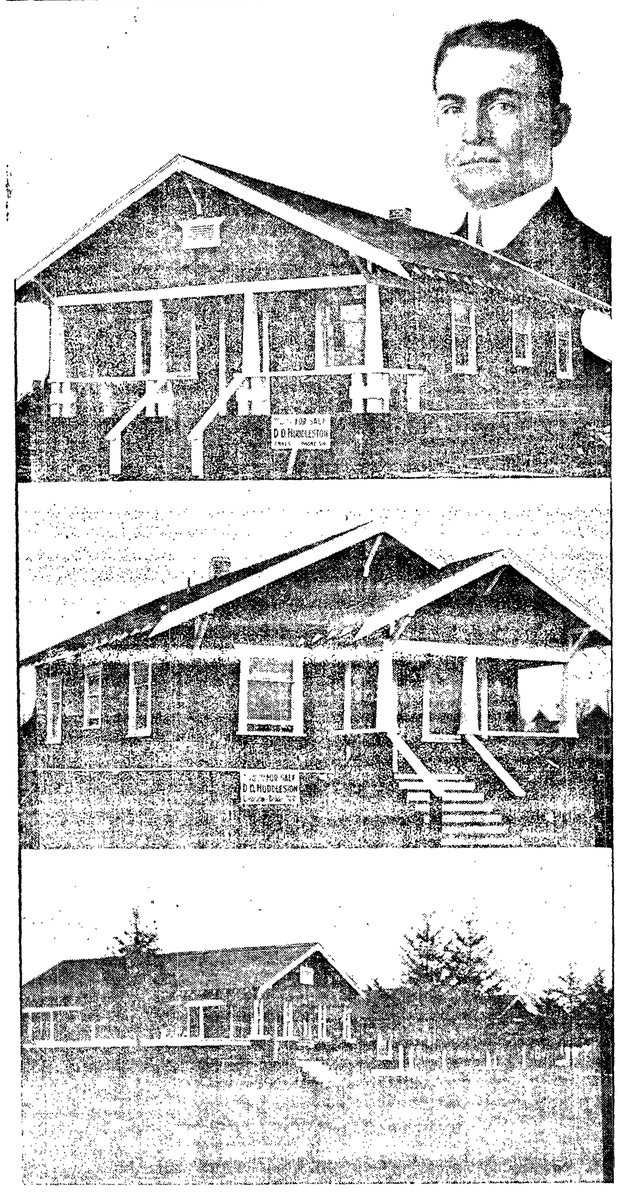
PORT ANGELES OLYMPIC LEADER

WEBSTER PUBLISHING CO.. PUBLISHERS. OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER.

VOL. 30. NO. 48. PORT ANGELES, CLALLAM COUNTY, WASHINGTON. FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1914. $1.00 PER YEAR



A picture of one of our progressive, hustling citizens, D. D. Huddleston, and five handsome, modern bungalows he has built for rent or sale during the past year. The two upper ones are located on Fifth street, between Laurel and Lincoln, and were rented as soon as completed. The others are located on Pine Hill. One thing Port Angeles needs is a few more men like Mr. Huddleston. There are at least a hundred families living in tents and every day new comers stop at this office making inquiries for houses to rent. The demand is not for high priced houses, but those that could be rented for from $10 to $20 a month.

FRONT EXTENDED TO COST $31,000

P. J. Woods Secures the Contract, Calling for a Pile Trestle 1,640 Feet Long.

Whether the festive cow will roam the streets after January 1 was not discussed at the Tuesday night council session, but there seems to be some doubt expressed as to whether the deliberations of the council at last week's session will be allowed to stand as seemingly then adopted. We should worry, however, it is certain that bossy will go shortly thereafter if not then.

The contract for improvement of Front street, Oak to Valley, and Valley and Cherry, Front to First was awarded to P. J. Woods at a lump sum of $31,000, figured on the unit basis, property owners of district to pay additional sum which the contract may figure out. The bid of Mr. Woods was the only one submitted and was for $31,596.00 based on the estimate or the city engineer, and more if the material exceeds this estimate. The engineer's total, however, figured out $31,000 and the bid was amended to come within the estimate. This improvement is to be a creosoted pile trestle, full width of street, with sidewalks, 1640 feet in length. Work is to commence March first.

Council ordered alley in rear of Albright property at Eighth and Valley opened.

City electrician advised council that connection of light line down alley to Fifth and Eunice would cost $125, that he had arranged to make connection from old line down Fourth street, placing pole at Finch's corner, and could not extend light to alley between Fifth and Sixth without considerable additional expense. No action.

City Attorney Smith reported to council that city had no power over franchise of Postal Telegraph Co. within city other than reasonable regulation; that said company operates by reason of a federal franchise. This brought the question of the Postal using the city poles and city electrician stated that there was no objection provided company complied with state law, that it would do away with a set of poles along the streets used where there now too many. Clerk was directed to notify Manager Graves to make application to council for just what poles, etc., his company desires to use.

Application from new grocer at Pringle place, Valley street, to lower crossing over creek to level of bank was denied, though in a way left open for further report.

Engineer Filion reported estimates of work done on various contracts as follows:

Dist. 11, (down town) all work done $106,449, bonds for $6,481.

Dist. 12, hill, bonds issued for $1512.50.

Dist. 21, Lincoln street, total $7,500, this estimate $4,255, bonds issued $3391.48.

The Western Union Telegraph Co., asked privilege of attaching fixtures to bents on Third street, thestle leading to head of bay. Referred to special committe for report next meeting.

Policies for $2000 on city hall and $1000 on light plant, renewals with bill of $84, read. No action.

Ordinance by Mr. Shields, approving assessment roll for district 16, C street was read twice and referred.

Ordinance authorizing issuance of bonds for payment of improvement of Third street north, and extended, and K street in amount of $11,600, was read and adopted.

Bill for raising city hall to new grade $232, was read and referred.

Peter McGoff, in answer to city's call for bids, offered $1.65 per cord for dry wood, left over from city light plant. Rejected. City will cut wood for own use at city hall.

City engineer asked two weeks further time in which to report plans and specifications for improvement of I street and ravine at that point. Granted and hearing postponed for two weeks. Only one protest was filed.

A new six foot sidewalk was ordered placed on north side of Second street between Laurel and Lincoln.

Matter of placing a few loads of gravel on hill and crossing at Vine and Front referred to street superintendent.

Mr. Dann of Angeles Steam Laundry wanted to know what was to be done when Peabody bridge was closed. This brought up question as to what is contemplated on hill improvement. Engineer stated that nothing could be done with First street hill in wet weather; that Peabody street First to Front would have to be planked, 20 feet in width would do. Upon motion of Mr. Dustman, this was ordered done under direction of engineer by street superintendent as soon as possible; general fund to pay.

City Attorney Smith wanted Peabody street bridge raised so as to eliminate any necessity of a cut at Fourth street. The established

WILL DRILL FOR OIL AT EARLES

Canadian Syndicate to Undertake Development of Country West of Port Angeles.

Drilling for oil upon the lands of the P. S. M. & T. Co. near Port Crescent will be begun shortly after the first of the new year, is the announcement made by the Kelly Company, a wealthy firm of oil prospectors who have operated in various fields along the coast and in Alaska.

That promising indications of the existence of oil are to be found along the beach west of Port Angeles has been known for some time, examinations having been made by the state geologists as well as by those in the employ of the Kelly company. Mr. Earles, however, has looked upon the matter as rather out of his line and it was not until J. W. Kelly of Victoria proposed to undertake the work of prospecting that operations were seriously considered.

The first well, having a 78-inch bore at the top, will be sunk three miles west of Earles, the present terminus of the railroad, 28 miles west of Port Angeles. Several other holes will be sunk in this vicinity the coming summer should the first not prove successful.

Commenting on the proposed agreement the Seattle Sun says:

"Negotiations for the beginning of gigantic oil operations on the Olympic peninsula were being completed today at the office of Kerr & McCord, attorneys in the Hogue building, in a conference between Michael Earles of Seattle and J. W. Kelly, representative of English capital.

With H. B. Thompson, Kelly registered this week at the New Washington Hotel from Vancouver, B. C. Thompson left the city, presumably for Victoria, this morning.

Although the plans have been kept strictly secret, it was admitted that Kerr & McCord this morning drew up extensive leases on the lands held by Earles in the vicinity of Port Crescent and Port Angeles.

None of the parties would say the extent of their operations, other than to admit that their search for oil would be exhaustive and that their drillings would be on a large scale. It was understood that they were willing to go down 5,000 feet if necessary. Earles holds 40,000 acres in the district. At least $50,000 will be spent in immediate explorations.

Every effort is being made to keep the facts connected with the deal quiet, in order that there may be no hitch in getting the locations desired.

"Our effort to locate oil in paying quantities on the Olympic peninsula is an entirely private enterprise, and

NEW GROCERY STORE FEBRUARY FIRST

E. E. Seevers, who sold out his Cash Grocery to J. G. Jeffrey recently, has decided to go into the grocery business again the first of the year. Mr. Norman will be his partner, the firm name being The Seevers-Norman Cash Grocery Co. They have taken a three years lease of the store room in the I. O. O. F. building on First street. It will be fitted up especially for them, giving them the most modern, well equipped grocery house in town. Their business will be conducted on a strictly cash basis with profits as small as will be consistent with good business principles.

During Mr. Seevers long business career in Angeles, he has made for himself an enviable reputation for honesty and uprightness and he will be bound to make a success of this new venture. Mr. Norman is highly spoken of by those who know him well and he and Mr. Seevers together will make a strong team. They expect to be ready for business by February first.

DR. HART TO BE HERE

Dr. Joseph K. Hart of the State University, Seattle, will address the Parent-Teacher's Association at a meeting to be held in the H. S. Auditorium either next Thursday or Friday evening. Definite information as to the date will be sent out thru the school children next week. It is to be hoped all patrons of the school will attend this meeting and show their interest in school affairs. Dr. Hart has spoken to Angeles audiences before and needs no recommendation. This meeting will take the place of the regular meeting on Monday evening. Everybody invited.

WHY NOT HAVE ONE?

The Pioneer Electric Company have a beautiful electric lighted Christmas tree in their window this week which is attracting a great deal of attention and admiration. These lights do away with all danger of a fire from troublesome candles and add greatly to the beauty of the tree. Take the children down to see it.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will hold special services next Sunday at 6:30 p. m. Mr. Louis Isabel will lead the meeting and a violin solo will be rendered by Geo. Parks.

UNUSUALLY GORGEOUS

The Holiday decorations at the Kirschberg Store promise to be something unusually gorgeous and attractive. Evergreen, silver and gold tinsel, poinsettas, holly and Christmas bells, will all fill a place in the artistic decorating scheme carried out by their professional decorator.

SANTA CLAUS SHOP ALL READY FOR YOU

The Santa Claus Shop at the Leader Department store is now ready for your inspection and you can have a bushel of fun bringing the kiddies down to choose what they want on the Christmas tree. There are many amusing novelties in toys besides the regular staple articles. There is a larger assortment and more beautiful dolls than ever before. Come early and pick out yours while you can have first choice. For other Christmas suggestions read the Leader Department Store advertisement in this issue, and then make them a call.

NEW OFFICERS FOR K. OF P.

The Knights of Phythias held a very interesting meeting last Wednesday evening and a good sized attendance saw the election of new officers. A committee of three were appointed to arrange for the public installation in January. The officers elected are as follows: H. D. Cox, C. C.; R. I. Paulhamus, V. C.; E. C. Woods, Prelate; E. R. Gherke, Master of Work; S. E. Stakemiller, Master of Finance; Mayor Horace White, Master of X-Checker; Ed. Shields, Keeper of Records and Seals; C. L. Babcock, John D. Hickok and Herbert Woods, Trustees; Al. Willson, Inner Guard; Charles Schaible, Outer Guard.

SWEEPING PRICE REDUCTION

Realizing that money is not as plentiful this year as usual, and that less will be spent for Holiday gifts on account of the war, we have decided to reduce prices on our entire stock, the largest and most varied of its kind in Clallam County. On the same quality of goods we are glad to compete with the prices of Seattle houses or catalogue prices. Come in and talk it over with us and get our price list. We carry a splendid assortment of jewelry of all kinds, the handsomest stock of hand painted China ever brot to the city. Schaible & Hutchinson.

HARRY STILES IN BUSINESS

Harry Stiles has bought out the Peoples Fish Market on the wharf, owned and run for a number of years by E. A. Prickett, who was elected county assessor at the recent election. Harry is well known in Port Angeles as he resided here for a number of years and is a graduate of our high school. He was afterwards associated with his father in the grocery business and also took a course at the business college in Seattle. He is a young man of excellent habits and good business ability and we wish him every success.

THE PENNANT

The date of the High School play having been changed to December, 18th, the opening reservation of seats has also been advanced—they may be had at Mathewson's on and after the 14th.

Just a little too late for the Thanksgiving turkey but in plenty of time to hang up her stocking for Christmas, arrived a little baby girl at the Jessen home, Tuesday, December 1st.

Guy Byington of Seattle is to be the new manager of the Bee, Dr. Davis continues as editor and knocker.

LIVE SUBJECTS IN VIEW

Every Member Should Participate in Next Monday's Session of Commercial Club.

There are abundant indications that the regular monthly meeting of the Port Angeles Commercial Club, to be held next Monday evening, December 7, will be an interesting and memorable one. It is expected that a delegation from the western part of the county will be in attendance, as well as some of the farmers of the Port Angeles district who have become members of the Club. Improvement of the mail service for the west side and a free rural route for Eden Valley, Elwha and Indian Creek are two of the projects which the out-of-town members hope to work out successfully through the Club, and both projects are now well in hand. There will be some important and interesting reports of officers and committees, two or three of the latter having had several meetings in the last two weeks for the working out and full consideration of important subjects looking toward immediate further progress and development of the city and county. This will include some further light on the Port Commission project, as well as interesting matter relative to Port Angeles transportation facilities.

Both the Legislative committee and the House and Property committee have been considering important progressive subjects and it is not unlikely that both will have propositions worth while to submit to the meeting for discussion and action.

The outlook suggests so many live subjects in view for the meeting that every active member of the Club should find it to his advantage to be present and participate.

At this meeting President Craig will announce the full personnel of all standing committes, those having been but partly appointed upon the adoption of the new by-laws.

THE ODDFELLOWS

Fifteen new recruits took the first degree or Degree of Friendship in the Oddfellows organization Monday night. A well filled house was present at the Three-Link dancing Club Wednesday night, and still there's more to follow. The Oddfellows will give a big invitation dance at the lower hall December 18, the last of its kind for some time, as the entire lower floor has been leased to a prominent local merchant who will open therein a general merchandise store.

DRILLING RESUMED AT FORKS

M. E. Howard of Forks spent several days in the city this week having some dental work done, returning home on Tuesday. Mr. Howard says that the drillers of the Washington Oil Company returned to Forks on Saturday and resumed drilling in the Forks well on Monday. The Forks well is down 2,080 feet, 200 feet deeper than the Crescent well at Tenino, and it is claimed that the drill is now penetrating the capping of the oil-bearing sands.

Dr. J. McCarthy returned on Tuesday from Olympia and Tenino, where he spent several days looking over the oil situation. He came away fully convinced that oil was really struck in the Crescent well, and he personally dipped out a small bottlefull of it himself and bore it away as a souvenir.

The public is cordially invited to attend the Elks Memorial service to be held in the opera house, Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Hon. Wilson R. Gay will make the memorial address.

FINANCIAL OUTLOOK GOOD

Here is a gem on the financial outlook from Mr. R. W. Green, cashier of the King County State Bank. Mr. Green has been asked his opinion of the oft repeated warning that hard times would be experienced this winter on account of war, politics and other vital questions.

"People have been, and are, looking for very hard times," said Mr. Green, "but it is the things we look for that seldom happen." Mr. Green explained that it is the unlooked-for storm that proves disastrous, while the forecasted gale finds everything anchored in such a way that the furor passes without damage.

"It is the unforseen, the unexpected, that causes the crashes in the business world," continued Mr.Green. "During the past month, we, as a nation, were safe because many people feared we were not safe. And it has been that feeling and subsequent preparation that insured our passing the expected crisis. You can't hit a fellow very hard when he is on his guard. And, as it has been proven in the tenseness just passed thru, not many people will try it."

Though one million cheerful little stickers have been sent broadcast over the state during the past week, thru women's clubs, schools, business houses and local anti-tuberculosis leagues, yet a few localities are not represented. It is the earnest desire of the Washington Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis to put the seals within easy reach of every one in Washington who wishes to buy them. No locality is to small to take part. Every one can help. Each community should have a supply. Order now. The sale begins Nov. 30th, closing on Christmas eve.

A WORD FOR CHEER

The second most deadly instrument of destruction is the Krupp 42-centimeter gun. The first is the human tongue. A little phrase, a word dropped here and another there, and the consequences for evil are numerous and far reaching. One word may make or mar a man's most promising opportunity; one sentence counteract an oration. It's as easy to do as much good, with a good word dropped here and there. All that is needed to prompt the good word and repress the evil is faith, "the foundation of success; faith in yourself, your fellowman, and your community." We may be stimulated to the right expression by a little observation. Look about you. Who are the successful men, worth emulating? They are the hopeful in spirit and the persistent in effort and the charitable in speech. They are the men who note the good points of their competitors.

The order has gone into the United States navy instructing sailors not to sing "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" because the allies have adopted it as a marching song. The secretary of the navy has some very excellent ideas and this may be one of them—one whose goodness fails to discover itself to the obtuse paragrapher. This song was written in New York. An American is said to have been its author. It was sung in the United States before England adopted it. The English soldier also has adopted other spirited American songs—"John Brown's Body" and "There'll Be a Hot Time In the Old Town Tonight." Shall we quit singing "America" and "Star Spangled Banner?" Both of these tunes came from England. And back of that the tune to which we sing "America" came from Germany.

THE EDITOR'S CHRISTMAS

Fifty-two weeks in the year the editor of a newspaper is a machine, grinding out news for his readers. He has no regular working hours.

News is news and his standard is that the news belongs to his patrons. He works when there is work to be done, which means that he works all the time. His mission in life is to boost along his fellow man and business in general of his home and nearby towns. This he does conscientiously and to the best of his ability sticking to it from morning until night every day in the week and fifty-two weeks in the year.

The great majority of the editor's subscriptions, too, expire about this time of the year, either in December or the first of January. He looks forward to this season as his harvest—the time when he will be rewarded for his year's labor.

If you, dear reader, are one whose subscription has expired or is about to expire, send us your renewal, now. It is due us; we have earned it, and you will feel all the better for starting out on a new year with your paper paid ahead.

KANSAS AND PROHIBITION

In the recent campaign this paper received hundreds of letters from its readers from Virginia to Oregon and Washington, asking the Weekly Star for information as to the "failure" of prohibition in Kansas. The saloon interests had flooded every state, especially where prohibition was the issue, with literature to prove that Kansas was in a deplorable condition as a result of prohibition.

The answer to the whiskey ring is to be found in the election returns from Kansas. The saloon interests made a hard fight in Kansas under conditions that were ideal for their purpose, for resubmission of the prohibitory law.

There were six candidates for governor on the Kansas ballot. Every candidate except the candidate of the resubmissionists was pledged to prohibition. Other issues divided the followers of all the "dry" candidates, but the resubmissionists were united upon their candidate. The names of the candidates were on the new Massachusetts ballot, so that no party ticket could hide the issue from the view of any voter in the state who desired to vote for a return to the open saloon. The issue was clearly understood by every citizen of Kansas.

Nearly six hundred thousand votes were polled in the state. It was the biggest vote ever polled, and the most representative. If ever the resubmissionists hoped for a showing against prohibition in that state, they had their chance this year.

The result was that out of the six hundred thousand votes polled, the resubmission candidate received about fifty thousand. One citizen in every twelve voted for resubmission in Kansas.

The statement was made by the Weekly Star during the campaign, in answer to many of the letters received, that not more than one voter in every seven in Kansas favored a return to the saloon. Even this paper underestimated the strength of prohibition in Kansas.

Kansas has made a thorough test of prohibition. It has won the fight against the whiskey ring, and it is so well pleased with the result that nothing more will be heard of resubmission in that state. That should be a sufficient answer for every intelligent citizen in the country anywhere, to the slanders of the saloon keepers against Kansas.—The Star.

CARL LAURENS HAS THANKSGIVING PARTY

Little Folks Costume as Puritans and Hobnob with Black Cats. Guests Departed Much Pleased.

The little folks in the neighborhood were very pleasantly entertained on Wednesday evening, November 25th, by Carl Laurens. It was a Thanksgiving party and the guests were requested to dress in Puritan costume. A large Jack o' Lantern showed the way to the front door. The early part of the evening was spent in playing games and piecing a cat puzzle. Prizes were awarded to Sarah Richards and Frances Laurens for finishing their puzzles in the shortest time. The guests were then seated at the table which was very prettily decorated. In the center of the table was a large pumpkin dressed in green with ribbons of green and gold draped to the corners of the table. The favors were black cats filled with candy and peanuts. A dainty luncheon of cake and chocolate was served. The remainder of the evening was spent in playing games and singingschool At eleven o'clock the guests departed, thanking their little host for the very pleasant evening and wishing they might spend next Thanksgiving eve in a like manner. Those present were: Sarah, Hazel and Mary Richards, Lucy Wooding, Frances Laurens, Mrs. Richards, Mrs. C A. Laurens and Miss Minna Laurens.

Mrs. Wooding's sisters, Mrs. McDougall and Mrs. Ware were up from Sequim last Friday to spend the day. Mrs. Heuhslein and Miss Helen Laurens went to Angeles Thursday afternoon to spend a couple of days.

James Wooding is feeling very proud these days. He shot a large lynx Sunday morning, the fur of which is very beautiful.

Mr. Paul Thorpe went to Seattle last week to spend Thanksgiving, returning the first of the week

THE COUNTY SCHOOLS

Teachers and Eighth grade pupils will please take notice that according to a letter from the state department: Each pupil in the Eighth grade examination for a state diploma is required to read only one Reading Circle book. Those taking Manual Training should read Carpenter's "How the World is Clothed." Those writing on Domestic Science, Carpenter's "How the World is Fed." A review of the whole book will not be required as a part of the written test, but two questions from each book will be asked in the subjects, Domestic Science and Manual Training.

The next Teacher's Examination will be given at Port Angeles, December 10, 11 and 12.

The next eighth grade examination will occur January 21 and 22, 1915.

A petition has been received praying for the consolidation of districts No. 32, 11 and 26. A meeting will be held in Blyn hall Saturday, December19th, for the purpose of a hearing on the petition.

There are a few sets of reference books in the Circulating Library which might as well be used by the teachers and pupils of the county. I would suggest that you send for one of these sets and keep same in your school for a few months. It will be worth your time and trouble. The following sets are available: The New Student's Reference Work, 4 vol.; Stoddard's Lecture and Stoddard Library; The new Practical Reference Library, 6 vol.; The Book of Knowledge, 20 volumes; The Volume Library; Puget Sound and Western Washington; Harvard Classics, 50 volumes.

A teacher has sent the following questions to the office. Perhaps your pupils can look up the answers and send list to county superintendent:

Who are the members of President Wilson's cabinet?

Who is Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court?

Who are the United States Senators from Washington? The Congressmen?

The president of the University of Washington? The president of State College, Pullman? The president of each of the State Normal Schools?

CLUB NEWS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Women's Auxiliary to the Commercial Club will hold its regular monthly meeting in the Commercial Club room next Tuesday afternoon, December 8. As this is the last meeting before the Holidays all members are urged to attend and help plan for the charitable work this club does each year. Anyone knowing of needy families are asked to report their names at this meeting. The ladies also wish to plan for some social event to hold during the Holiday season so everyone come out and show your interest. New comers in the city are particularly invited to join this organization, which has for its object the civic, moral and educational improvement of Port Angeles. Dues are ten cents a month and all are welcome.

Friday, November 27th, the W. L. C. was entertained by Mrs. Gherke. In response to roll call the members cited things for which they had to be thankful and there seemed to be no limit to their blessings, when they counted them o'er and o'er. An interesting program was given, and Mrs. Bishop was elected to membership.

Mrs. Maurice Fisher was hostess to the Thursday Auction Bridge Club this week, a very pleasant afternoon being enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mack Clark entertain the Evening Auction Bridge Club at their home this evening.

Mrs. A. A. Smith will be hostess to the Silent Thimble Club next Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Julius Kirschberg was hostess to the Fortnight Card Club Tuesday evening.

The P. A. Reading Club meet this afternoon with Mrs. Thos. Geisness.

SHE is telling HIM about Jensen's nice line of Shoes, House Slippers, Moccasins, and Fancy Evening Slippers in white, blue, pink and black satin. They make fine Christmas gifts.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The first basketball games of the season were enjoyed by a large audience, Wednesday evening at A. A. A. Hall. The game was called promptly at 7:30. The girls played the first half. A's winning from the B's with a score of 12 to 9. This half was immediately followed by the 1st half of the boy's. Here good, quick work was shown, bringing the score 13 to 0, in favor of the A's.

The girls were now ready to complete their game. The last part of the game was tense and exciting, and was completed with a score of 15 to 13 in favor of the A's. The last half of the boys' game was one of the best yet seen in the interclass games. Here, splendid work was shown, especially by Dodge and Nelson. When time was called, A's scored 19 to 0 against the B's. The line up of the teams are as follows:

Girls—A, Margaret Porter, Center; Irene Best, Mary Brown, Forwards; Nora Donahue, Mary Sutherland, Guards. B, Abbie MacKechnie, Center; Marcella Sweitzer, Mildred Doran, Forwards; Leslie Jackson, Mamie Thompson, Guards.

Friday, December 11th, Sequim High School will play a double header here with our home teams, at A. A. A. Hall. Admission 25c. Everybody turn out and help your home High School.

There was a meeting of the H. S. Athletic Association Thursday and Mr. Failor submitted the treasurer's report for acceptance. Harold Dodge was elected assistant manager of the Basketball team for this season.

ABOUT THE COUNTY

MT. PLEASANT.

Mr. and Mrs. Orin Babcock and daughter Jessie visited from Friday until Sunday at the home of Milford Eacrett.

A Thanksgiving dance was held at the Krajewski home Thursday evening at which a royal good time was had by all present. A bountiful feast was served at midnight to which everyone did ample justice. Just before supper was served, Burrell Vail took several flash light pictures of the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall and daughter Eleanor went to Angeles Thursday morning and visited with relatives until Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Segrist are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy at their home Sunday morning.

Mr. Wm. Watts and little daughter who were visiting relatives in town returned home Wednesday.

Mrs. Oscar Lee visited in Angeles Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Rex visited at the home of Mrs. Stevens Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. James Crandall who was visiting at the home of Milford Eacrett a few days, returned to town Thursday.

Mrs. Dietsch went to Angeles on Monday and will visit with her daughters.

Miss Margie Draper and Sam Draper were visitors at the home ranch returning to town Sunday.

Master Frank Stevens, who was at home for Thanksgiving, returned to Angeles Sunday.

BLUE MOUNTAIN

Mr. and Mrs. C. Lewis returned from Elwha the first of last week with Goldie MacNamara while Charlie went to Forks. He returned with a span of fine young colts.

George King has also come to the front with a fine big team, purchased last week.

Miss Jeannette Broughton came from Seattle, where she is attending high school, to spend Thanksgiving holidays with her parents. Dorothy Broughton accompanied her from Angeles for the day at home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Lewis spent their Thanksgiving day with the Broughton family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Joselyn spent Wednesday and Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Maybee.

The King family ate turkey with Mr. John Winters.

Miss Jackson and brother passed their vacation in town.

Bertie Stilwell spent Thanksgiving with Grace Elves in Angeles.

Alfred Stevenson and Harold Littlefield returned Wednesday evening after one week in the mountains. They had one deer to divide between them.

Warren Bowers and friend were out for a hunt last week.

Mrs. Bunnell, Lucilla and little Gladys paid a short visit to the Broughton family last week, on her way to and from Angeles, where she spent a week with Harry and wife and Lucile and husband.

Someone shot and killed Nat Broughton's hunting dog. It was quite a loss as she promised to a valuable dog.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

Dr. Harrison had friends from Seattle to assist them in giving thanks. Doubtless there are many more home comings and out goings of the festal day not reported.

Mrs. Morton was the recipient of a goodly amount of various articles which assisted her very much in hava real Thanksgiving day, and wishes to thank all who in any ministered to her needs. If there is more joy in giving than in receiving there certainly were many happy people in Angeles on Thanksgiving day.

Many cases of illness resulting from colds are reported but none serious.

Glenn Fleming spent part of his vecation fishing, one day he caught about twenty-four pounds of trout and salmon and kindly treated his friends.

Thanksgiving day is now but a memory of the past that to some was a day of family reunions and gladness while to others it brought sad memories of past happy days, when other friends and children now far away were with them, but such is life and each year we may expect changes.

The Misses Ester went to Sequim and gave thanks with their old time friend Mrs. Geo. O'Brien.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wright went to Port Townsend Wednesday to visit and eat Thanksgiving dinner with Mrs. Wright's grandmother and aunt. They remained several days.

O. V. Burgmans entertained Mr. and Mrs. Mando and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Harding at a seven o'clock Thanksgiving dinner.

The Harding, Hall and Fleming families had a social Thanksgiving dinner at the home of Ernest Harding and had as guests of honor Mr. Louie Larson of the Snohomish and Mr. Geo. Barrell of the Minnesota. After dinner was over delightful music was given by the "Sailor boys" singing, and Mrs. Hattie Harding on the piano, quite a treat for lovers of music.

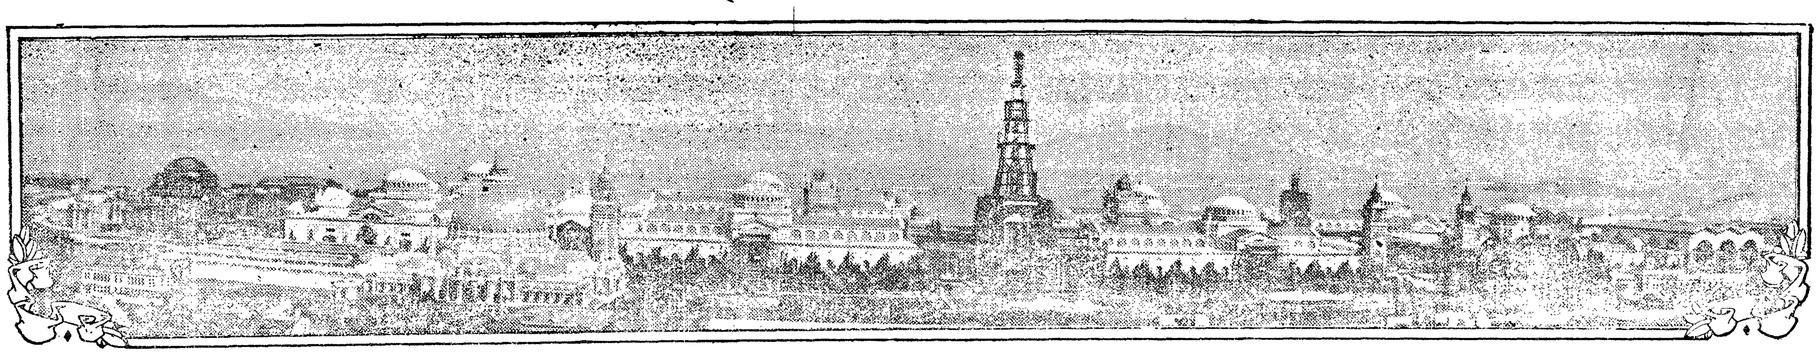
MILLIONS OF VISITORS TO COME TO THE WEST IN 1915



VAST PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION LODESTONE TO MULTITUDES TO "SEE AMERICA FIRST"—MAGNIFICENT EXHIBIT PALACES ON SHORES OF SAN FRANCISCO BAY.

THE above panorama of the grounds of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, taken six months before the opening days, is an answer to the question, "Will the war cause a postponement of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition?" It will not.

The photograph shows only a part of the entire Exposition area of 635 acres, but it shows that the Exposition was 90 per cent completed the day the European conflict started. The war will not even harm the Exposition.

Any loss in exhibits is made up in the requests for additional space from Japan, the orient, South America and nonwarring nations of Europe. There has been not a single withdrawal by any nation because of the war, and assurances have been received from two of the belligerent countries that Exposition participation will proceed. Loss in attendance from Europe will be offset by increased attendance from the United States, South America, Central America, the orient, Australia, New Zealand and the noncombatants in Europe who want to escape war's horror.

In the accompanying photograph, taken from a hilltop 600 yards away, an impression of the size of the exhibit palaces of the "Walled City" is given. Of the eleven exhibit palaces ten are completed, and the Palace of Fine Arts, which is of steel and concrete and absolutely fireproof, will be ready before this story is published.

No better criterion of the progress of the Exposition may be had than the record of the paid admissions. The average is now more than 50,000 persons a month at 25 cents. The total admission receipts from Sept. 9, 1913, to Aug. 30, 1914, was $101,000.

The largest single day when there has been no special event on the grounds was a recent Sunday, when 8,250 persons paid at the gates. The largest attendance for a special event on the grounds was 18,000 paid admissions at the Ball of All Nations on May 2. The Exposition will open on Feb. 20 and close Dec. 4. 1915.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITOL

New Buildings Needed by the State Institutions to Keep Pace With Growth of State.

Olympia, Dec. 2.—In its budget for the twelve state institutions for the coming biennium the state board of control bases its maintenance estimates on a population of 6,740, the total number of state wards being sufficient to populate a good sized city.

In spite of the increasing numbers of state charges the requests of the board total $75,000 less than the amount actually appropriated by the last legislature.

The principal new buildings requested are for the institution for feeble minded near Medical Lake, the Northern hospital for insane at Sedro Woolley, the Monroe reformatory, the state school for the deaf and the blind at Vancouver and the new state school for girls at Grand Mound in Thurston county.

In the case of the institution for the feeble minded the present buildings are sufficient to accommodate barely one-half of the feeble minded of the state who should be in custody. Construction of new buildings for this institution, at a short distance from the present location, will enable the Eastern hospital for insane, already overcrowded, to take over some of the present buildings of the feeble minded institution.

New buildings are needed for the Northern hospital to relieve the congestion at the Western hospital for transferring patients. The board intends completing the Monroe reformatory with inmate labor.

The new school buildings requested for the schools for deaf and blind are needed to replace frame structures declared to be firetraps. In the case of the state school for girls the number awaiting admission already is in excess of the normal capacity of the buildings, which are to be occupied this month. The board of control insists that no buildings have been requested that are not needed for the proper care of the state's wards and while asking less than has been requested by previous boards, will contest any attempts to make wholesale reductions in their program.

Private employment agents have instituted suit in the federal court to test the constitutionality of Initiative Measure No. 8.

Combined resources of state banks total $133,429,331.70, more than $4,500,000 in excess of those shown a year ago, State Bank Examiner W. E. Hanson shows in a compilation of reports of the 267 operating banks and nine trust companies, made in response to the last call of the year. The call was dated October 31, at the period when banks normally have deposits reduced to a minimum, but average reserves of 26 per cent were shown, making an excellent showing.

That the foot and mouth disease has been completely eradicated by the effectual measures taken by the state department of agriculture to control the Spokane outbreak, is the belief announced by Dr. H. T. Graves, commissioner of agriculture. No further cases of the disease were reported from any section following the destruction of the infected Spokane herd and the department has now allowed quarantine to be lifted to the extent of allowing shipments of cattle into Washington from Oregon, Idaho and all but two counties of Montana.

Labor Commissioner E. W. Olson plans a conference of employers, employes and members of the legislature to discuss proposed legislation for a state managed system of employment bureaus, rendered necessary by the passage of Initiative Measure No. 8, legislating private employment agencies out of business. This measure became effective December 3.

In order that licenses may expire January 1, 1916, when the prohibition law goes into effect, municipalities may issue licenses for less than a year, the attorney general's office has ruled.

Two minimum wage conferences, the first to recommend a wage for hotel and restaurant workers and the second for office help, were held in Olympia this week under the jurisdiction of the industrial welfare commission.

In the interests of securing clearly understood legislation that will require a minimum of judicial interpretation, Attorney-General W. V. Tanner is offering to draft proposed bills for members-elect of the legislature.

BIG WAR LEVY IS ASKED

Amsterdam, Monday, Nov. 30.—A message from Brussels to the Handelsblad states that the German governor of the province of Brabant, in which Brussels is located, convoked a meeting of financiers and told them that Belgium must pay 35,000,000 francs ($7,000,000) monthly for the maintenance of German troops.

In addition to this sum, it is said Belgium must contribute a war levy of 375,000,000 francs ($75,000,000) as a penalty for violations of neutrality by Belgium and losses ensuing therefrom to Germany.

PACIFIC NORTHWEST NEWS

Agricultural Authorities United in Opinion That "High Wheat" Will Soon Be Thing of Past

The best information obtainable from military sources at Washington from experts who are closely following the situation is to the effect that the European war cannot last many more weeks. While none of the countries engaged in the conflict will admit that this is true, the United States military experts predict that the war will see its finish shortly after the first of the new year. It cannot, they say, continue much longer. The great loss of life coupled with the enormous expense, these military experts say, means only one thing and that is a short war. Because of this prediction the best-known agriculture authorities of the country are united in the opinion that the "high" wheat will soon be a thing of the past and that the farmer who is in the hog-raising business will make a most serious mistake from the standpoint of his financial profits if he does not push his business on a more extended scale than ever. It is undoubtedly true that many hog raisers, carried away by the high price of corn and wheat, have been sacrificing their stock, and selling instead of feeding their grain.

While this has probably been the best thing to do to date, from now on the reverse will be true and for that reason farmers are advised to push their grain for feeding purposes. At the present time cattle and sheep are very scarce and pork is really the cheapest meat obtainable. Even pork is high and packers say it will go still higher within the next month or two and will keep high for months to come. With the opening of the Panama Canal, packers will be able to ship considerable pork to the eastern market in refrigerator ships which will naturally make the demand still greater.

Considerable criticism has been aroused thruout the state over the refusal of E. P. Marsh, president of the State Federation of Labor, and Martin J. Flyzik, president of the district organization of the United Mine Workers, to accept the appointment to membership on the commission which is to work out a just first aid amendment to the workmen's compensation act. For men who occupy the position of leadership as they do their act is considered as very narrow and intolerant. They declare they stand unalterably by the terms of the recently defeated "first aid" measure No. 9 and cannot accept any compromise, because they believe that industry should stand all the cost of first aid compensation. Their conduct is also in the nature of an affront to Governor Lister, whose desire is to have an impartial commission formulate a first aid law that shall give justice to all. It is also widely believed that Marsh and Flyzik do not wish to serve because the other representative of labor on the commission, Editor J. W. Clark, of the Grays Harbor Post, is of a sane, conservative type, who sees questions from both sides and would be against any radical measures.

Dr. James R. Angell, of the University of Chicago, who was offered the presidency of the Washington State University, has declined the offer for the present, at least. The board of regents of the Washington institution have received a communication from Dr. Angell announcing that he is not a candidate for the office. He gave the regents the benefit of his experience in an extended criticism of the university, particularly with respect to its financial stringency. Members of the board say they believe Dr. Angell's decision is not final and that he may reconsider the offer at a later date.

How Washing Is Done at the Angeles Laundry by the lb. at 6c

Satisfactory service due to years of experience and skilled labor, not machinery

Just What It Includes—

Everything washable in household linens and wearing apparel except Shirts, Collars and Cuffs.

How We Iron Your Flat Work—

One reason why we can handle your family washing so cheaply and satisfactorily is because we have a modern flat work ironer. Sheets, pillow cases, counterpanes, towels, tablecloths, napkins, etc., with one passage under the softly padded rolls imparts that smooth, velvet-like finish so much admired, especially the table linen which is finished on both sides, making the figures stand out.

Wearing Apparel Not Ironed, But Ready to Wear—

Socks, stockings, cotton underwear and cotton flannel garments are dried in a Tumbler Dry-Room that makes them soft and fluffy that no amount of ironing could improve.

Dainty Undergarments and Fine Lingerie Properly Starched—

So that it is a pleasure for you to iron them a piece or two at a time at odd moments.

The Average Rough Dry washing will Run Between 70 and 90 Cents—

By sending your washing to us at once, you form an accurate idea as to the cost and the quality of the work and service.

we Have No Secret Processes and Nothing to Conceal—

You are invited to inspect our plant any time as it will be a pleasure to explain just how we handle your garments through the different departments. Your trip through a modern laundry we are sure would prove interesting and would make for us a regular customer.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Jailbird.

The period of restraint in durance vile suffered by one Thomas Barcus in consequence of conduct riotous, unseemly, and in general prejudiced to the public peace of the New Bedford waterfront at half-past four in the morning, proved in the upshot far more brief than had been fondly hoped, not only by his just judge, but, singularly enough, by the misdemeanant himself.

Taking everything gravely into consideration, including a person anything but prepossessing, the judge reckoned that, in default of a fine of one hundred dollars, a ten-day layup for repairs and repentance was not too much to mete out to the prisoner at the bar.

He was sentenced at 10 a. m. and it was little short of 10 p. m. when his post-prandial repose was disturbed by the rattle of a key in the lock of the door to his cell.

Sitting up, Mr. Barcus rubbed his eyes and combed his hair with his fingers.

"What did I tell you?" he observed resignedly. "It begins again already . . ."

Conducted with every evidence of disesteem on the part of his jailers to the office of the warden, he was acquainted with the fact that his fine had been paid by no one less than the judge himself: then present in portly and selicitous person.

"If only you had told me you were a friend of Mr. Digby's," the judge hastened to say as soon as the two were ensconsed in the privacy of the judicial limousine, "I would have known better how to guide myself in this unfortunate affair.

"And if you will be good enough to indicate how else I may serve you . . .?"

"Digby didn't offer any suggestions in his wire, I gather?"

"One moment: I have it here."

"Naturally I'd like a bath and a change of clothes," Barcus pursued while the judicial breast-pocket was being explored; "and I could do with transportation to New York by the first train out of this God-forsaken hole, and—"

"This is what Mr. Digby says," the judge interrupted, laboriously deciphering the message by the light of a match: "Please see to immediate release of one Thomas Barcus, probably in jail in your jurisdiction for rioting on waterfront this morning. Pay his fine and instruct him to report to me in New York at earliest feasible hour. Give him all the money he wants and look to me for remuneration—'"

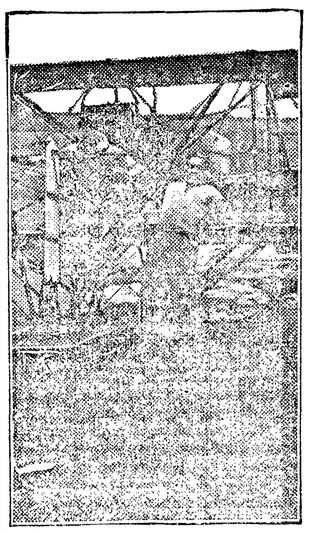
"Eh?" Barcus interrupted, sitting up smartly; "what's that last again?"

Patiently the judge repeated the sentence from the message.

"Thanks. Please don't read farther. You might come to something that would spoil it. It's almost too beautiful as it stands," Barcus observed. "Law owes me five thousand or so liquidated damages—but I'll be reasonable. Frisk this burg for a fifth of that sum before train time—and I promise to ask nothing more!"

His private comment was: "I've suspected that this was a fairy-tale all along. Now I know it is!"

And this phase of incredulity persisted in coloring the complexion of his mind until, the moment, some hours later, when the train connecting at Providence with the Midnight Express for New York pulled out of New Bedford bearing a transformed Barcus—almost impenetrably disguised in a bath, a shave and a haircut, an outfit of clothing orginally tailored for a gentleman of discriminating taste, but no whit less disguised in the sense of affluence that goes with the possession of one thousand dollars in cash.



The Hydroaeroplane Is Forced to Land.

Not until a sound night's sleep had topped off the beginning of his rest in jail did Barcus come down to earth.

He demonstrated his return to common sense by making a round breakfast in Grand Central station before looking up the residence of Digby in the telephone directory.

The information he gathered from the voice that answered the name of Mr. Digby over the telephone shook only momentarily Barcus' innate conviction that intimate acquaintance with battle, murder and sudden death was the inevitable reward of association with this friend of his heart.

"Alan being married to Rose Trine in Jersey City at this very minute!" he breathed skeptically as he emerged from the booth memorizing the address of the alleged officiating clergyman. "I don't believe it; it's too sudden."

Forthwith he engaged a taxicab to convey him to Jersey City, at top speed, for an exorbitant reward.

And when, from the forward deck of a ferryboat, he beheld a dense volume of smoke advertising a conflagration on the Jersey shore, not far from the waterfront, he shook a moodily sagacious head.

"If Alan isn't mixed up in that, somehow," he declared, "he's missing a bet for once—and I'm a sorry failure as a prophet of woe and disaster!"

There was as much intuitive apprehension as humor responsible for this remark; witness the fact that, on landing, he risked the delay required to turn aside and have a look at the fire.

It proved to be situated in the heart of a squalid slum—a wretched tenement of the poorest class, whose roof had already fallen in and whose walls were momentarily threatening to go by the time Barcus arrived on the scene.

At a considerable distance from him a small disturbance had broken out—a clamor of protesting voices lifting about the rumor of the mob—as a number of men, case-hardened roughs one and all, began to force their way in a V-shaped wedge through the throng, making toward its very heart, the point on the fire-lines nearest the burning building.

What this meant, Mr. Barcus had not the slightest idea. But his attention was first distracted by the maneuver, then fixed by the face of a man who was following in the hollow of the V—an evil white face that seemed somewhat vaguely familiar, somehow reminiscent of something strange that had happened in the history of Mr. Barcus.

At the same time, at the point where the V had paused, a wild uproar lifted up and, coincidentally, a wilder confusion became noticeable. A cry was audible—"Firebug! Lynch him! Lynch him! Lynch the firebug!"—and at this the mob turned as one man and streamed away in pursuit of an invisible quarry, who chose to attempt his escape by a route directly opposite to that which would have led him within view of Mr. Barcus.

Startled, and of a sudden persuaded that there might have been more in his "hunch" than was sanely to be credited, Barcus started up and was on the point of stepping out of his cab, if with a rather aimless purpose, when he was stayed by sight of that evil white face returning the way it had come—still in the hollow of the flying V, which now made faster progress, thanks to the disorganization of the mob by the chase of the alleged incendiary.

And now, Barcus saw, the man of the white face was not alone. There was someone with him—someone whose head was bent and face concealed, but who seemed to be feminine.

And so, Barcus argued, why might it not be Rose Trine, suffering new persecution at the hands of her unnatural father's creatures?

He was too far away to make sure and attempt any interference; but he pointed White Face out to his chauffeur as the V reached a touring car on the edge of the mob and the woman was lifted in (unresisting and apparently in a dead faint), and when the touring car swung round and picked up its heels, the taxicab of Mr. Barcus trailed it as unostentatiously as if it was a pertinacious shadow.

Ten minutes later, from the rear deck of a ferryboat in midstream—a boat bearing back to New York not only the touring car of White Face, but the cab of Mr. Barcus—the latter gentleman formed one of a small but interested audience witnessing an incident of uncommon character.

He saw a young man, hatless, coatless, almost shirtless, tear down to the edge of one of the Jersey wharves, his heels snapped at by a ravening rabble, jump aboard a square-rigged vessel which lay moored there, and execute a maneuver of despair by climbing up the rigging in a hopeless attempt to escape his persecutors. They were too many for him, and what was worse they were headed by a squad of police apparently as grimly bent on compassing the destruction of their quarry as was the mob.

And they swarmed up the rigging after him without a moment's hesitation.

Hotly pressed, the fugitive climbed higher and still higher, until at length he gained the topmost yard; with three policemen not half a dozen feet below him and popping away for dear life, if happily with the notoriously poor marksmanship of policemen generally.

None the less, there was no telling when some accident might wing a bullet into the young man; and it was evident that he so decided.

For, inching out to the end of the yard, he waved his hand toward his persecutors with a gesture of light-hearted derision that unmistakably identified him as Alan Law to Mr. Barcus, and forthwith dropped to the water, feet foremost.

Alan later took the water neatly, came up uninjured and clearheaded, and without an instant's hesitation struck away toward the middle of the Hudson.

As this happened the police ran to the stern of the square-rigger, unmoored a dory that was riding there, and threw themselves into it.

During the (to Barcus, at least) breathless suspense of that chase, the ferryboat drew stolidly farther and still farther away from the scene. Barcus could not tell whether, as it seemed, the police-laden dory was really overhauling Alan, or whether the illusion of perspective deceived him.

Shook Out a Trey of Hearts.

At all events, it seemed a frightfully near thing when the interruption befell which alone could have saved Alan.

Out of the very sky dropped a hydroaeroplane, cutting the water with a long, graceful curve that brought it, almost at a standstill, directly to the head of the swimmer, and at the same time forced the police boat to sheer widely off in order to escape collision.

Immediately the swimmer caught the pontoon of the hydroaeroplane, pulled himself up out of the water, and clambered to the seat beside the aviator.

Before he was fairly seated the plane was swinging back into its fastest pace.

With the ease of a wild goose it left the water, mounted the long grade of an air lane, described a wide circle above the bluffs of Weehawken, and swept away southward.

In that quarter it was presently lost to the sight of Mr. Barcus, engulfed in light folds of haze that were creeping in from seawards to dim and tarnish the pristine brilliance of that day.

CHAPTER XXX.

Birdman.

About eight o'clock in the evening of the same day a motorcar deposited at the Hotel Monolith a gentleman whose weather-beaten and oil-stained motoring-cap and duster covered little clothing more than shirt and trousers and assorted oddly in the eyes of the desk-clerk with the rather meticulously turned-out guest known to him as Mr. Arthur Lawrence and to the management of the hotel as Mr. Alan Law incognito.

Eventually persuaded, the clerk yielded up the key to Mr. Lawrence's suite of rooms, together with two notes superscribed with the same nom de guerre.

Alan's impatience was so great that he could hardly wait to examine these communications until he was quit of the public eye.

The first proved to be a characteristic communication:

"Dear Ulysses—Thanks for the jail delivery. I got in this morning just in time to motor over to Jersey in hopes of seeing your finish as a bachelor; instead, I was favored by being made an involuntary witness to your spectacular ascent, following your almost equally spectacular high-dive.

"But to business: my time is limited; in half an hour more I am to double in black-face for the purposes of the author of this melodramatic farce which you, no doubt, call the history of your grande passion.

"I mean to say—well, several things, to-wit: When I saw you snatched out of the North river I was engaged in trailing a pale-faced villain in a motorcar concerning whom you probably know far more than I; he on his part was busy being a bold, bad kidnaper; Rose was in his power, as we say in such cases. His intentions, however, were nothing more blameworthy than to return her to the arms of her doting parent. I know, because I sleuthed after 'em, even to the house of Seneca Trine. Later I sleuthed some more, following a furtive young man from the house of Trine to the office of the general manager of the New York Central, where he made arrangements for a special to convey the said Trine and retinue to Chicago and points West. It leaves at three this afternoon. I was unable to ascertain whether or not Rose is to participate in this hegira, but I know I shall. On the off-chance of being useful, I have bribed the train crew to let me impersonate the porter. So, should you be moved to follow and succeed in catching up with us, and observe anybody who looks rather off-color in the party—don't shoot: the said party will be me.

"Yours for the quiet life,

"TOM BARCUS."

The second note yielded a communication written on notepaper of the simplest elegance in a woman's hand—a hurried scrawl:

"They are taking me West by special train—I don't know where or why. A servant has promised to see that this reaches you. Save me!"

THE TREY O' HEARTS

Over this Alan wrinkled an incredulous nose. The hand was the hand of Rose, but the phraseology was not in her spirit. He examined it more closely and thought to detect beneath its semblance of haste a deliberate and carefully guided pen. He picked up the envelope to compare the handwriting of the address with that of the enclosure—and shook out a trey of hearts.

This last was covered, as to its face, with a plainly-written message.

"With the compliments of Seneca Trine to Alan Law. We are due in Chicago at eleven tomorrow morning and leave immediately for the Pacific coast via Santa Fe route."

Comparison between this and the message purporting to be from Rose distilled the conviction that the same hand was responsible for both.

Alan shrugged. So he was to be lured away from New York and Rose by this transparent trick, was he? No fear!

He glanced at his watch, finding the hour far too early to attempt what he had in mind.

With plenty of time on his hands, he gave the matter serious consideration and concluded to take no chances: it was just possible that Trine had taken Rose with him on his western trip, after all. In such case the only possible way of overtaking the special would be by air line.

Promptly Alan called up the aviation fields at Hempstead Plains and got into communication with a gentleman answering to the surname of Coast: the same birdman who had come to Alan's rescue with his hydro-aeroplane.

Their arrangements were quickly consummated, Coast agreeing to wait for Alan with his biplane in Van Cortlandt park from midnight till daybreak, prepared if need be to undertake a transcontinental flight.

Thereafter Mr. Law proceeded to rehabilitate himself in decent clothing and his own esteem; after bathing, he dined alone in his rooms, from a tray; after dining he slept soundly for three hours—and may be thought to have earned at least that much rest through having been for four hours a passenger in a hydroaeroplane lost in fogs that wrapped Long Island and all the adjacent territory in an impenetrable shroud.

Nor had this been all. Leaving aside all that had led up to Alan's rescue by Coast: the forced landing of the hydro-aeroplane for lack of fuel had taken place on the south shore of the Great South bay; a search of hours had followed before a boat was found to convey Alan and the aviator to the mainland; and a motor run of several hours had followed that, conveying Coast to his Hempstead hangars and Alan on to his hotel in New York.

Another man would have needed twelve hours in bed at the least to compensate for such a day: Mr. Law awakened in a lamb-like temper when called at eleven-thirty.

At midnight he committed an act of burglary, calmly and with determination breaking his way into the house of Seneca Trine through the area windows and basement.

In this nefarious business nothing hindered and none opposed him. But for a single lighted window in the upper tier (but not, he noted, the window to Rose's bedchamber) and one or two lights which he found burning dim in the kitchen offices and other servants' quarters on the lower floor he would have thought the house empty. The silence of an abandoned place informed it all—below the upper story. But he was not to be satisfied with such negative evidence: he explored the dwelling minutely, room by room, story by story, passing with little interest through apartments by every sign dedicated to the tendency of his mortal enemy, intent on one object only—to find Rose Trine, that one woman whom he loved, or else make sure she was not there.

He negotiated that last flight of steps which led to the topmost floor with extraordinary stealth, advised thereto by a sound, or rather a series of sustained sounds, which had theretofore been inaudible to him. Possibly they had not till then existed; possibly the man servant whom he found snoring in a chair outside a closed door had not fallen asleep and begun to snore until the moment when Alan set foot upon the lower step of that final ascent.

Turning the head of the stairs, Alan paused for a little, speculatively intent on this man who must somehow be disposed of before he might solve the secret of that shut and guarded door.

Aside from actual violence no solution offered to the puzzle—and violence was abruptly forced upon him.

No sound warned him of the door that opened at his back as he stood watching the sleeping guard. A piercing shriek was the first intimation he received that his presence had been discovered. It served as well to move him instantly into action: a single glance overshoulder showed him the figure of a maid-servant in cap and gown, her mouth still wide and full of sound—and Alan fell upon the guard like a thunderbolt. The man had barely time to jump up and recognize the alarm: then a fist caught him on the point of his jaw, and he returned promptly to deep unconsciousness.

No time now for qualms of compunction on account of the savage ruthlessness of that blow: no time even to search the fellow for a key to the closed door: already the maid was taking the stairs in full flight and cry, four steps and a howl like a warlock's to every jump.

Backing off, Alan took a short run, cleared the prostrate body of the guard with a leap, and flung himself full force against the door, his shoulder striking a point nearest the lock. With a splintering crash it broke inward. Without dignity or decorum he sprawled on all fours into the presence of Judith Trine.

"Poor Mr. Law!" she cried, with a mocking nod, "always disappointed! I'm so sorry—truly I am!"

"Oh, spare me your sarcasm," he begged resentfully. "It's ridiculous enough, this whole mad business—"

"But I am not sarcastic," she insisted with such sincerity that he opened his eyes in wonder. "Believe me, I am sorry for once it is I and not Rose whom you find locked up here! For, you see, I am locked up, by way of punishment—thanks to my having had pity on you once too often—while my father decamps mysteriously for parts unknown—"

"You don't know where he's gone, then?"

"Do you?" she asked sharply.

"In a general way. By special train to the West—"

"Taking Rose?"

"So I'm told."

The woman choked upon her anger, but quickly mastered it.

"He shall pay for this!" she asseverated.

"Your father? I wish him nothing more nor less than your enmity," Alan assured her civilly. "But since it seems that he has gone, and Rose with him, if you'll forgive me, I think I'll be going—"

"Alone?"

That one word, uttered with all the significance that this woman knew so well how to infuse into her tone, checked him suspiciously on the threshold.

"Why—yes."

"You wouldn't care for a companion du voyage?" she suggested.

"Oh—really!" he protested.

She held up an arresting hand. "Listen!" she begged.

From the street below came the unmistakable rattle of a policeman's locust on the sidewalk.

"That damned maid;" Alan divined thoughtfully.

"The same," Judith agreed with ominous calm. "Has it struck you that you may have some trouble getting away without my permission?"

"I'm not so stupid as not to have thought of that," he countered.

"Then be advised—and take me with you."

"In what capacity, please? As enemy or—ally?"

"As ally—you're right: we can't be friends—until we overtake that special train. After that, by your leave, I'll shift for myself."

"It's not such a bad notion," he reflected: "with you under my eye, you can't do much to interfere—"

"If I promise—" she suggested.

"I'll take your word," he agreed simply. "But you're in for a lot of hardship, I'm afraid. The one way to catch up with your father is by aeroplane—and I've got one waiting."

She nodded intently. "Don't consider me as a woman when it comes to hardship," she hinted obliquely.

"I've no reason to, going on what I know of you."

"Give me one minute to find my coat and hat."

In less than that time she was at his side in the hallway.

The police entered by the front door as the two crept out of the area window.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Via Air Line.

Not once in the course of the next sixteen hours but a thousand times Alan questioned (and, it will readily be allowed, with all excuses) his sanity in permitting himself to be influenced to humor Judith's insistence and make her a party to this wild aerial cross-country dash.

Between whiles the plane flew fast and high, cutting a direct line, as the crow flies, athwart the eastern and western states.

Chicago they raised as a smudge on the northern horizon about one o'clock in the afternoon; thereafter some little time was lost in descents to ascertain the identity of the many railroad lines that criss-crossed the swimming landscape. Only at the third cast did they succeed in picking up the line of the Santa Fe. And it was some hours later, though still daylight, when they picked up the special train, flying like a bunting across the levels.

There was scant room for doubt that it was the train they sought. Specials are not common. Moreover Alan contrived with considerable difficulty to focus binoculars upon the rear platform of the car, and caught a fugitive glimpse of a white-coated figure with a black face that was watching the biplane in the same manner, that is, with glasses.

The man in the white coat, Alan assured himself, was positively Barcus.

And hardly had he comforted himself with this assurance when his sardonic destiny struck the motor dumb.

In response to his look of dashed inquiry the aviator merely shook a weary head and muttered the words: "Engine trouble."

Swiftly the earth rose to receive the volplaning mechanism. Under Coast's admirable handling it settled down almost without a jar, on the outskirts of a city whose name Alan never learned.

For the biplane was barely at a standstill before he was out and, reeling with the giddiness that affects men after long flights, making his way as best he might toward the manager's office connected with a trainyard immediately adjacent to the spot where they had come to earth.

Lavish disbursements of money won him his way against official protests that what he demanded was an impossibility. Within twenty minutes, leaving Coast to follow on when and as best he might, Alan and Judith were spinning through open country in the cab of an engine running light, with only clear track between it and the special.

The several hours that ensued before the rear-lights of the special were brought to view were none too many for the task imposed upon Alan of overcoming the scruples of the engineer and fireman.

Another minute, and less than fifty feet separated the two—the special train and the light engine, both hurtling through the light at top speed.

With a word to the engineer Alan crept out along the side of the boiler, with only a greasy handrail and a narrow foothold between himself and what meant death, or something closely resembling it, should he be shaken off by the tearing wind and the swaying of the locomotive.

It seemed an hour before he worked himself up to the cowcatcher—now within four feet of the rear platform of the special.

On this last he could see a woman's figure indistinctly silhouetted against the light through the door, and beside her a man in a white coat, clinging for dear life to the knob of the door—holding it against the frantic efforts of some persons inside to tear it open.

Another hour of suspense dragged out—or such was the effect—while the light engine with intolerable slowness bridged those four scant feet.

At length it was feasible to attempt the thing. Rose (he could see her strained white face quite plainly now) was half over the rail of the car ahead, ready to jump.

His heart failed him. It was too hazardous a risk. He dared not let her take it.

Something very like a shot sounded from the train and something very like a bullet whistled past his cheek, and proved the signal for several more.

Strangely, that knowledge steadied his nerves. Straining forward and holding on to a bar so hot that it scorched his palm, he offered a hand to the girl on the rail.

Her hand fell confidently into it. She jumped. His arm wound round her as she landed on the platform of the cowcatcher. He heard her breathe his name, then hurriedly passed her between himself and the boiler to the footway at the side. The fireman was waiting there to help her. Alan turned his attention to Barcus.

To his dismay he found that the engine was losing ground. The space was widening rapidly as Barcus released the knob and threw himself over the rail.

By a miraculous, flying leap, the man accomplished that incredible feat and gained the platform.

An instant later ten feet separated the engine from the special, as the engineer applied the brakes.

And this he did none too soon: for at the same time Marrophat and another appeared on the rear platform and opened a hot, but, thanks to the widening distance, ineffectual fire.

The engine ground slowly to a halt as the rear lights of the special train swept from sight round a bend.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY DISTRIBUTION SHOULD NOT BE MADE

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for Clallam County. (In Probate.)

In the Matter of the Estate of Jens C. Rasmussen, Deceased.

Application having been filed in this court on the 19th day of November, A. D. 1914, by Lars P. Rasmussen, administrator f r final distribution of the residue of said estate; it is ordered that all persons interested in the estate of said Jens Rasmussen deceased, be and are hereby directed to appear in the Court Room of this Court at the Court House, in Port Angeles, in said county and state, on Saturday, the 19th day of December, A. D., 1914, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., and show cause, if any they nave, why the Court should not proceed to distribute the residue of said estate among persons who, by law, are entitled thereto. It is further ordered, that a copy of this order be published once each week for four successive weeks in the Olympic-Leader, a newspaper published and of general circulation in said county.

Dated this 19th day of November, A. D., 1914. JAMES STEWART, Court Commissioner.

A complete stock of GOODYEAR TIRES on hand at all times. Adjustments gladly made on all GOODYEAR TIRES. Fred C. Farmer, EXCLUSIVE AGENT.

THE CITY COUNCIL

grade calls for a cut of five feet at Fourth street, which Mr. Smith explained that there would have to be a cut there or a larger fill south of Fifth. If council desired a change of grade on this street he would be pleased to go over the matter with council and those interested. Opinion of engineer is that grade is all right. Cut at Fourth will not hurt. Work on Peabody bridge will begin about January first.

As Fourth will doubtless be connected with Lincoln and the new trestle, possibly from both east and west, it was suggested that the necessary work could now be done while driver was on the site for about the sum necessary to get a driver on the place. Suggested county might join in the improvement. Referred to committee comprising Messrs. Bigelow, Dustman and Fisher to confer with county commissioners.

Mr. Fleming called attention to fact that the Corporation Counsel of Seatle has decided that the city can discriminate against outside labor and in favor of home labor in its contracts, and wanted to know why it could not be done here. We have one contractor, he said, who seemingly has paid no attention to the clause which requires preference to be given local labor. Upon motion of Mr. Shields, matter was referred to city attorney and engineer for report next week.

Mr. Shields thought it time that city comply with its orders and do away with its closet in rear of city hall and moved that a committee be named to take up the matter of connecting city hall with sewer and the placing of a sanitary closet. Carried. Shields, Bigelow and Fisher named.

Mr. Fisher asked in regard lease of spit by city, which he understood was in effect June 1. Mayor stated city only had a copy and agreed to produce same at next meeting.

Question of placing a two plank walk on Eunice street, First to Front, was referred to street superintendent for estimate of cost.

Upon motion of Mr. Dustman street superintendent was directed to put in all walks ordered on Francis street where not put in and charge same to abutting property.

Mr. Shields moved that street superintendent notify owners to put in a new five foot sidewalk on south side of Second street, Laurel to Valley. Street superintendent suggested Lincoln to Valley, but Mr. Fisher stated this could come later when connection is made with Lincoln. The motion carried Claim for damages in sum of $100 presented by Star Theatre for loss of business through lights going out on a dozen occasions last spring was discussed, but no action was taken.

Upon motion of Shields marshal is to notify all owners on north side of Front street, down town, to build sanitary sewers out to low tide at once.

Council adjourned.

TRAINS OVER MILWAUKEE IN EARLY SPRING

Port Angeles will soon be connected with Port Townsend, as shown in the general trend of the contracting work now going on. The grade is as well as completed between Port Angeles and Port Townsend, with bridging to be done over Ennis and Morse Creeks. The pile-driving is nearly completed along the waterfront of the Gate City, and a cut is now being dug thru the Francis street extension. As the railroad crosses Lincoln street, it turns in towards the bluff and follows it along thru to the cut at Francis; steel rails are now laid to the above mentioned cut.

Some little difficulty is being experienced along the Discovery Bay trestle. It has and will be held up temporarily by the state because the road will cross some oyster reserve lands, where a few oysters were found in the times of the Indians on the Peninsula. About twenty-three years ago, a commission was appointed to select oyster reserve lands, including those of Discovery Bay, where the Milwaukee is held up, and those of Hood Canal. As these lands were selected as reserves, the state, we are told, has no jurisdiction in granting right of way across them, and it will require an act of the legislature to permit the Milwaukee crossing the head of the bay, as is planned.

A delegate was sent by the state land or fish commissioner, a few days ago to inspect the oyster reserves in Discovery Bay, and he reported that they were not oyster lands, in the real meaning of the term—that he found no oysters, and if any had existed there in the past, the silt and debris brought down by Discovery Creek, had covered them up. It may be possible that the road will go near the shore line, at the head of the bay, or entirely around it, to reach connections with Port Townsend and Puget Sound proper. This delay it is thought will soon be remedied, but it is an annoyance to the builders. Work to the west and east of Discovery Bay is progressing rapidly, and when the crossing trouble is settled, the road will soon be connected with the Port Townsend and Quilcene route.

Let us be optimistic and watch for that opportune time when the golden spike will be driven. Then we can rejoice and thank the men who have been so successful in preparing the connection of Port Angtles by rail, to the thru transcontinental lines of the United States.

THE CHRISTMAS THOUGHT

Ideas on Christmas giving are rapidly changing among the sensible. Those who think as they give are looking for a year-round service as the important thing.

In a week of shopping, with all its strain, you will not find a better gift than a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion. It offers its service, its clean entertainment, its fine suggestiveness week after week; and the end of the year, which finds many a gift in the attic, dust-covered and forgotten, brings the Companion again, with all the charm of last Christmastide.

No American monthly at any price offers the same amount of reading, and none can offer better quality. Less than four cents a week provides this best of Christmas gifts—$2.00 a year. If you subscribe now, all the remaining issues of the year will be sent free, and The Companion Home Calendar. A copy of the Calendar is also sent to those who make a gift subscription. Send for sample copies, and the Forecast for 1915.

NOTICE OF SETTLEMENT OF FINAL ACCOUNT

No. 630.

In the Superior Court of Clallam County, State of Washington.

In the matter of the Estate of Michael Sullivan, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that Catherine Sullivan, Executrix of the estate of Michael Sullivan, Deceased, has rendered and presented for settlement to, and filed in the Superior Court of Clallam County, State of Washington, the Final Account as such Executrix, together with her petition for distribution; and that Tuesday, the 15th day of December, 1914, at 9 o'clock, a. m., at the Court Room of our said superior Court, in the City of Port Angeles, in said Clallam County, has been duly appointed by our said Superior Court, for the settlement of the Final Account and Distribution, at which time and place any person interested in said estate may appear and file his exceptions in writing to said Final Account and Contest the same.

Witness, the Hon. John M. Ralston, Judge of the said Superior Court, and the seal of said court affixed this 11th day of Novemb-r, A. D., 1914.

A. J. COSSER,
County Clerk and Clerk of the Superior Court.

The rough weather of Tuesday morning in the Strait above Dungeness caused the steamer Sioux to put back to Port Williams where she tied up and awaited the arrival of the Sol Duc. The passengers were transferred to the Sol Duc and brought to Angeles and the Sioux followed into port later, taking her regular run out at 1 p. m.

MANY FAMILY REUNIONS THANKSGIVING DAY

There must have been an exceptional number of family reunions and gatherings in Port Angeles this Thanksgiving judging from the number of passengers leaving on Sundays boats. The People's wharf was crowded before the Sol Duc pulled out with the last big load of passengers returning to their schools or work. Among the familiar faces was noted Herman and Lillian Swanson who attend the Tacoma Business College, Jaunita Glenn, Mabel Geist and Edna Kelly from Bellingham Normal; Laura Bradbury of the University; Mae Webster, teaching and East Seattle; Grace MacKechnie, who goes to Bremerton to teach; Wm. Welsh, of the T.-T. making his weekly visit to Seattle; Howard Farmer, who spent Thanksgiving with his brother Fred, Miss Holt who is studing music in Seattle, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Celian, who spent part of their honeymoon in Angeles and Dr. and Mrs. Cook and daughter who parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Frye.

PETTIT'S NEW HOME

Pettit's new barber shop, in the basement of the Shields' building, is being fitted up this week ready for occupancy. He is installing five chairs, shower, wash bowl for each chair and will furnish the services of a manicurist and porter. Every thing is to be the last word in an up to the minute barber shop. One feature will be the ladies bath day. Mr. Pettit hopes to be in by the latter part of the week.

NEW MANAGER

Archie McDougall, of the real-estate firm of McDougal & Hooker, has taken over the management of the Olympic Hotel dining room and intends to make a success of it. He certainly is offering some swell dinner for fifty cents next Sunday. You can't afford to miss it. See the bill of fare in this paper.

The Bungalow Inn still continues to do a tremendous business. It stands to reason that the quality of their food is satisfying. Morning, noon and night, the dining room is crowded and sets the same example as some of the largest restaurants in Seattle.

The Eastern Star will hold its annual election of officers at the next regular meeting, December 12. As there is to initiation and balloting also, the chapter will open promptly at 7:30.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hayne returned Tuesday morning from an extended visit in the east, both feeling very much improved in health.

NEW JEWELRY STORE STARTS BUSINESS

Mr. Bernard and Mr. Rubyn, two young jewelers from Chicago, have recently opened up a jewelry shop on Front street near Oak. Both are experts in their line. Mr. Bernard has for the past few years adjusted and kept the time of thousands of railroad watches. The two young men will do general reparing and are dealers in old gold and silver. The year is going—let 'er go—but Angeles is growing and deserves to grow.

HORT. INSPECTOR HERE

State Horticultural Inspector H. W. Samson of Everett spent Tuesday and Wednesday in this city and vicinity trying to get information about horticultural and agricultural conditions in Clallam county. State horticultural inspection is at present inadequate, being limited to inspection of nursery stock and large orchards, and a general survey of conditions for use in the annual report. King and Pierce counties, however, each has an inspector. Inspector Samson's territory includes the counties of Clallam, Jefferson, San Juan, Island, Snohomish, Skagit and Whatcom.

The Christmas spirit begins to prevade the air, and our local merchants certainly deserve our patronage, for they have spared no work or expense in stocking up with lines of Holiday goods. Never were the display windows so attractive as now, and happy groups of school children are to be seen at the windows of all the toy snops, choosing what they want Santa Claus to bring them.

Miss Sadie Robertson returned the first of the week, after six weeks vacation from the Citizens National Bank. She visited her old home in Iowa, returning by Frisco and Los Angeles, also visited at Denver and Salt Lake City, making a most delightful trip, and now she says she is ready to go to work again with a vim.

The new apartment house on Valley and Third streets is nearly completed and Mr. Jackson, the architect and builder, says he has already been asked for all the apartments. He also says that he will build a larger apartment house as soon as the limits of the city will permit.

Mike Earles and W. S . Pearce were upsound passengers on the Sol Duc Tuesday.

Mrs. F. E. Warner went to Seattle Tuesday to spend the week with relatives and friends.

no stock will be put on the market," declared Kelly today. "I cannot say just how much capital will be put into the operations."

"The character of an investment of this kind, its uncertainty and the extent of the drilling which may be required, makes it necessary that we should be prepared at the start to go the limit.

"Nor can I tell the exact amount of land that may be acquired. The leases have not been completed. We are avoiding publicity in our plans for the present. When we strike oil there will be time enough to give the news to the public."

Dr. Major, for twenty years the pastor of the Queen Anne church of Seattle, preached eloquent sermons both morning and evening at the Lincoln Heights Presbyterian church last Sunday. There was not seating capacity to accommodate all who attended the evening services. Dr. Major will preach again next Sunday and we understand arrangements are being made for the erection of a Presbyterian church on Pine Hill in the near future. While in Angeles Mr. and Mrs. Major was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Hay, who were his parishioners in Seattle.

The Ladies Sewing Club of the Catholic church met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Wm. Hoare. Next Wednesday afternoon they will give a tea at the home of Mrs. Donahue on Eighth and Cherry. Everybody invited.

VIOLIN MADE OF CLALLAM COUNTY WOODS

Edwin A. Champion, who resides on Seventh street near Race, has a home-product violin that has been praised by many accomplished musicians. It was made of Clallam county woods by Mr. Champion over six years ago, when the Champion family resided on a farm seven or eight miles east of the city. The tone of the violin has improved in quality year by year. The instrument was whittled out by hand, the back being of western maple, the belly or sounding body of cedar.
