday morning John C. Burkeston was brought before the Court charged by the prosecutor with having set fire to the two story building on east Front street occupied by his bowling alley, on last Friday night. He entered a plea of not guilty and bond was fixed at $2000.

Dick vs. Pellerin Dismissed.

Thursday afternoon a jury was impaneled to hear the case of Wm. Dick vs. Jos. Pellerin to cancel lease of premises upon alleged default of contract. Five witnesses were examined for plaintiff, when plaintiff rested. Defense moved that case be taken from jury and dismissed for reason that statutory notice to vacate had not been given. Case was dismissed without prejudice.

Fred Wright vs. Mead and Others.

All of Thursday afternoon was consumed in securing a jury in the case of Fred Wright vs. N. K. Mead and others, each juror being thoroly examined by each side. The regular panel being exhausted before a jury was secured, counsel stipulated that six jurors be picked up by sheriff to be approved by Court from which to select twelfth juror, and Court adjourned at 6:15 until this morning at 9:00 o'clock.

C. D. ALLEN SHOT TWICE

Former Angeles Citizen Resisted Two Hold-up Men with Disastrous Results.

A gun play and highway robbery occurred last night, resulting in placing the victim in a hospital, says the Everett News of Monday last.

The attack occurred near the corner of Broadway and 23rd street, when C. D. Allen, late of the state of Washington's industrial insurance, was held up, robbed, shot and beaten by two men. They secured, says Allen, about $3.

Allen, when the police patrol responded to a call and picked him up from the sidewalk, said he had taken a mother and her daughter to the theater and was going homeward when set upon.

"Hold up yer hands." Allen says his assailants demanded. Instead of complying with the order, Allen says he grabbed at a revolver one of the thugs presented at his head. The gun was discharged, the ball driving its way thru his hand. Another shot was fired by the robber, the bullet entering the fleshy part of Allen's leg below the thigh. Allen fell to the pavement and called for help.

should not be granted. Whereupon a vote was taken and Bigelow, Fleming and Fowler voting no the motion to grant was lost.

The Olympic-Leader fails to see wherein Chairman Bigelow secured a single advantage for the city. The present franchise has eight years to run. Certainly we can expect no material improvement in the system during that time, and not at the expiration unless we grant the franchise now asked. Meanwhile we have four and five phones on a line, with the prospects of the number being increased to ten or a dozen with the growth of the town. It looks very much as tho Bigelow had been instrumental in cutting off our nose to spite our face, an operation which, coming at a time when everyone realizes the necessity of broad-gauged men on the council, was received as a distinct shock.

The U. S. (4) That all persons who may desire to object thereto are hereby notified to appear and present such objections at a meeting of the City Council to be held in the Council Chambers in the City Hall in the city of Port Angeles, at 7:30 p. m. on the 7th day of April 1914, which time and place is hereby fixed for hearing all matters relating to said improvement, and all objections thereto, and for determining the method of payment for said improvement.

Our scribe in reporting the council proceedings of last week did not get the full text of Bigelow's report as to what the water company offered upon the solicitation of his committee for a reduction in rates for fire hydrants. He reported that only new hydrants would be reduced in price, whereas Mr. Bigelow stated in his report to council that water company refused to give any reduction on original 19 hydrants in original grant, but the eight installed since and the twelve proposed to be installed would be charged for at $1 each less or at $2.50 each. The city now pays $94.50 per month for 27 hydrants; under new rate and additional installation city would pay $116.50 per month for 39 hydrants.
