PORT ANGELES OLYMPIC LEADER

VOL. 29. NO. 12. PORT ANGELES, CLALLAM COUNTY, WASHINGTON, FRIDAY, MARCH 27, 1914. $1.00 EER YEAR.

FRANCHISE RE-INTRODUCED

No Bids on Francis Street Improvement and New Call Ordered for April 14th.

A lengthy, but somewhat uninteresting session of the City Council was held at the Morse Building Tuesday night. Bids were called for the improvement of C street: new bids were called for the Francis street improvement, and a committee named to look further into the lease of the Ediz Hook sandspit, which, it is alleged, is of little use to city in its present form. The mayor's appointment of an additional city electrician was not confirmed.

Streets Reserved for City Use.

An ordinance was introduced by Councilman Shields reserving to the City the terminals of Cedar, Lincoln and Valley streets to the Port Angeles water front for wharfage purposes, and making it unlawful for any council of the city to grant any franchise, lease, or special privileges thereon. The ordinance was read twice and referred to ordinance com. and city attorney.

The Telephone Franchise.

The Farmer telephone franchise rejected last week by a vote of 4 to 3, was reintroduced by Councilman Fisher, read twice and referred to franchise committee and city attorney. The ordinance is practically the same as the defeated ordinance, but meets in part Councilman Bigelow's objections, namely, substituting a payment of 2 per cent of the gross receipts to be paid annually to the City, for the 3 per cent of net receipts as provided in old grant. Work is to begin within 60 days of passage of ordinance.

Shields moved that the City Clerk be directed to call for bids for the C street improvement. Bids to be opened April 21. Carried.

No Bids on Francis Improvement.

Attorney Trumbull appeared before Council and stated that his client, Stillwell Brothers of Seattle, had put in a bid for the Francis street improvement known as Dist. 15 and had since found that they had made a serious error in their calculations and asked the privilege of withdrawing said bid. It being determined that they had this privilege any time prior to the opening of the bids, the withdrawal was allowed. This being the only bid on file for the improvement, the Clerk was upon motion of Councilman Shields directed to readvertise for bids to be opened April 14.

Lease of Ediz Hook Spit.

City Attorney Smith now arose and stated that he reluctantly bro't up the question but thought it his duty to call council's attention to the fact that the lease of Ediz Hook spit as drawn up and passed was in such shape that it put the City between the Devil and the deep blue sea, in that the City could not comply with the conditions of the lease, and no one could get any lease to the property, hence no one can use the property in question. The lease as drawn and under the authority granted the Secretary in charge can permit no occupation under the lease until the city has complied with its conditions. The lease will have to be amended or the City will have to repudiate the whole. The question had previously been taken up at the Commercial Club and committee named. Upon motion of Fisher, the question was referred to a special committee of two, His Honor naming Shields and Fisher.

1,000 Feet Hose Purchased.

Ten bids were submitted for 1,000 feet of fire hose advertised for by City, and five representatives were present to present the merits of their brands. After considering all bids, Council accepted the bids of Bowers Rubber Co. of Seattle and U. S. Rubber Co. of Seattle, taking 500 feet from each at 80c per foot. This is a double jacket hose with patent couplings and threads to match those of present hose owned by City.

The light committee reported as to extensions of light line up Valley from Eighth and on Vine street where the line serving five patrons is strung on a telephone pole and across two houses. Two new patrons would be secured by the Valley street extension. The cost of extension of pole line in each locality would be $85. The committee recommended that work be done. So ordered.

City Engineer recommended in view of extensive street improvements proposed, that City purchase set of engineer's instruments at a cost of $350. No action.

Chas. A. Morse asked privilege of erecting two story concrete building on lot 11, block 15, for new postoffice building. Request granted.

Communication was read from Consulting Electrician Godfrey that equipment for completion of substation was on way; when assembled and ready for work he would come to Port Angeles and complete work.

Clerk read a communication from the Public Service Commission to effect that Water Company had not filed any report for 1913, and that copy would be sent as soon as received. Clerk reported he had sent for copy 1912 report.

Health com. reported repair of sewer on Francis street by Mr. Cain. Bill of $5 was presented for work by Mr. Cain, who stated that damage was done by natural flow of surface water and not from any defect. Rfd. to City Attorney.

Condition of City Light Fund.

Bigelow here moved that the Mayor's appointment of C. H. Tuadell as

LOGGING CASE HARD FOUGHT

Heavy Judgment Against Talbot for Removal of the Duncan Timber.

Upon the Wright-Mead case going to the jury Saturday afternoon, the case of Minerva Duncan vs. D. M. Talbot was immediately taken up and a jury selected, examined and accepted by both sides. This being the last jury case on the docket, all other jurors not on either of these two cases were discharged.

The Duncan-Talbot case was taken up Monday morning on the evidence. Plaintiff alleged and put half a score of witnesses on the stand to prove that Talbot wilfully took the timber off her land, a cruiser estimating the amount at 1,022,000 feet, and asked $1.50 per thousand therefor, together with damages to the part not taken by reason of the increased cost of logging in sparsely timbered sections equal to 50 per cent of the timber taken. In addition to this the law trebles the damages sustained if it is proven that timber is taken wilfully. Defendants put on the stand a like number of witnesses to prove that they did not know the lines, and believed that they were on their own lands all the time, the line shown them by the previous owner being 650 feet north of the line as surveyed by plaintiff. Since the new survey they too have had a cruiser on the land who figures that the amount taken only aggregates some 380,000 feet, and for this they are willing to pay according to the testimony of their witnesses at 75c to $1 per M.

The jury found as follows:

"What is the value of the timber cut and removed by defts. from the plaintiff's land between Sept. 1. 1912, and October 21, 1913? $1534.11.

"What are the damages to the balance of the lands of plaintiffs by reason of the taking? $550.

Did the defendants have probable cause to believe that the land from which the said timber was taken was their own? No.

Could defendants, by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence, have ascertained that the land from which the timber was taken belonged to the plaintiff? Yes."

Under the law it is now the Court's duty to treble the damages allowed by the jury, that being the penalty for knowingly taking timber from the land of another.

Interspersed with this case a number of other matters were disposed of on preliminary hearings.

Morse Judgment Entered.

REGRADE WORK STARTS MONDAY

Will Be a General Scramble to Get Buildings Raised Before Grade is Completed.

With the driving of the first pile at Lincoln and Railroad Avenue at seven o'clock Monday morning next, work on the City's $500,000 regrade work will have officially commenced. It is not announced that an official program has been prepared for this momentous occasion, which means so much in the future of Port Angeles, but Contractor P. J. Woods says that when the first pile is driven he will present the gilded hammer to His Honor Mayor White for a watch charm.

As soon as the piles are driven for the foundation for Lewis, Wiley & Morse's power plant, work will start on Railroad Avenue, it being Mr. Wood's expectation to have that thorofare sufficiently near completion by the end of the week to afford an outlet for the Gallagher Transfer Stables, which will then be cut off from the Front street corner by the beginning of work in the big cement sewer on Lincoln.

Concurrent with the construction of the sewer, cement retaining walls will be built at the outer edge of the sidewalk the length of lower Front street, and from Front to First on Laurel. Piling will be driven for the retaining walls on the outer portions of Lincoln and Laurel, and on Oak.

The grades will be as follows:

At Front and Oak there will be a fill of about five feet; at Laurel six feet; Lincoln twelve feet; Chase four feet on west side, east side being at grade; at Peabody a cut of about twelve feet; at Vine a twelve foot cut; at Albert four feet.

On First street at Peabody a four foot cut; at Chase a ten foot cut; Lincoln and Laurel at grade; at First and Oak a seven foot fill.

At Lincoln and Second an eighteen foot cut, which increases to twenty-four feet at the top of the hill on which the court house stands. At Lincoln and Third a thirty foot fill.

Arrangements concerning the Morse Building were finally completed yesterday, when Mr. Morse was given a judgment by Judge Ralston for the agreed amount, $6,800. Mr. Morse thus assumes all responsibility for the raising of the building, or for raising the floors and adding another story, as may be determined upon.

But as far as that goes, every one in the street from Gutenberg's Hardware, built on piling, to the Court House on top of the hill, has his own little problem to solve; nor can he take all summer to the solution thereof if he expects to continue in business above the level of the sidewalk.

IMPRESSED WITH OUR HARD-SURFACED ROADS

Ex-Mayor Cotterill of Seattle was entertained during his stay here Monday by Commissioner J. C. Hansen, who took him for a fine auto trip to view the new Elwha bridge, to see the Olympic Power plant, and out to the lakes. Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Webster were also guests of Mr. Hansen on the trip. Wednesday he drove Mr. Cotterill to Port Williams from which place the ex-mayor took the steamer for Seattle, well pleased with his visit to Port Angeles and particularly impressed with the fine roads, well drained and hard-surfaced, that have been built during the past two or three years. An engineer by profession, Mr. Cotterill could fully appreciate the high class of the work that has been done.

LOCAL AUTO DRIVERS START REGULAR TRIPS.

Regular daily stage service to Lake Crescent and Elwha river points will be inaugurated next Monday, the first car leaving the Angeles and Commercial Hotels at 9:00 a.m. Cars will be furnished each day for as many as wish to make the trip, and be good returning on any of the local cars.

MARYMERE HOTEL BURNED

Log Hotel at Oldest Resort on Lake Destroyed Wednesday Night.

A telephone message from East Beach, on Lake Crescent, Thursday morning conveyed to Mrs. Littleton the bad news of the burning of Marymere, the summer hotel she has run for so many years. Mrs. Littleton has been busy this week moving out her household effects, chickens, etc., and expected to have gone out Wednesday to stay but on account of the stormy day did not do so. When she left to go out Thursday, she knew no particulars about the fire only that the house was entirely destroyed. Her brother was living at the place looking after things. The grounds belong to Lester Turner of Seattle. Mrs Littleton carried some insurance but she felt not near enough to cover her loss; however we hope she found things not as bad as reported.

GROWS MORE METROPOLITAN EVERY DAY

A party of Italians have been clearing a couple of lots on Pine Hill where they expect to put up a tenement house 24 by 100 feet, which is to be occupied by Italian families. They finished the clearing this week and expect to start building next week.

ELWHA BRIDGE NOW READY

Everyone Invited to Attend Little Celebration to Be Held Tomorrow Noon.

The new Elwha suspension bridge is to be officially opened to the public Saturday at noon. It is expected that a large crowd will go out and automobiles will leave town about 11:30 a.m. There will probably be some speech making in honor of the occasion, but the time was too short to make any great preparations, tho' the opening is worthy of a big celebration, inasmuch as a population of several hundred is again brought contiguous to the county metropolis, and the country westward will be a popular section for out-of-town trips until the mud again makes the auto seek the shelter of the garage. Welcome to our city, neighbors of the west bank of the Elwha!

EXPECT BIG YEAR'S BUSINESS

Dr. Earles returned to the Hot Springs Thursday after spending ten days up sound.

He reports thirty guests at the hotel already although they have announced it would not be opened to the public before April first. A. H. McDonald, formerly commissary for the Alaska Steamship Co. has charge of the hotel.

Mr. Schubach, secretary and general manager of the company, is expected Friday to make arrangements for a number of contemplated improvements. The new company anticipates a big year's business and special attention will be given to the medical department and sanitorium which will still continue to be in charge of Dr. Earles.

WILL BUILD ICE CREAM FACTORY

Two families by the name of Wood have bought of Mr. Hooker the property just west of Frank Dilling's on Sixth street. Lumber is now being hauled for the residence they will build in connection with an ice cream factory.

DECIDED AGAINST WRIGHT

The suit brought by Wright for $5000 damages and $1000 attorney's fees against Ex-Mayor Mead and others who aided in the deportation of plaintiff last summer, was decided for the defendants after a hard fought trial lasting three days.

The famous feature, "Last Days of Pompeii," will be shown at the Dream next Wednesday.

THE COMING OF EUROPE

Some Astonishing Figures on the Possibilities of Rapid Increase in Population.

The possibilities to the State of Washington and Puget Sound as well as the entire Pacific Coast, and the needs of the hour in getting ready for the opening of the Panama Canal this year was the theme of ex-Mayor Cottefill at the Congregational Brotherhood dinner Monday night, before one hundred diners.

After a resume of the great Western Movement of the last century and the last generation in particular, Mr. Cotterill launched into the heart of his discourse and once well started held his hearers spellbound as it were for an hour. "This section," he said "is the last of the great western movement, not only for the U. S. but of the World." Here must come the turning back point, for here literally is the jumping off place, or as an alternative, the turning back for three hundred years of progress. The territory from Mexico to Prince Rupert on the coast and back to the Rocky mountain range might be called the Pacific Coast area—a like area in Western Europe with 68,000,000 population, in eastern Asia with 300 to 400,000,000 population, and we with but 7,000,000 population. Eastern America has grown in less than a century from approximately 7,000,000 to 55,000,000 from immigration from Europe, all coming at a uniform rate with an average of three-fourths of a million a year and now a million a year coming into the United States and Canada. The increase in population in Eastern America has been 30 per cent each decade, while the increase on the Pacific Coast, in the area named, has been 55 per cent and in the state of Washington during the 10 years succeeding 1900 the increase has been 120 per cent, or four times as fast as the greatest increase during any decade in the development of Eastern America. And while this western movement has been on it will be well to note that the northern section in the larger area has gotten two-thirds of the population just as in the development here the Northwest corner of the Pacific coast has to-date received two-thirds of the big increase in population and will continue to get this proportion in the great development to come.

Have you ever tried to figure out what this means to our section? Even allowing the utmost discounts it would seem inevitable unless some great catastrophe should intervene that within the lifetime of most of those in this hall tonight we will see 40,000,000 people within the Pacific coast area, which means for the northern half ten to twenty millions and for the state of Washington five to ten millions, and this simply on a basis of the development of eastern America which has never exceeded a development of 30 per cent in any decade.

"It has been said that had the Pilgrim fathers landed first on the Pacific coast, New England would still today be a barren rockpile. But the development of eastern America, the second transplanting, as it were, of the best of the earlier emigrants to our eastern shores, the great influx of those who will come direct from across the Atlantic, will shortly make the back door the front door, and with the opening of the Panama canal—the dream of four centuries — American genius spending American money, greater than all the wonders of the world, is going to have some effect in turning about America with the Pacific Coast facing Western Europe. Steamboat schedules are already prepared to carry the emigrant around to the Pacific Coast for $10 to $15 more than the fare to the Atlantic seaboard, and persistent rumors come from abroad that for a year or more past the steamboat companies have been selling tickets to the last great west via the Panama canal on a savings bank basis to be ready when the canal opens. It is estimated that 300,000 have thus already been arranged for, and while I doubt the number, yet I am satisfied that the number is legion. What does is mean to this section? Immediate influx! The canal is expected to be open to business in July of this year, within a few months. That is the kind of era we are to face. This coast and this state is bound to get a very large share. Apply it if you will, in a material sense: it carries with it the foundation of our great prosperity. We have not begun to work out the problem of making ready.

"The logged-off land problem, which we hear so much about, the dry farming of eastern Washington and Oregon, the great irrigation projects under way and projected, vast harbor and terminal improvements, railroad extensions, form part of the material preparation that is under way, but all is vague as yet as to what has to be done to care for this vast influx of population. We may dream of material benefits in the sale of town lots, yet to one who has the real material benefit of present residents and that of the newcomers at heart it would seem that the farther from the towns these people settle the better for all. Arrange to get these newcomers out into every nook and corner to develop the natural resources of this great country, and ultimately much vaster returns will come to the cities through the towns and cities which will grow up in the newly developed districts. Not only this, but at the same time you will solve the problem of urban congestion, one of the great evils of our beautiful land, which every eastern American city has had to contend with. We should encourage a general getting out into the remote dis-

BIGELOW MAKES STATEMENT

Would Know Extent of Improvement, Schedule of Rates, and Character of Service.

The people are interested in the future telephone service of this city, and should know the vital contents of the franchise now asked for by Mr. Farmer of the A. T. & T. Co. The supposition back of Mr. Farmer in asking this franchise seems to have lost sight of that we would be making a contract for a long period of time and the terms of the franchise should be well looked after before it is too late. Did any one tell you what a good and fair franchise it would be for this city for the next thirty years?

The only reason so far advanced as to why this franchise should be granted is that Mr. Farmer is an old residence and would ask nothing but what we should grant.

While I do not doubt Mr. Farmer's good faith in this matter, the people of this city also have an interest and this good faith should also be considered. Certainly it is not good business for the City to make a contract of any kind without safeguarding the City interest and most assuredly this cannot be done without taking up the terms of the contract or franchise applied for and not the person asking the franchise or contract, for he may assign it to some one as soon as it is passed. The franchise sought no where states the extent of improvements to be made from time to time as the city may require the schedule of rates they expect to charge or service they expect to give us, and instead of coming out in the open and saying what they expect to do they leave us to take what Mr. Farmer, his succesors or assigns, see

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

State Bureau Finds Slight Decrease In Prices of Articles of Food

OLYMPIA, March 24.—Encouraging indications that the cost of living, which for the past decade has been constantly soaring skyward, has started to come down, are found by the state board of control, which for the past week has been making semi-annual purchases of supplies for the 11 state institutions.

As the state secures competitive bids on all supplies and buys by wholesale, lowest possible prices are obtainable. The board of control finds that the price of practically all food supplies has decreased from the last semi-annual purchases, made September 15, 1913. In some articles, like butter, the decreased price attributable to the coming summer months but in most cases the decrease is taken as attributable to other causes than the weather.

Comparsion is made of the prices at which the state bought eight staple articles of food six months ago and this month, the prices, in each case, being for delivery at the western Washington hospital for the insane:

	Sept., 1913.	March. 1914
Bacon	$0.1900	$0.1785
Beans	.0550	.0550
Butter	.3550	.2650
Flour	3.7500	3.6300
Ham	.1800	.1650
Rolled oats	.0275	.0266
Rice	.0466	.0400
Sugar	.0525	.0475

That this general decrease in prices is not confined to western Washington is shown by a comparison of the eastern Washington hospital for the insane:

Bacon	$0.1900	$0.1785
Beans	.0550	.0550
Butter	.3550	.2650
Flour	3.7500	3.6300
Ham	.1800	.1650
Rolled oats	.0275	.325
Rice	.0466	.0400
Sugar	.0525	.0475

Some of the largest owners of logged off lands in this state have received letters from State Forester E. W. Ferris, inviting them to deed to the state such portions of their holdings as will be unfit for cultivation.

Mr. Ferris' object is to reforest these lands. Private owners can not afford to hold them 50 or 60 years and pay taxes on it, while waiting for a second crop of timber, but as the state pays no taxes, it can afford to carry out a reforestation plan that will insure the presence of the lumber industry 50 years hence.

Promises of some donations to the state already have been received. No land that is suitable for cultivation is sought.

"It may seem to some that we are exercising a good deal of nerve in putting this proposition before you, but we have the nerve to do anything that we believe is for the best interest of the state, and it will take nerve and lots of it, to get back upon this logged off worthless land a second crop of timber to take the place of that which has been taken therefrom. This state should never be without a goodly supply of timber, and we are asking the loyal citizens who are owners of tracts which are suitable only for reforestation to give to the state at least a portion of such tracts, and start the reforestation ball rolling, which will accumulate as it travels along, and when it arrives at its final resting place, it will have attained such magnitude as will make the donors proud of the fact that they had a part in its making. Let us carefully harvest our present crop of timber and when that is gone may we have seen to it that another is ready for the axe and saw."

Was the creation of the public service commission a declaration by the legislature of this state of an abandonment of the former public policy of encouraging competition is a question looming large in a suit now pending in the state courts. The Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company is seeking to enjoin the commission from enforcing its order requiring the Skagit River company to give the Independent company physical connection on its lines, the Pacific people contending they have a contract for exclusive toll business from the Skagit company. It is seriously argued that when the legislature clothed the commission with power to enforce reasonable rates and adequate service, the old pro-competition policy of the state was abandoned and that the exclusive contract is therefore valid and should be recognized.

Adjutant General Fred Llewellyn, for the last three years in active charge of the business of the Washington National Guard, has resigned to resume legal practice. Governor Lister, as commander-in-chief of the guard, will appoint a successor. The appointment will be made from a list of about 50 officers on the active list, with a rank of captain or higher, who have been in the service, as officers, for four years or more.

Governor Lister declined to accept General Llewellyn's resignation a year ago, desiring to keep the national guard out of politics, and this course, it is anticipated, will be followed in the appointment of a successor.

At the call of Governor Lister a state humane bureau was organized last week. As the last legislature failed to make any appopriation for the work, members of the bureau will carry it on at their own expense. The governor, attorney general and superintendent of schools are ex-officio members of the bureau, while C. E. Muckler of Tacoma and Charles M. Farrer of Seattle, each prominent in humane work in his own city, complete the organization.

A feature of the work that has been decided upon is the suppression of cruelty in connection with "wild west" shows. Many of the "wild" horses used in such shows, it develops, are made so by application of knives concealed in the rider's sleeves or by burs under the saddle.

In the warnings sent out by the United States department of agriculture, attention is directed to the discovery of a chestnut blight on importations to this state which is one of the most damaging of all foreign pests. Last week in a large shipment inspected at Seattle, F. N. Rhodes, district inspector at Seattle, discovered the same thing and botanists of this state pronounce it the same dreaded chestnut blight, with conditions and symptoms slightly varied.

Cashmere, Monitor, Lake Chelan and Peshastin in Chelan county, under direction of O. T. Clawson, district horticultural inspector, are organizing fruit protective associations similar to those perfected in the Yakima Valley, and it is the hope of the inspector to have the county covered perfectly within a month.

An edition of about 400,000 books containing proposed initiative and referendum measures, together with arguments for and against them, promises to prove the largest job ever turned out by the state printer. It is estimated that if all the leaves in this book were placed end to end they would extend several miles into the Atlantic Ocean on the east and into Puget Sound on the west.

A little clause in the workmen's compensation act, providing that in case a widow receiving a pension from the state remarries, the amount put aside as a reserve shall be returned to the accident fund, has resulted in enriching the accident fund to a total of $50,576.44 to date.

Nineteen of the widows receiving pensions have remarried thus far. On the average they drew pensions only 11 months and then found a second mate. In some cases only two or three months elapsed.

In each instance the industrial insurance commission has made a lump sum settlement of $250 with the widow, under the provisions of the law, and has returned the balance of the reserve money to the accident fund.

In a number of cases, however, although no further provision is made for the widow, dependent children of the first marriage must be cared for, and the state continues to pay a pension on their account.

A total of 215 widows are now receiving pensions from the state on account of the death of their husbands as the result of industrial accidents.

The state fish commission has decided to discontinue the practice of naming the state's boats after women. The new ocean going patrol boat, now under construction, will be named "Governor Elisha P. Ferry," after the first governor of the state of Washington.

The state land board has adopted the Ferris resolution, outlining a definite conservation plan in dealing with tidelands, which is expected to increase the revenues of the state. Tidelands containing clam beds will be placed under the jurisdiction of the state fisheries department.

THE CITY COUNCIL

supervising electrician be adopted. Sec., Dustman. Shields protested that he could see no necessity for another electrician at this time. He did not wish to make known at this time the condition of city light fund, but it seemed necessary. We now have an indebtedness of $16,000 on the plant. It costs $3,000 to $5,000 annually for maintenance and $4,000 for interest. The income is $12,000, making a yearly deficit. He thought it unwise to add $1,500 a year to this expense, particularly as there were in town two local men who were willing to assist the City Electrician when needed. If we are not careful, City will have to raise light rates. Fisher acquiesced in these remarks. Dustman protested that this was a trial employment for 90 days at $125 per month. If found profitable could continue. He did not question the competency of Messrs. Stephenson and Pegrim, but the former had advised him he would not accept position of city electrician.

City Electrician Church submitted a sliding power rate sheet with a minimum charge of $1 per connected h. p. and rates as follows: 6c under 100 kw, 5c under 150 kw, 4c under 200 kw, and 3c over 200 kw, on a basis of 1 to 10 connected h.p. off peak load, either night or day.

The appointment failed of confirmation, 4 to 2, Dustman and Bigelow voting aye.

Upon motion of Shields, the light committee was instructed to confer with these electricians and have them get up a power rate sheet.

Upon motion of Shields, Mayor was directed to appoint special committees on water company and 3rd street extension conferences.

The street committee reported 5th street between Laurel and Lincoln in an impassible condition, and street superintendent was directed to repair same. Also that leak in water main at 11th and Chase had put street there in bad shape. Water company was ordered notified to repair break and when possible St. Supt. was directed to have street put in good repair.

The Health committee and Health officer called attention of alley bet. 4th and 5th and Chase and Peabody, sewer being clogged, and one case of typhoid fever in vicinity. St. Supt. was directed to open ditch to gulch, and to notify owners to remove accumulations and keep alley clean.

In this connection Councilman Fowler asked that stable nuisance at 8th and Peabody be abated immediately. Mayor reported Mr. Eagle seking new locality and agreed to see him about speeding his departure.

The damages agreed upon at the special meeting last Tuesday, wherein it was agreed that the City pay $6,800 damages to Mr. Morse, came in for another long discussion at the end of which it was agreed that this amount would be the whole that the City would be liable for to Mr. Morse by reason of the regrade, and to this end council adjourned to Wednesday to hear and act on an agreement to be prepared by Mr. Plummer, acting for Mr. Morse, and the City Attorney. Contemplated action to determine damages sustained by Mr. Kirschberg were ordered abandoned on the ground that he could sustain no damage by reason of the regrade.

Bills aggregating $743.53 were allowed.

In re the proposition to extend the improvement of First street from Oak to Valley and on Valley from 1st to 2nd, to get rid of the Valley street extension, Mr. Shields moved that City Attorney bring in a resolution to authorize condemnation for right to improve said streets. Carried.

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. OIL DRILLING EXPENSIVE.

Jefferson Oil Company Spends $60,000 With Hole Down Only 865 Feet

The Jefferson Oil company has spent $49,755.38 in cash, owes $10,950.79 and has a hole in the ground 865 feet deep, together with various and sundry assets which are shown in the secretary's balance just printed, says the Hoquiam Washingtonian.

The work on the well will be continued under one of two plans presented, and a thorough exploitation of the Hoh oil field will be made to a point where oil is discovered or it is tolerably well assured that oil in commercial quantities does not exist in that region.

The money received from the sale of stock has been honestly expended, the stockholders have voiced their confidence in the officers and directors who have conducted the affairs of the company in the re-election of the board of directors.

The Aberdeen World has the following on the same subject:

"The Hoh river well of the Jefferson Oil company, down now 865 feet, where it has stopped on account of lack of money for further drilling, will be carried to completion if the plan of the stockholders is successful.

"Under this plan, the stock of six of the largest stockholders of the company, together with unissued treasury stock, will be pooled, thus giving control of the company and this stock will be sold to any person or syndicate willing to go on with the drilling and guaranteeing to sink the hole to a depth of 3,000 feet.

"If this pooled stock can not be sold, enough more work will be done at the expense of the larger share holders to draw out the bit, which was imprisoned by a gas explosion, and determine whether or not oil has already been struck. This is an unknown quantity at this time. A gas vein was encountered at a depth of 855 feet. This vein exploded, embedding the bit in the hole. It has not yet been recovered. Nothing has been done at the well since the explosion which occurred several weeks ago."

The great expense attached to oil drilling in the west end results from cost of transporting machinery and material to the grounds, and from the further fact that a bad formation is encountered, which causes much expense and loss of time. The well at Forks has gone through the experience, the company operating there having spent several times the amount of money which was first estimated would complete the well. The same bothersome formation is also encountered at that place.

In the opinion of those familiar with formations, no such handicap will be experienced in this section when drilling starts on one or the of the several projects already outlined. The formation here is solid and true, showing sandstone as deep as drills have penetrated. A hole was sunk in Scow bay years ago by the late Henry E. Morgan, who was boring for coal. This was sunk to a depth of 1284 feet, and no trouble whatever was experienced. Several sites which have selected for prospective drilling lie so close to the water that transportation amounts to little or nothing. Indications are just as good, or better, the seepage is as strong, while the character of the oil which is found coming thru the crevices in the rock is said to show that it comes from a less distance than is the case with the seepage found near Hoh. Those who are acquanted with the oil business believe a well can be sunk in the eastern part of the Peninsula at a fraction of the expense incurred by the companies now in the field in the West End, with at least as good prospects for finding a big oil basin.—Townsend Leader.

BIBLE LECTURE COURSE

"Beyond the Grave" Subject of Opening Lecture, at Auditorium Sunday Afternoon.

A free, public Bible lecture course is being arranged for this place, the purpose being to arouse interest in unsectarian Bible study and to explain many important and difficult questions not generally understood. The International Bible Students Association has arranged to provide talented speakers for the entire series. "Beyond the Grave" is the subject of the opening lecture, which will be delivered Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the School Auditorium, by Pastor Daniel Toole, of New York City.

PASTOR DANIEL TOOLE.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the entire lecture course. Tickets will be unnecessary, since the work is strictly philanthropic. It is stated on authority that the collection basket will be conspicuous by its absence. It is especially urged that none miss the opening lecture of the series.

ARBOR DAY

This is the month of eager longing to the lover of outdoor work, as it is that of intense preparation for the work to come. More than that, in these years of increasing educational effort in the direction of encouraging the innate love of nature, it is the month of renewed activity in that direction.

The governor has set April 10 as Arbor day. To any sober intelligence the broader meaning of Arbor day will present itself in many phases.

Originally devised to make reparation to Mother Nature for what has been taken away from her, it has expanded to promote the development of art out of doors; that is to say that in encouraging the planting of trees to offset the injury done by cutting down trees, it has included within its meaning the planting of trees along the highways, the planting of orchards about our farms, and the planting of dceorative trees and shrubbery about our homes, and the planting of trees for shade and beauty along our streets and avenues.

And the spirit in which the question has been taken up by the first promoters, for the betterment of the people, has already been so far reaching that in many states arrangements are being consumated that the exercises shall be made general in every school house in such states and that both practical and theoretical works shall be accomplished on that day. The idea is so beneficent in its application and, withal, so timely that there should be a general inclination by everyone interested in plant life and lovely surroundings to give their assistance towards promulgating the principles so promising of good, not only to the individual, but to the community at large.

It is a happy fact, pregnant with immediate possibilities, that the educational effort involved in Arbor day exercises appeals to the young and to every school house, and that the soil into which the seed is put is naturally adapted to the production of a beautiful harvest.—Tacoma News.

L.O.O.M. MEMORIAL DAY

The Forty Year Test

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world-wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will undersand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers.

COUNTY SUPT.'S OFFICE

The program of the Institute which convenes April 6 to 10 will be published first of next week. The following will be some of the chief features of the program aside from the sectional work published in last week's items:

During Monday and Tuesday the leading instructor will be Dr. Frank Bolton, head of the department of Education, University of Washington. On Wednesday State Superintendent Josephene Preston will address the Institute on the subject "Better Rural Schools." The chief instructor during Thursday and Friday will be Prof. Frank Kraeger, head of the Department of Elementary Science, State College, Pullman.

The attractions for the evenings of Institute will be the following: Monday night, the Weatherwax Quartette (Lyceum number.) Tuesday night, reception of instructors and teachers by the Ladies Auxiliary of Port Angeles. Wednesday night, lectures by Prof. Kraeger.

Children who are to take part in final spelling contest should be in Port Angeles not later than Wednesday, April 8, at noon. The written contest will likely be held afternoon Wednesday.

Supt. Josephene Preston will undoubtedly have much to say of interest to directors as well as teachers. Mrs. Preston's chief address will come at 10 oclock Wednesday and it is to be hoped that a good representation of school directors may hear her.

The preliminary spelling contests held in various centers indicate that the contest will do a great deal toward securing good spelling in the schools of Clallam county.

An admission will be charged to spelling contest Wednesday evening. All the proceeds will be used toward prizes for the successful contestants.

This office would like a list of residents of Port Angeles who are willing to room and board teachers during institute week. Please send word county superintendent or phone R71.

Mr. C. C. Thomasson, field manager for the state superintendent will be in Clallam county next week Monday and in the interest of Community Center work. Together with the county superintendent, he will visit all the centers in Clallam county except those in the West End, viz., Dungeness, McCleay, Dist. 300 Dist. 43, Dist.2, Dist.13.

There is some talk of forming a Union High School District in the East End of the county.

But the average man has no use for mirrors if he could see himself in them as others see him.

There is usually a way to get around any kind of a rule.

NEWS OF THE COUNTY

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

Now we are having some equinoctial weather, but if it gets no worse we won't suffer any.

Mr. Dunn had a fall last week at Filion's mill, resulting in a partial dislocation, and badly bruised shoulder.

The little daughter of Mike Doyle's who is being cared for by Mrs. Willie Taylor at the hospital is gaining nicely.

Thursday, March 19th, was Mrs. Hattie Harding's twenty-first birthday anniversary and was an eventful day. Several of her elderly relatives visited her that day and had the pleasure of eating an excellent dinner, which was served on a beautiful set of chinaware, a long delayed wedding present sent by Mrs. George Barrill of the Minnesota, which had arrived the preceding evening. That did not end the events of the day, as later in the evening a dozen or more of the younger married people completely surprised Mrs. Hattie and report a very enjoyable time.

Mrs. Kahlee, sister of the Doyle men, who came here in October, started back to her home in Montana Monday.

Friday was Mrs. Riley's anniversary, and Saturday Mrs. Shrake's The latter is never so happy as when giving pleasure to others and demonstrated the same by inviting Mrs. and Lottie LaFlower, Mrs. Riley and Mrs. Fleming to accompany her to a theater after which they were taken to the McGoff candy and ice cream parlors, and regaled with cream and sweets. Mrs. Shrake is certainly a good entertainer.

Mr. Hanchett is further improving his place by a cellar and painting his house.

Another new house is being built on 6th between C and D streets, Mr. Lauridsen being the owner.

Mr. J. B. Fleming don't enjoy being shut in, and has dispensed with the high board fence on back of his lots and replaced it with wire.

BLUE MOUNTAIN

A week ago Thursday, Mr. Johnson spoke very learnedly and with much feeling on the temperance question. He not only talked but worked, as he circulated one of the many petitions that are going the rounds.

In talking about shutting liquor out of the state entirely one man remarked, "that won't do; it will spoil business." As if we—the American people — want business that sacrifices the comforts, happiness and the lives of the drinkers' families.

Emily Campbell is spending a few days with her brother, Alfred Stevenson. Mrs Campbell is expected home from Seattle about the middle of the week.

Mrs. H. C. Breckenridge spent a part of last week in Port Angeles and vicinity, with friends and relatives.

Mrs Emery returned from the Winter's home the first of this week where she has been caring for the brand new daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Winters.

Mr. Kale is improving the school grounds.

Marie Broughton was out home over Sunday.

Vern Jackson is clearing on the "Willie Jackson" estate, which he wishes to fit up as a home for himself and his sister Mable, whom he expects some time next month.

The party at Aaron Lewis' was an enjoyable affair. Green was the prevailing color and St. Patrick toasts and songs predominated. Seven of the young men entered the hat-trimming contest and developed remarkable skill, but the judges suspected feminine assistance. Mr. Rupp carried off first prize and Vern Jackson the booby prize, a blarney stone, something he does not need, for blarney and wit are already his.

Mrs. Rupp's cake was put on exhibition before serving. It was a beauty.

William Broughton and Howard Putman are doing some clearing for J. D. Jackson. Stumps pull easily this spring. They could hardly find anything stationary enough to hitch to in bringing the donkey up the hills.

Farmers are busy with their plowing.

Fred Brauer planted potatoes week before last. If the frost does not get the potatoes, Fred will get the price for first goods on the market. Kelly Epson is also taking the risk. Others are more cautious and are waiting until assured of continuous warm weather.

Indications are that there will be eggs galore for Easter. Mr. Epson gets twelve dozen a day. Kelly delivered seventy-eight dozen last week and ninety dozen Tuesday.

QUILLAYUTE

Saturday evening Miss Beth Smith gave a party at her home in Mora. The evening was spent in playing games, and at midnight delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. F. A. MacDonald, who has been away for nearly a month, is expected home next week.

Owing to a few missing ties and rails on the N. I. T. railroad, the Fairview Flyer has been unable to run the past two weeks so the news from Fairview didn't get in.

EAST END

From the Press.

The change from a fixed light to that of a flash light on the Dungeness sandspit was made last Sunday. The old light has illuminated the point of the spit and the adjacent waters ever since 1855. It appears that the lighthouse board will change every fixed light and this no doubt will be an improvement but it was like losing an old friend to have the fixed light go out of commission.

Highway Commissioner Roy, of Olympia, was here last week with the state chief engineer, going over the Sequim-Dungeness permanent highway, recently completed by Myers & Fitzgerald. They have accepted the road for the state. They did not appear to be in favor of any change of the route of the state road improvement from Sequim to Hurd creek.

C. F. Seal, who recently assisted in organizing the Pacific Coast Rose Society in Seattle, is making an effort to get all who are interested in rose culture in the East End to form an auxiliary society, such as exists in many places in the cities and towns on Puget Sound. Much valuable information can be gathered by the organization of a community society, without any expense whatever.

FINEST PLAYGROUND IN NORTHWEST

Olympic National Forest Becoming Popular Resort; Many Permits.

The coming summer with its lure to mountain lakes and the deep forest is making itself constantly more manifest, according to Forest Supervisor R. L. Fromme of the Olympic National Forest, in receipt of new and renewed applications for the use of small parcels of ground particularly on the shores of Lake Crescent and Quiniault for the construction of summer cottages. This kind of special use of National land under written permit from the Forest Supervisor's office, while not involving much total acreage, represents practically one-half of the total permits of all kind, now in force, which is a little more than 70. The average annual charge for summer residence sites in the most desirable locations is $10, but permits are carefully excluded from places which the general public have been in the habit of using as popular camping places, for which there is no charge.

Many Summer Homes.

There are now 22 summer residence lots under permit on the shores of Lake Crescent, 20 miles to the southwest of Port Angeles, and 12 on Lake Quiniault, 43 miles north of Hoquiam. The state and county road work north of Humptulips, which promises a good automobile road through to the latter lake by the end of the year, is occasioning increased interest in the leasing of lots for summer cottages, and the Forest Service has staked out approximately 200 lots, averaging about 100x200 feet in anticipation of this highest use of much of the shore lands.

Other Special Uses

A permit to construct and operate a small sawmill was also recently granted on Lake Quiniault at an annual charge of $50, with the idea of accommodating permittees and local settlers with handy building materials for their cottages.

Other special use on the Olympic National Forest include a State Fish Hatchery on Lake Crescent, granted free, one hotel site on Lake Quiniault at $25 per year, one small hotel and sanitarium at the big Olympic Hot Springs, 20 miles from Port Angeles at $25, an apiary permit on the upper Elwha River, three cabin site permits at $5 each, one small summer resort area on the North Fork of the Skokomish, above Lake Cushman, nine free co-operative permits for telephone connections with Forest service lines, three nominal charge permits for agricultural and pasture uses of areas not subject to homesteading, several permits to homestead applicants whose filings under the act of June 11, 1906, have not yet been allowed, and a number of free permits for school houses, irrigation pipe lines and ditches, a dam and reservoir site for the City of Port Townsend, several co-operative telephone lines and a logging railroad.

For Hot Springs Resorts.

Two applications are now on file in the supervisor's office for the construction of hotel, sanitarium and summer cottages on the Elwha River, to which new developments will probably be piped the water from the 13 springs of the Olympic Hot Springs which lie in a group about 5½ miles up Boulder Creek from the Elwha River. Water from these springs will soon be forwarded for analysis to Washington, D. C., as to mineral content and medicinal uses. The applicants are now doing the necessary survey work, and completing definite plans for submission showing just what character of development is contemplated. The plans, if carried out, it is believed will result in notable resorts.

Policy of Forest Service.

The policy of the Forest Service in connection with the special use business , according to Supervisor Fromme, is to make a charge only where the use is of a commercial nature or bears the aspect of a luxury, and even then, excepting where the commercial feature is of some real importance, only a nominal charge is made, he states.

The annual revenue from this source on this National Forest already amounts to about $600, and is expected to double to many times as the many resources and natural attractions become more accessible and better known. The total acreage now under permit is approximately 275.

All permittees are conditioned to assist in the matter of forest fire protection, but will be paid for services rendered where the fire does not threaten their improvements or for which they are in no way responsible.

GAS GUN ARRIVES

Will Be Temporarily Installed at Marrowstone Point in Near Future

The lighthouse tender Manzanita arrived in port last evening, mooring at Quincy-street dock, says the Townsend Leader. The tender has on board the new acetylene gas gun, which was ordered installed at Marrowstone point some time ago. The superintendent of construction will arrive Tuesday, when the work of installation will begin. It is understood that the new signal will not be housed at the present time in a permanent structure, a temporary building being contemplated for the purpose. It has also been intimated that the gun may be transferred to some other point.

The gun is a Scotch invention, and is of a type which has proved very successful in that country. It is fired automatically every thirty seconds and its reports can be heard for thirteen miles.

This is the first signal of the kind to be installed on the Pacific coast and those interested in maritime affairs are anxious to see how the new invention will work out.

ECONOMIZING ON PRINTERS' BILLS

L. T. Sands of Bucyrus writes that "in the Board's report as published in the Leader for January there is a misleading statement of work performed on the county road. Nearly $84 of the amount was worked in August in District No. 4, the balance in District 3 in October. It was evidently all thrown together and reported to have been performed in January. This puts us in a bad light, as January was an exceptionally bad month this year. It is bad enough to wait six months for one's pay without having same reported thus."

CHAPTER XIII.

FOR a few days after this conversation the master of transportation was in doubt as to what course he should pursue. In the end he did nothing, and the letter from St. Louis was permanently filed away. There were several reasons for this action. For one thing, he was a salaried man and could not afford to lose his job. What influenced him most, however, was his genuine liking for Anthony.

The first thing Kirk did when pay day came was to inclose the greater part of his salary in an envelope and send it to John Weeks, with a note explaining that he had withheld only enough for his own actual needs, and promising to continue reducing his indebtedness by a like amount monthly. He was surprised beyond measure to have the remittance promptly returned. The brief letter that accompanied it brought him a flush of discomfort. What the deuce had made Mrs. Cortlandt do that? For a time he was undecided whether to be offended at her conduct or gratified, and he had not settled the matter to his satisfaction when he called upon her that evening.

"Weeks wrote me you had squared my account with him," he said awkwardly. "I'm tremendously obliged, of course, and—I'll give this to you instead of him." He offered her the envelope with his pay inclosed.

"Don't be silly, Kirk," she said in a matter of fact tone. "I didn't wish Weeks to have any opportunity to talk. You need this money and I don't."

"Perhaps I should have offered it to Mr. Cortlandt."

"Stephen knows nothing about the Weeks affair. If you choose to regard my little favor as a debt, however, please let it run on until you are better able to pay."

But Anthony remained inflexible, and at last she accepted his proffer with some impatience.

"You are the most foolish person I ever knew," she remarked. "You have the most disappointing way of receiving favors. I had a decent position for you, but you would go to collecting fares. I hope you have had enough of it by now and are ready to take something worth while."

"Not until it comes naturally. No hop, skip and jump for mine."

Edith sighed. "It is terribly dull for me here at present," she said. "Mr. Cortlandt is very busy; I have no one to talk to, no one to amuse me. Why, I've scarcely seen you since you went to work. Will you come to the dance tomorrow night?"

He shook his head.

"The music is good. You will meet some nice people. If you remember, one of your qualifications for a position was that you are a good waltzer."

"I can't mingle with the 'quality.'"

"Be sensible. This is an invitation."

"I've learned something about canal conditions. What would people say if Mrs. Stephen Cortlandt were seen dancing with the new collector of No. 2? Besides, to tell the sordid truth, I haven't any clothes."

Edith silently extended the envelope in her hand, but he laughed.

"Perhaps I'll come to the next dance. I'll be rich then. See!" He showed her a long slip of paper consisting of five coupons, each numbered "8838."

"Lottery tickets!"

He nodded. "Allan had a very particular dream about the number 8, so I invested $5 'silver' on his hunch. It's the number of my automobile license." Kirk sighed at the memory of his new French car. "You don't object to such gambling?"

"Hardly," laughed Edith, "when I have a ticket for the same drawing. Every one does it, you know."

"If I win the capital prize I'll come to the next party and claim all the dances you will allow me. The drawing comes off next Sunday, and it happens that I've been shifted to No. 6 for a few trips, so I'll have a chance to see the fun."

Inasmuch as No. 6 did not leave until 1 o'clock on Sunday, he had ample time in which to witness the lottery drawing, a thing he had been curious to see since he had first heard of it. This form of gambling was well recognized, it seemed; not only the natives, but all classes of canal zone workers, engaged in it freely. The drawings were conducted under rigid government supervision.

Allan, vastly excited, was, of course, waiting to accompany him.

"Oh, boss," exclaimed the negro, "I feel that we shall h'experience good fortune today!"

"Did you buy a ticket?"

"No, sar; I h'invested all my monies traveling on those railroad trains."

"Now see how foolish you are. If you'd stayed at home you might have bought the winning number today."

"I prefer to h'accompany you. But I have been thinking to make you a proposition of partnership, Master h'Anthony. I will stay home and dream numbers, which you can purchase with your salary. In that manner we shall certainly burst this lottery. I do not desire the profits, however, for being partners with you. I would like you to have plenty of monies, that is all. I love you, sar."

"Don't! You embarrass me."

The drawing, which was for a capital prize of $15,000 ("silver"), had drawn a larger crowd than usual, and when the two reached Cathedral square they found the lottery building and plaza thronged to overflowing with the usual polyglot elements that make up these Latin-American gatherings.

By dint of considerable effort Kirk succeeded in working his way through the wide double doors, and, being much above the average height, he was able to get a good view of the proceedings. Upon a platform a group of ceremonious officials were gathered about a revolving wire cage, so arranged that it could be whirled rapidly upon its axis. Into it were put ten ivory spheres, resembling billiard balls in size and appearance. When this had been done the cage was closed, and a very badly frightened twelve-year-old girl was selected at random from the audience, then lifted to the stage, where it required the commands and entreaties of her excited parents to prevent her from dissolving in tears. At a word from the master of ceremonies the cage was spun until the ivory balls inside leaped and capered like captive squirrels. Then at another signal it was stopped. The door was opened, and the little girl reached in a trembling hand and selected a sphere. It proved to be hollow, with two halves screwed together, and in full sight of the assembly it was opened, displaying a bit of paper inside.

"Ocho!" cried the announcer, and a card bearing the numeral "8" was raised. The paper was replaced inside the ivory ball, the ball itself was dropped into the wire cage, the door was closed and once more the cage was spun.

Kirk was much interested in the scene, not from any faintest hope that he would draw a prize, but purely from the novel atmosphere and color of the thing. While his eyes were busiest and just as the child prepared to draw another ball he felt a clutch upon his arm and, glancing down, beheld the glowing black eyes of Senor Ramon Alfarez fixed upon him. He carried a dapper little cane, with which he tapped his former prisoner to attract his attention.

At sight of him Kirk drew down his brows and said gruffly:

"Don't poke me with that umbrella."

He turned away, but again Alfarez touched him.

"I will spik' wit' you, hombre," he said.

"If you keep jabbing me with that crutch I'll break it, and then you can't walk home."

Ramon jerked his head toward the square outside in an imperious fashion, and Kirk, curious to learn the cause of unusual excitement, followed him without demur. When they had reached the street the Spaniard turned with flashing eyes and a mirthless smile.

"Well!" he said dramatically.

"Pretty well. How goes it with you?"

"So! You 'ave socceed in your cowardly attemp'."

"My what?"

"I lose my poseetion as comandante of police."

"You don't say so!" Kirk's face broke into a smile of real pleasure.

"Ha! Makes it you to laugh, then?" exclaimed the Panamanian excitedly. "Per'aps you shall answer to those detestable actions, senor."

"Perhaps! I see you blame me for the loss of your job. Well, maybe you won't beat up the next American you get your hands on."

"Bot—I 'ave another poseetion!" Ramon exulted. "I 'ave been promote! I am appoint' yesterday by his excellency the presidente to be his secretary."

"I suppose it's a good job, but you ought to be selling poison in a drug store."

Narrowing his eyes, Alfarez said meaningly in a voice that none might overhear, "Panama is sometimes very on'ealthy city for fat Americans." He ran a hostile glance up and down Anthony's burly frame. "It is the climate per'aps—of too great 'eat. The senor is reech man's son, eh? Those do not geeve the appearance."

With supreme insolence he touched one of the buttons upon Kirk's linen uniform with his cane, whereat the American snatched the stick out of his hand, broke it and tossed it into the street. His blood was up, and in another breath he would have struck the Spaniard, regardless of consequences, but just at that moment Allan dashed out of the crowd crying breathlessly:

"Oh, boss! Oh, boss! Glory to God, it is true! Oh-h-h, glory!" Seizing Kirk's hands, he kissed them before the other could prevent, then ran on frantically: "Come quick! Come! Come! Come!"

"Look out!" snapped Kirk angrily. "What's happened?"

"The dream! The dream is come! Oh, God, sar! You—you have won the capital prize, sar! You—do not say you have lost the ticket or I shall die and kill myself!"

"Here it is!" In his hand Anthony waved a slip of paper, out of which leaped four big, red numbers—"8838."

"Diablo!" came from behind him, and he turned to behold Alfarez, livid of face and with shaking hand, fling a handful of similar coupons after the broken cane. Without another word or a glance behind him the Panamanian made off across the plaza, barely in time to escape the crowd that surged around the two he had quitted.

Bombarded by a fusillade of questions in a dozen tongues, jostled by a clamoring, curious throng, the lucky owner of 8838 fought his way back into the lottery building, and as he went the news spread like flaming oil.

There it was, plainly displayed, "8838!" There could be no possible mistake, and it meant 15,000 silver pesos, a princely fortune indeed for the collector of No. 2.

Promptly at five minutes to 1 o'clock that afternoon Allan Allan, late of Jamaica, strode through the Panama railroad station and flaunted a first class round trip ticket to Colon before the eyes of his enemy, the gateman. He was smoking a huge Jamaican cigar, and his pockets bulged with others. When he came to board the train he called loudly for a porter to bring him the step and once inside selected a shady seat with the languid air of a bored globe trotter.

Only when Kirk appeared upon his rounds did he forego his haughty complacency. Then his wide lips, which nature had shaped to a perpetual grin, curled back as they were intended, his smile lit up the car, and he burst into loud laughter.

Kirk found that the report of his good fortune had spread far and wide; he was halted a score of times for congratulations; operators at the various stations yelled at him and waved their hands; Runnels wired "Hurrah!" at Gatun. A certain respect was in these greetings, too, for he had suddenly become a character.

As yet, however, he had not fully considered what this windfall meant to him. His first thought had been that he could now discharge his debts, go back to New York and clear himself before the law. Yet the more he thought of it the less eager he became to return. Seven thousand five hundred dollars in gold to Kirk Anthony of Panama, collector, was a substantial fortune. To Kirk Anthony of Albany, distributor, it was nothing. Suppose he went home and squared his account with the police, what would he do then? Nothing, as usual. Here, he was proving that the Anthony breed was self supporting at least. And there was another reason, the weightiest of all. Long before he had reached the end of his run he realized that not 100 times the amount of this capital prize would tempt him to leave Panama before he had seen Chiquita.

Chiquita was beginning to seem like a dream. At times during the past week he had begun to wonder if she were not really a product of his own imagination. His fancy had played upon her so extravagantly that he feared he would not know her if ever they came face to face.

This was most unsatisfactory, and he reproached himself bitterly for the involuntary faithlessness that could allow her image to grow dim. He was almost without hope of seeing her again. And then, with the inconsequence of dreams and sprites, she appeared to him.

It was but a glimpse he had and a tantalizing flash of recognition from her eyes. It happened in the dusk during the confusion that accompanied the arrival of No. 7 at Panama. It lasted only a moment, and he lost sight of her again in the crowd.

But there was no doubt that she had recognized him, and nothing now could prevent him from continuing his search. The trouble was that his present occupation allowed him no opportunity. He was tied to the railroad except at night.

It was perhaps two weeks later that a serious shakeup occurred in the office force, of which no one seemed to know the cause. There was a mad scramble for advancement all along the line, in which Kirk took no part. But unexpectedly Runnels summoned him to his office.

"How would you like an inside position?" said the master of transportation, eyeing him keenly.

"So soon?"

"I said I'd advance you if you made good." He paused an instant, then said deliberately, "When you get the hang of things here you'll have a chance to be my assistant."

Kirk opened his eyes in amazement.

"Gee! That's great! But do you think I can get away with it?"

"Not at once. It will take time, of course, and you'll have to work like the devil. Look here, Anthony, I'm partly selfish in this, for I believe you're the sort I'm going to want within the next year. The superintendent has had an offer from a big system in the states, and he's going to quit when his vacation comes. He likes me and he says I'll probably step into his shoes. Do you understand what that means? I'll need fellows I can count on—fellows who won't double cross me to make a dollar for themselves, or knife me when my back is turned. I've got to have an efficient, noiseless organization. Otherwise we'll all go under, for we'll be into politics up to our necks. I think you're my sort, so if you'll stick to me I'll help you and for every step I take I'll drag you up one."

"It's a go!" The two young men clasped hands heartily. Runnels had struck the right note. Beside his former desire to prove himself a man, Kirk now felt a strong sense of loyalty to the one who had recognized his worth.

When he told his good news to Mrs. Cortlandt, her surprise was so cleverly simulated that he never dreamed that she had been at great pains to bring this thing about. Not that Runnels was indisposed to act upon his own initiative, but the circumstances that had made his action possible had been due to her. It was hard to help a man against his will, but she profited by experience and took the line of least resistance.

The young man himself did not inquire too closely into the occasion of his advancement, and Edith Cortlandt was but little in his mind. He was consumed with the thought of Chiquita. He hoped that his new work would allow him more control of his time and perhaps put him in the way of learning her name. He could move in better society now.

Then the franchise would be of intelligent character and we would have a contract on which to base our future dealings.

Why not have the details of what we may expect by virtue of the franchise and at such time as the rates charged or service rendered does not comply with the terms of the franchise the city may cancel the grant and make room for another company that will give us such service as the city may require. BIG FUTURE FOR OLYMPIC SPRINGS

" A recent instructive circular issued from the Government Printing Office at Washington, entitled "General Information Regarding the Hot Springs of Arkansas", is of particular interest," states Forest Supervisor R. L. Fromme, "from the fact that the aggregate flow therein given is only a little more than four times that of the Olympic Hot Springs on Boulder Creek of the Elwha River, according to measurements by Forest officers last summer. These latter springs, 13 in number, which are on Government land within the Olympic National Forest, gave an aggregate flow for one minute's measurement of 135½ gallons, which is at the rate of a little more than195,000 gallons per 24 hours. The published figures for the aggregate flow of the 46 springs at Hot Springs, Arkansas, are 826,308 gallons. Considering the fact that the Olympic Hot Springs have not yet been improved to the extent of constructing a catch basin, Supervisor Fromme feels that the aggregate flow could be appreciably increased with a little work toward better opening them up and the development of a good common intake.

"The Hot Springs of Arkansas, including 4 sections of land, was made a National park reservation in 1832, and thus preserved in perpetuity free from monopoly and commercial exploitation for the benefit particularly of the sick. In addition to eleven pay bath houses operated under goverment lease on the reservation and the Army and Navy General Hospital and Government free bath house for the indigent, the 46 hot springs support 12 bath houses at various points in the City of Hot Springs close by. The water is the same in all, but the prices charged for the baths vary in the different houses in accordance with the equipments and the accommodations furnished. These rates are, however, fixed by the Secretary of the Interior, and range from 20c to 55c for single baths, or from $6 to $10 for a course of 21 baths. The City of Hot Springs has a resident population of about 16,000 and an exceptionally large transient trade, being bountifully supplied with hotels and boarding houses.

"A complete analyses of the water at the Arkansas Hot Springs is not furnished in the circular referred to, but may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for 10c. This publication bears the title" Analysis of the Waters of the Hot Springs of Arkansas". It is stated, however, that the salutary effects of the water are attributed largely to a radioactive quality, this rare element being present in a gaseous form. A comparison with the water of the Olympic Hot Springs cannot be made just at present for the reason that the Bureau of Chemistry at Washington requests 5 gallons before starting analysis, and the special receptacle in which it must be shipped has not yet been received. Supervisor Fromme expects, however, to have this work attended to very shortly and trusts that the Olympic water will not suffer any in the comparison as to health giving values. Actual experience of a number of visitors to these Olympic springs already vouches for the highly beneficial effects of the water. The temperature at the source averages between 120 and 125 degrees.

"With the present information indicating the aggregate flow from the unimproved and undeveloped Olympic Hot Springs to be practically one-fourth that of the much famed and highly developed Hot Springs of Arkansas, and considering the immensely commendable and exceptionally popular service which the latter springs have come to support, there is every reason to believe that a great future awaits the proper development of this Olympic resource. A small permit for hotel and sanitarium purposes already in force and two applications for more extensive developments now on file point surely to the awakening.

SUPERIOR COURT SETTLES JURY CASES

for damages sustained in the regrade of Front and Laurel was entered yesterday, by confession of the city, and in accordance with the agreement. C. S. Stakemiller, Walter Mack Clark and E. R. Gehrke were named a commission to ascertain and fix the boundaries of the district to pay this judgment.

The defendants in the State vs. Earl Ellis and Louisa Granger charged with abduction, were brought into court to plead. Both entered pleas of not guilty, and were bound over for trial under bonds of $3000 each, remaining in custody in default of same. Mrs. Granger alleged that she had no means to secure counsel and W. S. Lanthorn was named by the court to defend her.

Miss Gussie Jackson, whose true name is Lizzie Mike, and who was arrested last week o nthe charge of forging checks on the Citizens Bank in the name of Jonnie George was brought into court to plead, when it was found that she was only 16 years of age, a mere child as the Court observed. The charge was ordered dismissed, and proceedings ordered brought under the juvenile act. Wm. Ritchie was named to defend. The Indian maid confessed her guilt but could explain no reason for the act. THE COMING OF EUROPE'S HORDES tricts, for it will be better for them and better for us.

"But there is a moral phase which is greater than the material. If we solve this we solve the material—the economic. We hear a great deal about getting ready for the opening of the canal. Seattle is spending $10,000,000 in harbor improvements, Tacoma is preparing along the same line; meetings are being held all over the state to discuss the great issue, one way and another along material lines. There is another way to prepare; Get rid of the conditions which make for danger; for poverty, vice and the breeding places for vice here, for when this influx arrives we will simply be facing an uncharted future without a helm.

The American saloon, from out of which goes every other form of iniquitous vice, attacking everything and giving no benefits, stands out today threatening the future on this coast. This year is the time to face that problem and solve it right. Statistics show in this state the per cent of illiteracy less, for education more, than any other state in the Union. We have now, as it were, a hand-picked, self-picked, population. Enough ambition of hope, freedom and desire for betterment; a picked band who have left old homes, friends, ties, and National traditions to come west and cast their lots here. People who have done that have not been weaklings, the ignorant or the spineless, but a selected gathering. No state in the Union can have a higher average of citizenship, moral physical and permanent.

"While the greater portion of the influx will have the same aspirations as our forefathers, for a generation at least the average of our citizenship is bound to be lowered in the accumulation. Whatever, therefore, we can do in the next year or two to prepare for this influx will have an important bearing on the future; what we fail to do in these two years we will be unable to do for a decade or two to follow and perhaps for a much longer period. This year, then, is the opportunity of a generation. We see all along the coast a campaign of progress. Throughout California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, from Canada to Mexico the fight is on for State wide-Coastwide Prohibition of the manufacture as well as the sale of intoxicating liquors. A wholesale remedy at this time to prepare for what's coming. California found December 1st, that in thirty days a petition would have to be presented with 58,000 signatures to put up the issue this fall. An army of enthusiastic workers went at it with a vim, with the result that a petition was presented on time with 80,000 signatures. We need in this state but 32,000 signatures to comply with the law and have until July 1st, to file these. We will have twice the number. Oregon, too, and Idaho, will be in line and the three Pacific coast states with four millions of population, to say nothing of the eastern border state, will sweep this accursed traffic from our boundaries. The concentration of the work shows the hand of Providence in its preparation. Is there one who can explain how Women's suffrage came by a vote of two to one in this state, California following with like enfranchisement, and Oregon, after three failures, falling into line? Esther has indeed been brought to the throne for just such a time as this—one great voting force to get rid of this great evil.

"Get ready for the Panama canal; for the dangers as well as for opportunities. Now a life can be invested for perpetual good or for positive injury through neglect. We are entering this era through the great and most strategic opportunity to say what kind of preparation we are to make. Are they coming to be blest and to bless in return, or are they to be cursed and dragged down and in return curse and drag down. The saloon exists by virtue of your vote alone. If we leave it we leave it only to curse, and I urge you to do your full duty at this most opportune time."

This report, caught on the fly by a long-hand reporter, fails utterly to do justice to the eloquent address of Mr. Cotterill or the subject which he so ably handled. Those who heard him rose from their seats at the banquet board and cheered him to the echo, a spontaneous appreciation of the eloquent effort.

It is not known at this time who will be the speaker at the April dinner.

The price of admission to gentlemen will be $1.00; to ladies a lunch box containing luncheon for two and a necktie made from a piece of her dress. These boxes will be sold at a uniform price of 75 cents; the purchaser eating supper with the lady who put up the lunch. Coffee will be served free to all.

The ladies are all requested to wear calico dresses. z
