MORE BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED

Cow Ordinance to Go Into Effect January First. Fire Limits Ordinance Amended.

Tuesday night's council meeting was not as important a session as some we have had, but considerable business was transacted, among it being the elimination of the cow in conformity with the expressed wish of the people. A little manifest pettiness seemingly prevented the chickens likewise from being caged. All members were present except Mr. Wilcox.

Two lots owned by the city in Tumwater gulch were ordered advertised by the clerk for sale.

M. V. Albright asked the assistance of the city in opening up an entrance into Block 235, northwest of 8th and Valley. It was his intention to build shortly on his property there and as the bridge occupied the street, he thought it only right the city should assist. Referred to street commissioner and superintendent.

D. C. Norman was given permission to blast in Block 380.

Permission was also granted Schiable & Hutchinson to erect a sign post at the curb in front of their place of business.

Permission to build a $1500 bungalow on Lot 16, Blk 171, was granted Tory Hedemark.

Christ Kuppler was granted privilege of erecting another building on the south hill.

Otto Polloch was given privilege of cleaning out ditch at Sixth and Race, under the direction of the street superintendent.

The Angeles Telephone Co. tendered their check for $267.43 for 2 per cent of gross earnings of company to April, time next grant went into effect. Accepted.

August Swanson was granted permits to erect two one story bungalows on lots 18 and 19, Blk 327, to cost $600 each.

Another letter was read from the State Industrial Insurance Commission enclosing a bill for payment to accident fund on account of work done on Eighth street bridges. A like letter was read from the attorney-general, threatening to bring a suit against the city unless the matter was settled. Referred to city attorney.

Ordinance authorizing the Mayor and Clerk to issue bonds for payment of work on Third street. Extended and 3rd street north and K street was read twice and referred. Clerk reported Monday last day in which payments could be made. Whole amount of Impt. $12,839.74; assessments paid to date, $316.71.

Mr. Bigelow's cow and fowl ordinance was referred back by the ordinance committee without recommendation. Mr. Fleming sought to amend to fix the date of exclusion March 1, 1915, stating that there was nothing which cows could destroy in that time, and if forced to sell in midwinter or on short notice, any poor people will have to take what they can get, not what the cows are worth. Mr. Bigelow seconded this motion and on vote of Fowler, Fisher, and Shields refused to vote, Fleming and Bigelow voted aye and Dustman no. Mr. Bigelow then moved the adoption of the ordinance with the date of exclusion, January but failed to get a second.

The the Fisher ordinance came on for its innings and was read a third time. Mr. Fleming sought to amend as as above, seconded by Fowler and declared lost by the Mayor, who held that it took a majority of council present to adopt the motion. The vote stood, Fleming Fowler and Shields yes, Bigelow and Fisher not voting. Dustman no.

Then came a general explanation of the vote by council. Shields would put up chickens if ordinance suited him, Bigelow did not know what he would do to shut up cows but not chickens; one can fence in a cow but not chickens. Mr. Fisher was willing to stand by the wishes of the people but would not sacrifice his judgment; Fowler wanted it included. The final vote on the ordinance was 5 to 1, Fleming voting no.

Ordinance amending Sec. 3, of ordinance 416, the Fire Limits Ordinance, was referred back without recommendation. Council declared itself for a liberal interpretation of this ordinance, indicating that they would permit several buildings to be enclosed together with corrugated iron, the main purpose being to stop the draft under the building in case of fire. The amendment was adopted.

The salary ordinance was referred back in substitute form. In addition to fixing the salaries as noted, it fixes the policemen's salaries at $75 monthly, teamster at $70, and watchman at City Hall at $60. $100 allowed health officer was stricken altogether upon recommendation that this salary be either raised or stricken. The ordinance was adopted.

MONEY RAISED FOR RAILROAD

Contractor Erickson Successful in Floating Three Million Dollars Worth of Securities.

According to last night's Seattle Times, securities amounting to several million dollars, have been floated in the east, the money secured to be used in the construction of the line of the Seattle, Lake Crescent and Port Angeles railroad. The Times' story is as follows:

"Flotation of securities covering the construction of the Olympic line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Saint Paul system, officially know at present as the Seattle, Port Angeles, and Lake Crescent railway, and amounting to more than $2,000,000, with an added $1,000,000 or thereabouts in sight for future work, was accomplished Tuesday when C. J. Erickson, president of the Erickson Construction Co., returned to Seattle from Chicago after arranging to close the big deal with President A. J. Earling and other officials of the Milwaukee system.

"Until yesterday, Erickson has been operating practically single-handed and alone in the rich Olympic Peninsula territory, having completed twenty-five miles of standard guage railroad, from Port Angeles west to Gettysburg. The Erickson

"PORT ANGELES IN LIFE" AT DREAM THEATER

The past few days photographers have been busy taking pictures of the town. Stores, street views, regrade, mills, shopping people, children at play, babies, and in short everything of interest in town has been snapped. We also will show a complete set of school pictures of Port Angeles that have been taken for the educational exhibit that are to be shown at the San Francisco Fair.

The camera men are still busy and will be so for the next few days getting more interesting views of "Life in Port Angeles," and it is estimated that hundreds of citizens will have a surprize given them, when they see themselves as others see them at the Dream, next Monday and Tuesday evening, when Port Angeles in life will be shown in addition to our regular program. Price of admission as usual 5 and 10 cents.

Monday and Tuesday evening the Warners features are shown and are becoming popular with the Dream patrons.

For next Wednesday the management has booked the famous Cleopatra picture, featuring Helen Gardner. This splendid multiple reel feature will be shown at 5 and 10 cents for but one night only, next Wednesday.

State Land Inspector A. A. Bartow spent last Saturday and Sunday in the city and on Saturday inspected and appraised some state lands on Bagley creek, four miles east of the city.

BREWERY CASE STILL ON DECK

Street Grading Contract and Several Divorce Matters Occupy Attention of Court.

Certain important amendments to the Statement of Facts in the appeal of J. F. Janecke, in Jensen vs. Angeles Brewing & Malting Co. were allowed over the objections of Mr. Janecke's attorney. The statement was returned from the Supreme Court for the purpose. Two other appeals are pending in this same case. It is evident the purpose is to try to wear out the new receiver and his attorney in litigation. The bonding company is always contesting making good the default of the former receiver in failing to turn over some $18,000 which he should have.

Statement of Facts on appeal in case of Lewis Cays vs. Asa B. Steele was agreed upon. In this case real-estate contract of Steele was set for naught after his paying some $3200, for failure to meet the requirements of the contract. Steele appeals from the court's decision.

In F. E. Esterbrook vs. Hahn & Grierson and Bonding Co., demurrers to the answer of defendant Hahn's defense was argued and sustained. Hahn seeks to avoid any liability in the matter alleging that he sold his entire interests in the contract for grade of Francis street to his partner, and that claims of Esterbrook and associates were contracted subsequent to that date. Court refuses to release him until the case is finally determined. The demurrer of the city in this case was also sustained, this releasing the city from liability. The city was made a party to guarantee the payment of the claims in the event they could not be collected from the contractors or the bonding company. The case will come up on its merits. December 10. The court will make a special trip here to hear the case.

Final account of administration in estate of L. A. Alvig, was approved subject to the inheritance tax being determined and paid. The Court disallowed attorney's traveling expense in sum of $38.

Chas. McDaniel was appointed guardian of his 14 year old brother, William. There is no estate but prospective.

Benj. F. Whitehead was granted a decree of divorce from Birdie Whitehead. Incompatibility of temperament. Both prayed for relief. He has deeded her four lots, left her with $305 cash and has been and agrees to continue paying $15 a month alimony.

Demurrer to defense of Mrs. Caskey was sustained in behalf of Wm. Caskey, suing for separate maintenance. Mrs. Caskey filed a declaration of Homestead on the community farm and claimed it exempt from a sale. Court seemingly holds this cannot be done against one of the community.

In Cranwell vs. Cranwell for divorce order of default was entered, defendant failing to appear. In the contempt proceeding an order quashing the warrant of arrest was filed. Cranwell is out on suspended sentence in Seattle to permit him to make good, but he don't seem to appreciate the consideration.

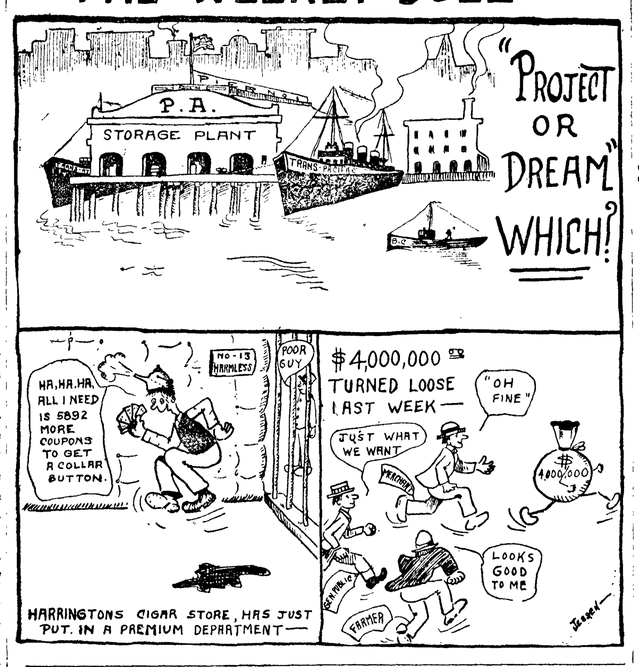
Order of default was also entered in case of Annice Harris vs. Alex Harris, who failed to contest the divorce and $100 per month alimony prayed for.

Report of Arthur Cays as guardian of Morris and Lewis Cays minors, was approved.

Judgment was given against John Cain in behalf of C. C. Dobbs for $80, in behalf of C. Winfield Harris for $51.60, J. Nakanura for $67, amounts claimed for services performed at Olympic Hotel. Claims are in full except that of Dobbs who claimed $245 or $150 per month, and he was allowed on basis of $100 a month as chef.

Daniel Craig was granted a decree of divorce from Lilly C. Craig, who now resides in east. Custody of son is given to Mr. Craig. Mrs. Craig has been and will continue to receive $150 monthly.

THE WEEKLY BULL



Adolph Berlin, a young German, was arraigned Wednesday on the charge of assault in the third degree upon the person of Joe. Burch. He entered a plea of "Not guilty," alleging that he got in with a crowd and knew little of the ways, and he meant no harm. His bond is fixed at $250.

Motion to make complaint more definite and certain in case of M. Kaughman vs. Jas. R. Gallagher, was denied and defendant given ten days to further answer. Defendant claims damages against Gallagher, alleging that he purchased a launch from him as sheriff, but that it was grabbed by U. S. officials before delivery.

The next court term will be next Tuesday, all week. Court will also be here December 10, 22, 23, and 24.

New Cases Filed.

L. H. Jardee vs. C. W. Thompson, for damages in falling thru platform in rear of Palace Cafe.

State vs. Adolph Berlin, assault.

Daisy Davis vs. Horton Davis, divorce, non-support, cruelty.

H. H. Ward vs. Jas. R. Gallagher, sheriff, injunction to stop sale of personal property levied upon by virtue of execution from King county, hearing today. Ward lives in West End.

Horace Montague Tindal Pym vs. Mary Auriel Gwendolyn Pym, divorce. Desertion. Custody of two minor daughters asked.

John Johnston and Mrs. Johnston vs. George Priest. $2000 damages for insulting language, to Mrs. Johnston.

HERMAN CELIAN MARRIED

Mr. Herman G. Celian and Miss Ethel Flora Lyons were married on Wednesday, November 25th, at the home of the bride's partnts, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Lyons of Seattle. They came to Port Angeles Thursday morning to spend a few days visiting with Mr. Celian's friends and were the guests Thanksgiving day, of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Campbell. Mr. Celian was a former employee in the Olympic-Leader office and made many friends during his residence here, all of whom are congratulating him on the charming little bride he has won and wishing for them many years of happy wedded life.

CITY TRANSFER STABLES NOW IN NEW HOME

J. O. Morse has moved the City Transfer Stables, for more years than most of us remember a fixture alondside the Laurel street wharf, to his new barns and warehouse on Railroad Avenue and Chase, where he has every facility of a modern establishment, and where steamers can land at all times. For the convenience of patrons an office has been established at the Merchants Hotel; by calling phone No. 1, orders may be placed for hay, grain feed and coal, all of which Mr. Morse will retail as well as wholesale hereafter. By an ingenious arrangement it will be possible at the office to know just what horses are in the barn at all times, and teams may be ordered at the office, or stabling room secured.

BROTHERHOOD PLANS FOR PURCHASE OF CIVIC PARK

The Brotherhood met Monday evening at the Congregational Church, where a sumptuous dinner was served at 6:45 to the members and their ladies. It was a most interesting session, and thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Plans for the new years work were discussed at some length, after which committees were appointed and other business transacted. Comprehensive plans for the acquirement of Civic Park and to preserve same tto the public were presented by Mr. Lindsay of the special committee appointed for the purpose.

The Brotherhood was then addressed by Dr. Thompson, in charge of the Eskimos at Prince of Wales, Alaska, which ended all too soon. This address, while of a serious undertaking for the betterment of the race by the U. S. Government, is full of humorous and very interesting anecdotes. It must be heard to be appreciated.

Owing to the proximity of the holidays, it was decided to do away with the December gathering. The next meeting will be held January 18th.

THE DE BARRIE GILL ENTERTAINMENT

Elizabeth De Barie Gill delightfully entertained a large audience at the Opera House Tuesday evening, with music song and reading. Her rendition of the pathetic little story of real life among the news boys and waifs of New York City, was splendid and brought tears to many eyes. It was a plea in behalf of the little children, who need our assistance and remembrance particularly at this holiday season of the year. Her harp and vocal solos were all pleasing and she generously responded to all encores and requests for repetitions of parts of her program given here last summer. Her closing number, the tragic scene of the terrible persecution and death of the Christians, taken from Quo Vadis, was especially good and brought forth hearty applause. A neat little sum was cleared for the Choral club, for which they are under obligations to Dr. Warner.

DR. MAJOR AT PRESBYTERIAN

The Presbyterian church of Lincoln Heights will hold services next Sunday, both morning and evening, conducted by Dr. Major, a prominent minister of Seattle. A permanent minister will have charge after the middle of December; until then the pulpit will be filled each Sunday by ministers from other places. S. S. every Sunday at ten. Come and worship with us.

TREATED KIDS WITH ICE CREAM

The four primary grades of Central school were given a pleasant treat by their teachers Wednesday morning when they served them with ice cream and cookies. The four teachers were the Misses Palmer, Donovan, Fulmer and McKibben.

"THE SPIRIT OF THE MOUNTAIN"

Superintendent Geisness Yields to Charm of Beauty, Poetry and Mystery of the Hills.

A visit to the schools of the East End of Clallam county last week proved an interesting trip for the superintendent. Eleven districts were visited and altogether, with possibly a few minor exceptions, conditions were found very satisfactory. The visit was prompted to some extent by a call from the districts around Blyn for some action looking toward the establishment of a school in that village. The line between districts 11 and 32 runs thru Blyn and the school houses in those two districts are each at least a mile and a half or two miles from the center of population. Several measures were discussed but it was finally decided that consolidation of the two districts would be the best solution. Accordingly a petition is being signed looking toward consolidation with a possibility of taking in district No. 26, also in the new district. If matters progress satisfactorily, a meeting will be held in Blyn in the near future for the purpose of a hearing on the petition.

The journey from Port Williams into the hills to district 26 proved rather up hill work, especially as the latter half of the trip was made after dark with a tired saddle horse which showed much fatigue — probably simulated, as it was a horse from the barn at Sequim—that the rider thought it necessary to help him along by pushing where the road was steepest. It was indeed a pleasure at the end of the day to be received at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fritz, where there was plenty of cheer and good things to eat. District No. 26 has a neat little school house but a rather small school, eleven pupils being the total enrollment up to date this year. After some hesitation, it was decided to strike the government trail along the Dungeness river to Lost Mountain. To the writer who had thought of the eastern part of Clallam as a prairie country, it was rather of a surprise to find oneself winding along the narrow-side of a mountain with the river roaring from one to two hundred feet almost directly beneath. It is to be feared that the surprise was so great that he lost his bearing to some extent and gave more than usual play to the imagination which at all times is stimulated by the weird and picturesque views of mountains, streams and forests. Scarcely had he plunged into the forest-lined path when a voice, soothing and melodious, arrested his attention. The horse voluntarily—as usual—stopped, and the rider sat motionless with imagination all a-quiver peering into the direction from whence the sound had come. Presently the veil of mist over the clump of trees began to feel the influence of the sun's rays, now peering from beneath the clouds, and gradually assumed the outlines of a human figure. Possibly a few minutes, possibly an hour, the rider sat watching this transfiguration until at last there stood before him a figure surpassingly beautiful, the light of whose countenance seemed to suggest the light of love that shines in the eyes of your sweetheart—at least so you think—when she implores you with a look to linger yet awhile. For some reason the horse finally made a start. Possibly it began to dawn upon him that he was headed for Sequim, something that could not have occurred to the rider. It was indeed a pleasure and surprise to note that the figure just now meagerly described followed, appearing more radiantly beautiful as the journey progressed. The rider strove in vain to catch the words of a song that was half hummed, half sung, by his companion from the land of dreams but he could only catch a few words now and then such as: mountains, river, sunlight, love. Could enough have been heard to have made coherence, there is no doubt but that it would have been

STARVATION—NOT POVERTY

Every news dispatch from Belgium adds to the horror of conditions there. It is not a condition of poverty, but one of abject starvation and indescribable misery. We of America see nothing whatever about us that is comparable to it. King Albert of Belgium says 7,000,000 noncombatants are near starvation. The American relief committee says 500,000 tons of food will be needed to carry this miserable legion thru the winter. Keep in mind the fact that it is not mere poverty that confronts our generosity, but starvation, unhoused, even untented, cold starvation, in a war-swept desolation out of which women and children have not the slightest hope of survival unless your magnanimity is extended.

The men and women of the world never have been called upon to meet a situation like this. Here in America we have suffering in isolated cases. But we have the machinery and the charitable organizations and the food, clothing and shelter for relieving it. Belgium is without any of these remedial agents. A charitable organization there, even if it existed, is helpless, because there is no food for it to bestow. And there are a few, if any, charitable organizations. For Belgium is a chaos in every way, except perhaps for an iron military rule which has not in its power the extending of the needed succor.

Americans must sacrifice; they must sacrifice for starvation wherever it is found—at home, or in Belgium, China or the uttermost corners of the earth. Sacrifice is a duty, to be performed with no complaint so long as sacrifice is necessary.

THE PORT DISTRICT? DO WE WANT IT?

We want whatever will bring us additional improvements, whatever will add prestige to our County and City, whatever will increase our biggest opportunities, whatever will bring in new enterprises, whatever will put new money into circulation in our community and at the same time keep it at home and be of practically no cost to the community as a community, whatever will bring us before the world of finance as a live community, whatever will increase the ability of our farmer and merchant to do business in a profitable manner, whatever will bring new business to the community, business that has been going past our doors for years and from which we have received not a dollar of advantage, the fishing industry.

We want whatever will bring ships into our harbor; that creates business. Whatever will bring more cars into our country; that makes for more business. Whatever brings more men and families into our community; that makes for more profitable business for our farmers and our merchants.

We want whatever creates a market for our products; we have them to spare and going to waste.

We want whatever will develop our resources; we have natural resources enough to make an exceedingly prosperous community.

We want whatever will make for us a busy water-front; our waterfront is one of our greatest assets.

We want whatever will add materially to the prosperity of our community, whatever will make new money flow into our coffers, whatever will show to the outside that we have a progressive community and thereby induce new industries to locate among us, whatever will increase the commerce of our county, more land improved, more farm products raised, more good roads built, more taxable property and more contented and prosperous people.

If we want all or any of the above, we will want only that that is good and we believe that a Port District with a good live Port Commission will help mightily to bring these things about.

DIRTY SIDEWALKS

To the Editor:

Kindly permit me to direct the attention of the Mayor or other competent authority to the condition in which the contractors have left the crosswalks of several streets. I refer particularly to Lincoln and Laurel streets where they intersect First street. The crossings there are positively dangerous. Many women and children who must use them are in constant peril and if they escape with sound limbs and bodies, their raiment is soiled or ruined. One would think from appearances that Wiley & Co. had a co-partnership with surgeons, bootblacks and cleaners of clothes to supply them with business. A slight expense would recitfy the matter and make things satisfactory.

PEDESTRIAN.

The shot across the bows of the U. S. Cruiser Tennessee's launch, which caused so much hysteria among the yellow press, has been explained as having been simply a note of warning that the launch was about to cross a mine field.

AN APPEAL FROM THE STATE REFORMATORY

The Monroe Index, published at the University of Another Chance, officially the Washington State Reformatory, has issued an appeal for books and magazines for the boys in that school of life. Their library is small; current magazines are scarce. Newspapers are not permitted. Reading matter is, therefore, at a premium. "The majority of the students," the appeal states, "are indefatigable readers. They digest almost anything that is printed for the sake of keeping their minds active. And, it is the best tonic that could be administered. When the men are occupied reading they are keeping in touch with the events of the world, of vital importance to them when again set free. This is the Holiday Season. Givers all over America are sending much to the Belgian sufferers. That is a splendid sentiment. Because of it we are convinced the big brothers and sisters of Washington will be willing to give to a worthy cause near home." The Index asks that clubs as well as private individuals clean out their closets and chests of old newspapers and books and send them by freight to the Washington Reformatory, Monroe, Washington. The state will pay the freight. And they ask that you send your name and address that they may thank you and in return send a copy of the Index.

WHY NOT MOVE TO ANGELES?

(Totem Pole, P.-I.)

We have a letter from a gentleman from Port Townsend who wants to donate lots for a day nursery or an old folks' home at Port Townsend. He says that everything they had there has been moved to Seattle, excepting a fertilizer factory, a leper colony and a government fog horn. He says the latter prevents them from sleeping, which is all they have to do, and that they would like some old men or children to stir up some excitement.

PERIOD OF PROSPERITY HAS ALREADY BEGUN

John Cain, who returned on Saturday from a two weeks' visit in Chicago, says that optimism returned to the people of the east and middle west within the last month and that a great period of prosperity for the entire United States has already begun. This has been encouraged by the government's constructive financial policy and immensely stimulated by the vast orders for manufactured products placed by the warring nations of Europe.

Thanksgiving was again the scene of many happy family reunions in Port Angeles, this year. Most of the young people attending schools or the university in Seattle returned home to take their accustomed place at the family board. We all feel that we have indeed much to be thankful for this year, tho' our happiness is marred by thoughts of the distress and sorrow in the many homes across the sea.

CELEBRATED MISS LONSDALE'S 12TH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. L. A. Lonsdale entertained twenty-two young ladies from two until five o'clock Saturday afternoon, in honor of Miss Hannah Lonsdale, the occasion being her twelfth birthday. The time was spent in various games, vocal and instrumental music, speeches, etc., after which came a candle blowing contest and drawing of prizes. Prizes were drawn by the following: Alberta French, 1st; Dorothy Gherke, 2nd and 3rd; Emma Abbott, 4th; Helen Albright, 5th, and there was a "scream" when Emma Abbott captured the "baby prize."

A dainty buffet luncheon was served; the birthday cake was decorated with two white doves, a gold wish-bone and lillies-of-the-valley, while on the others were candles. Colors, pink and white were carried out thru luncheon. Living and dining rooms were tastily festooned in pink and white while all flowers used were roses and chrysanthemums of same color. Miss Ethel Welsh and Eloise Fender assisted in entertaining.

All left, wishing Miss Hannah many more such birthdays, leaving handsome souvenirs and assuring their hostess of a happy time enjoyed. The following were present: Alberta French, Jean Fanson, Willie White, Trenna Kanall, Helen Albright, Wilma Andresen, Margaret Andresen, Lucile Hooker, Loretta Graves, Dorothy Gherke, Ruth Alton, Marie Epperson, Mary and Grace Stickles, Marcia Kean, Emma Abbott, Dorothy Brown, Violet Neal, Mary Belford, Eloise Fender, and Hannah Lonsdale.

FATHER'S DAY REMEMBERED BY FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS

November 22nd being Mr. J. B. Mond's birthday, the following named friends assisted him in celebrating the occasion: Mr. and Mrs. Blevans, Mr. and Mrs. Tawdle and children, Mr. and Mrs. Profit, Mr. and Mrs. Burgman and daughter, Mrs. Stelzreid, Mr. Gaylord. The birthday cake, an immense affair of architecture, was decorated with yellow roses, the color being emblematic of the birth month, topaz, and certainly was "a thing of beauty and a joy for the day," and was cut by little Marion Tawdle. The evening was spent in card playing and Mr. Monds and Vernice Burgman carried off the prizes as champions of the game. All expressed the hope that they might again meet with Mr. and Mrs. Monds on another as enjoyable an occasion.

Mr. Grant Shearer left on today's boat on a business trip to Seattle.

Clarence Weis of Seattle visited a few days here this week with the Dompiers.

Ben Albright is working for the Lutz Clothing Store; expects to be taken in as partner soon.

Rumor has it that the C. M. & St. P. R. R. has formally taken over the S. P. A. & L. C. R. R.

Billy Maher, the "Irish Giant from Winnipeg," is in Angeles again. Bill was up here two years ago.

Lots of trouble on Laurel street for the water man last week. De Kay says it was internal trouble.

Frank Dann, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Dann, came up last week to visit with his folks. Mrs. Dann is still ill.

Fritz Raithel, a well-known surveyor who spent last summer up here, paid us a short visit the first of the week.

H. B. Salt and wife are in Angeles to stay for three months. Mr. Salt is in charge of the stone work on the new court house.

Ward McMahon and wife left the first of the week for Seattle. They expect to stay there a month before returning to P. A. again.

Lots of war talk going on around town about the German fleet attacking Victoria, and what will happen to us if they do, etc, etc.

Jeff, ad-man with the T. T., was upSound again. The only thing we can figure out is that he must be thinking of getting hooked up.

Al Widman, the old-time trapper and huntsman, writes us from Prescott, Arizona, that he is feeling pretty good and expects to be with us again next spring.

Kenneth Green, who has been connected with Farmer's Garage the past summer, left the first of the week for Seattle and California. Ken says he might be back again.

Former County Engineer FitzHenry passed thru Angeles last Monday on his way to the Lakes, where he intends to spend a few days hunting. He was kept busy giving his friends the once over before leaving.

Bob Gould is back in the old town after being over in Idaho the last four months. Bob was working on a government survey outfit over there. Idaho is a good country, he says, but this looks better.

Lots of activity around the Morse building again.

A. R. Pringle visited in Seattle for a few days this week.

Mr. A. St. Croix took a trip to Seattle the first of the week.

John Cain, Jr. is working as brakeman for the local railroad.

Al Singer and wife were in from the Lakes Sunday and Monday.

MARINE BAND AT TOWNSEND

The P. A. Marine Band went to Port Townsend last Friday afternoon, on the City of Angeles and played at the dance given at the Odd Fellow's Hall there. The dance was given by the P. T. Junior Dancing Club, and was a great success. The hall was well filled with a good sociable crowd. Much praise was given by the Townsend people to our local band boys for the music furnished. The boys returned to Angeles the following morning, in a tired, worn out condition, but happy.

JOHNSON'S FIRE

Chas. Johnson's small house alongside of his home on 5th, caught on fire last Saturday at 6:45 a. m., and caused only a slight damage. The fire started in a defective flue and burnt thru the roof before being put out. George Benson, next door neighbor, was right on the job, acting in the capacity of chief fire fighter.

FOUND WATER WET

Alfred Rustvick, while walking aboard a schooner at Earles mill last week, was hit on the side of the head by a flying line, knocking him into the water. Bystanders fished him out with the aid of pike poles. The only serious hurt was the welt on the head, where the rope had hit him. Al says the water was wet and cold.

FOOT CRUSHED AT MILL

C. A. Hammond, working at the Earles mill, had his foot crushed by a heavy timber last Friday. After being examined was found to be nothing serious.

SHOT THREE DEER

E. W. Merrill, Lou Shomar, Billie Ritchie, Guy Eckley and Anton Smith spent three days at Merrill's place on the Lake last week. Three deer were shot by the party.

The Cutter Snohomish arrived in the harbor yesterday, just in time for the boys to come ashore and enjoy Thanksgiving.

Did you see the man on the waterfront Thursday, trying out a new idea in a life preserver? His legs and body were encased in rubber, and his head in a rubber hood. Quite a crowd gathered on the Peoples' dock.

The big steamer Panaman, of the American-Hawaiian line stopped here Friday evening for a pilot to take her up to Seattle, the completion of her first trip from New York to the Sound. She made the trip from New York to San Pedro in seventeen days. She had 2,000 tons of freight for Puget Sound.

Mr. Day had a mix-up one night the past week, with some big Norwegian, result—Jim Gallagher arrived just in time to carry the big Norwegian on his back, down to jail, unconscious, where he was revived with a shot in the arm. Just as Day was getting off of the Norwegians head, Gallagher showed up; Day, looking up in the dark, saw him and mistaking his long overcoat for a dress, said, "Never mind lady, I fixed him."

A man by the name of Peterson went nuts last week. When he was picked up by the local police, he resembled "September Morn." All he had on was a pleasant smile.

What we are wondering at now, is, what became of those sticks of dynamite a bunch of kids found under a piece of tarpaulin by the new court house.

RAINBOW IN FIGHT WITH GERMAN CRUISERS

Portland, Ore., Tuesday, Nov. 24—Badly damaged by the guns of the German cruisers Leipzig and Nurnberg, the Canadian cruiser Rainbow is in drydock at Esquimalt and many of her crew are in the hospitals of Victoria, according to a private letter received by a Portland man from his sister in Vancouver.

The letter says the fight between the Rainbow and the two big German cruisers is common knowledge in Victoria and Vancouver but has been suppressed by the censors.

According to this letter the Rainbow met the German vessels off the coast of Oregon and was in bad shape when the French cruiser Montcalm came to her relief and drove the Germans off.

The Rainbow, a small boat of light armament was nearly in sinking condition and a large number of her crew were wounded when the Montcalm came to the rescue. She was convoyed to Esquimalt by the Montcalm.

TITANIC BATTLE RAGING

A report today says that the Germans are now within fifty miles of Warsaw and are making rapid propress, while on the other side of the Empire the Germans are still only 70 miles from Paris. The titanic conflict between Russia and Germany in the east hangs in a balance. So involved are the operations which are being carried forward on a gigantic scale, that a false step or decisive defeat at some point for either the Russians or the Germans might mean the annihilation of an army. The Russians claim the defeat of the Austro-German army at Radom and Kielce. The Germans claim a victory at Lowicz. This town is only 50 miles from Warsaw.

CROWN PRINCE WOUNDED

Tuesday, Nov. 17—The Gazette De Lausanne declares that it has confirmation of the report from Strassburg that the German Crown Prinec Frederick William was transported, seriously injured, to the royal palace by special train. The German Empress went to Strassburg from Berlin and remained all day by the bedside of the crown prince.

A mine washed ashore near West Capelle, Holland, exploded today while being examined, killing three naval officers, one civilian and three sailors.

HOME GUARD PROTECTING VICTORIA

Fully 3,000 armed men, drilled and trained incessantly since the German fleet's victory over the British fleet off the coast of Chile, now guard Victoria day and night. Approximately 2,000 of these soldiers will join the next Canadian contingent to leave for the old country. But those that are left here are prepared to fight to the last ditch and have 4 and 6-inch guns mounted in blind batteries around the city of Victoria, in the hills behind the town.

TROUBLE IN CHINA

Friday, Nov. 20.—An attempt was made yesterday to restore the emperor to the throne of the Chinese Empire. Sun Yu Jen, an old-time scholar and official, petitioned with Yuan Shi Kai last Monday to replace the emperor of the throne, with Yuan Shi Kai retaining the regency. The censors impeached Sun Yu Jen, who was arrested yesterday. Many Manchu uprisers were arrested and twenty were executed.

DESPERATE FIGHTING IN POLAND

Monday, Nov. 23.—Desperate fighting in Russian Poland but without details as to the outcome, and a resumption of similar activity in West Flanders are the main features in the war situation today, says the London office of the American Press.

Both sides continue to be reticent concerning the progress of the great battle in Poland, but Berlin is confident that Gen. Von Hindenburg will justify his reputation as the greatest and most successful of the German generals.

AMERICANS EVACUATED VERA CRUZ, MONDAY

Vera Cruz, Monday, Nov. 23.—The American forces of occupation under Maj.-Gen. Frederick Funston, after a stay in Vera Cruz of seven months, began today embarking on the steamships which will return them to the United States.

General Funston established his headquarters on board the Cristobal and all the organizations of his command began at daylight the work of moving out their equipment preparatory to final evacuation. Everything progressed smoothly.

Beyond the American outposts there has been mobolized during the night a force of Constitutionalists. As the Americans withdrew, first from the outlying districts and then from the city itself, the Constitutionalists occupied the territory evacuated.

The city is quiet, but the inhabitants are nervous and apprehensive concerning the final outcome of this transfer of authority. All saloons in Vera Cruz remained closed today on orders of General Funston, and many commercial establishments decided not to open their doors.

The government of Vera Cruz is not being turned over to any faction of Mexicans. The territory is being evacuated, and as fast as the Americans go out Constitutionalists are coming in.

The American army officials are taking with them the moneys collected for customs and other sources of revenue. These ultimately will go to some Mexican government which the United States deems a proper one to receive them.

The American quarter-master department has arranged to take away from Vera Cruz something like 300 Mexicans who did not care to be in the city when their countrymen again came into possession.

POST OFFICE SENDS OUT WARNING

The post office department is out with a timely warning to all those who contemplate the sending of Christmas packages, and has asked to send them early and avoid the heavy rush at the holiday season which is liable to delay the delivery of gifts. Under the postal law, packages sent out early in the month are allowed to be labeled "Please do not open until Christmas." Attention is also called to the importance of writing addresses plainly, giving the name of the person, the street number and the name of the sender. Failure to comply with this rule may land the gift in a post office auction sale. Also remember the time-honored injunction: "Do your Christmas Shopping early."

The Holidays will soon be here, so I will greatly appreciate early orders for hand painted china. Mrs. Minnie Troy, china painter and decorator. Phone 47.

Declare War On Colds

A crusade of education which aims "that common colds may become uncommon within the next generation" has been begun by prominent New the "don'ts" which the doctors say will prevent the annual visitation of the cold:

"Don't sit in a draughty car."
"Don't sleep in hot rooms."
"Don't avoid the fresh air."
"Don't stuff yourself at meal time. Overeating reduces your resistance."

To which we would add—when you will find Chamberlain's Cough Remedy most excellent. Sold by all dealers.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Make-Believe.

For upwards of three-quarters of an hour of that golden morning which followed the night of his return to New York, Mr. Law was permitted to esteem himself the happiest of mortals.

And inasmuch as this is not only a longer uninterrupted term of happiness than is humanly common but is more of that emotion than ordinarily leavens the whole of a lifetime, Alan was perhaps to be envied, even though disillusionment when it came was sudden, sharp, and to him unspeakably shocking—a swift, unpresaged plunge from sunlit peaks of supreme content to the black depths of a bleak Avernus of despair.

The beginning of the period was synchronous with the slam of a taxicab door that shut away a superfluous world from the company of two who loved.

The sound spelled safety as well as success in Alan's understanding.

The car slipped smoothly away from the curb, pursued only by a little gust of semi-ironic cheers from the little company of working men who had witnessed as well as measurably participated in the putative elopement from the house of Trine.

Vigilant for any indication that their evasion had had a witness in that strange home of deathless hatred, Alan watched it through the little window in the back of the cab until a corner blotted out the vision of it; then with a sigh of relief sank down by the side of the woman to whom his every thought, impulse and emotion were dedicated.

"Rose!" he whispered, and tentatively touched one of the hands that lay clenched in her lap.

She responded with never a sign to indicate consciousness either of his touch or his whisper.

And reminding himself of the strain imposed upon her by the experience through which they had just passed, Alan excused her unresponsiveness on grounds of reaction, and for the time felt constrained to let his sweetheart rest and regain her normal poise: there was bliss enough for him in the consciousness that he had won her safely away, that nothing now more than a short hour's drive across town and by ferry across the Hudson stood between them and the marriage that should prove the consummation of all their trials . . . Barring accident!

Alan had too often suffered the penalty of disappointment for over-indulgence in this failing of his for deprecating the unforeseen, not to make the mental reservation, "Barring accidents!" with a little shiver of dread.

Had any of Trine's household been cognizant of his daughter's escape, Alan argued, interference must have been instant.

Despite the reassuring aspect, the preoccupation of his companion so wore upon him that he was presently no longer able to refrain from disturbing her.

"Rose!" he begged again, closing a hand tenderly over hers. "Dearest girl, don't worry another instant! Do calm yourself: remember we are safe now; we fooled them handily—thanks to your faith and bravery, sweetheart! and everything is going to be well with us from now on. Over in Jersey the minister is waiting now to marry us; and down at the White Star dock the boat is waiting that is to carry us off to England the moment we're married. Think of that—and that I love you. Nothing can possibly break the strength of that combination!"

She Appeared Anxious to Escape Without Being Seen.

For another minute she rested as she had ever since sinking into her corner of the taxicab—moveless, taut, unresponsive.

Then a long sigh shook her to her very heart, and of a sudden the small fist in Alan's grasp relaxed and her face turned to his like a flower to the sun, a face transfigured, its lips now soft and yielding, its eyes unclosed and smiling into his a smile all misty with unshed tears.

"Alan," she breathed gently. "It can't be true! I'm trying so hard to believe—but all the while I know it can't be true!"

He converted a skeptic with the mute eloquence of his lips . . .

Head upon his shoulder, the girl clung passionately to him. "Tell me again that you love me!" she prayed. "Promise me you'll never let anything come between us. Promise me, Alan—promise me you'll be kind to me always, dear!"

"Can you doubt I will be kind?" he murmured reproachfully.

"I am afraid . . ." she whispered.

"How could I be anything else, loving you as I do?"

"I am afraid . . ."

"Why should I be unkind to you?"

"It isn't that. . . . I'm just afraid."

"Of what?"

"Of losing you."

"But that can never be!"

"You can't be sure. What if you were to find you'd been mistaken?" She caught her breath and added hastily—"That you didn't really love me, I mean."

"Oh, that's ridiculous!"

"I can't be sure. Nothing in life is permanent. What is love? Illusion of the senses! What is happiness? A will-o'-the-wisp! What is life? A make-believe!"

"Dearest!" He held her more closely still. "You are nervous and overwrought. You don't know what you're saying. You can't mean what you're saying. . . . But say that it's so—that life is all make-believe. Then make-believe you love me—"

"Oh, but I do, I do!"

"And make-believe for a little we've caught the will-o'-the-wisp—only for a little—until you wake up and realize that it's all real and true."

She closed her eyes again: "Yes," she breathed, "you are right. Let's make-believe it's all true for a little longer . . . and forget . . ."

He could by no means account for this strange humor; but he did his best to comfort her, none the less tenderly because of his mystification. And for a long time she let illusion blind her, resting quietly in his arms, making believe . . .

Only on approaching the Twenty-third street ferry they must needs rouse and sit apart constrainedly for fear some one might glance through the window and surprise their secret.

As if one needed the evidence of a caress exchanged to know that they were lovers, who had eyes to see the flushed loveliness of the girl shrinking back in her corner or wit to interpret the radiant happiness that shone in Alan's face as he bent forward and watched warily from the window.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Ring.

Theirs was the last vehicle to swing between the gates before these last were closed.

And this was quite as well; for Alan, rising for one last backward glance through the rear window, started involuntarily and choked upon an exclamation when he descried a powerful touring car tearing madly toward the ferry-house, its one passenger half rising from the front seat, beside the driver, and exhibiting a countenance purple with congested chagrin as he saw his car barred out of the carriage entrance.

Quickly sensitive to his emotion, the girl caught nervously at Alan's hand.

"What is it, dear?"

"Marrophat," he snapped.

She uttered a hushed cry of dismay.

"Don't be alarmed, however," he hastened to comfort her. "He's lost the race: the gates are shut—even the passenger gates—and there must be a company spotter somewhere near by, for the gateman is virtuously refusing to be bribed by a roll of money as thick as my wrist!"

At that instant the taxicab rolled aboard the ferry-boat; the deck gates were closed; a hoarse whistle rent the roaring silence of the city; winches rattled and chains clanked; and the boat wore ponderously out of its slip.

"So much for Mr. Marrophat!" Alan crowed, sitting down. "Foiled again! He can't stop us now!"

"Perhaps . . ."

"Why that perhaps? Why that tone?" he demanded sharply, struck by the foreboding her accents confessed.

"This isn't the only ferry. There's the Pennsylvania and the Lackawanna—and by hard driving he might even manage to catch the boat that connects with this from the Christopher street ferry of the Erie!"

"Impossible! I don't believe it! I won't!"

"Let's not," she agreed. "But, Alan . . ."

"Yes?"

"Promise me—if he should manage to catch up with us—you won't let him talk to you. I mean, don't let him—"

"No fear of that!" he asservated hotly. "If he tries to exchange one word with me—I only wish he would!"

She seemed satisfied with that; but the incident had served appreciably to chill their spirits. They accomplished the remainder of that voyage in a silence that was no less depressed because they sat hand in hand throughout.

Nor was their taxicab three minutes out of the ferry house on the Jersey shore—though the chauffeur, stimulater by Alan's extravagant promises, was doing his best to fracture the speed laws and escape arrest—when the girl's fears were amply justified; a shout from behind drew Alan's head out of the window on one side and the girl's on the other and proved to both that Marrophat had indeed found some way to make the crossing without great delay.

His touring car was within fifty yards when they first were aware of it; and Marrophat, standing on the running-board, was shouting inarticulately and flourishing an imperative hand; while the distance between them was momentarily growing less noticeable.

As Marrophat's car drew abreast Alan nodded and said quietly: "Don't be alarmed; I can attend to this gentleman single-handed."

And this he proceeded to demonstrate with admirable ease, even though called upon to do so far sooner than he had thought to be—thanks to Marrophat's hair-brained precipitancy. For, failing to influence the taxi driver by shouted demands or threats, or to gain the least attention from Alan, Trine's first lieutenant abruptly and surprisingly took his life in his hands and in one wild bound bridged the distance between the two flying cars and landed on the taxi's running-board.

Stop!" he screamed madly. "Stop, I say! You don't know what you're doing! Let me tell you—"

He got that far but no farther. In the same breath Alan had flung wide the door and was at the fellow's throat. There was a struggle of negligible duration; Marrophat was in no way his antagonist's match; within three seconds he threw out both hands, clutched hopelessly at the framework of the cab, and fell heavily to the street.

The taxi sped on without pause, its driver deaf to the hails of innocent if indignant bystanders. Alan pulled himself together and looked back just in time to catch a glimpse of a number of loafers lifting Marrophat to his feet and helping him to the sidewalk of an unsavory-looking tenement, before the cab took a corner on two wheels . . ."

"Not seriously injured, I fancy," he told the girl in response to her eager look. "Worse luck!" he added gloomily.

But it seeemed that he was to have greater cause than this to complain of his luck, before that ride was ended. Three blocks further on a tire blew out with a report like a cannon-cracker, and the taxi lurched perilously, hesitated, slowed down, and limped dejectedly to the curb.

Alan and the chauffeur piled out in the same instant, the one standing guard—with an eye out as well for another cab—while the other assessed damages.

"Nothing for it but a new tire, sir," this last reported sympathetically. "It must have been a broken bottle or something like that—it sure did rip the usefulness clean out of that shoe."

"Go to it," Alan advised him tersely; "and if you make a quick job of it, I'll stand the cost of the new tire."

"But if another cab comes along while you're at it you'll lose us as quick as a wink. Here's my card, in case we have to desert you in a hurry; you understand this is a matter of life and death, and I'll have no time to settle up with you. But you can call at Mr. Digby's office and he'll fix things up to your satisfaction."

The man took the card and after a glance at the name touched his hat with more noticeable respect.

"All right, Mr. Law," he agreed; "anything you say." And forthwith got to work.

The rapidity with which he completed the change of tires proved him an excellent chauffeur, an adept at his craft; but the delay was one disastrous for all that. It worked together with what Alan pardonably described as the devil's own luck to bring the touring car in sight at the precise moment when the chauffeur was cranking up and Alan on the point of re-entering the cab. And though they were off again before Alan could close the door, the attempt was hopeless from the start.

And yet—whether or not because Alan's distaste for interference had been too convincingly demonstrated—the touring car for the time being contented itself with trailing about fifty feet in the rear, while the taxi fled the tenement purlieus of the Hoboken waterfront and found its way into the broader streets of an unpretentious suburban quarter.

Not until they were well into the suburbs, with few dwellings near and no pedestrians to interfere, did Marrophat's purpose become apparent. Then, however—and it happened while Alan was looking back—the touring car drew in swiftly and easily and Marrophat, rising in his seat, leveled a revolver over the windshield and fired.

The crack of his weapon was practically coincident with a metallic thud beneath the rear seat of the taxicab.

Not for some moments did Alan appreciate the viciousness of the scheme. Surmising that the gasoline tank had been punctured by the bullet, he was inclined to believe that Marrophat hoped to stop the taxicab by depriving it, in course of time, of its fuel. And with this in mind he was presently surprised, as the cab took a corner, to see Marrophat's car stop at that corner and Marrophat himself get down. The brow of a hill intervened, shutting off sight of the blackguard as he knelt and lit a match. It was the girl who gave the alarm, suddenly withdrawing her head from the window to scream at Alan:

THE TREY O' HEARTS

"He's fired the gasoline! It's flaming along the street, following the line of the leak—and catching up with us!"

Without pausing to put his hand to the latch, Alan kicked the door open.

"Jump!" he cried. "For your life—jump! As soon as that flame catches up with the tank—"

Simultaneously the chauffeur, overhearing, shut off the power.

The three gained the sidewalk barely in time: the tiny trail of flames, almost imperceptible in the sunlight, was not a yard from the jet that spurted through the bullet hole in the tank. In the flutter of an eyelash the explosion followed. Had the cab been loaded with nitroglycerin its destruction could have been no more absolute.

There was a roar . . . and then a heap of smoking ruins.

Without waiting to admire the spectacle, Alan caught the arm of the girl and hurried her up the street, at the same time calling to the chauffeur to follow. And chance brought them to the next corner as another cab, fareless, hove into view. Promising its driver anything he might ask, in or out of reason, Alan gave him the address, and helped the girl in.

If Marrophat pursued Alan could see no sign of him. The second car made better time than the first. Unhindered, and as far as could be determined, without being followed, it covered the brief remaining distance in a gratefully short lapse of time.

The suburb dropped behind a maze of streets where dwellings stood shoulder to shoulder and dooryards were scant. The car swept up to a corner house of modest and homely aspect. Two minutes more, and Alan was exchanging salutations with and making his bride-to-be known to Digby's good friend, the Reverend Mr. Wright.

Embarrassment worked confusion with the young man's perceptive faculties. As this moment approached when two should be made one who had gone through fire and flood, literally as well as figuratively, for each other's sake, incredulity drew a veil before his vision. He viewed the world as in a glass, darkly.

He was aware of a decently furnished minister's study; of two witnesses in the guise of unassuming womenfolk of the minister's household; of the Rev. Mr. Wright himself as a benevolent voice rolling sonorously forth from a black-clad presence; of the woman of his heart standing opposite him; of questions asked and responses made; of a ring that was magically conjured from some store apparently maintained against precisely similar emergencies; of a hand that took the hand that was to be his wife's and placed it in his; of his clumsy and witless bungling with the task of fitting that ring to the finger of his sweetheart's hand . . .

And then he was aware of a door that banged violently in the hallway; of the sound of a man's voice making some indistinguishable demand; that Rose's hand was suddenly whipped away, before he could fit on the ring; that the study door was flung open and that this animal of a Marrophat had precipitated himself into the room.

He opened his mouth to protest—and Marrophat silenced him with a cry.

"You fool! Drop that ring! Stop this farce! Don't you know whom you're marrying? That woman is Judith Trine, you idiot—not Rose!"

Blankly Alan turned to the girl.

Her flaming face, her sullen eyes, her very pose, from which the manner of Rose had dropped like a cast garment, confessed the truth of Marrophat's assertion. And as if this were not enough, Judith confessed it doubly with a sudden outbreak of such rage as never could have been brewed in Rose's gentle nature.

"You devil!" she cried—and threw herself in front of Marrophat with a spring as lithe as that of a leopardess. "Take warning now from me: keep out of my way forever after this—or take the consequences! God knows," she panted, "why I don't kill you as you stand!"

He was in her way, between her and the open door. She gave him no chance to move aside, but seized him so fiercely by the wrists that he instinctively lifted to protect himself, and she fairly threw him half a dozen feet from her. He brought up with a crash against the wall even as the door slammed behind the girl.

When Alan, the first to recover, gained the sidewalk, she was already in the taxicab. Whatever reward she had promised the man, he whipped his machine away as if from the fear of sudden death.

And darting from the house hard on the minister's heels, Marrophat leaped into his own car and, as if he had not heard her threat or received substantial proof of her earnestness, tore off in pursuit.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

And the Rose.

Taking the dazed young man by the hand, as though he had been a child, the Reverend Mr. Wright led Alan back to his study and established him in a comfortable armchair beside his desk.

"Sit there and compose yourself, my dear young friend," he insisted in a soothing voice.

At the elbow of the Reverend Mr. Wright a telephone shrilled imperatively. With a gesture of professional patience he turned to the instrument, lifted the receiver to his ear, and spoke in musically modulated accents.

"Yes . . . Yes: this is Mr. Wright. . . . Ah, yes, Mr. Digby, . . . Not coming? But, my dear sir, Mr. Law is already here. I must tell you—"

He checked with a reproving glance for Alan, who was twitching his sleeve insistently.

"If you please," Alan begged, "let me speak to Digby at once. Forgive me—"

Reluctantly the minister surrendered the telephone.

"That you, Digby?"

"Alan! Bless my soul, what are you doing over there? Is Miss Trine with you? But how can that be possible?"

"Rose? No. What about her?" Alan demanded, stammering with anxiety.

"Why—one of my spies has just reported by telephone. He was going on duty this morning when he saw a young woman—either Rose or Judith—wearing a rough coat over boudoir dress—climb out of one of the basement windows of Trine's house. She was apparently in great distress of mind and anxious to escape without being seen from the house; but before my man—whose post of observation is in the third story of one of the houses opposite—could get to the street, she had been caught by several rough-looking customers, who rushed out of Trine's house, seized the girl, and made off with her in a motor-car bearing a New Jersey license number. I am sending men to watch the Jersey ferries. Call me up in an hour—"

Without a word of response, and without a word of apology to the Reverend Mr. Wright, Alan dropped the receiver, snatched up his hat, and fled that house like a man demented.

Rose, escaping from Trine's house, overpowered and made the captive of Trine's lowest creatures—gunmen possibly, of the stamp of that animal whom Trine had charged with the assassination of Alan the night before!

There was neither a motor-car in sight for him to charter nor any time to waste in seeking one. Alan could only hope to find one on his way back toward the ferry. It must have been upwards of an hour before he came into a street which he recognized, by its dinginess and squalor, as that in which he had thrown Marrophat from the running-board of the taxicab.

And then, as he paused, breathless and footsore, to cast about him for the way to the ferry, a touring car turned a corner at top speed and slowed to a stop before that selfsame tenement of the unsavory aspect to whose sidewalk he had seen Marrophat assisted by the loafers of the quarter.

And this touring car was occupied by some half-a-dozen ruffians in whose hands a young girl writhed and struggled when, immediately on the stop, they jumped out and wrestled her out with brutal inconsideration.

Like a shot Alan had crossed the street—but only to bring up nose to the panels of the tenement door, and to find himself seized and thrown roughly aside by a burly denizen when he grasped the knob and made as if to follow in.

"Keep back, young feller!" his assailant warned him viciously. "Keep outa this, now, if you don't want to get into trouble."

To the speaker's side another ranged, eyeing Alan with a formidable scowl. At discretion he stepped back and turned as if persuaded to mind his own business, then swung on his heel, caught the two in the very act of opening the door, and threw himself between them.

An elbow planted heavily in the pit of the stomach of one disposed of him for the time being. A blow from the shoulder sent the other reeling to the gutter. And Alan was in the tenement's lowermost hall—a foul and evil-odored place, dark as a pit the instant the door was closed, its murk relieved only by the flame of a kerosene lamp smoking in a bracket near the foot of the stairs.

Sounds of scuffling of feet were audible on the first landing. Alan addressed himself impetuously to the staircase, gaining its top in half a dozen leaps, and only in time to see a door slammed at the forward end of the hall and hear a key turned in its lock.

A cluster of men blocked the way. He didn't pause to wait for it to be cleared, but threw himself headlong into their midst, and by dint of the surprise had gained the closed door before they recovered and sought to stay him.

Indifferent to them all, he shook the knob and shouted: "Rose! Rose!"

Her cry came back to him, a muffled scream: "Alan! Help! Help!"

Backing away with a mad idea of throwing himself bodily against the door and breaking it down, he was suddenly confronted by a hideous mask of humanity—face of man all misshapen, bruised and swollen and disfigured with smears of dried blood and a dirty bandage round his temples, but none the less vaguely recognizable.

The words that stream d from its distorted lips drove recognition home.

"Gee, fellers, look't who's here! If it ain't th' guy what threw me off'n that girder this mornin'. Stand back and let me kill th'—"

Without the hesitation of a heartbeat Alan swung heavily for the thug's jaw. The blow went solidly home. The man fell like a poled ox.

Pandemonium ensued. Rallying to their comrade, the ruffians attacked Alan with one mind and one intent. Murder would have been done then and there had it not been for a rotten banister-rail, which gave way, precipitating the lot to the ground floor of the hallway.

Simultaneously the lamp on the wall was struck from its bracket and crashed to the floor, its glass well breaking and loosing a flood of kerosene to receive the burning wick. The explosion followed instantly. In a trice the hallway was a lake of burning oil, and hungry flames were licking up the rotting wallpaper and eating into decayed baseboards and stair-treads.

Still fighting like a madman, contesting every foot of the way, Alan was borne down the hall and out of the front door. A scream of "Fire!" greeted him as he reeled out into the open. It was echoed by a dozen throats.

The doorway vomited men and women of the tenement. They choked it for a time, blocking both egress and ingress. By the time they broke out and left the way clear a solid wall of flame stood behind it.

Thrice Alan essayed to pass that barrier of fire, and thrice it threw him back. Then, struggling and kicking to release himself and try again, he was seized by a brace of able-bodied policemen and rushed fifty feet from the house before let go.

Lack of breath checked him momentarily.

He looked up, dashing from his smarting eyes tears drawn by the stifling clouds of smoke, and saw vaguely at the second story window a woman leaning out and shrieking for help.

That it was hopeless to attempt the staircase he well knew. Drawing aside, he endeavored to come to his sober senses, and cast about for some more feasible way to effect the rescue of his Rose.

The tenement occupied one corner of a narrow street. Directly opposite, a storage warehouse stood upon the other corner. Before this last was the common landing stage for truck deliveries, protected by a shed-roof. And, suspended from a timber that peered out over the eaves, a hoisting tackle dragged the ground with its ropes.

It was the work of a minute to convince a thick-headed policeman that the attempt was feasible and should be permitted. It was the work of less than another minute to rig a loop in the line and fasten round his body beneath the arms. Volunteers did not lack; a couple of husky longshoremen sprang to the ropes at his first call. They heaved with a will. His feet left the ground, he soared, he caught the eaves of the shed-roof, and shouting to cease hauling, drew himself up on this last, backed a little ways down it and calculating his direction nicely, with a running jump launched himself out over the street.

The momentum of his leap carried him well out over the heads of the throng assembled in the street and truly toward that window where Rose was waiting. Then its force slackened. For an awful instant he believed that he had failed. But with the last expiring ounce of impetus, he was brought within grasping distance of the window sill.

Hauling himself up, he gathered her into his arms . . .

A great tongue of tawny flame licked angrily out of the windows as he swung her back to safety.

JENSEN, THE SHOE MAN

NEWS FROM THE CAPITOL

Olympia, Nov. 24,—While the ad foot and mouth disease made its appearance in the state of Washington last week, such immediate steps were taken to prevent its spread by the state authorities that it is doubtful if the federal government will quarantine Washington, the course pursued in other states in which outbreaks were reported.

The disease appeared in a herd of 101 thoroughbred Holsteins held under detention at Spokane. The immediate discovery of the disease is an assurance of the care being taken by Dr. H. T. Graves, commissioner of agriculture, to prevent an epidemic in this state. Before the herd in question had entered this state, Dr. Graves received information that the cattle had been fed in Minneapolis, in the same pen previously occupied by a herd which had contracted the disease upon landing in Montana. The Holstein herd accordingly was given especial attention when it arrived in Spokane and detained in quarantine. Upon the presence of the disease being well established, all members of the herd were shot and the carcasses burned. The clothing worn by all inspectors taking part in the slaughter was burned and they wert required to go thru a disinfecting process.

The herd destroyed was valued at $25,000 by its owner who will be compensated, however, only on the beef value of the cattle, about $4,000, half of which will be met by the state and half by the federal government.

Names of more than 9,000 persons, who apparently had either signed eight hour bill initiative petitions without first qualifying as registered voters, or had signed these petitions more than once, were certified to county prosecutors thruout the state this week for prosecution under the terms of the initiative and referendum act.

For the maintainance of the state's twelve institutions and construction of new buildings, repairs and other improvements, the state board of control will ask the next legislature for $3,809,199, some $75,000 less than was requested for the present biennium, though the population of the institutions is increasing at the rate of about 15 per cent a year.

Oil excitement in western Washington is resulting in demands for leases of state lands, for drilling purposes, for miles in every direction from the Tenino fields, which now are the center of operations. Oil promoters now are seeking drilling rights on state lands already leased for agricultural purposes, as the state, in leasing or selling agriculture lands, always reserves its oil and other mineral rights.

The state land board this week took up formally the proposed land exchange agreement with the federal government, by terms of which the state will gain control of approximately 600,000 acres of land, situated in convenient tracts carved out of the present borders of the national forests, in exchange for some acreage in school sections, now scattered thru the forests in single sections.

The state board of control plans to have the state's newest institution, the State School for Girls, near Grand Mound, Thurston county, opened by the end of next month, so that the girls may enjoy Christmas dinner in their new home.

The Washington building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco will be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies next Wednesday, December 2. The Washington Society of California, composed of Californians formerly Washington residents, will assist the Washington commission in the exercises, which will include addresses by President Moore of the exposition, Mayor Rolph of San Francisco and appropriate songs rendered by a native daughter of Washington.

Attorney Harold Preston of Seattle, author of the Washington compensation act, first to be put in operation by the state, was called into conference by the industrial commission and attorney general's office last week, to discuss amendments deemed advisable in the light of three years experience in actual operation. Aside from the addition of a first aid clause, which will be drafted by Governor Lister's special commission, none of the changes proposed will alter any of the essential features of the act, which is standing up well under the test of time.

TENDERFOOT BAGS TWO DEER THE FIRST HOUR

H. C. Pollett, a young man in the auto supply business in Seattle, bagged two deer, the first he had ever shot, Monday morning within an hour after leaving Humes' ranch, on the Elwha. Mr. Pollett came down Sunday, intending to stay several days, and walked out from Herrick's that afternoon, arriving in time for supper, but being almost too tired to eat. Early Monday morning Grant Humes started out to show him a likely hunting ground and had hardly turned to leave when the first deer walked out of the brush. After the boys hung this first one up, they separated, Pollett killing his second deer within the hour and Grant getting a third before eleven o'clock. Pollett returned home Tuesday, highly elated over the success of his brief outing.

Mr. Humes says he has packed out over fifty deer for those hunting on his side of the river this season.

COMMERCIAL CLUB DIRECTORS MEETING

Regular meeting of the board of directors, November 23, 1914, 4 p. m. Present: President Craig, Vice-President Aldwell, Directors Cain, Erickson, Farmer, Fisher, Grubb, Levy, Lindsay, McCarthy, Phillips, Ware, totalling twelve directors and the secretary.

Minutes of the regular meeting of Nov. 9, 1914, were read and approved without change.

The Kennedy Company's Account.

On motion of Aldwell, the secretary was ordered to forward check for $50 to the Kennedy Company, Seattle, liquidating half the balance due that company for the birdseye view of the city.

Railway and Marine News Publicity.

The proposition of the Railway and Marine News of Seattle, offering to publish a series of descriptive articles covering the city and the Olympic Peninsula, beginning in the issue for December 1, 1914, suggesting that the Club subscribe for three pages of space at $55 per page, and asking the secretary to submit a series of descriptive articles for the city and surrounding attractions and developments, was discussed and referred to the committee on Publicity.

Washington Oil Co's Correspondence.

The secretary read voluminous correspondence that had taken place between his office and the Washington Oil Company, thru its President Elmer E. Gerard, in which the latter complained that the Club and the business men of the city had not supported his company as liberaly and actively as they should. The attitude of the Club, as expressed in the letter replying to Mr. Gerard, was that the organization could not consistently engage in helping to raise capital for an indefinite or speculative project.

A letter from James E. Barnes of Seattle, offering to provide the Club with bills introduced at the 1915 session of the Washington legislature for $35, was read and ordered filed.

Donation—Native Woods.

A letter from Arlie Copeland of Forks, Washington, presenting to the Club for exhibition purposes, a cabinet display of 17 kinds of native woods, was read and the secretary's action in writing a letter of thanks was approved.

Legislative Committee—State Publicity.

The report of the Legislative committee favoring an increased appropriation for the State Bureau of Statistics and Immigration was read and ordered filed. Chairman Geo. V. Smith of the committee addressed the board with reference to plans the committee had for a joint conference with Senator A. A. Smith and Representative C. L. Babcock relative to prospective legislation of interest to Clallam county.

Port District Campaign.

The secretary read a telegram sent to Division Freight and Passenger Agent R. F. Weeks, of the C. M. & St. P. Railway, November 16, inviting him to a conference with the committee on Industries relative to the proposed Port District campaign, and his reply of November 18, that he was at that time confined to his home by illness. Chairman Lindsay of the committee stated that he expected to visit Seattle within a few days and confer wih the Milwaukee officials. He also suggested the improbability of the Sequim and Dungeness Districts favoring the Port District plan as including that part of the county. Also that if the proposed Port District embraced all that portion of the county lying west from Range 4, leaving out Sequim and Dungeness, the assessed valuation would exceed $13,000,000.

Law and Order Committee.

Vice-President Aldwell moved that a special committee of five be appointed to confer with the city and county authorities in behalf of the strict enforcement of law and order during the strike of the shingle weavers of the Puget Sound Mills & Timber Company. Carried. The President appointed as such committee Messrs. Thomas T. Aldwell, Chn; Peter Grubb, Fred C. Farmer, J. W. Lindsay, and H. Maurice Fisher.

Miss Mae Webster arrived home Thursday morning from Seattle to spend the week-end and get her share of turkey.

On and after the 10th of October, we will sell wood only when paid for cash on delivery. E. N. Eagle.

A complete stock of GOODYEAR TIRES on hand at all times. Adjustments gladly made on all GOODYEAR TIRES.

CLUB NEWS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

THE AUXILIARY'S WHIST TOURNAMENT

The whist tournament given by the Women's Auxiliary, to the Commercial Club, in the Opera House last Friday evening was well attended and very much enjoyed. The highest scores were made by Mrs. Fulmer and Mr. L. L. Hay, each of whom was awarded a round trip ticket to Seattle on the City of Angeles; the second highest scores were won by Mrs. Morganroth and Mr. J. P. Christensen; the former was awarded a handsome embroidered center piece, donated by Mrs. L. L. Hay and the latter one of Jack London's books, given by Mrs. Fry of the Fry Drug Company. Dancing was enjoyed from eleven until one. The ladies of the Auxiliary extend a hearty vote of thanks to the Angeles Transportation Company, who thru the courtesy of Mr. Al Filion, donated the two round trip tickets to Seattle, as prizes, also to Mrs. Hay and Mr. Fry for their donations and to all others who assisted in any way.

The Port Angeles Reading Club will hold its next regular meeting with Mrs. Thos. Geisness, Friday afternoon, December 4th. The following Wednesday evening they will entertain their husbands with a social evening at the home of Mrs. R. D. Willson. The refreshments are to be prepared and served by Miss Pazandak and her domestic science class of young ladies at Central School, who are becoming quite famous cooks.

Friday, November 20th, the W. L. C. was pleasantly entertained by Mrs. Minnie Fuller. The program was especially enjoyable and the talk by Mrs. Goldwater on her recent visit to Europe, added to the afternoons interest and pleasure. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the program.

The Lady Maccabees held their Thanksgiving social Tuesday evening in the lodge room and entertained their husbands and friends at cards, serving them later with dainties suggestive of the season.

Remember to send your out-grown or cast off clothing, dolls, toys and books down to the Commercial Club, to be used for needy families. A number of calls for clothing are already in and there will doubtless be many calls before the winter is over.

ALLDREDGE—KING NUPTIALS

A very pretty and quiet wedding took place at Rev. Fulmer's parlor at 12 o'clock noon Tuesday, November 24th. The officiating parties were Mr. C. E. Alldredge of Seattle, Wash., and Miss Ada King of this city.

The bride was beautifully attired in a beautiful silk robe, while the groom was dressed in the conventional black. The wedding was a quiet affair, only members of the brides family being present.

After the ceremony was performed by the Methodist minister, Rev. Jones, the bride and groom took their departure on board the steamer Sioux for Seattle, where they will make their future home. The groom is one of Seattle's highly respected young men, while the bride was formerly a Mt. Pleasant girl. Her many friends wish her success and happiness in her new home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Willson returned Wednesday morning from Seattle, John is just able to be around after a very severe operation. Mr. and Mrs. Roy McClinton and three children came with them to complete the family dinner party at the home of Mrs. McClinton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Willson.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Warner delightfully entertained a few of their friends and neighbors Thursday evening in honor of their guests, Mrs. Elizabeth De Barrie Gill and Mrs. Diffenbacher. Cards and music furnished the evenings entertainment, Mrs. Gill graciously rendering a number of instrumental and vocal selections on the harp.

One of the most attractive Thanksgiving windows was that of the Olympic Cash Store, with all sorts of dainties temptingly arranged on plates, reminding one of the nice little things that go to complete a perfect dinner. The Port Angeles and Hensen Groceries had very attractive window displays also, causing the passerby to stop and take notice.

rare poetry. Suddenly the trail merged into the highway, and at a short distance buildings were seen, which afterwards proved to be the fish hatchery. To his great dissappointment the figure began to lose its attractive features and an expression which might be described to be a mixture of sourness and sadness appeared. It was still the same figure and yet it was not the same. With a love-lorn expression on its countenance it suddenly floated away toward the hills and disappeared, leaving the rider to ruminate and contemplate at his leisure the sundry charms, the rare suggestions of "The Spirit of the Mountain," "His Sweetheart of the Hills" and to feel mighty glad that he had enjoyed a ride over the hills to Lost Mountain.

After visiting the Lost Mountain school and Bear Creek, district No. 48, the writer emerged at Happy Valley, which was passed too late for an official visit but to which he hopes very soon to return.

The county unit plan is a subject which at present is receiving more than usual attention in the state of Washington. The next number of the School Journal will contain the views of a number of men in the state on the subject.

The next teachers examination will be held in Port Angeles (Court House) December 10, 11 and 12, 1914.

W. R. C. INSPECTOR HERE

Mrs. Heresford of Centralia, inspector for W. R. C., visited the local corps last Saturday, being received by about forty members and guests. She made a splendid address and gave the corps a good deal of encouragement, saying that after an extended trip she had found ours the best corps so far visited. A delightful lunch was served after inspection. There was no evening meeting, owing to the condition of Lincoln street. Mrs. Smith, Press. Cor.

Hon. Wilson R. Gay of Seattle, will deliver the address at the Elks Memorial Services Sunday, December 6th.

Construction Company has built the completed portion of the road and has been operating it, besides grading thirty-nine miles of the line between Port Angeles and Port Discovery, the present eastern terminus of the system.

"In Chicago Erickson completed all the negotiations for the financing of the system, the Milwaukee having accepted his work to date and entering into a contract with him for the completion of the eastern division to Port Discovery.

"I am, naturally, much gratified at the successful financing of the system to date," said Mr. Erickson. "The new line since last June has sent out more than 800 cars of cedar shingles, besides which we are handling about 325,000 feet of logs a day for the big mills at Port Angeles.

"Within a short time the twenty-five miles of completed road will be turned over to the Milwaukee system to be operated by officials of that company. It is probable that a new corporation will be later organized and possibly known as the Olympic Peninsula railway company, to handle the property for the Milwaukee."
