PORT ANGELES OLYMPIC LEADER

VOL. 29. NO. 26. PORT ANGELES, CLALLAM COUNTY, WASHINGTON, FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1914 $1.00 PER YEAR

C Street Grade to Be Completed on Old Lines Without Regard to Central Portion of Town.

Two permits were issued by the city council Tuesday night for the erection of concrete buildings in the business section, one 50x50 and two stories and basement to Christopher Kuppler and one 50x140 two stories and basement to Warren Morse. The buildings are both to be erected on the west side of Laurel north of First, covering all of lot 20. blk 15 and the south 50 feet of lot 1 blk. 15. This will make Laurel street the most up-to-date in the city.

$250 for 8 Hours, Minimum Wage for City Employes.

The ordinance committee reported back fixing minimum wage for city work without recommendation. Upon consideration Shields moved that clause be inserted allowing one apprentice to each contract for each 25 persons employed. The amendment carried. Fleming had the maximum penalty of $50 changed to $100 with a minimum fixed at $50, and sought to have the wage raised from $2.50 per day to $3. The ordinance was adopted, and after its publication and going into effect no employee of the city in any capacity will work more than eight hours or receive less than $2.50 per day.

No Further Extensions of Light Line for 90 Days.

City electrician reported that proposed light line extensions onAlbert street would cost $410 and on Vine $219 also that poles on west side of Laurel were interfering with construction work on new buildings. These latter poles are too low and are on sidewalk line. They were ordered removed. Dustman for light committee recommended that no further extensions of lighting systems be made for at least 90 days. which was adopted. The electrician's requisition for 500 pounds of No. 6 W. P. wire was ordered.

Street Lines Off from Six to Ten Feet.

Shields for committee of the whole, reported the visit of the council to C street improvement and the ordering of the lines of the street to be run from the base down town. Later in the evening this matter was taken up on the report of the engineer, who stated that the discrepancies found were greater than he had suspected and he backed down from his recommendation that all streets be made to conform to the monuments. According to the surveys made this week and checked and rechecked, C street at 8th is 6 feet too far east and 8th street 6 feet too far south This discrepancy applies practically to all streets in vicinity, south of Fifth and west of Laurel. At 12th and C, the line should be 10 feet west of present street line. This discrepancy is caused by the original government stakes, by which practically the whole town has been fenced, were set some twenty-five years ago, when the townsite was a veritable forest. The work was done by contract with little hope of a checking which could discover the variations. Hence little surprise is expressed that they do not conform to the compass. Bigelow stated that surveys are a delicate thing to handle, and his experience is that if council had left the Pope-Blackwood survey alone (as many contended in the last year or so) many property owners of the city would be better pleased now and city and property owners would have been thousands of dollars ahead. Mr. Fleming thought the residents of C street would hardly submit to losing the necessary ground to straighten the street without a big holler, and the matter was left in the air. Later Dustman moved that street be improved under former lines run by city engineer which motion carried. This survey conforms to the old government stakes left as near as possible.

Special committee named to look into the matter of securing water

Excellent Headway Made with Sluicing

The excellent headway made by those in charge of the two hydraulic giants on the Front street regrade has made it possible for planking to be laid on the north side of Front street west of Laurel where the fill has been completed during the past week. The workmen are now sluicing clay and gravel into Oak street and will have this grade brought up to the required level by the first of the week.

A construction crew has been driving in new piles at the foot of Laurel street to make a gradual approach from the dock. Planking will be laid here immediately, enabling vehicles to continue directly to First street instead of going around by Lincoln.

NEW RECEIVER FOR ANGELES BREWERY

Court Appointed Lauridsen to Take Charge of Funds Until Final Windup of Receivership.

The matter of removing the Receiver of the Angeles Brewing & Malting Co. came on to be heard Tuesday upon the application of the creditors. who alleged, it will be remembered, that the Receiver was using the funds of the trust in his private business. This motion was to have been heard early in the month but the Court was served with a writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court to appear June 19. The permanent writ was denied by the supreme court, giving the court full jurisdiction.

At the hearing Tuesday Mr. Cole for the Receiver went into every technical point in an effort to check the hearing, first asking that a new judge be called into the case, then by a motion to quash. followed with questioning the jurisdiction of the court, alleging prejudice and finally objecting to a hearing on the petition of the creditors. alleging that the receiver was cited to appear upon the petition of the court. All these were brushed aside by the court on the ground that the Receiver was an officer of the court with no inherent right.

Receiver Janecke was called to the stand and examined over the objection of his counsel by Mr. Snoddy and Mr. Cosgrove for creditors. In this examination it developed that Mr Janecke had until recently $20,000 and all the time since June of last year $17.000 cash funds of the Receivership. That during said period he had used from $5,000 to $10,000 of these funds in his private business, or rather in the Pt. A. Trans. Co. a local steamboat company, and that he commingled the funds of the Receivership with the funds of his private account in the State Bank of Seattle and in the safety deposit vault. segregating accounts only in the case of the deposits at the Seattle Nat. Bank. He did not know how much he had at either place. As an excuse for this he stated that he did not know until Monday of this week that he did not have authority to use this money, believing that his bond gave him this privilege. He could replace the amount borrowed within two or three days notice.

Mr. Janecke gave this information frankly after being advised by his attorney that he could stand on his constitutional rights and refuse to answer. The court suggested however, that if he had made a mistake it would be far better for him to give the facts frankly and this he did, finally, answering the Court with the statement that he had enough and wished to be relieved. The motion of creditors for his removal was thereupon granted and G. M. Lauridsen appointed to succeed him, with bonds fixed at $20.000. Mr. Lauridsen's duties will be simply to conserve the funds of the receivership until the final wind-up of the affairs, after the appeal of the Receiver to the Supreme Court from the allowance of the Court is settled. The receiver

SCANDINAVIANS HOLD PICNIC

Sports and Speeches Feature the Annual Gathering of Swedes, Danes and Norwegians.

The number of people that gathered at Ennis creek last Sunday to participate in the picnic given by the Swedes, Norwegians and Danes of the city. indicated that the northern countries of Europe have a very substantial representation in Port Angeles. It was a jolly, good natured gathering, composed chiefly of the nationalities above mentioned, but sprinkled with a few who cannot claim the honor of being descendants of the Vikings. The festivities opened with a literary program consisting of speeches, interspersed with musical selections by the Swedisn band.

The opening address by the chairman, Mr. K. O. Erickson, was followed by speeches of welcome by Mayor White and F. E. Ullstrom. Mayor White on behalf of the city, welcomed the gathering in a few well chosen words that conveyed in no uncertain terms the appreciation that is felt by all Americans of the characteristic spirit of honesty, integrity and high standard of citizenship invariably shown by Scandinavian representatives in this country. Mr. Ullstrom spoke in the Swedish language and emphasized the desirability of an organization which would tend to keep alive the spirit of fellowship and good will existing between the Amercian Scandinavians.

Reviews History of Settlements

Supt. Thos. Geisness addressed the gathering on the subject: Short History of the Scandinavian settlements in America. He pointed out the fact that where in olden times physical courage and strength of body marked the Northmen as chosen leaders, the same people were now demonstrating that they were no less willing and able to answer the modern demands of moral courage and efficiency. Mr. J. P. Christensen spoke in his usual happy strain about the early days of Port Angeles, and Col. William H. Peters gave a horoscope of Port Angeles, the city of the future. After a few remarks by Mr. Ben Goodbrand on Iceland, the audience at the suggestion of G. M. Lauridson gave three cheers for the staunch American Scandinavian, Mr. C. J. Erickson, whose energy and enterprise was the chief factor in bringing the railroad to Port Angeles.

At the conclusion of the literary program. the chairman on behalf of the committee. invited those present to partake of refreshments which were served in style to remind one of the universality of Scandinavian hospitality. While refreshments were being served the band furnished delightful music and Mrs. Landberg delighted the audience with a number of well rendered vocal solos.

Swedes Lose Tug of War.

A number of sports followed which developed considerable amusement. The leading contest was the tug of war with the Swedes on one side and the Norwegians and Danes on the other. It was a very evenly matched contest and a number of heavyweights were on the rope at each end. The first tug resulted in victory for the Norwegians and Danes, the second was won by the Swedes and the third and final "tug" gave to the Norwegians and Danes the victory as the best two out of three. Other contests followed in quick succession. Prizes were awarded in each contest. Mrs. Frank Lysall winning a return trip to Seattle as the fastest runner among the married ladies. The idea of a union picnic was conceived and carried out by the representatives of the Swedish club in Port Angeles and it is understood and hoped that next year the Danes and Norwegians will take up the matter and make the annual Scandinavian picnic an established custom in Port Angeles and Clallam county.

Opera House Block Raised to Grade

The opera house, one of the oldest buildings in Port Angeles, has been raised to the new Front street grade during the past week by Kuppler & Spinney, building contractors, with the able assistance of their foreman, B. L. Wilson. and an able crew.

New sills and posts on concrete footings have replaced old decayed timbers, and the building is in better shape now than for many years past. 100 jacks were used in raising the opera house, and 10 men were employed. One turn of all the jacks would raise the structure one-eighth of an inch, and each man had to make nearly 50 turns to bring it up half an inch.

The contractors will work on the Clallam County Bank next. As the remaining buildings are smaller than the one just raised, they will soon be adjusted to the new grade, and Port Angeles will look like a new place.

The building is thoroughly modern and up-to-date in every respect, every precaution having been taken to make it as sanitary as possible.

ANGELES WINS EXCITING GAME

Lefty Reardon Mows Down Twelve Olympics While Reiley and Bayton Star with Bat.

In one of the most exciting games ever played on the local grounds, the Port Angeles nine defeated the Olympics of Sequim, 4 to 3, Sunday afternoon. With the score 4 to 1 against them, the visitors started a miniature bombardment in the first of the ninth, and it was any man's game until Herb threw the last man out at first.

It was a pitcher's battle from the start, the first man up for each team being struck out. Pete Reardon, the left-hander recently of Dugdale's Giants' had a slight edge on his opponent in every phase of the game. He is credited with 12 strikeouts, allowed but seven scattered hits, issued only two passes, and made a hit and drew a pass out of four trips to the plate, while McInnes fanned eight, was touched up for as many hits, passed three men and was struck out three of the four times he went to bat. Pete also has one more assist than Rex.

Start Fireworks in Fourth.

Sequim made the first run of the afternoon with two down in the fourth. An error, a hit and a double steal followed by a sacrifice fly did the trick. The home team came back in its half of the same inning and put two runs across, after two men were gone, on a hit batter, a pass and a long single by Rieley that scored Best and Herb. Reiley took second on the throw in to short, and continued to third when the latter threw wide to catch Herb at the plate.

Angeles had a fine chance to score in the third with three on and none down, but McInnes tightened up and whiffed the next three batters. With two out in the sixth, the local team again slipped two more across on an error, a single by Reiley and a double to left by Bayton. The Olympics brought the players up on their toes and sent a scare into the fans when they made two runs in the first of the ninth after two men had been retired.

Sequim Scores in Ninth.

H. Cassalary opened up with his third hit of the day. Tufft singled after Tyree had fanned. Cassalary was thrown out at the plate on a grounder by McInnes. Then Blau sent a fly out to Clark, who prolonged the contest by letting the ball slip thru his hands. Incidentally, two men scored. Holland ended the agony by going out over the Herb-Reiley route.

Three of the eight hits made off McInnes were scratch infield hits, and with better support his record would have shown up better. Cassalary, first baseman for the Olympics, was the star hitter of the game, obtaining three clean singles and first base on an error out of four times up. Reiley, the Angeles first sacker, also reached first base four times, twice on singles, once on pass and again on a fielder's choice. Bayton poled out a single and a double in four chances.

With the exception of the catching department, the fielding of the home team was clean and fast. A fine

IT'S A SMALL WORLD, AFTER ALL

A stranger entered town Monday afternoon and signed "O. A. Spinney" on the register at the Commercial Hotel. Mr. Grubb asked his guest if he was related to C. A. Spinney, the contractor stopping at the hotel. The stranger had a hunch that there might be some family connection, so he went out on the street and found the building mover in front of the opera house overseeing his job.

It developed that the two were cousins, and that it was 32 years ago that they had last seen each other. They parted at Danforth, Maine, O. A. Spinney going to Portland, Oregon. He noticed C. A. Spinney's name on a stable in Seattle not long ago and made inquiries, but had no idea that his cousin was in this city He and his son are now working in Earle's mill.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

Olympia, July 1.—Numerous proposed changes in the industrial insurance act, with a view toward increasing its efficiency, are being worked out by the industrial insurance commission, for recommendation to Governor Lister and the next legislature.

Addition of a medical attendance provision, the so-called "first aid," will be one of the reforms urged, providing the initiative first aid bill, one of the seven sisters, fails to carry.

Extension of the scope of the insurance act to cover all manual labor, except that engaged in agricultural, horticultural and household work, is another change proposed.

Guided by the experience of three years under the law, the commission is now assembling data from which to evolve a complete overhauling of the rates charged various industries. The legislature will be asked to substitute the new rates, shown necessary by experience of the various industries under the law, for the theoretical rates written in the law when it was originally drafted.

Combination of several of the smaller classes, so that each class may have a fund containg sufficient working capital, without entailing undue hardships upon contributors, is another proposal upon which the commission is working. It is expected that the number of classes, now 48 can be reduced to about 115 in the interests of better financial management.

Action taken thus far by the industrial welfare commission, under the minimum wage law enacted by the last legislature, is as follows:

Mercantile establishments, $10 minimum wage established, which became effective June 27, for women and girls over 18. Minimum for minors of both sexes, $6. Minimum for apprentices, $6 first six months, $7.50 second six months, then $10.

Factories, not including fish and fruit anneries, $8.90 wage established, effective August 1, with $6 minimum for minors of both sexes.

Telephone and telegraph companies, $9 minimum wage recommended by the conference, not yet acted upon by the welfare commission.

The action by telephone conference was taken last week. The next conference probably will be for the fish and fruit canneries. As these establishments operate for only a part of the year, and are allowed to work women employes 10 hours a day, it was thought the minimum wage to be established should be different from that established for other factories.

In the near future the commission is also expected to call a conference to fix minimum wages for hotel and restaurant help. With wages established for these industies, action will have been taken toward providing suitable wages for the large majority of the female employes of the state.

At the state fair at North Yakima, September 21-26, first opportunity will be given to see many of the exhibits which will be displayed by this state at the Panama Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. The state exposition commission has agreed to show at the fair all suitable exhibits ready by the opening date.

Following a conference at Portland attended by members of the public service commission of Washington, the railroad commission of Oregon and executive officers of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company, a plan has been practically agreed upon for a thorough investigation into all of the rates of the phone company in the two states, both local and long distance, and into all the practices and operating rules of the company. Following the session of the officials named, engineers of the two commissions and of the company met to work out details of the plan of investigation. It is confidently expected that as a result of the conference an early reformation of rates, in instances where they are unfair, will be accomplished, and a more uniform and satisfactory arrangement may be instituted with respect to advance deposits, cost of installing and disconnnecting phones and other matters of service that have provoked much complaint.

For the benefit of those farmers attending the state fair at North Yakima September 21-26, the Washington state college will conduct a series of lecturers on agriculture, horticulture, dairying and home economics. The college is also preparing an attractive exhibit which will be used in this connection. The matter of the demonstration train which attracted farmers from far and wide last year has not been definitely decided yet, but it is believed that the railroads will have no hesitancy in furnishing the equipment necessary.

Raymond H. Schuster, for the past two years bacteriologist and dairy expert for the Hazelwood company of Spokane, has been appointed dairy inspector under the state department of agriculture. Schuster passed the highest of a number of aspirants who took the competitive examination scheduled by the department June 15. He is a graduate of Wisconsin college of agriculture.

Attorney General W. V. Tanner, in an official opinion to Labor Commissioner E. W. Olson, rules that county commissioners and other officials, employing men on public work more than eight hours a day, are criminally liable under the public work law, the same as contractors. Prosecutions of officials in some counties where public road work has been done in excess of eight hours probably will result.

Governor Lister last week formally accepted, on behalf of the state, the terms of the Lever bill, recently passed by congress. Under this measure Washington state college this year will obtain $10,000 for extension work from the federal government, this amount to be increased each succeeding year until it will eventually reach about $90,000 per annum. The money this year is to be divided evenly between the extension department, under Prof. J. A. Tormey, and the bureau of farm development, under Dr. Ira D. Cardiff.

SUMMER SESSION SETS NEW ATTENDANCE

The registration in the opening days of the University of Washington's summer session this year exceeded by 30 the total registration for the summer session of 1913. Last year's session attracted 667 students. This year, up to noon of the first day classes met, 757 had been enrolled, and Dr. Frederick E. Bolton, dean of the school of education and director of the summer session, said that he had every reason to believe the total enrollment would reach 800.

This attendance places the University of Washington's summer school in the first rank of university summer sessions in the country, graded by enrollment. The figures compare very favorably with those of the state universities of the middle west, which have a larger resident population in the regular college year and have more students, proportiontly, staying over for summer work than Washington has.

"One of the most notable features of the summer session is the spirit of the student body. These students, the majority of them, are mature, experienced, serious, and know exactly what courses they want and why. University professors comment repeatedly on the inspiration these classes are to the teachers of them. They know how to study, how to get the most out of a subject, and, incidentally, how to have the best possible time in a short college course."

REMARKABLE INCREASE IN NUMBER OF ELK

Estimates just recently obtained by Forest Supervisor R. L. Fromme from his District Rangers, Christ Morganroth, C. A. Whitehead and E. R. Paull, show a remarkable increase within late years of the number of elk on the Olympic peninsula, particularly within the heavily timbered and least accessible watersheds in the west and south portions of the National Forest. The estimate of three years ago totaled 3,300 while the new one is close to 7,200, or an increase of approximately 115 per cent.

On certain watersheds of the west drainage, such as the Hoh, Solduck, Queets, Quinault and Humptulips rivers, this increase of elk amounts to 3 or 4 times the estimated number of 3 years ago. The least change appears to be among the relatively small bands of the east flowing rivers where natural conditions of feed and the more frequent visits of man are less favorable to elk propagation. Some of the watersheds, particularly the Elwha, Hoh, Queets, Humptulips and Wishah, are now thought to be occupied almost to their full natural capacity, considering settlements and other business, as evidenced thru observations during the past winter and early spring of a few skeletons of starved animals and many closely cropped feed areas, salmon brush, etc.

In addition to the protection afforded by the State game law and that due to the natural inaccessibility, the killing of cougar during late years has had a very marked effect, in the opinion of Forest officers, in encouraging recent increase in elk. Killing of bear has also favored this condition, as it is well known that quite a few elk calves are destroyed by bear within the first week or so following their births, which is generally the latter part of May.

Two kinds of elk are recognized within the Olympic mountains; one, locally termed the round horn and the other, called the shovel horn, or Roosevelt elk. The difference in the shape of the ends of the antlers which distinguishes the two species is easily recognized. The Roosevelt elk also reaches a slightly larger size, the hair is of a darker brown color and the hair on the under side of the neck grows to a greater length than is true of the round horn variety.

The latest estimate in round numbers, as furnished by Forest Supervisor Fromme, of the number of elk by watersheds, the precentage of increase in three years, and the approximate capacity to which each principal watershed is now being used is as follows:

Watersheds..	Estimate No. of Elk.....	Pct. Increase in 3 years...	Pct. Capacity now used....
Quiniault

Last Week's Letter

Mrs. George Weldrick spent last Sunday at Forks visiting with friends, returning home Monday.

The heavy rains of last week were badly needed in the West End. The forests were getting dried out and anxiety was felt among the timber owners that another forest fire might originate in the same locality that burned over about a month ago. There are still crews of men at work felling snags that are on fire which will start as soon as the forests dry out, if not put out.

WM. ALLEN, FORMER ANGELES' RESIDENT, HAS PASSED AWAY

William Allen, aged 82, a former resident of Port Angeles. died on June 22nd at the home of his youngest son, Thomas W. Allen of North Yakima, and was buried the following day with the honors of the G. A. R. at North Yakima. He was born on February 11, 1832, at Elizabethtown, Ky., and at the age of ten he moved with his parents to Iowa, going overland with an ox team and walking barefoot most of the way.

Mr. Allen was educated in the public schools of Bloomfield, Iowa, and upon graduation was awarded an appointment to West Point by Governor Cummins. Despite the protests of his mother he accepted. At the breaking out of the Civil War he joined the 31st Missouri volunteer infantry, and served thruout the war. He was mustered out at Benton Barracks, St. Louis, on June 25, 1865.

After the close of the war, he remarried. his first wife having died during his absence. His present wife was a sister of the deceased wife. They were blessed with 14 children, of which nine are living. He was elected sheriff of Nodaway county, Missouri, in 1866 and was later chosen justice of the peace and city clerk.

He was a man of rare intelligence, fearing nothing in this life nor in the life to come, and made the best of the life that God gave him. He passed away believing that it was good to live on earth, and without finding fault with God for calling him.

Mr. Allen is survived by an aged wife, four daughter and five sons. They are Olive M., wife of L. W. Denny; Mary W., wife of H. O. Denny; Amanda Ann, wife of James G. Garrison of Port Angeles; Lillian R., wife of Frank G. Hanson of Port Angeles; W. S. Allen of Seattle and Thomas W. Allen of Nortn Yakima: and James B. Allen of Los Angeles. His loss is also mourned by 16 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

INSTALLS ELECTRIC ENLARGING CAMERA

One of the latest style electric enlarging cameras has recently been installed in Robert Kennett's photograph studio on the corner of Front and Laurel streets. This modern piece of mechanism, the first of its kind to be used in Port Angeles, is capable of enlarging a 5 by 7 inch picture to 26 by 40 inches with such accuracy that one would mistake it is being developed from a larger film.

It is possible for this camera to make an enlargement from an ordinary kodak film with very surprising results, according to those who have seen the work turned out by Mr. Kennett during the past few days. The various parts of the delicate machine arrived about a week ago, and Mr. Kennett has been testing it and experimenting on several different grades of pictures during his spare moments in an effort to obtain perfect and satisfactory results.

The apparatus consists of a small camera, a cylindrical jacket two feet high and a box-like cone having a two-foot base and a nine inch top. The small end of the box is attached to the cylinder, in which an Aristo electric light is placed. This light is stronger than any arc light made. The other end of the box is connected with the camera and lens. The three parts together are about four feet in length.

The camera works on the principle of the moving picture machine, but is very much stronger and more accurate in enlarging the picture. Mr. Kennett welcomes all who are interested in the operation of the machine, and is now prepared to receive orders for enlargements.

Fire of an unknown origin was discovered in the bathroom of the Merchants Hotel shortly after 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon by R. W. WARNS MOTHERS AGAINST FAKE CANVASSERS

Numbers of housewives, many of them poor, are being imposed on in different parts of the state this summer by young men who represent themselves as canvassers for a certain prize which they say the University of Washington is to award. Their approach is directed to the tenderest side of the good wife's nature—her children. They say they are commissioned by the university to secure material for the awarding of "the Carnegie prize to be given the child who has the best-formed head." There is no such prize, so far as the University of Washington knows, and certainly no such commission made out by the university.

These imposters began work in Seattle some months ago. One of them was arrested and convicted of obtaining money under false pretenses. Recently, reports coming to the university have indicated that the gentry have betaken themselves to the smaller cities and the rural communities of the state. The president's office of the university is co-operating in every way possible to curtail the profits of these fakers.

Their procedure, as reported to the university, is this: One of them visits a home, tells the housewife that Andrew Carnegie has offered a prize to the youngster's whose head is best formed, according to phrenological charts and cranial measurements. Have you a boy or girl? Yes? Well, this prize is $500. It is to be awarded by the University of Washington, acting as Mr. Carnegie's agent. For a small fee, 50 cents or a dollar or $1.50, according to the probable gullibility of the fond parent, the child will be registered as an entrant, and measurements taken. The fee once collected, the imposter make a few supposed measurements and entries, and departs. The duped parent later learns that the university and Mr. Carnegie are in no such philanthropic or scientific partnership.

STUDENTS DROP THEORY FOR ACTUAL EXPERIENCE

College students are willing to turn their hands to any sort of honorable work in vacation time. The final examinations in June are hardly over before the exodus from the classroom to farm and forest and mine and office and sea begins. Those who in the regular college year pursue studies prepartatory to professional or specific business careers endeavor, of course, to get employment that furnishes practical experience, and the heads of the professional departments and schools in the university seldom find lack of demand for such students. Generally, the supply is inadequate to the demand.

Among other students of professional lines represented in the work of their chosen profession during the summer this year are several students of journalism. The department of journalism in the university has had calls for all but two of its students who sought practical experience in this way. Some of those who have got jobs (no journalism student ever accepts a position) intend to stay out of college until the fall of 1915, to get from a year to 15 months' actual work.

Ralph Benjamin probably will be on the staff of the Seattle Times before the summer is far advanced, and Clarence Shivvers on the staff of the Tacoma Tribune. Proctor Cook, retiring editor of the Univerity of Washington Daily, is Seattle Times correspondent with the Washington crew in the east and will travel in the east the major part of the vacation. FROST-RESISTING POTATOES

The only potatoes in Montana that resist frost are grown by Mrs. Julia Kahler living on a ranch near Alhambra, according to a correspondent of the East Helena Record. Mrs. Kahler, who is the sister of L. E. Doyle of this city. claims that the potatoes are of the Klondike Rock variety, and has tested their ability to withstand severe weather by placing an egg beside them on a frosty night and finding that the egg would burst while the vegetables showed no signs of being frost bitten.

The vines at present are luxuriant and the potatoes larger than hen's eggs. Mrs. Kahler purchased the seed at $2 a pound and says that she is the only person in this state growing potatoes of that variety. They are early and last well into the next season. She had but a limited quantity of seed this year, and sold those to neighbors at 25 cents a pound. She expects to have a sufficient amount next year to supply a larger demand.

The Abysmal Brute

By JACK LONDON

Coyyright, 1913, by The Century Co.

SYNOPSIS

Sam Stubener, manager of boxers, hears bout a wonderful unknown boxer called Young Pat Glendon. He finds the boy in the wilderness.

Glendon, innocent of the world's ways, goes to San Francisco and is matched with "Roughhouse Kelly."

He whips Kelly and other boxers so easily that he is called "One Punch Glendon." He meets the Flying Dutchman.

Glendon wins again. He nears the top in pugilism. His manager, Stubener, engages in crooked ring practices, unknown to Glendon.

CHAPTER V.

BUT the purses grew larger and larger. In place of $100, such as his first battles had earned him, he was now receiving from $20,000 to $30,000 a fight, as well as equally large sums from the moving picture men.

Stubener took his manager's percentage of all this according to the terms of the contract old Pat had drawn up, and both he and Glendon, despite their heavy expenses, were waxing rich.

This was due more than anything else to the clean lives they lived. They were not wasters.

Stubener was attracted to real estate, and his holdings in San Francisco, consisting of building flats and apartment houses, were bigger than Glendon ever dreamed.

There was a secret syndicate of betters, however, which could have made an accurate guess at the size of Stubener's holdings, while heavy bonus after heavy bonus, of which Glendon never heard, was paid over to his manager by the moving picture men.

Stubener's most serious task was in maintaining the innocence of his young gladiator. Nor did he find it difficult.

Glendon, who had nothing to do with the business end, was little interested. Besides, wherever his travels took him, he spent his spare time in hunting and fishing. He rarely mingled with those of the sporting world, was notoriously shy and secluded and preferred art galleries and books of verse to sporting gossip.

Also, his trainers and sparring partners were rigorously instructed by the manager to keep their tongues away from the slightest hints of ring rottenness.

In every way Stubener intervened between Glendon and the world. He was never even interviewed save in Stubener's presence.

Only once was Glendon approached. It was just prior to his battle with Henderson, and an offer of $100,000 was made to him to throw the fight.

It was made hurriedly, in swift whispers, in a hotel corridor, and it was fortunate for the man that Pat controlled his temper and shouldered past him without reply. He brought the tale of it to Stubener, who said:

"It's only con, Pat. They were trying to josh you." He noted the blue eyes blaze. "And maybe worse than that. If they could have got you to fall for it there might have been a big sensation in the papers that would have finished you. But I doubt it.

"Such things don't happen any more. It's a myth, that's what it is, that has come down from the middle history of the ring. There has been rottenness in the past, but no fighter or manager of reputation would dare anything of the sort today.

"Why, Pat, the men in the game are as clean and straight as those in professional baseball, than which there is nothing cleaner or straighter."

And all the while he talked Stubener knew in his heart that the forthcoming fight with Henderson was not to be shorter than twelve rounds—this for the moving pictures—and not longer than the fourteenth round.

And he knew, furthermore, so big were the stakes involved, that Henderson himself was pledged not to last beyond the fourteenth.

And Glendon, never approached again, dismissed the matter from his mind and went out to spend the afternoon in taking color photographs. The camera had become his latest hobby. Loving pictures, yet unable to paint, he had compromised by taking up photography. In his hand baggage was one grip packed with books on the subject, and he spent long hours in the dark room, realizing for himself the various processes.

Never had there been a great fighter who was as aloof from the fighting world as he. Because he had little to say with those he encountered he was called sullen and unsocial, and out of this a newspaper reputation took form that was not an exaggeration so much as it was an entire misconception.

Boiled down, his character in print was that of an ox muscled and dumbly stupid brute, and one callow sporting writer dubbed him the "abysmal brute."

The name stuck. The rest of the fraternity hailed it with delight, and thereafter Glendon's name never appeared in print unconnected with it. Often, in a headline or under a photograph, "The Abysmal Brute," capitalized and without quotation marks, appeared alone.

All the world knew who was this brute. This made him draw into himself closer than ever, while it developed a bitter prejudice against newspaper folk.

Regarding fighting itself, his earlier mild interest grew stronger. The men he now fought were anything but dubs, and victory did not come so easily. They were picked men, experienced ring generals, and each battle was a problem.

There were occasions when he found it impossible to put them out in any designated later round of a fight. Thus with Sulzberger, the gigantic German, try as he would in the eighteenth round, he failed to get him. In the nineteenth it was the same story, and not till the twentieth did he manage to break through the baffling guard and drop him.

Glendon's increasing enjoyment of the game was accompanied by severer and prolonged training. Never dissipating, spending much of his time on hunting trips in the hills, he was practically always in the pink of condition, and, unlike his father, no unfortunate accidents marred his career. He never broke a bone, nor injured so much as a knuckle.

One thing that Stubener noted with secret glee was that his young fighter no longer talked of going permanently back to his mountains when he had won the championship away from Jim Hanford.

The consummation of his career was rapidly approaching. The great champion had even publicly intimated his readiness to take on Glendon as soon as the latter had disposed of the three or four aspirants for the championship who intervened.

In six months Pat managed to put away Kid McGrath and Philadelphia Jack McBride and there remained only Nat Powers and Tom Cannam. And all would have been well had not a certain society girl gone adventuring into journalism, and had not Stubener agreed to an interview with the woman reporter of the San Francisco Courier-Journal.

Her work was always published over the name of Maud Sangster, which, by the way, was her own name. The Sangsters were a notoriously wealthy family.

The founder, old Jacob Sangster, had packed his blankets and worked as a farm hand in the west. He had discovered an inexhaustible borax deposit in Nevada, and, from hauling it out by mule teams, had built a railroad to do the freighting. Following that he had poured the profits of borax into the purchase of hundreds and thousands of square miles of timber lands in California, Oregon and Washington.

Still later he had combined politics with business, had bought statesmen, judges and machines and become a captain of complicated industry. And after that he had died, full of honor and pessimism, leaving his name a muddy blot for future historians to smudge, and also leaving a matter of a couple of hundreds of millions for his four sons to squabble over.

The legal, industrial and political battles that followed vexed and amused California for a generation and culminated in deadly hatred and unspeaking terms between the four sons.

The youngest, Theodore, in middle life experienced a change of heart, sold out his stock farms and racing stables and plunged into a fight with all the corrupt powers of his native state, including most of its millionaires, in a quixotic attempt to purge it of the infamy which had been implanted by old Jacob Sangster.

Maud Sangster was Theodore's oldest daughter. The Sangster stock uniformly bred fighters among the men and beauties among the women, nor was Maud an exception; also she must have inherited some of the virus of adventure from the Sangster breed, for she had come to womanhood and done a multitude of things of which no woman in her position should have been guilty.

A match in ten thousand, she remained unmarried. She had sojourned in Europe without bringing home a nobleman for spouse and had declined a goodly portion of her own set at home.

She had gone in for outdoor sports, won the tennis championship of the state, kept the society weeklies a[illegible] with her unconventionalities, walked from San Mateo to Santa Cruz against time on a wager and once caused a sensation by playing polo in a men's team at a private Burlingame practice game. Incidentally she had gone in for art and maintained a studio in San Francisco's Latin quarter.

All this had been of little moment until her father's reform attack became acute. Passionately independent, never yet having met the man to whom she could gladly submit and bored by those who had aspired, she resented her father's interference with her way of life and put the climax on all her social misdeeds by leaving home and going to work on the Courier-Journal.

Beginning at $20 a week, her salary had swiftly risen to $50. Her work was principally musical, dramatic and art criticism, though she was not above mere journalistic stunts if they promised to be sufficiently interesting.

Thus she scooped the big interview with Morgan at a time when he was being futilely trailed by a dozen New York star journalists, went down to the bottom of the Golden Gate in a diver's suit and flew with Rood, the bird man, when he broke all records of continuous flight by reaching as far as Riverside.

"What do they want to come butting into the game for?"

Now, it must not be imagined that Maud Sangster was a hard bitten amazon. On the contrary, she was a gray eyed, slender young woman of three or four and twenty, of medium stature and possessing uncommonly small hands and feet for an outdoor woman or any other kind of a woman.

Also, far in excess of most outdoor women, she knew how to be daintily feminine.

It was on her own suggestion that she received the editor's commission to interview Pat Glendon. With the exception of having caught a glimpse once of Bob Fitzsimmons in evening dress at the Palace grill, she had never seen a prizefighter in her life.

Nor was she curious to see one—at least, she had not been curious until young Pat Glendon came to San Francisco to train for his fight with Nat Powers. Then his newspaper reputation had aroused her.

Priest Givem Light Fine for Keeping Public Nuisance.

The case of the State vs. George Priest, for keeping a public nuisance at Sequim where intoxicating liquors were kept for sale, defendant waived jury and had the case heard before the Court. Defendant denied that he had ever sold any liquor to anybody about Sequim and denied that he had given any away to any body. He admitted having the beer taken by the sheriffs recently, in his barn, alleging that one case belonged to him, one to his son, Hugh, and one left there for Bob Hudson. He claimed the law gave him the privilege of keeping this amount on hand. The sheriffs testified that they found this liquor secreted in an old stage or hack in back part of barn easily accessible to those who knew where to go, but out of reach of others. That 25 empties found showed signs of just having been emptied, and that a couple of hundred others were lying around, that Priest admitted to Deputy Davis that possibly the "boys" had been selling. Court held that a livery barn is a quasi-public place, not a natural place for storing home-consumption goods, and assessed a fine of $50 and costs.

Front and Laurel Special Assessment Districts.

In the matter of the special assessment district created by reason of the changing of the Front street grade and the damages to the Morse building, the Court held that if any special benefits over those to other property owners of the locality accrued to Mr. Morse they should have been taken into consideration at the time damages were fixed. The Morse property would now be assessed the same as like situated property. The commissioners were brought before the court and advised of the court's position in this matter of assessment and district boundaries for assessment purposes. The Court holds that the district actually affected by the change of grade is the real boundaries of the new assessment district to be formed and which the commissioners have power to fix. The benefits to be assessed are the actual special benefits to the property affected by the change of grades, the bulk of such benefits centering, in the Court's opinion, around Front and Laurel streets.

In L. R. Swope vs. E. R. Cosgrove for partition of real estate owned jointly, defendant failing to appear, court divided property equally upon evidence that all was unimproved and of equal value, plaintiff receiving choice of east 75 feet. Plaintiff having paid taxes for past 14 years was given a lien on west 75 feet for such taxes paid. The property affected is lots 6, 7, and8 on south side of First street between Eunice and Francis, valued at approx. $4,500.

In answer of the citation of F. A. McDonald to appear and answer questions concerning his holdings in the county, upon motion of plaintiffs. judgment creditors. defendant was dismissed. Cost on plaintiffs.

In Shaw vs. Tomlinson, on R. E. commission, demurrer overruled; 10 days to further answer.

In Haggard vs. Rued, restraining order restraining defendant from removing water flume, motion to quash granted. This restraining order was not served until after the removal had taken place. hence was of no avail, remedy will have to be had in another way.

In Walker vs. Dover, on account, demurrer overruled.

In H. S. Collier vs. E. Peacock, for recison of contract, motion of defendant to strike reference in complaint to plaintiff being a civil war veteran granted.

In State vs. J. H. Stickles charged with family desertion asked further time to employ counsel and enter plea. Granted. Released on own recognizance and given until next Tuesday to appear and enter plea.

THE CITY COUNCIL

for cemetery grounds from Dry creek reported the proposition feasible. They thought help could be had from private sources and the matter went over for further investigation.

The city attorney reported on the claim of Sherman Bollinger for injuries received on Francis street cut in effect that he could not get sufficient information to warrant him advising the payment of the claim; he recommended that if council saw fit a special committee could be named to look into the matter further, otherwise the claim should be rejected. A committee was named, Fisher, Shields and Dustman.

A letter from Senator Jones to Mayor White was read acknowledging receipt of resolution in regard to block 32, and promising help in securing for city four lots opposite new court house site.

Fire Ordinance Must Be Observed.

A petition was presented by L. R. Thompson asking privilege of changing front of McNutt blacksmith shop building to store front, and raising roof at a cost of approximately $300. It developed that the change contemplated adding a story and extending roof to cover additional ground space. The request was denied upon motion of Dustman. Marshal was directed to see that no building was erected contrary to fire ordinance.

Petition for assignment of license granted Harry Roach to J. Cain was returned for correction and bond to accompany same.

Klipsum Lumber Co. to Begin Mandamus Proceedings.

The judgment of the Klipsun Lumber Co. against city on Young & Denio 8th street bridge contract came up for another inning. Attorney Stanford C. Rose, of McClinton & Rose, appeared before council stating that he had been directed by Messrs. Beebe & Witcomb who secured the judgment for the lumber company to secure payment at once or to begin mandamus proceedings. He had put off the matter until he could advise council of the imperativeness of the demand. Council cannot possibly get out of paying the judgment and mandamus would only add to the expense. The city attorney corroborated this statement. Fisher moved that warrant be issued to pay claim. Dustman asked how much the city was liable for on this contract besides this judgment and was advised that claims for $400 or $500 had been filed. He did not favor paying one without the other. Shields moved that whole matter go over, that amount due others be ascertained. and that city attorney advise council what fund payment shall be made from. Attorney Rose protested against matter going over, but the motion carried.

Contract with the Tribune-Times for city printing went over awaiting the filing of a $1,000 bond.

Fisher reported settlemen t with Mrs. Cochran for $75 for killing of horse and warrant was ordered drawn.

Shields moved that Mayor appoint a committee to act with him in fixing joint duties of the watchman. Carried. Shields, Fisher and Bigelow named.

Bigelow called attention to dangerous condition of old sidewalk on street between Cedar and Pine. Shields moved that the street supt. notify parties to renew walk with five foot sidewalk according to city specifications. Carried.

The cow question came up again briefly by Dustman moving that the Mayor, clerk and city attorney take necessary steps to put the matter before the people at the coming primary election. Seconded by Shields and carried.

Shields moved that water company be notified to appear and present plans for laying pipe to the business section. He did not want to see the planking torn up after being put in place, and favored the placing of city water mains under the sidewalk area. The motion carried.

Owing to the stress and confusion incidental to moving last week we forgot to mention the fact that S. E. Stakemiller had resigned his position as member of the school board, the same to take effect as soon as the county superintendent could appoint a successor. Mr. Stakemiller has made a good, efficient school director for the past few years and has always had the interest of the schools at heart. His resignation at this time simply means that he wishes to enter the candidacy for county treasurer this fall.

Baker's store is the place to get a bargain these days.

ORIGINAL COFFEE HOUSE OPENS ON FRONT STREET

Van Huebuer and Thorpe are proprietors of the Original 5 Cent Coffee House located on the north side of Front street opposite Hotel Angeles, which is to be opened to the public this evening and will dispense hot coffee and rolls or doughnuts for the small sum of 5 cents, at all hours of the day or evening. They are in direct competition to the saloons and believe they can offer better value to the hard working man for five cents than he can possibly obtain at the saloons. Their 15 and 25 cent meals cannot be beat as you will agree after giving them a trial. A special invitation is extended to ladies as they will be shown every courtesy and the location is most desirable as it is entirely away from the saloon district. It is the intention of the proprietors to establish a number of these coffee houses as soon as desirable locations can be secured. Both men have brought their families here and they tell us a large number of their Eastern friends intend to come to Angeles before the year is out to invest and cast their lot with other optimistic enthusiasts for our city. Mr. Thorpe is also proprietor of the Novelty Sign Works next to the coffeehouse where he does all kinds of fancy sign painting and sign writing. He has worked at this for 28 years and is some artist, believe me, doing all kinds of lightning free hand work. Read their add in this issue.

Permission was granted by council in special session Thursday forenoon for Day & Abbott to continue their building construction on the Merchants Hotel against which Councilman Bigelow declared that the contractors were violating the permits granted, and moved that they be notified to live up to the conditions of the permit and that work be stopped until a compliance should be made.

Bigelow said that the new structure, which is to replace the old kitchen that has recently been moved, would have a 40 foot front, which is in absolute violation of the fire ordinance. After considerable discussion Mayor White appointed Bigelow, Fisher and Shields as a committee to investigate the matter, and their report was made Thursday morning.

READING CLUB GIVES FINE ENTERTAINMENT

The ladies of the Port Angeles Reading Club and their invited guests to the number of about 75 enjoyed a pleasant social evening at the Congregational church last Friday. The ladies are indebted to Stephen Smith for the neat, attractive appearance of the church. The seats were arranged around the sides, leaving the center of the room entirely free with the exception of the large library table which was centered with a handsome bouquet of roses. Several other large jardineres of roses added to the general attractiveness. A quartette consisting of Mrs. Luppen, Mrs. McMahan, Mr. Malette and Cecil McNutt opened the evening's entertainment with a sacred hymn, followed by two beautiful Hawaiian solos by Mrs. Troy. J. P. Christensen then entertained with a talk on his recent trip to Hawaii intersperced with musical selections on the victrola consisting of the popular plantation melodies, Aloha oe, and a number of other beautiful Hawaiian songs, records of which were kindly loaned by Mrs. J. C. Hansen. To Prof.Lange the ladies are indebted for use of the victrola. In addition to his entertaining talk, Mr. Christensen kindly brought his books of postals and pictures and some very interesting curios and souvenirs. From his book of Hawaiian melodies Mrs. Troy and the quartette sang a number of selections which were very pleasing, Mrs. Stephen Smith acting as accompanist. Light refreshments consisting of ice cream, strawberries and cake were an enjoyable feature of the evening's program. The Misses Margaret Delabarre, Bernice Campbell, Mae and Beth Webster assisted in serving.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Fuller and son of Oakland, California, are enjoying a visit with Mr. Fuller's father, M. T. Fuller. They arrived Monday and will stay a week or more, Mrs. Fuller is a former Angeles girl and will be remembered by many as Ethel Price. Mr. Fuller is an experienced railroad man and would be pleased to make Angeles his home when further developments cause an opening for his services.

FATHER, DEAR FATHER COME HOME WITH ME NOW

While R. B. Lutz, a laborer employed by Kuppler & Spinney, was entertaining his fellow workmen with a pick and shovel exhibition Thursday forenoon, a stranger walked up and tapped him on the shoulder. As he turned to greet his visitor, Lutz was asked whether he had entirely forgotten his family across the waters. The shovel artist was amazed that the gentleman should even suspect him of having a family, but when he was shown a silver star beneath the other's coat, he pleaded guilty.

The stranger introduced himself as Deputy Sheriff Stewart of Bellingham. Lutz was quietly informed that his divorced wife was rather short of funds for the Fourth, and since her alimony was overdue, she would like to have her ex-husband do his Declaration Day celebrating in the old home town. Omitting the usual formality Lutz accepted and accompanied the messenger to answer his host's charges.

Why!

That's 10 per cent. on $40,000.00

The above ejaculation came from a friend of ours when told the income from a certain piece of property here in Port Angeles —It was true never-the-less—And we are quite sure there was not that much money interested in the property either. And we believe there are other good and profitable investments to be made here.

Why not get in on some of the good things yourself?
